Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When was the happiest day of your life? Why was it the happiest day?” “When has something unexpected happened to you that you were very excited about?” and “When have you done something that you didn’t think you could do?”

happy, you are very happy and excited. You might remind the students that they learned the word delirious (“very happy and excited”) earlier, and explain that delirious and exhilarated are synonyms. Point out that Wilma was very happy that she had won both races. She felt exhilarated after her second win.

Display word card 95 (🗨️ WA6) and have the students say the word exhilarated.

4 Discuss Times We Have Felt Exhilarated

Explain that when people are exhilarated, they are more than simply happy; they are intensely happy—or very happy. Explain that people feel exhilarated when something special or unexpected happens.

Give examples of a time you were happy about something and a time you were exhilarated about something.

You might say:

“I was happy when I talked to my brother on the phone last weekend, but I was exhilarated, or very happy, last summer when I got to visit him in person because that doesn’t happen very often.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you felt exhilarated? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I felt exhilarated when [my sister Krista was born] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word exhilarated and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ASTOUNDING

5 Introduce and Define Astounding and Review Shades of Meaning

Show pages 36–37 of Wilma Unlimited and remind the students that during her last Olympic race, the 400-meter relay, Wilma almost dropped the baton and her team fell into third place. Read the second paragraph on page 36 aloud, emphasizing the word astounding.

Explain that astounding means about the same thing as surprising, but that if something is astounding, it is not just a little surprising, it is very surprising or amazing. Point out that Wilma’s performance at the Olympics was astounding, or amazing, because Wilma accomplished something that no one expected her to—she won three gold medals.

Display word card 96 (🗨️ WA7) and have the students say the word astounding.

6 Discuss Astounding Things We Have Seen

Remind the students that astounding means “amazing,” and describe something you have seen that was astounding.

You might say:

“I saw a movie last weekend that had astounding special effects. Trees and flowers were talking and acting like people. It was amazing. I once saw a magician on TV do an astounding trick. He waved his hand and a man rose out of a chair and floated through the air. That was an amazing sight.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you seen something you thought was astounding? Why did you think it was astounding? [Pause; click ❶ on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I saw an astounding . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Remind the students that astounding can also mean “very surprising.” Ask and discuss as a class:

Q Would it be astounding if a monkey suddenly ran into our classroom? Why?

Click ❷ on word card 96 (WA7) to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “It [would/would not] be astounding if a monkey ran into our classroom because . . .”

Point to the word astounding and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started a “Just the Right Word” chart, add the word astounding along with its definition, “amazing or very surprising.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you seen something on TV or at the movies that you thought was amazing?” and “When have you seen someone do something in real life and thought, ‘Wow! That was amazing!’”

Day 4

Review Intense, Exhilarated, and Astounding

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 16 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words intense, exhilarated, and astounding from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

intense

Intense means "very great or strong."

exhilarated

Exhilarated means "very happy and excited."

astounding

Astounding means "amazing or very surprising."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q If you were writing a story about a trip to the moon, which of the words might you use? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

intense exhilarated astounding

PROMPT 1: If I were writing a story about a trip to the moon, I would use the word _____ because . . .

1 2 3 4

WA8

PROMPT 1: “If I were writing a story about a trip to the moon, I would use the word [astounding] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Ask:

Q Would you feel intense anger on a joyful occasion? Why? [Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] feel intense anger on a joyful occasion because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, have the students discuss:

Q Would you feel exhilarated on a joyful occasion? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] feel exhilarated on a joyful occasion because . . .”

Q Would it be astounding to see a gorilla playing the piano? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “It [would/would not] be astounding to see a gorilla playing the piano because . . .”

Teacher Note

You may want to remind the students that they learned the word joyful earlier and that joyful means “full of joy or very happy.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 15 and 16, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 16 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- Ongoing review activity (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the weekly review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first story is ①; the second story is ②; and the third story is ③. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners’ ideas

Words Reviewed

advise

Advise means “tell someone what you think he or she should do.”

gruff

Gruff means “unpleasant or rude.” If someone is gruff, he or she may seem unfriendly or mean.

lively

Lively means “active.” Someone who is lively is energetic and full of life.

snug

Snug means “comfortable, warm, and cozy.”

sorrowful

Sorrowful means “full of sorrow or very sad.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Introduce the Game “Describe the Character”

Explain that partners will play a game called “Describe the Character.” You will read a story aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word best describes the main character of the story and explain why they think so. Tell the students that before they play the game in pairs, they will practice as a class.

Display the ongoing review activity (WA10) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ① to reveal the first story. Explain that the main character of the first story is a woman named Jennifer. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.

- Story 1: Jennifer was glad to be home after a hard day at work. She made a fire in the fireplace and curled up on the couch with a blanket and a cup of tea. “Ah,” she sighed with a smile. “This is very relaxing.”

2. Point to the words and ask:

- Q Which vocabulary word best describes Jennifer? Why? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the first prompt.]

PROMPT 1: “[Snug] best describes Jennifer because . . .”

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

3. After they have shared, conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.

WA10

4. Finally, click 1 to clear the screen.

3 Play the Game in Pairs

Tell the students that partners will play the game together. Explain that the main character of the next story is a boy named Winston.

1. Click 2 to reveal the second story. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.

- Story 2: Winston is always in a bad mood. He never smiles or laughs. Whenever his neighbors try to talk to him, he snaps, “Leave me alone!”

2. Point to the words and ask:

- Q Which vocabulary word best describes Winston? Why? [Click 2 again and read the prompt aloud.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Gruff] best describes Winston because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, reread the story and think aloud about which word best describes Jennifer. (For example, “I think the word snug best describes Jennifer because snug means ‘comfortable, warm, and cozy.’ Jennifer is curled up on the couch with a blanket, so she’s comfortable and warm, and she sighs and says she feels relaxed.”) Then read the next story and discuss it as a class rather than in pairs.

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, write each story and the words where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word snap (“speak sharply or angrily”) earlier.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. After they have shared, conclude the discussion by clicking ❷ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.
4. Finally, click ❷ to clear the screen.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Story 3: Diana woke up excited for the weekend. "There is so much I want to do today!" she exclaimed. "I am going to ride my bike, go swimming, and play baseball with my friends." (lively)

ELL Note

You may want to review the meaning of the target words (e.g., sorrowful and advise) before asking each question.

4 Discuss the Remaining Words

Show the ongoing review cards (WA9) and tell the students that you will ask them questions about some of the remaining vocabulary. Ask:

[sorrowful, advise]

-  Q If your friend were sorrowful because he lost his favorite book, what might you advise him to do? Why? [Click ❶ to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "If my friend were sorrowful because he lost his favorite book, I might advise him to [think about where he had it last] because . . ."

[sorrowful, gruff]

-  Q Would you be sorrowful if someone you just met spoke to you gruffly? Why? [Click ❷ to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "I [would/would not] be sorrowful if someone I just met spoke to me gruffly because . . ."

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
- Do they use the vocabulary words correctly to explain their thinking?
- Are they using the words spontaneously and accurately in conversations outside of vocabulary time?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 179 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice in using the word through a game modeled on "Is Olive Gruff?" (see Week 15, Day 1, Step 8). For example, if the students are struggling with the word lively, play "Is Olive Lively?" by describing situations in which Olive is or is not lively.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 17 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4" answer sheet (IA1) on page 183 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 180 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 184 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Word-learning Strategies

- Using the prefix un- to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Using the suffix -ful to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the story.
- Students review using the prefix un- and the suffix -ful to determine word meanings.
- Students review synonyms and antonyms.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students develop the skill of contributing ideas that are different from their partners' ideas.

① DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Play ‘Antonym Match’” on page 358.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “Week 17 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Unexpected, Abandon, and Industrious

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words unexpected, abandon, and industrious
- Review the prefix un-
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

unexpected (p. 3)

Unexpected means “not expected.” If something is unexpected it is surprising. You did not expect, or think, that it would happen.

abandon (p. 3)

Abandon means “leave and not return.”

industrious

Industrious means “hardworking.”

INTRODUCE AND USE UNEXPECTED

1 Introduce and Define Unexpected and Review the Prefix un-

Briefly review Sonia Sotomayor.

Show pages 2–3 and read the first paragraph aloud, emphasizing the word unexpected.

Explain that the first word the students will learn today is unexpected. Explain that if something is unexpected, you did not expect, or think, that it would happen. It is surprising. Show the illustration on pages 2–3 and point to the flowers. Explain that it is unexpected, or surprising, to see flowers blooming on a chain-link fence. Most flowers bloom near the ground in gardens and parks.

Display word card 97 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word unexpected. Point to the prefix un- in unexpected and review that un- is a prefix that means “not.” Explain that unexpected means “not expected.”

Materials

- Sonia Sotomayor
- Word card 97 (WA1)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA2)
- Word card 98 (WA3)
- Word card 99 (WA4)

TEKS 3.C.ii

Student/Teacher Narrative

Step 1

TEKS 3.C.ii

Student/Teacher Activity

(all, beginning on page 348 and continuing on to page 349)

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, write each story where everyone can see it.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of unexpected and think aloud about an ending. For example, say "I saw a kitten on the checkout counter." Then reread the beginning of the story aloud and repeat the questions. If the students continue to struggle, ask questions such as "What is something that might happen at the grocery store that would surprise you?" or "What is something that might happen that would cause you to say 'Wow! I didn't expect that!'"

Ask:

Q When have you seen something unexpected? Why was it unexpected?

Click 1 on word card 97 (WA1) to reveal the prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

unexpected

PROMPT 1: I saw _____. It was unexpected because . . .

1

WA1

PROMPT 1: "I saw [a mouse in my shoe]. It was unexpected because . . ."

2 Do the Activity "Tell Me a Story"

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called "Tell Me a Story." Review that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes the word unexpected. Then they will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to make up an unexpected ending for the story.

Display the "Tell Me a Story" chart (WA2) and show story 1 and its accompanying prompts. Read the story aloud, slowly and clearly:

- Story 1: Today my family and I went to the grocery store. One unexpected thing that happened was . . .

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q How might you finish the story? What unexpected thing might happen at the grocery store? [Pause; point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Tell Me a Story

Today my family and I went to the grocery store. One unexpected thing that happened was . . .

_____

PROMPT 1: One unexpected thing that happened was . . .

PROMPT 2: _____ is unexpected because . . .

WA2

PROMPT 1: “One unexpected thing that happened was . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Why is [a monkey walking down the milk aisle] unexpected?

Point to prompt 2 and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking.

PROMPT 2: “[A monkey walking down the milk aisle] is unexpected because . . .”

Show story 2 on the chart (WA2) and use the same procedure to discuss the following story:

- Story 2: On Julio’s walk to school, he notices something squirming in the bushes. The unexpected thing Julio sees is . . .

Q How might you finish the story? What unexpected thing might Julio see squirming in the bushes? [Pause; point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The unexpected thing Julio sees is . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Why would [a purple starfish in a bush] be unexpected?

PROMPT 4: “[A purple starfish in a bush] would be unexpected because . . .”

Point to the word unexpected and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss as a class:

Q When has something unexpected happened to you?

INTRODUCE AND USE ABANDON

3 Introduce and Define Abandon

Show pages 2–3 of Sonia Sotomayor and read the first paragraph on page 3 again, emphasizing the word abandoned.

Explain that abandon means “leave and not return.” Explain that an abandoned building is empty because people have moved out and never returned.

Display word card 98 (C WA3) and have the students say the word abandon.

Teacher Note

You might point out that students learned the word squirm earlier and that squirm means “wiggle, or twist your body from side to side, usually because you are bored or uncomfortable.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of abandon is abandonar.

4 Discuss Things That Have Been Abandoned

Imagine that you are at the park and you come across an abandoned bicycle—a bicycle that someone left behind and did not return for.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Why might someone have abandoned the bicycle? [Pause; click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Someone might have abandoned the bicycle because . . .”

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What would you do if you came across an abandoned bicycle?

Ask the students to imagine that at the same park they come across an abandoned puppy. Discuss as a class:

Q Why might someone have abandoned the puppy?

Follow up and use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What would you do if you came across an abandoned puppy? [Pause; click 2 on WA3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If I came across an abandoned puppy, I would . . .”

Point to the word abandon and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INDUSTRIOUS

5 Introduce and Define Industrious and Review Synonyms

Show pages 10–11 of Sonia Sotomayor and read the first paragraph on page 10 aloud.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is industrious. Explain that industrious means “hardworking” and that industrious and hardworking are synonyms. Explain that Sonia’s mother was industrious. She worked hard during the day to support her children and studied hard at night to become a nurse. Explain that Sonia grew up to be industrious, or hardworking, like her mother.

Display word card 99 (WA4) and have the students say the word industrious.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add industrious and hardworking to it.

Discuss as a class:

Q Who is an industrious person you know? Why do you think the person is industrious?

Click 1 on word card 99 (WA4) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “[My sister] is industrious because . . .”

6 Play “Is Olive Industrious?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Is Olive Industrious?” Review that Olive is the name of an imaginary girl in third grade. Tell the students that you will describe how Olive is acting. Partners will then discuss whether Olive is industrious and why.

Begin by saying:

- Olive is learning to play the tuba. She practices for an hour after school each day.

Ask:

Q Is Olive industrious? Why? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Olive [is/is not] industrious because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following scenarios:

- Olive knows she should be doing her homework, but she keeps putting it off. She has a snack, calls her friend Tommy, and takes a nap.
- Olive’s mom isn’t feeling well. To help her, Olive washes the dishes, vacuums the floor, and folds the laundry.

Point to the word industrious and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If the students have trouble pronouncing the word, have them say it several times, slowly pronouncing each syllable.

Day 2

Review Unexpected, Abandon, and Industrious

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)
- Daily review activity (WA6)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words unexpected, abandon, and industrious from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Reviewed

unexpected

Unexpected means “not expected.” If something is unexpected it is surprising. You did not expect, or think, that it would happen.

abandon

Abandon means “leave and not return.”

industrious

Industrious means “hardworking.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA5). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday was the most fun to talk about? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

unexpected abandon industrious

PROMPT 1: I think _____ was the most fun to talk about because . . .

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I think [industrious] was the most fun to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Game “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Review that you will show a sentence with one or more words underlined. You will read each sentence aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the daily review activity (🎧 WA6) and begin playing the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: During lunch, the fire alarm in the cafeteria sounded and the sprinklers went off. It was very surprising!
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined word. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined words? Why? [Click 1 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [unexpected] could replace very surprising because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

------------	---------	-------------

SENTENCE 1: During lunch, the fire alarm in the cafeteria sounded and the sprinklers went off. It was unexpected!

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Teacher Note

For a fully written-out example of this activity, see Week 3, Day 5, Step 2.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the daily review activity (WA6) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is 1; the second sentence is 2; and the third sentence is 3. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Day 3

Introduce Comfy, Successful, and Unsuccessful

Materials

- Sonia Sotomayor
- Word card 100 (WA7)
- Word cards 101–102 (WA8)

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: Today, Paula cleaned her room, read a book, and finished her art project. She is hardworking. (industrious)
- Sentence 3: On their road trip, the Juarez family drove by a town where the buildings were empty and all the gardens were overgrown. The town was without people. (abandoned)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words comfy, successful, and unsuccessful
- Review the suffix -ful
- Review antonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

comfy (p. 22)

Comfy means “comfortable.”

successful

If you are successful, you do what you set out to do or do something well.

unsuccessful

Unsuccessful means “not successful.” If you are unsuccessful, you do not accomplish what you set out to do.

INTRODUCE AND USE COMFY

1 Introduce and Define Comfy

Show pages 22–23 of Sonia Sotomayor and remind the students that in this part of the book Sonia has just moved from the Bronx and is studying at college. Read the last three sentences of the first paragraph aloud, emphasizing the word comfy.

Explain that comfy means “comfortable.” Explain that Sonia’s family is like a warm and comfy, or comfortable, blanket that makes her feel safe and loved. Explain that college is not the comfy, loving place her home was. She feels uncomfortable at college because she is different from a lot of her classmates.

Display word card 100 (🔊 WA7) and have the students say the word comfy.

2 Talk About Comfy Places

Give an example of some comfy places.

You might say:

"My bed is very comfy. There are lots of pillows and a warm comforter. The hammock in my backyard is also comfy. I love lying in it and reading a book on a warm summer day. The reading chair in our library is very comfy. It is big and soft—the perfect place to curl up and read a book."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q Where are you most comfy? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA7

comfy

PROMPT 1: I am most comfy _____ because . . .

PROMPT 1: "I am most comfy [on my couch] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What are your most comfy clothes?

Click 2 on word card 100 (WA7) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "My most comfy clothes are . . ."

Point to the word comfy and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SUCCESSFUL AND UNSUCCESSFUL

3 Introduce Successful and Review the Suffix -ful

Show pages 24–25 of Sonia Sotomayor and review that Sonia’s hard work paid off and she became a judge. Read the first three sentences of the first paragraph on page 25 aloud, emphasizing the word success.

Explain that Sonia worked hard to become a judge, and that she was successful. Tell the students that successful is the next word they will learn today. Explain that if you are successful, you do what you set out to do or do something well. Explain that Sonia was successful because she did well in school and worked hard as a judge. Display word cards 101–102 (🎯 WA8) and reveal word card 101. Have the students say the word successful.

Point to the suffix -ful in successful and review that -ful is a suffix that means “full of.” Explain that Sonia’s life has been “full of success”—she has become a good judge.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q When have you been successful? When have you done something you set out to do or done something well?

Click ❶ to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I was successful when . . .”

4 Introduce Unsuccessful and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is unsuccessful. Click to reveal word card 102 on word cards 101–102 (WA8) and have the students say the word unsuccessful. Explain that unsuccessful and successful are antonyms, and review that antonyms are “words with opposite meanings.” Ask:

Q If successful means “full of success,” what do you think unsuccessful means?

Click ❷ to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I think unsuccessful means . . .”

Teacher Note

You might point out the prefix un- in unsuccessful and review that un- is a prefix that means “not.” Remind the students that they reviewed un- earlier when they discussed the word unexpected.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words successful and unsuccessful to it.

If necessary, explain that unsuccessful means “not successful.” If you are unsuccessful, you do not accomplish what you set out to do.

5 Discuss Whether Olive Is Successful or Unsuccessful

Explain that you are going to describe something that the imaginary third-grader Olive does. Partners will decide whether she is successful or unsuccessful, and explain why they think so.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice, slowly and clearly:

- Olive throws herself into writing a book about sharks. She goes to the library every day and learns as much as she can about them. She spends the summer working on her book and finally finishes it.

Ask:

Q Is Olive successful or unsuccessful? Why? [Click 3 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Olive is [successful/unsuccessful] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, have the students discuss:

- Olive wants to be better at basketball, but she doesn't want to practice. When her coach offers her suggestions for becoming a better player, she doesn't pay attention. Olive doesn't get better and finally quits the team.
- Olive wants to learn how to play the cello. She goes to her lessons and practices nearly every day for an entire year. At the end of the school year, she is invited to join her school's band.

Point to the words successful and unsuccessful and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the idiom “throw yourself into something” earlier and that it means “do something with a lot of energy and enthusiasm.”

Teacher Note

Invite the students to make up their own “Is Olive Successful or Unsuccessful?” scenarios. You might stimulate their thinking by providing them with a goal (for example, “Olive wants to learn how to swim” or “Olive wants to become a doctor”).

Materials

- “Antonym Match” chart (WA9)

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the antonym match where everyone can see it.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Play “Antonym Match”

Display the “Antonym Match” chart (🗨️ WA9).

PROMPT: _____ is the antonym of _____.

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Antonym Match.” Point to the words in column 1, and explain that these are vocabulary words the students have learned. Point to the words in column 2, and explain that these are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings, of the vocabulary words in column 1. Explain that partners will match each vocabulary word to its antonym.

Point to the word comfy, pronounce it, and have the students pronounce it.

Then point to the words in column 2 and ask:

Q Which word in column 2 is the antonym of comfy?

PROMPT: “[Uncomfortable] is the antonym of [comfy].”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking. Then have a volunteer draw a line from the word comfy to the word uncomfortable.

Repeat the procedure to have the students match the remaining words. When you get to the final two words, have the students discuss them together by asking:

Q Which word in column 2 is the antonym of faint and which word is the antonym of cluttered?

EXTENSION

Explore Related Words: Comfy, Comfortable, and Comfort

Write the word comfy where everyone can see it, and review that comfy means “comfortable.” Tell the students that knowing the meanings of the words comfy and comfortable can help them figure out the meaning of another related word—comfort. Write these sentences where everyone can see them:

Nick didn't feel well so he went to the nurse's office. The school nurse helped Nick into bed and wrapped a blanket around him to comfort him.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the words comfy and comfortable and clues in the sentences, what do you think the word comfort means? What does it mean to comfort someone?

If necessary, explain that comfort means “make someone feel better or more comfortable.” Point out that the nurse helped Nick into bed and wrapped a blanket around him to comfort him or make him feel better or more comfortable.

Discuss as a class:

Q When has someone comforted you? How did they make you feel?

Day 4

Review Comfy, Successful, and Unsuccessful

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA10)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words comfy, successful, and unsuccessful from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

comfy

Comfy means "comfortable."

successful

If you are successful, you do what you set out to do or do something well.

unsuccessful

Unsuccessful means "not successful." If you are unsuccessful, you do not accomplish what you set out to do.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday do you find particularly interesting? Why? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA10

PROMPT 1: “I think [comfy] is particularly interesting because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and partners will figure out the word.

Begin by saying:

- I’m how you might describe your favorite pair of pajamas.

Q Which word am I? Why? [Click 2 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the word is [comfy] because . . .”

After a few moments, signal for the students’ attention and ask a few volunteers to use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- I’m how you might describe a person who tried doing something she’d never done before—and she did it. (successful)
- I’m how you might feel when you are snuggled up on the couch watching a movie. (comfy)
- I mean “doing what you set out to do.” (successful)
- I’m how you might describe someone who sets out to make a loaf of bread and burns the loaf in the oven. (unsuccessful)

EXTENSION

Explore Similes in Sonia Sotomayor: A Judge Grows in the Bronx

Show the illustrations on pages 12–13 of Sonia Sotomayor and review that they show Sonia and her family spending time together. Explain that the author of the book, Jonah Winter, describes Sonia’s life at home by saying “Sonia’s family surrounded her like a warm blanket.” Explain that by describing her family in this way, the author is helping us imagine how comfortable and safe Sonia felt at home surrounded like a warm blanket by the people she loved.

Explain that “surrounded her like a warm blanket” is a simile and that a simile is a “comparison of one thing to another using the words like, as, or than.” Tell the students that good writers like Jonah Winter use similes to help readers picture in their minds what is being described.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Day 5

Ongoing Review

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA11)

Show pages 22–23 and explain that on these pages the author describes how uncomfortable and lonely Sonia felt at Princeton. Tell the students that, as you read from this part of the book, you want them to listen for how Sonia decided to handle her unhappy situation and what the author compares Sonia to. Then read the first three sentences of the first paragraph on page 23 aloud. Ask:

- Q How did Sonia handle her unhappy situation at Princeton?
- Q What is Sonia compared to in the sentences you just heard?
- Q How does comparing Sonia to “a flowering vine that would not stop growing” help you imagine how strong and determined Sonia was?

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Reviewed

advise

Advise means “tell someone what you think he or she should do.”

blow your top

“Blow your top” means “get very angry.”

shuffle

Shuffle means “slide the feet along the ground or floor while walking.” When people shuffle, they barely lift their feet. Shuffle also means “mix playing cards to change their order.”

snug

Snug means “comfortable, warm, and cozy.”

strain

Strain means “pull or push hard.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA11). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Tell the students that you will ask them questions about the words. Point to the word snug and ask:

-  Q If you were wearing a warm jacket with a hat and gloves on a cold winter day, would you be snug? Why? [Pause; click ❶ on WA11 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

-  Q Would you shuffle your feet quietly if you were dancing to your favorite song? Why? [Pause; click ❸ on WA11 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] shuffle my feet quietly because . . .”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reviewing that if you are snug, you are comfortable, warm, and cozy. Then ask questions such as “Would wearing a warm jacket on a cold day make you feel snug?” and “What would you wear to be snug on a cold winter day?” Then reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word roam earlier and that roam means “wander or move about without any particular purpose or place to go.”

[blow your top]

Q Would you blow your top if your best friend couldn't come to your birthday party? Why? [Pause; click 4 on WA11 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: "I [would/would not] blow my top because . . ."

Introduce Customary, Energize, and Appetizing

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words customary, energize, and appetizing
- Review synonyms
- Review the prefix un-
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Taught

customary

Customary means "usual or normal or happening regularly."

energize

Energize means "give energy or strength."

appetizing

Appetizing means "tasty or good to eat."

INTRODUCE AND USE CUSTOMARY

1 Introduce and Define Customary and Review Synonyms

Briefly review Morning Meals Around the World.

Show page 3 and read this sentence aloud: "All around the world, people start the day with delicious food and drinks."

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is customary and explain that customary means "usual or normal or happening regularly." Explain that customary, usual, and normal are synonyms.

Display word card 103 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word customary.

Explain that around the world it is customary, or normal, for people to have a morning meal. People usually, or regularly, eat a meal in the morning.

Point out that morning is not the only time of day when it is customary to eat. Ask:

Q When else during the day is it customary to eat? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Morning Meals Around the World
- Word card 103 (WA1)
- Word card 104 (WA2)
- Word card 105 (WA3)

Teacher Note

You may want to explain that the word customary is related to the word custom and point out that you can see the word custom in customary. A custom is a "tradition or something that people do regularly."

PROMPT 1: “It is customary to eat . . .”

2 Discuss Customary Ways People Celebrate a Birthday

Explain that in many cultures it is customary, or normal, for people to celebrate a special event, such as a birthday, with food.

Ask:

 Q What is customary for you to eat when you celebrate your birthday? What do you usually eat? [Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “On my birthday, it is customary for me to eat . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that in addition to eating, it is customary in many cultures for people to do fun things to celebrate a birthday.

Ask:

 Q What is customary for you to do to celebrate your birthday? What do you usually do? [Click 3 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “To celebrate my birthday, it is customary for me to . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word customary and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ENERGIZE

3 Introduce and Define Energize

Read this sentence on page 3 aloud: “Your morning meal is important because it gives you energy to start your day.”

Explain that the second word the students will learn is energize and that energize means “give energy or strength.” Explain that a nutritious breakfast energizes you, or gives you energy and strength to do things during the day. Explain that getting a good night’s sleep and exercising can also energize you.

Display word card 104 (🗉 WA2) and have the students say the word energize.

Point to the word energize and explain that it comes from the word energy. Point out how you can see part of the word energy in energize.

4 Act Out Being Energized and Not Energized

Explain that when you are energized, you feel strong and healthy and ready to work and play.

Ask:

Q What do you like to do when you feel energized? Why? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “When I feel energized, I like to [play basketball with my friends] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that you would like a volunteer to act out how she looks and moves when she is energized. Then have a volunteer act out being energized as the class watches.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What did you see [Natasha] do to show she is energized?

Click 2 on word card 104 (WA2) to reveal the next prompt.

PROMPT 2: “I saw [Natasha] [move fast] to show she is energized.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, have a volunteer act out how he looks and moves when he is not energized, and have the class discuss what they saw the volunteer do.

Point to the word energize and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You may want to explain that the word appetizing is related to the word appetite, which means “the desire or wish for food.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of appetizing is apetitoso/a.

Teacher Note

If you have started a synonym chart, add customary, usual, and normal and appetizing and tasty to it.

INTRODUCE AND USE APPETIZING

5 Introduce and Define Appetizing

Explain that the last word the students will learn today is appetizing and that appetizing means “tasty or good to eat.” Explain that appetizing and tasty are synonyms.

Display word card 105 (WA3) and have the students say the word appetizing.

Show pages 14–15 of Morning Meals Around the World and explain that Mexican children enjoy these appetizing, or tasty, foods for their morning meal. Point to and name each food: quesadillas, poached eggs and salsa, refried beans, mangoes and bananas, and hot chocolate.

Ask:

 Q What is a food or drink that you think is appetizing? [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think [rice] is appetizing.”

6 Review the Prefix un-, Discuss the Word Unappetizing, and Review Antonyms

Write the words unappetizing and appetizing where everyone can see them. Point to the prefix un- in unappetizing and remind the students that the prefix un- means “not.”

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q If appetizing means “tasty or good to eat,” what do you think unappetizing means?

Click 2 on word card 105 (WA3) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I think unappetizing means . . .”

If necessary, explain that unappetizing means “not tasty or good to eat.” Point out that appetizing and unappetizing are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

7 Play “Appetizing or Unappetizing?”

Explain that partners will play “Appetizing or Unappetizing?” You will describe a food and partners will discuss whether it is appetizing or unappetizing and why they think so.

Begin by asking:

Q Spaghetti with meatballs and cheese: appetizing or unappetizing? Why?
[Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: "I think it is [appetizing/unappetizing] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q A slice of cold pizza: appetizing or unappetizing? Why?
[Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

Q A slice of cold, juicy watermelon: appetizing or unappetizing? Why?
[Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

Q A bowl of oatmeal: appetizing or unappetizing? Why?
[Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the words appetizing and unappetizing and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Review Customary, Energize, and Appetizing

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words customary, energize, and appetizing from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

customary

Customary means "usual or normal or happening regularly."

energize

Energize means "give energy or strength."

appetizing

Appetizing means "tasty or good to eat."

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗨️ WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

-  Q Which of the words we learned yesterday was the most fun to talk about? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

customary energize appetizing

PROMPT 1: The word _____ was the most fun to talk about because . . .

1 2 3 4 5

WA4

PROMPT 1: “The word [appetizing] was the most fun to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

If the students have trouble making associations, call for their attention and think aloud about an association you might make, or ask questions such as [customary] “How might the word customary go with dinner?” “What foods are customary for you to eat for dinner?” “When is it customary for you to eat dinner?” [energize] “How might the word energize go with dinner?” “What do you eat at dinner that might energize you?” and [appetizing] “How might the word appetizing go with dinner?” “What appetizing foods do you like to eat for dinner?”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Goes With?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Goes With?” You will write a word where everyone can see it, and they will discuss which of this week’s words goes with the word you wrote and why they think so.

Write the word dinner where everyone can see it and read it aloud.

Ask:

-  Q Which of this week’s words goes with dinner? Why? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [appetizing] goes with dinner because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- holiday

PROMPT 3: “I think [customary] goes with holiday because . . .”

- exercise

PROMPT 4: “I think [energize] goes with exercise because . . .”

- delicious

PROMPT 5: “I think [appetizing] goes with delicious because . . .”

Introduce Plain, Differ, and Refreshing

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words plain, differ, and refreshing
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Review the prefix re-
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

plain (p. 6)

Plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy. Plain also means a “large area of flat land.”

differ

Differ means “is different.”

refreshing (p. 22)

If something is refreshing, it makes you feel fresh (lively or not tired) and strong again.

INTRODUCE AND USE PLAIN

1 Introduce and Define Plain

Show page 6 of Morning Meals Around the World and reread the first two sentences aloud, emphasizing the word plain.

Materials

- Morning Meals Around the World
- Word card 106 (WA5)
- Word card 107 (WA6)
- Word card 108 (WA7)

Teacher Note

To discuss the word differ, identify two areas of the classroom that are different and easy for the students to see from the rug area (for example, the front of the room and back of the room, the book nook and the writing center, or the bulletin board next to the door and the bulletin board next to the window). See Step 5.

Explain that plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy. Explain that some people like to eat their cereal plain, or without anything, such as sugar or fruit, added.

Display word card 106 (🗨️ WA5) and have the students say the word plain.

2 Play “Plain or Not Plain?”

Explain that partners will play “Plain or Not Plain?” You will describe something and partners will discuss whether it is plain or not plain and why they think so.

Begin by asking:

-  Q A birthday cake decorated with roses and the words “Happy Birthday”: plain or not plain? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think it is [plain/not plain] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

-  Q A hamburger with nothing on the bun: plain or not plain? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.
- Q A T-shirt with a picture of a spider and a web on it: plain or not plain? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word plain and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

3 Discuss Another Meaning of Plain

Remind the students that words often have more than one meaning and sometimes the meanings are very different. Point to the word plain, pronounce it, and review that plain means “without anything added or without decoration.”

Explain that plain can also mean a “large area of flat land.” Explain that parts of the American West are plains and that many years ago millions of buffalo lived on the plains where grass for grazing was plentiful. Explain that parts of Africa are plains and that giraffes, lions, and other animals live on the African plains.

Remind the students that if they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a story that includes the word plain. Partners will decide whether plain means “without anything added” or a “large area of flat land” in the story and explain why they think so.

Read the following aloud twice:

- During our travels, we crossed an immense plain. The flat land stretched before us for miles. There were no trees, only acres and acres of grass moving with the wind.

Ask:

Q In the story, does plain mean “without anything added” or a “large area of flat land”? Why do you think that? [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “We think plain means [a ‘large area of flat land’] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- During our travels, we ate plain food: bread without jam, meat without salt or pepper, and potatoes without butter. We were hungry, so even plain food was delicious.

INTRODUCE AND USE DIFFER

4 Introduce and Define Differ

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is differ, and explain that differ means “is different.” Display word card 107 (WA6) and have the students say the word differ.

Show pages 10–11 of Morning Meals Around the World and review that morning meals differ, or are different, from country to country. Explain that as you read about morning meals in France and Italy, you want the students to listen for how the meals differ.

TEKS 3.B.iv
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 3 (first, second, and third paragraphs)

ELL Note

You might show a picture of a plain.

TEKS 3.B.ii
TEKS 3.B.iv
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3
(from after the third paragraph to the end of the step)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of differ is diferir.

Read pages 10–11 aloud.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q How do morning meals in France and Italy differ?

Click 1 on word card 107 (WA6) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The morning meals differ because . . .”

Point out that you can see part of the word different in the word differ and explain that the words different and differ are related.

5 Discuss Things That Differ

Direct the students’ attention to the two classroom areas you identified and explain that you want the students to quietly look at the areas and think about how they differ.

After a few moments, ask:

Q How does [the book nook] differ from [the writing center]? [Click 2 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[The book nook] differs from [the writing center] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask:

Q How does a weekend day differ from a school day? [Click 3 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “A weekend day differs from a school day because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word differ and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE REFRESHING

6 Introduce and Define Refreshing and Review the Prefix re-

Show and read page 22 of Morning Meals Around the World aloud, emphasizing the word refreshing. Display word card 108 (WA7) and have the students say the word refreshing.

Explain that if something is refreshing, it makes you feel fresh (lively or not tired) and strong again. Explain that many people enjoy a refreshing drink, or a drink that makes them feel fresh and strong again, at their morning meal.

Explain that many people also enjoy a refreshing drink during the day, especially if they are hot or tired. Refreshing drinks cool them off and give them energy again.

Ask:

Q When you are hot or tired, what refreshing drink do you like? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “When I am [hot/tired], a refreshing drink I like is . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the prefix re- in refreshing and remind the students that they learned the prefix earlier. Review that re- means “again.” Explain that adding the prefix re- to the word fresh makes the word refresh, which means “make fresh again.”

7 Review the Game “Make a Choice”

Explain that partners will play “Make a Choice.” You will describe two things and partners will discuss which is refreshing and why they think so.

Ask:

Q Which is refreshing after you have worked hard: more hard work or a nap? Why? [Click 2 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [a nap] is refreshing because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q Which is refreshing when you are dirty: a shower or going shopping? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

Q Which is refreshing when you are hungry: a snack or a nap? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word refreshing and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

You may wish to discuss each choice individually by asking “After you work hard, is doing more hard work refreshing? Why?” and “After you work hard, is taking a nap refreshing? Why?”

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

You might post and save the “Words with the Prefix re-” chart to add to and use throughout the year.

Review the Prefix re- and Discuss the Word Reenergize

Prepare a sheet of chart paper titled “Words with the Prefix re-.” On the paper write these four vocabulary words: reunite, reuse, reconsider, and refreshing. Remind the students that the prefix re- is used in each of the words and that the prefix means “again.” Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word:

- Reunite means “come together again after being separated.”
- Reuse means “use again.”
- Reconsider means “think again about a decision.”
- If something is refreshing, it makes you feel fresh and strong again.

Remind the students that knowing that re- means “again” can help them figure out the meaning of a word that begins with the prefix. Write the word reenergize on the chart and explain that reenergize is a word made by adding the prefix re- to the word energize. Remind the students that energize means “give energy or strength.” Then ask:

Q Based on what you know about the prefix re- and the word energize, what do you think the word reenergize means? If something reenergizes you, what does it do?

If necessary, explain that reenergize means “give energy or strength again.” Explain that if something reenergizes you, it energizes you again.

Ask:

Q If you are tired, what might reenergize you? [Show the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “If I am tired, [taking a nap] might reenergize me.”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask the students to listen and watch for other words that use the prefix re-, and discuss any examples they find.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Draw a Plain Object and Not Plain Object

Remind the students that plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy. Tell the students they will pick an object and draw it plain, or without any decoration, and then they will draw that same object with decoration. (For example, a student might draw a plain pair of sneakers and a pair of sneakers with lights on the back and lightning bolts on the sides.)

Ask the students to use the following prompts to explain their drawings to a partner:

PROMPT: “I drew a plain [pair of sneakers]. Then I drew a [pair of sneakers with lightning bolts on the side].”

Review Plain, Differ, and Refreshing

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words plain, differ, and refreshing from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

plain

Plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy. Plain also means “a large area of flat land.”

differ

Differ means “is different.”

refreshing

If something is refreshing, it makes you feel fresh (lively or not tired) and strong again.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review The Words

Display the daily review cards (🎧 WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words we learned yesterday might you use when you talk with your friends? How might you use the word? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Daily review activity (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 18 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student plain      differ      refreshing

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____.

I might say . . .

❶

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [refreshing]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that they are going to play “Finish the Story.” Explain that you are going to read some stories and that you will leave off the last word of each story. Review that partners will decide which word makes the best ending for the story.

Display the daily review activity (🎯 WA9) and begin playing the game.

- Click ❶ to reveal the first story and the word choices. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.

- Story 1: Raymond and Jesse are hot after playing basketball at the park. They go to Jesse’s house to drink something _____.

Point out that the ending is missing.

- Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the words and read each word aloud. Ask:

- Q Which word makes the best ending for the story? Why? [Click ❶ again and read the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think [refreshing] makes the best ending because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

Each story on the weekly review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story and the word choices.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click reveals the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

3. Conclude the discussion of this story by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place. Then reread the story with the word refreshing at the end.

WA9

plain	differ	refreshing
-------	--------	------------

STORY 1: Raymond and Jesse are hot after playing basketball at the park. They go to Jesse's house to drink something refreshing.

❶   ❷   ❸

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

Repeat the procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: Layla asked for a doll like her sister's. When she got the doll, Layla saw that it had blond hair instead of brown hair like her sister's doll. "The dolls don't match," she said. "They _____." (differ)
- Story 3: Zack doesn't like anything on his hot dog—no ketchup, mustard, relish, or onions. He likes his hot dog _____. (plain)

EXTENSION

Discuss Plain and Plane and Other Homophones

Write the words plain and plane on chart paper or where everyone can see them. Ask the students what they notice about the words.

Explain that plain and plane are homophones and that homophones are "words that are pronounced the same way but are spelled differently and have different meanings." Have the students discuss the meanings of plain and plane. Then have them discuss the meanings of these homophones: ate, eight; blew, blue; knight, night; meat, meet; one, won; and right, write. Have the students watch for other homophones in their reading, and discuss the examples they find.

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, you might write the words and stories where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 17 and 18, you might distribute a copy of the "Week 18 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners’ ideas

Words Reviewed

cherish

Cherish means “care for something deeply.” If you cherish something, you treat it with great care because it is very important to you.

industrious

Industrious means “hardworking.”

lively

Lively means “active.” Someone who is lively is energetic and full of life.

persist

Persist means “keep doing something, even though it is difficult.” If you persist, you refuse to give up.

sorrowful

Sorrowful means “full of sorrow or very sad.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Am I?” You will give a clue about one of the words and partners will figure out the word.

Begin by saying:

- I’m how you describe a person who is very excited and has a lot of energy.

Ask:

Q Which word am I? Why? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

cherish      industrious      lively persist      sorrowful

PROMPT 1: I think the word is _____ because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think the word is [lively] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- I’m how you would feel if your pet goldfish died. (sorrowful)
- I mean “care for something deeply.” (cherish)
- I’m what you do when you keep trying to learn something even if it is hard. (persist)
- I’m how you describe a person who stays up late to do her homework. (industrious)
- I’m a synonym for sad. (sorrowful)

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students’ responses indicate that they understand the words’ meanings?
- Can they identify the words in “Which Word Am I?” and explain why a word is the best choice?
- Are they using independent word-learning strategies to figure out word meanings when they read independently?

(continues)

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write a story in which they use the word.

Introduce Secure, Durable, and Texture

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words secure, durable, and texture
- Review antonyms
- Discuss using a glossary to determine word meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

secure

Secure means “safe and protected.”

durable

If something is durable, it is tough. It can last a long time even if it is used a lot.

texture (p. 8)

Texture is “how a material feels—for example, rough or smooth.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SECURE

1 Introduce and Define Secure

Briefly review Homes.

Show pages 4–5 and review that the first chapter tells us that science is at work everywhere in our homes. Point to the words “What is a home?” on page 4 and explain that the first paragraph on page 4 tells what a home is. Read the first paragraph aloud. Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is secure and that secure means “safe and protected.” Explain that your home is a place where you feel secure, or safe and protected.

Display word card 109 (🌐 WA1) and have the students say the word secure.

2 Play “Would You Feel Secure?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Would You Feel Secure?” Explain that you will describe a situation and partners will discuss whether or not they would feel secure, or safe and protected, in that situation and why they think so.

Materials

- Homes
- Word card 109 (WA1)
- Word card 110 (WA2)
- Word card 111 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of secure is seguro/a.

Begin by saying:

- Riding on a roller coaster

Ask:

Q Would you feel secure, or safe and protected, riding on a roller coaster? Why? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

secure

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] feel secure because . . .

WA1

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] feel secure because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Hiking in the woods with your family
- Eating lunch in the school cafeteria with your friends
- Riding on a boat during a storm

Follow up by asking:

Q What is a place you always feel secure? Why?

Click 2 on word card 109 (WA1) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I always feel secure . . .”

Point to the word secure and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DURABLE

3 Introduce and Define Durable and Review Antonyms

Show pages 6–7 of Homes and review that this part of the book tells about the materials that are used to build homes. Read the last paragraph on page 6 aloud.

Explain that durable is the next word the students will learn today. Tell the students that if something is durable, it is tough. It can last a long time even if it is used a lot. Explain that the walls of homes are built of stone, brick, or concrete, which are durable materials, or materials that are tough and last a long time. Explain that home builders use durable materials so that houses will be safe and strong.

Remind the students that earlier this year they learned the word flimsy and that flimsy means “thin and weak.” Explain that flimsy and durable are antonyms, or “words with opposite meanings.” Point out that home builders would not use flimsy materials because those materials would not be durable, or tough and long lasting.

Display word card 110 (🌐 WA2) and have the students say the word durable.

4 Discuss Durable Objects in the Classroom

Give examples of some objects in the classroom that are made of durable materials.

You might say:

“My desk is made of metal, which is durable, or tough and meant to last a long time. The walls of our classroom are made of stone, which is durable. Our curtains are made of a strong, durable fabric.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What are some other durable objects in our classroom? Why do you say they are durable? [Pause; click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[My chair] is durable because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then briefly discuss as a class:

Q What are some objects in our classroom that are not durable?

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of durable is durable.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add durable and flimsy to it.

Click 2 on WA2 to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “[The tissues in the tissue box] are not durable because . . .”

Point to the word durable and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE TEXTURE

5 Introduce and Define Texture

Show pages 8–9 of Homes and explain that this part of the book tells more about the materials used to build homes. Read page 8 aloud, emphasizing the word texture.

Explain that texture is “how a material feels—for example, rough or smooth.” Point out that building materials have different textures. Point to the house in the photograph on page 8 and talk about the textures of the materials the home is built with.

You might say:

[Point to the stone.] “The stone on the house has a bumpy texture.” [Point to the wood posts on the front porch.] “The wood posts on the front porch have a smooth texture.” [Point to the windows.] “The windows have a smooth and slippery texture because they are made of glass.” [Point to the roof.] “The roof shingles have a rough texture.”

Display word card 111 (WA3) and have the students say the word texture.

6 Look for Different Textures in the Classroom

Tell the students that every object has a texture—it feels a particular way. Explain that some objects, such as a desktop or wooden floor, have a smooth texture. Other objects, such as sandpaper or tree bark, have a rough texture. An object’s texture might also be described as sticky or slick, scratchy or bumpy, hard or soft, or lumpy, sandy, rocky, furry, or fuzzy.

Have the students feel their shirts. Then discuss as a class:

Q How would you describe the texture of your shirt?

Click 1 on word card 111 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The texture of my shirt is . . .”

 ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of texture is textura.

Ask the students to quietly look around the classroom for objects that have a smooth texture. After a few moments, ask:

Q What do you see that has a smooth texture? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[The wall] has a smooth texture.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word texture and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss Using a Glossary

Show the glossary on pages 28–29 of Homes. Tell the students that a glossary is “a list of words the author of a book thinks readers might need to know to understand the book.” Explain that a glossary is usually found at the end of a book and is organized like a dictionary—it lists the words in alphabetical order and tells what each word means. Tell the students that if they come across a word that they do not understand in a nonfiction book, they can often look it up in the glossary to find out what it means.

Show page 8 and point to the words properties and texture. Explain that authors often use bold type to help readers know which words in a book can be found in the glossary. Point out that both properties and texture appear in bold type, which tells readers that they can look up their meanings in the glossary. Turn back to the glossary and model using it by looking up property and texture alphabetically and reading the definitions.

Then show page 22 and ask:

Q What words on this page might we find in the glossary? Why do you say that?

If necessary, point out that we can find the words appliances, electricity, and detergent in the glossary. We know that because they are in bold type. Turn to the glossary on pages 28–29 of the book and read the definitions of appliance, electricity, and detergent. Encourage the students to watch for and use the glossary in books they are reading independently.

Teacher Note

If the students need further practice with the word texture, have them name objects in the classroom that have a rough, bumpy, sticky, or scratchy texture.

ELL Note

You might have the students walk around the classroom, school, or playground to touch objects and identify or describe their textures.

Day 2

Review Secure, Durable, and Texture

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words secure, durable, and texture from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Reviewed

secure

Secure means “safe and protected.”

durable

If something is durable, it is tough. It can last a long time even if it is used a lot.

texture

Texture is “how a material feels—for example, rough or smooth.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday was the most fun to talk about? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

secure durable texture

PROMPT 1: I think _____ was the most fun to talk about because . . .

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I think [texture] was the most fun to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Explain that you will ask some questions that partners will discuss.

Ask:

Q Would you build a tree house out of durable materials? Why?

[Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] build a tree house out of durable materials because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q Would you feel secure riding your bike down a steep hill? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] feel secure riding my bike down a steep hill because . . .”

Q Would you be comfortable wearing a T-shirt with a rough texture? Why?

[Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] be comfortable wearing a T-shirt with a rough texture because . . .”

---

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Wire

Show the cover of Homes and review that homes are made up of many different parts and materials.

Write the word wire on the board. Tell the students that as you read a sentence from the chapter “Electricity” in the book, you want them to listen for and think about what they know about the word wire. Then read this sentence from page 15 aloud: “It passes through a small wire inside the bulb, then it heats up and glows bright.” Ask:

Q What do you know about wires?

Have volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that wires are strings of metal that help conduct, or transmit, electricity. Review that electricity is a form of energy used to make light and heat, and to power machines. Follow up by asking:

Q What are some other things that have wires?

Teacher Note

Academic language is the language necessary for success in school. It includes general academic words commonly found across content areas and in many different kinds of texts as well as content area or domain-specific words and terms. Knowledge of academic language is important for all students’ success in school and is especially critical for English Language Learners.

Day 3

Introduce Hazardous, Convenient, and Detect

Materials

- Homes
- Word card 112 (WA5)
- Word card 113 (WA6)
- Word card 114 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words hazardous, convenient, and detect
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Taught

hazardous

Hazardous means "dangerous."

convenient

If something is convenient, it is useful because it makes our lives easier or more comfortable.

detect (p. 25)

Detect means "discover or notice something that is not easy to see, hear, or feel."

INTRODUCE AND USE HAZARDOUS

1 Introduce and Define Hazardous and Review Synonyms

Show pages 10–11 of Homes and review that this part of Homes tells how heating systems keep homes warm. Review that some heating systems use radiators to provide heat to rooms. Explain that because radiators become hot, people need to be careful around them. Then read "Stay safe" on page 11 aloud.

Tell the students that hazardous is the first word they will learn today. Explain that hazardous means "dangerous." Explain that hazardous and dangerous are synonyms. Review that radiators and other heaters can be hazardous, or dangerous.

Display word card 112 (WA5) and have the students say the word hazardous.

2 Talk About Hazardous Things

Explain that things that seem safe or harmless can be hazardous, or dangerous, if not used properly. For example, a ladder is harmless if you use it properly. However, if you are not careful when you climb a ladder or are careless while standing on it, a ladder can be hazardous. Ask:

Q In what ways might a pencil be hazardous? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: A pencil might be hazardous if _____.

WA5

PROMPT 1: “A pencil might be hazardous if [you poked someone with it].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask the students to look around the classroom for things that, if misused, might be hazardous. Then discuss as a class:

Q What other things in our classroom might be hazardous? In what ways might they be hazardous?

Click 2 on word card 112 (WA5) to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “[The pencil sharpener] might be hazardous if . . .”

Point to the word hazardous and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CONVENIENT

3 Introduce and Define Convenient

Show pages 16–17 of Homes and tell the students that this part of the book explains where the water in our homes comes from. Read page 16 aloud.

Explain that having water available in our homes at the turn of a faucet is convenient, and tell the students that convenient is the next word they will learn today. Explain that if something is convenient, it is useful because it makes our lives easier or more comfortable.

Show pages 20–21 and review that this part of the book tells about tools that people use around their homes. Point to the can opener in the picture on page 20 and discuss as a class:

- Q How is a can opener convenient? How does it make our lives easier or more comfortable?
- Q What other tools or appliances in our homes are convenient? Why are they convenient?

Display word card 113 (🗉 WA6) and have the students say the word convenient.

4 Discuss Things That Are Convenient

Remind the students that things that are convenient are useful because they make our lives easier or more comfortable. Give some examples of things in the classroom that you find convenient.

You might say:

"I think having a library in our classroom is convenient because it makes it easier to get our hands on a good book. I also think having computers in the classroom is convenient, because we can use computers to find information quickly, communicate with people far away, or create presentations. The pencil sharpener is a convenient device because it sharpens pencils quickly. The clock is convenient, too, because it makes it easy to know what time it is."

Ask:

- Q What other things in our classroom are convenient? Why are they convenient? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "The [recycling boxes] are convenient because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by briefly discussing as a class:

Q What is something you own or have at home that you think is especially convenient? Why is it convenient?

Point to the word convenient and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DETECT

5 Introduce and Define Detect

Show page 25 of Homes and explain that this part of the book tells about a convenient device found in many homes—a smoke alarm. Read “Stay safe” on page 25 aloud, emphasizing the word detect.

Explain that detect means “discover or notice something that is not easy to see, hear, or feel.” Point out that smoke alarms detect, or discover or notice, smoke from fires and make a loud sound to warn us.

Display word card 114 (🗣️ WA7) and have the students say the word detect.

6 Detect Sounds

Explain that you are going to ask the students to close their eyes, sit very quietly, and notice what sounds they detect inside or outside the classroom. Emphasize that it will be very important for them to sit quietly so that everyone has an opportunity to detect, or notice, sounds.

Have the students close their eyes, sit quietly, and detect sounds. After several moments, have the students open their eyes. Ask:

 Q What sounds did you detect? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I detected [the sound of the clock ticking].”

Point to the word detect and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Explore Related Words: Detect, Detector, and Detective

Write the word detect where everyone can see it, and review that detect means “discover or notice something that is not easy to see, hear, or feel.” Tell the students that knowing the meaning of detect can help them figure out the meaning of a word that is related to detect.

---

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of detect is detectar.

Teacher Note

You might explain that detect, discover, and notice are synonyms and add them to the synonym chart.

Teacher Note

You might make some sounds; for example, you might clear your throat, tap on your desk, or rustle paper.

Day 4

Review Hazardous, Convenient, and Detect

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Daily review activity (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

Tell the students that the word detective is a form of the word detect, and write detective next to detect. Explain that a detective is a “person who investigates and tries to solve crimes.” Discuss as a class:

Q At the scene of a crime, what does a detective try to detect, or discover or notice?

PROMPT: “A detective tries to detect [clues].”

Tell the students that detector is also a form of the word detect, and write it where everyone can see. Explain that a detector is a “machine that detects, or discovers or notices, something.” For example, a lie detector is a “machine that detects whether or not someone is telling a lie.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What does a smoke detector detect? A motion detector? A metal detector?

PROMPT: “A [smoke detector/motion detector/metal detector] detects . . .”

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words hazardous, convenient, and detect from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

Hazardous means “dangerous.”

convenient

If something is convenient, it is useful because it makes our lives easier or more comfortable.

detect

Detect means “discover or notice something that is not easy to see, hear, or feel.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday do you think is particularly interesting? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA8

hazardous convenient detect

PROMPT 1: I think _____ is particularly interesting because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think [convenient] is particularly interesting because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show a sentence with one or more words underlined. You will read each sentence aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the daily review activity (WA9) and begin playing the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: The pot of boiling water is dangerous and should not be touched without an oven mitt.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined word. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click 1 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence in the daily review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is 1; the second sentence is 2; and the third sentence is 3. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the correct answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [hazardous] could replace dangerous because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

hazardous convenient detect

SENTENCE 1: The pot of boiling water is hazardous and should not be touched without an oven mitt.

❶ ❷ ❸

WA9

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: During fire safety week, the class learned that they must have an alarm in their home to notice smoke from fires. (detect)
- Sentence 3: A grocery store is opening up a block away from Lyle’s house. He is excited because he can walk there whenever he needs anything. “It is so useful!” Lyle exclaims. (convenient)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

comfy

Comfy means “comfortable.”

energize

Energize means “give energy or strength.”

exhilarated

Exhilarated means “very happy and excited.”

memorable

Memorable means “worth remembering.” Something that is memorable is not easy to forget.

unexpected

Unexpected means “not expected.” If something is unexpected it is surprising. You did not expect, or think, that it would happen.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Make a Choice”

Explain that partners will use the words to play “Make a Choice.” Point to the word exhilarated and tell the students that they will play the first round of the game with this word. Remind the students that you will describe two things and ask them to decide which one they think would make them feel exhilarated and tell why they think so. Explain that partners may not always agree and that is OK. What is important is that they explain their thinking.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)

ELL Note

Rather than have the students choose between two things, you might have them discuss each thing individually by first asking “Would riding on a roller coaster be exhilarating? Why?” and then asking “Would cleaning your room be exhilarating? Why?”

Ask:

-  Q Which of these would be exhilarating: a ride on a roller coaster or cleaning your room? Why? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

-  Q Which of these is comfy: a soft, fluffy pillow or a pillow full of rocks? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [a soft, fluffy pillow] is comfy because . . .”

[energize]

-  Q Which of these would make you feel energized: a long bike ride or a long nap? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [a long bike ride] would make me feel energized because . . .”

[memorable]

-  Q Which of these would be memorable: meeting your favorite author or meeting your friend at the park? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think [meeting my favorite author] would be memorable because . . .”

[unexpected]

Q Which of these would be unexpected: seeing a lion in your backyard or seeing a lion at the zoo? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: "I think [seeing a lion in my backyard] would be unexpected because . . ."

Introduce Graceful, Spectacular, and Original

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words graceful, spectacular, and original
- Review the suffix -ful
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

graceful (p. 428)

Graceful means “moving in a smooth and beautiful way.”

spectacular (p. 428)

Spectacular means “amazing to look at.”

original (p. 429)

Original means “completely new and different.” If something is original, it is not like anything else.

INTRODUCE AND USE GRACEFUL

1 Introduce and Define Graceful and Review the Suffix -ful

Briefly review “Origami: The Art of Japanese Paper Folding.”

Read the first sentence of the article aloud, emphasizing the word graceful: “Could you fold a square of paper into a graceful fish or a long-stemmed flower?”

Tell the students that graceful means “moving in a smooth and beautiful way.”

Explain that fish are often the subject of origami artists because they are colorful creatures and graceful swimmers. They move through the water in a smooth and beautiful way. Ask the students to picture in their mind a fish swimming gracefully through the water.

Explain that many other animals are graceful, and name some graceful animals (for example, dolphins, deer, horses, cats, and eagles). Explain that many people are also graceful, including dancers, ice-skaters, and athletes such as runners and swimmers.

Display word card 115 (WA1) and have students say the word graceful.

Materials

- “Origami: The Art of Japanese Paper Folding” (see pages 428–429)
- Word card 115 (WA1)
- Word card 116 (WA2)
- Word card 117 (WA3)

Teacher Note

You may want to remind the students that they discussed the suffix -ful when they learned the words doubtful (“full of doubt or uncertainty”), joyful (“full of joy”), and sorrowful (“full of sorrow or very sad”).

ELL Note

You or a student might act out how a chicken walks.

Point to the word grace in graceful and explain that grace means “smoothness and beauty of movement.” Point to the suffix -ful and review that -ful is a suffix that means “full of.” Explain that graceful means “full of grace or full of smoothness and beauty of movement.”

2 Play “Graceful or Not Graceful?”

Remind the students that some animals and people are graceful, and explain that other animals and people are not graceful. They are clumsy; they move in a way that is not smooth and beautiful.

Tell the students that partners will play “Graceful or Not Graceful?” Explain that you will describe an animal or person and partners will discuss whether or not the animal or person is graceful and why they think so.

Begin by asking:

Q A chicken walking across a barnyard: graceful or not graceful? Why? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

The screenshot shows a digital interface for a classroom activity. At the top, the word "graceful" is displayed in a rounded rectangular box. Below it, the text reads "PROMPT 1: The chicken [is/is not] graceful because . . .". At the bottom of the interface, there are four numbered circular buttons: 1, 2, 3, and 4. Button 1 is highlighted with a dark background, indicating it is the active prompt.

WA1

PROMPT 1: “The chicken [is/is not] graceful because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q A leopard running smoothly and beautifully across a plain: graceful or not graceful? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The leopard [is/is not] graceful because . . .”

 Q A skateboarder rolling swiftly and steadily down the sidewalk: graceful or not graceful? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The skateboarder [is/is not] graceful because . . .”

 Q A skateboarder wobbling from side to side as she bounces down the sidewalk: graceful or not graceful? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The wobbling skateboarder [is/is not] graceful because . . .”

Point to the word graceful and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SPECTACULAR

3 Introduce and Define Spectacular

Read this sentence from the first paragraph of the article aloud, emphasizing the word spectacular: “In origami, a simple sheet of paper can become a spectacular piece of art.”

Explain that spectacular means “amazing to look at.” Explain that some origami objects are spectacular. Remind the students that artists have made origami sailboats and butterflies. Explain that origami objects like these would be spectacular, or amazing to look at.

Explain that something can be fun or interesting to look at but not be spectacular. For example, watching a single sparkler burn on the Fourth of July might be fun or interesting, but it is not spectacular, or amazing. Explain that seeing a gigantic explosion of colorful fireworks in the sky would be spectacular.

Display word card 116 ( WA2) and have the students say the word spectacular.

4 Play “Spectacular or Not Spectacular?”

Explain that partners will play “Spectacular or Not Spectacular?” You will describe something and partners will discuss whether or not it is spectacular and why.

Begin by saying:

 Q An immense orca leaps out of the water right next to your boat: spectacular or not spectacular? Why? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “An orca [would/would not] be spectacular because . . .”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of spectacular is espectacular.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

 Q A plastic toy whale floats in your bath water: spectacular or not spectacular? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Why?

PROMPT 2: “A toy whale [would/would not] be spectacular because . . .”

Point to the word spectacular and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ORIGINAL

5 Introduce and Define Original

Remind the students that there are origami contests, and read these sentences from the article (page 429) aloud, emphasizing the word original: “Some origami contests have a theme such as plants or prehistoric animals. In other contests, there are categories such as best original design, best technical folding, and best miniature model.”

Tell the students that original means “completely new and different.” Explain that if something is original, it is not like anything else. Explain that some origami objects are original. For example, precise models of butterflies and sailboats are original because they are not like any other origami designs. They are completely new and different.

Display word card 117 ( WA3) and have the students say the word original.

6 Discuss Creating Original Things

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q If you wanted to make a pizza that was original, or completely new and different, what toppings would you use? [Pause; click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “To make an original pizza, I would use . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask the students to imagine that they have written a story. A friend reads the story and says, “Your story is original.”

Ask:

 Q Would you be pleased if your friend said your story was original? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If my friend said my story was original, I [would/would not] be pleased because . . .”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of original is original.

Teacher Note

You might want to explain that if you add the prefix un- to original, you make the word unoriginal, which means “not new and different.” Original and unoriginal are antonyms.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word original and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review the Suffix -ful and Discuss Painful and Delightful

Write the word graceful where everyone can see it. Point to the suffix -ful in graceful and review that -ful is a suffix that means “full of.” Review that when you add -ful to the word grace you make the word graceful, which means “full of grace or full of smoothness and beauty of movement.”

Write the word pain next to graceful and ask:

Q What word do you make when you add the suffix -ful to the word pain?

Remind the students that knowing the meaning of the suffix -ful can help them figure out the meaning of a word that uses the suffix.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -ful and the word pain, what do you think the word painful means? If something is painful, how does it feel?

If necessary, explain that painful means “full of pain.” Explain that something that is painful hurts a lot.

Write the word delight and ask:

Q What word do you make when you add the suffix -ful to the word delight?

Explain that delight means “great happiness or pleasure.”

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -ful and the word delight, what do you think the word delightful means? If you are having a delightful time at a party, what kind of time are you having?

If necessary, explain that delightful means “full of delight or very happy or pleasant.” If you are having a delightful time at a party, you are having a very pleasant time.

Day 2

Review Graceful, Spectacular, and Original

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words graceful, spectacular, and original from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills

Words Reviewed

graceful

Graceful means “moving in a smooth and beautiful way.”

spectacular

Spectacular means “amazing to look at.”

original

Original means “completely new and different.” If something is original, it is not like anything else.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of the words we learned yesterday might you use when you talk to your friends? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

graceful spectacular original

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____.

I might say . . .

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [spectacular]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Am I?” You will give a clue about one of the words and they will figure out the word.

Begin by saying:

- I’m how you describe something that is not like anything else.

Ask:

Q What word am I? Why do you think so? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “We think the word is [original] because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- I’m how you describe a ballet dancer who moves beautifully. (graceful)
- I’m how you describe something that is amazing to see. (spectacular)
- I’m an antonym of the word clumsy. (graceful)
- I’m how you might describe something you’ve never seen before. (spectacular or original)

Day 3

Introduce Achieve, Challenge, and Determination

Materials

- “Origami: The Art of Japanese Paper Folding” (see pages 428–429)
- Word card 118 (WA5)
- Word card 119 (WA6)
- Word card 120 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words achieve, challenge, and determination
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners’ ideas

achieve (p. 428)

Achieve means “do something successfully, especially something that requires a lot of effort.”

challenge (p. 429)

A challenge is “something that is hard to do or requires a lot of work or effort.”

determination (p. 429)

Determination is “deciding you will do something and then doing it, even if it is difficult.”

INTRODUCE AND USE ACHIEVE

1 Introduce and Define Achieve

Remind the students that in “Origami: The Art of Japanese Paper Folding,” they learned that origami artists fold paper to create objects. Read this sentence from the article aloud, emphasizing the word achieve: “Some artists use wet paper to achieve a more rounded look; others experiment with unusual materials, such as cloth, wire, sheet metal, and even toilet paper.”

Explain that achieve means “do something successfully, especially something that requires a lot of effort.” Explain that some origami artists achieve, or successfully create, a more rounded look in their objects by using wet paper.

Display word card 118 (WA5) and have the students say the word achieve.

2 Discuss Things We Have Achieved

Remind the students that achieving something, or doing it successfully, often requires a lot of effort or work. Give a couple of examples of things you have achieved.

Teacher Note

You may want to explain that the word achievement is related to the word achieve and that an achievement is “something you achieve, or do successfully.”

You might say:

"When I was your age, I wanted to make my school's basketball team. I practiced and practiced, and I finally achieved my goal of making the team. Recently, I set a goal for myself of reading three books every month. This month I achieved my goal by reading three books."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What is something you have achieved, or done successfully? How did you feel when you achieved it? [Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

achieve

PROMPT 1: I achieved . . .

WA5

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "What is something you have done recently at home or at school that took a lot of work?" "What is something you learned how to do that took a lot of practice?" and "When have you said to yourself, 'I'm going to do this no matter how long it takes,' and then you did it?"

PROMPT 1: "I achieved . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word achieve and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CHALLENGE

3 Introduce and Define Challenge

Read this sentence from the first photo caption aloud, emphasizing the word challenge: "Folding origami can be a fun challenge."

Explain that a challenge is "something that is hard to do or requires a lot of work or effort." Explain that many people enjoy origami because turning a piece of paper into a beautiful object is a challenge. It is hard to do and requires a lot of effort.

Display word card 119 (WA6) and ask the students to say the word challenge.

ELPS 2.C.iv
ELPS 3.D.ii
Step 3 and Step 4
(all, beginning on page 419 and continuing on to page 420)

4 Discuss Challenges

Explain that all of us face challenges, and give a few examples of things that are or were challenges for you.

You might say:

"Learning to square-dance was a challenge for me. It was hard to learn the steps. Sometimes talking to strangers is a challenge for me. It's hard because I feel shy and I worry that I might say something silly. I've had to work hard to overcome that challenge."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What is something that is a challenge for you? What is something that is hard for you to do or requires a lot of work? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "[Doing division] is a challenge because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word challenge and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DETERMINATION

5 Introduce and Define Determination

Review that Sadako was a Japanese girl who became ill with leukemia. She believed that if she folded a thousand paper cranes, she would get well. Reread the last paragraph of the article aloud, emphasizing the word determination.

Explain that determination is "deciding you will do something and then doing it, even if it is difficult." Explain that Sadako had determination. Even though she was very sick, she decided she would fold a thousand paper cranes, and she persisted, or kept making the paper cranes, until she died.

Display word card 120 (WA7) and have the students say the word determination.

6 Play "Does Olive Have Determination?"

Tell the students that partners will play "Does Olive Have Determination?" Explain that you will describe something our imaginary third-grade friend Olive is doing, and partners will discuss whether or not Olive has determination and why they think so.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "What is a game or sport that is a challenge for you because it is hard to play?" "What is something we do in school that is a challenge and requires you to think and work hard?" and "What is something that takes you a long time to do?"

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of determination is determinación.

Teacher Note

You may want to remind the students that they learned the word persist earlier and that persist means "keep doing something, even though it is difficult." If you persist, you refuse to give up.

Begin by saying:

- Olive wants to learn to dive. At the pool, her friend Sam shows her how to dive, and Olive gives it a try. She lands on her stomach with a loud smack. "Ouch!" Olive shouts. "That hurt! I'm through with diving! It's not for me!"

Ask:

Q Does Olive have determination? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "Olive [does/does not] have determination because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q If Olive had determination, what might she do to learn to dive?

Click 2 on word card 120 (WA7) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "If Olive had determination, she might . . ."

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Olive is working on a jigsaw puzzle. The puzzle is a challenge because there are lots of pieces. After a few minutes, Olive throws up her hands in frustration. "This is a stupid puzzle!" she shouts. "None of the pieces fit!" She gathers up the pieces and puts the puzzle away.

Point to the word determination and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Play "Use the Clues"

Display the "Use the Clues" chart (🗨️ WA8).

Use the Clues

When Alana's friend told her that her painting was spectacular, Alana felt _____. "I'm glad you like it," said Alana with a big smile.

The actor wasn't very graceful. As he was walking across the stage, he _____. Unfortunately, some people in the audience laughed.

WA8

Materials

- "Use the Clues" chart (WA8)

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the "Use the Clues" sentences on a sheet of chart paper or where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

Accept all words the students can support with context clues from the sentences. If the students cannot suggest a word, or if they suggest words that are not supported by the context, provide a word (such as pleased) and point out the context clues that support it.

Remind the students that when you are reading and you come to a word you do not know, you can sometimes figure out the meaning of the word by reading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentence before or after it, and looking for clues. Explain that the students will play a game called “Use the Clues,” in which they look for clues to a word that is missing from a sentence.

Direct the students’ attention to the first story on the chart. (Cover up the second set of sentences.) Point to the blank and explain that as you read the sentences aloud, you want them to think about what the missing word might be and which words in the sentences are clues to the missing word. Tell the students that more than one word might make sense as the missing word and that the word does not need to be a vocabulary word. Explain that the students may disagree about the missing word, and that is fine. What is important is that they explain their thinking.

Read the sentences aloud, saying “blank” for the missing word. Ask:

Q What do you think the missing word might be?

Have a volunteer share his thinking. Follow up by asking:

Q Why do you think the missing word is [wonderful]? What words in the sentences are clues that tell you the missing word is [wonderful]?

Then ask:

Q Who has a different idea about what the missing word might be?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking. Ask each volunteer to explain her thinking about clues to the missing word.

If necessary, explain that the missing word might be proud, great, or exhilarated and that spectacular, “I’m glad you like it,” and with a big smile are clues to the missing word.

Discuss the second story in the same way. If necessary, explain that the missing word might be tripped, stumbled, slipped, or fell and that “wasn’t very graceful,” “As he was walking,” and “some people in the audience laughed” are clues to the missing word.

Review Achieve, Challenge, and Determination

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words achieve, challenge, and determination from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

achieve

Achieve means “do something successfully, especially something that requires a lot of effort.”

challenge

A challenge is “something that is hard to do or requires a lot of work or effort.”

determination

Determination is “deciding you will do something and then doing it, even if it is difficult.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q If you were writing a story about something you’ve done that you are proud of, which of the words might you use? How might you use it? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

achieve challenge determination

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____. I might write . . .

WA9

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 20 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

---

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

---

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 19 and 20, you might distribute a copy of the "Week 20 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) to each student.

PROMPT 1: "I might use the word [challenge]. I might write . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Answer Questions About the Words

Ask:

Q Does it take determination to achieve something? Why? [Click 2 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "It [does/does not] take determination to achieve something because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q Does it take determination to deal with a challenge? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: "It [does/does not] take determination to deal with a challenge because . . ."

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Contribute ideas that are different from their partners' ideas

Words Reviewed

convenient

If something is convenient, it is useful because it makes our lives easier or more comfortable.

durable

If something is durable, it is tough. It can last a long time even if it is used a lot.

intense

Intense means “very great or strong.”

refreshing

If something is refreshing, it makes you feel fresh (lively or not tired) and strong again.

secure

Secure means “safe and protected.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Introduce the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Does That Make Sense?” Explain that you will read a sentence that includes one or more of the vocabulary words. Partners will decide whether the word makes sense in the sentence and explain why they think so.

Tell the students that before they play the game in pairs, they will practice playing as a class. Point to the words durable and secure on the ongoing review cards (WA10) and explain that the first sentence includes the words durable and secure.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, call for their attention. Reread the sentence aloud, and explain that durable and secure do make sense in the sentence because walking across a durable, or strong, bridge would make you feel secure, or safe. Then read the next sentence and discuss it as a class, rather than in pairs.

Teacher Note

You might explain the suffix -ly means “in a certain way” or “how” and that when you add the suffix -ly to convenient it means “in a useful way.”

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- Alan felt secure walking across the durable wooden bridge.

Ask:

Q Do the words durable and secure make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that?

Give the students a few moments to think about the questions. Then click 1 on the ongoing review cards (WA10) to reveal the prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

The screenshot shows a digital interface with five rounded rectangular buttons containing the words: convenient, durable, intense, refreshing, and secure. Below the buttons, the text reads: PROMPT 1: Durable and secure [do/do not] make sense because . . . At the bottom of the card, there are two circular buttons labeled 1 and 2.

PROMPT 1: “Durable and secure [do/do not] make sense because . . .”

3 Play the Game in Pairs

Now play the game in pairs. Point to the word convenient and explain that the next sentence includes the word conveniently. Remind the students that as they listen to the sentence, they are to think about whether the word conveniently makes sense in the sentence. Then partners will share their thinking with each other.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- The new playground is conveniently located across town from Maya’s house.

Ask:

 Q Does the word conveniently make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The word [conveniently] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following scenarios:

[refreshing]

- On a hot summer day, David has a refreshing bowl of warm soup to cool down.

[intense]

- The intense wind knocked down power lines and trees.

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to explain why the vocabulary words do or do not make sense in the sentences?
- Do they use the vocabulary words to explain their thinking?
- Are they using the words in their writing?

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 188 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by having the students play “Imagine That!” (see Week 1, Day 5, Step 2).

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 21 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students’ understanding of words taught in Weeks 17–20 by using the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheet (IA1) on page 192 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” on page 189 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 17–20 using the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Student Self-assessment” on page 193 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Origami

The Art of Japanese Paper Folding

Could you fold a square of paper into a graceful fish or a long-stemmed flower? Origami, or Japanese paper folding, is an art form practiced by many people. In origami, a simple sheet of paper can become a spectacular piece of art.

Japan is an island country that lies near the east coasts of Russia, Korea, and China. It is made up of four major islands.

Ancient Art Form, Modern Appeal

Paper was invented in China and brought to Japan around the year 500. Because paper was rare back then, paper decorations were reserved for special ceremonies. As paper became more common, people started to make paper models for fun. By the 1800s, children in Japan and Europe were learning the art of folding paper into interesting shapes.

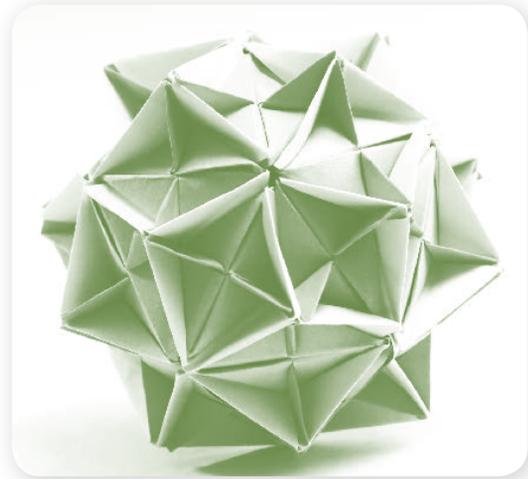

Traditionally, origami objects are created using square pieces of paper that range in size from 1 to 15 inches wide. Six inches is one of the most common sizes. The paper is usually colored or patterned on one or both sides. The paper square is not usually cut or glued but is shaped by making a series of creases and folds. Some artists use wet paper to achieve a more rounded look; others experiment with unusual materials, such as cloth, wire, sheet metal, and even toilet paper.

A Worldwide Craze

Today, there are fans of origami worldwide. The most popular shapes are still traditional Japanese models, such as flowers and birds, but many people are inspired by more unusual-looking life-forms, such as scorpions, armadillos, and horned beetles.

Some people submit their paper creations to origami contests. Some origami contests have a theme such as plants or prehistoric animals. In other contests, there are categories such as best original design, best technical folding, and best miniature model. Winners of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology origami contest have included precise models of a butterfly, a sailboat, and a gold-colored beaver.

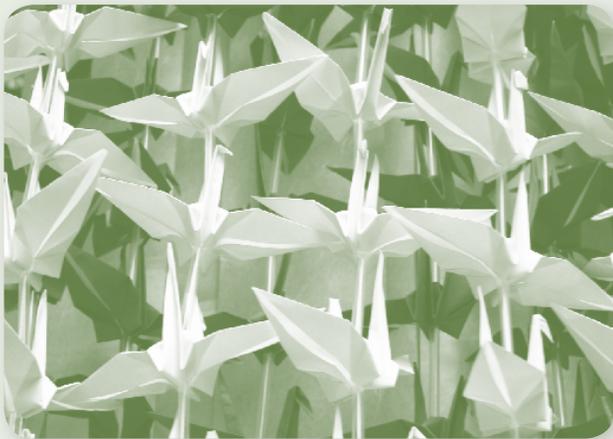

Origami is a tradition that has been passed on through many generations. Artists fold origami to express themselves. Scientists and engineers use it to explore shapes and angles to invent new technology. Teachers sometimes use origami as a tool to help kids learn math. And many people fold paper just because it's fun.

Folding origami can be a fun challenge. Some complicated origami figures are constructed using several sheets of paper.

One Thousand Paper Cranes

In the city of Hiroshima, Japan, people bring thousands of paper cranes to a memorial park every year. They do this to remember a girl named Sadako Sasaki. After World War II (1939–1945), Sadako became ill with leukemia, a form of cancer. She had heard the legend that if a person folds 1,000 paper cranes, he or she will be granted one wish. Her wish was to become healthy again.

A 1,000-crane chain takes a long time for one person to make, but it can be completed quickly if many people join in.

Sadako decided to fold 1,000 paper cranes. For months, she kept folding and folding, but on October 25, 1955, she died, with 350 cranes left to make. Her friends completed the remaining cranes for her. Sadako's determination to finish her project has come to stand for a wish for peace. Today, people across the world fold paper cranes and string them into chains. They send them to the memorial park to remember Sadako's dream.

OVERVIEW

Words Taught

require

serve

prefer

vertical horizontal

tip

Words Reviewed

graceful

lively

mature

successful

unsuccessful

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about a book and functional texts.
- Students review synonyms and antonyms.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students develop the skill of asking clarifying questions.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

① DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 3, collect two pieces of paper to fold during the discussion of the words vertical and horizontal.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Discuss Another Meaning of Tip” on page 442.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “Week 21 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Require, Serve, and Prefer

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words require, serve, and prefer
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Taught

require

Require means “need.”

serve (p. 23)

Serve means “give someone food or drink.”

prefer

Prefer means “like better.” If you prefer something, you like it better than something else.

INTRODUCE AND USE REQUIRE

1 Introduce and Define Require and Review Synonyms

Show page 23 of Morning Meals Around the World and review that this is a recipe for Mexican breakfast quesadillas. Remind the students that a recipe gives directions for how to make or cook something.

Point to the words “What you need” in the recipe and explain that this part of the recipe lists what is required, or needed, to make Mexican breakfast quesadillas. Tell the students that require is the first word they will discuss today, and explain that require and need are synonyms, or “words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.” Remind the students that some of the things that are required, or needed, to make a Mexican breakfast quesadilla are 2 flour tortillas, 1 onion, and 2 thin slices of ham.

Display word card 121 (WA1) and have the students say the word require.

2 Play “What Is Required?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “What Is Required?” Explain that you will describe a fun event the students might attend, and partners will discuss what is required, or needed, for the event.

Materials

- Morning Meals Around the World
- “Lincoln School Lunch Calendar for the week of May 21–25” (see page 447)
- Word card 121 (WA1)
- Word card 122 (WA2)
- Word card 123 (WA3)
- (Optional) Making Meaning Student Response Book

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of require is requerir.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add require and need to it.

Begin by saying:

- A day at the beach

Ask:

Q What are things that are required to spend a fun day at the beach? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

require

PROMPT 1: _____ are required to spend a fun day at the beach.

WA1

PROMPT 1: “[Sunscreen, towels, and swimsuits] are required to spend a fun day at the beach.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following:

- A picnic in the park

Q What are things that are required for a picnic in the park? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Blankets, food, and plates] are required for a picnic in the park.”

- A camping trip

Q What are things that are required for a camping trip? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[A tent, firewood, and flashlights] are required for a camping trip.”

Point to the word require and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SERVE

3 Introduce and Define Serve

Show the recipe again, point to “What to do,” and review that this part of the recipe lists the steps you follow to make Mexican breakfast quesadillas. Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the last step. Then read step 8 aloud, emphasizing the word serve.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is serve and that serve means “give someone food or drink.” Explain that after you make the quesadillas, you serve them, or give them to someone to eat, with sour cream and salsa.

Display word card 122 ( WA2) and have the students say the word serve.

4 Discuss Foods Served

Give some examples of foods or drinks you have recently served to family or friends or been served.

You might say:

“When my parents came over for dinner this weekend, I served, or gave them to eat, a delicious vegetable stir-fry with broccoli and tofu. Last night I went out to dinner with my son. I ordered a big plate of spaghetti with a salad and garlic bread, and a waiter served me my food.”

Ask:

Q What food does our cafeteria serve, or give us, for lunch? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Our cafeteria serves [sandwiches and apples] for lunch.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then discuss as a class:

Q If you were planning a party, what foods would you serve? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I would serve [lasagna and salad] at my party.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word serve and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of serve is servir.

INTRODUCE AND USE PREFER

5 Introduce and Define Prefer

Show the “Lincoln School Lunch Calendar,” and review that this functional text shows a week of lunches being served at Lincoln School. Review that on some days the students at Lincoln School have a choice of what to eat. For example, on Monday they might have a “Deli ham and cheese sandwich with lettuce and tomato” or a “Vegetarian sandwich.” On Wednesday, they might have “Fish nuggets with dip” or “Veggie sticks with hummus.”

Explain that when the students at Lincoln School have a choice of foods to eat, they can select the foods that they prefer, and tell the students that prefer is the last word they will learn today. Explain that prefer means “like better” and that if you prefer something, you like it better than something else. Remind the students that on Monday the students at Lincoln School can choose either a ham and cheese sandwich or a vegetarian sandwich, whichever they prefer, or like better.

Display word card 123 ( WA3) and have students say the word prefer.

6 Play “Which Do You Prefer?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Which Do You Prefer?” Explain that you will describe two things and partners will discuss which one they prefer, or like better, and why.

Begin by saying:

- Reading a book or writing a story

Ask:

Q Which do you prefer: reading a book or writing a story? Why?

[Click  on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I prefer [writing a story] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Spring or winter
- Riding a bike or swimming
- Breakfast or dinner

Point to the word prefer and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You might have the students bring their Making Meaning Student Response Books to the rug to refer to as you discuss the functional text used in today’s lesson.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of prefer is preferir.

Review Require, Serve, and Prefer

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words require, serve, and prefer from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

require

Require means “need.”

serve

Serve means “give someone food or drink.”

prefer

Prefer means “like better.” If you prefer something, you like it better than something else.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words would you use when ordering something from a restaurant? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

require serve prefer

PROMPT 1: I would use the word _____.

I might say . . .

1 2 3 4

WA4

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

PROMPT 1: “I would use the word [prefer]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Explain that you will ask some questions that partners will discuss.

Ask:

-  Q Would you serve foods you prefer at a family party? Why? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] serve foods I prefer at a family party because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

-  Q What is required to build a sand castle? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[Sand, shovels, and water] are required to build a sand castle because . . .”

-  Q What games do you prefer to play? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I prefer to play [kickball] because . . .”

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words vertical, horizontal, and tip
- Review antonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Taught

vertical (p. 448)

If something is vertical, it is positioned up and down rather than from side to side.

horizontal

If something is horizontal, it is positioned from side to side rather than up and down.

tip (p. 448)

A tip is a “piece of advice or useful information.”

INTRODUCE AND USE VERTICAL AND HORIZONTAL

1 Introduce and Define Vertical

Show the functional text “How to Make a Paper Airplane,” and remind the students that this is a list of steps for making a paper airplane.

Point to step 1 and read it aloud, emphasizing the word vertically. Tell the students that the word vertical can be found in vertically, and that vertical is the first word they will learn today. Explain that if something is vertical it is positioned up and down rather than from side to side.

Explain that the first step in making a paper airplane is to fold a piece of paper vertically, or so that the folded paper is positioned up to down rather than side to side. Model folding a piece of paper vertically. Point out that the crease, or fold, is vertical, or up and down.

Display word cards 124–125 (WA5) and reveal word card 124. Have the students say the word vertical.

Materials

- “How to Make a Paper Airplane” (see page 448)
- Word cards 124–125 (WA5)
- Word card 126 (WA6)
- Two pieces of paper (prepared ahead)
- (Optional) Making Meaning Student Response Book

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of vertical is vertical.

Teacher Note

You might have the students bring their Making Meaning Student Response Books to the rug to refer to as you discuss the functional text used in today's lesson.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of horizontal is horizontal.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add vertical and horizontal to it.

2 Introduce and Define Horizontal and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that horizontal is the next word they will learn today, and explain that horizontal and vertical are antonyms, or “words with opposite meanings.” Explain that if something is horizontal, it is positioned from side to side rather than up and down. Model folding the second piece of paper horizontally, pointing out that the fold is horizontal, or side to side. Show the two folded pieces of paper together.

Click to reveal word card 125 on word cards 124–125 (WA5) and have the students say the word horizontal.

3 Play “Vertical or Horizontal?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Vertical or Horizontal?” Explain that you will ask the students to picture something in their minds, and then you will ask them if the position of the thing they pictured is vertical (up and down) or horizontal (side to side).

Begin by having the students picture the following:

- A tree standing straight and tall in the school yard

Ask:

Q Is a tree standing straight and tall vertical or horizontal? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA5

PROMPT 1: _____ is [vertical/horizontal].

1

PROMPT 1: “[A tree standing straight and tall] is [vertical].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then have the students picture the following scenario:

- A tree lying flat on the ground after a storm

Q Is a tree lying flat on the ground vertical or horizontal? [Click 1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Have the students picture one or more of the following pairs:

- A soldier standing straight and tall at attention
- A soldier lying flat on her back, asleep on a cot

- A mountain rising high into the air
- A flat stretch of desert going on for miles and miles

- A table top
- A table leg

Point to the words vertical and horizontal and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

INTRODUCE AND USE TIP

4 Introduce and Define Tip

Point to the “Flying Tips” section of “How to Make a Paper Airplane” and explain that the directions for making a paper airplane include a section called “Flying Tips.” Ask the students to listen as you read the tips. Then read “Flying Tips” aloud.

Explain that tip is the last word the students will learn today and that a tip is a “piece of advice or useful information.” Explain that this section has tips, or advice or useful information, about what to do if your paper airplane is not flying properly.

Display word card 126 (WA6) and have the students say the word tip.

5 Discuss Tips the Students Would Give

Explain that you will describe a situation in which people need tips, or advice, and partners will discuss the tips they might give.

Begin by describing this situation:

- Vinnie is a new student at our school. He wants to make friends, but he is shy.

-  Q What tips, or advice, would you give Vinnie to make new friends?
[Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “My tip would be . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Your friend wants to learn to ride a bike.

-  Q What tips would you give your friend who wants to learn to ride a bike?
[Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word tip and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss Another Meaning of Tip

Remind the students that words often have more than one meaning and sometimes the meanings are very different. Write the word tip where everyone can see it, pronounce it, and review that a tip is a “piece of advice or useful information.”

Ask and discuss as a class:

- Q What else do you know about the word tip?

If necessary, follow up by asking:

- Q What do you mean when you say the tip of the pencil is sharp?
Q What do you mean when you say you gave the waiter a tip?
Q What do you mean when you say that something is about to tip over?

PROMPTS: “Tip also means . . .” or “If the tip of the pencil is sharp . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that tip can also mean “the end point of something,” “an extra amount of money,” or “to fall or cause something to fall.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words vertical, horizontal, and tip from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

vertical

If something is vertical, it is positioned up and down rather than from side to side.

horizontal

If something is horizontal, it is positioned from side to side rather than up and down.

tip

A tip is a "piece of advice or useful information."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday do you think is particularly interesting? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

verticalhorizontaltip

PROMPT 1: I think _____ is particularly interesting because . . .

1234

WA7

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA7)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

PROMPT 1: “I think [tip] is particularly interesting because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Does That Make Sense?” Remind the students that you will read a sentence that includes one of the vocabulary words. Partners will decide whether the word makes sense in the sentence and explain why they think so.

Read the following sentences aloud twice:

- The lamp had fallen over. When we stood it upright, it was horizontal.

Ask:

Q Does the word horizontal make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Click 2 on WA7 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The word horizontal [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

[tip]

- While Chloe was packing for her camping trip, her mom gave her a tip to bring warm socks and a hat.

Q Does the word tip make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The word tip [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

[horizontal]

- During my nap, I was lying vertical on my bed.

Q Does the word vertical make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The word vertical [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, call for their attention. Reread the sentence aloud, and explain that horizontal does not make sense in the sentence because the lamp would be vertical, or positioned up and down, after it was returned to an upright position. If it were horizontal, it would be lying flat. Then read the next sentence and discuss it as a class, rather than in pairs.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Reviewed

graceful

Graceful means “moving in a smooth and beautiful way.”

lively

Lively means “active.” Someone who is lively is energetic and full of life.

mature

Mature means “grown up or adult.” A mature person is sensible and reasonable. He or she is not being immature or childish.

successful

If you are successful, you do what you set out to do or do something well.

unsuccessful

Unsuccessful means “not successful.” If you are unsuccessful, you do not accomplish what you set out to do.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA8) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Activity “Describe the Character”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “Describe the Character.” Remind the students that you will read a story aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word best describes the main character of the story and explain why they think so.

1. Display the ongoing review activity (WA9) and click 1 to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.
  - Story 1: Oliver wants to learn how to play the flute, but after his first lesson he is frustrated. He doesn't practice and finally stops going to his lessons. He never learns to play the flute.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA8)
- Ongoing review activity (WA9)

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the weekly review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

2. Point to the vocabulary words and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Oliver? Why? [Click ❶ again and read the prompt aloud.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Unsuccessful] best describes Oliver because . . .”

WA9

graceful	lively	mature	successful	unsuccessful
----------	--------	--------	------------	--------------

STORY 1: Oliver wants to learn how to play the flute, but after his first lesson he is frustrated. He doesn't practice and finally stops going to his lessons. He never learns to play the flute.

❶   ❷   ❸   ❹   ❺

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, write each story and the words where everyone can see them.

4. Finally, click ❶ to clear the screen.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: Laura danced beautifully across the stage. She spun around lightly on her toes while her arms flowed through the air to the sound of the music. (graceful)
- Story 3: Otis was full of energy. He ran and jumped and skipped and somersaulted hour after hour. He never seemed to grow tired. (lively)
- Story 4: Maria wanted to build a model plane for her grandpa's birthday present. She spent hours and hours working on it, and finally got the airplane built. Her grandpa loved his gift. (successful)
- Story 5: Grady is reading quietly at the library. His friend Orlando yells and makes a funny face at him, but Grady ignores Orlando and continues to read. (mature)

How to Make A PAPER AIRPLANE

1. Fold the sheet of paper in half vertically. Open the paper.

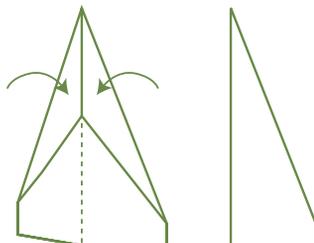

2. Fold the top left and right corners down so that they align with the center fold and form triangles.

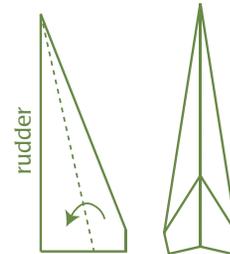

3. Fold the left and right corners in so that they align at the center fold and again form triangles.

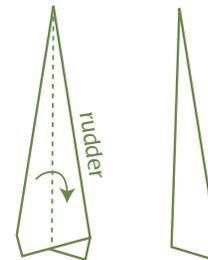

4. Fold the paper in half, keeping the folds from steps 1, 2, and 3 on the inside.

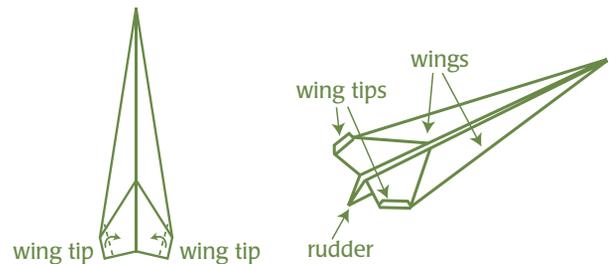

5. Fold the top wing in half so that the edge of the wing aligns with the rudder.

6. Flip the plane over and fold the other wing in half so that the edge of the wing aligns with the rudder.

7. Open the plane and fold up the tips at the back of the wings to help the plane fly better.

Flying Tips:

- If your plane dives and crashes, fold the back edges of the wings up a little.
- If your plane flies too far to the right, bend the rudder a little to the left.
- If your plane flies too far to the left, bend the rudder a little to the right.

Introduce Flashy, Fantastic, and Diverse

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words flashy, fantastic, and diverse
- Review recognizing words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Share their partners' thinking
- Ask clarifying questions

flashy (p. 3)

Flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.”
Something that is flashy catches your attention.

fantastic (p. 3)

Fantastic means “strange, unusual, or unbelievable.”

diverse

Diverse means “different from one another.”

INTRODUCE AND USE FLASHY

1 Introduce and Define Flashy

Briefly review Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs.

Show pages 2–3 and read the first paragraph on page 3 aloud, emphasizing the word flashy.

Explain that flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.” Point to the frogs in the illustration and explain that the author describes rain forest frogs as flashy because they are brightly colored. Point out that these flashy frogs are much more colorful than ordinary green or brown frogs.

Display word card 127 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word flashy.

2 Talk About Flashy Things

Explain that something that is flashy catches your attention. You notice it because it is very big, bright, or expensive. Give some examples of flashy things you have seen or own.

You might say:

“My neighbor has a flashy motorcycle. It is very big, bright red, and has lots of shiny chrome. People stop and look at it whenever she rides it. I have a flashy dress that I wear to parties. It is bright green with gold sparkles. People always notice the dress when I wear it.”

Materials

- Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs
- Word card 127 (WA1)
- Word card 128 (WA2)
- Word card 129 (WA3)

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What clothing or costume do you own that is very colorful?” and “What bike, scooter, or toy do you own or have you seen that is brightly colored or shiny?”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What would you do to make sure people noticed the bike?” “What bright colors would you paint it?” and “What mirrors, baskets, special seat, streamers, or other things would you have on the bike to make it stand out?”

Teacher Note

You may want to explain that fantastic, strange, unusual, and unbelievable are synonyms.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of fantastic is fantástico/a.

Ask:

Q What do you have or what have you seen that is flashy? Why do you think it is flashy? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

flashy

PROMPT 1: I have a flashy _____. I think it's flashy because . . .

1 2

PROMPT 1: “I have a flashy [belt]. I think it’s flashy because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q If you were to design a flashy bike, how would it look? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “My flashy bike would . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking.

Point to the word flashy and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE FANTASTIC

3 Introduce and Define Fantastic

Tell the students that fantastic is the next word they will learn today and that fantastic means “strange, unusual, or unbelievable.” Display word card 128 (WA2) and have the students say the word fantastic. Explain that you will reread the paragraph they heard earlier and they are to listen for how rain forest frogs are fantastic, or strange or unusual.

Reread the first paragraph on page 3 aloud, emphasizing the word fantastic.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What are some ways that rain forest frogs are fantastic, or strange or unusual?

Click 1 on word card 128 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The frogs are fantastic because . . .”

4 Discuss Fantastic Creatures

Explain that sometimes TV shows, movies, and books have fantastic creatures—strange and unbelievable creatures such as monsters, giants, dragons, and aliens from outer space.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What fantastic creature have you read about in a book or seen on TV or in a movie? What made it fantastic?

Click 2 to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “A fantastic creature I have [read about/seen] is . . .” or “It is fantastic because . . .”

5 Make Up a Fantastic Creature

Tell the students that you want them to use their imaginations to make up their own fantastic creatures. Explain that they should think about what their creature looks like and how it acts and that the creature can be scary or silly. Explain that partners will describe their creatures to each other. After partners talk, you will ask a few students to tell the class about their partner’s fantastic creature.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q If you were to make up your own fantastic creature, what would it look like? How would it act? [Pause; click 3 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their partner’s thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “[Ronny’s] fantastic creature . . .”

Point to the word fantastic and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of diverse is diverso/a.

INTRODUCE AND USE DIVERSE

6 Introduce and Define Diverse

Explain that diverse is the last word the students will learn today and that diverse means “different from one another.” Display word card 129 (WA3) and have the students say the word diverse.

Show pages 2–3 again and point to the pictures of the frogs.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q How are these frogs diverse, or different from one another?

Click ① on word card 129 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The frogs are diverse because . . .”

7 Discuss How Dogs Are Diverse

Explain that other kinds of animals are diverse and give an example.

You might say:

“Cats are diverse, or different from one another. Some have long hair, and some have short hair. Some have black hair; others have brown or yellow hair or spots or stripes. Some have long tails and others have short tails or no tail at all.”

Ask:

 Q How are dogs diverse? In what ways are they different? [Click ② on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Dogs are diverse because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

8 Discuss Our Diverse Interests

Tell the students that people are also diverse. Explain that people have diverse interests, and give some examples.

You might say:

“For fun, some people like to draw. Some like to ride bikes. Others like to go bowling.”

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What is something that you like to do for fun?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

Then follow up by asking and discussing as a class:

Q Are our interests diverse? Why or why not?

Click 3 on word card 129 to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Our interests [are/are not] diverse because . . .”

Point to the word diverse and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss Another Meaning of Fantastic

Remind the students that words often have more than one meaning and sometimes the meanings are very different. Write the word fantastic where everyone can see it, pronounce it, and review that fantastic means “strange, unusual, or unbelievable.”

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word fantastic? What do you mean when you say you had a fantastic time at a party?

PROMPTS: “Fantastic also means . . .” or “If I had a fantastic time, I . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that fantastic can also mean “very good, wonderful, or terrific.”

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss a Pair of Illustrations in Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs

Show pages 18–19 of Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs and review that this part of the book tells how tadpoles grow into tiny frogs. Read page 19 aloud. Then have the students look carefully at the illustrations on the pages. Ask and have the students discuss in pairs:

Q What interesting things do you notice in these illustrations?

PROMPT: “I notice that . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the question, you might point out that tadpoles look like fish and swim in the water. Once they grow front and back legs and their tails shrink, they leave the water and become little frogs.

Day 2

Review Flashy, Fantastic, and Diverse

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words flashy, fantastic, and diverse from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Reviewed

flashy

Flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.” Something that is flashy catches your attention.

fantastic

Fantastic means “strange, unusual, or unbelievable.”

diverse

Diverse means “different from one another.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

-  Q Which of these words might you use to describe a plant that talks? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I might use [fantastic] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

-  Q Which of these words might you use to discuss how butterflies are different from one another? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner. (diverse)
- Q Which of these words might you use to describe a brightly colored, sparkly sweater? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner. (flashy)

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Explain that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind the students that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes a vocabulary word. They will use what they know about the word and their imaginations to make up an ending for the story.

Display the “Tell Me a Story” chart (🗺️ WA5). Point to story 1 and begin by reading the story aloud twice, slowly and clearly. Point to the word fantastic and explain that you will tell the beginning of a story that includes the word fantastic.

- Story 1: Jenna and her friends were exploring a dark cave. Jenna stopped suddenly, pointed her flashlight, and shouted, “Look at this! I’ve never seen anything like it. It’s fantastic!” The fantastic thing Jenna saw in the cave was . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? What fantastic thing did Jenna see?
[Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Tell Me a Story

Jenna and her friends were exploring a dark cave. Jenna stopped suddenly, pointed her flashlight, and shouted, “Look at this! I’ve never seen anything like it. It’s fantastic!” The fantastic thing Jenna saw in the cave was . . .

PROMPT 1: The fantastic thing Jenna saw was . . .

PROMPT 1: “The fantastic thing Jenna saw was . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

[flashy]

- Story 2: Paulo was invited to a costume party. He said, “I need to wear something flashy.” Paulo arrives at the party wearing . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? What is Paulo wearing that is flashy?
[Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Paulo is wearing a flashy . . .”

WA5

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of fantastic and think aloud about an ending. (For example, say “The fantastic thing Jenna saw was a giant bat hanging over her head!”) Then reread the beginning of the story and repeat the question.

ELL Note

You might explain that a costume party is a “party in which people dress up in costumes, or clothes that make them look like another person or an animal or thing.”

[diverse]

- Story 3: Marta is a bug collector. She loves to tell her friends about the diverse bugs in her collection. She says that her diverse bugs are . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? What might Marta say about the diverse bugs she has collected? [Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “When Marta talks about the diverse bugs in her collection, she might say . . .”

---

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Rain Forests

Show the cover of Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs and review that many different types of frogs live in tropical rain forests. Ask:

Q What else do you know about rain forests?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

Tell the students that you will read a description of the rain forest from the book and that as you read, you want them to close their eyes and picture the rain forest. Then read the second paragraph on page 5 of the book aloud, without showing the illustration. Ask:

Q What did you learn about the rain forest from the part I just read?

Have volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out that rain forests are full of plants and have three layers—the canopy, the understory, and the forest floor. Review that some rain forest frogs live their whole lives in the canopy and understory. Others never leave the forest floor.

Introduce Avoid, Deadly, and Threatened

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words avoid, deadly, and threatened
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

avoid (p. 12)

Avoid means “keep away from.”

deadly

Deadly means “dangerous and likely to cause death.”

threatened (p. 28)

If something is threatened, it is in danger or likely to be harmed or destroyed.

Materials

- Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs
- Word card 130 (WA6)
- Word card 131 (WA7)
- Word card 132 (WA8)

INTRODUCE AND USE AVOID

1 Introduce and Define Avoid

Show pages 12–13 of Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs and review that frogs have ways to hide from and escape predators. Read page 12 aloud, emphasizing the word avoid.

Explain that avoid means “keep away from.” Point to the pictures of the frogs on pages 12–13 and review that the webbing between their toes and flaps of skin on their sides act like wings and help them avoid, or keep away from, birds and other predators.

Display word card 130 (WA6) and have the students say the word avoid.

2 Discuss Avoiding Things

Explain that sometimes we avoid, or keep away from, certain foods because we do not like how they taste or because eating them makes us sick.

Ask:

Q What is a food you avoid? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I avoid [peanuts] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that sometimes we avoid doing something because it is difficult, boring, or not much fun. Give examples of things you avoid doing now or avoided doing when you were younger.

You might say:

“Sometimes I avoid doing housework even though the house needs to be cleaned. It’s just no fun, and I’d rather be reading or visiting with friends. When I was your age, I avoided playing baseball with my brother because he would tease me when I didn’t catch the ball.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you avoided doing something? Why? [Pause; click 2 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I avoided [cleaning my room] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word avoid and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DEADLY

3 Introduce and Define Deadly

Show pages 14–15 and review that predators stay away from poison dart frogs because their skin contains poisonous chemicals. Read page 15 aloud.

Explain that deadly is the next word the students will learn and that deadly means “dangerous and likely to cause death.” Explain that the poison in the skin of some frogs is deadly. It is dangerous and can kill people.

Display word card 131 (WA7) and have the students say the word deadly.

4 Discuss Deadly Things

Explain that things other than animals can be deadly, or dangerous and likely to cause death.

Ask:

Q Why might a storm, such as a hurricane or tornado, be deadly? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “A storm might be deadly because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might point to the word dead in deadly and explain that dead and deadly are related and that dead is a clue to the meaning of deadly.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Q Why might crossing a street without looking both ways be deadly?
[Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “It might be deadly because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word deadly and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE THREATENED

5 Introduce and Define Threatened

Show pages 28–29 and read page 28 aloud, emphasizing the word threatened.

Explain that if something is threatened, it is in danger or likely to be harmed or destroyed. Explain that frogs such as the blue poison frog are threatened, or in danger, because they live in a small area of the forest. If that part of the forest is destroyed by people cutting down trees, the frogs will have no shelter or food and will die.

Display word card 132 (WA8) and have the students say the word threatened.

6 Discuss Threatening Situations

Ask:

Q If there were a forest fire, what would be threatened? What would be in danger or likely to be harmed or destroyed? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “If there were a forest fire, [animals] would be threatened because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q If you felt threatened by a growling dog, what might you do? Why?
[Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If I felt threatened by a dog, I might . . .”

Point to the word threatened and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

For a list of common compound words, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Compound Words” list in the General Resources section.

EXTENSION

Discuss the Compound Word Painkiller

Write this sentence from page 27 of Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs where everyone can see it: “One chemical from poison dart frog skin is a more powerful painkiller than morphine.”

Direct the students’ attention to the sentence and explain that it is a sentence from Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs. Tell them that the sentence contains a compound word, or a “word made up of two or more shorter words.” Then read the sentence aloud.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What compound word do you see in the sentence?

If necessary, tell the students that the compound word is painkiller.

Remind the students that they can figure out the meaning of a compound word by identifying the shorter words that make up the compound word and thinking about what each word means.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What are the shorter words that make up the compound word painkiller?

Q What do you think the word painkiller means? What is a painkiller?

If necessary, explain that a painkiller is a “pill or other medicine that is taken to stop pain.”

Review Avoid, Deadly, and Threatened

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words avoid, deadly, and threatened from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

avoid

Avoid means “keep away from.”

deadly

Deadly means “dangerous and likely to cause death.”

threatened

If something is threatened, it is in danger or likely to be harmed or destroyed.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 22 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q If you were walking in the woods and saw a deadly snake, would you feel threatened? Why? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

avoid deadly threatened

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] feel threatened by the deadly snake because . . .

1 2 3 4 5

WA9

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] feel threatened by the deadly snake because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

-  Q On a hot day, what do you avoid? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “On a hot day, I avoid . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Make a Choice”

Explain that partners will play “Make a Choice.”

Point to the word avoid and ask:

-  Q Which would you avoid on a cold day: a hot bath or a cold shower? Why?
[Click 3 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I would avoid a [cold shower] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

[deadly]

-  Q Which might be deadly for a young kitten: losing its mother or playing with a toy mouse? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “[Losing its mother] might be deadly because . . .”

[threatened]

-  Q Which would cause you to feel threatened: meeting a bear in the woods or meeting a rabbit in the woods? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “[Meeting a bear] would cause me to feel threatened because . . .”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 21 and 22, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 22 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Reviewed

challenge

A challenge is “something that is hard to do or requires a lot of work or effort.”

prefer

Prefer means “like better.” If you prefer something, you like it better than something else.

require

Require means “need.”

serve

Serve means “give someone food or drink.”

spectacular

Spectacular means “amazing to look at.”

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA11)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Explain that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind the students that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes a vocabulary word. They will use what they know about the word and their imaginations to make up an ending for the story.

Display the “Tell Me a Story” chart (🗉 WA11). Point to story 1 and begin by reading the story aloud twice, slowly and clearly.

- Story 1: Arman’s class is having a picnic to celebrate the end of the school year. They will serve . . .

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of serve and think aloud about an ending. (For example, say “They will serve sandwiches, juice, and watermelon.”) Then reread the beginning of the story and repeat the question.

Q How might you finish the story? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

WA11

Tell Me a Story

Arman’s class is having a picnic to celebrate the end of the school year. They will serve . . .

PROMPT 1: They will serve . . .

PROMPT 1: “They will serve . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following stories using the same procedure:

- Story 2: Paula is learning how to ride a bike. To overcome the challenge, she must . . .

Q How might you finish this story? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To overcome the challenge, she must . . .”

Follow up by asking:

Q Why must Paula [practice riding every day] to overcome the challenge?

Point to prompt 3. Have the volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Paula must [practice riding every day] to overcome the challenge because . . .”

- Story 3: Manny enjoyed his trip hiking through a national park. One spectacular thing he saw was . . .

Q How might you finish this story? [Point to prompt 4.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “One spectacular thing he saw was . . .”

Follow up by asking:

Q Why would [a giant waterfall] be spectacular?

Point to prompt 5. Have the volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 6: “I would prefer to go to . . .”

Follow up by asking:

Q Why would you prefer to go to [the beach]?

Point to prompt 7. Have the volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 7: “I would prefer to go to [the beach] because . . .”

- Story 5: Gwen decides to plant flowers in her garden. She goes to the store with her father to get supplies. Her father explains that planting flowers requires . . .

Q How might you finish this story? [Point to prompt 8.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 8: “Planting flowers requires . . .”

Follow up by asking:

Q Why does planting flowers require [seeds]?

Point to prompt 9. Have the volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 9: “Planting flowers requires [seeds] because . . .”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to complete the stories using the vocabulary words?
- Can they explain why they finished the stories the way they did?
- Are they using the vocabulary words in their speech and writing?

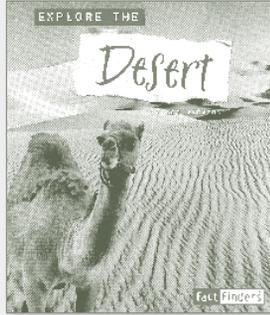

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 196 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice in using the word by reviewing the word’s meaning and then asking a question that requires the student to talk about the word in terms of his own experiences. For example, ask questions such as “When have you overcome a challenge? How did you overcome it?” or “When have you seen something spectacular? What did it look like?”

Day 1

Introduce Adapt, Depend, and Scan

Materials

- Explore the Desert
- Word card 133 (WA1)
- Word card 134 (WA2)
- Word card 135 (WA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words adapt, depend, and scan
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Taught

adapt (p. 6)

Adapt means “change to fit new situations or conditions.” People adapt to new situations or conditions by changing their behavior or ideas.

depend (p. 6)

Depend means “rely on or need someone or something for help or support.”

scan (p. 19)

Scan means “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely.” Scan also means “read something quickly, without looking closely for details.”

INTRODUCE AND USE ADAPT

1 Introduce and Define Adapt

Show pages 6–7 of Explore the Desert and review that the first chapter tells about the plants and animals that live in the desert. Read the last paragraph on page 7 aloud, emphasizing the word adapted.

Explain that adapt means “change to fit new situations or conditions.” Tell the students that desert plants and animals have adapted, or changed, over thousands of years so that they can survive the hot, dry conditions. Review that the leaves of some desert trees have adapted, or changed, by curling up during the hottest times of the day. In this way, the leaves conserve water. Point to the picture of the owls on pages 6–7 and explain that these burrowing owls have adapted, or changed, to fit life in the hot, dry desert, as well. They have adapted by burrowing, or digging, and nesting in the ground where it is much cooler.

Display word card 133 (WA1) and have the students say the word adapt.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of adapt is adaptar.

Teacher Note

You might explain that conserve means “keep something safe from being damaged or destroyed.” The trees conserve, or save, the water by curling up their leaves.

2 Discuss Adapting

Tell the students that, like plants and animals, people adapt, or change, to fit new situations or conditions. Explain that people often adapt by changing their behavior or ideas. Tell about times you have adapted to a new situation and what you did to adapt.

You might say:

"I used to teach first grade. When I started teaching third grade, I had to adapt, or change, my teaching style and lesson plans. To adapt, I talked to other third-grade teachers and read through the third-grade textbooks. When I was your age, my family moved to a new city. I had to adapt to a new neighborhood. To adapt, I made new friends, and they showed me where the park and other fun places in the neighborhood were. Pretty soon the new neighborhood felt like home."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q When have you had to adapt to a new situation? What did you do to adapt? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: I had to adapt _____. To adapt, I . . .

WA1

PROMPT 1: "I had to adapt [when my baby sister came home from the hospital]. To adapt, I . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3 Discuss Ways the Students Would Adapt

Ask the students to imagine they have sprained (hurt) their wrist on the hand they write with, and it is in a cast.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "Have you ever had to adapt, or change your behavior, because you got a new baby brother or sister or a new stepmother or stepfather?" and "Have you ever had to adapt because you moved to a new place or changed schools?"

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of depend is depende.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add depend, rely, and need to it.

Discuss as a class:

Q How would you adapt so that you could get your schoolwork done despite your hurt wrist?

Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I would adapt by . . .”

Point to the word adapt and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DEPEND

4 Introduce and Define Depend and Review Synonyms

Show pages 6–7 again. Read these sentences from page 6, emphasizing the word depend: “Desert plants and animals depend on each other for survival. Desert plants provide shelter and food for desert animals. Animals help plants by spreading their seeds throughout the desert.”

Explain that depend is the next word the students will learn today and that depend means “rely on or need someone or something for help or support.” Tell the students that depend, rely, and need are synonyms. Explain that the plants and animals depend on, or rely on or need, each other to survive in the desert. Desert animals depend on desert plants to provide them with shelter from the hot sun and with food. Desert plants depend on desert animals to spread their seeds throughout the desert.

Display word card 134 ( WA2) and have the students say the word depend.

5 Discuss People We Depend On

Explain that people depend on, or rely on or need, other people to help them or support them. Give examples of people you depend on or have depended on, or examples of people who depend on or have depended on you.

You might say:

“When I was a child, I depended, or relied, on my parents to take care of me. I needed them to provide me with food, clothing, a place to live, and love. As a teacher, I depend on the other teachers I work with for support and advice. I also depend on you, my students, to help me by working hard and treating one another respectfully. When I was teaching my daughter to ride her bike, she depended on, or needed, me to help her learn and make sure she didn’t fall down.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Who is someone you depend on? How do you depend on that person?
[Pause; click ❶ on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I depend on [my brother Kim] to [help me with my homework when I’m stuck].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q Who is someone that depends on you? How does that person depend on you?

Click ❷ on WA2 to reveal the next prompt, and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “[My mom] depends on me to [watch my little sister when my mom is on the telephone].”

Point to the word depend and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SCAN

6 Introduce and Define Scan

Show pages 18–19 of Explore the Desert and review that this part of the book describes desert animals that hunt at night. Read the first paragraph on page 19 aloud, emphasizing the word scan.

Explain that scan is the last word the students will learn today and that scan means “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely.” Explain that the owl scans, or looks closely, at the ground while hunting. The owl is scanning for food.

Display word card 135 (🗉 WA3) and have the students say the word scan.

7 Do the Activity “Imagine That!”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “Imagine That!” You will describe an imaginary situation. The students will make pictures in their minds and then use the word scan to discuss what they imagined.

Have the students close their eyes and picture the following scene in their minds:

- Caleb is swinging on the swings at the park. Suddenly, he leaps off the swing and shouts, “Oh no!” Caleb bends down and scans the ground near the swings.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Why is Caleb scanning, or examining or looking carefully at, the ground? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think Caleb is scanning the ground because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Follow up by asking:

Q [Alexis], you said Caleb might be [scanning the ground for his glasses]. What might that look like? Please act out [scanning the ground] for us.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Brianna is at a popular amusement park. She is standing alone among a crowd of people near the park entrance. Brianna looks confused and a little frightened. She begins scanning the crowd.

Q Why is Brianna scanning the crowd? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think Brianna is scanning the crowd because . . .”

Point to the word scan and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

8 Discuss Another Meaning of Scan

Point to the word scan and review that in the book scan means “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely.” Remind the students that words often have other meanings and that sometimes those meanings are very different. Explain that the word scan can also mean “read something quickly, without looking closely for details.” Explain that sometimes people scan a book, newspaper article, or other text because they are in a hurry or because they are looking for one particular piece of information and do not want to read every word. Ask the students to watch as you act out scanning your Vocabulary Teaching Guide. Then scan a page or two of the guide. Ask:

Q What did you see me do when I scanned the teacher’s guide?

Click 3 on WA3 to reveal the next prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “When you scanned the teacher’s guide, you . . .”

Remind the students that if they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a passage that includes the word scan. Partners will decide whether scan means “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely” or “read something quickly, without looking closely for details” and explain why they think so.

Read the following aloud twice:

- The doctor spent several minutes scanning the patient’s X-ray. She did not want to miss anything.

Ask:

Q In the passage, does scan mean “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely” or “read something quickly, without looking closely for details”? Why do you think that? [Click 4 on WA3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think scan means [examine something closely] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Mr. Russell was in a hurry. He quickly scanned the headlines in the newspaper and then rushed out the door.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Scan, Write About, and Draw an Object

Remind the students that one meaning of the word scan is to “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely.” Explain that the students are to choose an object in the classroom, such as a book, a desk, a table, the globe, or the pencil sharpener. You will then give them a couple of minutes to scan the object, or look at it closely and carefully. Afterwards, they will write about what they saw when they scanned the object, and they will draw the object.

Have the students select an object and give them a minute or two to scan it. Then have them return to their desks or tables and write about and draw the object they scanned. When the students have finished, have them discuss their writing and drawing by asking:

Q What did you see when you scanned [the pencil sharpener]?

Have volunteers use the prompt to answer the question.

PROMPT: “When I scanned [the pencil sharpener], I saw [a round metal thing with a hole in it for the pencil].”

Day 2

Review Adapt, Depend, and Scan

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)
- Daily review activity (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words adapt, depend, and scan from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Reviewed

adapt

Adapt means “change to fit new situations or conditions.” People adapt to new situations or conditions by changing their behavior or ideas.

depend

Depend means “rely on or need someone or something for help or support.”

scan

Scan means “examine something, or look at something carefully and closely.” Scan also means “read something quickly, without looking closely for details.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words might you use if you were writing a story about moving with your family to a new town? What might you write? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [adapt]. I might write . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Game “What’s the Missing Word?”

Tell the students that they will play the game called “What’s the Missing Word?” Review that you will read some sentences aloud and that a word will be missing from each sentence. Explain that partners will decide which vocabulary word could replace the missing word and explain why they think so.

Display the daily review activity (🎧 WA5) and begin playing the game:

1. Point to the words adapt, depend, and scan. Then click ❶ to reveal the first sentence and read it aloud. Point out that a word is missing.
  - Sentence 1: Regina _____ to living in a colder climate by wearing warm coats, gloves, and boots.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What’s the missing word? Why do you think so? [Pause; click ❶ again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think [adapts] is the missing word because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion of this sentence by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the correct word in place. Read the sentence again with the word adapts replacing the missing word.

Teacher Note

For a fully written-out example of this activity, see Week 2, Day 5, Step 3.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the ongoing review activity (WA5) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ❶; the second sentence is ❷; the third sentence is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click reveals the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -es, or -ing.

Day 3

Introduce Disrupt, Trample, and Forbid

Materials

- Explore the Desert
- Word card 136 (WA6)
- Word card 137 (WA7)
- Word card 138 (WA8)

Repeat the procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: The squirrel _____ the ground for nuts. (scans)
- Sentence 3: The kitten _____ on its mother for milk. (depends)
- Sentence 4: After their first flight, the baby eagles must _____ to life outside the nest. (adapt)
- Sentence 5: Dominic _____ on the bus driver, Ms. Kunkel, to take him to school. (depends)
- Sentence 6: The lifeguard _____ the lake for swimmers. (scans)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words disrupt, trample, and forbid
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

disrupt (p. 22)

Disrupt means “disturb or interrupt something that is happening.”

trample (p. 23)

Trample means “damage or crush by walking or stepping on something heavily.”

forbid

Forbid means “order someone not to do something.”

INTRODUCE AND USE DISRUPT

1 Introduce and Define Disrupt

Show pages 22–23 of Explore the Desert and review that this part of the book describes how people affect the desert. Point to the box at the bottom of page 22 and read it aloud, emphasizing the word disrupt.

Explain that disrupt means “disturb or interrupt something that is happening.” Explain that people should not go off trails in the desert because they can disrupt, or disturb, the plants and animals that live near the trails.

Display word card 136 (🔊 WA6) and have the students say the word disrupt.

2 Discuss Whether Olive Is Disrupting Something

Explain that you will describe something that the imaginary third-grader Olive is doing; then partners will decide whether or not she is disrupting something, or disturbing or interrupting something that is happening. Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- It is quiet reading time. Olive is talking loudly to her friend Orlando. Students sitting nearby cannot concentrate on what they are reading.

Ask:

Q Is Olive disrupting quiet reading time? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think Olive [is/is not] disrupting quiet reading time because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following:

- It’s nap time for Olive’s baby sister, Emma. Olive stays in her room and quietly reads while Emma is napping.

Q Is Olive disrupting her sister’s nap time? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think Olive [is/is not] disrupting her sister’s nap time because . . .”

- Olive is watching her friend Orlando’s play practice. Just as Orlando is about to speak his lines, Olive leaps up onto the stage and starts singing a song.

Q Is Olive disrupting play practice? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think Olive [is/is not] disrupting play practice because . . .”

Point to the word disrupt and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE TRAMPLE

3 Introduce and Define Trample

Show pages 22–23 of Explore the Desert again and review that this part of the book describes how people affect the desert. Read page 23 aloud, emphasizing the word trample.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is trample and that trample means “damage or crush by walking or stepping on something heavily.” Point to the hikers on page 23 and explain that hikers like these can trample, or damage or crush, a plant such as a cactus or animals’ homes by stepping heavily on them.

Display word card 137 (🗉 WA7) and have the students say the word trample.

4 Do the Activity “Imagine That!”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “Imagine That!” Explain that you will describe an imaginary situation in which something has been trampled. The students will use what they know about the word and their imaginations to tell how they think the object might have been trampled.

Have the students close their eyes and picture the following scene in their minds:

- You build a toothpick tower on your living room floor. You leave the living room to go to the kitchen for a snack. When you return, the tower has been trampled.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might the toothpick tower have been trampled? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “The toothpick tower might have been trampled [when/by] . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What might the trampled toothpick tower look like?

In the same way, discuss:

- You are at the circus. You see a trampled hat in the center ring.

Q How might the hat have been trampled? [Pause.] Open your eyes.
[Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The hat might have been trampled [when/by] . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q What might the trampled hat look like?

Point to the word trample and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE FORBID

5 Introduce and Define Forbid

Show pages 24–25 of Explore the Desert and review that this part of the book is about protecting the desert. Read page 25 aloud.

Tell the students that the U.S. government creates national parks to protect areas like the desert. Explain that the government forbids people to build roads or homes in these areas and tell the students that forbid is the last word they will learn today. Explain that forbid means “order someone not to do something.”

Display word card 138 (WA8) and have the students say the word forbid.

6 Discuss Forbid

Explain that forbidding people to build roads or homes in national parks is only one of many things that governments forbid, or order people not to do. The government typically forbids things by passing laws. For example, there are traffic laws that forbid speeding (driving faster than the speed limit). These laws protect pedestrians and help to prevent accidents. There are also laws that forbid stealing or doing damage to others’ property. Discuss as a class:

Q What is something else the law forbids?

Click 1 on word card 138 (WA8) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The law forbids . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the question, give a few more examples of things the law forbids (for example, jaywalking, littering, and mistreating animals). Then follow up by asking questions such as “What does the law say people cannot do when they are riding a bike? Driving a car? Flying on an airplane? Picnicking in a park?”

Explain that your school also has rules that forbid students from doing certain things. Give a few examples of school rules that forbid something.

You might say:

“One of our school rules forbids students from running in the halls. Another school rule forbids students from being on campus before 7:30 in the morning.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something else the school forbids? Why do you think the school forbids it? [Pause; click 2 on WA8 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The school forbids [throwing food in the cafeteria]. I think the school forbids it because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class

Point to the word forbid and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Evaporate

Explain that authors who write about science topics such as different habitats and climates often use scientific words to discuss their subjects. Explain that in the book Explore the Desert author Kay Jackson uses the scientific word evaporate to describe the dry desert climate.

Write the word evaporate where everyone can see it. Tell the students that as you read the sentence from the book that includes the word evaporate, you want them to listen for the word and think about what it might mean. Then read these sentences aloud: “Deserts get less than 10 inches (25 centimeters) of rain each year. Desert air is so dry, raindrops often evaporate before they hit the ground.” Ask:

Q What do you think the word evaporate might mean?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that evaporate means “to change from liquid to gas.” When something evaporates it changes from water to vapor in the air. Explain that because the desert climate is so dry, raindrops often evaporate, or change from water to vapor in the air, before they hit the ground.

Review Disrupt, Trample, and Forbid

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words disrupt, trample, and forbid from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Reviewed

disrupt

Disrupt means “disturb or interrupt something that is happening.”

trample

Trample means “damage or crush by walking or stepping on something heavily.”

forbid

Forbid means “order someone not to do something.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words would you use when telling a story about a deer sneaking into your garden? Why? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Explain that you will ask some questions that partners will discuss.

Ask:

-  Q Would you forbid your friend from trampling on your sand castle? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] forbid my friend from trampling on my sand castle because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

-  Q Would you disrupt a school assembly? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] disrupt a school assembly because . . .”

-  Q Would you be exhilarated if someone disrupted a conversation you were having with a friend? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] be exhilarated if someone disrupted a conversation I was having with a friend because . . .”

-  Q Would you forbid your dog from trampling on your neighbor’s flowers? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I [would/would not] forbid my dog from trampling on my neighbor’s flowers because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word exhilarated earlier and that it means “very happy and excited.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed*diverse

Diverse means “different from one another.”

flashy

Flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.” Something that is flashy catches your attention.

flimsy

Flimsy means “thin and weak.” If something is flimsy, it is not sturdy or strong.

hazardous

Hazardous means “dangerous.”

plain

Plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy. Plain also means a “large area of flat land.”

REVIEW THE WORDS*1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS*2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Am I?” You will give a clue about one of the words and partners will figure out the word.

Begin by saying:

- I’m how you might describe a cake without any frosting or candles.

Ask:

Q Which word am I? Why? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.]

Turn to your partner.

Introduce Struggle, Skill, and Skillful

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words struggle, skill, and skillful
- Review the suffix -ful
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Share their partners' thinking with the class
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

struggle (p. 10)

Struggle means "try very hard to do something."

skill (p. 10)

Skill is the "ability to do something well." A skill comes from training and practice.

skillful

Skillful means "good at doing something."

INTRODUCE AND USE STRUGGLE

1 Introduce and Define Struggle

Show pages 10–11 of Polar Bears and review that this part of the book tells about how baby polar bears grow up and learn to survive. Read page 10 aloud, emphasizing the word struggle.

Explain that struggle means to "try very hard to do something." Explain that life is hard and dangerous for baby polar bears. Because of this, baby polar bears must struggle, or try very hard, to survive. Polar bear mothers help their babies struggle to survive by teaching them what they need to know to make it to adulthood.

Display word card 139 (WA1) and have the students say the word struggle.

Materials

- Polar Bears
- Word card 139 (WA1)
- Word cards 140–141 (WA2)

2 Discuss Struggling

Give examples of times you have struggled to do or accomplish something or seen someone struggle.

You might say:

"I am struggling to learn to play the guitar. It is challenging, but I am trying very hard to learn. I struggled when I ran my first half marathon. Toward the end of the race, I was really, really tired, but I struggled to keep going and I finished. My son sometimes struggles with his homework. The homework is difficult and he has to work hard to finish all of it."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss the question that follows. Ask the students to be ready to share their partners' thinking with the class.

Q When have you struggled, or tried very hard, to do something? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "What have you done that was very hard?" and "What is something you learned to do that was difficult at first?"

PROMPT 2: "[Leif] struggled when he [was learning to swim]."

Point to the word struggle and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SKILL AND SKILLFUL

3 Introduce and Define Skill

Show pages 10–11 of Polar Bears again and review that this part of the book tells about how baby polar bears grow up and learn to survive. Read the second sentence aloud, emphasizing the word skill.

Explain that skill is the “ability to do something well.” A skill comes from training and practice. Tell the students that the polar bears learn skills, or abilities, to survive from their mother. Display word cards 140–141 (🔊 WA2) and reveal word card 140. Have the students say the word skill.

Show pages 16–17 and explain that the polar bears on these pages are learning and practicing a very important skill. Ask the students to listen for what that skill is as you read page 17. Then read page 17 aloud. Ask:

Q What skill, or ability, are the bears learning and practicing?

Click ❶ on word card 140 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The bears are learning and practicing the skill of [hunting].”

4 Discuss Skills

Give some example of skills learned in school.

You might say:

“In school, we learn many skills, or abilities. In school, I learned the skill of drawing and painting. Reading and writing are two skills, or abilities, you are learning in school.”

Ask:

Q What other skills, or abilities, do we learn in school? [Click ❷ on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “We also learn the skill of [spelling] in school.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

5 Introduce and Define Skillful and Review the Suffix -ful

Explain that the last word the students will learn today is skillful. Display word cards 140–141 (🔊 WA2) and reveal word card 141. Have the students say the word skillful.

(all, beginning on page 495 and continuing on to page 496)

Teacher Note

For further practice with the word skill, you might show the students pages 22–23 and ask “What skill is this polar bear demonstrating?”

Teacher Note

You might review that a suffix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word” and that the students learned about the suffix -ful when they learned the word graceful.

Point to the suffix -ful in skillful and review that -ful is a suffix and that the suffix -ful means “full of.” Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word skill and the suffix -ful, what do you think the word skillful might mean?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I think skillful means . . .”

If necessary, explain that skillful means “full of skill” or “good at doing something.” Explain that the polar bears need to be skillful, or good at skills such as hunting and swimming, to survive in the Arctic.

6 Discuss Being Skillful

Explain that each of us is skillful, or good at doing certain things, usually because we have learned to do them and have practiced doing them. Give some examples of things you or someone you know is skillful at doing.

You might say:

“I am skillful at painting. I’ve taken classes in which professional painters taught me techniques, or ways, to paint, and I practice every week. My daughter is skillful at ice-skating. She goes to lessons twice a week and is performing in the winter pageant. We have many skillful students in our class. Some of you are skillful storytellers. You tell and write wonderful stories. Others of you are skillful at drawing. I’ve watched you during recess, and I think many of you are skillful rope jumpers, four-square players, and soccer and basketball players.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something you are skillful at doing? How did you become skillful? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I am skillful at [playing the piano]. I became skillful by . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something you would like to be skillful at doing? How would you become skillful? [Pause; click 5 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I would like to be skillful at [skateboarding]. To be skillful, I would need to . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the words skill and skillful and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Review Struggle, Skill, and Skillful

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words struggle, skill, and skillful from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their thinking

Words Reviewed

struggle

Struggle means “try very hard to do something.”

skill

Skill is the “ability to do something well.” A skill comes from training and practice.

skillful

Skillful means “good at doing something.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Introduce Opportunity, Generally, and Decline

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words opportunity, generally, and decline
- Review synonyms and words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

opportunity (p. 18)

An opportunity is a “chance to do something.”

generally (p. 23)

Generally means “usually or almost always.”

decline (p. 28)

Decline means “get smaller or worse.”

INTRODUCE AND USE OPPORTUNITY

1 Introduce and Define Opportunity and Review Synonyms

Show pages 18–19 of Polar Bears and review that this part of the book tells about what polar bears eat. Read page 18 aloud, emphasizing the word opportunity.

Explain that an opportunity is a “chance to do something” and that opportunity and chance are synonyms. Point out that polar bears usually hunt seals. Once in a great while, they get the opportunity, or chance, to hunt walrus and beluga whales—but this opportunity is rare.

Display word card 142 (WA4) and have the students say the word opportunity.

2 Discuss Fun and Interesting Opportunities

Give a few examples of fun or interesting opportunities you or the students have had recently.

You might say:

“Last night I had the opportunity, or chance, to see a movie with my best friend. Last summer I had the opportunity to visit Mexico. This year our class had an opportunity to go on a field trip to the space museum. We also had an opportunity to go to the book fair last week.”

Materials

- Polar Bears
- Word card 142 (WA4)
- Word card 143 (WA5)
- Word card 144 (WA6)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words opportunity and chance to it.

Ask:

Q When have you had an opportunity to do something fun or interesting?
[Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

opportunity

PROMPT 1: I had the opportunity to _____ when . . .

PROMPT 1: “I had the opportunity to [jump on a giant trampoline] when . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What is a fun opportunity you would like to have?

Point to the word opportunity and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE GENERALLY

3 Introduce and Define Generally

Show pages 22–23 and review that this part of the book tells how polar bears swim fast. Read the first four sentences on page 23 aloud, emphasizing the word generally.

Explain that generally is the next word the students will learn. Tell the students that generally means “usually or almost always” and that generally and usually are synonyms. Explain that polar bears can swim six miles per hour, which is much faster than they generally, or usually, walk.

Display word card 143 (WA5) and have the students say the word generally.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of generally is generalmente.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words generally and usually to it.

4 Discuss Things We Generally Do

Give examples of things you generally do:

You might say:

"In the mornings, I generally, or usually, eat toast and drink coffee before leaving the house. On the weekends, my family and I generally go hiking if the weather is nice. During reading time, we generally gather on the rug in the class library."

Ask:

Q What is something you generally do in the morning before school? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "In the morning, I generally . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q What is something you generally do after school? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "After school, I generally . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word generally and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DECLINE

5 Introduce and Define Decline

Show pages 28–29 and explain that this part of the book has more facts about polar bears. Ask the students to listen carefully as you read facts about the population of polar bears, or the number of polar bears still living, in the Arctic. Then read the second paragraph on page 28 aloud, emphasizing the word decline.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is decline and that decline means "get smaller or worse." When there is a decline in something, it gets smaller or worse. Explain that the author is concerned because in some parts of the Arctic, the number of polar bears is declining, or getting smaller. The author fears that the population of polar bears may decline even more in the future because global warming is causing the Arctic ice to melt, making it difficult for polar bears to find food.

Display word card 144 (🗨️ WA6) and have the students say the word decline.

6 Play “Did It Decline?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Did It Decline?” Explain that you will describe something and partners will discuss whether or not the thing you described declined and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Our dog, Skippy, is 12 years old. When he was young, he played fetch for hours. Now his energy is much lower and he gets tired after a short time.

 Q Did Skippy’s energy decline? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Skippy’s energy [did/did not] decline because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following:

- When we arrived in Hawaii for vacation, the temperature was a pleasant 80 degrees. A day or two later, the temperature fell by 20 degrees and it rained. Fortunately, the temperature went back up and the rain stopped.

 Q Did the temperature decline during the vacation in Hawaii? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The temperature [did/did not] decline because . . .”

- During the summer, about 100 to 150 people visit our community pool each day. On the Fourth of July, however, that number rises to 200 to 250. After the holiday, the numbers go back down.

 Q Does the number of people at the pool decline on the Fourth of July? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The number of people [does/does not] decline on the Fourth of July because . . .”

Point to the word decline and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss Another Meaning of Decline

Review that words can have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Write the word decline where everyone can see it, and explain that the word decline has two very different meanings. Review that decline can mean “get smaller or worse.” Then tell the students that decline can also mean “politely turn something down or refuse something.”

Remind the students that when they read or hear a word that has more than one meaning—like decline—they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a sentence that uses the word decline. The students will decide whether decline means “get smaller or worse” or “politely turn something down or refuse something.”

Then read the following sentence aloud twice:

- Jenna declines the invitation to Paul’s party this weekend because she is going camping with her family.

Ask:

- Q In the sentence, does decline mean “get smaller or worse” or “politely turn something down or refuse something”? Why do you think that?

Show the prompt and read it aloud.

PROMPT: “I think decline means [‘politely turn something down or refuse something’] because . . .”

Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Using the same procedure, discuss the following sentence:

- The population of fish declined after the lake froze over.

PROMPT 2: “I [do/do not] generally accept opportunities to go over to friends’ houses because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show a sentence with one or more words underlined. You will read each sentence aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the daily review activity (WA8) and begin playing the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: Dwight is excited for band recital because he has been given the chance to perform a flute solo.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined word. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click 1 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [opportunity] could replace chance because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence in the ongoing review activity (WA8) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is 1; the second sentence is 2; and the third sentence is 3. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the correct answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide the students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 23 and 24, you might distribute a copy of the "Week 24 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) to each student.

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: The squirrel population in Helen's backyard became less after she got her new dog, Sadie.

PROMPT 2: "I think the word [declined] could replace became less because . . ."

- Sentence 3: On weeknights, Wesley's family usually eats dinner together and talks about their day.

PROMPT 3: "I think the word [generally] could replace usually because . . ."

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

avoid

Avoid means “keep away from.”

customary

Customary means “usual or normal or happening regularly.”

disrupt

Disrupt means “disturb or interrupt something that is happening.”

texture

Texture is “how a material feels—for example, rough or smooth.”

trample

Trample means “damage or crush by walking or stepping on something heavily.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “What’s the Missing Word?”

Tell the students that they will play the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Review that you will read some sentences aloud and that a word will be missing from each sentence. Explain that the partners will decide which vocabulary word could replace the missing word and explain why they think so.

Display the ongoing review activity (🗉 WA10) and begin playing the game:

1. Point to the words avoid, customary, disrupt, texture, and trample. Then click ❶ to reveal the first sentence and read it aloud. Point out that a word is missing.
  - Sentence 1: The velvet chair has a very soft _____.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ❶; the second sentence is ❷; the third sentence is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click reveals the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -es, or -ing.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence. Then ask:

Q What's the missing word? Why do you think so? [Click 1 again and read the prompt aloud.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think [texture] is the missing word because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion of this sentence by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the correct word in place. Read the sentence again with the word texture at the end.

- Sentence 4: The puppy _____ the blocks and knocks them all over. (tramples)
- Sentence 5: It's important not to _____ birds in their nests. (disrupt)

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to complete the sentences using the vocabulary words?
- Can they explain why they finished the sentences the way they did?
- Are they using the vocabulary words in their speech and writing?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 197 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write stories in which they use the word.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 25 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students’ understanding of words taught in Weeks 21–24 by using the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheet (IA1) on page 201 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” on page 198 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 21–24 using the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Student Self-assessment” on page 202 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Introduce Ban, Permit, and Valuable

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words ban, permit, and valuable
- Review antonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

ban (p. 530)

Ban means “forbid something or prevent someone from doing something.”

permit

Permit means “allow something to happen or let someone do something.”

valuable (p. 533)

Valuable means “very important or useful in some way.”

INTRODUCE AND USE BAN AND PERMIT

1 Introduce and Define Ban

Remind the students that they read the article “Banning Tag,” and review that the article is about the pros and cons of banning the game of tag in schools. Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is ban and explain that ban means “forbid something or prevent someone from doing something.” Review that some schools are banning tag. They are forbidding or preventing students from playing the game because it is too dangerous.

Reveal word card 145 on word cards 145–146 (WA1) and have the students say the word ban.

Explain that some things are banned, or forbidden, at school and in the classroom. Give a few examples, and explain why each is banned.

You might say:

“Knives and other weapons are banned, or forbidden, at school and in the classroom because they are dangerous. Fighting is banned also. In our classroom, running is banned, or not allowed, because someone might trip and get hurt when running.”

Materials

- “Banning Tag” (page 530–531)
- “Smile—You’ve Got Homework!” (page 532–533)
- Word cards 145–146 (WA1)
- Word card 147 (WA2)

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word forbid earlier and that it means “order someone not to do something.”

Ask:

Q What else is banned at our school or in our classroom? Why is it banned? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA1

ban      146

PROMPT 1: _____ are banned at our school

1   2   3   4   5   6

PROMPT 1: “[Skateboards] are banned at our school because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

2 Introduce and Use Permit and Review Antonyms

Reveal word card 146 on WA1 and tell the students that permit is the next word they will learn today. Explain that ban and permit are antonyms, or “words that have opposite meanings.”

Ask:

Q If ban and permit are antonyms, and ban means “forbid something or prevent someone from doing something,” what do you think the word permit means?

Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I think permit means . . .”

If necessary, explain that permit means “allow something to happen or let someone do something.” Remind the students that, according to the article, some parents and students think tag should be permitted, or allowed, in school. Tell the students that as you read the section called “The Other Side” from the article “Banning Tag,” you want them to listen for the reasons people think tag should be permitted in school. Then read “The Other Side” aloud.

Briefly discuss as a class:

Q Why do some parents and students think tag should be permitted, or allowed, in school? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.]

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of permit is permitir.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add ban and permit to it.

PROMPT 3: “They think tag should be permitted because . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3 Play “Banned or Permitted?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Banned or Permitted?” Explain that you will describe something and partners will discuss whether it should be banned or permitted and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Food and drinks on a school bus

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Food and drinks on a school bus: banned or permitted? Why? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Food and drinks should be [banned/permitted] on a school bus because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following:

- Loud music in the school library

Q Loud music in the school library: banned or permitted? Why? [Pause; click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “Loud music should be [banned/permitted] in the library because . . .”

- Students using cell phones in class

Q Students using cell phones in class: banned or permitted? Why? [Pause; click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “Students using cell phones in class should be [banned/permitted] because . . .”

Point to the words ban and permit and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

INTRODUCE AND USE VALUABLE

4 Introduce and Define Valuable

Remind the students that they read two essays about homework and that the essay in favor of homework is called “Smile—You’ve Got Homework!” Review that, according to the essay, having students memorize facts for homework frees up class time for teachers to do other things. Read the following sentences aloud, emphasizing the word

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word skill earlier and it means the “ability to do something well.”

valuable: “Students need to memorize math facts, how words are spelled, historical dates, and other information. But memorizing information—like practicing skills—takes up valuable class time. Having students memorize facts for homework gives teachers more time during the school day for actual teaching.”

Tell the students that valuable is the last word they will learn today, and explain that valuable means “very important or useful in some way.” Explain that class time is valuable, or very important and useful, to both teachers and students. If students memorize things such as math facts for homework, valuable class time is freed up for teachers to teach important reading, writing, and math skills.

Display word card 147 ( WA2) and have the students say the word valuable.

5 Play “Valuable or Not Valuable?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Valuable or Not Valuable?” Explain that you will describe ways that the students might spend their time after school. The students will decide if they think what you describe is a valuable, or important and useful, way to spend time after school, and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Talking on the phone with your best friend

Ask:

 Q Is talking on the phone with your best friend a valuable way to spend your time after school? Why or why not? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Talking on the phone with my best friend [would/would not] be a valuable way to spend time after school because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Going on a walk with my family

 Q Is going on a walk with your family a valuable way to spend your time after school? Why or why not? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Going on a walk with my family [would/would not] be a valuable way to spend time after school because . . .”

- Taking a nap

 Q Is taking a nap a valuable way to spend your time after school? Why or why not? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Taking a nap [would/would not] be a valuable way to spend time after school because . . .”

- Studying for a test

Q Is studying for a test a valuable way to spend your time after school? Why or why not? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Studying for a test [would/would not] be a valuable way to spend time after school because . . .”

Point to the word valuable and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Ban, Permit, and Valuable

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words ban, permit, and valuable from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

ban

Ban means “forbid something or prevent someone from doing something.”

permit

Permit means “allow something to happen or let someone do something.”

valuable

Valuable means “very important or useful in some way.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA3). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words might you use when talking to our school principal? How might you use the word? [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA3)

PROMPT 1: “I would use the word [permit]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Make a Choice”

Explain that partners will use the words to play the game “Make a Choice.” Point to the word ban and tell the students that they will play the first round of the game with this word. Explain that you will describe two things and ask them to decide which one they think should be banned and tell why they think so. Explain that partners may not always agree and that is fine. What is important is that they explain their thinking.

Ask:

 Q Which of these should be banned: running in the halls or running on the playground? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [running in the halls] should be banned because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

[valuable]

 Q Which of these is a more valuable use of your time after school: reading a book or watching TV? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [reading a book] is more valuable because . . .”

ELL Note

Rather than have the students choose between two things, you might have them discuss each thing individually by first asking “Should running in the halls be banned? Why?” and then asking “Should running on the playground be banned? Why?”

[permit]

Q Which of these do you think third-graders should be permitted to do: vote for president of the United States or vote for school president? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think third-graders should be permitted to [vote for president of the United States] because . . .”

Introduce Task, Unwind, and Stressful

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words task, unwind, and stressful
- Review synonyms and the suffix -ful
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

task (p. 533)

A task is a “job, chore, or other particular thing you have to do.”

unwind (p. 534)

Unwind means “relax.”

stressful

Stressful means “causing worry or tension.”

INTRODUCE AND USE TASK

1 Introduce and Define Task

Remind the students that they heard and talked about the essay “Smile—You’ve Got Homework!” and that the essay discusses the benefits of doing homework. Review that, according to the article, one benefit is that homework helps students learn to organize and plan their time. Read the following sentences from the section “Organization and Planning” aloud, emphasizing the words tasks and task: “Homework also helps kids learn how to prioritize tasks—or decide which tasks must be done and in what order—and how to plan for how long each task should take.”

Materials

- “Smile—You’ve Got Homework!” (page 532–533)
- “Homework—Who Needs It?” (page 534–535)
- Word card 148 (WA4)
- Word card 149 (WA5)
- Word card 150 (WA6)
- (Optional) Making Meaning Student Response Book

ELPS 2.C.iv

ELPS 3.D.ii

Step 1 and Step 2

(all, beginning on page 519 and continuing on to page 520)

Teacher Note

You might have the students bring their Student Response Books to the rug and turn to page 58 to follow along as you read from the article.

Tell the students that task is the first word they will learn today and that a task is a “job, chore, or other particular thing you have to do.” Explain that homework is a task, or particular thing, that students must sometimes do for school. It is a job that needs to be done.

Display word card 148 (🗉 WA4) and have the students say the word task.

2 Discuss Tasks

Explain that all of us have tasks, or jobs or chores or other particular things that we must do. Sometimes tasks are pleasant; sometimes they are unpleasant. But in all cases, a task is something you are responsible for getting done. Give some examples of tasks you have.

You might say:

“One task, or job, I have at home that I really enjoy is taking care of the garden. I have other tasks at home, such as washing dishes and cleaning the house, that I don’t enjoy as much as gardening—but they are particular things I have to do. I also have many tasks, or things I have to get done, as a teacher. Every weekend, I have the task of planning my lessons for the upcoming school week. Another task I have is cleaning up the classroom at the end of each day.”

Ask:

Q What is a task you have at home? What is a job, chore, or other thing that you have to get done? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

task

PROMPT 1: One task I have at home is _____.

WA4

PROMPT 1: “One task I have at home is [giving my dog Rolf a bath when he gets really dirty].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss as a class:

Q What tasks do you have at school? What jobs, chores, or other things do you have to get done? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.]

PROMPT 2: “One task I have at school is [writing stories, poems, and other things].”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word task and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE UNWIND

3 Introduce and Define Unwind and Review Synonyms

Remind the students that they read an essay that argued against homework called “Homework—Who Needs It?” Review that one argument the article makes against homework is that kids need free time after school—not more work. Read the following sentence from “Let Kids Be Kids” aloud, emphasizing the word unwind: “When children get home from school, they need time to unwind.”

Tell the students that unwind is the next word they will learn today and that unwind means “relax.” Explain that unwind and relax are synonyms. Review that, according to the essay, students need time to unwind, or relax, after a full and busy day of school.

Display word card 149 (🗉 WA5) and have the students say the word unwind.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think it is important to unwind? Why?

Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “It [is/is not] important to unwind because . . .”

4 Discuss Unwinding

Explain that there are many things people do to unwind, or relax. Give some examples of things you do to unwind.

You might say:

“One thing I do to unwind, or relax, after a long day is curl up on the couch and read a book. On Sunday nights, I like to unwind by watching a movie with my family. My daughter likes to unwind by listening to music and writing in her journal.”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words unwind and relax to it.

Ask:

Q What are some things you do to unwind? [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To unwind, I [play basketball with my brother].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word unwind and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE STRESSFUL

5 Introduce and Define Stressful

Remind the students that another argument the essay “Homework—Who Needs It?” makes is that homework is a burden for moms and dads, as well as for kids. Read the following sentences from “Let Families Be Families” aloud, emphasizing the word stress: “Homework can be confusing or difficult, and parents don’t always have time to help. This means that kids must sometimes struggle through hard homework assignments on their own—and moms and dads are left feeling guilty for not helping. This is stress that busy families don’t need.”

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is stressful, which is a form of the word stress. Explain that stressful means “causing worry or tension.” Explain that homework is stressful for students and families—it causes worry and tension—because homework can be difficult and not all parents have the time to help their kids. Display word card 150 (WA6) and have the students say the word stressful.

Point to the suffix -ful in stressful and review that -ful is a suffix that means “full of.” Explain that if you add the suffix -ful to the word stress, which means “worry or tension,” you make the word stressful, which means “full of stress, or worry or tension.”

6 Discuss Stressful Situations

Explain that a stressful situation is a situation that causes you to feel worried or tense. Give some examples of situations that are stressful for you or for people you know.

You might say:

“Being late for an appointment is stressful for me. I feel worried and tense because I like to be prompt and don’t like to keep other people waiting. I also find that driving in heavy traffic is stressful. My shoulders get tense and I get grouchy and nervous when I’m stuck in traffic. I also find going to parties is a little stressful for me because I’m basically a shy person and meeting new people can make me feel tense.”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they discussed the suffix -ful when they learned the words doubtful (“full of doubt or uncertainty”), joyful (“full of joy”), sorrowful (“full of sorrow or very sad”), and graceful (“full of grace or full of smoothness and beauty of movement”).

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been in a stressful situation, or a situation that caused you to feel worried or tense? Why was the situation stressful? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Losing my backpack] was stressful because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word stressful and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Discuss Another Meaning of Unwind

Remind the students that words often have more than one meaning and sometimes the meanings are very different. Write the word unwind where everyone can see it, pronounce it, and review that unwind means “relax.”

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word unwind?

If necessary, follow up by asking:

Q What do we mean when we say we need to unwind a hose or a ball of yarn?

PROMPT: “Unwind also means . . .” or “If you unwind a hose or a ball of yarn, you . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that unwind can also mean to “undo something that is wound up by turning it in the opposite direction.”

Day 4

Review Task, Unwind, and Stressful

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA7)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words task, unwind, and stressful from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Share their partners' thinking with the class

Words Reviewed

task

A task is a "job, chore, or other particular thing you have to do."

unwind

Unwind means "relax."

stressful

Stressful means "causing worry or tension."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of the words you learned yesterday do you think is particularly interesting? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I think [stressful] is particularly interesting because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Answer Questions About the Words

Point to the words unwind and stressful and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word. Ask:

Q What do you do to unwind after a stressful day? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To unwind after a stressful day, I . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

[task/stressful]

Q What task do you think is stressful? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think the task of [watching my baby sister] is stressful because . . .”

Q Would losing your bike be stressful? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “Losing my bike [would/would not] be stressful because . . .”

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Draw a Picture of Unwinding

Tell the students that they will draw a picture of themselves doing something to unwind. Remind the students that unwind means “relax.”

Discuss:

Q What do you do to unwind? What does it look like?

Q Where are you unwinding? What does that look like?

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Day 5

Ongoing Review

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA8)
- Ongoing review activity (WA9)

Have the students draw pictures of themselves unwinding. For example, a student might draw a picture of himself playing at the park. Ask the students to share and discuss their drawings in pairs. Encourage them to use the following prompt:

PROMPT: “I drew [myself playing at the park with my friends]. There are [trees and a playground].”

Have a few volunteers share and discuss their drawings with the group.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

deadly

Deadly means “dangerous and likely to cause death.”

flashy

Flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.” Something that is flashy catches your attention.

graceful

Graceful means “moving in a smooth and beautiful way.”

intense

Intense means “very great or strong.”

opportunity

An opportunity is a “chance to do something.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA8) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Finish the Story.” Review that you will tell a story, leaving off the last word. Explain that partners will finish the story by deciding which of the ongoing review words makes the best ending for it.

Display the ongoing review activity (🔊 WA9) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly. Point out that the ending is missing.
  - Story 1: Juanita received a jewelry kit for her birthday. She told her mom, “I’m going to make you a sparkling necklace that everyone will admire. It will be _____.”
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and read each word aloud. Ask:

Q Which vocabulary word makes the best ending for the story? Why? [Click ❶ again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [flashy] makes the best ending because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

deadly	flashy	graceful	intense	opportunity

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

Teacher Note

Each story on the ongoing review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

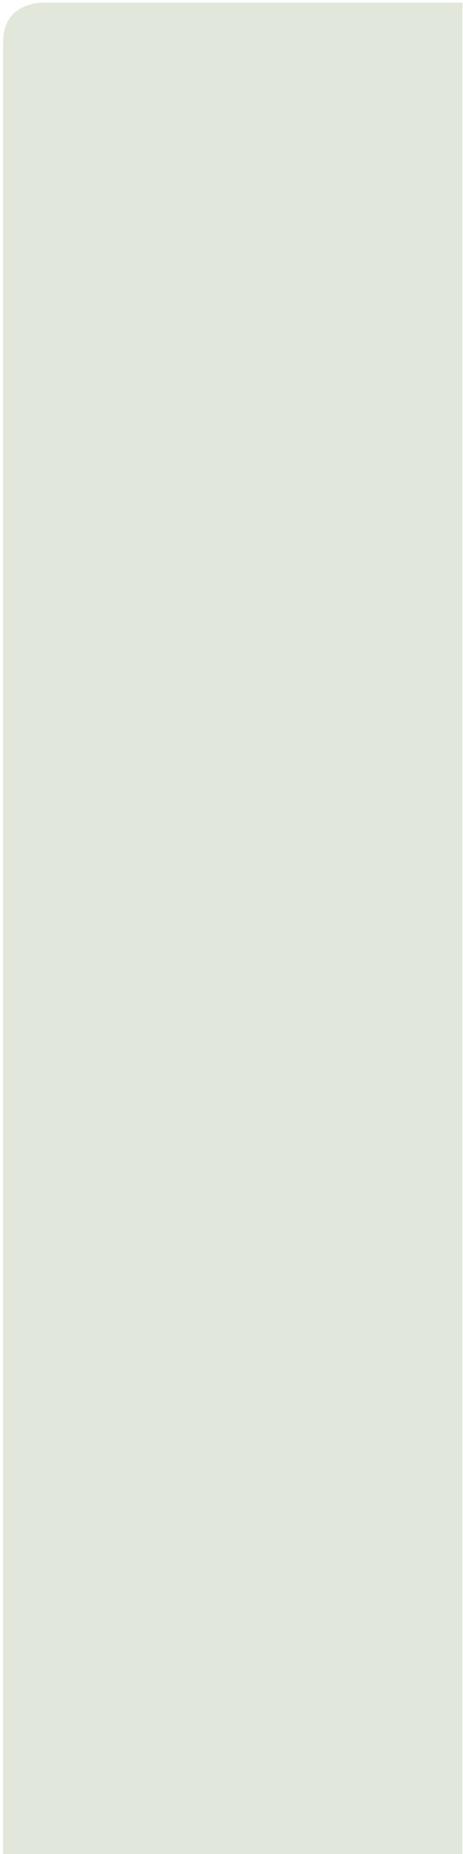

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word coax earlier and that it means “persuade someone to do something by talking to the person gently and kindly.”

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: “I dance smoothly and beautifully. I move like a swan,” the dancer bragged. “I am ever so _____.” (graceful)
- Story 3: Jun jumped off his bike and landed right next to a giant spider. He carefully took a step back and whispered, “Uh oh. I hope this spider isn’t _____.” (deadly)
- Story 4: After gym class, Magda and Sasha huffed and puffed as they tried to catch their breath. They told the gym teacher, “That workout was _____.” (intense)
- Story 5: Mr. Kerr asked Omar to read his story at the school assembly. Omar was nervous at first, but Mr. Kerr coaxed him into it by saying, “Omar, you are an excellent writer so you shouldn’t be afraid. You don’t want to miss this _____.” (opportunity)

Banning TAG

Imagine that you are being chased. You run as fast as you can, but you are not quick enough. You feel hands on your back, touching you. You trip, fall down, skinning your knee. Not again! You are tired of always being “it.”

Has this ever happened to you? If it has, you know that it does not feel very good. Some principals, teachers, and parents are worried that playing tag at recess is too dangerous. They argue that kids run into one another, fall down, and get hurt playing tag. They say that sometimes tag leads to hitting, pushing, and bullying. In response to these concerns, schools all over the country are banning the game of tag during recess.

The Other Side

Some parents and kids think schools should not ban tag. A third-grader from the state of Washington even started a petition to get his principal to change the ban and let the kids play tag again at recess. There are a lot of good things about the game. It is easy to get started because you do not need anything to play except some friends. Also, while you run around, you are getting exercise and having fun at the same time. Many people are upset that recess has to be ruined for everyone just because a few children play too rough. After all, the game of tag has been around for hundreds of years.

Different Types of Tag

There are many different versions of tag. You probably know how to play some of them. One of the most popular versions of tag is “freeze tag,” where instead of being “it” when you are caught, you have to stand still until another player touches you. There is also “tunnel tag,” which is like freeze tag except that your teammate must crawl through your legs before you can play again.

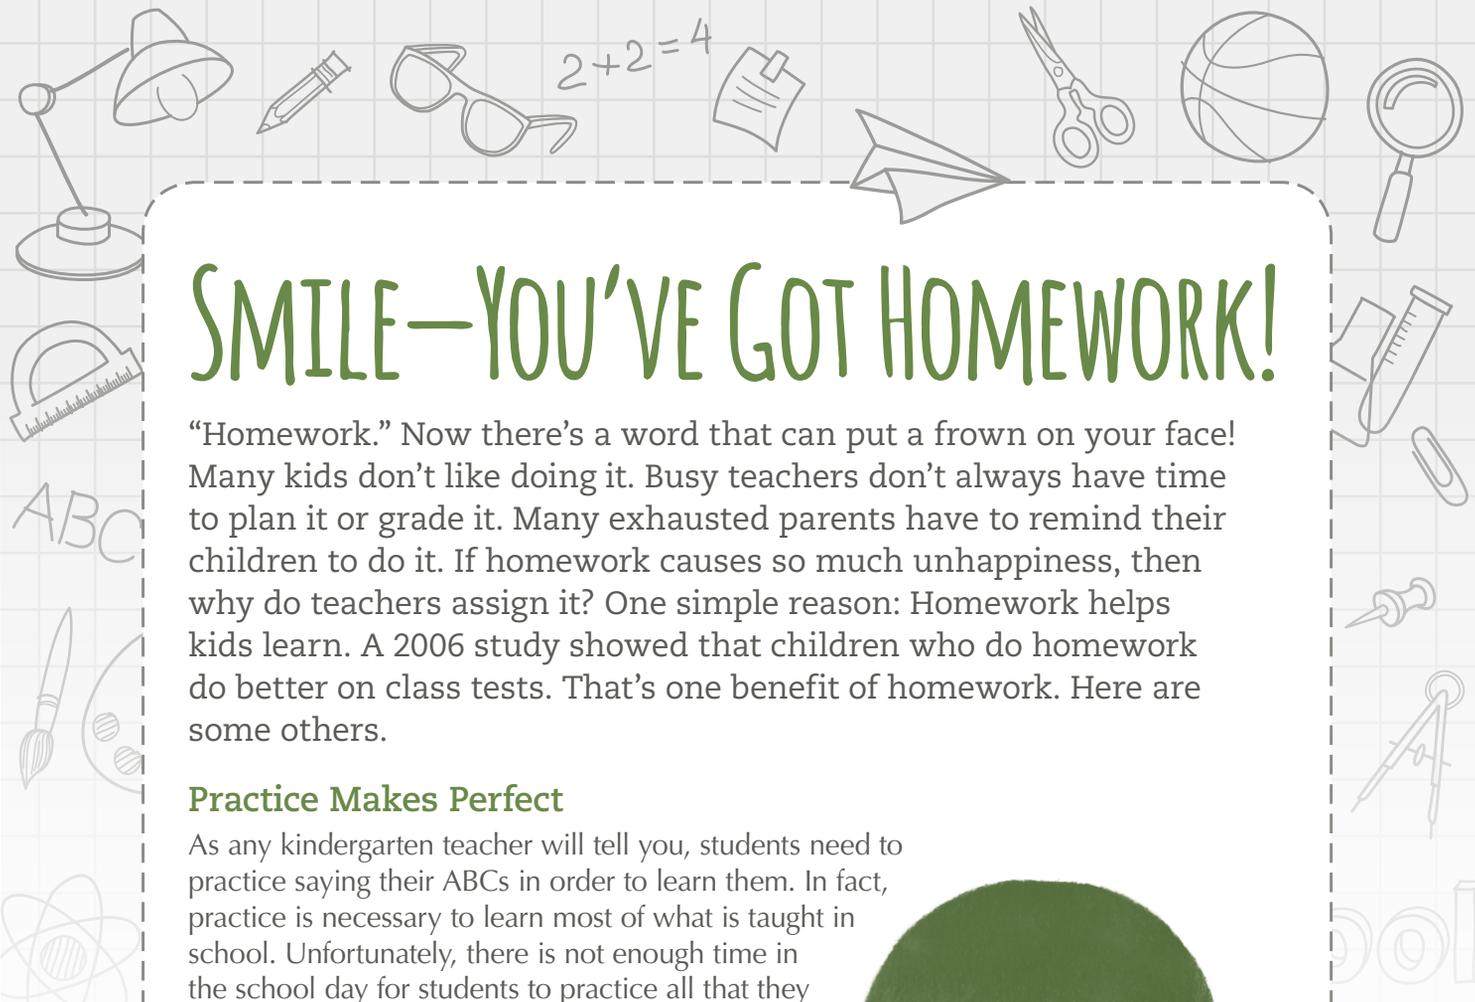

“Monster tag” starts with one person chasing all the others. As each player is tagged, he or she joins hands with “it” to help chase the others. In the end, there is a long chain of players who are all “it,” working together. With all the hands and feet, the chain reminds some people of a monster! That is how this kind of tag got its name.

Other Games

If your school does not allow tag at recess, there are lots of other games you can play instead! If you have a ball, you can organize a game of kickball or four square. With a piece of chalk and a few pebbles, you can play hopscotch. You can probably think of many more fun things to do during recess.

Whatever you are allowed to do at recess, it is important that you play fair and are gentle with others. When everyone feels safe, everyone can have fun!

SMILE—YOU'VE GOT HOMEWORK!

“Homework.” Now there’s a word that can put a frown on your face! Many kids don’t like doing it. Busy teachers don’t always have time to plan it or grade it. Many exhausted parents have to remind their children to do it. If homework causes so much unhappiness, then why do teachers assign it? One simple reason: Homework helps kids learn. A 2006 study showed that children who do homework do better on class tests. That’s one benefit of homework. Here are some others.

Practice Makes Perfect

As any kindergarten teacher will tell you, students need to practice saying their ABCs in order to learn them. In fact, practice is necessary to learn most of what is taught in school. Unfortunately, there is not enough time in the school day for students to practice all that they learn. That’s what homework is for. Homework provides the practice time that students need.

Homework also helps a teacher teach more effectively. Reviewing homework assignments helps the teacher know what the students understand and what they don’t. With this information, teachers can decide whether to reteach a lesson or move on.

Homework helps students practice what they are learning in school.

Memorizing Facts

Like it or not, memorization is an important part of learning in school. Students need to memorize math facts, how words are spelled, historical dates, and other information. But memorizing information—like practicing skills—takes up valuable class time. Having students memorize facts for homework gives teachers more time during the school day for actual teaching. In addition, students don't always need a teacher's help to memorize information. Why waste the teacher's time with this type of schoolwork?

Organization and Planning

Homework can help kids learn how to organize and plan their time. Students with homework must set aside time to get it done. Other activities, like spending time with friends or watching TV, may have to wait until homework is done.

Homework also helps kids learn how to prioritize tasks—or decide which tasks must be done and in what order—and how to plan for how long each task should take. Skills like these are very important to academic success.

School and Home

Homework gives parents a chance to become more involved in their children's school lives. Parents can help with homework while talking with their kids about what they are learning. Parents can also make homework more fun and interesting, and they can help their children see the importance of the work they are doing.

So smile when you hear the word "homework." It's good for you!

Homework provides an opportunity for parents and kids to work together.

Homework—

Who Needs It?

Is homework good for kids? Do kids learn more if they do homework? Teachers, students, and parents have been debating these questions for years. Many studies have looked at the impact of homework on student learning, but there is no clear evidence that homework helps students learn more. In fact, one 2012 study found no significant relationship between time spent on homework and grades. That's one argument against homework, but it's not the only one. Let's take a look at some others.

Let Kids Be Kids

Students spend about seven hours a day in school. Most of that time they are thinking, listening, reading, and writing—pretty exhausting stuff! Kids have little time during the school day to relax or spend time with friends.

When children get home from school, they need time to unwind. They do not need to do more schoolwork! Most adults don't come home from a full day at work and do even more work for their job. So why should kids?

Kids need time to be kids after school.

Let Families Be Families

Homework is a burden for kids, but it can be a burden for moms and dads, too. After a long day, parents are tired. The last thing they want to do is to keep reminding their reluctant children, "Do your homework!" Homework can be confusing or difficult, and parents don't always have time to help. This means that kids must sometimes struggle through hard homework assignments on their own—and moms and dads are left feeling guilty for not helping. This is stress that busy families don't need.

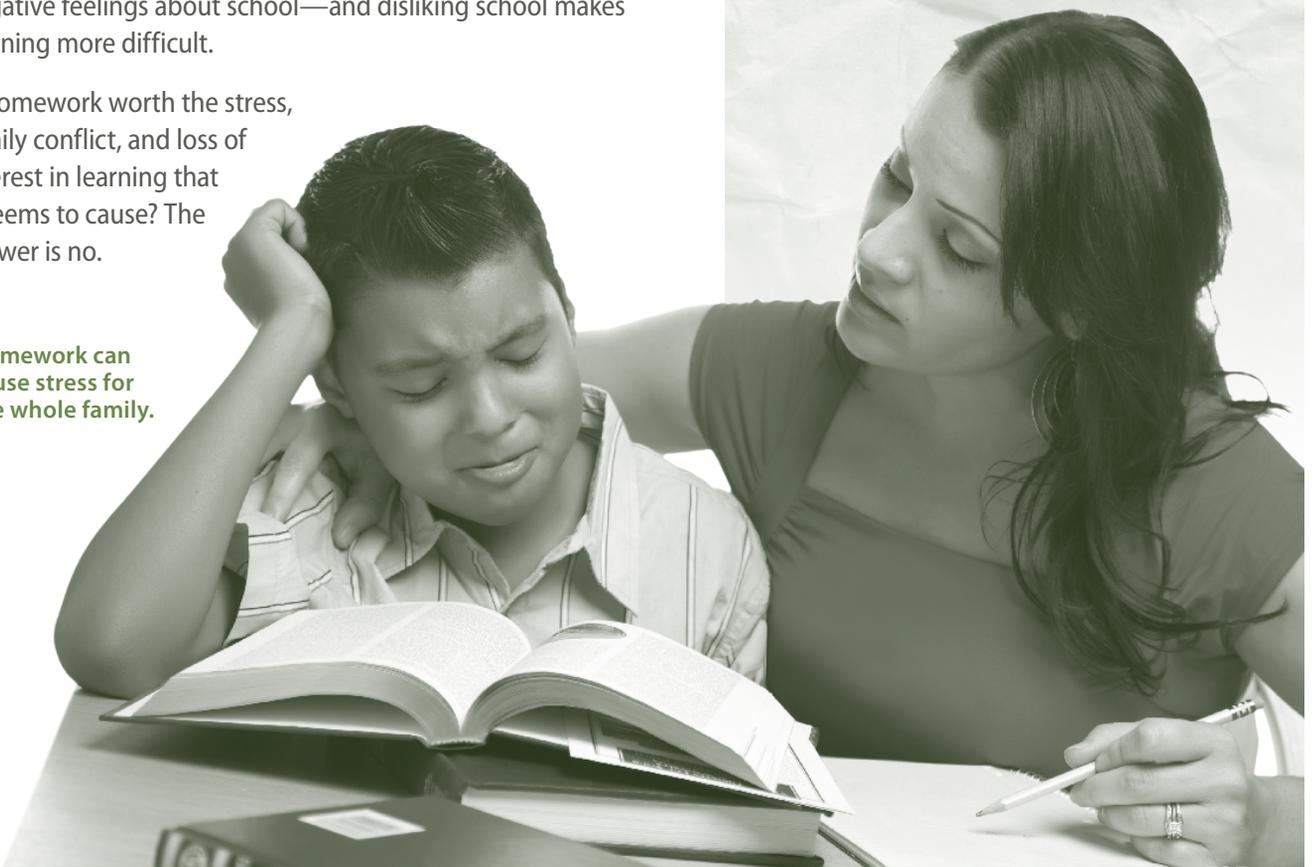

Families need time to do enjoyable things together. Many children and their parents say goodbye in the morning and often don't see each other again until after five o'clock. That leaves only a few hours for family time before going to bed. It's important for families to spend the little time they have together talking, reading, and doing things they all enjoy.

Who Likes Homework?

If you ask students if they like homework, many will probably say they do not. Because students associate homework with school, negative feelings about homework can turn into negative feelings about school—and disliking school makes learning more difficult.

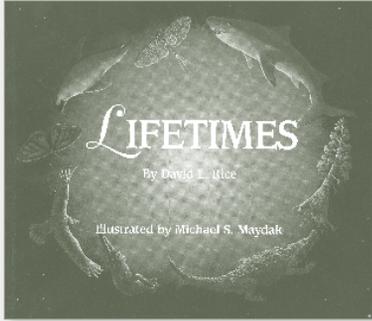

Is homework worth the stress, family conflict, and loss of interest in learning that it seems to cause? The answer is no.

Homework can cause stress for the whole family.

Introduce Collaborate, Aggressive, and Evacuate

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words collaborate, aggressive, and evacuate
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Taught

collaborate

Collaborate means “work with others to make or do something.”

aggressive

Aggressive means “threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.” Aggressive animals or people are frightening because they can be mean, dangerous, or violent.

evacuate

Evacuate means “leave a place and go somewhere safer.”

INTRODUCE AND USE COLLABORATE

1 Introduce and Define Collaborate and Review Synonyms

Briefly review “A lifetime for an army ant is about three years” in Lifetimes.

Show page 6 and begin reading aloud, stopping after: “If the river is very wide, they form large ‘ant balls’ and float to the other side.”

Explain that the first word the students will learn today is collaborate, and that collaborate means “work with others to make or do something.”

Explain that collaborate and cooperate are synonyms.

Explain that army ants collaborate, or work together, in amazing ways. They march together like soldiers and use their bodies to form an ant bridge and ant balls that float across a river.

Display word card 151 (WA1) and have the students say the word collaborate.

Materials

- “A lifetime for an army ant is about three years” in Lifetimes (page 6)
- Word card 151 (WA1)
- Word card 152 (WA2)
- Word card 153 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of collaborate is colaborar.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add collaborate and cooperate to it.

2 Talk About Collaborating

Explain that the students often collaborate, or work together, to learn and do things, and give a few examples.

You might say:

“As a class, we collaborated to put on a play. This week you collaborated with partners to write stories. You also collaborated in groups of four to learn about the solar system. On the playground, you collaborate when you jump rope with others and play basketball.”

Ask:

Q When else have you collaborated in class or on the playground? With whom did you collaborate? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

collaborate

PROMPT 1: I collaborated _____ when . . .

WA1

PROMPT 1: “I collaborated [with Ian and Michelle] when . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word collaborate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE AGGRESSIVE

3 Introduce and Define Aggressive

Read the rest of page 6 of Lifetimes aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is aggressive, and explain that aggressive means “threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.” Explain that aggressive animals or people are frightening because they can be mean, dangerous, or violent.

Explain that army ants are very aggressive creatures. They will attack and eat an animal as large and ferocious as a tiger. When army ants attack, people leave their homes because they feel that their lives are in danger. Display word card 152 (🌍 WA2) and have the students say the word aggressive.

Explain that animals other than army ants can be aggressive, especially if they are hungry or are being threatened themselves. Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What other animals are aggressive? Why do you think that?

Click ❶ on word card 152 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “A [shark] is aggressive because . . .”

4 Play “Which Is Aggressive?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Is Aggressive?” You will describe two animals, and partners will decide which animal is aggressive and why they think so.

Ask:

Q Which of these is aggressive: an alligator snapping at a turtle or a sleeping alligator? Why do you think that? [Click ❷ on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [an alligator snapping at a turtle] is aggressive because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following using the same procedure:

- A puppy chasing its tail or a guard dog growling and jumping at people
- A lion chasing a zebra or a tiger drinking water from a creek

Point to the word aggressive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of aggressive is agresivo/a.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to name aggressive animals, ask questions such as “What animals attack other animals and people?” and “What animals would you be afraid of if they were angry or hungry?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of evacuate is evacuar.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by suggesting one or two other reasons, such as because of a flood or tornado. Then ask the question again.

INTRODUCE AND USE EVACUATE

5 Introduce and Define Evacuate

Explain that the last word the students will learn today is evacuate, and that evacuate means “leave a place and go somewhere safer.” Review that when army ants come through, people have to evacuate their homes, or leave their homes to go someplace safer until the ants are gone.

Display word card 153 ( WA3) and have the students say the word evacuate.

6 Talk About Evacuating

Explain that people evacuate their houses for other reasons, such as when the house is on fire or is threatened by a fire.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Why else might people evacuate their houses? [Pause; then click 1 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “People might evacuate their houses because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that when we have fire drills, we practice evacuating the school building.

As a class, discuss:

Q Where do we go when we evacuate the school building during a fire drill? Why?

Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the next prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “When we evacuate the school, we go [outside to the playground] because . . .”

Point to the word evacuate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Collaborate, Aggressive, and Evacuate

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words collaborate, aggressive, and evacuate from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

collaborate

Collaborate means “work with others to make or do something.”

aggressive

Aggressive means “threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.” Aggressive animals or people are frightening because they can be mean, dangerous, or violent.

evacuate

Evacuate means “leave a place and go somewhere safer.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q If you were writing a story about a fierce creature that was threatening your home, which of the words would you use? How would you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

collaborate aggressive evacuate

PROMPT 1: I would use the word _____. I would write . . .

1 2 3 4

WA4

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word fierce and that fierce means “dangerous or violent.”

PROMPT 1: “I would use the word [aggressive]. I would write . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Answer Questions About Olive

Explain that partners will use the words to answer questions about Olive.

Point to the word collaborate and ask:

-  Q In which situation is Olive collaborating: when she is working with her friends to build a fort or when she is working by herself to build a fort? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Olive is collaborating when she [is working with her friends to build a fort] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following, using the same procedure:

[aggressive]

-  Q In which situation is Olive being aggressive: when she is bullying a boy on the playground or when she is helping a little boy on the playground? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Olive is being aggressive when she [is bullying the boy] because . . .”

[evacuate]

-  Q In which situation might Olive have to evacuate her house: when her grandparents come for a visit or when the river near her house floods? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Olive might have to evacuate her home [when the river near her house floods] because . . .”

Introduce Distress, Unaggressive, and Considerate

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words distress, unaggressive, and considerate
- Review antonyms and synonyms
- Review the prefix un-
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Taught

distress

Distress is a “feeling of deep sadness, worry, or pain.”

unaggressive

Unaggressive means “not aggressive, or not threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.”

considerate

Considerate means “thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others.”

INTRODUCE AND USE DISTRESS

1 Introduce and Define Distress

Briefly review “A lifetime for an elephant is about 65 years” in Lifetimes.

Show page 19 and begin reading, stopping after: “Elephants are among the few animals that weep tears when they are very, very sad.”

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is distress and that distress is a “feeling of deep sadness, worry, or pain.” Explain that when an elephant’s baby or friend dies, an elephant shows its distress, or deep sadness, by moaning and crying. Like people, elephants weep tears when they feel distress.

Display word card 154 (🗉 WA5) and have the students say the word distress.

Materials

- “A lifetime for an elephant is about 65 years” in Lifetimes (page 19)
- Word card 154 (WA5)
- Word card 155 (WA6)
- Word card 156 (WA7)

2 Play “Is Olive Feeling Distress?”

Explain that you will describe something that has happened to Olive, and partners will discuss whether they think Olive is feeling distress, and why.

Begin by saying:

- Olive has to take her puppy to the veterinary hospital for an operation.

Ask:

Q Is Olive feeling distress? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

distress

PROMPT 1: I think Olive [is/is not] feeling distress because . . .

1

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I think Olive [is/is not] feeling distress because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following using the same procedure:

- Olive’s family is going out for ice cream.
- Olive falls out of a tree and scrapes her arm.

Point to the word distress and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE UNAGGRESSIVE

3 Introduce and Define Unaggressive, and Review Antonyms and the Suffix un-

Read this sentence on page 19 of Lifetimes aloud: “Although elephants are the largest animals on land, they don’t kill or bother other animals.”

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is unaggressive, and explain that unaggressive and aggressive are antonyms. Explain that unaggressive means “not aggressive, or not threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.” Explain that, unlike army ants, elephants are for the most part unaggressive animals. They do not threaten or harm other animals.

Display word card 155 (🔊 WA6) and have the students say the word unaggressive. Point out the prefix un- in unaggressive, and review that un- means “not.”

4 Play “Aggressive or Unaggressive?”

Explain that partners will play “Aggressive or Unaggressive?” You will describe how an animal or person is acting, and partners will decide whether the animal or person is aggressive or unaggressive, and why.

Begin by saying:

- A cat is hiding under a table.

Ask:

Q Is the cat aggressive or unaggressive? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the [cat] is [aggressive/unaggressive] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following using the same procedure:

- A snake is hissing and striking at a hiker.
- A woman is pushing people out of her way so she can be first in line.
- A child is waiting patiently for his turn on the slide.

Point to the word unaggressive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CONSIDERATE

5 Introduce and Define Considerate and Review Synonyms

Read the last three sentences on page 19 aloud: “When ponds and streams dry up, elephants use their trunks to dig down to water. When they finish drinking, they let other animals drink. Without water these animals would die.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of considerate is considerado/a.

Tell the students that considerate is the last word they will learn today. Explain that considerate means “thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others” and that considerate, thoughtful, and kind are synonyms. Explain that when elephants let other animals drink, they are being considerate, or thoughtful or kind.

Display word card 156 ( WA7) and have the students say the word considerate.

6 Review the Activity “What Might You Say or Do?”

Explain that you will describe a situation and partners will discuss what they would say or do to be considerate, or thoughtful or kind.

Begin by saying:

- You are watching a baby panda in its cage at the zoo. It is very crowded around the panda cage, and a child behind you can't see.

Ask:

Q What might you say or do to be considerate? [Click  on WA7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “To be considerate, I would . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following situations using the same procedure:

- You are playing a game on your computer at home. Your sister tells you that she needs to do some research online for a school project.
- You are in the school cafeteria eating lunch. Across the table, you see a boy who is upset because he left his lunch at home.

Point to the word considerate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Explore Related Words: Considerate and Consider

Write the word considerate where everyone can see it, and review that considerate means “thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others.”

Tell the students that knowing the meaning of considerate can help them figure out the meanings of other words that are related to considerate. Write these sentences where everyone can see them:

Donny's best friend Lana can't go to his birthday party so he will consider changing the date of his party.

Ask:

Q What word in the sentence is related to considerate? Why do you say that?

If necessary, point out that consider is related to considerate, and that you can see the word consider (c-o-n-s-i-d-e-r) in considerate. Then ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word considerate and clues in the sentence, what do you think the word consider means?

If necessary, explain that consider means “think carefully about something,” and point out that Donny considers, or thinks carefully, about changing the date of his party because his best friend Lana can't go.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss Being Considerate

Write the word considerate where everyone can see it, and remind the students that considerate means “thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others.” Ask the students to think about a time they were considerate. Then ask:

Q When were you considerate?

Q Why do you think you were considerate?

Have the students use the prompts to share their thinking with a partner:

PROMPT: “I was considerate when . . .” and “I think I was considerate because . . .”

Have volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the group.

Day 4

Review Distress, Unaggressive, and Considerate

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 26 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words distress, unaggressive, and considerate from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

distress

Distress is a "feeling of deep sadness, worry, or pain."

unaggressive

Unaggressive means "not aggressive, or not threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others."

considerate

Considerate means "thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Point to the word considerate and ask:

Q Would you want someone who is considerate as a friend? Why?
[Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

1 2 3 4 5

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] want someone who is considerate as a friend because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the remaining words using the same procedure:

[unaggressive]

Q Would you want an unaggressive dog as a pet? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] want an unaggressive dog as a pet because . . .”

[distress]

Q Would you feel distress if someone you loved were sad? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] feel distress if someone I loved were sad because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Goes With?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Goes With?” You will write a word where everyone can see it and partners will discuss which vocabulary word goes with the word you wrote and why.

Begin by writing:

- family

Ask:

Q Which vocabulary word goes with the word family? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think [considerate] goes with family because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- playground

Q Which vocabulary word goes with the word playground? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I think [unaggressive] goes with playground because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students have trouble making associations or make associations to only one of the words, call for attention and ask questions such as [distress] “How might the word distress go with family?” and “Why might someone in your family feel distress?” [unaggressive] “How might the word unaggressive go with family?” and “Why would you want the members of your family to be unaggressive?” [considerate] “How might the word considerate go with family?” and “What might you do to be considerate of the people in your family?”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 25 and 26, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 26 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- Ongoing review activity (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence in the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the correct answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Taught

adapt

Adapt means “change to fit new situations or conditions.” People adapt to new situations or conditions by changing their behavior or ideas.

forbid

Forbid means “order someone not to do something.”

struggle

Struggle means “try very hard to do something.”

task

A task is a “job, chore, or other particular thing you have to do.”

unwind

Unwind means “relax.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show a story with one or more words underlined. You will read each story aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the story.

Display the ongoing review activity (WA10) and begin playing the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Story 1: When Leonard moved from the city to the country, it took him awhile to change his behavior to fit in.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story and the underlined word. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined words? Why? [Click 1 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [adapt] could replace change his behavior to fit in because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

STORY 1: When Leonard moved from the city to the country, it took him awhile to adapt.

1 2 3 4 5

WA10

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Story 2: Kendall and her dad are setting up for the family barbecue and Kendall has the job of setting the table. She must put plates, utensils, and napkins on the table.

PROMPT 2: “I think [task] could replace job because . . .”

- Story 3: At Frank’s soccer tournament his team played three games in one day! He was exhausted when he got home and lay on the couch to relax.

PROMPT 3: “I think [unwind] could replace relax because . . .”

- Story 4: Nadia and her brother went on a hike up a volcano. After one hour, the trail became very steep. Nadia tried very hard to make it to the top and overcame the challenge.

PROMPT 4: “I think [struggled] could replace tried very hard because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might point out that the students learned the word challenge earlier and that a challenge is “something that is hard to do or requires a lot of work or effort.”

Teacher Note

You might point out that the students learned the word permit earlier and that permit means “allow something to happen or let someone do something.”

- Story 5: The principal decided to order students not to bring food and drinks in the gymnasium because people were slipping on spills and hurting themselves. Now, food is permitted only in the cafeteria.

PROMPT 5: “I think [forbid] could replace order students not to bring because . . .”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to choose the correct words to replace the underlined words?
- Can they explain why they completed the sentence the way they did?
- Do they use the words in their writing?

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 205 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by reviewing the word’s meaning and then asking a question that requires the student to talk about the word in terms of his own experiences. For example, ask questions such as “When have you struggled to do something? Why did you struggle to do it?” or “When have you had to adapt to a new situation? How did you adapt?”

Day 1

Introduce Diligent, Frank, and Self-confident

Materials

- “The Camel Dances” in Fables (pages 22–23)
- Word card 157 (WA1)
- Word card 158 (WA2)
- Word card 159 (WA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words diligent, frank, and self-confident
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Taught

diligent

Diligent means “hard-working.” When you are diligent, you work steadily or carefully on something because it is important to you.

frank (p. 22)

When you are frank, you say what you think, openly and honestly.

self-confident

Self-confident means “sure of yourself.” If you are self-confident, you are confident or sure you can do something.

INTRODUCE AND USE DILIGENT

1 Introduce and Define Diligent

Briefly review “The Camel Dances” in Fables. Show pages 22–23, and read the first three paragraphs on page 22 aloud, stopping after: “Her feet were blistered, and her body ached with fatigue, but not once did she think of stopping.”

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is diligent, and explain that diligent means “hard-working.” Explain that when you are diligent, you work steadily or carefully on something because it is important to you.

Display word card 157 (WA1) and have the students say the word diligent.

Explain that the Camel is diligent, or hard-working, because she has her heart set on being a ballet dancer. Explain that as you reread part of the fable, you want the students to listen for what the Camel does that shows she is diligent. Reread the first three paragraphs on page 22 aloud. Then ask and discuss as a class:

Q What does the Camel do that shows she is diligent?

Click ① on word card 157 (WA1) and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA1

diligent

PROMPT 1: The Camel shows she is diligent when she . . .

①   ②

PROMPT 1: “The Camel shows she is diligent when she . . .”

If necessary, explain that carefully practicing the five positions hundreds of times and working steadily for months under the hot desert sun show that the Camel is diligent.

2 Discuss Times We Have Been Diligent

Give a couple of examples of times you have been diligent or noticed others being diligent.

You might say:

“I was diligent when I planted my garden this spring. I spent several weekends digging, planting, fertilizing, and watering. I worked really hard because I wanted the garden to be beautiful. I noticed that Mattie and Kevin were diligent when they made their clay elephant. They spent several days on it and worked very hard to make the best clay elephant they could.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been diligent? When have you worked hard to do something or make something because it was important to you?
[Pause; click ② on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I was diligent when . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word diligent and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you worked hard on something at home or at school?” “When have you worked on something that took you a few hours or days to finish?” and “When have you practiced something over and over?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of frank is franco/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words frank, truthful, and honest to it.

INTRODUCE AND USE FRANK

3 Introduce and Define Frank and Review Synonyms

Remind the students that the Camel dances for a group of friends and critics, and they do not like her dancing. Read aloud the paragraph that begins, “I must tell you frankly,” said a member of the audience,” emphasizing the word frankly.

Tell the students that frank is the next word they will learn, and explain that when you are frank, you say what you think, openly and honestly. Explain that frank, truthful, and honest are synonyms.

Explain that when the critic tells the Camel that she is lumpy, humpy, baggy, and bumpy, he is being frank, or open and honest, about what he thinks, even though it may hurt the Camel’s feelings.

Display word card 158 ( WA2) and have the students say the word frank.

4 Discuss Whether People Are Frank

Explain that you will tell a story about a person saying something and partners will discuss whether or not the person was frank, or open and honest, and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Svetlana was eating lunch at her friend’s house. She didn’t like the sandwich she was served, but she said, “Mmmm, this sandwich is delicious.”

Ask:

 Q Was Svetlana being frank? Why? [Click  on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Svetlana] [was/was not] being frank because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Dupree watched as his friend Tyler drew a picture of an elephant. He said to Tyler, “Your picture is pretty good, but it would be even better if you made the ears larger and added tusks.”
- Marianne’s friends wanted to play with their dolls. She told them, “I don’t want to play with dolls. I’d rather ride bikes.”

Point to the word frank and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SELF-CONFIDENT

5 Introduce and Define Self-confident

Remind the students that even though friends and critics do not like the Camel's dancing, she does not stop. Read the last two paragraphs on page 22 aloud.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is self-confident, and explain that self-confident means "sure of yourself." Explain that if you are self-confident, you are confident or sure you can do something. Explain that no matter what her friends and critics say, the Camel is self-confident. She is sure she is a splendid dancer.

Display word card 159 (🔊 WA3) and have the students say the word self-confident.

6 Discuss Times We Have Been Self-confident

Give examples of times you feel or have felt self-confident.

You might say:

"I feel self-confident when I play tennis because I practice regularly and I feel confident that I will play well. I felt self-confident when I took a test in my Spanish class the other evening. I had studied hard and was sure I would do well."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q When have you felt self-confident? When have you felt confident or sure that you could do something? [Pause; click ❶ on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I felt self-confident when . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Why did you feel self-confident when you [read your story to the class]?

Click ❷ on WA3 to reveal the next prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "I felt self-confident because . . ."

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "When have you felt confident doing something at school?" and "When have you felt confident playing a sport or game?"

7 Play “Is Olive Self-confident?”

Tell the students that partners will play “Is Olive Self-confident?” You will describe something that our friend Olive does, and partners will discuss whether or not she is self-confident and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Olive really likes thinking about numbers. On her own, she does lots of number puzzles. She tells her mom, “I’m good at math.”

Ask:

Q Is Olive self-confident? Why do you think so? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think Olive [is/is not] self-confident because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Olive doesn’t like to take spelling tests because she is worried she will spell a word wrong. Before a spelling test, she is always very nervous.
- Olive likes to make friends. Whenever she doesn’t know someone, she introduces herself. She is sure that she can make new friends.

Point to the word self-confident and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Discuss the Suffix -ly

Review that a suffix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the suffix -ly means “in a certain way” or “how.” Explain that -ly can be added to diligent, frank, and self-confident to form these words:

- diligently, which means “in a diligent, or hard-working, way”
- frankly, which means “in a frank, or open and honest, way”
- self-confidently, which means “in a self-confident way or a way that shows you are sure of yourself”

Have the students discuss these questions:

- Q If you wanted to write a good story, would you work diligently on it? Why?
- Q Is it always a good idea to speak frankly? Why?
- Q If you have practiced diligently for a soccer game, are you likely to play self-confidently? Why?

Review Diligent, Frank, and Self-confident

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words diligent, frank, and self-confident from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

diligent

Diligent means “hard-working.” When you are diligent, you work steadily or carefully on something because it is important to you.

frank

When you are frank, you say what you think, openly and honestly.

self-confident

Self-confident means “sure of yourself.” If you are self-confident, you are confident or sure you can do something.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗨️ WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Point to the word diligent, and ask:

Q Would you like to be described as diligent? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

diligentfrankself-confident

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] like to be described as diligent because . . .

WA4

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)
- Daily review activity (WA5)

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence in the ongoing review activity (WA5) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ①; the second sentence is ②; and the third sentence is ③. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the correct answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] like to be described as diligent because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss frank and self-confident using the same procedure.

Q Would you like to be described as frank? Why? [Click ② to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] like to be described as frank because . . .”

Q Would you like to be described as self-confident? Why? [Click ③ to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] like to be described as self-confident because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show a sentence with one or more words underlined. You will read each sentence aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the daily review activity (WA5) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ① to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined word.
  - Sentence 1: Lucas was being honest when Lila asked for his opinion of her story.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined word. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click ① again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [frank] could replace honest because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ① a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: When you are sure of yourself, you feel certain you will do well.

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined phrase? Why? [Click 2 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the word [self-confident] could replace sure of yourself because . . .”

- Sentence 3: Mr. Ahmed is a hard-working athlete. He runs five miles every morning.

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click 3 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think the word [diligent] could replace hard-working because . . .”

Day 3

Introduce Headstrong, Overwhelmed, and Contentment

Materials

- “The Mouse at the Seashore” in Fables (pages 40–41)
- Word card 160 (WA6)
- Word card 161 (WA7)
- Word card 162 (WA8)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words headstrong, overwhelmed, and contentment
- Review synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Share their partners’ thinking with the class
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Taught

headstrong

Headstrong means “determined to do what you want no matter what anyone says.”

overwhelmed (p. 40)

If you are overwhelmed by a feeling, you feel it very strongly—so strongly that you forget everything else.

contentment (p. 40)

Contentment is a “feeling of satisfaction and happiness.” People feel contentment when they are doing something they enjoy.

INTRODUCE AND USE HEADSTRONG

1 Introduce and Define Headstrong and Review Synonyms

Briefly review “The Mouse at the Seashore” in Fables. Show pages 40–41, and read the first three paragraphs on page 40 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is headstrong, and explain that headstrong means “determined to do what you want no matter what anyone says.” Explain that headstrong, obstinate, and stubborn are synonyms.

Explain that the Mouse is headstrong—he is determined to go to the seashore no matter what his mother and father say. He says, “Nothing can make me change my mind.”

Display word card 160 (WA6) and have the students say the word headstrong.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word obstinate earlier. If you started a synonym chart, add the words headstrong, obstinate, and stubborn to it.

2 Play “Is Olive Headstrong?”

Explain that partners will play “Is Olive Headstrong?” You will describe something Olive does, and partners will discuss whether or not she is headstrong and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- Olive wants to play in the rain. Her sister tells her that she will get soaked, but Olive doesn’t listen. She runs outside and begins splashing through puddles.

Ask:

Q Is Olive headstrong? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

headstrong

PROMPT 1: We think Olive [is/is not] headstrong because . . .

1

WA6

PROMPT 1: “We think Olive [is/is not] headstrong because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- Olive’s older brother tells Olive that she is too little to camp out with him. He says, “You’ll get scared, Olive, so you can’t come.” Olive says, “Okay. I won’t go,” and she stays home.
- Olive and her friends are hiking. Olive wants to hike all the way to the lake, but her friends don’t want to. “The lake is too far away,” they tell Olive, “and it’s getting dark.” Olive ignores her friends and hikes on by herself.

Point to the word headstrong and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE OVERWHELMED

3 Introduce and Define Overwhelmed

Review that the Mouse encounters dangers along the way, but he finally reaches the seashore. Read the last paragraph on page 40 aloud, emphasizing the word overwhelmed.

Explain that if you are overwhelmed by a feeling, you feel it very strongly—so strongly that you forget everything else. Explain that the Mouse is overwhelmed by a feeling of deep peace at the seashore. He forgets about his fears and the dangers of the trip and feels only peace and happiness.

Display word card 161 (🔊 WA7) and have the students say the word overwhelmed.

4 Discuss Feeling Overwhelmed

Explain that you can be overwhelmed by many different feelings, such as happiness, sadness, anger, and surprise.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been overwhelmed by a feeling of happiness? When have you felt so happy that you forgot everything else? [Pause; click ① on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I was overwhelmed by happiness when . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then ask and discuss as a class:

Q If a person were overwhelmed by a feeling of deep sadness, what might that person do or say?

Click ② to reveal the next prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “If a person were overwhelmed by sadness, the person might . . .”

Point to the word overwhelmed and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When has something happened to you at home or at school that made you very, very happy?” and “When have you been so happy that you shouted with joy and jumped up and down?”

INTRODUCE AND USE CONTENTMENT

5 Introduce and Define Contentment

Reread the following sentence aloud, emphasizing the word contentment:
“He was overwhelmed by a feeling of deep peace and contentment.”

Explain that contentment is a “feeling of satisfaction and happiness.”
Explain that the Mouse feels contentment, or satisfaction and happiness, because he has done what he set out to do—reach the sea—and looking at the sea makes him happy.

Display word card 162 (🌐 WA8) and have the students say the word contentment.

6 Discuss Times We Feel Contentment

Explain that people feel contentment, or satisfaction and happiness, when they are doing something they enjoy. Give an example of when you feel contentment.

You might say:

“I feel contentment when I’m curled up with a good book in the evening. It makes me happy to have some time to myself after a busy day, and I love reading a good story. I also feel contentment after I have eaten a good meal. I really enjoy food, and eating a delicious meal leaves me satisfied and happy.”

Explain that partners will discuss when they feel contentment, and then a few students will share their partners’ thinking.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When do you feel contentment? When do you feel satisfaction and happiness? [Pause; click ❶ on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I feel contentment when . . .”

After partners have talked, click ❷ on WA8 to reveal the next prompt.
Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their partners’ thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “[Paulo] feels contentment when . . .”

Point to the word contentment and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of contentment is contento/a.

Teacher Note

You might explain that satisfaction is “feeling satisfied, or pleased, because you have done something well or something has turned out the way you wanted.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as, “When do you feel happy or satisfied at home or at school?” and “What do you do alone or with friends that makes you feel happy and satisfied?”

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss Being Headstrong

Remind the students that they learned the word headstrong, and review that if you are headstrong, you are determined to do what you want no matter what anyone says. Review that the Mouse in the fable “The Mouse at the Seashore” is headstrong—he is determined to go to the seashore no matter what his mother and father say. Ask the students to think about a time they were headstrong. Then ask:

Q When were you headstrong?

Q Why do you think you were headstrong?

Have the students use the prompts to share their thinking with a partner.

PROMPTS: “I was headstrong when . . .” and “I think I was headstrong because . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompts to share their thinking with the group.

Day 4

Review Headstrong, Overwhelmed, and Contentment

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words headstrong, overwhelmed, and contentment from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

headstrong

Headstrong means “determined to do what you want no matter what anyone says.”

overwhelmed

If you are overwhelmed by a feeling, you feel it very strongly—so strongly that you forget everything else.

contentment

Contentment is “a feeling of satisfaction and happiness.” People feel contentment when they are doing something they enjoy.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of these words might you use when you talk with your family or friends? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA9

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [headstrong]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Explain that partners will play “Which Word Am I?” Review that you will give a clue about one of the words and partners will figure out the word.

Begin by saying:

- I’m the feeling you get when you are having fun with your friends.

Ask:

Q What word am I? Why do you think that? [Click 2 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the word is [contentment] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

---

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

---

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that earlier they learned the compound word heartbreaking, which means "very sad or upsetting."

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- I'm how you feel when you are so scared you can't think or move. (overwhelmed)
- I'm how you would describe someone who is stubborn and doesn't listen to good advice. (headstrong)
- I'm how you feel when you are very, very sad and nothing can make you feel better. (overwhelmed)
- I'm the feeling of happiness and satisfaction you get when you are doing something you enjoy. (contentment)
- I'm how you describe someone who does something even though all of her friends tell her not to do it. (headstrong)

---

EXTENSION

Discuss the Compound Word Headstrong

Write the word headstrong where everyone can see it, and explain that headstrong is a compound word. Review that a compound word is a "word made up of two or more shorter words," and remind the students that if they see a compound word in their reading and are not sure what it means, they can usually figure out the meaning by identifying the shorter words and thinking about what each word means.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What shorter words make up the word headstrong?

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking.

PROMPT: "[Head]" and "[strong]" make up the word headstrong."

If necessary, point out that the words head and strong make up the word headstrong. Explain that someone who is headstrong has a strong belief or idea in his mind (head), and no one is going to change his thinking.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

aggressive

Aggressive means “threatening or ready and eager to fight or attack others.” Aggressive animals or people are frightening because they can be mean, dangerous, or violent.

considerate

Considerate means “thoughtful of the feelings and needs of others.”

evacuate

Evacuate means “leave a place and go somewhere safer.”

skillful

Skillful means “good at doing something.”

stressful

Stressful means “causing worry or tension.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Does That Make Sense?” Remind the students that you will read a sentence that includes one of the vocabulary words. Partners will decide whether the word makes sense in the sentence and explain why they think so.

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- Harold is always considerate of his sister while she does her homework. He talks loudly on the phone and watches television in the same room.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, call for their attention. Reread the story aloud, and explain that considerate does not make sense in the story because talking loudly and having the TV on in the same room would make it difficult to do homework. Harold is not being considerate of his sister.

Ask:

Q Does the word considerate make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing antonyms and synonyms (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Recognizing idioms (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the play.
- Students review antonyms and synonyms.
- Students review recognizing words with multiple meanings.
- Students review recognizing idioms.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students develop the skill of giving reasons for their ideas.
- Students develop the skill of asking clarifying questions.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students work in a responsible way.

1 DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, identify an area in the classroom that is well-organized, such as your desk, the classroom library, or the computer center. You will use this area to discuss the word well-organized.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, collect one or more silk items such as a scarf, pillowcase, handkerchief, napkin, or shirt to discuss the word silky.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Discuss Another Meaning of Brainstorm” on page 590.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 206 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheet (IA1); see page 210 of the Assessment Resource Book. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 5, make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1); see page 213 of the Assessment Resource Book. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the following materials: “Week 28 Word Cards” (BLM2) and “Week 28 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3). These materials can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Well-organized, Disorganized, and Boast

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words well-organized, disorganized, and boast
- Review antonyms and synonyms
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Taught

well-organized (p. 37)

If something is well-organized, it is planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way.

disorganized

If something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

boast

Boast means “brag.” When people boast, they talk about themselves or something they have with too much pride or pleasure.

INTRODUCE AND USE WELL-ORGANIZED

1 Introduce and Define Well-organized

Show page 37 of Pushing Up the Sky and review that the play “Possum’s Tail” is based on a Native American tale told by the Cherokee people.

Explain that this introduction to the play gives background information about the Cherokee people. Read the first paragraph aloud, emphasizing the word well-organized.

Explain that if something is well-organized, it is planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. When the author says that the Cherokee villages were well-organized, he means that the villages were made up of houses that were planned and built in a neat and orderly way.

Display word card 163 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word well-organized.

Materials

- “Possum’s Tail”
- Word card 163 (WA1)
- Word card 164 (WA2)
- Word card 165 (WA3)

Teacher Note

You might explain that well-organized is a hyphenated word and that a hyphenated word is a “word made up of two or more shorter words connected by a hyphen (a small dash).” The hyphenated word well-organized is made up of the words well and organized. Something that is well-organized is organized, or planned or arranged, well.

2 Discuss Well-organized Places and Events

Direct the students' attention to the well-organized classroom area you identified earlier and point out why the area is well-organized.

You might say:

"Our classroom library is well-organized, or arranged in a neat and orderly way. The books are neatly stored in book boxes on shelves. The book boxes are also arranged by genre, or type. The fiction books are in the red boxes and the non-fiction books are in the green boxes. There is a 'check-in' box for returning books. There are beanbags in each corner of the library to sit in while you are reading."

Discuss as a class:

Q What other area in our classroom is well-organized? Why do you say it is well-organized?

Click 1 on word card 163 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

well-organized

PROMPT 1: Our _____ is well-organized because . . .

1 2

WA1

PROMPT 1: "Our [writing center] is well-organized because . . ."

Explain that events such as parties and trips can also be well-organized, or carefully planned so that things go well. Give a couple of examples of well-organized events you have planned or attended.

You might say:

"This year's science fair was well-organized. Every student had space for a display, and there was enough time for everyone to present their projects. I enjoyed it very much. I made sure my sister's surprise birthday party this year was well-organized. First, I reserved a space for a picnic well ahead of time, and I sent out invitations a month before the birthday. Next, I asked each person who was attending to bring a different food or dessert so that there would be lots of different kinds of food. The party went well, and everyone had fun."

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you attended an event that was well-organized? Why do you say it was well-organized? [Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[My volleyball tournament] was well-organized because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word well-organized and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DISORGANIZED

3 Introduce and Define Disorganized and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is disorganized. Display word card 164 (WA2) and have the students say the word disorganized. Explain that well-organized and disorganized are antonyms, and review that antonyms are “words with opposite meanings.” Ask:

Q If well-organized means “planned or arranged in a neat or orderly way,” and well-organized and disorganized are antonyms, what do you think disorganized means?

Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I think disorganized means . . .”

If necessary, explain that if something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

4 Play “Well-organized or Disorganized?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Well-organized or Disorganized?” Explain that you will describe a place or event and partners will decide whether the place or event is well-organized or disorganized and why they think so.

Begin by saying:

- In Rhoda’s closet, the clothing is arranged by color. Shirts and pants hang neatly on hangers. Shoes sit in neat rows on shelves, and hats are stacked above the clothes.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of disorganized is desorganizado/a.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add well-organized and disorganized to it.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word cluttered earlier and that if a place is cluttered, it is messy. There are things scattered here, there, and everywhere.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words boast and brag to it.

Ask:

-  Q Is Rhoda's closet well-organized or disorganized? Why? [Click 2 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "Rhoda's closet is [well-organized] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Repeat the procedure with one or both of the following scenarios:

- Mr. Lopez had a yard sale. He put up a big sign on his front lawn that said "Yard Sale! Come one, come all!" There were tidy stacks and neat rows of items for sale. There were different sections for toys, kitchen utensils, and clothes.

-  Q Is the yard sale well-organized or disorganized? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: "The yard sale is [well-organized] because . . ."

- Mrs. Peterson's kitchen is messy. There are dirty plates everywhere and food all over the counters. The cabinets are open and cluttered.

-  Q Is the kitchen well-organized or disorganized? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: "The kitchen is [disorganized] because . . ."

Point to the word disorganized and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

5 Introduce and Define Boast and Review Synonyms

Explain that the last word the students will learn today is boast and that boast means "brag." Explain that that boast and brag are synonyms. When people boast, they talk about themselves or something they have with too much pride or pleasure.

Display word card 165 (🗉 WA3) and have the students say the word boast.

Remind the students that in Scene 1 of "Possum's Tail" the animals are discussing a meeting they plan to have, and Possum arrives. Tell the students that as you read from Scene 1 you want them to listen for what Possum boasts about. Then read Scene 1 on page 39 aloud, stopping at the end of the page.

Ask:

- Q What is Possum boasting or bragging about? What does he say that is an example of boasting?

Click 1 on word card 165 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: "Possum is boasting about [his tail]. He says . . ."

6 Play “Is Olive Boasting?”

Explain that the students will play “Is Olive Boasting?” You will describe something that the imaginary third-grader Olive is saying. Partners will then decide whether or not she is boasting and why they think so. Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- Olive got a new bike for her birthday. She brings it to school and won’t stop talking about it to her friends. She says, “My new bike is the greatest bike in the world!”

Ask:

Q Is Olive boasting? Why? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think Olive [is/is not] boasting because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following:

- Olive gets a new haircut on the first day of school. Her friend Billy says it looks nice and she says, “Thanks, Billy! My mother cut it. I think she did a nice job.”

Q Is Olive boasting? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

- After Olive’s basketball team wins their game, she yells, “We won! I’m so happy! We won!” Then Olive shakes hands with the players on the team that lost.

Q Is Olive boasting? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word boast and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Explore the Prefix dis-

Write the word disorganized where everyone can see it. Remind the students that if something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

Underline the prefix dis- and explain that dis- is a prefix. Remind the students that a prefix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the prefix dis- means “not” or “the opposite of.” Point out that when dis- is added to the word organized, it makes the word disorganized, which means “not organized.”

Have the students discuss the meaning of other words that use the prefix dis-, such as disagree, discomfort, disconnect, disinterested, and disobey.

Day 2

Review Well-organized, Disorganized, and Boast

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words well-organized, disorganized, and boast from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

well-organized

If something is well-organized, it is planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way.

disorganized

If something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

boast

Boast means “brag.” When people boast, they talk about themselves or something they have with too much pride or pleasure.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of these words do you think is the most interesting? Why?

[Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

well-organized

disorganized

boast

PROMPT 1: I think the word _____ is the most interesting because . . .

1 2 3 4

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [boast] is the most interesting because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Review that you will read a sentence that includes one of the vocabulary words. Partners will decide whether the word makes sense in the sentence and explain why they think so.

Point to the word well-organized on the daily review cards (WA4) and explain that the first sentence includes the word well-organized.

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- In a well-organized store, empty boxes are scattered here, there, and everywhere, and the shelves are cluttered.

Ask:

Q Does the word well-organized make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Pause; click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Well-organized [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

[boast]

- “My house is the biggest, fanciest, most expensive, and most beautiful house on the block,” Hanna boasted to her friends.

Q Does the word boasted make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Boasted [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

[disorganized]

- The disorganized desk had papers neatly stacked in one corner and pens and pencils in a box in another corner.

Q Does the word disorganized make sense in the sentence? Why do you think that? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Disorganized [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, call for their attention. Reread the sentence aloud, and explain that well-organized does not make sense in the sentence because a well-organized store would not have empty boxes lying about or cluttered shelves. Instead, the store would be neat and orderly. Then read the next story and discuss it as a class, rather than in pairs.

Day 3

Introduce Silky, Improvise, and Brainstorm

Materials

- “Possum’s Tail”
- Word card 166 (WA5)
- Word card 167 (WA6)
- Word card 168 (WA7)
- A silk item (collected ahead)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words silky, improvise, and brainstorm
- Review idioms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Ask clarifying questions

Words Taught

silky (p. 40)

Silky means “soft and smooth like silk.”

improvise (p. 40)

Improvise means “make up and perform something without any preparation.” Improvise can also mean “make or do something using whatever materials are available.”

brainstorm

A brainstorm is a “sudden idea.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SILKY

1 Introduce and Define Silky

Show page 40 of “Possum’s Tail” and review that in this part of the play Possum tells the other animals that he should speak at the meeting they are planning. Then read aloud Turtle, Otter, and Possum’s dialogue on page 40, emphasizing the word silky.

Explain that silky means “soft and smooth like silk.” Explain that Possum brags that his tail is silky, or soft and smooth like silk.

Display word card 166 (WA5) and have the students say the word silky.

2 Play “Is It Silky?”

Show and describe the silk item you collected ahead of time. Explain that the item is made out of silk, which is a type of fabric that is very soft. You might pass the item around so that the students can touch it. Explain that people also use the word silky to describe things that are not made of silk but that have a soft, smooth feel of silk, like Possum’s tail.

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is It Silky?” You will name an object and partners will decide whether or not they would describe the object as silky and why.

Begin by saying:

- tree bark

Ask:

Q Is tree bark silky? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Tree bark] [is/is not] silky because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or more of the following:

- cat fur

Q Is cat fur silky? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

- gravel

Q Is gravel silky? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

- a rose petal

Q Is a rose petal silky? Why? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What is something silky that you own?

Point to the word silky and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE IMPROVISE

3 Introduce and Define Improvise

Show page 40 again and review that in this part of the play Possum is boasting, or bragging, about his tail to the other animals. Tell the students that the author of the play provides a piece of stage direction—a suggestion to the actors about what they should do—as Possum is boasting. Then read the following stage direction, emphasizing the word improvise: “Possum can continue to improvise while Bear and Rabbit speak, saying ‘Isn’t it beautiful?’ etc.”

Tell the students that improvise means “make up and perform something without any preparation.” Explain that in the stage direction, the author is telling the actor playing Possum that he or she can improvise, or make up other things to say, as Possum continues to boast about his tail. For example, the actor playing Possum might improvise, or make up, other boasts about his tail, such as “Isn’t it beautiful? Isn’t it lovely? Isn’t my tail gorgeous, fabulous, and wonderful?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of improvise is improvisar.

Teacher Note

You might explain that a scene is “one particular part of a play or movie.”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to improvise the scene, signal for their attention and ask a volunteer pair to act out the scene (or act out the scene yourself with the help of a volunteer). Afterward, have the students discuss what they saw by asking “What did you see [Bryce and Catherine] do when they improvised?”

Display word card 167 (WA6) and have the students say the word improvise.

4 Improvise a Scene

Tell the students that actors sometimes improvise a scene, or make up what they say and do in the scene, rather than saying and doing something they have prepared or rehearsed.

Explain that the students are going to be actors and improvise a scene with their partner. Explain that you will describe the scene, and then when you say “Turn to your partner,” partners will act out the scene, making up their actions and words on the spot.

Read the following scenario:

- You and your partner are in a rowboat. There is a leak in the boat and it is quickly filling with water.

Give the students a few moments to think about the situation. Then say “Turn to your partner” and have partners act out the scene. After a minute or two, signal for the students’ attention and discuss:

Q What did you and your partner do and say when you improvised?

Click 1 on word card 167 (WA6) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “When we improvised, we . . .”

Discuss as a class:

Q Did you enjoy improvising? Why?

Click 2 to reveal the next prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I [did/did not] enjoy improvising because . . .”

5 Discuss Another Meaning of Improvise

Tell the students that improvise has a second meaning. It can also mean “make or do something using whatever materials are available.”

Tell the students that often when we are cooking or making crafts, we do not have the exact ingredients or materials the recipe or instructions call for, so we improvise, or use whatever is available. Give the students a few examples of when you have improvised or seen someone improvise.

You might say:

“Last weekend, I wanted to bake muffins but I was out of eggs. I improvised by using mashed bananas in place of the eggs. The last time we had a rain shower, I was caught outside without an umbrella. I improvised and used a newspaper to keep dry. Yesterday, Helen and Neil asked for a spinner to play a game. I did not have a spinner, so they improvised and used a die instead.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you had to improvise while you were making or doing something? What did you do to improvise? [Pause; click 3 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I had to improvise when . . .” and “I improvised by . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word improvise and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE BRAINSTORM

6 Introduce and Define Brainstorm and Review Idioms

Show page 41 and explain that in this part of “Possum’s Tail” Bear and Rabbit discuss ideas to make Possum stop boasting about his tail. Read the conversation between Bear and Rabbit on page 41.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is brainstorm. Explain that a brainstorm is a “sudden idea.” Explain that, as Rabbit and Bear are talking, Rabbit has a brainstorm, or sudden idea, about Possum.

Display word card 168 (WA7) and have the students say the word brainstorm.

Explain that brainstorm is an example of an idiom, and review that an idiom is an “expression or phrase that means something different from what it appears to mean.” Explain that when you say you had a brainstorm, you do not mean that there was actually a storm inside your brain. Instead, you mean that you had a sudden idea—an idea that came to you quite suddenly, like a powerful thunderstorm.

7 Discuss Having a Brainstorm

Explain that people often have brainstorms when they are confronting a tough problem or situation and they need a good idea to solve the problem. Give some examples of a time you or someone you know has had a brainstorm.

You might say:

“I have lots and lots of books crowding my shelves at home, and I’ve been wondering what to do with them. The other day I had a brainstorm—an idea suddenly came to me. I will donate some of my old books to our local library. That way others will be able to read them, and I’ll have space for new books on my shelves. Jake had a brainstorm during writing time the other day. He was having trouble thinking of something to write about—and then an idea suddenly came to him. He would write a story about going to a baseball game with his grandfather.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you had to substitute one item for another when you were working on an art project?” and “When have you wanted to use something, but could not find what you were looking for and used something else instead?”

Teacher Note

If you started an idiom chart, add brainstorm and its definition “sudden idea.” You might remind the students that they learned the idioms “have eyes in the back of your head,” “have a change of heart,” “blow your top,” and “throw yourself into something.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you or someone you know had a brainstorm? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[My friend Annie] had a brainstorm when . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that some people are full of ideas and have a lot of brainstorms. Ask:

Q Who do you know who has lots of brainstorms?

Point to the word brainstorm and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Another Meaning of Brainstorm

Review that words can have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Explain that the word brainstorm has two very different meanings. Review that brainstorm can mean a “sudden idea.” Then tell the students that brainstorm can also mean “think of many different ways of doing something.”

Remind the students that when they read or hear a word that has more than one meaning—like brainstorm—they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a sentence that uses the word brainstorm. The students will decide whether brainstorm means a “sudden idea” or “think of many different ways of doing something.”

Then read the following sentence aloud twice:

- After Claudine loses her house keys and can't get in her front door, she has a brainstorm to check if the back door is open.

Ask:

Q In the sentence, does brainstorm mean a “sudden idea” or “think of many different ways of doing something”? Why do you think that?

Show the prompt and read it aloud.

PROMPT: “I think brainstorm means [‘a sudden idea’] because . . .”

Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Using the same procedure, discuss the following sentence:

- The students brainstorm ideas for the topic of their science presentation.

Review Silky, Improvise, and Brainstorm

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words silky, improvise, and brainstorm from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their ideas

Words Reviewed

silky

Silky means “soft and smooth like silk.”

improvise

Improvise means “make up and perform something without any preparation.” Improvise can also mean “make or do something using whatever materials are available.”

brainstorm

A brainstorm is a “sudden idea.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Imagine that you are in the school play but forgot to bring your costume to school on the day of the play. What word would you use to describe how you solved the problem? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I would use the word [improvise]. I would say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Explain that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind the students that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes a vocabulary word. They will use what they know about the word and their imaginations to make up an ending for the story.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 28 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of improvise and think aloud about an ending. (For example, say “Gary improvised by painting a picture.”) Then reread the beginning of the story and repeat the question.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 27 and 28, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 28 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Display the “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA9). Point to story 1 and begin by reading the story aloud twice, slowly and clearly. Point to the word improvise and explain that you will tell the beginning of a story that includes the word improvise.

- Story 1: After arriving at school, Gary realized he forgot to bring his art project. Before art class, he improvised by . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? How might Gary improvise? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Tell Me a Story

After arriving at school, Gary realized he forgot to bring his art project. Before art class, he improvised by . . .

PROMPT 1: Gary improvised by . . .

WA9

PROMPT 1: “Gary improvised by . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Story 2: Cece wants to throw her brother a fun birthday party, but she’s not sure what to do. Then she has a brainstorm. Her brainstorm is to . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? What brainstorm might Cece have for her brother’s birthday party? [Point to prompt 2 on WA9.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Cece’s brainstorm is to . . .”

- Story 3: Louis is looking through his grandparents’ attic. In an old trunk, he finds a silky . . .

Ask:

Q How might you finish the story? What silky thing might Louis find in his grandparents’ attic? [Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Louis finds a silky . . .”

EXTENSION

Explore the Suffix -y

Remind the students that a suffix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the suffix -y means “having the quality of or being like.” Explain that when -y is added to the word silk, which means “a type of smooth fabric,” it makes the word silky, which means “having the quality of or being like silk, or soft or smooth like silk.”

Explain that the suffix -y can be added to other words, and have the students discuss the meaning of each of these words: clingy, tangy, curly, wavy, cheesy, and flaky.

Teacher Note

You might point out that when you add the suffix -y to wave, you drop the letter e to spell wavy.

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

diligent

Diligent means “hard-working.” When you are diligent, you work steadily or carefully on something because it is important to you.

frank

When you are frank, you say what you think, openly and honestly.

headstrong

Headstrong means “determined to do what you want no matter what anyone says.”

overwhelmed

If you are overwhelmed by a feeling, you feel it very strongly—so strongly that you forget everything else.

self-confident

Self-confident means “sure of yourself.” If you are self-confident, you are confident or sure you can do something.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- Ongoing review activity (WA11)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the weekly review activity (WA11) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🔊 WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Describe the Character”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Describe the Character.” Remind the students that you will read a story aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word on the chart best describes the main character of the story and explain why they think so.

Display the ongoing review activity (🔊 WA11) and begin the activity:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Explain that the main character of the story is Benjamin; then point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.
  - Story 1: Benjamin is sad because he is too sick to go to summer camp. All he can think about is how much fun his friends are having while he is sick in bed. Benjamin becomes sadder and sadder and sadder as he thinks about camp.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the vocabulary words and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Benjamin? Why? [Click ❶ again and read the prompt aloud.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Overwhelmed] best describes Benjamin because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.

diligent	frank	headstrong
overwhelmed		self-confident

STORY 1: Benjamin is sad because he is too sick to go to summer camp. All he can think about is how much fun his friends are having while he is sick in bed. Benjamin becomes sadder and sadder and sadder as he thinks about camp.

4. Click ① to clear the screen.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: Heather's neighbor will not let anyone else use the swing at the park. Heather walks up to him and says, "I think you are being unfair. I would appreciate it if you would let other people have turns on the swing." (frank)
- Story 3: Liam decides to paint a picture of a boat for his art project. He looks at several photographs of boats before starting and then works on his painting every day for a whole week. (diligent)
- Story 4: Nadia is excited about her first track meet. She tells her friends, "I have been running all summer, and I am faster than I was last year. I think I am ready for our first meet." (self-confident)
- Story 5: David wants to build a tree house in his backyard. His friends tell him he needs help to do such a big job, but David doesn't listen. He goes ahead and tries to build the tree house on his own. (headstrong)

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, write each story and the words where everyone can see them.

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
- Do they use the vocabulary words correctly to explain their thinking?
- Are they using the words spontaneously and accurately in conversations outside of vocabulary time?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 206 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice in using the word through a game modeled on "Is Olive Gruff?" (see Week 15, Day 1, Step 8). For example, if the students are struggling with the word frank, play "Is Olive Frank?" by describing situations in which Olive is or is not being frank.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 29 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28 by using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7" answer sheet (IA1) on page 210 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 207 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 211 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Introduce Ease, Clench, and Display

Materials

- Keepers
- Word card 169 (WA1)
- “Sentences from Keepers” chart (WA2)
- Word card 170 (WA3)
- Word card 171 (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words ease, clench, and display
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Taught

ease (p. 4)

Ease means “move slowly and carefully.”

clench (p. 11)

Clench means “hold or squeeze something tightly.”

display (p. 17)

Display means “show something or put something where people can easily see it.”

INTRODUCE AND USE EASE

1 Introduce and Define Ease

Briefly review Keepers.

Show pages 4–5 of Keepers and review that Kenyon’s grandmother falls asleep as she is telling him a story. Read the last two sentences on page 4 aloud, emphasizing the word eased.

Explain that ease means “move slowly and carefully.” Display word card 169 (WA1) and ask the students to say the word ease.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q Why do you think Kenyon eases, or moves slowly and carefully, to the kitchen?

Click 1 on word card 169 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

ease

PROMPT 1: I think Kenyon eases to the kitchen because . . .

1   2   3

PROMPT 1: “I think Kenyon eases to the kitchen because . . .”

If necessary, explain that Kenyon eases to the kitchen so that he will not disturb his grandmother. If he moves quickly and noisily, she might hear him and awaken.

2 Act Out Easing

Explain that, like Kenyon, people sometimes ease, or move slowly and carefully, because they want to be quiet or do not want to be noticed. Ask a volunteer to act out easing across the room because he does not want to be heard or noticed, and have the class watch carefully. Then ask:

 Q What did you notice [Raymond] doing when he eased across the room?
[Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When [Raymond] eased across the room, he . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that people also ease, or move slowly and carefully, because they are tired, sick, or sore and cannot move quickly. Ask a volunteer to act out easing into a chair because she is tired or sore, and have the class watch carefully. Then ask:

 Q What did you notice [Kay] doing when she eased into the chair? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “When [Kay] eased into the chair, she . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word ease and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the context sentences where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately figure out the meaning, tell them.

INTRODUCE AND USE CLENCH

3 Introduce Clench and Review Using Context to Determine Word Meanings

Display the “Sentences from Keepers” chart (WA2). Show pages 10–11 of Keepers again and remind the students that in this part of the story Kenyon is late getting to the park to play baseball. Read the charted sentences aloud where they appear on page 11, emphasizing the word clenched.

Tell the students that the other word they will learn today is clench. Point to the word clenched on the chart and underline it. Remind them that sometimes you can figure out the meaning of a word by reading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentence before or after, and looking for clues. Explain that as you read these sentences again, you want them to think about what the word clench might mean and what words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of clench.

Read the sentences aloud. Ask:

-  Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word clenched might mean? [Point to prompt 1 on WA2.] Turn to your partner.

WA2

Sentences from Keepers

“It’s about time,” Mo taunted. “Did you have to help Granny into the sun?”

Kenyon’s knuckles burned as he clenched his fists tightly. He didn’t like to hear Little Dolly spoken of poorly. So much for another wallop-bat day, he thought.

PROMPT 1: I think clenched might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word clenched.

PROMPT 1: “I think clenched might mean . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that clench means “hold or squeeze something tightly.” Discuss as a class:

-  Q What clues in the sentences help you figure out that clench means “hold or squeeze something tightly”? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘knuckles burned,’ ‘fists,’ and ‘tightly’] help me figure out the meaning of the word clenched.”

Act out how Kenyon might have clenched his fists, or point to the picture of Kenyon’s clenched fist on page 10. Then have the students clench their fists.

Display word card 170 ( WA3) and have the students say the word clench.

4 Act Out and Discuss Clenching

Explain that you will act out clenching the book Keepers and you want the students to watch carefully and notice what you do. Then act out clenching Keepers by holding it tightly with both hands. Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What did you see me do when I clenched the book?

Click 1 on word card 170 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “When you clenched the book, you . . .”

Ask the students to listen carefully as you describe some clenching that our imaginary friend Olive did. Then read the following story aloud:

- Olive’s mother asked her to go to the grocery store and buy eggs and bread. Her mother handed her a five-dollar bill. Olive clenched the bill in her hand as she walked to the store.

Ask:

Q Why do you think Olive clenched the five-dollar bill? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think Olive clenched the bill because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word clench and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

You might use a piece of paper to represent a five-dollar bill and act out the scenario or have a volunteer act it out.

INTRODUCE AND USE DISPLAY

5 Introduce and Define Display

Show pages 16–17 and review that Kenyon goes to the bakery when he is trying to figure out what to get his grandmother for her birthday. Read the first paragraph on page 17 aloud, emphasizing the word display.

Explain that display means “show something or put something where people can easily see it.” Point to the display case in the picture on pages 16–17 and explain that most bakeries have a glass case like this where they can display, or show, the delicious sweets they have for sale. Such a case is called a “display case.”

Display word card 171 (🗨️ WA4) and have the students say the word display.

6 Discuss Things That Are Displayed in the Classroom

Explain that teachers often display things in the classroom, or put things in places where students and visitors can easily see them, and point out a couple of things you have displayed (for example, the students’ artwork or writing, the students’ photographs, the letters of the alphabet, a sign or poster, a school map, or spelling or vocabulary words).

Explain that you would like the students to look around the classroom and notice other things that are displayed. Then partners will discuss what they noticed.

Give the students a few moments to look around the classroom. Then ask:

 Q What is something that is displayed in our classroom? Why do you think it is displayed? [Click ❶ on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Our museum stories] are displayed. I think they’re displayed because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then ask and discuss as a class:

Q If you want to display a story or drawing you are proud of at home, where might you display it? Why?

Click ❷ to reveal the next prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I might display it [in my bedroom] because . . .”

Point to the word display and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Another Meaning of Ease

Write the word ease where everyone can see it and explain that ease has more than one meaning. Review that ease means “move slowly and carefully.” Then explain that ease can also mean “relieve or lessen something or make something less painful, difficult, or upsetting.” For example, people sometimes take an aspirin or other medication to ease, or relieve, a headache. Children sometimes sleep with a night-light on to ease, or lessen, their fear of the dark.

Remind the students that if they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a story that includes the word ease. Partners will decide whether ease means “move slowly and carefully” or “relieve or lessen something” in the story and explain why they think so.

Read the following aloud:

- Jaden was nervous. He was about to perform in the class play, and he was afraid he wouldn't do well. "You've practiced your part every day for a month," said Jaden's teacher to ease his worries. "Just do your best. That's what is important."

Ask:

Q In the story, does ease mean “move slowly and carefully” or “relieve or lessen something”? Why do you think that? Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think ease means [‘relieve or lessen something’] because . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

In the same way, discuss:

- The old woman was feeling tired and weak. "I need a rest," she said to herself. She walked slowly across the living room and eased into her favorite chair.

---

Teacher Note

You might write the two meanings on the board.

Day 2

Review Ease, Clench, and Display

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words ease, clench, and display from Day 1
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

ease

Ease means “move slowly and carefully.”

clench

Clench means “hold or squeeze something tightly.”

display

Display means “show something or put something where people can easily see it.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA5). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of this week’s words do you think was the most interesting to talk about? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I think [clench] was the most interesting to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Explain that you will ask some questions that partners will discuss.

Point to the word ease and ask:

Q If you were in a hurry to get to your friend’s house, would you ease down the sidewalk? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] ease down the sidewalk because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

[clench]

Q If you were holding a paper cup filled with water, would you clench the cup? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] clench the paper cup because . . .”

[display]

Q If you made a clay sculpture you were not proud of, would you display it? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] display the clay sculpture because . . .”

Day 3

Introduce Caretaker, Aroma, and Slump

Materials

- Keepers
- Word card 172 (WA6)
- Word card 173 (WA7)
- Word card 174 (WA8)

Teacher Note

If the students know the school custodian or other caretakers, you might name the caretakers and ask the students what they have seen the caretakers do to take care of the school. Alternatively, you might invite a caretaker to talk with the students about what he or she does to take care of the school.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words caretaker, aroma, and slump
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Taught

caretaker (p. 19)

A caretaker is a “person whose job is to take care of a property (building or land) for the owner.”

aroma (p. 20)

An aroma is a “pleasant smell.”

slump (p. 24)

Slump means “fall or sit down suddenly and heavily.”

INTRODUCE AND USE CARETAKER

1 Introduce and Define Caretaker

Show pages 18–19 of Keepers and review that Kenyon talks to people in town to get ideas for Little Dolly’s birthday gift. Read the text on page 19 aloud, emphasizing the word caretaker.

Tell the students that a caretaker is a “person whose job is to take care of a property (building or land) for the owner.” Explain that the caretaker at the soldier’s cemetery takes care of the cemetery for the owner, doing things like watering and mowing the grass and decorating the cemetery with flags on holidays.

Display word card 172 (WA6) and have the students say the word caretaker.

2 Discuss Caretakers

Explain that the school has caretakers, or people who take care of the classrooms, hallways, library, cafeteria, playground, and other areas inside and around the school. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do our caretakers do to take care of the school? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

caretaker

PROMPT 1: The caretakers . . .

PROMPT 1: “The caretakers . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q What might we do to help the caretakers take care of our school?

Click 2 to reveal the next prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “We might help the caretakers by . . .”

Point to the word caretaker and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE AROMA

3 Introduce and Define Aroma

Show pages 20–21 and review that when Kenyon is in town, he sees a baseball glove in a store window. Read page 20 aloud, emphasizing the word aroma.

Explain that an aroma is a “pleasant smell.” Explain that Kenyon loves not only the feel of the baseball glove but also its aroma, or pleasant smell. Because of the aroma and the feel of the glove, Kenyon buys it.

Display word card 173 ( WA7) and have the students say the word aroma.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of aroma is aroma.

ELL Note

You might have the students smell something, such as a bar of soap or a bottle of perfume, and then discuss whether they like the aroma.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by naming a few more aromas you like (for example, cinnamon, apple cider, oranges, freshly mowed grass, pinecones, freshly washed clothes) or by asking questions such as “What food do you think smells good?” and “What is something you have smelled [in our classroom/outdoors] that you like?”

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you might slump into a chair and have the students discuss what they notice.

4 Discuss Aromas the Students Like

Give examples of aromas you like.

You might say:

“I like the aroma of a rose. Roses have a wonderful smell. Lots of foods have pleasant aromas. I like the aroma of bread baking in the oven. I like the aroma of popcorn, too. My grandmother wears a perfume that has a wonderful aroma.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is an aroma you like? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I like the aroma of [my dad’s enchiladas].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word aroma and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SLUMP

5 Introduce and Define Slump

Show pages 24–25 and review that Kenyon feels bad after he spends his money on a baseball glove. Read the first four paragraphs on page 24 aloud, emphasizing the word slumped and stopping after: “Kenyon slumped onto his bed. ‘I’m not sick. I’m just stupid.’”

Tell the students that slump means “fall or sit down suddenly and heavily.” Explain that Kenyon slumps, or falls suddenly and heavily, onto his bed because he is angry with himself for spending Little Dolly’s birthday money on a baseball glove.

Display word card 174 ( WA8) and have the students say the word slump.

6 Act Out and Discuss Slumping

Explain that people might slump if they are feeling angry and frustrated, like Kenyon, or if they are feeling very tired or weak. Ask a volunteer to act out slumping into a chair because she is very tired, and ask the class to watch carefully and notice what the volunteer does.

Then ask:

Q What did you notice [Kendra] do when she slumped into the chair?

[Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “When [Kendra] slumped, she . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Ask and discuss as a class:

Q If you were feeling really tired at home, where might you slump? Why?

Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the next prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “If I were feeling really tired, I might slump [onto the couch] because . . .”

Point to the word slump and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSIONS

Discuss the Compound Word Caretaker

Write the word caretaker where everyone can see it. Remind the students that a caretaker is a “person whose job is to take care of a property (building or land) for the owner.” Explain that caretaker is a compound word, and that a compound word is a “word made up of two or more shorter words.”

Tell the students that if you come upon a compound word in your reading and are not sure what it means, you can sometimes figure out the meaning by identifying the shorter words that make up the compound word and thinking about what each word means. Point to the words care and take in caretaker and explain that these are the shorter words that make up caretaker. Explain that if you put together the meanings of care and take, you can figure out that a caretaker is a person who takes care of something.

In the same way, discuss some of these compound words from the story: ballfield (page 6), homework (page 6), leftovers (page 11), storyteller (page 13), shopkeeper (page 19), and handmade (page 30).

Ask the students for other examples of compound words, discuss them, and add them to the chart. Have the students listen and watch for more examples of compound words during the next few days, and add any new examples to the chart.

Explore Related Words: Aroma and Aromatic

Write the word aroma where everyone can see it and review that an aroma is a “pleasant smell.” Tell the students that knowing the meaning of aroma can help them figure out the meaning of a word that is related to aroma. Write this sentence where everyone can see it:

- Mick washes his hands with an aromatic soap, and he always smells wonderful.

Ask:

Q What word in the sentence is related to aroma? Why do you say that?

If necessary, point out that aromatic is related to aroma and that you can see the word aroma in aromatic. Then ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word aroma and clues in the sentence, what do you think the word aromatic means?

If necessary, explain that aromatic means “pleasant to smell,” and point out that Mick smells nice because he washes with soap that is aromatic.

Day 4

Review Caretaker, Aroma, and Slump

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Daily review activity (WA10)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words caretaker, aroma, and slump from Day 3
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

caretaker

A caretaker is a “person whose job is to take care of a property (building or land) for the owner.”

aroma

An aroma is a “pleasant smell.”

slump

Slump means “fall or sit down suddenly and heavily.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗨️ WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Point to the word caretaker and ask:

 Q What is something a caretaker at a zoo might do? Why? [Click ❶ on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “A caretaker at a zoo might [clean the animals’ cages] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss the following questions using the same procedure:

[aroma]

 Q Would there be an aroma in a garbage can? Why? [Click ❷ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “There [would/would not] be an aroma in a garbage can because . . .”

[slump]

 Q Would you be likely or unlikely to slump after running in a race? Why? [Click ❸ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I would be [likely/unlikely] to slump after running a race because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that they are going to play “Finish the Story.” Explain that you are going to read some stories and that you will leave off the last word of each story. Review that partners will decide which word makes the best ending for the story.

Display the daily review activity (🗨️ WA10) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly. Point out that the ending is missing.
  - Story 1: Julia enjoys cooking tamales. She loves the way they taste and their wonderful _____.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the words likely and unlikely earlier, and that when something is likely, it probably will happen or is probably true, and when something is unlikely, it probably will not happen or is probably not true.

Teacher Note

Each story on the daily review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; and the third story is ❸. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story and the word choices.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click reveals the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then ask:

Q Which word makes the best ending for the story? Why do you think that? [Pause; click 1 again and read the prompt aloud.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think [aroma] makes the best ending because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion of this story by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place. Then reread the story with the word aroma at the end.

WA10

caretaker	aroma	slump
-----------	-------	-------

STORY 1: Julia enjoys cooking tamales. She loves the way they taste and their wonderful aroma.

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Repeat the procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: Khamil noticed a woman fixing a broken window in his apartment building. “Who’s that lady?” he asked his father. His father replied, “That’s our building’s _____.” (caretaker)
- Story 3: Mrs. Gates was walking in the park. She suddenly felt weak and dizzy, and needed to sit down. She found a park bench and _____ onto it. (slumped)

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Act in fair and caring ways

A brainstorm is a “sudden idea.”

disorganized

If something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

improvise

Improvise means “make up and perform something without any preparation.” Improvise can also mean “make or do something using whatever materials are available.”

well-organized

If something is well-organized, it is planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA11). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show a sentence with one or more words underlined. You will read each sentence aloud, and partners will decide which vocabulary word can replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA11)
- Ongoing review activity (WA12)

ELPS 4.F.viii

ELPS 4.F.ix

Step 2 (all, beginning on page 615 and continuing on to page 616)

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence in the ongoing review activity (WA12) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ①; the second sentence is ②; the third sentence is ③; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the correct answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Display the ongoing review activity (WA12) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ① to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: The garage was tidy, the boxes labeled, the bikes hung on the wall, and all the tools put away.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined word. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click ① again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [well-organized] could replace tidy because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ① a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

4. Click ① to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Sentence 2: Tyler couldn't decide what to do for his cousin's birthday, but then he had a thought to throw her a surprise party.

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click ② again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the word [brainstorm] could replace thought because . . .”

- Sentence 3: After Johanna won the spelling bee, she bragged that she was the best speller in the whole world.

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why?
[Click 3 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think the word [boasted] could replace bragged because . . .”

- Sentence 4: The surprised contest winner made up a very powerful acceptance speech.

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined phrase? Why?
[Click 4 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think the word [improvised] could replace made up because . . .”

- Sentence 5: The messy bathroom had towels and clothes on the floor, toilet paper rolls all over the place, and toothbrushes in the bathtub!

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why?
[Click 5 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I think the word [disorganized] could replace messy because . . .”

Week 30

YEAR-END REVIEW

ABOUT WEEK 30

In the week of the Making Meaning program that corresponds with this week's vocabulary lessons, the students read self-selected texts, rather than hearing a read-aloud. For that reason, no new words are introduced this week. We suggest that the students spend the week reviewing some of the words they have learned during the year. The review will provide the students with the additional practice they need to make the words they have learned this year a permanent part of their vocabulary. The week will also prepare the students for Word Check 8, an end-of-year vocabulary assessment that focuses on the words reviewed this week.

The students review a set of words each day this week through an activity that varies from day to day. The table on the next page lists the words reviewed and identifies the weeks in which the words were originally taught.

Vocabulary Focus

- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ This week the students write stories using one of three sets of review words. Prior to Day 1, prepare enough copies of “Three Words and a Story’ Word Sets” (BLM1) so that each pair of students will have a slip of paper with a set of three words. (Copy or print several copies of the word sets and cut the sets into slips.) Put the slips into a paper bag.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 214 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM2). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.

(continues)

① DO AHEAD (continued)

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1); see page 218 of the Assessment Resource Book. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 5, make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1); see page 221 of the Assessment Resource Book. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “Week 30 Word Cards” (BLM3). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Write a story using three of the words
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

celebration

A celebration is a “happy event held to honor a special occasion.”

clatter

When things clatter, they bang together or rattle noisily.

debris

Debris is the “scattered pieces of something that has been thrown away, broken, or destroyed.”

recall

Recall means “remember.”

ruckus

Ruckus means “noisy confusion or excitement.” Something unexpected or frightening can cause a ruckus.

snap

Snap means “speak sharply or angrily.”

squirm

Squirm means “wiggle, or twist your body from side to side, usually because you are bored or uncomfortable.”

swerve

Sswerve means “change directions quickly, usually to avoid something.”

whoop

Whoop means “shout from excitement.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Introduce the Activity

Tell the students that this week they will review and practice using words they learned in previous weeks. Remind them that thinking and talking about the words they have learned helps them remember the words.

Explain that today the students will do an activity called “Three Words and a Story.” Display the day 1 review cards (WA1), and explain that these are nine vocabulary words that the students learned earlier in

Materials

- Day 1 review cards (WA1)
- One set of three words for each pair (see “Do Ahead” on page 619)
- A paper bag
- A sheet of paper for each student
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

Circulate as partners share. If the students are having trouble generating ideas, signal for their attention and have a volunteer pair share their story ideas with the class and discuss how they came up with the ideas. If the students continue to struggle, suggest that they pick one of the words, think about a story they might write using that one word, and then think about how they might use the other words in the story. You might model the strategy, using one of the word sets.

Teacher Note

If the students need more time for writing, they might finish their stories during the writing period. They can then share the stories during the week at vocabulary time.

the year. Show the paper bag and tell the students that in it are slips of paper with three of nine review words written on each slip. Explain that each pair of students will draw a slip of paper from the bag. Partners will talk about what they know about the words, and then each student will write a story that includes the three words. Explain that later, partners will share their stories with each other and with the class.

Have each pair draw a slip from the paper bag. Then ask:

- Q What do you know about the three words on your slip?
- Q What story might you write using the words?

 Give the students a few moments to think about the questions. Then say “Turn to your partner,” and have partners discuss the questions. Tell the students that if they cannot remember the meaning of a word, they can ask you or another pair about the meaning.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Write and Share Stories

Distribute a sheet of paper to each student. Then give the students time to plan and write their stories.

 Have the students share their stories with their partners. Then have volunteers share their stories with the class. After each reading, discuss the story as a class by asking questions such as:

- Q Which vocabulary words did you hear [Louise] use in the story?
- Q What was [interesting/funny] about the way [Louise] used the word [clatter]?
- Q What questions do you want to ask [Louise] about her story?
- Q What did you like about [Louise’s] story?

Explain that students who did not share with the class today will have an opportunity to share later.

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
- Are they able to use the words to explain their thinking?
- Are they using the words they have learned this year in their writing and in conversations outside of vocabulary time?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 214 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, incorporate the word into one or more of the other activities used to review words this week.

Teacher Note

You might use this Class Vocabulary Assessment Note each day this week to evaluate your students' understanding of the words being reviewed.

Materials

- Day 2 review cards (WA2)

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Reviewed

cling

Cling means "hold onto someone or something very tightly."

magnificent

If something is magnificent, you admire it because of its great beauty or size.

quiver

Quiver means "tremble or shake."

reluctant

If you are reluctant to do something, you do not want to do it.

reunite

Reunite means "come together again after being separated."

savory

Savory means "pleasant to smell or taste."

ungrateful

Ungrateful means "not thankful or not grateful." If you are ungrateful, you do not thank someone who has done something for you or show your appreciation.

whoosh

Whoosh means "move very fast." When something whooshes, it makes a rushing or hissing sound.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 2 review cards (WA2) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “I’m Thinking of a Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Review that you will think aloud about one of the review words; then partners will discuss which word they think it is and explain why they think that. Begin by reading the following clue aloud, slowly and clearly:

- I’m thinking of a word that tells what you do when you get together with a friend you haven’t seen in a long time.

Ask:

Q What word am I thinking of? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

cling	magnificent	quiver reluctant	reunite	savory
ungrateful		whoosh

PROMPT 1: _____ is thinking of the word _____ because . . .

WA2

ELL Note

Choosing from among all the review words may be challenging for the students. If so, you might have them choose between two words or from among three or four words you provide. For example, you might say “I’m thinking of a word that tells what you do when you get together with a friend you haven’t seen in a long time. Am I thinking of the word magnificent or the word reunite? Why?”

PROMPT 1: “[Mrs. Durn] is thinking of the word [reunite] because . . .”

After partners have talked, click 2 on the day 2 review cards (WA2) to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “You are thinking of the word [reunite] because . . .”

Use the same procedure to continue playing the game, using the following clues:

- I’m thinking of a word that tells what you might do if you are caught in a rainstorm without a coat or umbrella. (quiver)
- I’m thinking of a word that describes a delicious plate of pasta with yummy sauce and cheese. (savory)

- I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe an amazing sunrise in the mountains. (magnificent)
- I'm thinking of a word that tells what you do when you are gripping the rope in a game of tug-of-war. (cling)
- I'm thinking of a word that describes how you might feel if you have to go to your brother's soccer game instead of your friend's birthday party. (reluctant)
- I'm thinking of a word that tells what a tennis ball does as it flies quickly over the net. (whoosh)
- I'm thinking of a word that you might use to describe a person who doesn't say "thank you." (ungrateful)

Day 3

Does That Make Sense?

Materials

- Day 3 review cards (WA3)

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

adventuresome

If you are feeling adventuresome, you are feeling bold and ready for an adventure.

blow your top

"Blow your top" means "get very angry."

cherish

Cherish means "care for something deeply." If you cherish something, you treat it with great care because it is very important to you.

flabbergasted

Flabbergasted means "very surprised, or shocked or astonished."

gruff

Gruff means "unpleasant or rude." If someone is gruff, he or she may seem unfriendly or mean.

persist

Persist means "keep doing something, even though it is difficult." If you persist, you refuse to give up.

prowl

Prowl means "move quietly or secretly, trying not to be seen or heard."

urgent

Urgent means "very important." If something is urgent, it needs to be taken care of immediately.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 3 review cards (WA3) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Explain that you will read a scenario that includes one of the review words. Partners will decide whether or not the word makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Point to the word adventuresome on the day 3 review cards (WA3), and explain that the first scenario includes the word adventuresome.

Then read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Carly is tired and decides to stay home instead of meeting her friends to explore a new hiking trail. Carly is feeling quite adventuresome!

Ask:

Q Does the word adventuresome make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

adventuresome	blow your top	cherish
flabbergasted	gruff	persist
prowl	urgent

PROMPT 1: The word _____ [does/does not] make sense because . . .

1

WA3

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, signal for their attention. Reread the scenario aloud, and explain that adventuresome does not make sense. If Carly is feeling adventuresome she would leave her house and do something fun or exciting—she would not stay home.

PROMPT 1: “The word [adventuresome] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following scenarios:

[urgent]

- Benjamin is bringing drinks to the class party. It is urgent that he arrive early so that he can put the drinks in the refrigerator to stay cold.

[blow your top]

- Liliya is very hungry after a long hike. She blows her top when her uncle makes her a scrumptious sandwich with her favorite fixings.

[prowl]

- Jorge sees his cat, Midnight, moving slowly and silently as she hunts in the backyard. She is prowling across the yard looking for food.

[cherish]

- Ophelia cherishes the new set of paints she got for her birthday. She puts them under her bed and forgets about them.

[flabbergasted]

- Karl is waiting for his mom to pick him up from school. He is flabbergasted when his cousin, Lenore, walks through the door because he hasn't seen Lenore in a long, long time.

[persist]

- Nadia wants to learn how to juggle. It is very difficult at first, but she persists by practicing nearly every day. Eventually she becomes an excellent juggler!

[gruff]

- Danny asks his cousin for help. His gruff cousin, Elise, says, "Of course, Danny. I'll help you in any way I can."

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Reviewed

abandon

Abandon means “leave and not return.”

convenient

If something is convenient, it is useful because it makes our lives easier or more comfortable.

original

Original means “completely new and different.” If something is original, it is not like anything else.

prefer

Prefer means “like better.” If you prefer something, you like it better than something else.

secure

Secure means “safe and protected.”

texture

Texture is “how a material feels—for example, rough or smooth.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 4 review cards (🗂️ WA4) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show several stories with one or more words underlined. You will read each story aloud, and partners will decide which of the vocabulary words could replace the underlined part of the story.

Display the day 4 review activity (🗂️ WA5) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined word.

Materials

- Day 4 review cards (WA4)
- Day 4 review activity (WA5)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM2) for each student

Teacher Note

Each story on the day 4 review activity (WA5) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

- Story 1: On their class field trip to the art museum, Mr. Eckman’s class sees unique art. It is unlike anything they have seen before.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story and the underlined word. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [original] could replace [unique] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

abandon	convenient	original
prefer	secure	texture

STORY 1: On their class field trip to the art museum, Mr. Eckman’s class sees original art. It is unlike anything they have seen before.

WA5

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the words flashy and plain earlier. Review that flashy means “very big, bright, or expensive.” Something that is flashy catches your attention. Also review that plain means “without anything added or without decoration.” If something is plain, it is simple, not fancy.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM2). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: A new library opened a block away from Maria’s house. She loves going there and finding new books to read. The library is very useful. (convenient)
- Story 3: Lucas feels safe when he goes fishing with his sister and father. He knows that if anything bad happens, they will know what to do. (secure)
- Story 4: Peyton took her dog, Lucky, to play fetch at the park. After Lucky jumped in the pond, his fur had a smooth and wet feel. (texture)
- Story 5: During the storm, the boat hit a rock. The crew had to leave their boat because it was flooding and sinking slowly. (abandon)
- Story 6: Carlton is shopping for some new sneakers. He would like a pair with flashing blue lights instead of a plain white pair. (prefer)

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

aroma

An aroma is a “pleasant smell.”

avoid

Avoid means “keep away from.”

disorganized

If something is disorganized, it is not planned or arranged (put together) in a neat or orderly way. It is messy or confusing.

opportunity

An opportunity is a “chance to do something.”

skill

Skill is the “ability to do something well.” A skill comes from training and practice.

task

A task is a “job, chore, or other particular thing you have to do.”

threatened

If something is threatened, it is in danger or likely to be harmed or destroyed.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 5 review cards (🌐 WA6) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Make a Choice”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Make a Choice.” Point to the word skill on the day 5 review cards (WA6) and explain that partners will play the first round of the game with the word skill. Then ask:

Q Which of these skills is important to have when baking a cake: good measuring skills or good drawing skills? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Day 5 review cards (WA6)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)

Use the same procedure to continue playing the game using the following questions:

[avoid]

 Q Which of these would you avoid at night: a dark path with no lights or a well-lit street? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I would avoid [a dark path with no lights] at night because . . .”

[opportunity]

 Q Which of these opportunities would you like to have: seeing your favorite musician perform or listening to your sister play the flute? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I would like to have the opportunity to [see my favorite musician perform] because . . .”

[aroma]

 Q Which aroma would you prefer: lasagna cooking in the oven or cinnamon bread toasting in the toaster? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I would prefer the aroma of [cinnamon toast] because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word prefer earlier and that prefer means “like better.” If you prefer something, you like it better than something else.

[disorganized]

Q Which one of these backpacks is disorganized: a backpack packed with pencils, notepads, and books neatly arranged or a backpack packed with trash, candy, and some change lying here and there? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “[A backpack packed with trash, candy, and some change lying here and there] is disorganized because . . .”

Q Which task would you like to have: scrubbing the kitchen floor or planting flowers in a garden? Why? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “I would like to have the task of [planting flowers in the garden] because . . .”

[threatened]

Q Which of these people is more likely to feel threatened: a person who steps in a puddle or a person whose house is flooding? Why? [Click 7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 7: “I think someone [whose house is flooding] is threatened because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned the word likely earlier and that when something is likely, it probably will happen or is probably true.

Assessment Notes

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

The final Individual Vocabulary Assessment of the year focuses on a representative group of words selected from Weeks 1–29 of the vocabulary lessons. (These words are reviewed through a series of activities in Week 30.) To assess individual students’ understanding of the words, use the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” on page 215 of the Assessment Resource Book. We recommend that you pair this assessment with the Student Self-assessment described below.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate his understanding of a group of words you select from Weeks 1–29 using the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Student Self-assessment” on page 219 of the Assessment Resource Book.

VOCABULARY LESSONS AND MAKING MEANING

This table shows each week of the vocabulary lessons, the read-aloud text used during that week, and the week in which that text was taught in the Making Meaning Teacher's Manual. We suggest that you teach a week from the Vocabulary Teaching Guide one week after you have taught the corresponding week in the Teacher's Manual. (For example, teach Vocabulary Week 1 a week after you have taught Unit 1, Week 1 in the Teacher's Manual.)

Introduction

English language arts/literacy and mathematics standards outline what students are expected to know and be able to do at the end of each grade. With these standards come end-of-year summative assessments aligned with the standards.

The goal of the Reading Assessment Preparation Guide is to prepare students for the reading comprehension portion of standards-based assessments. This guide introduces the students to the types of passages and test items they will encounter in these end-of-year assessments. The instruction in the guide supports the students in two important ways. First, it guides the students in using the self-monitoring procedures and reading comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they have learned during the year to make sense of passages. Second, it provides the students with a process they can use to read, understand, and respond to various types of test items. With guidance from you, the students work together on the passages and test items, building the confidence they need to perform well on the assessment.

The unit in this guide uses the same pedagogy and four-day lesson structure as other units in the Making Meaning® program. Support materials—including student handouts, interactive whiteboard activities, assessment record sheets, and supplemental assessment passages and questions—can be accessed on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). For more information about the CCC Learning Hub, see “Using the Technology Features” in the Introduction of the Teacher’s Manual.

How the Unit Is Organized

The Reading Assessment Preparation Guide includes four days of instruction. With guidance and support, the students read two passages during the instructional week and respond to test items that correspond to the passages. The reading levels of the passages are within the grade 3 text-complexity band. The items represent the variety of formats the students will encounter on a standards-based assessment, including both selected-response items (multiple-choice) and constructed-response items (written responses of varying length). The items align with a range of reading, writing, and language standards. Extension activities on Days 2 and 3 provide additional test items for further practice. If the students require more instruction or practice, supplemental passages and items can be found on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). All of the instructional and supplemental passages are provided in the “Passages, Question Sets, and Answer Keys” section of this guide, beginning on page 29. Included with each passage are the test items associated with the passage, an answer key, and the skills each item addresses. For information about using the passages and test items at various times during the year, see “Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year” on page viii.

During the lessons, the students work as a class, in pairs, and individually to read and comprehend passages and analyze and answer questions about the passages. Through this process, the students develop a class set of “tips” for answering questions that they can apply to assessment items of all types.

DAY 1: READ-ALoud/STRATEGY LESSON

The students are introduced to the end-of-year reading assessment. They reflect on their growth as readers during the year and review the self-monitoring procedures and comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they have learned and practiced to make sense of texts. You read aloud the first part of the passage “Furry Friends and Helpers,” self-monitoring and thinking aloud about the strategies you are using to make sense of and remember the text. In pairs and as a class, the students discuss what they noticed you doing during your reading of the passage.

DAY 2: STRATEGY LESSON

The students read “Furry Friends and Helpers” independently and discuss the strategies they use to make sense of the text. As a class, they then analyze and respond to three test items in varying formats, developing a systematic process for responding to assessment items that you capture in a chart titled “Tips for Answering Questions”:

- Read the directions carefully so that you know how to mark your answers.
- Read the question carefully—more than once if necessary.
- Ask yourself: What information is the question asking for? What are the important words?
- Skim the passage to find the important information.
- Reread the part that helps you answer the question.

DAY 3: GUIDED STRATEGY PRACTICE

Independently, the students read the second passage of the week, “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” They monitor their comprehension and discuss the reading comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they use to make sense of the text. They then work with partners to analyze and respond to four test items, using the tips for answering questions they developed on Day 2. As on Day 2, the test items represent a variety of formats and address a range of reading and language skills.

DAY 4: GUIDED STRATEGY PRACTICE

As a class and with modeling support from you, the students respond to a final test item that requires them to write a paragraph, using information from both passages. The students then reflect on what they have learned during the week.

Planning and Teaching the Lessons

We recommend that you teach this unit a week or two before your end-of-year assessment is administered. This will ensure that the contents of the unit are fresh in the students’ minds while still providing you with the additional time you may need to reteach a lesson or provide additional practice. (For a suggestion for how to include the unit in your instruction for the year, see “Sample Calendar for Grade 3” in the Introduction of the Teacher’s Manual.)

To prepare to teach the lessons, begin by reading the unit’s introductory pages. The Resources list specifies the texts, extension activities, and assessments for the unit, while the Online Resources list indicates all of the materials that are available digitally on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). The Overview table provides a general outline of the unit.

Next, read the comprehension and social development focuses in the Week Overview. The “Do Ahead” section alerts you to special requirements for the week and any preparations you should make ahead of time. Preview the lessons and note how the instruction supports the unit’s comprehension and social development focuses from lesson to lesson.

Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year

In addition to the two sets of passages and the associated test items used for instruction during the week, you will find three sets of supplemental practice passages and test items on the CCC Learning Hub. All of the available sets are listed in the table below, along with their passage types and BLM (blackline master) numbers. The shaded rows are supplemental sets.

Grade 3 Passages and Test Items Sets

Passage and Associated Test Items	Passage Type	BLM #
"Furry Friends and Helpers"	Informational	1
"Questions: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'"		2
"Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?"	Informational	3
"Questions: 'Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?'"		4
"Where Is Canada?"	Informational	5
"Questions: 'Where Is Canada?'"		6
"The Eagle and the Snake"	Literary	7
"Questions: 'The Eagle and the Snake'"		8
"A Visit to My Mom's Work"	Literary	9
"Questions: 'A Visit to My Mom's Work'"		10

Both the instructional and supplemental passages and test items can be used throughout the year in a variety of ways.

FALL

You might use the passages "Furry Friends and Helpers" and/or "Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?" and associated test items at the start of the school year as an informal baseline assessment of the students' reading comprehension and their comfort and facility with test-like passages and items. You can then use what you observe to help you plan instruction. You might use the supplemental passages periodically during the year for further evaluation or practice.

WINTER

If your school or district decides to administer an interim standards-based assessment, you might teach the unit in this guide as preparation for that assessment. (The modeling you do on Day 1 will need to reflect the strategies that have been taught.) You can then use the supplemental passages and test items to teach the lessons in this guide prior to the end-of-year assessment.

SPRING

After teaching the unit in this guide as preparation for the end-of-year assessment, you might assign one or more of the supplemental passages and their associated test items as seatwork or homework for the students, either as further practice or to use as an informal individual assessment of each student's progress on standards-type assessment items.

Answering Questions in Response to Text

During this one-week unit, the students prepare for the reading comprehension portion of a standards-based end-of-year summative assessment. The students reflect on their growth as readers during the year and apply what they have learned about monitoring their comprehension and using comprehension and “fix-up” strategies to make sense of two practice passages. They work together as a class and in pairs to analyze and respond to various types of questions associated with the passages, including selected-response items (multiple-choice) and constructed-response items (written responses of varying length). Out of that process, they develop a set of “tips” for successfully answering assessment questions. Socially, the students focus on taking responsibility for their learning, sharing their thinking, and using prompts to build on one another’s thinking.

Furry Friends and Helpers

Paragraph 1 Dogs make us happy and give us love. But what do dogs do for us? They make good pets. They provide their owners with friendship and love, and they are eager to make their owners happy. Some dogs, however, are more than pets. They have jobs.

Paragraph 2 In Alaska, dogs called sled dogs are used to pull sleds across the snow. These dogs are smart and strong. They work as a team to travel long distances. These dogs far precees them from the sled.

A team of sled dogs pulling a sled.

Paragraph 3 Sheep ranchers use dogs to protect and herd their flocks. These herding dogs are smart and strong, looking at them to move the sheep in a certain direction. These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles. When they hear one whistle, they move the sheep to the left. When they hear another whistle, they move the sheep to the right. But these herding dogs do not need much help to do their jobs. They were born for this work. Dog often have this kind of dog as a pet. Some people say their dogs try to “herd” them to bed at night.

“Furry Friends and Helpers” (BLM1)

This informational passage discusses the various ways that dogs help people.

Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?

Paragraph 1 Are you thinking about getting a pet but can't decide between a cat and a dog? Thinkable you'll be soon. Cats make better pets than dogs, there's why.

Paragraph 2 Most cats are cleaner than dogs. Dogs get dirty—really, really dirty! Their owners have to give them baths. For the most part, cats don't need baths. They keep clean by licking their fur. Cats can resist and run like machines while cleaning themselves.

Paragraph 3 Cats are quieter than dogs. Dogs are noisy creatures. They growl and meow and bark and howl. But cats just purr and meow. They don't bother the neighbors.

Paragraph 4 Cats perform an important job around the house. They catch mice. You won't need a exterminator with a cat in the house. Of course, dogs do important jobs, too. Like cleaning away burglars. But dogs aren't regarded as cat catching mice.

Paragraph 5 Cats are easier to feed than dogs. If you leave food for a cat, it will usually stop eating when it's full. Dogs will devour all the food in sight. A dog will gobble up every bite of food. It will eat even if it isn't hungry.

Paragraph 6 One of the best things about cats is their playfulness. Of course, dogs play, too, but they usually want a human to play with them. Cats can entertain themselves for hours. Cats jump and twist and roll around. If you really want to have some fun, get a stick with a long feather tied to one end. Move the stick up, down, and all around. Your cat will have a great time trying to catch the feather, and you'll have great fun watching the show.

A cat can entertain itself for hours.

“Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” (BLM3)

This opinion piece argues that cats are better pets than dogs.

Comprehension Focus

- Students reflect on their growth as readers.
- Students review the comprehension strategies they have learned.
- Students review self-monitoring and “fix-up” strategies.
- Students use strategies to make sense of assessment practice passages.
- Students learn a procedure for answering various types of assessment questions.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students use prompts to build on one another's thinking.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during the unit.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make sure the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” and “Thinking About My Reading” charts are posted where everyone can see them. Keep the charts visible throughout the week.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the student handouts for the unit (see “Reproducibles” on page 2). Make a class set of copies of each required handout listed (BLM1–BLM4) and any supplemental handouts you plan to use.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, prepare to model using strategies to make sense of the passage “Furry Friends and Helpers” (see Step 4). For more information and examples of modeling, review IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, prepare a class set of folders for the students to use to organize their materials during the week.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, prepare a sheet of chart paper with the title “Tips for Answering Questions” (see Step 6).
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 76.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 77.

Day 1

Read-aloud/Strategy Lesson

Materials

- “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart (WA1)
- Copy of “Furry Friends and Helpers” (BLM1) for each student
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- A folder for each student

Teacher Note

We recommend that you teach this unit a week or two before your end-of-year reading assessment.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Reflect on how they have grown as readers
- Review the strategies they have learned to make sense of text
- Hear and discuss a passage
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Work in a responsible way

ABOUT PREPARING FOR A STANDARDS-BASED END-OF-YEAR ASSESSMENT

This week, with guidance and support from you, the students prepare for the reading comprehension portion of a standards-based end-of-year assessment. As a class and in pairs, the students hear, read, and discuss passages and answer reading comprehension questions about the passages. After preparing your students for the assessment in a classroom environment, we recommend that you provide them with further practice in a computerized testing environment.

1 Pair Students and Introduce the End-of-year Assessment

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other’s names. Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Tell the students that at the end of the school year, all the students in their grade will complete a reading and writing assessment. Explain that the assessment is an opportunity for the students to show how they are growing as readers and writers and that the assessment provides information that is important for them, as well as for their families, teachers, and principal. Explain that during part of the assessment, the students will read passages and answer questions about the passages. Tell the students that during the next few days, they will work together to prepare for the reading portion of the assessment by hearing, reading, and discussing some practice passages and questions.

2 Review What Good Readers Do to Make Sense of Text

Point out that during the year, the students have learned what good readers do to make sense of text, and they have worked hard to become stronger readers themselves. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q In what ways have you grown as a reader this year? In what ways are you a stronger reader now than you were at the beginning of the year? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and review that good readers use various strategies to make sense of what they are reading. Ask:

Q What have you learned about the strategies good readers use?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” chart and review that another thing that good readers do is stop and ask themselves questions as they read to make sure they understand what they are reading. Remind the students that they learned “fix-up” strategies they can use when they do not understand what they have read. Ask:

Q What do good readers do when they realize they do not understand something they have read?

If necessary, review that good readers reread something they have not understood slowly and carefully. If that does not fix the problem, they read ahead and look for information that clears up their confusion. Explain that this week the students will use these strategies to help them make sense of the practice passages they read.

3 Introduce “Furry Friends and Helpers”

Tell the students that today they will hear a nonfiction passage about dogs called “Furry Friends and Helpers.” Display the “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart (WA1), and distribute a copy of the passage (BLM1) to each student. Point out that, unlike most passages, this passage shows the number of each paragraph. Explain that the numbers are provided to make it easier for you to point out and discuss particular paragraphs.

Teacher Note

The grade 3 reading comprehension strategies are:

- visualizing
- making inferences about characters
- wondering/questioning
- using text features
- determining important ideas

Teacher Note

The “Thinking About My Reading” prompts are:

- What is happening in my book?
- Do I understand what I am reading?
- Do I know what most of the words mean?
- Is this book interesting and fun to read?

Teacher Note

The “fix-up” strategies are:

- Go back and reread slowly and carefully. Look for clues in the text.
- Read ahead to look for more clues or information.
- Use a reading comprehension strategy.
- Ask for help.

Point to the title of the passage and ask:

Q Based on the title, what do you think this passage will tell us about dogs?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

4 Read Aloud and Model Self-monitoring and Using Strategies

Explain that as you read the passage aloud, you would like the students to follow along on their copies. Tell them that you will stop after each paragraph and think aloud about what you just read. Ask the students to listen carefully and notice what you are doing to check your understanding and fix comprehension problems as you read.

Read the passage aloud slowly and clearly, stopping as described below to model monitoring your comprehension and using strategies to make sense of the passage.

Stop after:

Paragraph 1: "They have jobs."

You might say:

"I'll ask myself: 'Did I understand what I just read?' The opening paragraph of a passage is important because it often tells what the passage is about. I think this passage is going to be about the jobs that some dogs do, but I'll reread the paragraph just to make sure. [Reread the paragraph aloud.] I was right. The last two sentences say, 'Some dogs, however, are more than pets. They have jobs.'"

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 2: "Their thick fur protects them from the cold."

You might say:

"Again, I'll ask myself: 'Did I understand what I just read?' Yes, I did. This paragraph tells about huskies and how they are strong enough to pull sleds. [Point to the photograph.] I know that using text features like photographs is a strategy good readers use to make sense of nonfiction texts. It's smart to look carefully at photographs, maps, or other features because they help you understand what you're reading. This photograph is helpful because it shows what huskies do—they pull sleds."

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 3: "Some people say their dogs try to 'herd' them to bed at night."

You might say:

"Did I understand this paragraph? There's a lot of information here, but I understand most of it. [Point to the photograph.] Again, the photograph is helpful. It lets me see in a picture what the paragraph is telling me in words. The part about the whistles confused me, though. I'll read that part again. [Reread these sentences aloud slowly and carefully: 'These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles. When they hear one whistle, they move the sheep to the left. When they hear another whistle, they move the sheep to the right.'] Now I understand. The dogs move the sheep either left or right, depending on the whistle they hear."

After thinking aloud about paragraph 3, ask:

Q What have you noticed me doing so far to make sense of the passage?

Turn to your partner.

Give partners a minute or two to discuss what they noticed. Then, without sharing, reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading the passage. Stop after:

Paragraph 4: "Only the smartest and most loyal dogs can be trained as service dogs."

You might say:

"I understood this paragraph. To think more deeply about what they are reading, good readers wonder and ask questions as they read—and I'm wondering how people train dogs to open doors. Hmm. Maybe I'll learn more about this when I read on."

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 5: "They must also enjoy being around people."

You might say:

"I understood what I read in this paragraph. I used another strategy to help me make sense of the information and remember it—visualizing. I pictured in my mind a sick person in a hospital petting a gentle dog. That will help me remember that some dogs, known as 'therapy dogs,' are trained to help people in this way."

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 6: "These highly trained dogs have saved many lives."

You might say:

"I understand that this paragraph is about how some dogs help people in emergencies. I made an inference as I read the paragraph. I used clues to help me infer that dogs that rescue people must be strong and fearless. It takes strength and courage to help people in dangerous situations like earthquakes."

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading to the end of the passage.

You might say:

"I'm not sure what a special bond means. I'll reread the paragraph to see if I can figure it out. [Reread the paragraph aloud.] I figured it out. Dogs help people and are loving pets. That's the special bond, or connection, that people and dogs have."

5 Discuss What the Students Noticed

Discuss questions like those that follow. Remind the students to use the discussion prompts they have learned to build on one another's thinking.

- Q What did you notice me doing to make sense of the passage as I read it?
- Q What comprehension strategies did I use? How did they help me understand or remember what I read?
- Q What did I do when I did not understand something I read?

Students might say:

"I noticed that you stopped at the end of a paragraph to check if you understood what you read. That's something good readers do."

"I agree with [Zoe]. I also noticed that you used the comprehension strategies we've learned. You looked at the photographs, and you visualized and asked a question."

"In addition to what [Julian] said, you went back and read a confusing part again really slowly—that part about the herding dogs and whistles. That helped you make sense of it."

"You also reread when you didn't know what a special bond was. That helped you figure it out."

If necessary, explain that you read each paragraph slowly and carefully. After reading each paragraph, you asked yourself if you understood what you read, and then you reread to clear up any confusion. You also used reading comprehension strategies such as using text features, visualizing, making inferences, and wondering and asking questions to help you understand and remember what you read.

Tell the students that tomorrow they will have an opportunity to read the passage again and work with their partners to answer questions about it. Distribute a folder to each student and explain that this is where the students will keep passages and other materials for the week. Have the students put their copies of "Furry Friends and Helpers" inside their folders and keep the folders in their desks.

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because..."
- "I disagree with _____ because..."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think..."

Teacher Note

Save the "Furry Friends and Helpers" chart (WA1) to use during the week.

6 Reflect on Working Responsibly

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to work responsibly today?

Strategy Lesson

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread and discuss a passage
- Discuss various question formats
- Answer questions about the passage as a class
- Refer to the passage to support their thinking
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

1 Review and Reread “Furry Friends and Helpers”

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that during the end-of-year assessment, they will read passages and answer questions about the passages. Review that yesterday the students began to prepare for the assessment by reviewing the strategies good readers use to make sense of text. They also listened as you read and thought about the passage, and they discussed the strategies you used to make sense of the passage. Explain that today the students will reread the passage and work together to answer questions about it.

Display the “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart (WA1), and remind the students that this is the passage they heard yesterday. Ask:

 Q What do you remember about the passage? Turn to your partner.

Without discussing as a class, tell the students that you would like them to quietly reread their copies of the passage (BLM1) to help them prepare to answer questions about it. Direct their attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” and “Reading Comprehension Strategies” charts, and remind them to monitor their comprehension and use the comprehension strategies to help them make sense of what they read. Also remind them to use the “fix-up” strategies of rereading and reading ahead if they do not understand something in the passage. Ask the students to look up when they are done reading.

Materials

- “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart (WA1) from Day 1
- “Questions 1–3: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” chart (WA2)
- Copy of “Questions: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” (BLM2) for each student
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Tips for Answering Questions” chart, prepared ahead, and a marker

TEKS 6.A.i

Student/Teacher Activity

Step 1

(all, beginning on page 11 and continuing on to page 12)

When most students have finished, ask:

Q What part of the passage, if any, did you have trouble understanding?

Q What did you do to help you make sense of that part?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

2 Discuss Question 1

Distribute a copy of “Questions: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” (BLM2) to each student. Tell the students that these are the questions about the passage that they will answer. Display the “Questions 1–3: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” chart (WA2).

Questions 1-3: “Furry Friends and Helpers”

WA2

Question 1

Read the question. Circle the letter of the correct answer.

According to the passage, what kind of work do huskies do?

- A. herd sheep
- B. pull sleds
- C. find lost people
- D. help blind people

Teacher Note

To avoid overwhelming the students with testing jargon, we refer to each assessment “item type” (multiple-choice, fill-in-the-blank, short-answer, essay, and other formats) as a “question” even though in some cases the item type is not literally a question.

You might explain that this type of question is called a “multiple-choice question” because it requires you to choose a single answer from among multiple, or several, possible answers.

Explain that question 1 is an example of one type of question the students may see on the assessment. Point to the directions that precede the question (“Read the question. Circle the letter of the correct answer.”) and explain that an assessment question usually includes directions that tell you how to mark or record your answer. Tell the students that it is important to read directions like this carefully so that they mark their answers properly. Have the students read the directions quietly to themselves. Then ask:

Q According to the directions, how will you mark your answer to question 1?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out that the students will circle the letter next to the correct answer.

Point to the question on the chart (“According to the passage, what kind of work do huskies do?”), and explain that it is important to read the question slowly and carefully and think about what it is asking. Explain that if the students are not sure that they understand a question, they should read it again. Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the question aloud twice. Then read and reread the question. Ask:

Q What information is the question asking for?

Q What are the important words in the question? Which words are important for finding the answer?

Students might say:

"The question is asking for information about huskies."

"In addition to what [Jayne] said, the question is asking for information about what huskies do."

"I think huskies is an important word. That's the kind of dog the question is about."

"I agree with [Jack]. In addition, I think what kind of work are important words because the question wants to know what work huskies do."

As the students share their ideas, circle the important words they identify on the chart. If necessary, explain that huskies and what kind of work are important words for finding the answer to the question.

3 Skim the Passage and Answer Question 1

Tell the students that now that they have thought carefully about the question, you want them to work together to find the answer. Reread the question and read the answer choices aloud slowly and clearly. Ask:

Q What might you do to find the answer to this question?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that one strategy the students might use is to skim the passage to find the part about huskies and then reread that part. Remind the students that when they skim a passage, they do not read every word. Instead, they look quickly through the passage for important words or ideas.

Display the "Furry Friends and Helpers" chart and have the students look at their copies of the passage. Ask:

Q What paragraph in the passage tells about huskies?

Give the students a few moments to skim the passage. Then have one or two volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out that paragraph 2 tells about huskies. Then ask:

Q What part of the paragraph helps to answer the question?

If necessary, explain that the sentence "In Alaska, dogs called huskies are used to pull sleds across the snow" helps to answer the question. Then click back to the "Questions 1–3: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'" chart, review that the students are to circle the letter of the correct answer, and circle letter B on the chart. Have the students circle letter B on their copies of question 1.

4 Discuss Question 2 and Make an Inference to Answer It

Have the students turn to question 2 on their copies of "Questions: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'" and display question 2 on the "Questions 1–3: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'" chart. Explain that this is the next question the students will answer.

Teacher Note

You might tell the students that even if they think they know the answer to a question, it is a good idea to skim a passage and reread the part the question is asking about to make sure their answer is correct.

Teacher Note

If the students have little experience with skimming or seem unsure about what to do, call for the class's attention and model skimming the passage (rereading first sentences and looking for key words and ideas) to find the paragraph about huskies.

Question 2

What evidence does the author give in paragraph 3 to show that herding dogs are smart? Write your answer on the lines below.

---

---

---

---

---

---

Explain that question 2 is an example of another type of question the students may see on an end-of-year assessment. Remind the students that it is important to read a question and any directions that come with it slowly and carefully. Ask the students to listen as you read question 2 and the directions for recording the answer. Then read the question and directions aloud twice, slowly and carefully. Point to the question (“What evidence . . . are smart?”) and ask:

- Q What information is the question asking for?
- Q What are the important words in the question? Which words are important for finding the answer?

Students might say:

“The question is asking for information about herding dogs.”

“I agree with [Hector]. We have to find evidence that herding dogs are smart.”

“I think the important words are evidence, herding dogs, and smart.”

“In addition to what [Carol] said, I think paragraph 3 is important because it tells you where to look to find the answer.”

As volunteers share their thinking about important words in the question, circle the words in the question on the chart.

Point to the directions (“Write your answer on the lines below.”) and ask:

- Q According to the directions, how will you record your answer to question 2?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking.

Remind the students that they found the answer to question 1 in a sentence right in the passage, but explain that to answer question 2, they will need to make an inference, or use clues in the passage to figure out the answer. Click the “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart to display the passage and scroll to paragraph 3. Tell the students that, as you read the paragraph aloud, you want them to follow along on their copies of the passage and underline evidence, or clues, that herding dogs are smart. Then read paragraph 3 aloud slowly and clearly. Give the students a few moments to underline evidence. Then ask:

- Q What evidence in the paragraph shows that herding dogs are smart?
- Q How does ["These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles"] show that herding dogs are smart?
- Q Do you agree with [Myra] that ["These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles"] is evidence that herding dogs are smart?

Students might say:

"The paragraph says that These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles. The dogs must be smart if they can be trained to do that."

"I agree with [Karl]. I think When they hear one whistle, they move the sheep to the left and When they hear another whistle, they move the sheep to the right are also evidence that they are smart dogs."

"In addition to what [Myra and Karl] said, the paragraph says, But these herding dogs do not need much help to do their jobs. That's another clue that the dogs are smart. They know what to do without much help."

Click back to the "Questions 1–3: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'" chart. As volunteers share their thinking, record their responses on the chart, and have the students record their responses on their copies of question 2.

5 Discuss Question 3, Underline, and Write a Response

Display question 3 on the "Questions 1–3: 'Furry Friends and Helpers'" chart, and explain that this is another type of question the students might see.

Question 3

Read the directions in part A and part B and complete each part of the question.

Part A

Look at the list of jobs that dogs can do. Then underline the paragraphs in the passage where you find information about these jobs.

- pull sleds over snow
- visit patients in hospitals
- find people who are lost

Part B

On the lines below, write two more jobs that dogs can do.

---

---

---

WA2

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering these questions, offer some examples like those in the "Students might say" note.

Point to the directions (“Read the directions in part A and part B and complete each part of the question.”) and explain that this question has two parts: part A and part B. Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the directions for part A. Then read the directions and bulleted list aloud. Ask:

Q What are these directions asking you to do?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that the students are to underline the paragraphs in the passage that tell about dogs that pull sleds over snow, visit patients in hospitals, and find people who are lost. Ask:

Q What paragraph in the passage tells about dogs that pull sleds over snow? Skim the passage to find the paragraph.

Give the students a few moments to skim their copies of the passage and find the paragraph (paragraph 2). Then have a volunteer share what he found with the class. Display the “Furry Friends and Helpers” chart and underline paragraph 2. Have the students underline paragraph 2 on their copies of the passage.

In the same way, have the students find and underline the paragraphs that tell about dogs that visit hospitals (paragraph 5) and dogs that find people who are lost (paragraph 6) on their copies of the passage. Underline those paragraphs on the passage chart.

Click back to the “Questions 1–3: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” chart. Direct the students’ attention to part B and ask them to listen carefully as you read the directions. Then read the directions aloud. Ask:

Q What are these directions asking you to do?

If necessary, explain that the directions are asking the students to write two more examples of jobs that dogs can do. Then ask:

Q What other jobs did we read about in the passage? Skim the passage to find other jobs.

Have the students skim their copies of the passage and find examples of other jobs that dogs can do. (You might have them underline the jobs on their copies of the passage.) Then have volunteers share what they found with the class. Use the volunteers’ ideas to write answers on the lines in part B of the question on the chart, and have the students write answers on their copies of the question.

6 Introduce the “Tips for Answering Questions” Chart

Remind the students that today they looked at three examples of assessment questions. Ask and discuss:

Q What did we learn about answering assessment questions?

Teacher Note

Other jobs that dogs can do are herd sheep, help blind people, open doors and fetch objects for people who cannot walk or move their arms, find people who are trapped or buried, and help the police and military save lives.

Students might say:

"We learned that there are different types of questions."

"I agree with [Katie]. We also found out that we need to read the directions carefully so that we'll know how to answer each question. Sometimes you circle a letter. Sometimes you write an answer or underline sentences in the passage."

"In addition to what [Dennis and Katie] said, I learned that you have to read a question a couple of times and make sure you understand it. There are important words in the question that you need to pay attention to."

"Also, skimming and rereading the important part of the passage is really important—even if you think you know the answer."

As volunteers share their thinking, record their ideas on the "Tips for Answering Questions" chart. Be ready to paraphrase their responses so that your chart is similar to the example in the diagram below.

Tips for Answering Questions

Read the directions carefully so that you know how to mark your answers.

Read the question carefully—more than once if necessary.

Ask yourself: What information is the question asking for? What are the important words?

Skim the passage to find the important information.

Reread the part that helps you answer the question.

Tell the students that the questions they discussed today are just a few examples of the kinds of questions they might be asked on the end-of-year assessment. Explain that tomorrow they will have a chance to hear and read another passage and work with their partners to answer questions about it. Have the students put their materials inside their folders. Tell the students that you will post the "Tips for Answering Questions" chart where everyone can see it and that they can use the tips throughout the week to help them answer questions.

Teacher Note

If you would like to discuss additional "Furry Friends and Helpers" practice questions with the students, see the extension "Discuss Practice Questions 4 and 5" on the next page.

Teacher Note

The answer to question 4 is “The dogs help the patients feel better.” The answers to question 5 are “gentle,” “enjoy being around people,” and “good sense of smell.”

Day 3

Guided Strategy Practice

Materials

- “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” chart (WA4)
- Copy of “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” (BLM3) for each student
- “Questions 1–4: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” chart (WA5)
- Copy of “Questions: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” (BLM4) for each student
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

TEKS 6.A.i

Student/Teacher Narrative Step 2 (first and second paragraphs, beginning on page 18 and continuing on to page 19)

EXTENSION

Discuss Practice Questions 4 and 5

Follow the procedures you used on Day 2 (see Steps 2–5) to have the students discuss and answer questions 4 and 5 on their copies of “Questions: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” (BLM2). Remind the students to use the information on the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart to help them find the correct answers. Then use the “Questions 4–5: ‘Furry Friends and Helpers’” (WA3) chart to discuss the students’ responses as a class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Read and discuss a passage
- Self-monitor and use comprehension and “fix-up” strategies to make sense of the passage
- Answer questions about the passage in pairs
- Refer to the passage to support their thinking
- Work in a responsible way

1 Review and Discuss Working with Partners

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that they are preparing for an end-of-year assessment, and review that yesterday they read a passage about dogs called “Furry Friends and Helpers” and worked as a class to answer questions about the passage. Explain that today the students will read another passage about animals and work with their partners to answer questions about it.

Briefly discuss:

Q What do you want to keep in mind as you work with your partner today?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

2 Introduce the Passage and Have the Students Read Independently

Display the “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” chart (WA4), and distribute a copy of the passage (BLM3) to each student. Explain that in the passage, the author expresses an opinion about whether a cat or a dog makes a better pet.

Tell the students that you would like them to read the passage quietly to themselves. Direct their attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” chart. Tell them that, as they read, you want them to stop occasionally and ask themselves if they understand what they are reading. If they do not understand something they have read, they are to put a check mark next to that part of the passage and use a “fix-up” strategy to try to fix the problem. Review that “fix-up” strategies include rereading slowly and carefully and reading ahead to find additional information. Direct the students’ attention to the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and remind them that they can also use the comprehension strategies they have learned to help them make sense of the passage.

Tell the students that you will check in with them later to see how they did with reading and understanding the passage. Then have the students quietly read the passage.

Circulate as the students are reading. Confer briefly with the students about what they are doing to monitor their comprehension and fix comprehension problems.

TEKS 6.A.i

Student/Teacher Activity

Step 2 (third paragraph in step to the end) and Step 3 (all, beginning on page 19 and continuing on to page 20)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Ask yourself:

- Are the students monitoring their comprehension?
- Are they using “fix-up” strategies to address comprehension problems?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 76. Use the following suggestions to support the students:

- If all or most students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, model reading a part of the passage, thinking aloud about what you are doing to monitor your comprehension and address comprehension problems (see Day 1, Step 4). You might also consider teaching or reviewing IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).

3 Discuss Self-monitoring and “Fix-up” Strategies

When the students have finished reading the passage, facilitate a discussion about how they did with monitoring their comprehension and fixing problems. Ask:

Q What part of the passage, if any, did you have trouble understanding?

TEKS 9.D.i
TEKS 9.D.iv

TEKS 9.D.i
TEKS 9.D.iv
Student/Teacher Narrative
Teacher Note (first Teacher
Note in green margin on page 20)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to understand the question, explain that main point are important words in the question and that the main point is what the passage is mainly, or mostly, about. If the students struggle to find the answer, display the passage and model skimming to identify information that will help them figure out the answer (for example, the sentence “Cats make better pets than dogs” in paragraph 1).

Teacher Note

The correct answer to question 1 is “You should choose a cat instead of a dog for a pet.”

Q What did you do to help you make sense of that part?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If the students had difficulty comprehending any part of the passage, read that part aloud and discuss it with the students.

4 Discuss Question 1 in Pairs

Review that the students will work with their partners to answer questions about the passage. Distribute a copy of “Questions: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” (BLM4) to each student. Display question 1 on the “Questions 1–4: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” chart (WA5).

Questions 1-4: “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?”

WA5

Question 1

Read the question. Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

What main point does the author make in this passage?

Both cats and dogs have important jobs to do.

Dogs and cats can be trained to get along together.

You should choose a cat instead of a dog for a pet.

Taking care of a dog is hard work for pet owners.

Tell the students that question 1 is the first question about the passage they will answer with their partners. Direct the students’ attention to the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart, and tell the students that you want partners to use these tips to answer question 1. Briefly review the tips. Explain that when partners agree on the correct answer, each is to mark the answer on his or her copy of the questions. Have partners work together to answer question 1.

Circulate as pairs work, offering support as needed.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

Q What answer did you and your partner agree on for question 1?

Q How did you mark your answer?

Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answer?

Q Who agrees with [Mark and Maria] that [“You should choose a cat instead of a dog for a pet”] is the correct answer?

Q Who marked a different answer? Why did you choose that answer?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

5 Follow the Same Procedure to Answer Questions 2-4

Follow the same procedure to have partners answer questions 2, 3, and 4. Continue to circulate as pairs discuss each question and offer support as needed.

Question 2

Read the question. Circle the letters of the correct answers. More than one answer is correct.

Which of these sentences are evidence that cats make better pets than dogs?

- A. Cats do not make as much noise as dogs.
- B. Dogs do lots of important jobs.
- C. A cat can entertain itself for hours.
- D. Training cats is not easy.

WA5

Teacher Note

If the students do not understand the question, explain that evidence and cats make better pets than dogs are important words in the question, and that they are to identify each sentence that is evidence that tells why cats make better pets than dogs. You might display the passage and model skimming to find one sentence that is evidence of why cats make better pets than dogs.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What answers did you and your partner agree on for question 2?
- Q How did you mark your answers?
- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?
- Q Who agrees with [Paul and Thuy] that [A and C] are the correct answers?
- Q Who marked different answers? Why did you mark those answers?

Question 3

Read the following sentence from paragraph 7 of the passage. Then answer the question below.

Now, it is true that cats have minds of their own.

What does the author mean by this? Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

- (A) Cats are much more intelligent than dogs.
- (B) Cats can be trained if you know what they're thinking.
- (C) Cats are hard to train because they are not smart.
- (D) Cats do what they want instead of trying to please people.

WA5

Teacher Note

If the students struggle with the question's format, explain that the sentence "Now, it is true that cats have minds of their own" is from paragraph 7. The question is asking which answer choice tells what the sentence means. You might display the passage and reread paragraph 7 to help them figure out the answer.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What answer did you and your partner agree on for question 3?
- Q How did you mark your answer?

Teacher Note

The correct answer to question 3 is D.

Teacher Note

If the students do not understand the question, explain that they are to write two examples of how dogs and cats are alike, using information from both passages. To answer the question, they need to skim the passages and think about what dogs and cats have in common. Explain that they will need to make inferences to figure out how the animals are similar.

Teacher Note

Possible examples are:

- Dogs and cats make good pets. (“Furry Friends and Helpers”: paragraphs 1 and 7; “Which Pet to Choose?”: paragraphs 2-8)
- Dogs and cats can be trained. (“Furry Friends and Helpers”: paragraphs 3-5; “Which Pet to Choose?”: paragraph 7)
- Dogs and cats do jobs for people. (“Furry Friends and Helpers”: paragraphs 1-6; “Which Pet to Choose?”: paragraphs 4 and 8)
- Dogs and cats give humans love and friendship. (“Furry Friends and Helpers”: paragraphs 1 and 7; “Which Pet to Choose?”: paragraph 8)

Teacher Note

Save the “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” chart (WA4) to use on Day 4.

If you would like to discuss additional “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” practice questions with the students, see the extension “Discuss Practice Question 5” on the next page.

- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answer?
- Q Who agrees with [Kelli and Habib] that [D] is the correct answer?
- Q Who came up with a different answer? Why did you mark that answer?

Question 4

Give two examples of how dogs and cats are alike. Use evidence from both “Furry Friends and Helpers” and “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” in your answers. Write your answers on the lines below.

Example 1:

---

---

---

---

Example 2:

---

---

---

---

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What examples of how dogs and cats are alike did you and your partner agree on?
- Q How did you record your answers?
- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?
- Q Who agrees with [Rae and Sara] that [“People keep dogs and cats as pets” and “Dogs and cats do jobs for people”] are examples of how dogs and cats are alike?
- Q Who wrote a different answer? Why did you choose that example?

Tell the students that tomorrow they will answer one more question about the passages they have read. Have the students put their materials inside their folders.

6 Reflect on Partner Work

Briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility as you worked with your partner today?
- Q What did your partner do to take responsibility?

EXTENSION

Discuss Practice Question 5

Follow the procedure you used on Day 3 (see Step 5) to have partners discuss and answer question 5 on their copies of “Questions: ‘Which Pet to Choose? A Cat or a Dog?’” Remind the students to use the information on the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart to help them find the correct answers. Then use the “Question 5: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” chart (WA6) to discuss the students’ responses as a class.

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 5 are B (part A) and “food,” “gobble,” and “eat” (part B).

Guided Strategy Practice

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Add sentences to a paragraph about this week’s passages
- Refer to the passages to support their thinking
- Reflect on what they have learned about preparing for an end-of-year assessment
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking

1 Briefly Review the Week

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that they have been preparing for the end-of-year assessment. Review that this week they have read two passages and answered questions about the passages. Explain that today the students will work with you and their partners to answer a final question about the passages.

2 Read and Discuss Question 6

Display the “Question 6: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” chart (WA7). Ask the students to look at question 6 on their copies of the questions (BLM4). Explain that this is the question they will discuss today. Direct the students’ attention to the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart and remind the students that it is important to read

Materials

- “Question 6: ‘Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?’” chart (WA7)
- “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?” chart (WA4) from Day 3
- “Tips for Answering Questions” chart from Day 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

Teacher Note

Question 5 is a supplemental practice question. If you did not do the extension activity on Day 3, you might assign the question as seatwork for the students to do individually or in pairs.

a question carefully and think about what the question is asking before answering it. Ask the students to read question 6 carefully. Then discuss:

- Q What is this question asking you to do?
- Q What information from the passages is the question asking you to write about? What are the important words in the question?

WA7

Question 6: "Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?"

Question 6

On the lines below, write a paragraph about how cats and dogs help people. Make sure your paragraph has at least one detail from each of the passages you read.

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

Students might say:

- "The question says we have to write a paragraph."
- "In addition to what [Bob] said, the question says the paragraph has to have at least one detail from each passage."
- "We need to write about how cats and dogs help people."
- "I agree with [Seth]. I think about how cats and dogs help people are important words because we have to write about that."
- "I agree with [Sharon]. In addition, I think the words one detail from each of the passages are important words because that means we have to look at both passages to find details for the paragraph."

If necessary, point out that the question is asking the students to write a paragraph about how cats and dogs help people and to include at least one detail from each passage they read this week.

3 Model Writing the First Few Sentences of the Paragraph

Ask the students to watch and listen as you model writing the first few sentences of the paragraph. Then write an opening sentence and a couple of sentences that tell how cats help people, thinking aloud as you plan and write.

You might say:

"A well-written paragraph starts with an opening sentence that tells what the paragraph is about. We know from the question that this paragraph is going to tell how cats and dogs help people. I remember from the passages that cats and dogs help people in different ways, so I'll write this opening sentence: Cats and dogs help people in different ways. I'll write first about how cats help people. I remember from the passage 'Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?' that cats help people by catching mice. So I'll write: Cats help people by catching mice. I can't remember if the passage tells about other ways cats help people, so I'll skim the passage to see. [Display the 'Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?' chart and skim the passage.] Oh, here in paragraph 8, it tells how loving and attentive a cat is as a pet, and it says, 'Cats help lonely people feel less lonely and sad people feel happier.' So I'll write a sentence or two about that: Cats are also wonderful pets. They help unhappy people feel better."

Ask:

Q What did you notice me doing as I wrote the first few sentences of the paragraph?

Students might say:

"I noticed that you wrote an opening sentence. It tells what the paragraph is about."

"In addition to what [Min] said, I noticed that you wrote about cats first. You remembered that cats help people because they chase mice."

"I noticed that you couldn't remember anything else about cats, so you skimmed the passage."

"I noticed that, too. Looking at the passages is a smart idea."

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

4 Have the Students Add to the Paragraph

 Tell the students that you want them to copy the sentences you wrote onto their own copies of question 6. Then you want each of them to add at least two sentences of their own to their paragraphs that tell how dogs help people. Have partners discuss what they might write about how dogs help people.

Without sharing as a class, have the students copy your sentences and write sentences of their own. As the students work, walk around the room and observe, assisting as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Ask yourself:

- Are the students able to write sentences about how dogs help people?
- Do the sentences include details from both passages?
- Are they skimming the passages to find information?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 77. Use the following suggestions to support the students:

- If all or most students are writing at least two sentences and the sentences include details from the passages, proceed with the lesson.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are writing two sentences or the sentences do not include details from the passages, model skimming the passages and adding a sentence to the paragraph. Have the students copy that sentence. Then have them skim the passages and add a sentence of their own.

5 Use the Students’ Ideas to Add to the Paragraph and Model Writing a Closing Sentence

When the students have finished writing, discuss the following questions:

- Q What is one sentence you added to the paragraph about how dogs help people?
- Q Where is that information in the passages?
- Q Who else added a sentence [about how huskies help people by pulling sleds]?

Use the students’ ideas to add sentences to the paragraph on the chart. Then model writing a closing sentence.

You might say:

“A well-written paragraph ends with a strong closing sentence that wraps up the paragraph and lets the reader know that the paragraph has come to an end. From the passages, we’ve learned that both cats and dogs are friendly, loving pets, and they help people, too. So I’ll write: Both cats and dogs are wonderful friends and helpers.”

Teacher Note

Students’ ideas might include that dogs help people by pulling sleds; herding sheep; leading the blind; opening doors or fetching objects for people who cannot use their arms or walk; visiting hospital patients; finding people who are lost, trapped, or buried; helping the police and military save lives; or being loving pets.

Question 6: “Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?”Question 6

On the lines below, write a paragraph about how cats and dogs help people. Make sure your paragraph has at least one detail from each of the passages you read.

Cats and dogs help people in different ways. Cats help people by catching mice. Cats are also wonderful pets. They help unhappy people feel better. Dogs make people feel better, too. Some service dogs visit hospital patients. The patients are happier after petting the dogs. Other service dogs help people who cannot walk by fetching things. Dogs also help people by doing jobs like pulling sleds and herding sheep. Both cats and dogs are wonderful friends and helpers.

Read the paragraph aloud. Then point to the directions for question 6 and ask:

Q How did we do with following the directions of the question? Why do you say that?

6 Reflect on Preparing for the Assessment

Remind the students that this week they prepared for an end-of-year reading assessment by reading and discussing passages together and answering questions. Ask:

Q What have you learned this week that will help you do well on the end-of-year assessment?

Q Do you feel prepared for the assessment? Why do you feel [prepared/unprepared]?

EXTENSIONS

Provide Additional Practice with Supplemental Passages and Questions

Additional practice passages and questions are available on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). You might assign one or more of the passages and sets of questions as seatwork to be completed independently or in pairs or as homework. When students have finished the assignment, discuss their responses to the questions, using questions like those you asked on Day 3 (see Step 5). The passages and questions can also be used for further class instruction if needed. For other uses of the passages and questions, see “Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year” on page viii.

Help the Students Prepare for Assessment Day

Providing the students with strategies for making sense of passages and tips for answering questions is a critical step in getting them ready for an end-of-year assessment, but it is also important to help the students prepare physically and emotionally. In the days before the assessment, let the students know what to expect on the day of the assessment. Your school or district guidelines for administering the assessment will provide you with information about the location of the assessment, how the assessment will be administered, and the amount of time the students will have to complete the assessment. You might also share information about rules concerning talking during the assessment, breaks or rest periods, and what to do when the students are finished.

Tell the students that it is important for them to be well rested and feeling their best on the day of the assessment so that they can do their best work. Ask:

- Q What might you do to make sure you are well rested and feeling your best for the assessment?
- Q Why is it important to be responsible for taking care of yourself so you're ready for the assessment?

Students might say:

“I can go to bed early the night before the assessment so that I won't be sleepy that day.”

“I can set an alarm clock so I have enough time to get ready that morning.”

“I can eat a good breakfast so that I won't be hungry and grouchy.”

“If I take care of myself, then I'll feel good during the assessment.”

“In addition to what [Tanae] said, if we feel good when we do the assessment, that will help us do our best work.”

If necessary, emphasize the importance of getting a good night's sleep and eating a good breakfast on the day of the assessment. Encourage the students to be responsible and take care of themselves in these ways in preparation for the assessment.

Passage 1

Furry Friends and Helpers

Paragraph 1        Dogs come in many shapes and sizes. No matter the shape or size, dogs make good pets. They provide their owners with friendship and love, and they are eager to make their owners happy. Some dogs, however, are more than pets. They have jobs.

Paragraph 2        In Alaska, dogs called huskies are used to pull sleds across the snow. These dogs are smart and strong. They work as a team to travel long distances. Their thick fur protects them from the cold.

Paragraph 3        Sheep ranchers use dogs to protect and herd their flocks. These herding dogs race around the sheep, barking at them to move the sheep in a certain direction. These dogs are trained to respond to different whistles. When they hear one whistle, they move the sheep to the left. When they hear another whistle, they move the sheep to the right. But these herding dogs do not need much help to do their jobs. They were born for this work. People often have this kind of dog as a pet. Some people say their dogs try to “herd” them to bed at night.

Paragraph 4        Some dogs are trained to help people in their daily lives. They are called service dogs. For example, you may have seen a service dog helping a blind person. Some people cannot walk or move their arms. A service dog can open doors and fetch objects for them. Only the smartest and most loyal dogs can be trained as service dogs.

Paragraph 5        Just being around dogs can make people feel better. That is why some hospitals invite therapy dogs to visit patients. (Therapy is a “treatment for an illness or injury.”) After petting and hugging a dog, patients are more cheerful. It takes their minds off of being sick. Therapy dogs must have special traits. For example, they must be gentle. They must also enjoy being around people.

Paragraph 6        Dogs have an extremely good sense of smell. This trait makes them very good at finding lost people. When there is an emergency such as an earthquake, dogs can find people who are trapped. When an avalanche of snow comes crashing down a mountain, it can bury people. Dogs can help find those people. The police and the military also use dogs. These highly trained dogs have saved many lives.

Paragraph 7        Whether they are herding sheep, rescuing people in trouble, or rushing to greet us at the front door, dogs are loveable creatures that make our lives richer. Dogs and humans have a special bond.

Passage 2

Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog?

Paragraph 1        Are you thinking about getting a pet but can't decide between a cat and a dog? Trouble yourself no more. Cats make better pets than dogs. Here's why.

Paragraph 2        First, cats are cleaner than dogs. Dogs get dirty—really, really dirty! Their owners have to give them baths. For the most part, cats don't need baths. They keep clean by licking their fur. Cats can twist and turn like acrobats while cleaning themselves.

Paragraph 3        Cats are quieter than dogs. Dogs are noisy creatures. They growl and snarl and bark and howl. But cats just purr and meow. They don't bother the neighbors.

Paragraph 4        Cats perform an important job around the house. They catch mice. You won't need a mousetrap with a cat in the house. Of course, dogs do important jobs, too, like chasing away burglars. But dogs aren't as good as cats at catching mice.

Paragraph 5        Cats are easier to feed than dogs. If you leave food for a cat, it will usually stop eating when it's full. Dogs will devour all the food in sight. A dog will gobble up every little bite. It will eat even if it isn't hungry.

Paragraph 6        One of the best things about cats is their playfulness. Of course, dogs play, too, but they usually want a human to play with them. Cats can entertain themselves for hours. Cats leap and twirl and roll around. If you really want to have some fun, get a stick with a long feather tied to one end. Move the stick up, down, and all around. Your cat will have a great time trying to catch the feather, and you'll have great fun watching the show.

Which Pet to Choose: A Cat or a Dog? (continued)

Paragraph 7      Now, it is true that cats have minds of their own. They are not as eager to please people as dogs are. That’s why many people think cats cannot be trained. But they can be. If you want to train a cat, though, you will need to be patient. Training a cat is not easy.

Paragraph 8      Perhaps the best reason of all to get a cat is for the love and attention it will show you. Your pet cat will want to be near you. Much of the time, it will want to be on you! Cats help lonely people feel less lonely and sad people feel happier.

The Eagle and the Snake

Long, long ago, in a field next to a forest, a great eagle spotted a snake slithering through the grass. “Ah, a tasty meal,” the hungry eagle thought to itself. The eagle swooped down and grabbed the snake.

To the eagle’s surprise, the snake fought back. The snake was quick and strong. It coiled itself tightly around the mighty bird. The eagle fell to the ground with the snake wrapped around it. The great bird struggled to lift its wings and fly away, but the snake was too strong.

Just as the snake was about to dig its fangs into the eagle, a man who was walking by saw them. The man rushed over and freed the eagle from the snake’s grasp.

The snake was furious. The man was too far away for the snake to bite, so it shot its venom into the man’s drinking cup, which had fallen to the ground. The man picked up the cup and continued on his journey.

The man came upon a stream. There the thirsty man filled his drinking cup with cold water. Before he could take a drink, the great eagle flew down and knocked the cup from his hand. The water with the snake’s venom poured out upon the ground.

A Visit to My Mom's Work

Friday was “take your child to work day,” so I went to work with my mom. I knew my mom worked in a nursing home, but I did not know exactly what that meant. I wanted to know more about what my mom does every day while I am at school.

When we got there, I saw several people about my grandparents' age gathered in a large living room. Some people were playing cards at a table. Others were watching television. There were even some people playing table tennis!

Mom said, “Kenzo, these are my clients.” She warmly introduced me to just about everyone. Each person I met was so happy to see my mom and pleased to meet me.

As we headed down the hall, a gentleman in a wheelchair followed us and called out to my mom. It was Mr. Robinson. When he caught up to us, he smiled at me. “It’s nice to finally meet you!” he said. Then he asked me how old I was.

I replied, “Eight. Going on nine next month. It’s nice to meet you, too.” When I reached out to shake his right hand, I realized Mr. Robinson could not move it. He offered me his left hand instead. My mom told Mr. Robinson that we would see him at four o’clock. Then she led me back to her office.

My mom’s office looked more like a playroom than an office. There were weights, big beach balls, and gym mats. There was even an exercise bike. One by one, my mom met with her clients. She helped them do what she called “exercises.” I watched carefully as my mom directed activities like folding laundry, walking up and down stairs, and picking up blocks off the floor. I wasn’t sure how some of these activities were actually exercise, but I trusted her.

A Visit to My Mom’s Work (continued)

Then my mom asked, “Kenzo, do you want to give it a shot?” Of course I did! She had me play catch with a heavy ball with some of her clients. My arms got tired after a while! Mom said playing catch helps to keep her clients strong. It also keeps their reflexes sharp.

I wondered what kinds of exercises Mom would do with Mr. Robinson. I wondered how exercise could be possible if he could not walk or use his right hand.

At four o’clock sharp, Mr. Robinson was at my mom’s door. I watched as she massaged and stretched Mr. Robinson’s legs. Then she gently rubbed and stretched his arms and hands. Next she gave him a tennis ball to squeeze with his right hand. I could tell it was difficult because his hand barely gripped the ball. But Mr. Robinson grinned and said, “I love to feel the blood pumping through my veins!” Then he turned to me and said, “I don’t know what I would do without your mom. She keeps me young!”

I am so glad I went to work with my mom and met people like Mr. Robinson. I see how she helps them get their movement and strength back after an illness or accident. I also learned that people exercise in different ways. People do what they can, according to their limits and abilities. I look forward to visiting again and seeing her clients this summer.

Questions: "A Visit to My Mom's Work"

Question 1

Read the question. Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

Why did Kenzo go to work with his mom?

- He wanted to get some exercise.
- His mom needed help taking care of her clients.
- He wanted to know more about what his mom does.
- He wanted to visit his grandparents at the nursing home.

Question 2

Read the question. Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

Which sentence from the passage best shows that the clients like Kenzo's mom?

- Mom said, "Kenzo, these are my clients."
- Each person I met was so happy to see my mom and pleased to meet me.
- As we headed down the hall, a gentleman in a wheelchair followed us and called out to my mom.
- My mom's office looked more like a playroom than an office.

Question 3

Read the sentences from the passage below and the question that follows.
Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

My mom’s office looked more like a playroom than an office.

There were weights, big beach balls, and gym mats. There was even an exercise bike. One by one, my mom met with her clients. She helped them do what she called “exercises.” I watched carefully as my mom directed activities like folding laundry, walking up and down stairs, and picking up blocks off the floor. I wasn’t sure how some of these activities were actually exercise, but I trusted her.

Then my mom asked, “Kenzo, do you want to give it a shot?”

What does the author mean by “do you want to give it a shot?”

- A Do you want to help the clients exercise?
- B Do you want to give the clients medicine?
- C Do you want to shoot a ball into a basket?
- D Do you want to work in a nursing home someday?

Question 4

Read the sentences from the passage below and the question that follows.
Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

I watched as she massaged and stretched Mr. Robinson's legs. Then she gently rubbed and stretched his arms and hands. Next she gave him a tennis ball to squeeze with his right hand.

Based on the passage, what does massaged mean?

- (A) stretched
- (B) bent into shape
- (C) rubbed in a gentle way
- (D) moved back

Question 5

Read the sentences from the passage below and the question that follows.
Write your answer on the lines below.

I am so glad I went to work with my mom and met people like Mr. Robinson. I see how she helps them get their movement and strength back after an illness or accident.

How does Kenzo's mom help people get their movement and strength back? Give two examples from the passage.

Possible answer: Kenzo's mom helps people do special exercises to stay strong, such as going up stairs and throwing heavy balls. She helps Mr. Robinson get his movement back by rubbing his arms and legs and having him grip a tennis ball.

An isometric illustration of a school building in shades of green and grey. The building has multiple windows and doors. In the foreground, a car is parked on a street. Two students are sitting on a bench, reading books. A dog is sitting on the ground nearby. A tree with a circular canopy is also present. The overall scene is a stylized representation of a school environment.

Assessments

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are the students monitoring their comprehension?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are they using “fix-up” strategies to address comprehension problems?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, proceed with the lesson and then continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, model reading a part of the passage, thinking aloud about what you are doing to monitor your comprehension and address comprehension problems (see Day 1, Step 4). You might also consider teaching or reviewing IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are the students able to write sentences about how dogs help people?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Do the sentences include details from both passages?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are they scanning the passages to find information?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are writing at least two sentences and the sentences include details from the passages, proceed with the lesson.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are writing two sentences or the sentences do not include details from the passages, model skimming the passages and adding a sentence to the paragraph. Have the students copy that sentence. Then have them skim the passages and add a sentence of their own.

THIS is the train seat. And THIS is a tiny white woman sitting on the train seat. She is almost as short as I am, but she is a grandmother. On her head is a black hat with a pink flower, like a rose flower. It has shiny green leaves, like the leaves in my uncle's florist shop. On her feet are old, old shoes. These are the buckles. And in her lap is a big black pocketbook. And in the pocketbook is a bag.

Before Julius was born, Lilly was the best big sister in the world.
She gave him things.
She told him secrets.
And she sang lullabies to him every night.

After Julius was born, it was a different story.
Lilly took her things back.
She pinched his tail.
And she yelled insulting comments into his crib.

Cousin Garland tried to slink out of the room.

“Stop!” said Lilly. “I am the queen. Watch me closely.”

Lilly picked up Julius.

She kissed his wet pink nose.

She admired his small black eyes.

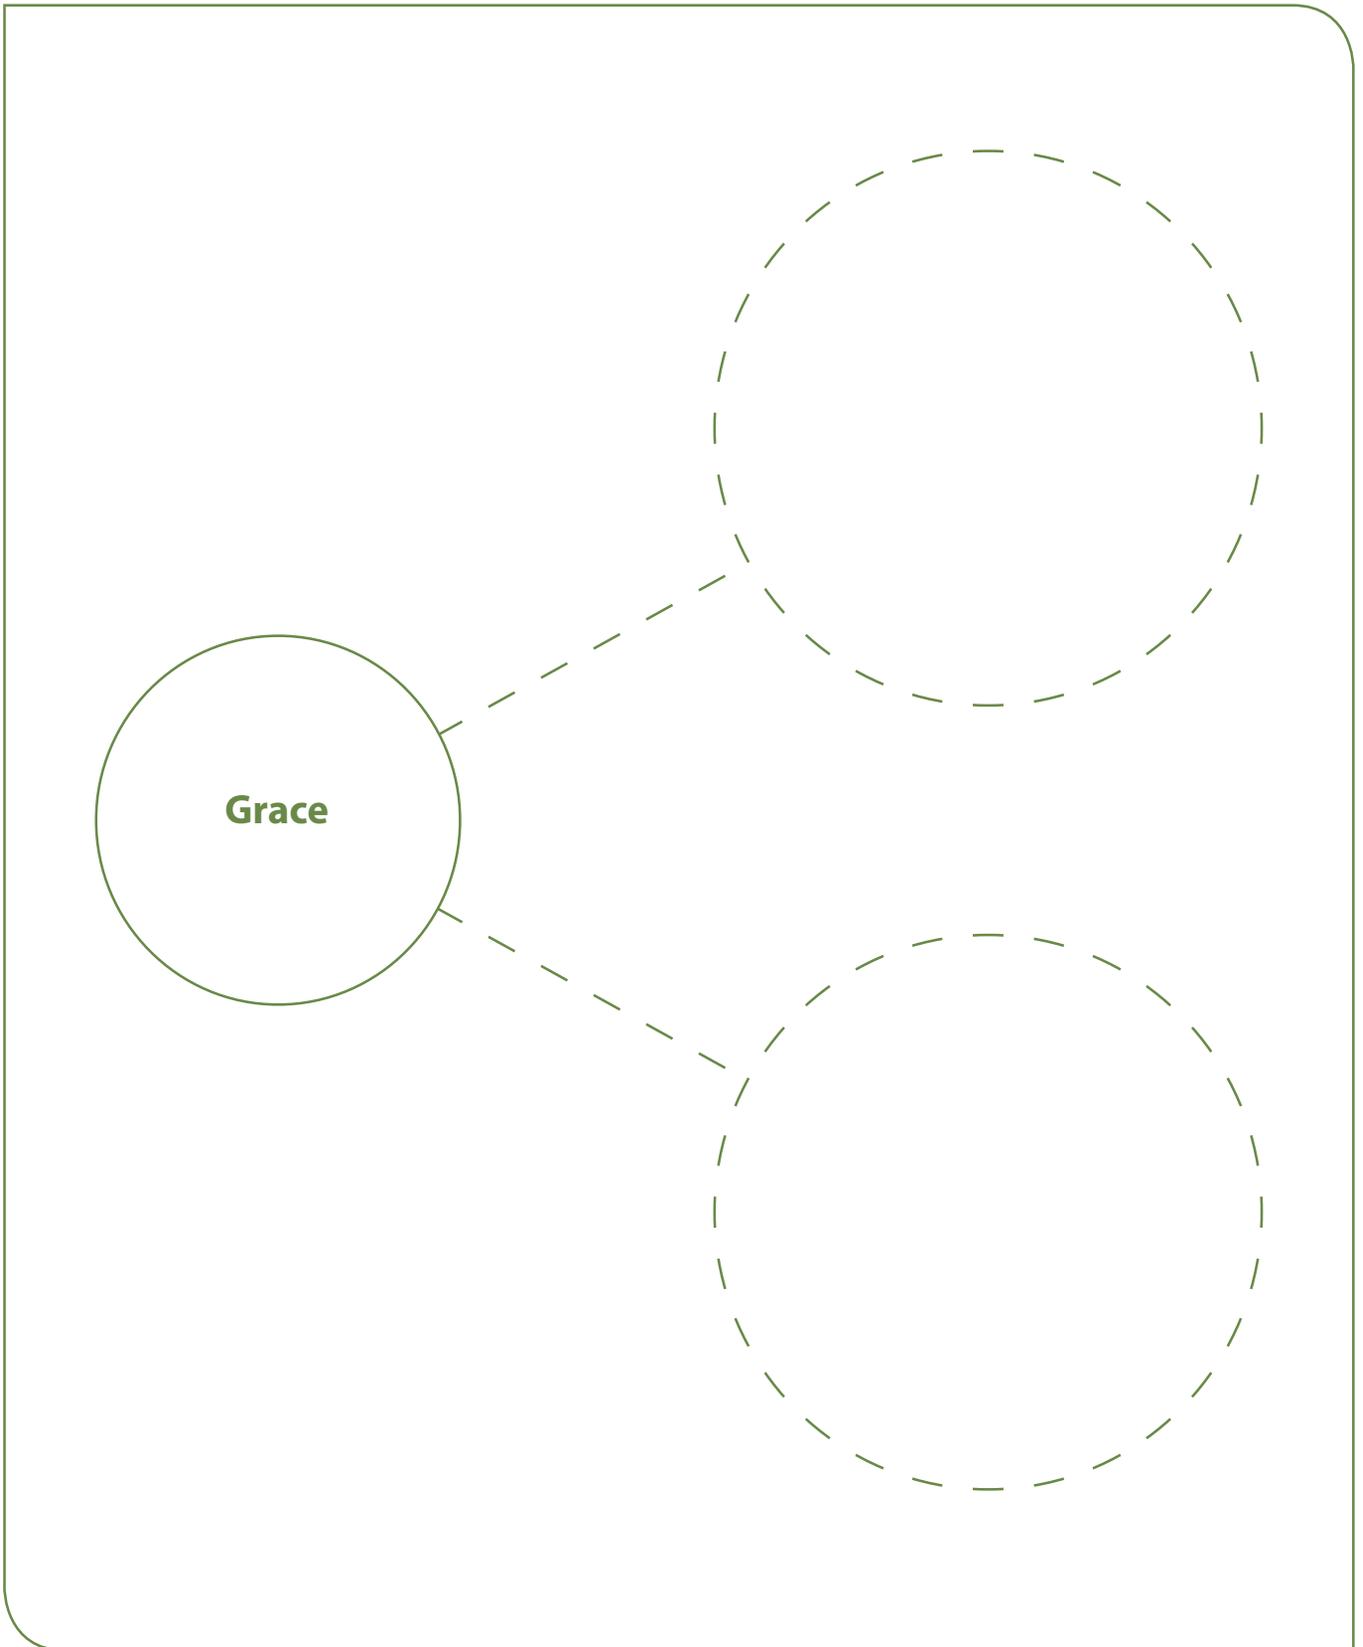

And she stroked his sweet white fur.

“Look,” he said. “If you need money I’ll give you half now.” He began to pull his wallet from his pocket but Abuelo held up his hand.

“Tell him we take the pay tomorrow, when we finish.”

Francisco’s grandfather and Ben looked at each other and words seemed to pass between them, though there were no words. Ben slid his wallet back into his pocket.

Francisco sighed. The lie had taken the chorizos, too.

“Tomorrow then. Six A.M.,” Ben said. “And tell your grandfather I can always use a good man—for more than just one day’s work.”

Francisco gave a hop of excitement. More than just a day’s work!

Ben was still speaking. “The important things your grandfather knows already. And I can teach him gardening.”

Francisco nodded. He understood. He would tell his grandfather, and he would tell him something else. He, Francisco, had begun to learn the important things, too.

Francisco took his grandfather’s cold, rough hand in his. “Let’s go home, Abuelo,” he said.

from Mailing May

by Michael O. Tunnell

Whenever Leonard had a free minute, he'd take me to the door for a look. My, oh, my, what sights there were to see! Why, we hung on the edge of mountainsides and crawled through tunnels. We crossed deep valleys on top of tall, spidery trestles that Leonard called "steel on stilts."

Then long about Lapwai Canyon, where the train track twists back and forth down the mountain, I began to feel somewhat less adventuresome. Instead, I was feeling dizzy and weak in the stomach. I was about to run to get some fresh air when I heard an angry voice at the door.

from Brave Harriet

by Marissa Moss

This story is based on the life of Harriet Quimby, the first American woman to receive a pilot's license and the first woman to fly solo across the English Channel. The descriptions of her flight are taken from the newspaper article she wrote about it as a reporter for the New York Herald. When Harriet made her flight in 1912, the "aeroplane" was still young as a machine, a wooden open-air contraption that looked about as strong as a good box kite. More than a decade would pass before planes would have the enclosed metal cockpits that we associate with Amelia Earhart and Charles Lindbergh. But there already existed a breed of daredevil pilots, and Harriet was among them. She made a name as an exhibition flier, performing for the inauguration of the president of Mexico in 1911, then setting her sights on crossing the English Channel.

Gustav Hamel, an early aviator who had already successfully crossed the Channel, did actually offer to trade places with Harriet, so convinced was he that the flight was beyond a woman's ability. Harriet proved him wrong, and she worked hard to promote commercial aviation and a place for women within it. She even foresaw a day when passengers would regularly be carried on flights of fifty or sixty miles!

Unfortunately for Harriet, her landing in France coincided with the news of the sinking of the Titanic. The newspapers were filled with news of the tragedy, and Harriet's feat didn't even make the back pages of the New York Herald. She was determined to keep flying, however, and died doing what she loved, soaring into the blue. The Boston Post wrote of her death: "Ambitious to be among the pathfinders, she took her chances like a man and died like one." Her gravestone expresses that daring as well: THERE IS NO REASON TO BE AFRAID.

from Wilma Unlimited

by Kathleen Krull

Wilma Rudolph became, at age twenty, the first American woman to win three gold medals at a single Olympics. When she returned home from Rome, her family was waiting for her, and so was all of Clarksville, Tennessee. The huge parade and banquet held in her honor were the first events in the town's history to include both blacks and whites. . . .

After she retired from her career as a runner in 1962, Wilma became a second-grade teacher and a high school coach. She remained a much-admired celebrity, but to prove that there was more to her than just running, she started a company called Wilma Unlimited that gave her opportunities to travel, lecture, and support causes she believed in. Later she founded the nonprofit Wilma Rudolph Foundation to nurture young athletes and to teach them that they, too, can succeed despite all odds against them. The story of all she overcame in order to win at the Olympics has inspired thousands of young athletes, especially women.

Wilma Rudolph died in 1994.

Author's Note

from Sonia Sotomayor

by Jonah Winter

In America, we like to believe that anyone—regardless of their background—can achieve great things. It's called the American Dream, and Sonia Sotomayor is a wonderful example of it, rising from humble beginnings to become the first Latin-American Supreme Court justice. Hers is a very inspiring—and very American—story, but not all of it could fit in this book. Here are a few extra details and explanations of her life, her struggle, and her success.

Sonia Maria Sotomayor was born on June 25, 1954 in a rough part of New York City called the South Bronx. When she was three years old, her family moved from a tenement building to the Bronxdale Houses. Like most project tenants, Sonia's family did not have a lot of money, but still she knew they were more fortunate than her cousins and aunts and uncles back in Puerto Rico, whom she visited every summer. Home in America, Sonia attended good schools, which her mother worked very hard to send her to, and enjoyed small indulgences, like going to see baseball games at Yankee Stadium.

Before being appointed to the Supreme Court, Justice Sotomayor was a lawyer and a judge and held many different positions. Her first job after law school was as the assistant district attorney in Manhattan (a district attorney is a lawyer who prosecutes criminals). She held this position from 1979 to 1984 and then decided to work as a lawyer for a law firm. There, she sometimes went with the police on dangerous raids. It's even been said that she once rode on the back of a motorcycle while chasing a criminal through Chinatown! Finally, in 1992, she fulfilled her lifelong dream of becoming a judge! She was appointed to the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of

Author's Note from Sonia Sotomayor (continued)

New York by President George H. W. Bush, and she was the youngest judge (and the first Latin American) ever to be appointed to this court. As a district court judge, she was well known (and liked!) for ending a Major League Baseball strike that threatened to ruin the 1995 season for fans all over America. Some say she saved baseball!

In 1997, Justice Sotomayor was nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, and in 1998 she was confirmed by the Senate as a judge to this very important court. But of course, how she truly made history was by becoming a Supreme Court justice. Not only is she the first Latin American to have a seat in America's highest court, she also came to the position with more legal experience as a federal judge than any current Supreme Court justice at the time of their nominations. Pretty impressive!

Although Justice Sotomayor has become a very important and successful adult, some things haven't changed since her childhood in the South Bronx. She still takes shots for her diabetes every day, and she still goes to see her beloved New York Yankees. She still likes to listen to merengue music (which actually has Dominican rather than Puerto Rican roots), and she still loves her family more than anything in the world. Justice Sotomayor is a wonderful aunt, and she buys her nephews and nieces so many presents that she has little money left over for herself. Like mother, like daughter!

HOP TO IT: Fancy Footwork

Looking for a fun outdoor game? Grab a piece of chalk, a stone, and a friend. What can you play? Hopscotch!

The first hopscotch courts were made around 2,000 years ago. Imagine a hopscotch court 100 feet long—about the length of a professional basketball court. That’s how big the first courts were. They were not made for fun, either. Instead, they were used for a training exercise. Roman soldiers would dress in heavy armor and run from one end of the court to the other and back again. This exercise helped them stay quick on their feet.

Hopping Around the World

Roman children watched the soldiers and imitated them. They drew smaller courts on the ground with chalk and made their own rules. Hopscotch became a game! Their game was simple to learn yet challenging to play. It quickly became popular throughout Europe. Later, it spread to Asia and America.

In every country, children changed the game in their own way. In France, the court is drawn in the shape of a snail. In Bolivia, the squares in the court are named for the days of the week. In the United States, hopscotch is played in many ways. For example, in Alaska, the squares are not named or numbered.

Hopscotch is a simple game with a long history. Over the centuries, it has spread all over the world. Hopscotch proves that the simplest games are often the most popular.

A traditional hopscotch court has eight or ten squares. Once you have learned how to play and how to hop on one leg, it's a lot of fun.

How to Play

To play a game of traditional hopscotch, all you need is one traditional hopscotch court (you can draw one with chalk), one stone, and two or more people. Make sure all the players know these rules:

- A player must toss the stone into every square in sequence.
- Players must land with only one foot in any square.
- Players can't land on a line.
- Players can't hop into any square that is holding the stone.
- A player's turn ends if he or she breaks any of the above rules or if the stone doesn't land in the right square when it is tossed.

When it's your turn, toss the stone into square 1 and then hop on one leg into square 2. Next, jump into squares 3 and 4 so that your left foot is in square 3 and your right foot is in square 4. Continue to hop and jump to the end of the court (making sure only one foot lands in each square!). Now, turn around in the "home" square and hop back to the beginning of the court, pausing to pick up the stone in square 1 before you hop out.

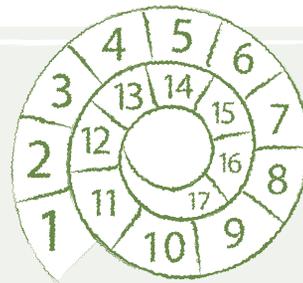

Once you've completed the first pass through the court, toss the stone into square 2 and hop through the court again, hopping over the square that has your stone in it and picking up the stone on your way back. Continue throwing your stone into the next square and hopping through the court again until you step on a line or fall. Then it's the next player's turn! When it's your turn again, continue by tossing the stone into the last square you aimed for. The first player who is able to hop through the course with his or her stone in the last square is the winner!

Hopping in France

In the French hopscotch game, no stone is used. The player hops through the spiral shape, from square 1 to square 17. Then the player hops back to the beginning, chooses a square, and writes his or her initials inside it. The other players must hop over this square. The game is over when it becomes too hard for anyone to hop to the center. The player whose initials are written inside the most squares is the winner.

An Alaskan Pastime

In the Alaskan version of hopscotch, the court has a "side pocket." The player stands inside the side pocket and tosses the stone into the first square. The player then hops diagonally into the second square (skipping the square holding the stone) and hops to the end of the court. The player hops back to the second square, picks up the stone, hops out, and gives the stone to the next player. That player tosses the stone into the second square and repeats the pattern. If a player tosses the stone and it does not land in a square, that player is out. The players repeat the pattern until one person is left—the winner!

In France, hopscotch courts are shaped like snail shells.

Origami

The Art of Japanese Paper Folding

Could you fold a square of paper into a graceful fish or a long-stemmed flower? Origami, or Japanese paper folding, is an art form practiced by many people. In origami, a simple sheet of paper can become a spectacular piece of art.

Japan is an island country that lies near the east coasts of Russia, Korea, and China. It is made up of four major islands.

Ancient Art Form, Modern Appeal

Paper was invented in China and brought to Japan around the year 500. Because paper was rare back then, paper decorations were reserved for special ceremonies. As paper became more common, people started to make paper models for fun. By the 1800s, children in Japan and Europe were learning the art of folding paper into interesting shapes.

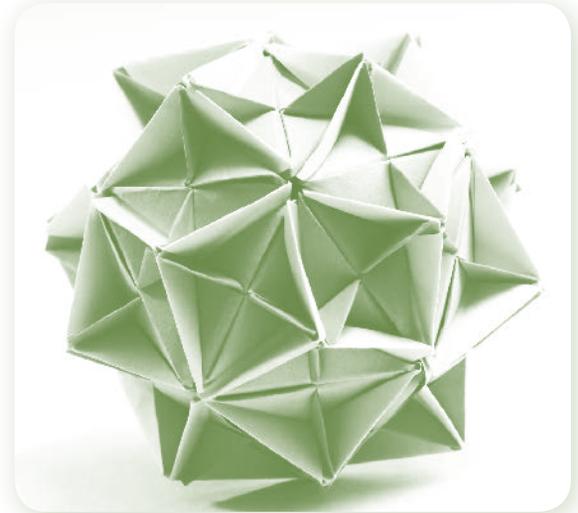

Traditionally, origami objects are created using square pieces of paper that range in size from 1 to 15 inches wide. Six inches is one of the most common sizes. The paper is usually colored or patterned on one or both sides. The paper square is not usually cut or glued but is shaped by making a series of creases and folds. Some artists use wet paper to achieve a more rounded look; others experiment with unusual materials, such as cloth, wire, sheet metal, and even toilet paper.

A Worldwide Craze

Today, there are fans of origami worldwide. The most popular shapes are still traditional Japanese models, such as flowers and birds, but many people are inspired by more unusual-looking life-forms, such as scorpions, armadillos, and horned beetles.

Some people submit their paper creations to origami contests. Some origami contests have a theme such as plants or prehistoric animals. In other contests, there are categories such as best original design, best technical folding, and best miniature model. Winners of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology origami contest have included precise models of a butterfly, a sailboat, and a gold-colored beaver.

Origami is a tradition that has been passed on through many generations. Artists fold origami to express themselves. Scientists and engineers use it to explore shapes and angles to invent new technology. Teachers sometimes use origami as a tool to help kids learn math. And many people fold paper just because it's fun.

Folding origami can be a fun challenge. Some complicated origami figures are constructed using several sheets of paper.

One Thousand Paper Cranes

In the city of Hiroshima, Japan, people bring thousands of paper cranes to a memorial park every year. They do this to remember a girl named Sadako Sasaki. After World War II (1939–1945), Sadako became ill with leukemia, a form of cancer. She had heard the legend that if a person folds 1,000 paper cranes, he or she will be granted one wish. Her wish was to become healthy again.

A 1,000-crane chain takes a long time for one person to make, but it can be completed quickly if many people join in.

Sadako decided to fold 1,000 paper cranes. For months, she kept folding and folding, but on October 25, 1955, she died, with 350 cranes left to make. Her friends completed the remaining cranes for her. Sadako's determination to finish her project has come to stand for a wish for peace. Today, people across the world fold paper cranes and string them into chains. They send them to the memorial park to remember Sadako's dream.

Jump Rope

Then and Now

Have you ever jumped rope? It's a fun activity that kids do in schoolyards and on sidewalks everywhere! Did you know that people have been jumping rope for a long, long time? In fact, the origins of jumping rope go back thousands of years, but it has come a long way since then.

No one knows for sure when and how jumping rope started. Some say the game originated in Egypt more than 3,000 years ago, when the Egyptians jumped over vines as a form of play. What we do know is that jumping rope began in ancient times and has traveled around the world.

Coming to America

It is believed that Dutch settlers brought jumping rope to the American colonies in the 1600s. Some say it was the Dutch who developed a new way to jump called "double Dutch," which is one of the more popular—and difficult—jumping games today. In this game, two people hold two ropes, one end of each rope in each hand, and turn them in opposite directions as jumpers jump over both ropes.

Double Dutch is one of the most popular ways to jump rope.

Three hundred years later, in the 1940s and 1950s, jumping rope became popular with kids in America's cities. At that time, young jumpers used jump rope as a form of play because it required only a rope and almost anyone could learn how to do it.

Later, in the 1970s, Americans became more and more concerned with being fit and healthy. This led to an increased interest in jumping rope as a form of physical fitness. During this time, two New York City police officers, David A. Walker and Ulysses Williams, turned double Dutch into a world-class sport. On February 14, 1974, nearly 600 fifth-, sixth-, seventh-, and eighth-grade students participated in the first double Dutch tournament ever held.

Jumping Today

Today, jumping rope is seen as a fun way for both kids and grown-ups to play and exercise, which has resulted in the formation of many jump rope organizations and clubs. There are also special jump rope events, including some that raise money for charities. In 1978, Jean Barkow, a high school physical education teacher, held a “Jump-Rope-A-Thon,” which raised $2,032 for the American Heart Association. Since then, Barkow’s annual event, now called Jump Rope for Heart, has raised more than $750 million!

People jump rope competitively, as well. Competitive jumpers work on their speed and fancy jumping moves. In 2012, Jolien Kempeneer set a world record by jumping 204 times in 30 seconds.

Interested in having some fun with your friends, getting some exercise, or enjoying some serious competition? Grab a rope and get jumping!

Jump Rope Songs

Jump rope can include singing songs in rhythm with the jumping and rope turning. Often, the words of these songs include instructions to the jumpers on how to jump and when to jump into and out of the turning rope.

Teddy Bear, teddy bear,
Turn around. [Jumper turns in a circle.]
Teddy Bear, teddy bear,
Touch the ground. [Jumper touches the ground.]
Teddy Bear, teddy bear,
Tie your shoe. [Jumper touches his or her shoe.]
Teddy Bear, teddy bear,
How old are you?
1, 2, 3, 4, 5 . . . [Continue counting out loud.]
The jumper jumps out when their age is called.

Important Dates in Modern Jump Rope History

How to Make A PAPER AIRPLANE

1. Fold the sheet of paper in half vertically. Open the paper.

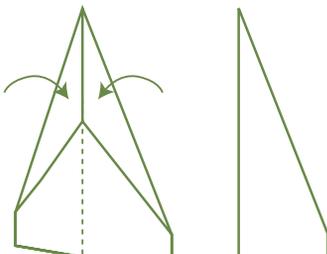

2. Fold the top left and right corners down so that they align with the center fold and form triangles.

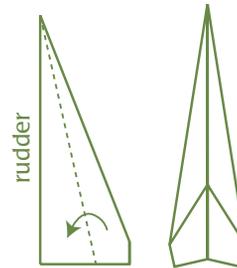

3. Fold the left and right corners in so that they align at the center fold and again form triangles.

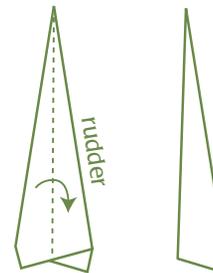

4. Fold the paper in half, keeping the folds from steps 1, 2, and 3 on the inside.

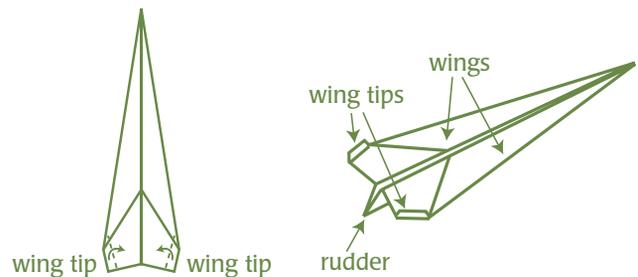

5. Fold the top wing in half so that the edge of the wing aligns with the rudder.

6. Flip the plane over and fold the other wing in half so that the edge of the wing aligns with the rudder.

7. Open the plane and fold up the tips at the back of the wings to help the plane fly better.

Flying Tips:

- If your plane dives and crashes, fold the back edges of the wings up a little.
- If your plane flies too far to the right, bend the rudder a little to the left.
- If your plane flies too far to the left, bend the rudder a little to the right.

by Maryellen Gregoire

You Can Make Tea with Milk	Makes 1 serving
What you need: water, a tea bag, milk
What to do:
1. Boil the water. You can boil it in a pan on a stove, or you can place the water in a mug and boil it in a microwave.
2. Place the tea bag in the mug of hot water. Let the tea bag steep in the water for 1 to 2 minutes, then remove the tea bag.
3. Pour a little milk in your tea to make it creamy.
4. When your tea has cooled, you can try this Russian morning treat.

You Can Make Mexican Breakfast Quesadillas

Makes 2 servings

What you need:

- 2 flour tortillas
- 1 onion
- 1 jalapeño pepper (optional)
- 1/2 cup (120 grams) shredded cheddar cheese
- 2 thin slices of ham
- 1 cup (240 grams) sour cream
- 1 cup (240 grams) salsa

What to do:

1. Place 1 tortilla on a microwave-safe plate.
2. Cut the onion into small pieces.
3. Cut the jalapeño pepper (if using) into small pieces.
4. Place the shredded cheese, the slices of ham, and the pieces of onion (and jalapeño pepper, if using), on the tortilla.
5. Cover with another tortilla.
6. Microwave on medium heat until the cheese has melted.
7. If you like, use any leftover ingredients to decorate your quesadilla.
8. Cut the quesadilla into wedges and serve with sour cream and salsa.

from Flashy Fantastic Rain Forest Frogs

by Dorothy Hinshaw Patent

Frogs need homes to live in. When forests are cut down, frogs and other animals have no place to live, so they die out. Frogs that live in a limited area are especially threatened. The blue poison frog, for example, is found only in small parts of forest in the South American country of Suriname. If its home is destroyed by people harvesting wood, this frog will become extinct.

Frogs have been on Earth for more than 150 million years. But today, frogs are disappearing quickly from some parts of the planet. No one is sure why. Some fear that the increase in ultraviolet light reaching Earth may be to blame. Whatever is killing frogs could be a danger for other forms of life, too. Scientists are working hard to understand what is happening, so that the beauty and usefulness of frogs will always be with us.

POLAR BEARS IN PERIL

Arctic sea ice is melting, making it harder for polar bears to survive in the wild.

By Elizabeth Winchester

Polar bears' features help them survive in the Arctic. A thick layer of fat helps keep the bears warm.

The top of the world is a wintry wonderland. Icebergs float in the cold Arctic Ocean. In the deep of winter, the temperature often falls to  $-30$  degrees Fahrenheit and the sun never rises. The ocean is surrounded by frozen ground. There are few people or trees, but to polar bears, the Arctic is home.

Polar bears have thick fur, huge paws, and other features that make them well prepared for life in their harsh environment. In fact, they need the Arctic sea ice for survival. But climate change is causing larger and larger areas of summer sea ice to melt. Experts say that if warming patterns continue, the Arctic could be free of summer sea ice by 2050. That may cause two-thirds of the world's 20,000 polar bears to be gone by then, too.

"Global climate change may not be affecting you, but it is really affecting polar bears in the Arctic," Jeffrey Bonner, president of the St. Louis Zoo in Missouri, told TFK (TIME for Kids). Bonner is working with zoo and aquarium officials across the country to prevent the bears from dying out.

The Importance of the Ice

Polar bears can't survive for long on land. Seals are their main source of food. The bears hunt for seals in openings in the sea ice. Polar bears need the ice to get to their prey. In summer, the polar bears that live on land eat very little and wait for the sea ice to return.

Polar bears rely on sea ice as their base for hunting, eating, and breeding.

With the sea ice forming later in the year and melting earlier, polar bears do not have enough opportunity to hunt and eat. Less sea ice makes it harder for the bears to catch the seals. The bears must swim longer distances between ice packs, and they can't always make it. The ice is also getting thinner. These conditions can cause polar bear cubs to become separated from their mothers, who provide them with food.

What Zoos—and You—Can Do

Less ice and snow in the far north is also making the entire planet warmer. Steven Amstrup is the chief scientist of Polar Bears International, a group that is dedicated to saving the bears and their habitat. "The more people who see polar bears and understand their plight, the better the chance we'll alter our warming path in time to save them," he says.

Few people have the chance to see polar bears in the wild. That's where zoos come in. The St. Louis Zoo in Missouri and the North Carolina Zoo in Asheboro both recently opened new polar bear exhibits. "If you save the polar bears, you are doing something dramatic to help the environment," says Bonner.

While there are obstacles to bringing polar bears into the country, Bonner and others are working to show how rescuing orphaned cubs could help the species survive. Zoos would provide the cubs with a safe home. Experts would work to breed the bears and keep polar-bear populations healthy.

You can do your part, too, by protecting the environment and helping efforts to save the bears' habitat. Turn off lights and appliances, and save energy in other ways. "If everybody does small things, that adds up," says Bonner.

Banning TAG

Imagine that you are being chased. You run as fast as you can, but you are not quick enough. You feel hands on your back, touching you. You trip, fall down, skinning your knee. Not again! You are tired of always being “it.”

Has this ever happened to you? If it has, you know that it does not feel very good. Some principals, teachers, and parents are worried that playing tag at recess is too dangerous. They argue that kids run into one another, fall down, and get hurt playing tag. They say that sometimes tag leads to hitting, pushing, and bullying. In response to these concerns, schools all over the country are banning the game of tag during recess.

The Other Side

---

Some parents and kids think schools should not ban tag. A third-grader from the state of Washington even started a petition to get his principal to change the ban and let the kids play tag again at recess. There are a lot of good things about the game. It is easy to get started because you do not need anything to play except some friends. Also, while you run around, you are getting exercise and having fun at the same time. Many people are upset that recess has to be ruined for everyone just because a few children play too rough. After all, the game of tag has been around for hundreds of years.

---

Different Types of Tag

---

There are many different versions of tag. You probably know how to play some of them. One of the most popular versions of tag is “freeze tag,” where instead of being “it” when you are caught, you have to stand still until another player touches you. There is also “tunnel tag,” which is like freeze tag except that your teammate must crawl through your legs before you can play again.

“Monster tag” starts with one person chasing all the others. As each player is tagged, he or she joins hands with “it” to help chase the others. In the end, there is a long chain of players who are all “it,” working together. With all the hands and feet, the chain reminds some people of a monster! That is how this kind of tag got its name.

Other Games

---

If your school does not allow tag at recess, there are lots of other games you can play instead! If you have a ball, you can organize a game of kickball or four square. With a piece of chalk and a few pebbles, you can play hopscotch. You can probably think of many more fun things to do during recess.

Whatever you are allowed to do at recess, it is important that you play fair and are gentle with others. When everyone feels safe, everyone can have fun!

SMILE—YOU'VE GOT HOMEWORK!

“Homework.” Now there’s a word that can put a frown on your face! Many kids don’t like doing it. Busy teachers don’t always have time to plan it or grade it. Many exhausted parents have to remind their children to do it. If homework causes so much unhappiness, then why do teachers assign it? One simple reason: Homework helps kids learn. A 2006 study showed that children who do homework do better on class tests. That’s one benefit of homework. Here are some others.

Practice Makes Perfect

As any kindergarten teacher will tell you, students need to practice saying their ABCs in order to learn them. In fact, practice is necessary to learn most of what is taught in school. Unfortunately, there is not enough time in the school day for students to practice all that they learn. That’s what homework is for. Homework provides the practice time that students need.

Homework also helps a teacher teach more effectively. Reviewing homework assignments helps the teacher know what the students understand and what they don’t. With this information, teachers can decide whether to reteach a lesson or move on.

Homework helps students practice what they are learning in school.

Memorizing Facts

Like it or not, memorization is an important part of learning in school. Students need to memorize math facts, how words are spelled, historical dates, and other information. But memorizing information—like practicing skills—takes up valuable class time. Having students memorize facts for homework gives teachers more time during the school day for actual teaching. In addition, students don't always need a teacher's help to memorize information. Why waste the teacher's time with this type of schoolwork?

Organization and Planning

Homework can help kids learn how to organize and plan their time. Students with homework must set aside time to get it done. Other activities, like spending time with friends or watching TV, may have to wait until homework is done.

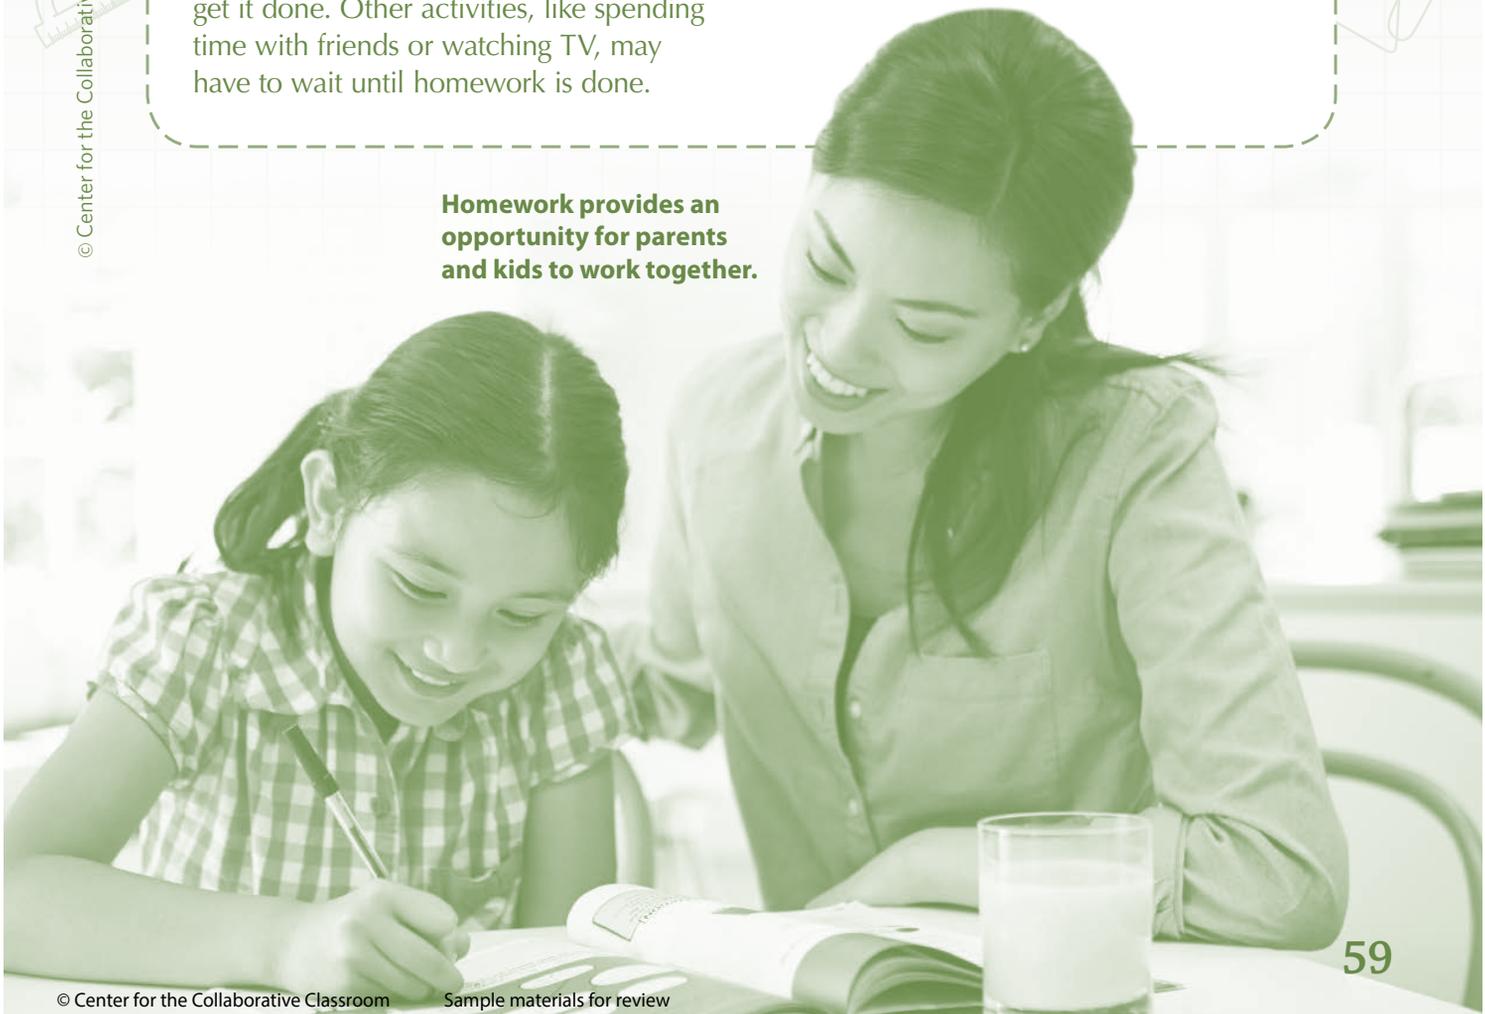

Homework also helps kids learn how to prioritize tasks—or decide which tasks must be done and in what order—and how to plan for how long each task should take. Skills like these are very important to academic success.

School and Home

Homework gives parents a chance to become more involved in their children's school lives. Parents can help with homework while talking with their kids about what they are learning. Parents can also make homework more fun and interesting, and they can help their children see the importance of the work they are doing.

So smile when you hear the word "homework." It's good for you!

Homework provides an opportunity for parents and kids to work together.

Homework—

Who Needs It?

Is homework good for kids? Do kids learn more if they do homework? Teachers, students, and parents have been debating these questions for years. Many studies have looked at the impact of homework on student learning, but there is no clear evidence that homework helps students learn more. In fact, one 2012 study found no significant relationship between time spent on homework and grades. That's one argument against homework, but it's not the only one. Let's take a look at some others.

Let Kids Be Kids

Students spend about seven hours a day in school. Most of that time they are thinking, listening, reading, and writing—pretty exhausting stuff! Kids have little time during the school day to relax or spend time with friends.

When children get home from school, they need time to unwind. They do not need to do more schoolwork! Most adults don't come home from a full day at work and do even more work for their job. So why should kids?

Kids need time to be kids after school.

Let Families Be Families

Homework is a burden for kids, but it can be a burden for moms and dads, too. After a long day, parents are tired. The last thing they want to do is to keep reminding their reluctant children, "Do your homework!" Homework can be confusing or difficult, and parents don't always have time to help. This means that kids must sometimes struggle through hard homework assignments on their own—and moms and dads are left feeling guilty for not helping. This is stress that busy families don't need.

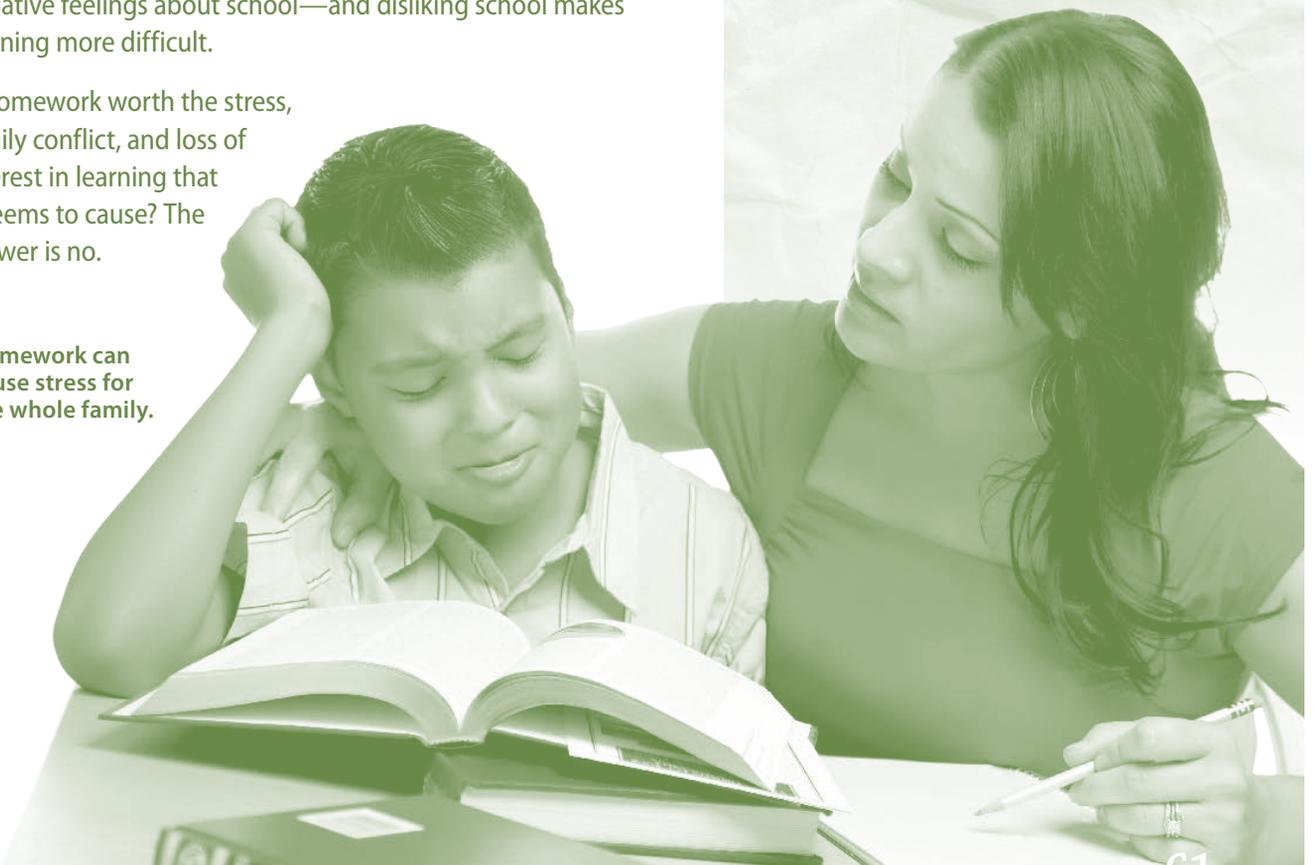

Families need time to do enjoyable things together. Many children and their parents say goodbye in the morning and often don't see each other again until after five o'clock. That leaves only a few hours for family time before going to bed. It's important for families to spend the little time they have together talking, reading, and doing things they all enjoy.

Who Likes Homework?

If you ask students if they like homework, many will probably say they do not. Because students associate homework with school, negative feelings about homework can turn into negative feelings about school—and disliking school makes learning more difficult.

Is homework worth the stress, family conflict, and loss of interest in learning that it seems to cause? The answer is no.

Homework can cause stress for the whole family.

A lifetime for an army ant is about three years.

Army ants are famous for their ability to work together to accomplish amazing things. They march along like soldiers, sometimes a million at a time. Nothing can stop them. When they come to a river, they make an “ant bridge” of themselves to get across. If the river is very wide, they form large “ant balls” and float to the other side. Army ants eat mostly insects, spiders and small animals, although they have been known to eat horses, cows and even tigers that are tied up or caged. People who live in areas with army ants have to leave their homes for a day or two when the ants come marching through. When they return their houses are completely free of rats, cockroaches, or other pests.

A lifetime for an elephant is about 65 years.

Elephants have feelings much like those you have. They make loud, joyful trumpeting sounds when they meet other elephants. They care for other elephants that are sick or injured. If a baby or friend dies, they show their sadness by refusing to eat or by moaning and crying. Elephants are among the few animals that weep tears when they are very, very sad. Although elephants are the largest animals on land, they don't kill or bother other animals. When ponds and streams dry up, elephants use their trunks to dig down to water. When they finish drinking, they let other animals drink. Without water these animals would die.

A lifetime for a saguaro cactus is about 100 years.

If water were money, the saguaro (sa-WAR-o) would be rich. The saguaro grows in the desert where it doesn't rain for eight or nine months at a time. The temperature can get as hot as 120° F. Most plants can't live in such a hot, dry place. But when it does rain, the saguaro saves as much as it can. It stores up to 250 gallons of water in its thick stem to keep it alive until the next rain. Where most plants can't grow at all, the saguaro thrives and grows up to 60 feet tall. The saguaro shares its wealth. Many desert animals depend on the saguaro for food and moisture. Native Americans who live in the desert use its juicy red fruit to make jam or syrup.

A lifetime for a hermit crab is about five years.

Hermit crabs are very good at taking action to make their lives better. Nature doesn't give them a shell for protection, so they find shells that are empty and recycle them. They use these shells like "motor homes" until the crabs get too big for them. Then they move into larger shells. Another neat trick of the hermit crab is to put a sea anemone on top of its shell. The poisonous arms of the anemone keep the octopus or squid from eating the crab for dinner. Since sea anemones can't move around very well by themselves, "piggy-backing" on the crab is a special treat that allows them to find food as the crab moves along.

Fable

The Young Rooster

by Arnold Lobel

A young Rooster was summoned to his Father's bedside.

"Son, my time has come to an end," said the aged bird. "Now it is your turn to crow up the morning sun each day."

The young Rooster watched sadly as his Father's life slipped away.

Early the next morning, the young Rooster flew up to the roof of the barn. He stood there, facing the east.

"I have never done this before," said the Rooster. "I must try my best." He lifted his head and crowed. A weak and scratchy croak was the only sound he was able to make.

The sun did not come up. Clouds covered the sky, and a damp drizzle fell all day. All of the animals of the farm came to the Rooster.

"This is a disaster!" cried a Pig.

"We need our sunshine!" shouted a Sheep.

"Rooster, you must crow much louder," said a Bull. "The sun is ninety-three million miles away. How do you expect it to hear you?"

Very early the next morning, the young Rooster flew up to the roof of the barn again. He took a deep breath, he threw back his head and CROWED. It was the loudest crow that was ever crowed since the beginning of roosters.

The animals on the farm were awakened from their sleep with a start.

"What a noise!" cried the Pig.

"My ears hurt!" shouted the Sheep.

"My head is splitting!" said the Bull.

"I am sorry," said the Rooster, "but I was only doing my job."

He said this with a great deal of pride, for he saw, far to the east, the tip of the morning sun coming up over the trees.

The Mouse at the Seashore

by Arnold Lobel

A Mouse told his mother and father that he was going on a trip to the seashore.

“We are very alarmed!” they cried. “The world is full of terrors. You must not go!”

“I have made my decision,” said the Mouse firmly. “I have never seen the ocean, and it is high time that I did. Nothing can make me change my mind.”

“Then we cannot stop you,” said Mother and Father Mouse, “but do be careful!”

The next day, in the first light of dawn, the Mouse began his journey. Even before the morning had ended, the Mouse came to know trouble and fear.

A Cat jumped out from behind a tree.

“I will eat you for lunch,” he said.

It was a narrow escape for the Mouse. He ran for his life, but he left a part of his tail in the mouth of the Cat.

By afternoon the Mouse had been attacked by birds and dogs. He had lost his way several times. He was bruised and bloodied. He was tired and frightened.

At evening the Mouse slowly climbed the last hill and saw the seashore spreading out before him. He watched the waves rolling onto the beach, one after another. All the colors of the sunset filled the sky.

“How beautiful!” cried the Mouse. “I wish that Mother and Father were here to see this with me.”

The moon and the stars began to appear over the ocean. The Mouse sat silently on the top of the hill. He was overwhelmed by a feeling of deep peace and contentment.

The Camel Dances

by Arnold Lobel

The Camel had her heart set on becoming a ballet dancer.

“To make every movement a thing of grace and beauty,” said the Camel. “That is my one and only desire.”

Again and again she practiced her pirouettes, her relevés, and her arabesques. She repeated the five basic positions a hundred times each day. She worked for long months under the hot desert sun. Her feet were blistered, and her body ached with fatigue, but not once did she think of stopping.

At last the Camel said, “Now I am a dancer.” She announced a recital and danced before an invited group of camel friends and critics. When her dance was over, she made a deep bow.

There was no applause.

“I must tell you frankly,” said a member of the audience, “as a critic and a spokesman for this group, that you are lumpy and humpy. You are baggy and bumpy. You are, like the rest of us, simply a camel. You are not and never will be a ballet dancer!”

Chuckling and laughing, the audience moved away across the sand.

“How very wrong they are!” said the Camel. “I have worked hard. There can be no doubt that I am a splendid dancer. I will dance and dance just for myself.”

That is what she did. It gave her many years of pleasure.

Possum's Tail

from Pushing Up the Sky by Joseph Bruchac

Possum's Tail

Cherokee

The Cherokee people originally lived in the area now known as the states of Georgia, Tennessee, and North Carolina. Because they adapted so quickly to the European way of life, they became known as one of the “civilized tribes.” However, long before the coming of Europeans they had a sophisticated form of government and lived in large, well-organized villages.

In the early 1800’s many Cherokee people were forced to leave their homes and move to Indian Territory by traveling the infamous Trail of Tears. Today Cherokee people live all over the United States, but their two contemporary tribal governments are in Oklahoma and North Carolina. Wily, wise Rabbit is still their favorite trickster character.

Characters

NARRATOR
BEAR
RABBIT
TURTLE
RACCOON
POSSUM
OTTER
CRICKET

Note: If more children wish to take part in the play, other animals, such as Deer, Owl, Chipmunk, Squirrel, Beaver, or Fox, can be represented as non-speaking parts.

Props/Scenery

The forest can be suggested by a painted backdrop or potted plants.

A bandage is needed for Possum's tail.

A medicine bottle or bowl is also needed for Possum's tail.

The oak tree for Scene III can be painted on a backdrop.

Costumes

Narrator wears a turban made of patterned cloth.

Animal roles can be represented by masks made from paper plates decorated with markers, yarn, cotton balls, beads, etc. The mask can be held by hand in front of the wearer's face or mounted on a handle like a fan.

Possum's furry tail can be made of dark socks stuffed with cotton and stitched together.

Possum's rattail for Scene III can be a long piece of rope.

Scene I: The Forest

A group of animals stands together.

NARRATOR: Long ago Possum had the most beautiful tail of all the animals. Everyone knew that was true. And if anyone didn't know, then Possum would tell him so.

BEAR: Tomorrow we will have a big meeting. Rabbit, you be the messenger. Go tell all the animals. We will meet at the big oak tree when Grandmother Sun rises up into the sky.

RABBIT: What will the meeting be about?

BEAR: We will decide that tomorrow.

TURTLE: Oh no, here comes Possum!

RACCOON: He is going to brag about his tail again. I can tell.

Possum enters and walks over to the other animals, holding his long tail in front of him.

POSSUM: Siyo! (see-yo) Hello! This day is beautiful. And so is my tail. Look at my beautiful tail.

OTHER ANIMALS: Siyo, Possum.

POSSUM: Did you say there would be a meeting tomorrow?

BEAR: Yes.

POSSUM: Then I should speak at the meeting.

TURTLE: Why?

OTTER: Turtle, don't ask him! He'll just talk about his—

POSSUM: Because of my beautiful tail. It is the most beautiful of all. It is not short like Bear's tail. It is long and silky. It is not stiff like Raccoon's tail. It is soft and lovely. It is not stubby like Rabbit's tail. It is fluffy and big. It is not ugly like Turtle's tail. It is pretty and nice.

(Possum can continue to improvise while Bear and Rabbit speak, saying "Isn't it beautiful?" etc.)

As Possum goes on talking, the other animals yawn and roll their eyes. One by one they fall to the ground and pretend to sleep. During this activity Rabbit taps Bear on the shoulder, and Rabbit and Bear step toward the audience. Possum does not notice, but keeps talking.

RABBIT: I have an idea about Possum.

BEAR: We should stuff moss into our ears so we cannot hear him?

RABBIT: No, I have a better idea than that. Let me whisper it to you.

Rabbit whispers into Bear's ear. Bear smiles and nods.

BEAR: That is a good idea.

Bear and Rabbit turn back toward Possum, who is still talking. The other animals are still pretending to sleep, but Possum doesn't notice.

RABBIT: Possum, you do have a beautiful tail.

POSSUM: Yes. That is true. Shall I tell you about it?

BEAR: No! I mean, not now.

RABBIT: We have decided that you should be the first speaker at the big meeting tomorrow.

POSSUM: Of course. That is true. The one with the most beautiful tail should always speak first.

RABBIT: Possum, your tail should look its best for the meeting.

POSSUM: Of course. That is true. My tail should look its best.

RABBIT: I will take you to Cricket. He will put some special medicine on your tail. Then your tail will be ready for the meeting.

POSSUM: Of course. That is true. Let us go to Cricket.

Possum and Rabbit go offstage together. The other animals open their eyes and sit up.

RACCOON: Oh, no!

OTTER: If Possum's tail is made more beautiful, he'll never stop talking.

TURTLE: Otter is right. We'll all have to move away to escape his bragging.

BEAR: Don't worry. Rabbit has a plan.

Scene II: Another Part of the Forest

Cricket crouches on the ground.

RABBIT: Cricket, I want you to put some of your special medicine on Possum's tail.

POSSUM: Yes. That is true. I want my tail to look even more beautiful.

CRICKET: Rabbit, do you mean my special medicine?

RABBIT: Yes, I mean your special medicine.

POSSUM: Hurry up. I want you to fix my tail.

CRICKET: I will fix it. (Cricket pretends to apply medicine to Possum's tail from either a bottle or a bowl.) This medicine will make your tail look as it has never looked before.

POSSUM: Will everyone notice it?

CRICKET: Oh yes, everyone will notice it. (Cricket wraps a bandage around Possum's tail.) Now you must keep this old snakeskin wrapped around your tail all night. Do not take it off until you are at the meeting.

Scene III: The Forest, Near the Big Oak Tree

All the animals are gathered in a semicircle. Possum's tail is still wrapped in the snakeskin.

BEAR: Possum will open our meeting.

RABBIT: Everyone, pay attention.

POSSUM: Siyo, everyone. I have been asked to speak today because of my tail. It is the most beautiful of all. Here, let me show you how beautiful it is.

Possum unwraps his tail. It now looks like a big rat's tail, but Possum does not notice.

RACCOON: Look at Possum's tail!

POSSUM (still showing off the tail without looking at it): Yes. Look at my tail. Look at how beautiful it is.

TURTLE: It has no hair at all!

OTTER: It is really ugly.

RACCOON: It is funny looking.

The animals begin to laugh. Possum looks at his tail and sees that it has no hair.

POSSUM: My tail! Cricket has ruined it!

Possum sits down on the ground, closes his eyes, and then rolls onto his back with his feet up in the air. He stays there until all the other animals have gone. Then he gets up and runs away.

NARRATOR: So it is that Possum now has the ugliest tail of all the animals. Ever since that time, whenever Possum meets another animal, he closes his eyes, rolls over on his back, and pretends to be dead until the other animal goes away. And Possum no longer brags about his tail!

Assessment Overview

The assessments that accompany the Making Meaning® Teacher’s Manual and Vocabulary Teaching Guide lessons are designed to help you (1) make informed instructional decisions as you teach the Making Meaning program, and (2) track and evaluate your students’ reading comprehension, social development, and vocabulary knowledge over time. For descriptions of these assessments, see “About Comprehension and Social Skills Assessments” on the next page and “About Vocabulary Assessments” on page xix.

As you teach the lessons in the Teacher’s Manual and the Vocabulary Teaching Guide, an assessment icon (📄) will alert you whenever an assessment is suggested. If you are using the Digital Teacher’s Set, you can tap the assessment icon to open the CCC ClassView™ assessment app.

Everything you need to conduct each assessment, including instructions and forms, can be found in this book or can be accessed through the CCC ClassView app (classview.org). Printable forms are also available on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

You may choose to record your students’ progress using forms copied from this book or printed from the CCC Learning Hub, or you may choose to enter the information electronically using the CCC ClassView app (for more information, see “CCC ClassView App” below).

CCC ClassView App

CCC ClassView is an online application that contains all of the same assessment forms and instructions that are included in this Assessment Resource Book. This tool also enables you to electronically collect, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student. When conducting the assessments, you can enter data directly into the CCC ClassView app and then generate reports on the progress of individual students and the class as a whole.

You can access the CCC ClassView app by tapping the assessment icons or links in the Digital Teacher’s Set, by going directly to the app (classview.org), or by clicking the CCC ClassView button on the grade-level program resources page on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). For more information about this assessment tool, view the “Using the CCC ClassView App” tutorial (AV41).

About Comprehension and Social Skills Assessments

The assessments that accompany the Making Meaning Teacher’s Manual include both formative and summative assessments. These assessments enable you to track and evaluate your students’ progress and needs, unit by unit and across the year.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students’ academic and social growth over time, through class observation and individual conferences. Formative assessments in the program include class assessments and IDR conferences.

Class Assessment

The Class Assessment is designed to help you assess the performance and needs of the whole class. As you teach the lessons, a Class Assessment Note in the Teacher’s Manual will alert you when an assessment is suggested. These notes occur about once per week, during a time in the lesson when the students are demonstrating their use of the strategies they have learned to make sense of text.

During the class assessment, you have the opportunity to randomly observe students working in pairs or individually (select strong, average, and struggling readers) as you ask yourself questions that focus your observations. Each Class Assessment Note in the Teacher’s Manual has a corresponding “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA) where you can record your observations. The record sheet reiterates the suggestions from the Teacher’s Manual for how to proceed with the instruction based on your observations.

IDR Conferences

The form is titled "Unit 2 Visualizing IDR Conference Notes - CN2". It includes fields for "Student's name", "Date", "Text title", "Text level", and "Leveling system". The form is divided into four numbered sections, each with a "YES" checkbox and a "NOTES" column:

- 1 Initiate the Conference: Ask: What is your (book) about so far? • Is the student able to tell what the text is about?
- 2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud: Does the student: • Attend to meaning? • Read fluently? • Pause and reread if having difficulty? • Read most words accurately? • Try to make sense of unfamiliar language? Ask: What is the part you just read about? • Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?
- 3 Discuss the Text: Ask comprehension questions. • Is the student comprehending the text?
- 4 Discuss Text Level: Ask: Do you think this (book) is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that? • Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text? • Is this text at the right level for this student?

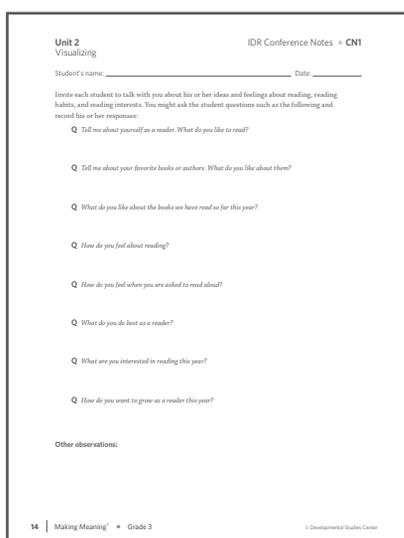

At the bottom, there is a "Next steps" section. The footer includes "© Developmental Studies Center" and "Grade 3 • Making Meaning | 15".

IDR conferences provide you with the opportunity to talk with individual students about their reading, identify areas of strength, and note areas in which students need more support. As you teach the lessons, an IDR Conference Note in the Teacher's Manual will alert you when a conference is suggested. Initially, your individual student conferences will focus on getting to know the students as readers and on ensuring that they are reading appropriately leveled texts (for more information, see “Student Reading Goals and Interests Survey” below). As the year progresses, the IDR conferences focus more on assessing the students’ comprehension, supporting students’ reading growth, and encouraging self-monitoring (for more information, see “Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences” on the next page).

You can document your observations and suggestions that result from each conference on an “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN). We recommend that you document at least one IDR conference per student per unit. The “IDR Conference Class Record” sheet (CR1) is provided for you to record the dates you confer with each student over the course of the year (see page 145).

You will refer to the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheets to help you evaluate each student’s comprehension development in the Individual Comprehension Assessment that occurs at the end of Units 2–8. For more information, see “Individual Comprehension Assessment” on page ix.

The form is titled "Unit 2 Visualizing IDR Conference Notes - CN1". It includes fields for "Student's name" and "Date". The instructions state: "Invite each student to talk with you about his or her ideas and feelings about reading, reading habits, and reading interests. You might ask the student questions such as the following and record his or her responses:"

- Q Tell me about yourself as a reader. What do you like to read?
- Q Tell me about your favorite books or authors. What do you like about them?
- Q What do you like about the books we have read so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about reading?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read aloud?
- Q What do you do best as a reader?
- Q What are you interested in reading this year?
- Q How do you want to grow as a reader this year?

There is a section for "Other observations:". The footer includes "14 | Making Meaning • Grade 3" and "© Developmental Studies Center".

Student Reading Goals and Interests Survey

The questions provided in the first “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet can be used as a beginning-of-year survey of your students’ reading goals and interests. After you have conferred with all of your students, we recommend that you review the students’ responses to the questions and look both for patterns across the class and for individual comments that stand out to you. For example, you might note authors, book series, and genres the students are interested in reading and whether the students enjoy reading. The information you gather can help you plan instruction in the coming months.

After analyzing your students’ responses, you might share with the class what you have learned about them as readers and how you plan to help them build their love of reading over the course of the year. For ideas on how to facilitate a class discussion about the survey, see the extension “Discuss the Students’ Reading Goals and Interests” on page 61 of the Teacher’s Manual.

The questions in the final IDR Conference Note of the year can serve as an end-of-year survey of your students’ perceptions of their growth as readers, a measure of their attitudes toward reading, and a summary of their goals for summer reading. After you have conferred with your students, you might share the information from the end-of-year survey with them, compare it with the information from the beginning-of-year survey, and discuss how the students’ attitudes toward reading have changed.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences In Units 2–8, you will use a unit-specific “Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences” to guide you as you confer (see pages 11–13). This resource sheet outlines a process you can use when conferring with your students about their independent reading. It includes questions you can ask to help you probe the students’ thinking about what they are reading and to assess the students’ comprehension of their texts. It also includes suggestions for supporting the students’ reading growth. Each section of the resource sheet has a corresponding section in the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN), where you can record notes and observations as you confer.

Unit 2
Visualizing

IDR Conference Notes

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2), see page 15.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your book about so far?
If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student’s thinking:

Q Why did you choose this book?
Q Do you like this book? Why or why not?
Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?
Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3. If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

IDR Conference Notes

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the content and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

Q What do you visualize (picture in your mind) as you read these words?
Q What has happened in the story so far?
Q What part have you found interesting or surprising?
Q What do you think will happen next?
Q What have you learned about a character/topic?
Q What are you wondering about?
Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

Q Do you think this book is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?
Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many reasons and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Summative assessments enable you to evaluate and measure the comprehension and social development of each student. Summative assessments include the Social Skills Assessment and the Individual Comprehension Assessment.

Social Skills Assessment

Social Skills Assessment Record (SS1)

Use the following rubric to score each student.

1 = does not implement
2 = implements with support
3 = implements independently

	UNIT 2	UNIT 3	UNIT 4	UNIT 5	UNIT 6	UNIT 7	UNIT 8	UNIT 9	UNIT 10	UNIT 11	UNIT 12
Participates in partner work and class discussions
Follows classroom procedures (e.g., gathers responsibility, follows classroom literacy and independent reading procedures)
Uses "Turn to Your Partner" and "Think, Pair, Share" (e.g., poses partner, listens attentively, contributes ideas about the reading, questions, or topic)
Explains thinking
Listens respectfully to others
Reflects on own behavior
Takes responsibility for learning and behavior (e.g., during peer-teach, partner work, and IDR)
Shares partner's thinking with the class
Takes turns talking and listening
Uses discussion prompts (e.g., to build on one another's thinking)
Contributes ideas that are different from other people's ideas
Agrees and disagrees respectfully
Gives reasons to support thinking
Asks clarifying questions
Uses "Think, Pair, Write" (e.g., thinks publicly, shares with a partner, individually writes own thoughts)

The Social Skills Assessment enables you to assess how well each student is learning and applying the social skills taught in the program and how well each student integrates the values of responsibility, respect, fairness, caring, and helpfulness into his or her behavior. As you teach the lessons, a Social Skills Assessment Note in the Teacher's Manual will alert you when a social skills assessment is suggested. We recommend that you do this assessment three times: at the beginning, middle, and end of the year. The "Social Skills Assessment Record" sheet (SS1) allows you to track how individual students are doing with specific skills during the course of the year (see page 144).

Individual Comprehension Assessment

The Individual Comprehension Assessment is designed to help you assess the strategy use and comprehension development of individual students. It is administered once per unit in Units 2–8. The "Individual Comprehension Assessment" record sheet (IA) consists of two sections—Part A: Strategy Assessment and Part B: IDR Assessment—and reflection questions to help guide your assessment of each student's growth.

Part A: Strategy Assessment The Strategy Assessment section helps you analyze each student's independent strategy work on four activities completed during the unit. The four activities include two student response activities (usually focusing on strategy work with a read-aloud text) and two reading journal activities (asking the students to apply the unit's strategy work to their independent reading). Teacher Notes in the Teacher's Manual identify which activities will be assessed in that unit's Individual Comprehension Assessment. Examples of a student response activity, a journal entry, and an annotated Strategy Assessment rubric are provided for each unit as models to help you score your students' work using the rubric.

Part B: IDR Assessment The IDR Assessment section helps you assess each student's comprehension using a rubric that identifies various behaviors the students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. During the assessment, you will review the information you have collected on the student's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheets and think about the student's participation during class discussions and IDR. To complete the assessment, you will use the information to determine whether the student shows evidence of actively engaging with and making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student's reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student's attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Next steps:

24 | Making Meaning® • Grade 3 © Developmental Studies Center

Analyzing the information in the IDR Assessment rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading and will help you evaluate the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify areas in which you can focus your instruction to support the student’s reading growth (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies). For information about supporting your students’ reading growth, see “Reading Development” on page xiii.

Examples of an annotated “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and an annotated IDR Assessment rubric are provided for each unit as models to help you analyze your students’ reading comprehension using the rubric.

Reflection The Reflection section of the IDR Assessment provides questions that help you reflect on the instructional support you provided to the student during the unit, the student’s ability to read and comprehend text, and what you would like to focus on during the next unit’s IDR conferences. Space is provided for recording observations and suggestions for future instruction.

The information from the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” and “IDR Conference Notes” record sheets constitutes a record of each student’s development over the unit. If you wish to use the Individual Comprehension Assessment as a basis for assigning a grade, the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet includes instructions for calculating an overall unit score. We recommend that progress in the Making Meaning program be determined by an increase in scores over time, rather than by each unit’s score. The assumption is that each student is growing into a strong reader at his or her own pace.

You can use the “Individual Comprehension Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR2) to create a cumulative record of each student’s scores on the assessment during the year. Space is provided on the record sheet for you to write comments about the student’s performance and suggestions for additional support. You can use the “Individual Comprehension Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR2) to record and track your students’ progress as a class.

To learn more about using the Individual Comprehension Assessment, view “Using the Individual Comprehension Assessment” (AV31).

Student Reading Level Summary

In addition to the Individual Comprehension Assessment, you may wish to use other informal and formal tools to assess your students’ comprehension of text (for example, running records and benchmark assessments). Regardless of which assessment tool(s) you use, it is important to monitor and record the students’ progress across the year. The “Student Reading Level Summary” record sheet (SR1) can be used to record individual students’ reading assessment data. You might wish to use the information recorded to discuss your students’ reading growth with their families, to inform your instruction, and to help support individual students in their growth as readers.

Overview of Grade 3 Assessments

The table below provides an overview of the comprehension and social skills assessments in grade 3 of the Making Meaning program. The squares indicate the units in which a particular assessment can be found.

Individual Assessment Folders

We recommend that you create a folder for each student in which to store the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” and “IDR Conference Notes” record sheets. You may also want to make copies of each student’s assessed student response activities and reading journal entries and file these in the student’s assessment folder. Periodically, you can use the materials in the folder to discuss the student’s progress with the student, as well as with parents and other adults in the school. The folders can travel to the next grade with the students.

Reading Development

Young students learn to read by being read to, by acquiring letter–sound and sight–word knowledge, and by exploring text—lots of text. They love to reread their favorite books and engage in rhyming activities, and it is through these and other activities that they begin to understand that print carries meaning. Young students read books in a variety of ways, such as by retelling familiar stories in their own words and by telling stories as they refer to the pictures. As the students’ knowledge of letter–sound correspondence develops and they grow a sight–word base, they begin to read the words on the page. With much practice, their reading starts to become more automatic. They focus less on decoding individual words and more on the meaning of the text.

The “Stages of Reading Development” chart starting on the next page shows the stages through which students commonly progress on their way to becoming independent and critical readers. Note that because reading development is a continuum, students may display behaviors from multiple stages at any given time as they encounter new and more complex texts. For each stage, the chart gives approximate Guided Reading Levels and lists behaviors students may display at each stage of development. The chart also lists ways you can support students at each stage.

Some of the characteristics identified in the chart appear at multiple stages (for example, “understands that print carries a message,” “reads with expression,” and “recognizes letters and letter–sound relationships”). This ongoing development of skills is to be expected as students begin to make connections between the spoken and written word and the many nuances of the English language.

You might use the information in the “Stages of Reading Development” chart in conjunction with the information you gather from the Individual Comprehension Assessment to discuss your students’ reading growth with their families, to inform your instruction, and to help support individual students as they become independent readers. Keep in mind that each student will progress through these stages at his or her own pace.

Stage 2

Emergent Reader

Approximate Guided Reading Levels

- A-B

Characteristics

- Relies on the pictures to gather information about a story's meaning
- Understands that print carries a message
- Understands directionality and other familiar concepts of print
- Tracks words on the page by pointing to words as he or she develops one-to-one matching
- Is developing a larger sight-word vocabulary
- Recognizes letters and attends to letter-sound relationships
- Shows familiarity with rhyming and beginning sounds

Support

- Read and reread books from a variety of genres.
- Read books that are predictable and have repetition, and encourage the student to join in with you.
- Read rhyming books.
- Point to each word as you read books aloud to the student.
- Talk about stories and pictures in the stories.
- Ask the student questions about stories before, during, and after reading.
- Reinforce concepts of print (e.g., word boundaries, directionality, and one-to-one correspondence between the written and spoken word).
- Work on phonics and phonological awareness.
- Help the student segment spoken words into individual sounds and blend the sounds into whole words.
- Expand vocabulary by talking about words.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently or with peers.
- Encourage the student to write every day (independently or through dictation).
- Encourage parents or other family members to read aloud to the student every day.

Stage 3

Early Reader

Approximate Guided Reading Levels

- B-J/K

Characteristics

- May still rely on pictures to gather information about a story's meaning
- Points to words only when a problem is encountered
- Is continuing to develop his or her sight-word vocabulary
- Is beginning to notice errors and attempts to correct them
- Is beginning to use more than one strategy to problem-solve unknown words (e.g., decoding, using context clues and/or picture clues, rereading)
- Is beginning to attend to punctuation and use expression while reading familiar texts
- Is beginning to self-monitor reading (e.g., asking questions to check for understanding during reading, predicting what will happen, summarizing what was read)

Support

- Read and reread books from a variety of genres.
- Ask the student questions about stories before, during, and after reading.
- Talk about stories and pictures in the stories.
- Work on phonics and phonological awareness.
- Listen to the student read books that he or she can read successfully.
- Encourage the student to read familiar texts with expression.
- Help the student locate words that he or she knows.
- Expand vocabulary by talking about words before reading the text.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently or with peers.
- Encourage the student to write every day (independently or through dictation).
- Encourage parents or other family members to read aloud to the student every day.

Stage 4	Transitional Reader
	Approximate Guided Reading Levels
	Characteristics
	Support

- J/K–M/N

Characteristics

- Relies less on pictures to gather information about a story’s meaning and more on the text
- Uses more than one strategy to problem-solve unknown words (e.g., decoding, analyzing word parts, using context clues and/or picture clues, rereading)
- Consistently notices and then self-corrects errors
- Is continuing to expand vocabulary, which allows him or her to focus more on meaning
- Attends to punctuation and reads familiar text with phrasing and expression
- Begins to engage in silent reading
- Consistently self-monitors reading (e.g., asking questions to check for understanding during reading, predicting what will happen, summarizing what was read)

Support

- Encourage the student to choose books that he or she can read successfully.
- Encourage the student to read silently for longer periods of time.
- Engage the student in conversations about what he or she has read.
- Work with the student on deciphering longer words by analyzing word parts.
- Work on developing fluency.
- Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently.
- Encourage the student to write every day.
- Encourage parents or other family members to read aloud to the student every day and engage in discussion as they read.

(continues)

Stages of Reading Development (continued)

Fluent/Independent Reader

Approximate Guided Reading Levels

- M/N-V/W

Characteristics

- Selects a variety of “just-right” texts for varying purposes
- Uses multiple strategies to problem-solve unknown words quickly
- Self-corrects all significant errors quickly (e.g., using strategies such as decoding, analyzing word parts, using context clues and/or picture clues, rereading)
- Reads a variety of genres such as fiction, nonfiction, fantasy, mystery, poetry, etc.
- Reads orally with expression and at an appropriate rate
- Reads silently most of the time
- Consistently self-monitors reading (e.g., asking questions to check for understanding during reading, predicting what will happen, summarizing what was read)

Support

- Make sure the student has access to a wide variety of reading materials that he or she can read successfully and that will challenge him or her to think critically.
- Engage the student in conversation about what he or she has read.
- Ask the student questions that encourage him or her to analyze the text or generate questions about the text.
- Read the first few chapters of a book with the student; discuss characters, plot, and setting.
- Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently.
- Encourage the student to write about what he or she has read.

About Vocabulary Assessments

The assessments that accompany the Vocabulary Teaching Guide lessons help you evaluate your students' knowledge of the words they are learning and track your students' progress throughout the year. In grade 3, both formative and summative assessments are included.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students' vocabulary growth through class observation and support you in differentiating instruction, as necessary.

Class Vocabulary Assessment

Week 2 Vocabulary		Class Vocabulary Assessment Record - CA1
Observe the students and ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
• Are the students able to act out the words and choose the appropriate word to complete each sentence?
buttle lounge ruckus
squim unkily
• Does their discussion of the words indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
• Do they enjoy learning and using new words?
Other observations:
Suggestions Use the following suggestions to support struggling students: • If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model. • If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking a question that requires the student to talk about the word in terms of her own experiences.

Grade 3 • Making Meaning | 151

The Class Vocabulary Assessment is designed to help you evaluate the performance and needs of the whole class. This assessment occurs every two weeks, beginning in Week 2, during the ongoing review activity. A Class Vocabulary Assessment Note in the Vocabulary Teaching Guide will alert you when an assessment is suggested. During the assessment, you will have the opportunity to observe the students and ask yourself questions about their understanding of the words, as well as note their use of words outside of vocabulary time and their enthusiasm for learning words. Each Class Vocabulary Assessment Note has a corresponding "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1) on which you can record your observations. The record sheet includes the questions from the assessment note and provides suggestions for students who are struggling with words.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Summative assessments enable you to evaluate and score each student’s knowledge of the words taught during the vocabulary lessons.

Individual Vocabulary Assessment

Week 4 Vocabulary		Individual Vocabulary Assessment • IA1
Name: _____	Date: _____
Word Check 1: I'm Thinking of a Word Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.
1.	heartbreaking	speedy	bewildered
2.	plop	bustle	volunteer
3.	debris	speedy	unlikely
4.	snap	squirm	clutch
5.	flutter	fury	whoop
6.	flick	whiz	ruckus
7.	devastate	lounge	swerve
8.	rap	dodge	utter

156 | Making Meaning

The Individual Vocabulary Assessment is designed to help you assess individual students’ knowledge of the words. This assessment occurs after weeks 4, 8, 12, 16, 20, 24, 28, and 30 and focuses on words taught during the previous four weeks (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). An Individual Vocabulary Assessment Note in the Vocabulary Teaching Guide will alert you when the assessment is suggested.

The Individual Vocabulary Assessment is a multiple-choice assessment that uses activity formats such as “Which Word Am I?” and “I’m Thinking of a Word” that are familiar to the students from the weekly lessons.

Each assessment includes a teacher instruction sheet and an answer key. The students record their answers on the corresponding “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check” answer sheet (IA1). We recommend that you discuss each item with the students after they have completed the assessment. Suggested follow-up questions that require the students to explain their thinking are provided on each instruction sheet. The instruction sheet also includes suggestions for scoring and assigning grades to the assessment.

You can use the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1) to create a cumulative record of each student’s scores on the assessment throughout the year. Space is provided on the record sheet for you to write comments about the student’s performance and suggestions for additional support. You can use the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1) to record and track your students’ progress as a class.

To learn more about using the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, view “Using the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” (AV51).

Student Self-assessment

Week 4 Vocabulary Student Self-assessment = SA1

Name: _____ Date: _____

Which Words Do I Know?

Word	yes	maybe	no

Making Meaning | 159

The Student Self-assessment empowers the students to become partners in their own assessment by giving them the opportunity to evaluate their understanding of the words they are learning. The assessment can also be used to identify which words the students need to practice and review further. We recommend that the Student Self-assessment be administered in place of or in addition to the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, with the students assessing their knowledge of a set of words you select. A Student Self-assessment Note during Ongoing Review will alert you when the assessment is recommended.

The Student Self-assessment includes a “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1), on which the students record whether they know what a word means (“yes”), whether they think they know what a word means (“maybe”), or whether they do not know what a word means or cannot remember (“no”). The assessment also includes instructions for preparing and conducting the assessment, as well as suggestions for how to use the results to help students identify which words they are struggling with and to support the students in reviewing those words.

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are able to visualize, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students are able to visualize, check in with students who are struggling. You might ask them to reread descriptive words or phrases and then close the book and describe what they see in their minds, or you might ask them to act out part of the story briefly.
- If only a few students are able to visualize, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative book before continuing on to Day 4. ## Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN2); see page 15.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text's genre. You might ask questions such as:

Q What do you visualize (picture in your mind) as you read these words?

Q What has happened in the story so far?

Q What part have you found interesting or surprising?

Q What do you think will happen next?

Q What have you learned about a [character/topic]?

Q What are you wondering about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student's reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Student's name: _____ Date: _____

Invite each student to talk with you about his or her ideas and feelings about reading, reading habits, and reading interests. You might ask the student questions such as the following and record his or her responses:

Q Tell me about yourself as a reader. What do you like to read?

Q Tell me about your favorite books or authors. What do you like about them?

Q What do you like about the books we have read so far this year?

Q How do you feel about reading?

Q How do you feel when you are asked to read aloud?

Q What do you do best as a reader?

Q What are you interested in reading this year?

Q How do you want to grow as a reader this year?

Other observations:

Student's name: _____ Date: _____

Text title: _____ Text level: _____ Leveling system: _____

1 Initiate the Conference

Ask: What is your [book] about so far?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Does the student:

YES

- Attend to meaning?
- Read fluently?
- Pause and reread if having difficulty?
- Read most words accurately?
- Try to make sense of unfamiliar language?

Ask: What is the part you just read about?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

3 Discuss the Text

Ask comprehension questions.

YES

- Is the student comprehending the text?

4 Discuss Text Level

Ask: Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you— not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

YES

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 22–24. If you would like to record your assessment data electronically, go to classview.org to learn how you can access the Making Meaning assessments using the CCC ClassView app.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “How I Visualized Cherries and Cherry Pits” and “Excerpt from Cherries and Cherry Pits” on pages 2–3
- “How I Visualized Aunt Flossie's Hats (and Crab Cakes Later)” on page 4

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write about the passage in the book that you visualized. Describe what you pictured in your mind when you read that passage. Include the title of the book and the author's name in your entry.
  - Prompt: Write about the passage in the book that you visualized. Describe what you pictured in your mind when you read that passage. Include the title of the book and the author's name in your entry.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet, along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity:

“How I Visualized Aunt Flossie’s Hats (and Crab Cakes Later)”

How I Visualized Name: Sarah

Aunt Flossie’s Hats (and Crab Cakes Later)

Draw a part of the story you visualized clearly.
Describe what you drew on the lines below.

The dog just rescued the hat and I drew the river going all around him. The hat has yellow and pink flowers. They were going to get crab cakes when the hat was lost so I drew crab cakes leading to more crab cakes.

Commentary: Sarah's Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to visualize part of a text that is read aloud as well as texts read independently. She included details from the book Aunt Flossie's Hats (and Crab Cakes Later) in her drawing, such as pink and yellow flowers on the hat. The student was also able to write about what her drawing showed (the dog rescuing the hat from the river and the idea that the family was on their way to get crab cakes). Sarah's journal entry indicates that she was able to visualize part of her IDR book. She included a description of the part of the book she pictured.

Commentary: Analysis of Sarah’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicates that she comprehends text much of the time. She is reading most words fluently but struggled with uncommon words (Connecticut, Meriden). She asked for help rather than trying to figure out the words using word-analysis strategies. She was able to tell about her book and answer some comprehension questions about it. She visualized a section of the book (when Nana brought a car full of food to their house). This book is at the right level for Sarah, but she should be reminded to use self-monitoring strategies as she reads to check her comprehension of the book.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 35.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What has happened in the story so far?
- Q What do you think will happen next?
- Q What part have you found interesting or surprising?
- Q What have you learned about the characters so far? What clues in the story helped you?
- Q What are you wondering about the characters?
- Q What is the problem the main character is having in this story? What has happened so far with this character and this problem? How does the problem get solved?
- Q What is the setting of the story?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 42–44.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Character Web for Grace” on page 7
- “Double-entry Journal About Nicky” on page 8

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write about an inference you made about the main character in your book and at least one clue in the story that helped you make the inference. Include the title of the book and the author's name in your entry.
  - Prompt: Write about the main character's problem in the book you are reading and at least one clue in the story that helped you learn about the problem. Include the title of the book and the author's name in your entry.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Commentary: Caleb's Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is able to make inferences about characters in stories read aloud and independently almost all of the time. He was able to infer that at the beginning of the story The Raft, the main character, Nicky, was not happy about going to stay with his grandmother. Caleb noted that by the end of the book Nicky was happy that he was just like his grandmother. Caleb's journal entry indicates that he is able to make an inference about a main character in a book read independently. He named the character (Gloria) and stated that he thought she was clever. He included a reason why he thought she was clever (she used a mirror to shine the light of the sun into Julian's window).

Commentary: Analysis of Caleb’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he is able to understand text almost all of the time. He is asking questions about unknown words (Smokey the Bear) and pausing and rereading when he comes across words he cannot decode (inconvenient). He is able to answer comprehension questions about the text and make a prediction about what he thinks will happen next (Huey will jump out of the swing and get hurt). This book seems too easy for Caleb. He might benefit from reading a slightly more challenging text.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 53.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What do you know about the characters?
- Q What is the setting of the story?
- Q What is the problem the main character is having in this story? What has happened so far with this character and this problem? How does the problem get solved?
- Q What part have you found interesting or surprising?
- Q What are you wondering about?
- Q What questions did you have as you were reading? Were these questions answered by the story?
- Q What do you visualize (see, hear, and feel) as you read these words?
- Q What do you think will happen next?
- Q What is something you have learned about [a character/a topic]?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 60–62.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Stop and Ask Questions About _____” on page 16
- “Stop and Ask Questions About Brave Irene” on page 17

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write about a question you had about your book as you were reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the story is about, the question you had, and what you found out about that question. If you did not find out anything about the question, write how you would answer the question right now and what in the story makes you think that.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity: "Stop and Ask Questions About Brave Irene"

Stop and Ask Questions Name: Marisol About Brave Irene

At each stop, write your questions in the box.

STOP 1 Will Irene give up and go home?
Will the dress fall out of the box and get ruined?

STOP 2 Can she make it to the ball?
Is she scared?

STOP 3 Will the duchess be mad that Irene doesn't have her dress?
Is Irene's mom worried about her?

STOP 4 Isn't the dress wet?
Will her mom come and get her?

Unit 4 • Week 4 • Day 1

Reading journal entry 1

Reading Journal

Name: Marisol Date: 12/2

I am reading Flat Stanley by Jeff Brown. It's about a boy named Stanley. A bulletin board falls on him and makes him flat. Before I started reading, I wondered if Stanley was always flat. I learned that he was not. The bulletin board falls on him and that is what makes him flat.

Commentary: Marisol’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to use wondering/questioning to help her better understand a text almost all of the time. She was able to write questions that were pertinent to the reading at each stop of a text read aloud. Marisol’s journal entry includes a sentence that explains that the book is about a boy named Stanley who is flattened by a bulletin board. She also included something she wondered about the story (I wondered if Stanley was always flat). She found out through her reading that Stanley was not always flat.

Commentary: Analysis of Marisol’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that she is able to understand text almost all of the time. She is using strategies such as rereading and asking herself questions when she doesn’t understand what she read (asked about the meaning of parcel and reread to understand the word jostled). She is also noticing when she makes an error when reading aloud (misread the word apologize and self-corrected). Marisol is also using other strategies such as sounding out words by breaking them into syllables to help her read unfamiliar words (apologize). She was able to tell about her book and answer comprehension questions about it. While Marisol is enjoying this book, she should be encouraged to read more challenging texts.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 71.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What do you know about the characters?
- Q What is the setting of the story?
- Q What is the problem the main character is having in this story? What has happened so far with this character and this problem? How does the problem get solved?
- Q What part have you found interesting or surprising?
- Q What are you wondering about?
- Q What questions did you have as you were reading? Were these questions answered in the story?
- Q What do you visualize (see, hear, and feel) as you read these words?
- Q What do you think will happen next?
- Q What is something you have learned about [a character/a topic]?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 78–80.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Double-entry Journal About Wilma Unlimited” on page 24
- “Double-entry Journal About Sonia Sotomayor” on page 27

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, something you learned from the text, and something the text made you wonder.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, something you learned from the text, and something the text made you wonder.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

This text is at the right level for Ahmed. There is some challenging vocabulary, but he is using learned strategies to help figure out the words and their meanings.

Commentary: Analysis of Ahmed’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he is able to understand text almost all of the time. He rereads and asks for help when he doesn’t understand what he read (asked about the meaning of ritziest and reread to understand the word scrounged). Ahmed is also reading unfamiliar words by identifying base words and sounding them out (scrounged). He was able to tell about his book, answer comprehension questions about it, and predict what he thinks will happen next. This book is at the right level for Ahmed, and he should be encouraged to read more books like it.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 89.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Based on the [title, subtitle, and headings], what information might you find in this [book]?
- Q What are you learning about the topic of this [book]?
- Q What is one text feature on this page that adds to your understanding? What information does this feature give you?
- Q Why do you think the author included [captions]?
- Q What questions do you have at this point about this topic?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 96–98.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Three Things I Learned from Text Features in the Articles” on page 33
- “Recipe with Text Features” on page 46

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the book you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the book is about, and what you learned from the part of the book you read today. Also include one text feature you used and describe what you learned from it.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name. Explain what the text is about and what you learned in the part of the text you read today. Also list the text features you noticed and describe one thing you learned from a text feature.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

(continues)

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity:
“Three Things I Learned from Text Features in the Articles”

Three Things I Learned from Text Features in the Articles

Name: Shruthi

What information can you find in the text features in the articles on pages 34-39? Write three things you learned.

I learned that the first “Jump-Rope-A-thon” was held in March 1978. I learned that hopscotch courts in France are shaped like snails. I learned that Japan is made up of four big islands.

Unit 6 • Week 3 • Day 4

Reading journal entry 1

Reading Journal

Name: Shruthi Date: 2/16

I am reading Firefighters to the Rescue! by Bobbie Kalman. It is about firefighters. I learned that fire stations have many rooms. Some have kitchens, gyms, and offices. I read the captions under the photos. I learned that the room where the firefighters sleep is called the dormitory.

She was able to explain three things she learned from text features in the articles discussed as a class. In her journal entry, Shruthi identified a text feature from her independent reading (captions) and told what she learned from it.

Commentary: Analysis of Shruthi’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that she comprehends text almost all of the time. When she misread the word hoses, she realized immediately that what she read did not make sense, went back to the beginning of the sentence to reread, and made the self-correction. She is also using text features to help her understand the text (used the labeled illustration to verify what a nozzle is). She was able to tell about what she has read about so far in her book, answer comprehension questions about it, and tell what she learned from reading the text. While Shruthi is interested in this topic, she would benefit from reading a slightly more challenging text.

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are able to articulate what they learned and generate questions, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students are able to articulate what they learned and generate questions, proceed with the lesson and plan to monitor and support students who are having difficulty with the strategy during independent reading. You might have each student read a short passage from his book aloud to you and ask him questions such as:
  - Q What information in the part you just read was new to you?
  - Q What questions do you have about this part?
  - Q What does it make you wonder?
- If only a few students are able to articulate what they learned and generate questions, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative book before continuing on to Day 4. Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Grade 3 Alternative Texts” list.

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are the students able to generate questions about the reading?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are their questions relevant to the book?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are able to generate relevant questions, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are able to generate relevant questions, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative book before continuing on to Day 4. ## Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 107.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text's genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What did you wonder about the topic of this [book] before you began reading?
- Q What have you learned about the topic so far?
- Q Have any of the things you wondered about the topic been explained in your reading? If so, what have you found out?
- Q What questions do you have about the topic at this point?
- Q What text features have you noticed? How have they helped you understand the information in the text?
- Q Why do you think the author included [captions]?
- Q What did you visualize, or see in your mind, as you read about [volcanoes]? How did visualizing help you make sense of the text?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [volcanoes] from this part of the [book]? What clues helped you make that inference?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student's reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 114–116.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “What I Wonder About My Text” on page 49
- “Double-entry Journal About ‘Polar Bears in Peril’” on page 53

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, one question you wrote on a self-stick note as you were reading, and what, if anything, you found out about that question. If the text does not discuss the question, write something else you learned.

If the text does not discuss the question, write something else you learned.*
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity:
"Double-entry Journal About 'Polar Bears in Peril' "

Unit 7 • Week 3 • Day 3	What I Wonder I wonder why the ice is important.  What will happen to the polar bears if all of the sea ice melts?  How do they rescue the polar bears?	What I Learned I learned that the summer sea ice could all melt by 2050.  I learned that polar bears need the ice to find seals to eat. ### Reading journal entry 1

Reading Journal

Name: Wyatt Date: 4/1

The book I am reading is What Makes a Bird a Bird? by May Garelick. This book is about the different ways you can tell if an animal is a bird. On the page with the ostrich, I wondered if there are other birds that can't fly. On the next page, I found out that penguins are birds that can't fly.

Commentary: Wyatt’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is using the comprehension strategy of wondering/questioning to help him understand texts he hears read aloud and texts he reads independently. He was able to write an “I wonder” statement after previewing the title and headings of an article. He was also able to write two additional questions about the article and two sentences explaining what he learned from the article.

Commentary: Analysis of Wyatt’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he comprehends text almost all of the time. When he encountered the unfamiliar words brittle and molt, he paused because he didn’t know the meanings of the words. He continued to read and noted that the words were defined in the next sentence. He was able to tell what his book was about (“how you can tell if an animal is a bird”) and what the passage he read aloud was about (“The one thing that makes a bird a bird is feathers”). Wyatt was able to explain what he learned from the text (“just because an animal flies and lays eggs doesn’t mean it’s a bird”). While Wyatt enjoyed this text, he would benefit from reading a more challenging text. He can also continue to use text features to support his comprehension and think about questions he has when he reads.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 127.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What did you wonder about this [book] before you began reading?
- Q Have any of the things you wondered about been explained in your reading? If so, what have you found out?
- Q What is something you have learned about [a character/a topic]?
- Q What are you wondering now?
- Q What do you think is important to understand and remember from the part you just read? Why do you think that idea is important?
- Q What is the problem the main character is having in this story? How do you think the problem will be solved?
- Q What do you visualize (see, hear, and feel) as you read these words?
- Q What do you think will happen next?
- Q What do you think might be a theme in this story? What in the story makes you think so?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

1 Initiate the Conference

Ask: What is your [book] about so far?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Does the student:

YES

- Attend to meaning?
- Read fluently?
- Pause and reread if having difficulty?
- Read most words accurately?
- Try to make sense of unfamiliar language?

Ask: What is the part you just read about?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

3 Discuss the Text

Ask comprehension questions.

YES

- Is the student comprehending the text?

4 Discuss Text Level

Ask: Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

YES

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 134–136.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Think and Write About Hermit Crabs” on page 68
- “Think and Write About a Theme in Keepers” on page 83

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the book you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the story is about; what you think is a theme, or lesson, in the story; and one example from the story that supports that theme. If you have not yet noticed a theme in the story, write about an important idea in the part you read today and include a sentence explaining why you think it is important.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the book you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the book is about, an important idea in the part you read today, and a sentence explaining why you think it is important.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity:
"Think and Write About a Theme in Keepers"

Think and Write Name: Madison
About a Theme in Keepers

What do you think is a theme, or message or lesson, in this story? What in the story makes you think that? Write your ideas on the lines below.

I think a theme in the story is that you don't have to buy people gifts to make them feel special. I think that because Kenyon invited all of Dolly's friends to her house for a party and made her a book instead of buying her a present. After all of her friends left the house, Dolly said that was the best birthday she'd ever had.

Reading journal entry 2

Reading Journal

Name: Madison Date: 5/13

I am reading the book Starring Grace by Mary Hoffman. This book is about a girl named Grace and her friends. They play together at Grace's house every day during summer vacation. One important idea in the part I read today is that Nana finds an advertisement for the circus. I think it's important because seeing the advertisement is what makes Grace and her friends pretend to be circus performers.

Commentary: Madison’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to identify themes and important ideas in texts she hears read aloud and texts she reads independently. She was able to identify a theme in a story discussed as a class (you don’t have to buy people gifts to make them feel special) and provide evidence from the story to support her thinking (Dolly said that was the best birthday she’d ever had). In her journal entry, Madison wrote about an important idea from the part of the book she read (Nana finds an advertisement for the circus) and explained why she thought that was an important idea (seeing the advertisement is what makes Grace and her friends pretend to be circus performers).

When she encountered the unfamiliar words and phrase hesitant, bloodcurdling, and soul in torment, she stopped to ask what they meant. She was able to tell what her book is about so far (“It’s about a girl named Grace and her friends. They have lots of adventures during their summer vacation”). She was also able to explain what the passage she read aloud is about (“The kids are playing ghostbusters. They go into the neighbor’s backyard to see if the house is haunted”). Madison was able to answer comprehension questions about the text and explain what she learned about a character (“Grace is very creative. She comes up with lots of ideas for games to play”). Madison might enjoy other books about the same character.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Assessing Student Reading Level

Assessing individual students' reading levels throughout the year is critical for providing students with appropriate texts for independent reading and for grouping students for small-group instruction. The "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheet can be used to record individual students' reading assessment data that you have obtained using informal or formal assessments of your choice.

USING THE STUDENT READING LEVEL SUMMARY

- ✓ Make a class set of "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheets (SR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 143. If you would like to record your assessment data electronically, go to classview.org to learn how you can access the record sheet using the CCC ClassView app.
- ✓ Collect any reading assessment data that you have obtained for each student (e.g., observation notes, running records, or record sheets from formal assessments).
- ✓ For each student, record the data you have collected about his or her reading behavior in the appropriate boxes on the "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheet (SR1). We recommend entering the data in whatever way will be most helpful to you when analyzing the student's progress and instructional needs. In the "Comments" sections, you might enter notes about the text used for each assessment (e.g., whether it is fiction or nonfiction, how many lines of text are on a page, or how much support is provided by the illustrations), observations about the student's reading behavior, and notes about future instruction for the student.
- ✓ If you choose to enter this data directly into the CCC ClassView app, the information will appear in each student's Student Profile. From there, the data can be shared digitally with parents, colleagues, and administrators.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking a question that requires the student to talk about the word in terms of her own experiences.

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice through an activity modeled on "Act Out the Words" (see Week 2, Day 5, Step 2).

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1

Before continuing with the week 5 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 1–4.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 156. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheets (SR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 224. Use this sheet to record each student’s scores from Word Checks 1–8 over the course of the year.
- ✓ Make a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 226. Use this sheet to record the scores of all of the students in the class across the year.
- ✓ If the students are not familiar with the assessment’s multiple-choice format, you might make a copy of the answer sheet (IA1) and display it where everyone can see it. While conducting the assessment, you might point to each vocabulary word as you pronounce it. You might discuss the first few clues as a class and model circling the answers. This copy of the answer sheet is also useful for discussing the activity after the students have completed it.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: heartbreaking, speedy, or bewildered.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “I’m Thinking of a Word” on page 155.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

(continues)

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students' understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [bewildered] describes someone who isn't sure what to eat for breakfast?
  - Q What do you know about the word [heartbreaking/speedy]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.
3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 1" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

I'm Thinking of a Word

1. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe someone who isn't sure what to eat for breakfast.
Q Which word am I thinking of: heartbreaking, speedy, or bewildered? (bewildered)
2. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe what you do when you are in a hurry to get somewhere.
Q Which word am I thinking of: plop, bustle, or volunteer? (bustle)
3. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe a race car.
Q Which word am I thinking of: debris, speedy, or unlikely? (speedy)
4. I'm thinking of a word that tells what you do when you grab your hat so it won't blow away.
Q Which word am I thinking of: snap, squirm, or clutch? (clutch)
5. I'm thinking of a word that describes what you might do when your team wins a game.
Q Which word am I thinking of: flutter, fury, or whoop? (whoop)
6. I'm thinking of a word that tells what a dog does when it races through the house, chasing a cat.
Q Which word am I thinking of: flick, whiz, or ruckus? (whiz)
7. I'm thinking of a word that describes what you do when you are tired and lie down to relax.
Q Which word am I thinking of: devastate, lounge, or swerve? (lounge)
8. I'm thinking of a word that tells what you do when you move to avoid an oncoming snowball.
Q Which word am I thinking of: rap, dodge, or utter? (dodge)

Word Check 1: I'm Thinking of a Word

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	heartbreaking	speedy	bewildered
2.	plop	bustle	volunteer
3.	debris	speedy	unlikely
4.	snap	squirm	clutch
5.	flutter	fury	whoop
6.	flick	whiz	ruckus
7.	devastate	lounge	swerve
8.	rap	dodge	utter

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 5 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 159. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word’s meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see “Retaining the Words” in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice in using the word by reviewing the word's meaning and then asking a question that requires the student to talk about the word in terms of his own experiences.

- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice in using the word by having the students play the activity "Which Word Am I?" (See Week 5, Day 5, Step 2.)

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2

Before continuing with the week 9 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 5–8.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 165. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ If the students are not familiar with the assessment’s multiple-choice format, you might make a copy of the answer sheet (IA1) and display it where everyone can see it. While conducting the assessment, you might point to each vocabulary word as you pronounce it. You might discuss the first few clues as a class and model circling the answers. This copy of the answer sheet is also useful for discussing the activity after the students have completed it.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “Which Word Am I?” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and they will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: immense, floppy, and ghastly.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “Which Word Am I?” on page 164.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say [floppy] describes a soft teddy bear?
  - Q What do you know about the word [floppy]?

(continues)

2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.
3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 2" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.

2. I'm how you might describe a town that has been struck by a tornado.

Q Which word am I: savory, fortunate, or disaster? (disaster)

3. I'm a synonym for the word remember.

Q Which word am I: recall, retrieve, or command? (recall)

4. I'm what a bunch of quarters does when they fall on the floor.

Q Which word am I: realize, clatter, or reunite? (clatter)

5. I'm how you might describe an angry cat.

Q Which word am I: fierce, doubtful, or nifty? (fierce)

6. I'm an antonym of the word talkative.

Q Which word am I: unfortunate, particularly, or speechless? (speechless)

7. I'm how you might describe a huge mountain in the forest.

Q Which word am I: ungrateful, magnificent, or cross? (magnificent)

8. I'm what someone might do when they are very, very excited.

Q Which word am I: celebration, dazzle, or quiver? (quiver)

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3

Before continuing with the week 13 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 9–12.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 174. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and they will circle the vocabulary word that makes the most sense as the missing word.
3. Explain that one of these words is the missing word in the first sentence: roam, barricade, or cling. Then read sentence number 1 aloud, saying “blank” for the missing word. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 173.)
4. Have the students circle the word that makes the most sense as the missing word.
5. Follow the same procedure with the remaining sentences.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [barricade] is the missing word?

- Provide further practice in using the word through a game modeled on "Is Olive Gruff?" (see Week 15, Day 1, Step 8).

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4

Before continuing with the week 17 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 183. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and they will circle the vocabulary word that makes the most sense as the missing word.
3. Explain that one of these words is the best ending for the first sentence: snug, memorable, or gruff. Then read sentence number 1 aloud twice, saying “blank” for the missing word. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 182.)
4. Have the students circle the word that makes the most sense for the missing word.
5. Follow the same procedure with the remaining sentences.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [customary] is the missing word? What do you know about the word [customary]?
  - Q What can you tell me about the word [mighty/graceful]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

(continues)

3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 4" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

What's the Missing Word?

1. Wearing a warm jacket on a cold winter day would make you feel _____.
Q What's the missing word: snug, memorable, or gruff? (snug)
2. Jamal is excited to go camping and can't wait to go hiking, fishing, and rock climbing. Jamal is _____.
Q What's the missing word: flimsy, adventuresome, or flabbergasted? (adventuresome)
3. The toddler was crying throughout the night. Her mother coaxed her to sleep by saying "Hush little babe. Don't _____."
Q What's the missing word: fret, long, or cherish? (fret)
4. Everyone was looking at the big, bright rainbow. The rainbow was _____.
Q What's the missing word: astounding, flimsy, or gruff? (astounding)
5. The wind was so strong that it blew the roof off the house. The wind was _____.
Q What's the missing word: delirious, intense, or lively? (intense)
6. A few of Carly's teammates were late for practice. Her coach called for attention and said, "Some players are running late but practice must _____."
Q What's the missing word: strain, adjust, or commence? (commence)
7. When you throw yourself into learning how to play an instrument, you must _____.
Q What's the missing word: persist, advise, or slog? (persist)
8. When you go to the park, throwing your garbage on the ground is _____.
Q What's the missing word: impermissible, permissible, or exhilarated? (impermissible)

Name: _____ Date: _____

Word Check 4: What's the Missing Word?

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	snug	memorable	gruff
2.	flimsy	adventuresome	flabbergasted
3.	fret	long	cherish
4.	astounding	flimsy	gruff
5.	delirious	intense	lively
6.	strain	adjust	commence
7.	persist	advise	slog
8.	impermissible	permissible	exhilarated

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 17 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 186. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word's meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see "Retaining the Words" in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by having the students play “Imagine That!” (see Week 1, Day 5, Step 2).

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5

Before continuing with the week 21 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 17–20.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 192. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: challenge, texture, or determination.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “I’m Thinking of a Word” on page 191.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [texture] is the way something feels when you touch it?
  - Q What do you know about the word [challenge/determination]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

I'm Thinking of a Word

1. I'm thinking of a word that tells how something feels when you touch it.
Q Which word am I thinking of: challenge, texture, or determination? (texture)
2. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe Sunday family dinners at your house.
Q Which word am I thinking of: graceful, durable, or customary? (customary)
3. I'm thinking of a word that describes two objects that do not look or feel the same.
Q Which word am I thinking of: energize, differ, or abandon? (differ)
4. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe running in the sprinklers on a hot day.
Q Which word am I thinking of: appetizing, refreshing, or hazardous? (refreshing)
5. I'm thinking of a word that describes how you might feel as you are wrapped up in a blanket on your bed.
Q Which word am I thinking of: original, secure, or successful? (secure)
6. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe a beautiful sunset.
Q Which word am I thinking of: spectacular, convenient, or unexpected? (spectacular)
7. I'm thinking of a word you might use to describe a person who stays up late every night to build a dollhouse.
Q Which word am I thinking of: unsuccessful, plain, or industrious? (industrious)
8. I'm thinking of a word that tells what you might do when you listen carefully for a noise in your backyard.
Q Which word am I thinking of: detect, achieve, or abandon? (detect)

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6

Before continuing with the week 25 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 21–24.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 201. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: threatened, skillful, or diverse.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “I’m Thinking of a Word” on page 200.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [skillful] describes someone who is very good at gymnastics?
  - Q What do you know about the word [threatened/diverse]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. - If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice in using the word through a game modeled on "Is Olive Gruff?" (see Week 15, Day 1, Step 8).

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7

Before continuing with the week 29 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 210. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and they will circle the vocabulary word that makes the most sense as the missing word.
3. Explain that one of these words is the best ending for the first sentence: silky, diligent, or frank. Then read sentence number 1 aloud twice, saying “blank” for the missing word. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 209.)
4. Have the students circle the word that makes the most sense for the missing word.
5. Follow the same procedure with the remaining sentences.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [diligent] is the missing word? What do you know about the word [diligent]?
  - Q What can you tell me about the word [silky/frank]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

(continues)

3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 7" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

Name: _____ Date: _____

Word Check 7: What's the Missing Word?

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	silky	diligent	frank
2.	collaborate	permit	unwind
3.	improvise	boast	evacuate
4.	overwhelmed	aggressive	considerate
5.	contentment	task	brainstorm
6.	stressful	disorganized	unaggressive
7.	valuable	self-confident	headstrong
8.	stressful	well-organized	silky

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 29 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 213. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

(continues)

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word's meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see "Retaining the Words" in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Which Words Do I Know?

Word	yes	maybe	no

Observe the students and ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Do the students' responses indicate that they understand the words' meanings?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are they able to use the words to explain their thinking?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are they using the words they have learned this year in their writing and in conversations outside of vocabulary time?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, incorporate the word into one or more of the other activities used to review words this week.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8

Use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8 to assess each student's understanding of a representative set of words chosen from across the year.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 218. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that they will think more about some of the words they learned this year by playing the game “Which Word Am I?” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: reluctant, flabbergasted, and gruff.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “Which Word Am I?” on page 217.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students' understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [gruff] describes a person who blows their top and is mean to you?
  - Q What do you know about the word [reluctant/flabbergasted]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

(continues)

3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 8" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support and for continued growth during the summer.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

Which Word Am I?

1. I'm how you describe a person who blows his top and is mean to you.

Q Which word am I: reluctant, flabbergasted, or gruff? (gruff)

2. I'm what you do when you turn your bike quickly to avoid hitting a rock.

Q Which word am I: swerve, recall, or prowl? (swerve)

3. I'm a birthday party with friends and family.

Q Which word am I: skill, celebration, or debris? (celebration)

4. I'm how you describe an animal that is being hunted by a predator.

Q Which word am I: ungrateful, secure, or threatened? (threatened)

5. I'm what you do when you grip tightly onto the bars of a jungle gym.

Q Which word am I: cling, reunite, or snap? (cling)

6. I'm how you describe a brave hero in a story who goes on an exciting journey.

Q Which word am I: convenient, adventuresome, or savory? (adventuresome)

7. I'm a yummy smell coming from the kitchen.

Q Which word am I: task, texture, or aroma? (aroma)

8. I'm what a magnificent bird does when it flies by very fast.

Q Which word am I: whoosh, clatter, or persist? (whoosh)

3.	skill	celebration	debris
4.	ungrateful	secure	threatened
5.	cling	reunite	snap
6.	convenient	adventuresome	savory
7.	task	texture	aroma
8.	whoosh	clatter	persist

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Use the final Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they have learned this year, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice for continued growth during the summer.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words across the year. For a representative set of words, you might choose one or two words from Weeks 1–4, one or two words from Weeks 5–8, etc. If you administered Word Check 8, you might select words not included in that assessment. We suggest that you include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 221. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.

West Contra Costa Unified School District

Jennifer Brock
Betty Buginas
Jeanie Hedeem
Nina Morita
Linda Takimoto

In addition, we wish to thank the teachers, principals, and district leaders who participated in the yearlong field testing of the program in the following school districts:

Albany Unified School District, Albany, California
Elgin Unified School District, Elgin, Illinois
Newark Unified School District, Newark, California
West Contra Costa Unified School District, El Cerrito, California

Special thanks to the many teachers in the following districts for providing advice, feedback, student writing samples, and other significant contributions during the revision of the program, and to the teachers who appear in the professional development videos associated with this program, listed on the following page.

Introduction

We all dream of sending our elementary school students on to middle and high school with a love of writing; an ability to write clearly, creatively, and purposefully for sustained periods of time; and a familiarity with the crafts and conventions of writing in the major genres. We want them to approach writing with confidence and understand that writing, first and foremost, is communication. In pursuing this dream, we ask ourselves: What are the most important things for students to learn about writing during their elementary school years? What writing experiences are most important for students to have? The Being a Writer™ program is our carefully researched, fully articulated answer to these key questions.

The Being a Writer program is a yearlong writing curriculum for kindergarten through grade 6 and the first program of its kind to bring together the latest research in teaching writing with support for students' social and ethical development. The program marries a writing process approach with guided instruction, providing a clear scope and sequence to ensure that your students learn the important elements of writing at their grade level. This all happens in the context of a caring classroom community—so crucial to motivating and inspiring students to grow as writers, thinkers, and principled people. As members of the community, the students learn and act on the values that govern the community (responsibility, respect, caring, fairness, and helpfulness). They practice the skills and dispositions they need to bring these values to life in their daily interactions.

New to the Second Edition

In this second edition of the Being a Writer program, we have added content, assessments, and technology features designed to support your teaching and your students' writing and social development. These include:

- New Open Day and Writing Throughout the Week activities that supplement instruction at grades K–2
- A fifth day of instruction each week at grades 3–5
- New or revised Opinion Writing units at grades K–5 and a new Argumentative Writing unit at grade 6
- New Writing About Reading supplemental activities in which the students write opinions in response to literature
- New family letters in English and Spanish
- Enhanced lesson support for teaching writing skills and conventions

- An expanded Skill Practice Teaching Guide and Student Skill Practice Book at grades 1–6
- Print and digital teacher’s manuals with links to professional development media and lesson resources
- New and expanded writing assessments
- An online assessment tool, the CCC ClassView™ assessment app, for capturing and synthesizing assessment data
- A Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide that prepares students for standards-based writing performance tasks at grades 3–6
- Online, interactive whiteboard activities
- Additional support for incorporating technology through tips, tutorials, extension activities, and mini-lessons

You will find more information about new content, assessments, and technology features in the pages that follow.

Unique Pedagogy

The program’s unique pedagogy grows out of years of research on writing and child development. It focuses on character education and social and ethical development and supports teachers both as writers and as teachers of writing.

RESEARCH BASED/CLASSROOM TESTED

We have drawn on two decades of research in the areas of writing, motivation and learning theory, and social and ethical development to develop the Being a Writer program. In the 1980s, a major study of various modes of writing instruction showed that a writing process approach combined with clear objectives and opportunities for peer interaction produced an effect 22 times greater in students’ pretest–posttest writing quality than approaches characterized by lecture, teacher-only feedback, and writing assignments imitating patterns or following rules. Interestingly, the study also found that positive feedback (commenting exclusively on what writers had done well, rather than on their shortcomings) produced far greater effects in student writing than did negative feedback (Kelley 2002).

A meta-analysis published in 2007 identified the following as key elements of effective instruction (Graham and Perin 2007):

- Process writing approach
- Collaborative writing tasks
- Study of models
- Writing strategies

- Specific product goals
- Prewriting
- Inquiry activities

Additional work by researchers and leaders in the field, including Atwell, Calkins, Fletcher, and Graves,* supports these findings and also emphasizes the following as ways to improve students' writing practice and attitude:

- Teacher and peer conferences
- Classroom discussion
- Writing for real audiences and purposes
- Student self-assessment
- Regular periods of writing
- Choice of writing topics

The Being a Writer program has been developed in consultation with an advisory board of teachers (of varied backgrounds and experience) who piloted lessons and gave us extensive feedback to assure that the program addresses the needs of all students, is easy to implement, and fits into the language arts block.

DUAL FOCUS: ACADEMIC AND SOCIAL/ETHICAL LEARNING

Child development research tells us that children learn and grow best in environments where their basic psychological needs are met. Children need to feel physically and emotionally safe. They need to feel that they belong. They need to have a sense of themselves as autonomous and capable. Studies indicate that when these basic needs are met at school by helping students experience a sense of community, the students do better academically (as measured over time by grades and test scores), exhibit more pro-social tendencies, and show greater resistance to problem behaviors such as drug use and violence (Durlack et al. 2011).

The Being a Writer program helps you take deliberate steps to create a classroom writing community where your students feel empowered, supported in taking risks, and responsible to themselves and the group. The program weaves cooperative learning, social skill instruction, and discussion of values throughout the writing lessons.

TEACHER SUPPORT

The program is designed to help you hone your skills both as a teacher of writing and as a writer yourself. Detailed, easy-to-follow lesson plans include suggestions for managing the writing process, facilitating discussions, assessing the class, and conferring with individual students. Teacher Notes and references to professional development media throughout the lessons explain the underlying pedagogy of various activities and provide examples of what might happen in the classroom. The weekly Teacher as Writer section helps you cultivate your own writing voice while deepening your appreciation for what the students are asked to do in the program. ## Program at a Glance

The following sections describe the program components, writing development across the grades, and a typical daily lesson.

PROGRAM COMPONENTS

The Being a Writer program includes:

- Teacher’s Manual, two volumes per grade
- About 20–30 children’s trade books per grade to inspire students and model good writing
- Student Writing Handbook, one for each student (at grades 2–6), containing excerpts, practice activities, a spelling word bank, and proofreading notes
- Wipe-off boards and markers, one set for each student (at grades K–1), to use during Guided Writing Practice
- Assessment Resource Book (at grades K–6), containing information and record sheets to assess writing and social skill development for individual students and the class
- Skill Practice Teaching Guide (at grades 1–6), containing mini-lessons to supplement instruction in skills and conventions in the program
- Student Skill Practice Book, one for each student (at grades 1–6), containing additional skill practice activities to be used in conjunction with the lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide
- Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide (at grades 3–6), containing lessons to prepare students for standards-based writing performance tasks
- Digital Teacher’s Set, with digital versions of the Teacher’s Manual, Skill Practice Teaching Guide, Assessment Resource Book, and Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide
- Access to online resources via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org), such as interactive whiteboard activities, assessment forms, reproducibles, and professional development media
- Access to the CCC ClassView app (classview.org), which allows for electronic recording, sorting, synthesizing, and reporting of assessment data for individual students and the whole class

For more information about the print format of the Teacher’s Manual, see the “Getting Started with Your Print Teacher’s Manual” tutorial (AV81). For more information about the digital format, see the “Getting Started with Your Digital Teacher’s Set” tutorial (AV72).

ALIGNMENT WITH STANDARDS

The Being a Writer program develops students' abilities to draft, research, revise, discuss, proofread, and publish writing in narrative, informative/explanatory, and opinion genres. The program's focus on conversations about literature and the writing process, along with its teaching of social skills such as speaking clearly, listening to others, and asking questions about others' writing also addresses standards for speaking and listening. For more about how the program aligns to specific state standards, see the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

A TYPICAL DAILY LESSON

Lessons are generally divided into three sections: Getting Ready to Write, Writing Time, and Sharing and Reflecting.

- Getting Ready to Write. Most direct instruction happens during this section of the lesson. The students gather to hear and discuss a read-aloud, brainstorm ideas for writing, participate in shared or modeled writing, discuss how they will work together, or “quick-write” (participate in short, whole-class writing exercises in grades 3–6).
- Writing Time. During this period of sustained writing, you have the opportunity to write with the students, observe and assist as needed, and confer with individual students or pairs.
- Sharing and Reflecting. Students share and reflect on their writing and social interactions in this section. They listen to and express their appreciation for one another's writing. They discuss what is working in their partnerships, what problems they are encountering, and what they can do to avoid those problems in the future.

EXTENDING THE INSTRUCTION

In addition to the core lessons, the program features several opportunities to extend instruction:

- Open Days and Writing Throughout the Week. In grades K–2, each week of instruction includes one to two open days. On these days, you might consider teaching a Writing Throughout the Week activity. The activities provide ideas such as expanding on a writing idea from the week’s lessons, offering an additional writing idea related to the week’s read-aloud, or asking the students to engage in a different kind of writing (for example, writing opinions about a text, making lists, or engaging in an interactive writing activity), to supplement the instruction provided in the core lessons. Alternatively, you might use open days to provide your own writing instruction.
- Writing About Reading. These activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they hear and discuss in the Being a Writer program. Although the activities are optional, they provide a valuable opportunity for your students to practice writing opinions in response to texts, and we encourage you to do them. These activities can be done at the end of a lesson or at another time.

The Writing About Reading activities build in complexity across grades. In grades K–2, the students write personal opinions in response to texts. Starting in grade 1, the students are expected to provide reasons to support their opinions. In grade 3, in addition to writing about personal opinions, the students begin to more closely analyze the texts, backing up inferences with textual references. In grades 4–6, the latter is the primary focus of the Writing About Reading activities.

- Extensions. These activities provide additional learning opportunities that enhance the instruction in the core lessons. Examples of extensions include exploring text features, discussing authors’ use of language, and using technology to learn about an author or to publish work for an audience beyond the classroom. These activities can be done at the end of a lesson or at another time.
- Technology Mini-lessons. These ten mini-lessons encompass such topics as digital citizenship, online safety, word processing, and research skills. See “Technology Mini-lessons” on page xlvi for more information.

Understanding the Program

The Being a Writer program helps students develop as writers and as caring, collaborative people. This dual focus is based on two beliefs: that students' academic learning flourishes when social learning is integrated into the curriculum and that we are called on as educators to help students develop as whole people—academically, socially, and ethically.

Focus on Writing

Students spend their first few, precious years as writers in our classrooms. As elementary students, they are at the very beginning of their lifelong careers as writers. Learning to write is like learning to master other means of communication. Command of the written word, like command of the piano, oil paints, conversational French, or advanced mathematics, relies less on innate talent than on years of steady practice and encouragement.

MOTIVATION AND CREATIVITY

To get enough sheer practice writing during their elementary school years, students need to really, really want to write. Thus, all instruction in writing process, craft, skills, and conventions in this program grows out of the need to tap into students' intrinsic desire to express themselves and to be understood.

Throughout the program, read-alouds of exemplary writing stimulate the students' imaginations and fuel their motivation to write. Reading about professional authors helps students learn that creativity can be gloriously messy and that writers write to satisfy themselves first. In Being a Writer, students have a great deal of choice about what to write—even when writing about assigned topics, they draw on their unique experiences and interests to address those topics. Formal skill instruction is delayed in each unit so that students can focus initially on just getting their ideas onto paper. However, basic writing mechanics and skills are taught early in kindergarten and grade 1. (See “Flexible Approach to Skill Instruction” on page xxiii for suggestions about how to integrate skills instruction with the core lessons.)

THE BEGINNING OF WRITING (K-2)

Early writing develops on a foundation of oral language, drawing, and phonics instruction. In kindergarten, grade 1, and at the beginning of grade 2, we create many opportunities for students to draw and tell their stories and to see writing modeled. The students see you model thinking aloud about what to write and draw; writing letters, words, and sentences; using standard sentence punctuation; and rereading your writing.

As students become familiar with concepts of print, they begin to understand that marks on a page communicate meaning. They start to draw pictures, write symbols, and eventually form letters and sentences to tell their stories.

To help young students begin to communicate in writing as quickly as possible, it is necessary to provide early instruction in basic conventions of writing, such as writing from left to right and inserting spaces between words. In kindergarten and grade 1, the Guided Writing Practice and Shared Writing opportunities impart this instruction.

- Guided Writing Practice. During Guided Writing Practice in the early units of kindergarten and grade 1, you will model writing letters, words, and simple sentences as the students practice writing on individual wipe-off boards. During the practice, sentence starters like “I see _____” generate practice sentences quickly while connecting to the week’s read-aloud text and writing topic. When the students write their own stories, they may use the sentence starters they practiced or begin their stories in any way they choose. This practice ensures that beginning writers get the support they need, while more experienced writers have important skills reinforced.
- Shared Writing. During Shared Writing time, which occurs throughout the year, you elicit the students’ ideas to write a shared story about a topic. As you write, you model thinking aloud about getting ideas, adding details to the story, and using skills and conventions such as capitalizing sentences and proper nouns, punctuating the ends of sentences, and writing complete sentences. The shared writing activities can be adapted as interactive writing activities. Rather than you writing the students’ suggestions, invite student volunteers to come to the board and write individual letters, words, or sentences as they are able. Then have the students return to their seats for independent writing.

We assume that the students are receiving separate phonics instruction alongside this writing program, including instruction about concepts of print (such as learning letter names and recognizing upper- and lowercase letters), phoneme segmentation, sight word recognition, and letter formation. Throughout the primary grades, we suggest that you model writing using letter–sound relationships that the students have learned during phonics instruction.

The program structure at grades K–2 supports students in learning the basic skills they need to communicate in writing. Because this skill instruction is cumulative and builds on prior learning, we designed the units at these grades to be taught sequentially.

WRITING PROCESS, GENRE, AND CRAFT (3–6)

While students informally draft, revise, and publish their writing at grades K–2, it is not until grade 3 that the writing process becomes central to their writing. After being formally introduced to the writing process at the beginning of the year, students in grades 3–6 repeatedly engage in the cycle of prewriting, drafting, revising, proofreading, and publishing as they participate in the genre units.

The genre units, which focus on personal narrative, fictional narrative, expository (or informative) nonfiction, functional (or explanatory) nonfiction, opinion/argumentative writing, and poetry, immerse the students in authentic representative literature by having them hear, read, and discuss good examples of each genre. They learn about elements of a genre as they brainstorm ideas, quick-write, and write multiple drafts. After this immersion and drafting phase, each student selects a draft to develop and revise for publication in the class library. The students spend the later weeks of each genre unit revising, proofreading, publishing, and sharing their pieces from the Author’s Chair.

The genre units at grades 3–6 may be taught in any order, although we recommend that the expository nonfiction unit be taught later in the year due to its greater academic and social demands.

SKILLS AND CONVENTIONS

The first several weeks of the program are an immersion period during which the students are introduced to the lesson structure and cooperative learning skills, and develop their motivation and stamina for writing. This immersion period is about inspiring good ideas and getting those ideas—in whatever form—onto paper. Students’ motivation to learn the conventions of written English (beyond the basic writing skills discussed previously for K–2 students) grows out of their desire to communicate clearly with their readers in their published pieces. Grammar, usage, punctuation, capitalization, and some spelling skills are taught in the program after the students have had ample time to draft their ideas.

FLEXIBLE APPROACH TO SKILL INSTRUCTION

At grades K–2, most skill instruction occurs during the shared or modeled writing portions of the lesson, while at grades 3–6, most skill instruction occurs during the revision and proofreading phases of the writing process.

Additional instruction and practice in skills and conventions, and language skills assessments for grades 1–6 are provided in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide and the accompanying Student Skill Practice Book.

The program allows you to choose one of two possible approaches to teaching the skill lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide. You might choose to teach the 30 lessons in sequence, or you might teach specific skills when they naturally support the writing being done in a particular genre (for example, the need to punctuate speech arises when writing fiction, while learning to use conjunctions is appropriate for connecting ideas in nonfiction). Skill Practice Notes refer you to specific lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide that provide further instruction or practice with a skill. For more information, see the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

At all grades, we assume that there is a separate spelling program in place to provide students with formal instruction in spelling patterns, inflectional endings, roots, syllabication, and other aspects of spelling.

The Grade 3 Skills and Conventions table on the following page shows where skills and conventions for your grade level are taught directly in the core lessons and suggestions for where they might be practiced. To see analogous information for other grade levels, see Appendix D: “Skills and Conventions Tables.”

THE 6+1 TRAIT® WRITING MODEL AND THE BEING A WRITER PROGRAM

The goals of the Being a Writer program correlate closely to those of the 6+1 Trait Writing model of instruction and assessment developed by Education Northwest. In this widely used framework, student writing is assessed using seven distinct characteristics of writing: ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, conventions, and presentation. The framework provides you and your students with a common language to discuss good writing and rubrics to assess the quality of writing.

While the Being a Writer program provides an assessment framework using our “Descriptors of Successful Writing” to help you and your students understand and assess good writing, you will find numerous parallels between the two approaches. Examples of ways in which Being a Writer supports the 6+1 traits are described in the Support for the 6+1 Trait Model table on page xxvi.

Focus on Social/Ethical Development

Research shows that building a safe and caring classroom community helps students develop a sense of responsibility for their own learning and behavior, as well as empathy and motivation to help others (Schaps 2004). Students who receive support in building their social and emotional skills demonstrate significant gains in academic achievement (Durlack et al. 2011). In the classroom writing community, students work in pairs, in small groups, and as a class to listen to and discuss writing, brainstorm ideas for writing, and share their writing.

BUILDING RELATIONSHIPS

Caring, respectful relationships are the foundation of the writing community and you, as the teacher, play a key role in building a warm relationship with each student as well as in facilitating and strengthening relationships among the students. The program creates deliberate opportunities to build these relationships. Early in the year, the students learn procedures (such as gathering for sharing and using cooperative structures) in which they are responsible to one another. As the year goes on, they regularly plan for, discuss, and solve problems related to their work together. They cultivate empathy by imagining how others might feel, and they explore why it is important to treat others with care and respect. When they feel connected to others and cared for, students learn to relax and take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically.

VALUES AND SOCIAL SKILLS

As you help the students build relationships, you also help them understand the values that underlie these relationships. Across every year of the program, broad social goals help the students think about and act on five core values: responsibility, respect, caring, fairness, and helpfulness. The students reflect on what it means to act on these values and how their actions affect the community. Lapses in applying the values are seen as normal learning experiences, rather than failures. In addition to these five core values, the students explore other values that arise in the read-alouds, such as courage, perseverance, gratitude, and compassion.

The social skills that students learn in the program help them to act on these values in a deliberate way. They learn basic social skills (such as listening to others and taking turns) early in the year, laying the foundation for the more sophisticated skills they learn and practice later in the year, when both their academic work and resulting social interactions become more demanding. (For example, learning how to express appreciation for other people's writing early in the year prepares the students to give and receive specific feedback about their writing later in the year.)

The table on the facing page gives an overview of some of the social goals of the program, the social skills taught in support of those goals, and the grade levels at which they are taught.

Social skills are taught when developmentally appropriate; a skill that is formally taught in the primary grades will be reviewed and integrated in subsequent grades.

RANDOM PAIRING

We recommend that you pair students randomly at the beginning of each unit and have those partnerships stay together for the entire unit. Working with the same partner over time helps students work through and learn from problems, build successful methods of interaction, and develop their writing skills together. Random pairing sends several positive messages to the students: there is no hidden agenda or reason behind how you pair students (such as achievement level), every student is considered a valuable partner, and everyone is expected to learn to work with everyone else. Random pairing also results in heterogeneous groupings over time, even though some pairs may be homogeneous in some way during any given unit (for example, both partners may be female). The box below suggests some methods for randomly pairing the students.

Some Random Pairing Methods

- Distribute playing cards and have each student pair up with someone who has the same number or suit color.
- Place identical pairs of number or letter cards in a bag. Have each student pull a card out of the bag and find someone who has the same number or letter.
- Cut magazine pictures in half. Give each student a picture half. Have each student pair up with the person who has the other half of the picture.

For more information about pairing English Language Learners (ELLs), see “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii.

COOPERATIVE STRUCTURES

Cooperative structures are taught and used at every grade level to increase students’ engagement and accountability for participation. These structures help the students learn to work together, develop social skills, and take responsibility for their learning. Students talk about their thinking and hear about the thinking of others. Cooperative structures are suggested for specific questions throughout the lessons and are highlighted with an icon (☞). In addition, you can use cooperative structures whenever you feel that not enough students are participating in a discussion, or, conversely, when many students want to talk at the same time.

Students at all grade levels learn “Turn to Your Partner” and “Think, Pair, Share.” In grades 3–6, you might consider introducing “Heads Together” and “Group Brainstorming,” when appropriate.

Cooperative Structures in the Program

- Turn to Your Partner. Partners turn to one another to discuss a question.
- Think, Pair, Share. Each student thinks individually about a question before discussing his or her thoughts with a partner. Pairs then report their thinking to another pair or to the class. This strategy is especially appropriate when the students are asked to respond to complex questions or when they are developing story ideas.
- Heads Together. Groups of four students discuss a question among themselves. Groups might then share their thoughts with the class.
- Group Brainstorming. Groups of four generate as many ideas as they can about a question as a group member records. These lists are then shared with the class.

PAIR CONFERENCES

In grades 2–6 of the Being a Writer program, the students learn to confer in pairs about their writing. They learn that the purpose of a conference is for partners to help each other improve their writing and that a conference entails not only sharing their writing, but discussing it as well. They learn to initiate and conduct conferences, and they practice both the academic and social skills necessary to discuss particular aspects of their writing, as well as how to ask for, give, and receive helpful feedback.

Partners confer at different stages of the writing process. Sometimes they review their drafts together to simply share their writing. At other times, they confer to give each other feedback about how to improve pieces they want to publish. Often the entire class will confer in pairs as you walk around, observe, and support them. In grades 3–6, the students sometimes initiate their own pair conferences as needed during the writing period, either with a regular writing partner or with another available student.

Through conferring, the students practice listening carefully and taking an interest in other people’s thinking and writing. They learn to focus on specific aspects of their partners’ writing, sometimes asking themselves questions like “Am I getting to know this character’s personality?” or “Can I follow what’s happening? Am I confused at any point?” The students learn to give feedback respectfully and to receive it thoughtfully. Before and after each pair conference session, you facilitate discussions to first help the students plan how they will interact and then to discuss what went well, the problems they had and how they might be avoided, and how they acted responsibly. (For more about pair conferences, see “Managing Pair Conferences” on page xliii.)

How the Grade 3 Program Is Organized

In the Being a Writer program at grade 3, there are nine units, each varying in length from one to six weeks. Each week has five days of instruction.

UNITS 1 AND 2

We intend for these units to be taught in order at the beginning of the year. Unit 1 builds the classroom writing community while inspiring the students to tap into their intrinsic motivation to write by drafting many pieces in a variety of genres. Unit 2 introduces them to the writing process as each student selects a draft to revise, proofread, and publish. During these first two units, the students learn the processes, procedures, cooperative structures, and social skills they need to successfully participate in the writing community throughout the year.

GENRE UNITS

The genre units focus on personal and fictional narrative, expository (informative) nonfiction, functional nonfiction, opinion writing, and poetry. They may be taught in any order, although we recommend that you teach the expository nonfiction unit later in the year. Each genre unit begins with an immersion period in which the students hear and read many examples of the genre. During this time, the students try their hand at writing drafts in that genre. Midway through most genre units, each student selects one draft to develop, revise, proofread, and publish for the classroom library.

UNIT 9

Unit 9, the last unit, is taught at the end of the year to help the students reflect on their growth as writers and as members of the classroom writing community.

OVERVIEW OF INSTRUCTION

The Being a Writer program comprises 30 weeks of instruction, which allows time for you to:

- Extend or finish units that take longer than expected
- Provide free writing time so students can practice what they have learned
- Confer with students in a way that is more general than is suggested in the units (see “Teacher Conferences” on page xxxviii)

- Teach Writing About Reading activities, Extensions, and/or Technology Mini-lessons (see “Extending the Instruction” on page xx)
- Teach a unit from the Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide
- Teach writing content not introduced in the Being a Writer program

As you plan the instruction for the year, you might want to build in additional time for these activities. (For example, after the opinion writing unit, you might set aside time to teach the opinion writing unit in the Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide.)

Sample Calendar for Grade 3

	Unit	Title	Length	Focus
FALL	1	The Writing Community	3 weeks	Build a caring writing community Get ideas for writing from read-alouds Draft many pieces in a variety of genres
	2	The Writing Process	2 weeks	Select drafts to develop and publish Revise drafts Proofread for spelling and conventions Write final versions and publish
	Genre	Personal Narrative	4 weeks	Write about single, interesting events or topics from the students’ own lives Use sensory details Use temporal words Explore strong opening sentences and endings that draw a story’s events to a close
WINTER	Genre	Fiction	6 weeks	Develop characters using physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, and speech Use interesting verbs and adverbs Write endings that bring a story’s event to a close
	NARRATIVE WRITING UNIT FROM THE WRITING PERFORMANCE TASK PREPARATION GUIDE (1 WEEK)
	Genre	Expository Nonfiction*	6 weeks	With a partner, research and write a report about an animal Explore expository text features to include in reports (e.g., illustrations, captions, tables of contents) Take research notes and organize them by topic

Sample Calendar for Grade 3 (continued)

	Unit	Title	Length	Focus
SPRING	Genre	Functional Writing*	3 weeks	Write directions for how to do various activities Explore audience, purpose, sequence, accuracy, completeness, and clarity in directions
	Genre	Opinion Writing	3 weeks	Identify audience and purpose for opinion writing Write clear statements of opinion supported by reasons Explore clear, direct openings and conclusions that restate the opinion
	OPINION WRITING UNIT FROM THE WRITING PERFORMANCE TASK PREPARATION GUIDE (1 WEEK)
	Genre	Poetry	2 weeks	Explore imagery, sound, and form in poetry Tap into creativity
	9	Revisiting the Writing Community	1 week	Reflect on growth as writers and as community members Plan summer writing

*Expository Nonfiction in Being a Writer corresponds to Informative Writing in some standards. Functional Writing corresponds to Explanatory Writing in the standards.

Planning and Teaching the Lessons

We offer the following considerations to help you plan and teach the Being a Writer lessons.

UNIT AND WEEK OVERVIEWS

To prepare to teach a unit, begin by reading the unit's introductory pages. The Resources list specifies the physical materials and the supplemental activities for the entire unit, while the Online Resources list indicates all of the materials that are available digitally on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). The unit's opening page and the Overview table acquaint you with the goals and general outline of the unit; in genre units, the Development Across the Grades table shows you how instruction within that genre builds across grades.

Whiteboard Activities
• WA1-0163

Assessment Forms
• "Class Assessment Record" sheets (CA1-CA2)

Professional Development Media
• "Building a Community of Writers" (A12)
• "Setting Up Procedures for Your" (A15)
• "Cooperative Structures Overview" (A19)
• "Using 'Turn to Your Partner'" (A11)
• "Timing and Leading at the Speaker" (A14)
• "Using CCC Whiteboard Activities" material (A17)

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students generate ideas for writing.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Students learn about a professional author's writing practice.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn procedures for Writing Time and for "Turn to Your Partner."
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students work in a responsible way.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Plan a space in the classroom, such as a rug area, for the class to gather for read-alouds. The students should sit facing you, close enough to you to see the books you will share. If a rug area is not available, plan how the students will arrange their chairs so they can sit facing you.
- ✓ Collect enough lined writing notebooks and pads of small (3½" x 2") self-stick notes so that every student in the class will have one of each. See "Student Books, Notebooks, and Folders" on page 411.
- ✓ Consider reading this unit's read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during Unit 1 and 2. See "Random Pairing" on page 616 and "Considerations for Pairing ELLs" on page 61. For more information, view "Cooperative Structures Overview" (A19).

TEACHER AS WRITER

"I write to find out what I'm thinking about."
— Edward Albee

Being a writer yourself can help you in teaching your students to write. In Teacher as Writer, we offer weekly prompts to help you in your own development as a writer, as well as instructive quotes by well-known writers. We encourage you to start a writing notebook, to write in it at least several times a week, and to share your writing regularly with colleagues who write. (See "Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School" on page 6 for ideas about creating a writers' group at your school.) In your notebook this week, describe yourself as a writer. Consider:

- What was writing like for you in school?
- What is it like for you now?
- How do you hope to develop as a writer?

PREPARING THE DAILY LESSONS

Each lesson, generally, is divided into three sections: Getting Ready to Write, Writing Time, and Sharing and Reflecting. Each section has its own requirements in terms of student movement and teacher facilitation. Keep these in mind as you plan to teach the lesson. To prepare:

- Read the bulleted lesson purposes that precede the day’s instruction and keep them in mind as you read the entire lesson, including any Student Writing Handbook pages, reproducible materials, and whiteboard activities (WA), and anticipate how your students will respond.
- Collect materials and anticipate room arrangement needs.
- View any professional development media (AV) referred to in the lessons.
- Plan any teacher modeling required in the lesson.
- Review suggested discussion questions and decide which ones you will ask. Also review the week’s Facilitation Tip and look for opportunities in the lesson to use facilitation techniques.

- Plan how you will pace the lesson to keep it moving. A lesson (including writing time) is designed to take, on average, 35–40 minutes at grades K–2 and 45–60 minutes at grades 3–6.
- Review any optional activities and decide if and when you want to do them with the class. Some require additional materials or preparation.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT MEDIA

Brief videos created for the second edition of the Being a Writer program help you with effective implementation. The videos, intended for viewing when planning lessons, provide a range of support, including tips for teaching various genres and conferring with the students, demonstrations of teachers modeling specific techniques (such as approximating spelling and punctuating sentences), and examples of students using cooperative structures. For a complete list of professional development media, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

HELPFUL LESSON FEATURES

The lessons include a number of features that help you navigate the instruction and that provide background information and tips. These lesson features are listed below.

Helpful Lesson Features

- Beginning-of-year Considerations. This feature appears in the Overview of each week in Unit 1 in kindergarten and grade 1. It provides information about how you might modify these early lessons based on where your students are developmentally.
- Topic Notes. These notes appear at the beginning of some lessons and provide background information about important aspects of the instruction, including lesson structure, purpose, pedagogy, and approach.
- Teacher Notes. These notes appear in the lesson margins and alert you to such information as the purposes of different activities, materials to be collected or saved, hints for managing the lesson, and ways to support the students.
- ELL Notes. These notes suggest various strategies to support English Language Learners (ELLs) during a lesson.
- Skill Practice Notes. In grades 1–6, these notes refer to specific lessons in each grade’s Skill Practice Teaching Guide that provide direct instruction or additional practice with specific skills and conventions. The lessons identified in the notes are relevant to the writing that the students are doing in the core instruction.

Helpful Lesson Features (continued)

- Facilitation Tips. These notes suggest techniques you can use to facilitate class discussions (for example, asking open-ended questions, using wait-time, and not paraphrasing or repeating students' responses) in order to increase participation and encourage deeper conversations among your students.
- Cooperative Structure Icons. These icons indicate where in the lesson students work in pairs or small groups and where the cooperative structures "Turn to Your Partner" and "Think, Pair, Share" are used.
- Suggested Vocabulary. This feature identifies words in a read-aloud that you might want to define for your students as you read. We selected vocabulary words based on how crucial they are to understanding the text and on the unlikelihood that students will be able to glean their meaning from the context. Definitions are provided.
- ELL Vocabulary. This feature identifies and defines additional words in a read-aloud that you may want to address with your ELLs.
- "Students might say." This feature gives you ideas of the kinds of responses you might expect from your students. If the students have difficulty answering a question, you can suggest some ideas in the "Students might say" note and then ask them to generate additional ideas.
- "You might say." This feature provides sample language you can draw on when you model writing, revising, and proofreading, incorporating skill instruction as you do so. Providing the students with opportunities to see you model writing while thinking aloud helps them apply the instruction to their own writing.
- Chart Diagrams. These diagrams illustrate charting techniques and examples of text generated by the class or by teacher modeling. (For more information about the charts used in the program, see "Charts" on page xli.)
- Technology Tips. These notes suggest ways you might integrate technology in the writing lessons. In grades 3–6, they also refer to Technology Mini-lessons, which instruct students on topics such as how to navigate safely online and how to conduct online research. (For more information, see "Technology Mini-lessons" on page xlvi.)
- 2D Barcodes. You can scan these 2D barcodes with an app installed on your smartphone or tablet device to gain instant access to professional development and instructional media.
- Teacher Conference Notes. These notes help you confer with individual students during the writing lessons. (See "Teacher Conferences" on the following page.)
- Class Assessment Notes. These notes help you observe and assess the whole class during pair conferences and Writing Time. (See "Assessments" on page xxxix.)
- End-of-unit Considerations. This feature provides information on wrapping up a unit and conducting final unit assessments.

TEACHER CONFERENCES

Early in the year, you will begin conferring with individual students during the writing lessons. The purposes of these conferences are to assess and support individual students in their writing. You can keep an ongoing record of your conferences by documenting your observations and suggestions for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN).

- Conferring During the Units. Your initial conference focuses on just getting to know the students as writers—their skills, motivation, and interests. As the year progresses, you will focus more on particular aspects of writing that you have taught in the lessons. The Teacher Conference Notes suggest questions to guide your thinking as you read a student’s writing and listen to him or her read and talk about it. These questions are followed by suggestions for supporting the student based on what you noticed. The conferences in each unit focus on reinforcing the teaching you have done so far in that unit. During each unit, we encourage you to confer with every student at least once or twice, depending on the length of the unit.
- Additional Conferring. We suggest that, when possible, you conduct additional conferences with individual students during any free writing time, broadening your focus to respond more generally to their writing. Point out and discuss things that you might otherwise skip over during a unit conference, such as misused words (for example, there/their/they’re), missing punctuation, run-on sentences, or a tendency to “tell” rather than “show” (for example, The dog was happy versus The dog wagged his tail and jumped in circles while barking happily). In addition, you can discuss questions like:

- Q What are you writing?
- Q Where did you get the idea for this piece?
- Q What have you learned about good writing that you can use in this piece?
- Q What is one question you want to ask me about your piece?
- Q What do you want help with?

In the conferences, it is helpful to use a tone of genuine interest and curiosity to foster students’ confidence and willingness to learn about writing. You can point out elements of writing you see them experimenting with (“When I read the sentence ‘I crunched the red leaves with my feet,’ I could hear those dry, autumn leaves”) and ask open-ended questions about their writing (“What other words can you include to help your reader imagine what it’s like in this park?” or “What were you thinking about when you changed the words in this sentence?”). When teaching directly, it helps to discuss conventions in terms of how authors communicate with readers (“Let me show you how writers let us know when one character stops speaking and another one begins”), rather than simply following a rule (“All speech must have quotation marks”).

Assessments

The Being a Writer assessments have two main purposes: to help you make informed instructional decisions as you teach the program and to help you track your students' writing and social development over time. The program provides a range of assessments, including both formative and summative assessment tools.

Each assessment has a corresponding record sheet in the Assessment Resource Book. You may choose to record your students' progress using printed copies of the forms from the Assessment Resource Book or through the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). Alternatively, you can use the CCC ClassView app to electronically record, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student and the whole class. For more information, see "CCC ClassView App" on page xlv.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students' academic and social growth over time through class observation, individual conferences, and analysis of student writing.

Formative assessments in the program comprise the following:

- Class Assessment. Class Assessment Notes within the lessons occur about once per week. They are designed to help you assess the writing and sometimes the social performance of the whole class. During this assessment, we suggest that you walk around and observe students working individually or in pairs (perhaps selecting strong, average, and struggling writers to observe). Ask yourself the questions in the Class Assessment Note and follow up with the suggested interventions, if necessary. You can record your observations on the corresponding "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA).
- Teacher Conferences and Student Goals and Interests Survey. Teacher Conference Notes provide you with specific questions related to the students' writing that you might ask yourself or a student when conferring individually. Many notes also include suggestions for supporting struggling students. You can record your observations from each conference on the corresponding "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN). We encourage you to confer with each student at least twice per unit.

You might use the questions listed in the first Teacher Conference Note in the program as a beginning-of-year survey of your students' goals and interests. The questions in the final Teacher Conference Note of the year can serve as an end-of-year survey of the students' perceptions of their growth as writers, attitudes toward writing, and goals for summer writing.

- Student Self-assessment (Optional). At grades 2–6, this assessment is included in all units in which the students formally publish a piece of writing. The “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA) provides questions for the students to think about as they analyze their published pieces for characteristics of good writing. The self-assessment also invites the students to think about what they did well in their writing and what they want to continue to work on.
- Beginning- and End-of-year Writing Samples (Optional). This assessment can be used to determine a baseline for individual students’ writing ability. The students are asked to write in response to a prompt and are encouraged to incorporate what they know about good writing and the writing process into their pieces. You can analyze each student’s writing using the “Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS).

You can follow the same procedure to obtain end-of-year writing samples, and then analyze each student’s writing using the “End-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS). You can then compare the two pieces to evaluate the students’ progress made over the course of the school year.

For more information about the formative assessments in the program, see “Assessments” on page vi of the Assessment Resource Book.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Summative assessments allow you to evaluate and score each student’s writing for units in which the students produce a final or published piece of writing.

- Social Skills Assessment. At grades 1–6, the Social Skills Assessment allows you to note how well each student is learning and applying the social skills taught in the program. In addition to social skills, this assessment allows you to track how well each student integrates the values of responsibility, respect, fairness, caring, and helpfulness into his or her behavior. We recommend that you assess your students’ social development three times per year (at the beginning, middle, and end of the year), using the “Social Skills Assessment Record” sheet (SS).
- Individual Writing Assessment. This end-of-unit assessment is designed to help you assess growth in individual students’ writing. If needed, the “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA) can be used to help you assign grades.

For more information about the summative assessments in the program, see “Assessments” on page vi of the Assessment Resource Book.

Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom

We offer the following suggestions to help you manage the Being a Writer program in your classroom.

ROOM ARRANGEMENT AND MATERIALS

- We recommend a classroom arrangement that allows for quiet individual writing at desks, regular partner work at desks, and whole-class gatherings and discussion. A rug or classroom library area is ideal for whole-class gathering. If this is not possible, think of a way to have the students face and sit close enough to you to hear and see the read-alouds and participate in discussions.
- Plan a place and a chair (sometimes two) to use for Author’s Chair sharing.
- Free up wall space for a word wall (at K–2 only) and for posting paper charts generated in the lessons.
- Gather writing and publishing materials in a central location, and make students responsible for maintaining this area neatly. Materials might include lined and unlined paper, pencils, pens, pads of self-stick notes, highlighters, crayons or markers, construction paper, staplers, and any other desired materials for making books (such as hole punches and string).

CHARTS

In the Being a Writer program, charts are used to model shared writing, show sample writing, list ideas, and display writing tasks. The program features both paper charts and digital whiteboard charts. The latter are referred to in the lessons as whiteboard activity (WA) charts and are accessed via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). If your classroom is not equipped with an interactive whiteboard, you can print the whiteboard activity charts and display them using a projection device. The weekly Do Ahead section and daily Materials lists make clear which type of chart will be used for any specific task. In cases where a chart needs to be displayed throughout the week, unit, or year, we recommend using paper charts. (Write large enough so the charts can be read from a distance.) For more information, see the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

STUDENT BOOKS, NOTEBOOKS, AND FOLDERS

- Each student in grades 2–6 is responsible for maintaining a Student Writing Handbook, a Student Skill Practice Book (optional), a writing notebook, and a writing folder for loose papers and works-in-progress. Students in grade 1 use all of the above materials except a Student Writing Handbook. Label the covers of all of these with the students’ names, and encourage the students to be responsible for maintaining these in good shape in their desks. These materials should stay in the classroom during the year, rather than go home with the students.
- Each student in grades 1–6 uses a writing notebook. Because writing notebooks are not included with the program, you will need to provide each student with a writing notebook at the beginning of the year (or have the students bring their own from home). We strongly recommend full-size notebooks (no smaller than a 7" × 9" composition book) with firmly bound pages, sturdy covers, and line spacing appropriate for your grade level. Being a Writer composition books are available for additional purchase on the Center for the Collaborative Classroom’s website (collaborativeclassroom.org).
- The writing folders can be file folders or pocket folders, or they can be made out of folded construction paper or card stock.
- In kindergarten, we suggest that you provide writing folders to organize the students’ writing during the week. You might distribute them daily and collect them at the end of each writing period. You may wish to establish another system for managing the flow of student papers. For example, you may ask the students to place their completed work in a box on your desk and to keep works-in-progress in folders stored in their cubbies.

MANAGING WORKFLOW

- Establish procedures to help the students move works-in-progress through the writing process. For example, when a student finishes his or her final version and makes it into a book, the student might place it in a “Publication” basket in the corner of the class library to be read aloud during an upcoming Author’s Chair sharing time.

MANAGING PAIR CONFERENCES

- When the whole class is conferring in pairs, you might have pairs of students spread out around the room so they can more easily focus and hear one another. (Students learn specific procedures for conferring in pairs during the lessons.)
- In grades 3–6, when students initiate their own pair conferences during Writing Time, you might designate an area of the room where they may go to talk, away from other students who are working quietly.

Using the Technology Features

The Being a Writer program incorporates digital technology to enhance your students' learning experience and streamline your preparation, instruction, and assessment processes.

---

Digital Teacher Resources

The program comprises a suite of digital resources, including the Being a Writer Digital Teacher's Set set as well as access to the CCC Learning Hub and the CCC ClassView app.

DIGITAL TEACHER'S SET

The Being a Writer Digital Teacher's Set includes electronic versions of the Teacher's Manual, Assessment Resource Book, Skill Practice Teaching Guide, and Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide for use on a tablet device or computer. Features of the Digital Teacher's Set include linked cross-references and direct access to the CCC Learning Hub, the CCC ClassView app (see the next page for more information), and professional development media.

CCC LEARNING HUB

The CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) is your source for the following resources:

- Whiteboard activity charts to display or print
- Printable blackline masters, such as family letters and student handouts
- Digital reference copy of the Student Writing Handbook
- Digital reference copy of the Student Skill Practice Book
- A link to the CCC ClassView app, as well as direct links to printable or interactive assessment forms
- Professional development and instructional media

For more information, see the “Using the CCC Learning Hub” tutorial (AV82).

CCC CLASSVIEW APP

The CCC ClassView app is an online application that contains all of the forms and instructions available in the Assessment Resource Book. This tool also enables you to collect, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student electronically. You can access the app by tapping the assessment icon links in the Digital Teacher's Set, visiting the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org), or going directly to the CCC ClassView app (classview.org). For more information about the CCC ClassView app, view the “Using the CCC ClassView App” tutorial (AV80).

Additional Technology Features

Additional lesson features integrate technology into the program in a variety of ways.

TECHNOLOGY TIPS

These notes, located in the margins of the core lessons, suggest ways to incorporate technology into the instruction or list related professional development media that support your use of technology in the classroom.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSIONS

These optional activities identify ways in which you can use technology to extend instruction, when appropriate. For example, students might listen to and discuss an online interview with an author or publish their writing in an online format such as a class blog.

TECHNOLOGY TUTORIALS

These videos help you understand how to effectively implement the program's technology features and how to use widely available technology, such as presentation tools. They include:

- “Getting Started with Your Print Teacher's Manual” (K–6)
- “Getting Started with Your Digital Teacher's Set” (K–6)
- “Using the CCC Learning Hub” (K–6)
- “Using CCC's Whiteboard Activities” (K–6)
- “Using the CCC ClassView App” (K–6)
- “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” (3–6)
- “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” (K–6)
- “Using Presentation Tools” (3–6)
- “Creating a Class Blog” (3–6)
- “Using Social Networking Sites” (3–6)

TECHNOLOGY MINI-LESSONS

These optional lessons, located in Appendix A in grades 3–5, instruct students on a variety of technology subjects. These lessons include:

- “Navigating Safely Online”
- “Maintaining Privacy Online”
- “Showing Respect Online” (grades 4–6 only)
- “Choosing Effective Search Terms”
- “Understanding Search Results”
- “Using Filters to Narrow Results”
- “Evaluating Research Sources”
- “Citing Online Sources” (grades 4–6 only)
- “Creating Documents”
- “Creating Presentations”

Special Considerations

---

Teaching the Program in Multi-age Classrooms

If you are teaching a multi-age class, we recommend that you choose the level of the program that is appropriate for the majority of your students to use throughout the school year. Since the program provides plenty of time for writing practice and individual conferences, all of your students will be able to develop comfortably as writers even if the lessons are designed for students at a lower or higher grade level.

Supporting English Language Learners (ELLs)

The Being a Writer program helps you implement effective teaching strategies to meet the needs of all students, including ELLs. (For more information, see “How the Being a Writer Program Supports ELLs” on page xlviii.)

While the program is an effective tool in teaching writing to ELLs, it is not intended to stand alone as a comprehensive linguistic development program. It is assumed that additional support in second language acquisition is occurring for ELLs outside of this program.

ABOUT TEACHING WRITING TO ELLs

One myth about teaching ELLs is that good teaching alone will meet their linguistic and academic needs, that they will simply “pick up” the language in the typical classroom context. While “good teaching” (developmental, research-based instructional strategies) certainly benefits ELLs enormously, it is important to target their specific academic and linguistic strengths and needs. The first step is to develop an accurate picture of each student’s English language proficiency level and previous academic experience.

STAGES OF SECOND LANGUAGE ACQUISITION

Learning a new language is a developmental process. The following table outlines the generally accepted stages of acquiring a language and the characteristics of students at each stage. Progress from one stage to the next depends on a wide variety of factors, including cognitive and social development and maturity, previous academic experience, family education and home literacy practices, personality, cultural background, and individual learning styles.

Stages of Second Language Acquisition

Developmental Stages of Language Proficiency (under immersion)	Student Characteristics
Stage 1: Receptive or Preproduction (can last up to 6 months)	Often nonverbal during this period Acquires receptive vocabulary (words and ideas that children “take in” or learn before they begin to produce words verbally) Conveys understanding through drawing, writing, and gesturing Gradually becomes more comfortable in the classroom
Stage 2: Early Production (can last 6 months to 1 year)	Uses one- to two-word answers Verbally labels and categorizes Listens more attentively Writes words and some simple sentences
Stage 3: Speech Emergence (can last 1 to 3 years)	Speaks in phrases, short sentences Sequences stories using words and pictures Writes simple sentences
Stage 4: Intermediate Fluency (can last 3 to 5 years)	Uses increased vocabulary Speaks, reads, and writes more complex sentences Demonstrates higher-order skills, such as analyzing, predicting, debating, etc.
Stage 5: Advanced Fluency (can last 5 to 7 years)	Demonstrates a high level of comprehension Continues to develop academic vocabulary Continues to speak, read, and write increasingly complex sentences

HOW THE BEING A WRITER PROGRAM SUPPORTS ELLs

English Language Development strategies are an inherent part of the program’s design. In addition, the program suggests ways to modify the instruction to enhance support for ELLs. There are a number of effective English Language Development (ELD) instructional strategies integrated throughout the Being a Writer program. These strategies help make the content comprehensible, support students at their individual level of language proficiency, and help students see themselves as valuable members of the classroom community. The table on the next page shows the ELD strategies used in Being a Writer.

English Language Development (ELD) Strategies in the Being a Writer Program

Emphasis on writing as meaningful expression	Balanced approach to listening, speaking, reading, and writing Teacher questioning Explicit teacher modeling Writing in narrative, expository (informative), and opinion genres Activating prior knowledge Making connections (i.e., text-to-self) Building intrinsic motivation through providing choice
Visual aids and engaging materials	Rich, meaningful literature Engaging book art Emphasis on writing and illustration Teacher modeling of writing, revising, and proofreading
Explicit vocabulary instruction	Opportunities to preview and discuss read-alouds before lessons Building academic vocabulary Brainstorming lists of words to use in students' writing
Creating a respectful, safe learning community	Active, responsible learning High expectations for classroom interactions Explicit classroom procedures and routines Explicit social skills instruction Regular discussions to reflect on classroom values and community
Cooperative learning	Cooperative structures ("Turn to Your Partner" and "Think, Pair, Share") Ongoing peer partnerships Opportunities to express thinking orally and listen to others' thinking Sharing work and reflecting

ADDITIONAL STRATEGIES FOR SUPPORTING ELLs

In addition to the practices embedded in the Being a Writer lessons, ELL Notes provide specific suggestions for adapting instruction to meet the needs of ELLs. In addition, you can implement a number of general strategies to help ELLs participate more fully in the program. These include:

- Speaking slowly. Beginning English speakers can miss a great deal when the language goes by too quickly. Modifying your rate of speech can make a big difference in helping them to understand you.

- Using visual aids and technology. Photographs, realia (real objects), diagrams, and even quick sketches on the board can help to increase a student’s comprehension. When giving directions, physically modeling the steps and writing them on the board while saying them aloud are effective ways to boost comprehension. Audiovisual resources such as recordings of books read aloud, author interviews, and interactive versions of read-alouds can also be helpful.
- Inviting expression through movement and art. Having students express their thinking through movement and art can be enormously powerful. Drawing, painting, dancing, mimicking, role-playing, acting, singing, and chanting rhymes are effective ways for students to increase comprehension, build vocabulary, and convey understanding. The Total Physical Response (TPR) method, developed by James Asher, helps children build concepts and vocabulary by giving them increasingly complex verbal prompts (stand, sit, jump, etc.) that they act out physically and nonverbally (see Bibliography on page 751).
- Building vocabulary. ELL vocabulary is highlighted for most read-alouds in the program, and we recommend that you introduce this vocabulary (discuss it, act it out, draw it, etc.) and define it during the reading. In addition, you might brainstorm words related to particular read-alouds or themes (see the example below). The students can then illustrate each word and post the illustrations next to the printed words, creating a visual chart to refer to as they write.

Ideas for “First Time” Stories
tooth	broken bone	ocean
kindergarten	sleepover	birthday
baby brother	airplane	friend
apartment	bike	snow

- Preteaching. It is a good idea to preteach concepts with ELLs, when possible. This can mean previewing vocabulary, doing a picture walk of a story, or looking at realia or photographs before a lesson. Preteaching in a student’s primary language can be particularly effective—teachers, instructional aides, parents, or other community members can be enlisted to help. Some of the Being a Writer read-aloud books are available in Spanish. For a list of these titles, visit the Center for the Collaborative Classroom’s website (collaborativeclassroom.org).

- Simplifying questions. Open-ended questions are used throughout the Being a Writer program to elicit language and higher-order thinking from students. These questions are often more complex in structure than closed or one-word-answer questions. While all learners, including ELLs, benefit from the opportunity to consider such questions, you might modify complicated questions into simpler ones to increase comprehension and participation by your ELLs. The table below lists some suggestions for simplifying questions.

Suggestions for Simplifying Questions

Suggestion	Original Question	Simplified Question
Use the simple present tense.	What was happening at the beginning of the story?	What happens at the beginning of the story?
Use active rather than passive voice.	How was the window broken in the story?	Who broke the window in the story?
Ask who/what/where/when questions rather than how/why questions.	How are you and your partner working together?	What do you and your partner do to work well together?
Avoid the subjunctive.	If you were going to write about a family member, what might you write?	You will write a story about someone in your family. What will you write?
Provide definitions in the question.	Why is the old woman so reluctant to name the dog?	The old woman is reluctant ; she does not want to name the dog. Why?
Provide context clues as part of the question.	What happens at the beginning of the story?	Peter wakes up and it is snowing. What else happens at the beginning of the story?
Elicit nonverbal responses. (Stages 1–3)	What do you see in this picture that tells about the words?	This picture shows the sentence “I like to paint.” Point to the paints. Point to the paintbrushes.
Elicit responses of 1–2 words or short phrases. (Stages 1–3)	What do you think will happen when Peter puts the snowball in his pocket?	Peter puts the snowball in his pocket. Is that a good idea?

- Assessing comprehension. When students are in the preproduction and early production stages of language acquisition, it can be hard to assess exactly what they understand. It is important not to confuse lack of verbal response with lack of understanding. Rather than force ELLs to produce language before they are ready (which can raise anxiety and inhibit their progress), you can assess nonverbal responses while the students are actively engaged by asking yourself questions such as:

- Q Do the student’s drawings and written symbols communicate thinking or show evidence of my teaching (such as completing a frame sentence and illustrating it appropriately, or including a beginning, middle, and end in a story)?
- Q Does the student nod, laugh, or demonstrate engagement through other facial expressions?
- Q Does the student pick up academic and social cues from peers?
- Q Does the student follow classroom signals and routines?
- Q Does the student follow simple directions (such as “Please get out your writing notebooks and pencils”)?
- Q Does the student utter, chant, or sing some familiar words or phrases?

By carefully observing your ELLs and employing some of the strategies suggested here (as well as those in the ELL Notes in the lessons), you will be able to support your students’ development as writers and as caring, collaborative participants in your writing community.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR PAIRING ELLs

A key practice in the Being a Writer program is to have students work in unit-long partnerships. Random pairing is suggested as a way to ensure equity by reinforcing the value of each child in the classroom (see “Random Pairing” on page xxix). However, when considering the needs of ELLs, it may be advantageous to partner these students in a more strategic way. You might pair a beginning English speaker with a fluent English or multilingual speaker. It can be effective if the multilingual partner shares the ELL’s primary language, but we recommend prudence in asking the more fluent English speaker to serve as translator. Another option is to place ELLs in trios with fluent English speakers to allow them more opportunity to hear the language spoken in conversation. In this case, it is important to make sure that all three students are participating and including one another in the work.

Building the Home-School Connection

Keeping families informed about their children’s participation in the Being a Writer program helps family members understand and appreciate how their children are developing as writers and how they can support that development.

FAMILY LETTERS

We provide a letter to send home with the students at the end of each unit, available in both English and Spanish. Each letter describes the unit’s focus, instruction, and social development goals and offers suggestions for encouraging writing development at home. The family letters are included in the Online Resources list for each unit and can be accessed via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School

Being a writer yourself helps you understand the writing process and the joys and struggles that come with writing. Writing regularly informs both your instructional decisions and your interactions with individual students about their writing. We strongly encourage you to become part of an active writing community that will support you in your own development as a writer. Some particularly powerful activities for building a writing community are listed below.

TEACHER AS WRITER

The Teacher as Writer section at the beginning of each week offers writing prompts and instructive quotes by well-known writers to inspire you. The prompts relate to the writing focuses for the students that week.

We suggest that you start a writing notebook and write in it several times a week, both in school during the daily Writing Time and outside of school. Find opportunities to share your writing regularly with a writing partner or group.

STARTING A WRITERS' GROUP AT YOUR SCHOOL

To start a writers' group at your school, find other adults (including teachers, administrators, parents, and other school staff) who are interested in writing regularly and supporting one another in writing. If there is a lot of interest, consider starting more than one writers' group to keep any one group from becoming too large. Schedule meetings at regular intervals (every month, every six weeks, or every other month) to share and discuss writing. Meetings can take place on or off school grounds, and the format can range from formal to informal. Many sources of information about how to start and conduct a writers' group are available online; search for this information using the keywords "starting a writers' group."

Using Being a Writer with Other Programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom

Center for the Collaborative Classroom has developed other programs that can be used in conjunction with Being a Writer in a language arts curriculum. For more information about any of these programs, visit the Center for the Collaborative Classroom's website (collaborativeclassroom.org).

Unit 1

The Writing Community

During this three-week unit, the students begin to see themselves as contributing members of a caring writing community. They hear and discuss examples of good writing and begin to learn about the writing practice of professional authors. They explore prewriting techniques and write freely in their writing notebooks about things that interest them. They learn cooperative structures that they will use throughout the year, as well as discussion prompts to help them listen and connect their comments during class discussions. Finally, they begin conferring with one another about their writing in a caring and responsible way.

Week 1

OVERVIEW

The Pain and the Great One

by Judy Blume, illustrated by Irene Trivas

She thinks her brother is a pain; he thinks she's a bossy know-it-all.

Grandpa's Face

by Eloise Greenfield, illustrated by Floyd Cooper

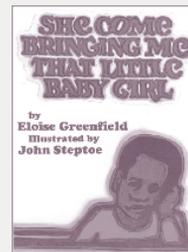

Tamika loves her grandfather's face, but one expression scares her.

"About Judy Blume"

excerpted from judyblume.com (see page 22)

Judy Blume describes her life as a writer and tells the story behind The Pain and the Great One.

She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl

by Eloise Greenfield, illustrated by John Steptoe

Kevin expects his mother to bring home a little brother, but she brings home a little baby girl instead.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I write to find out what I’m thinking about.”

— Edward Albee

Being a writer yourself can help you in teaching your students to write. In Teacher as Writer, we offer weekly prompts to help you in your own development as a writer, as well as instructive quotes by well-known writers. We encourage you to start a writing notebook, to write in it at least several times a week, and to share your writing regularly with colleagues who write. (See “Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School” on page liii for ideas about creating a writers’ group at your school.)

In your notebook this week, describe yourself as a writer. Consider:

- What was writing like for you in school?
- What is it like for you now?
- How do you hope to develop as a writer?

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students generate ideas for writing.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn procedures for Writing Time and for “Turn to Your Partner.”
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students work in a responsible way.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Plan a space in the classroom, such as a rug area, for the class to gather for read-alouds. The students should sit facing you, close enough to you to see the books you will share. If a rug area is not available, plan how the students will arrange their chairs so they can sit facing you.
- ✓ Collect enough lined writing notebooks and pads of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes so that every student in the class will have one of each. See “Student Books, Notebooks, and Folders” on page xlii.
- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during Units 1 and 2. See “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).

(continues)

DO AHEAD (continued)

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 6 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 7 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Plan a time during the first month of school to obtain a beginning-of-year writing sample from your students. For more information on how to obtain this writing sample, see “Obtaining a Beginning-of-year Writing Sample” on page 2 of the Assessment Resource Book.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Learn the procedure for gathering
- Gather in a responsible way
- Become familiar with their writing notebooks

ABOUT WRITING INSTRUCTION EARLY IN THE YEAR

All growth and learning in the art and craft of writing depend on a solid foundation of abundant, uninhibited writing. To get enough sheer practice with the physical and mental act of writing during their elementary school years, students must tap into their intrinsic motivation to write. Unit 1 helps students develop this motivation by inspiring them to write freely and daily about things that interest them. Engaging read-alouds are used to stimulate creativity and as examples to inspire writing. In this unit, it is more important for the students to write generously, free from concerns about making it right or “good,” than it is for them to write complete, correct pieces.

To support the students’ writing practice in Unit 1, formal skill instruction is delayed until Unit 2. It continues in the “Revision, Proofreading, and Publishing” phase of all the genre units. For the time being, relax your expectations about the students’ spelling and grammatical correctness and encourage them to just write freely, getting their ideas down on paper.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce the Writing Community

Introduce the Being a Writer program by explaining that this year the students will be members of a classroom writing community. In this community, they will write about things that interest them, share and talk about their writing, learn about what professional authors do, and become stronger writers. Ask and briefly discuss as a class:

- Q What are some things you’ve written?
- Q What are some reasons that you write, in or out of school?

Students might say:

- “I write when I leave my parents a note about where I’m going.”
- “I have to write a list of things to do for homework every week.”
- “I wrote a long story about a field trip we took in second grade.”

Materials

- The Pain and the Great One
- “People We Can Write About” chart (WA1)
- Writing notebook and a pencil for each student
- Self-stick note for each student

Teacher Note

For more information, view “Setting Up Procedures for the Year” (AV5).

Teacher Note

For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Technology Tip

The above are two videos in a series of professional development videos in the Being a Writer program. For more information about the content of the videos and how to view them, see “Professional Development Media” on page xxxvi.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching the Being a Writer program with other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, these notes alert you to connections between them.

If the students have already learned a procedure for gathering for a read-aloud, use the same procedure for gathering to discuss writing. Take this opportunity to remind the students of the procedure and of your expectations.

Teacher Note

When more than one question appears next to a Q, ask the first question, discuss it, and then follow up with the subsequent questions.

Teacher Note

The pages of The Pain and the Great One are unnumbered. For easy reference, pencil in page numbers, beginning with the number 1 on the right-hand title page that includes the author's name. (Page 3 says "The Pain" and page 5 begins "My brother's a pain.") This system is used throughout the program for all read-alouds with unnumbered pages.

Explain that writers constantly read examples of good writing to help them get ideas for their own writing and to give them a sense of the way good writing looks and sounds. This year the students will have many opportunities to hear, read, and discuss good writing.

2 Learn and Practice the Procedure for Gathering to Discuss Writing

Explain that the class will gather to hear a read-aloud. Tell the students that you would like them to gather and sit facing you, either on a rug or in their seats. Before asking the students to move, state your expectations.

You might say:

"I expect you to move quickly, quietly, and without bumping into one another."

Ask:

Q What do you want to keep in mind to make moving go smoothly?

Have the students move to their places. Ask:

Q What did you do to be responsible as you moved? What might you do differently when we try it again?

If the students have difficulty answering the questions, you might share your own observations.

You might say:

"I noticed you were careful not to bump into anyone on your way to the rug. You came straight to the rug instead of doing something else first. Next time you might try moving more quietly."

If necessary, have the students return to their desks and practice the procedure until they are able to gather in an orderly way. Explain that the students will use the same procedure every time they gather to talk about writing.

Explain that today you will read aloud an example of good writing. Invite the students to both enjoy the story and think about what it would be like to write such a story.

3 Read the First Part of The Pain and the Great One Aloud

Show the cover of The Pain and the Great One and read the title and the author's name aloud. Explain that you will read the first part of the book today and the second part tomorrow.

Read "The Pain" on pages 3–18 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations as you read.

4 Discuss the Story

After reading, ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q Who is telling this story? Who is “the Pain”?
- Q What do you find out about the little brother in this story?
- Q If you were going to write a funny story about someone you know, whom might you write about? What might you write about that person?

Students might say:

“I would write about my baby sister. She can be a pain, too. She follows me all over the house.”

“I can write about my big brother. His hair is always a big mess when he gets out of bed!”

“I would write about my best friend. She makes funny faces and always makes me laugh.”

Display the “People We Can Write About” chart (WA1). As the students offer ideas, record two or three of them as brief notes on the chart.

People We Can Write About

- baby sister—she follows me all over the house
- big brother—hair’s a mess in the morning
- best friend—makes funny faces

WA1

WRITING TIME

5 Introduce Writing Notebooks

Distribute a writing notebook, a pencil, and a self-stick note to each student. Explain that this year the students will do all their drafting, or first-time writing, in their notebooks. They will also keep ongoing lists of writing ideas in the back of their notebooks. Have the students count back ten pages from the end of their notebooks, mark that page with the self-stick note, and write “Writing Ideas” in big letters on that page. Explain that the students will list all of their ideas this year in this section of their notebooks.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering these questions, offer some examples like those in the “Students might say” note.

Technology Tip

Whiteboard activities (WA) are digital charts that are intended to be displayed using an interactive whiteboard.

Alternatively, you may print the PDF versions of the whiteboard activities and project them using a projection device.

For more information, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial. (AV73).

Teacher Note

Save the “People We Can Write About” chart (WA1) to use on Day 2.

On the first blank page of the writing ideas section, have each student write “People We Can Write About” at the top of the page. Have the students copy ideas they like from the class chart and then add other ideas for people they can write about. Encourage them to talk to the students sitting near them to get ideas.

After a few moments, signal for the students’ attention. Have them share a few more ideas, and add these to the chart.

Explain that the students will begin drafting in their notebooks tomorrow and that they may wish to use their ideas from today. Have the students write their names on their notebooks, and explain that you will remind them to bring their notebooks with them when they gather to talk about writing.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect and Adjourn

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you like about writing in your notebook today?

Tell the students how you would like them to return to their seats. Have them return. If necessary, have them practice moving to their seats until they are able to move in an orderly way. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to be responsible as you moved back to your seat?

If the students have difficulty answering the question, you might share your own observations.

You might say:

“I noticed you returned to your seats quickly and quietly, without bumping into one another.”

Ask the students to put their notebooks in their desks until tomorrow.

Teacher Note

You might tell the students that when they are being responsible, they are acting in ways that help them learn, work well with others, and make the classroom a caring and respectful learning community.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Learn procedures for the silent writing period
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Ask the students to gather on the rug, facing you. Remind them that they heard the first part of The Pain and the Great One and thought about people they know that they could write about. Explain that you will read the whole book aloud today. Invite the students to think about whether they might like to try writing a story like The Pain and the Great One.

2 Read The Pain and the Great One Aloud

Read the story aloud from the beginning, showing the illustrations as you read. Stop after:

p. 20 "My sister's a jerk."

Ask:

Q What is the second part of this book going to be about? How do you know?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking; then continue reading to the end of the story.

3 Discuss the Story

Briefly discuss the story, using the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What's funny about the way this story is written?

Q What do you find out about the big sister in this story?

Students might say:

"The story is funny because both kids think their parents love the other one more."

"The big sister can be just as much of a pain to her brother as he is to her."

Materials

- The Pain and the Great One
- "People We Can Write About" chart (WA1) from Day 1
- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student

Teacher Note

If necessary, explain to the students that an opinion is a strongly held point of view. When we give an opinion, we are telling what we think about something.

Teacher Note

Save the “People We Can Write About” chart (WA1) to use on Day 4.

Teacher Note

Double-spacing will give the students the necessary space to revise and edit pieces later on.

Teacher Note

A period of silent writing, during which you also write without interacting with the students, may feel new to you. We strongly encourage you to establish this routine early in the year. Students adapt to it quickly after a few reminders, and they learn to focus inward on their own thoughts during this time. By knowing that they are not to interrupt you or others, they come to rely on their own thinking and decisions as they write. As the writing period gradually lengthens over the coming weeks, you will begin conferring with students after writing yourself for 5-10 minutes.

Ask:

Q What other ideas do you have for people you could write about today? What might you write about them?

Display the “People We Can Write About” chart (WA1). As the students report ideas, record them on the chart. Point out that each character in The Pain and the Great One tells the story in a different way, and they have very different opinions about what life in their family is like. Explain that the students may also include their own opinions and ways of looking at situations as they write.

WRITING TIME

4 Learn Procedures for the Silent Writing Period

Have the students return to their seats. Explain that they will spend the next 5–10 minutes silently writing whatever they want to in their writing notebooks. They may add ideas to their writing ideas section or begin drafting a story at the front of their notebooks. Tell them that you would like them to double-space, or skip every other line, when they write in their notebooks.

Explain that during Writing Time, you would like the class to work in silence, without talking, whispering, or walking around. Tell the students that you will give them a signal when Writing Time is over. Explain that you will be writing along with them and ask that you not be interrupted. Give the students a moment to gather what they need, sharpen pencils, etc. Then have them write at their desks in silence for 5–10 minutes. Join them in writing, periodically scanning the room.

At the end of Writing Time, call for the students’ attention. Ask them to briefly review their writing from today and then ask:

Q Do you think you might want to continue adding to this piece later?

Explain that if they wish to add to this piece later, they will need to save space in their notebooks to do so. Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student, and tell them to place a note on each of the next two or three blank pages to remind them to save those pages to continue their piece. When they start a new piece of writing, they will skip the pages marked with self-stick notes. If the students don’t wish to continue these pieces, they do not need to save any pages today. Ask:

Q Did you remember to skip lines in your writing today?

Explain that it is important to skip lines so there is space to add or make changes later. Tell the students that you will remind them to skip lines as they write.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you write about today?
- Q Was it hard or easy to start writing? Why?
- Q What helped you focus on your writing today?

Ask the students to put their notebooks and pads of self-stick notes in their desks to use again tomorrow.

Learning About an Author

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner”
- Learn about a professional author
- Begin working in pairs
- Practice procedures for the silent writing period
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair the Students and Introduce “Turn to Your Partner”

TEKS 1.A.i
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step1 (all)

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other’s names. (See “Do Ahead” on page 5.) Explain that partners will stay together for Writing Time during the next few weeks.

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that you will often ask partners to turn and talk to each other. The purpose is to give everyone a chance to think more about what they are learning by talking to another person.

Explain the “Turn to Your Partner” procedure by saying, “Sometimes I will ask a question and say ‘Turn to your partner.’ When you hear this, you will turn to face your partner and start talking about the question. When I raise my hand, you will finish what you’re saying, raise your own hand so others can see the signal, and turn back to face me.”

Materials

- “About Judy Blume” (see page 22)
- The Pain and the Great One from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for Units 1 and 2. Take some time at the beginning of today’s lesson to let the students get to know each other by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere. You might have them report to the class some interesting things they learned about each other.

Teacher Note

If your students are already familiar with “Turn to Your Partner,” you do not need to model it here. Instead, take the opportunity to remind the students of your expectations for the procedure.

To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

Teacher Note

A visual signal, such as a raised hand, allows the students to finish what they are saying before turning back to face you. Build accountability by reminding the students to raise their own hands when they turn to face you.

Teacher Note

Notice that you ask the question before saying “Turn to your partner.” This gives all of the students a chance to hear and consider the question before moving to face their partners.

2 Model “Turn to Your Partner”

Have a student act as your partner, and model turning to face each other and introducing yourselves by your full names. Then ask the students to turn to face each other and introduce themselves. After a moment, raise your hand and have them turn back to face you.

Practice again by asking:

Q What are you interested in writing (or writing about) this year? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss their thinking. After a moment, signal for their attention. Have a few volunteers briefly share what they discussed with the class.

Explain to the students that you will read another piece of writing aloud and that the students will practice using “Turn to Your Partner” to discuss some questions. State that later in the lesson you will ask them to report how they did.

3 Read “About Judy Blume”

Show the cover of The Pain and the Great One and remind the students that they heard this book by Judy Blume earlier. They also thought about people in their lives that they could write about. Show page 2 of the book and read the dedication aloud. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Who do you think “the original Pain and the Great One” might be? Why might Judy Blume have dedicated this book to them? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. After a moment, signal for their attention and have one or two volunteers share with the class.

Explain that Judy Blume answers this and other questions about her writing life on her website and that you will share with the students some of what she has written there. Read “About Judy Blume” (see page 22) aloud slowly and clearly. After reading, ask:

Q What did you find out about Judy Blume? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. After a moment, signal for their attention. Invite one or two volunteers to share with the class. Ask the students to take responsibility for listening by raising their hands if they can’t hear the person who is speaking.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to be a responsible partner during “Turn to Your Partner”?

Students might say:

“I listened to my partner during ‘Turn to Your Partner.’”

“We talked about the question, and we didn’t talk about anything else.”

“We took turns and listened to each other.”

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will spend the next 10 minutes silently writing whatever they choose in their writing notebooks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA2) and explain what the students can do during this time.

Writing Time

- Write about something interesting you learned about Judy Blume.
- Add ideas to your writing ideas section.
- Continue the story you started yesterday, or begin drafting a different story.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA2

Remind the students to double-space, or skip every other line, as they write. Emphasize that during Writing Time you would like the class to work in silence, without talking, whispering, or walking around. Remind the students that you will give them a signal when Writing Time is over. Explain that you will be writing along with them and ask not to be interrupted.

Have the students write for 10 minutes. Join them in writing for about 5 minutes, and then walk around the room and observe them.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you write about today?
- Q What did it feel like to write quietly?

Ask the students to put their notebooks in their desks to use again tomorrow.

Teacher Note

Remember, joining the students for a few minutes of silent writing demonstrates that writing is important and that you expect the students to work independently and tap into their own thinking and creativity during this time. As you write, scan the class periodically to monitor how the students are doing. If you notice off-task behavior, stop the class and restate your expectations.

Day 4

Getting Ideas for Writing

Materials

- Grandpa's Face
- "People We Can Write About" chart (WA1) from Day 2
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1)

ELL Note

Cooperative structures like "Turn to Your Partner" support the language development of English Language Learners by providing frequent opportunities for them to talk about their thinking and listen to others.

Teacher Note

You may find that some of the read-alouds are below the average reading level for your grade. This is intentional, as the students will explore these texts as examples of writing. Students' writing development normally lags somewhat behind their reading level.

Teacher Note

The pages of Grandpa's Face are unnumbered. For easy reference, pencil in page numbers, beginning with the number 1 on the right-hand title page opposite the page that includes the author's name. (Page 5 begins "Tamika loved her grandpa.") This system is used throughout the program for all read-alouds with unnumbered pages.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Practice "Turn to Your Partner"
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Review "Turn to Your Partner"

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they learned "Turn to Your Partner" yesterday. Briefly review the procedure and ask the students to be ready to talk in pairs again today.

2 Read Grandpa's Face Aloud

Show the cover of Grandpa's Face and read the title and names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you encounter it in the text by reading the word, briefly defining it, rereading it in context, and continuing (for example, "'Tamika whined'—whined means 'said in a crying voice'—'Tamika whined'").

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

whined: said in a crying voice (p. 16)

pretending: making up something (p. 27)

Stop after:

- p. 18 "Her hand bumped her glass and knocked it over, sending green water spattering onto Grandpa's shirt and across the tablecloth."

Ask:

Q What is happening in this story? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. After a moment, signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, continue reading to the end of the book.

3 Discuss the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the book to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What is this story about? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for the students' attention, and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Ask:

Q This story tells about a time when Tamika was upset about a family member. If you were going to write a story about a time you were upset about a family member, what might you write?

Students might say:

"One time my brother wouldn't let me play with him. I was upset then."

"I was upset at my mom when she grounded me."

"It made me upset when my grandma went into the hospital. I wanted her to come home."

Display the "People We Can Write About" chart (🗨️ WA1). As the students offer ideas, add them to the chart.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Have the students return to their seats. Ask them to open their writing notebooks to the next blank page and spend the next 10–15 minutes writing whatever they want. Remind them to double-space their writing.

Emphasize that during the writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Everyone (including you) will be writing silently. You will let them know when Writing Time is over. Have the students write for 10–15 minutes. Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then walk around the room and observe them. If necessary, remind them to double-space their writing.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?

If you notice students having difficulty staying in their seats or writing in silence, call for the class's attention and remind them of your expectations before having them resume writing. Be aware that some students may need to just sit and think for a while before they start writing. Give them uninterrupted time to do this.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 6 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Remind them to use their self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away, and then have a few volunteers share what they wrote about today. Ask:

- Q Who wrote about someone in your own life? Tell us about it.
- Q What other things did you write about today?

Day 5

Getting Ideas for Writing

Materials

- She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl
- Grandpa's Face from Day 4
- The Pain and the Great One from Day 2
- Chart paper and a marker
- "Writing Time" chart (WA3)
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2)

Teacher Note

Save the "Writing Ideas" chart to use throughout the unit.

In general, charts that the students will refer to over time are written on chart paper rather than displayed on the whiteboard. See "Charts" on page xli for more about the use of paper and whiteboard charts.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Take responsibility for themselves

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Show the covers of The Pain and the Great One and Grandpa's Face and remind the students that they heard these books earlier. Explain that today you will read another story by the author of Grandpa's Face, Eloise Greenfield.

Explain that you are reading different texts aloud to help the students get ideas for their writing. On a sheet of chart paper titled "Writing Ideas," list write about someone you know. Explain that you will add other ideas to the chart over the coming weeks.

2 Read She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl Aloud

Show the cover of She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl and read the title aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below.

Stop after:

p. 14 “All she said was, ‘Where’s the baby? Where’s the baby?’”

Ask:

Q What’s happening in this story so far? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. After a moment, signal for the students’ attention. Without sharing as a class, continue reading to the end of the book.

3 Discuss the Story and Generate Writing Ideas

Facilitate a class discussion, using the questions that follow. Encourage the students to listen responsibly to the discussion by turning to look at the person who is speaking (for example, “Shawn is going to speak now. Let’s all turn and look at him”). Ask:

Q How does Kevin feel about his sister at the beginning of the story? At the end?

Q If you were going to write a story about a time you felt bad and then ended up feeling good, what might you write? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for the students’ attention, and have a few volunteers share with the class.

Students might say:

“One time I was crying because I didn’t want to get a haircut. Then I got one and it turned out OK.”

“In kindergarten I was afraid to come to school, but then I got used to it and I liked it.”

“I felt bad when my cat got sick. Then it got well and I felt happy again.”

Invite the students to write about some of their ideas today, if they wish.

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, help the students learn that they are talking to one another (not just to you) during class discussions by directing them to turn and look at the person who will speak. Ask speakers to wait until they have the class’s attention before starting to speak. If students are unable to hear the speaker, encourage them to take responsibility by politely asking the speaker to speak up. Repeating these techniques over the next couple of weeks will help the students learn to participate responsibly in class discussions.

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Turning and Looking at the Speaker” (AV16).

Teacher Note

The purpose of this unit is to give the students opportunities to write freely about topics they choose. Read-alouds are intended solely to stimulate creativity; the students may or may not be inspired to write something related to a read-aloud. At this point, they are not expected to learn the features of genres or to write in any particular genre.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will write silently for 10–15 minutes. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA3) and explain what the students can do during this time.

Writing Time

- Write about a time you felt bad, then good.
- Choose another idea from your writing ideas section and write about it.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA3

Remind the students that they do not need to finish pieces of writing before starting new ones. Also review that during the writing period all students (and you) will be writing silently on their own. You will let them know when Writing Time is over. Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?
- Are they skipping lines in their notebooks?

If necessary, remind the class of your expectations for silent writing during this time. Note which students write easily and which ones have difficulty getting started. If you notice any student struggling to start writing after 10 minutes, pull her aside quietly and ask questions such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q When was a time you felt bad, then good that you could write about? What could you write as a first sentence about that time?
- Q What ideas have you written in your writing ideas section? Let's pick one and talk about what you might write.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2); see page 7 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. If necessary, remind the students to use their self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away, and then have a few volunteers share what they wrote about today. Ask:

- Q Who wrote about a time you felt bad, then good? Tell us about it.
- Q Who added ideas to your writing ideas section? Tell us about them.
- Q What other things did you write about today?

---

EXTENSION

Read a Variety of Genres Aloud

One goal for the first few weeks of this program is to expose the students to a variety of genres through read-alouds. When you have time, read various types of fiction (such as realistic fiction, fantasy, mystery, and science fiction), nonfiction (such as memoir, biography, joke and riddle books, “how-to” books, magazine or newspaper articles, and other expository text), and poetry aloud.

About Judy Blume

excerpted from judyblume.com

About becoming an author, Judy says:

When I was growing up, I dreamed about becoming a cowgirl, a detective, a spy, a great actress or a ballerina. Not a dentist, like my father, or a homemaker, like my mother—certainly not a writer, although I always loved to read. I didn't know anything about writers. It never occurred to me [that] they were regular people and that I could grow up to become one, even though I loved to make up stories inside my head.

I made up stories while I bounced a ball against the side of our house. I made up stories playing with paper dolls. And I made them up while I practiced the piano, by pretending to give piano lessons. I even kept a notebook with the names of my pretend students and how they were doing. I always had an active imagination. But I never wrote down any of my stories. And I never told anyone about them.

When I grew up, my need for story telling didn't go away. So when my own two children started pre-school I began to write and I've been writing ever since! My characters live inside my head for a long time before I actually start to write a book about them. Then, they become so real to me I talk about them at the dinner table as if they are real. Some people consider this weird. But my family understands.

Where do you get your ideas?

I used to be afraid to answer that question. I thought if I ever figured it out I'd never have another one! But now I know that ideas come from everywhere—memories of my own life, incidents in my children's lives, what I see and hear and read—and most of all, from my imagination.

What's the hardest part of writing for you?

I dread first drafts! I worry each day that it won't come, that nothing will happen.

Is it fun to be a writer?

Not always. It's a solitary life and it can get lonely. You spend most of the day in a little room by yourself. But since I love to create characters and get to know them, I'm usually content.

About Judy Blume

About The Pain and the Great One, Judy says:

One rainy afternoon, when my children were about six and eight and the house was filled with their friends, I suddenly got an idea. I sat right down and wrote [The Pain and the Great One]. The brother and sister in this book are based on my daughter Randy and son Larry. The cat is our first family pet. . . . Randy and Larry, who are grown now, still sometimes refer to each other as “The Pain” and “The Great One.”

OVERVIEW

Article

“About Eloise Greenfield”

excerpted from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors & Illustrators by James Preller and from eduplace.com (see page 45)

Eloise Greenfield talks about growing up and writing for children.

Silver Seeds

by Paul Paolilli and Dan Brewer, illustrated by Steve Johnson and Lou Fancher

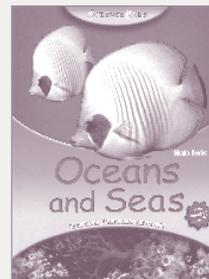

Acrostic poems describe the natural world.

Things Will Never Be the Same

by Tomie dePaola

Author Tomie dePaola narrates his life in a diary.

Oceans and Seas

by Nicola Davies

Photographs, text, and other features give information about the ocean.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I’m sure a beautiful empty notebook was the reason I wrote my first book. It was begging for filling.”

— Jacqueline Jackson

In your writing notebook, start a section at the back called “Writing Ideas.” Jot down events and ideas from your own life that you might want to write about. Consider:

- What is your earliest memory?
- When did something strange happen to you?
- When did you feel truly content or truly miserable?
- When did you realize something you didn’t know before?

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students explore prewriting techniques.
- Students learn about how a professional author gets ideas from her own life.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share.”
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 8 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a class set of the “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1) on page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book. This week, you will begin conferring with individual students during Writing Time and documenting your observations and suggestions for each student.

Day 1

Learning About an Author

Materials

- “About Eloise Greenfield” (see page 45)
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Week 1
- “Quick-write” chart (WA4)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I learned that . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

Teacher Note

Quick-writes are short exercises that everyone participates in and discusses. They are an opportunity for the students to learn a technique together and to practice overcoming their “inner critic” by writing quickly, continuously, and without planning or deliberation.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author
- Practice “Turn to Your Partner”
- Generate ideas from their own lives that they can write about
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Learn About Eloise Greenfield

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that last week they heard Grandpa’s Face and She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl, both by Eloise Greenfield. Explain that today you will read aloud some information about Eloise Greenfield. Invite the students to think as they listen about how her childhood might have influenced the kinds of stories she writes.

Read aloud “About Eloise Greenfield” (page 45) slowly and clearly, and then ask:

Q What did you learn about Eloise Greenfield from this reading? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for their attention, and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Students might say:

“I learned that she grew up in Washington, D.C.”

“I found out that Eloise Greenfield played games like dodgeball and hide-and-seek.”

“I learned that she writes about African American families like the one she grew up in.”

Point out that, like Eloise Greenfield, the students have been getting writing ideas from their own lives. On the “Writing Ideas” chart, add write stories from your own life.

2 Introduce Quick-writes

Explain that the students will do a quick-write to help them get ideas for their own writing. Explain that a quick-write is a 5-minute writing exercise that everyone will do together. It gives everyone a chance to practice a particular writing technique.

Display the “Quick-write” chart (WA4) and read it aloud.

Quick-write

- What is your earliest memory?
- When did something strange happen to you?
- When did you feel happy, sad, or afraid?
- When were you really, really surprised?

Ask the students to open to the next blank page in their notebooks and to pick one question to write about quickly for 5 minutes. Students who run out of things to say before the time is up should choose another question and keep writing. Encourage the students to keep their pencils moving and to write whatever comes to mind, without stopping to think too much about it.

After 5 minutes of silent writing, call for the students' attention. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What was it like to try to keep your pencil moving for the whole time?

Explain that the students will have more opportunities to practice writing quickly and continuously during quick-writes. Point out that this kind of writing can be very helpful in getting ideas for writing.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will write silently for 10–15 minutes. Display the “Writing Time” chart (🌐 WA5) as you explain what the students can do during Writing Time.

Writing Time

- Continue the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing about anything that interests you.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or a partner about their drawings. If necessary, support them by writing down key words or phrases they want to use so they can copy them into their writing.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?
- Are they skipping lines in their notebooks?

If you notice any student struggling to start writing after 10 minutes, pull him aside quietly and ask questions, such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q What interesting thing has happened in your own life that you could write about? What could you write as a first sentence for that idea?
- Q What ideas have you written in your writing ideas section? Let's pick one and talk about what you might write.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA3); see page 8 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away. Ask and discuss the questions that follow, inviting the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class, if they wish.

- Q If you worked on the piece you started during the quick-write, tell us about it.
- Q What else did you write about today? Tell us about it.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Learn More About Eloise Greenfield

Encourage the students to read more of Eloise Greenfield's books or to learn more about her by searching online with her name and the keywords "biography" or "books." Be aware that the students will hear the essays "Our House," "Chores," and "John and the Snake" from her book Childtimes during the Personal Narrative genre unit.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share”
- Hear and discuss a story based on the author’s life
- Generate ideas from their own lives that they can write about
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Teach “Think, Pair, Share”

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that today they will learn a cooperative structure called “Think, Pair, Share,” in which they take a moment to think quietly before turning to a partner to talk. Explain that you will ask a question and wait a few moments for them to think. When you say “Turn to your partner,” partners will turn to each other and begin talking. When you signal to them, they will end their conversation and turn their attention back to you.

To have the students practice “Think, Pair, Share,” ask:

Q What is one thing you want to keep in mind today to help your partner conversation go well? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After a few moments, signal for the class’s attention and have a few pairs share with the class what they discussed. Encourage the students to try the ideas they discussed as they use “Think, Pair, Share” during today’s lesson.

2 Read Part of Things Will Never Be the Same Aloud

Show the cover of Things Will Never Be the Same and explain that the author, Tomie dePaola, based this book on some of the experiences he had growing up. Explain that you will read a chapter about something that happened to him as a child. Tell the students that Miss Kiniry was his first-grade teacher and Miss Gardner was his second-grade teacher.

Materials

- Things Will Never Be the Same
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA6)
- Class set of “Conference Notes” record sheets (CN1)

Teacher Note

To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’ ” (AV13).

If your students are already familiar with “Think, Pair, Share,” simply remind them of your expectations.

Teacher Note

During “Think, Pair, Share,” pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before saying “Turn to your partner.”

Show the illustration on page 54 and read Tomie’s diary entry. Then read Chapter Eight (pages 54–61) aloud slowly and clearly, stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you encounter it in the text by reading the word, briefly defining it, rereading it in context, and continuing (for example, “‘Instead I saw lots of arithmetic’—arithmetic means ‘math’—‘Instead I saw lots of arithmetic charts up—all numbers’”).

Teacher Note

The Suggested Vocabulary and ELL Vocabulary lists include words that are important for the students to understand in order to comprehend the story. To maintain the flow of the story, these words should be defined during the reading but not discussed.

For more information, view “Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud” (AV30).

Suggested Vocabulary

arithmetic: math (p. 55)

diary key: small key used for the lock on a diary (p. 56)

skate key: key-shaped tool for tightening old-fashioned roller skates (p. 56) forbidden: not allowed (p. 57)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

fall leaves decorating the walls: leaf shapes hung up to make the room look prettier (p. 54)

copy: do the same thing that another person does (p. 59)

Stop after:

p. 57 “Miss Gardner saw them and said, ‘Tommy, take those crayons home and leave them there.’”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What has Tomie told us so far about being in second grade? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners discuss the question, signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the sentence and continue reading to the next stopping point.

p. 59 “‘What’s the matter now?’ Miss Gardner asked.”

Ask:

Q What else has Tomie told us about being in second grade? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question, and then signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the sentence and continue reading to the end of page 61.

3 Generate Writing Ideas

Explain that authors often write about their memories. Direct the students' attention to the "Writing Ideas" chart and add write about a memory. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What memories do you have that you might be able to write about?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

After a few moments, signal for the students' attention. Without sharing as a class, ask the students to open their notebooks to the writing ideas section and jot down some of their ideas.

After the students have had a chance to write, signal for their attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will write silently for 10–15 minutes. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA6) and explain what the students can do during this time.

Writing Time

- Write about a memory.
- Choose another idea in your writing ideas section and write about it.
- Write about something else that interests you.

WA6

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then begin conferring with individual students.

Teacher Note

If you notice many students having difficulty coming up with ideas, call for their attention. Have a few volunteers who have written their ideas read aloud what they have written. You might also model listing a few memories as the students suggest them. Then have the students go back to thinking and writing.

Teacher Note

For more information about conferring with students, see "Teacher Conferences" on page xxxviii. To learn more, view "Setting Up Writing Conferences" (AV7).

Teacher Note

You might use the “Conferences Notes” record sheet (CN1) as a survey of the students’ goals and interests. For more information, see “Student Goals and Interests Survey” on page vii of the Assessment Resource Book.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to remind the students to turn and look at the person who will speak. Ask speakers to wait until they have the class’s attention before starting to speak. Scan the class to ensure that all of the students are actively listening and participating in the discussion.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, call individual students to a back table and confer quietly with them for 5–10 minutes each to get a sense of their strengths and weaknesses as writers. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away, and have a few volunteers share what they wrote today. Ask questions such as:

- Q Who wrote about a memory from your own life? Tell us about it.
- Q Who added ideas from your own life to your writing ideas section? Tell us about them.
- Q What other things did you write about today?

WRITING ABOUT READING

WRITING ABOUT READING ACTIVITIES

Writing About Reading activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they discuss in the Being a Writer program. The activities are optional and can be done at the end of the lesson or another time. For more information, see “Writing About Reading” on page xx.

Make Connections to Things Will Never Be the Same

Show the cover of Things Will Never Be the Same and remind the students that they heard part of this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the story you heard from Things Will Never Be the Same?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. After they have shared, ask:

Q How does this story remind you of your own life?

Students might say:

"This story reminds me of being in second grade. Sometimes starting a new grade is hard."

"I love to draw, just like Tomie in the story."

"It reminds me of a time when I thought someone was being unfair to me, and I got mad."

Explain that the students will write about how the story from Things Will Never Be the Same reminds them of their own lives. Tell the students that when you write or talk about how a story reminds you of your own life, you are making a connection to the story. Explain that making connections to stories helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how the story from Things Will Never Be the Same reminds you of your life.

You might say:

"I want to write about how Tomie's diary reminds me of my own life.

I'll write: In Things Will Never Be the Same, Tomie dePaola writes in a diary. Notice how I included the title and author of the book in the first sentence. Next, I'll compare the book to my own life: When I was a kid, I had a diary, too. It had a green cover and yellow pages inside. I loved to write in my diary. Nobody was allowed to open it except me. My diary even had a key, just like Tomie's diary. Finally, I'll add a sentence that wraps up my paragraph. I'll write: This book makes me remember how much fun I had writing in my diary."

Have the students begin writing about their connections. If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

Materials

- Things Will Never Be the Same from Day 2

TEKS 7.A.i
Student/Teacher Narrative
Writing About Reading (all)

Materials

- “Writing Ideas” chart from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Practice “Think, Pair, Share”
- Explore a prewriting technique
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Review “Think, Pair, Share”

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that yesterday they learned a cooperative structure called “Think, Pair, Share,” in which they take a moment to think quietly before partners turn to each other and talk. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q When we use “Think, Pair, Share,” why is it helpful to take time to think before we start talking?

Tell the students that they will practice “Think, Pair, Share” again today.

2 Introduce a Prewriting Technique

Explain that writers often get new ideas for writing from pieces they have written earlier. Today you will show them a technique that some authors use to help them come up with new ideas.

Ask the students to open their notebooks to their latest piece of writing and to read the piece silently. After a moment, ask the students to reread the piece and underline one or two sentences they particularly like.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What do you like about the sentence (or sentences) you underlined?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners discuss the question, signal for their attention. Ask a few volunteers to read aloud the sentence they underlined and explain what they like about it.

Students might say:

“I like this sentence because I used the words slurpy and slimy and I like those words.”

“I underlined this sentence because it tells what I pictured in my mind.”

“I like the way this sentence sounds, so I underlined it.”

3 Quick-write: Explore a Prewriting Technique

Ask the students to copy one of the sentences they just underlined onto the top of the next blank page of their notebooks. Explain that the students will do a 5-minute quick-write today in which they will begin with the sentence they copied. Remind them to keep their pencils moving and to write whatever comes to mind without planning or thinking too hard about it.

Have the students write silently for 5 minutes. Call for their attention and have partners turn to each other and share what they wrote. Have a few volunteers read what they wrote to the class.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q Was it hard or easy to start writing from the sentence you wrote at the top of your page? Why? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners discuss the question, signal for their attention. Then ask and briefly discuss as a class:

Q When your partner read his or her writing to you, how did you show your partner that you were interested?

Explain that starting a new piece with a sentence from an earlier piece is a technique that the students can use whenever they feel stuck or when they don’t know what to write about. On the “Writing Ideas” chart, add start with a good sentence from another piece.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA7) and ask the students to write silently for 10–15 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA7

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to call individual students to a back table and confer with them quietly for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. If necessary, remind them to use self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing as a Class

Have a few volunteers share what they wrote, and encourage the class to think about what they can do to express interest and appreciation as their classmates share. Ask questions such as:

- Q What did you like about [Lyle's] piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Molly] about what she wrote?

6 Reflect on Interactions

Explain that the students will have frequent opportunities this year to read their writing to other students and the whole class. Ask questions such as:

- Q If you shared your writing with the class today, how did that feel?
- Q What did you do to listen responsibly to others when they shared their writing?

ELL Note

Questions like these help the students get to know one another, which in turn creates a sense of community that benefits everyone. English Language Learners, in particular, rely on having a supportive environment in which they can take the necessary risks to practice and grow in their use of English.

Students might say:

"I looked at the person who was sharing."

"I didn't talk while people were reading their writing."

"I turned my whole body toward the person reading so that person would know I was really paying attention."

Getting Ideas from Poetry

Day 4

In this lesson, the students

- Hear and discuss acrostic poems
- Think about acrostic poems they could write
- Write freely about things that interest them

Materials

- Silver Seeds
- "Writing Ideas" chart from Day 3
- Lined writing chart (WA8)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA9)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read Silver Seeds Aloud

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that you have been reading different kinds of texts to help them get ideas for writing. Tell the students that today you will read a book of poems aloud. Explain that poetry is another type of writing that can spark writing ideas. Encourage the students to think about whether they might like to try writing poems like these.

Show the cover of Silver Seeds and read the title and the authors' and illustrators' names aloud. Read the first four poems—"Dawn," "Sun," "Shadow," and "Hills"—by saying the name of each poem and reading the poem slowly and clearly, showing the illustration. Tell the students you will reread the poems while they look at the pages. Ask them to look carefully at the poems and think about what they notice. Reread the four poems; then use "Think, Pair, Share" to have partners discuss:

Q What do you notice about these poems? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have a few volunteers share with the class.

Students might say:

"The letters going down spell a word."

"The whole poem is about the word."

"Sometimes there is one word for the letter and sometimes more than one."

Point out that in each poem the first letters of each line, read together, spell the name of the poem. Read the remaining poems in the book slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations as you read.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty coming up with ideas, suggest some yourself (for example, for the letter c in the word cat you might suggest “cute,” “cuddly,” “curled up,” or “chasing a mouse”).

A sample acrostic poem for the word cat is:

Curled up in the window,

Asleep in the sun,

Taking an afternoon nap.

Teacher Note

The independent writing period is gradually getting longer. Observe the students carefully and increase the time more slowly, if necessary. The goal is to get the students writing independently for at least 30 minutes per day by the end of the first genre unit.

2 Write an Acrostic Poem as a Class

Tell the students that now they will write a poem as a class. Display the lined writing chart (🕒 WA8). Pick a short word and write it vertically where everyone can see it (for example, cat). Point to the first letter and ask:

Q What are some words that start with [c] that you might use in a poem about a [cat]?

Use the students’ suggestions to write a line that begins with the first letter. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss the second letter:

Q What are some words that start with [a] that you might use in a poem about a [cat]? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners discuss the question, ask one or two volunteers to share what their partners said. Using the suggestions, write a line that begins with the second letter of the word. Repeat the process until the poem is complete.

Point out that poems like these are called acrostic poems. Invite the students to try writing more poems like this today. Direct the students’ attention to the “Writing Ideas” chart and add acrostic poems to it.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (🕒 WA9) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Try writing an acrostic poem, or any poem.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.
- Add ideas to your writing ideas section.

WA9

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to call individual students to a back table and confer with them quietly for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Briefly Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away, and have a few volunteers share what they wrote today. Ask:

- Q Who wrote a poem today? Read it to us.
- Q What other things did you write about?
- Q Is it hard or easy to come up with ideas for writing? Why do you think so?

Materials

- Silver Seeds from Day 3

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write Opinions About Acrostic Poems

Show the cover of Silver Seeds and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the poems in Silver Seeds?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Explain that you will reread the book and that you want the students to listen closely and think about which poem they like best. Reread the book aloud; then ask:

Q Which poem in the book do you like best? Why is it your favorite?

Students might say:

"I like the poem 'Bee' best because it's funny. The very first word is 'Bzzzzz . . . .'"

"My favorite is the poem about the moon. It really does look like a melon."

"I like the poem about hummingbirds because they're my favorite birds."

Explain that each student will write a short paragraph about his favorite poem from Silver Seeds. If necessary, explain to the students that when they talk about liking something (or disliking it), they are giving an opinion, or expressing their own point of view. Tell the students that readers often have different opinions about the same thing and that is fine. What is important is that they give reasons that support their opinions.

Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing a short opinion paragraph about your favorite poem from Silver Seeds.

You might say:

"I'll start by stating my opinion in a way that's clear and easy to understand: The poem about fog is my favorite poem in Silver Seeds. I included the title of the book in my first sentence so the reader knows exactly what the subject of my paragraph is. Next, I want to give a reason that supports and explains my opinion. I'll write: The poem says that fog is a 'blanket over the land.' I like that because a big blanket of fog sounds cozy. Now I want to finish my paragraph by adding a sentence that reminds the reader what my opinion is. I'll write: That's why this poem is my favorite."

Ask each student to include a reason that supports her opinion and to end her paragraph with a sentence that reminds the reader what her opinion is. Have the students write about their opinions. If time permits, invite the students to share their opinion paragraphs with the class.

Teacher Note

You might reread the book aloud and ask the students to listen carefully for details about their favorite poems.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a nonfiction text
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard a book of poems to help them get ideas for writing. Explain that you will read another kind of text today. Invite the students to think about whether they might like to try writing a book like this.

2 Read Part of Oceans and Seas Aloud

Show the cover of Oceans and Seas and read the title and the author's name aloud. Read pages 6–13 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations. Clarify vocabulary as you encounter it in the text by reading the word, briefly defining it, rereading it in context, and continuing (for example, “. . . when they release hot gases and molten rock”—molten rock is ‘rock that is so hot that it is a liquid’—‘. . . when they release hot gases and molten rock’”).

Suggested Vocabulary

volcanic hot spots: places where volcanoes could erupt (p. 9)

molten rock: rock that is so hot that it is a liquid (p. 9)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

sunlit surface: top part of the water that has the sun shining through it (p. 7)

predators: animals that live by hunting other animals (p. 7)

vapor: many small drops of liquid that float in the air (p. 8)

landscape: view of natural scenery (p. 10)

gushes: pours out quickly (p. 11)

Materials

- Oceans and Seas
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA10)

Teacher Note

You might use self-stick notes to mark the places in the book where the suggested vocabulary words appear. Write the meaning of the word on the note to help you define it smoothly without interrupting the reading. To learn more, view “Preparing the Daily Lessons” on page xxxv. You may also wish to view “Planning a Lesson” (AV33).

Ask:

Q How is this book different from a story like The Pain and the Great One or Grandpa’s Face?

Students might say:

“It’s about real things. Those other stories are made up.”

“There are no characters.”

“It has real pictures.”

Point out that in a nonfiction book like Oceans and Seas the author writes true information about a specific topic. Direct the students’ attention to the “Writing Ideas” chart and add nonfiction books to it.

3 Quick-write: Brainstorm Nonfiction Topics

Ask the students to consider the following question individually for a moment:

Q What nonfiction topic would you like to know more about?

Have the students do a 5-minute quick-write in which they jot their ideas on a page labeled “Nonfiction Ideas” in the writing ideas section of their notebooks. After the quick-write, have partners share their ideas with each other, and then have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class. Encourage the students to continue to add to their nonfiction ideas during Writing Time, if they wish.

4 Discuss Being Responsible During Writing Time

Explain that the students will write silently for 15–20 minutes today. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have the students first think about and then discuss:

Q How will you act responsibly during Writing Time today? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I won’t walk around. I’ll just sit and write.”

“I’m going to sharpen my pencil ahead of time so I won’t have to do it during Writing Time.”

“I’m not going to talk to anyone at my table.”

Encourage the students to keep these things in mind during Writing Time today. Explain that you will check in afterward to see how they did.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10) and ask the students to write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add to your list of interesting nonfiction topics.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA10

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to call individual students to a back table and confer with them quietly for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or a partner about their drawing. If necessary, write down the keywords and phrases they want to use so the students can copy these words into their writing.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share Writing and Reflect

Have a few volunteers share what they wrote. Encourage the audience members to express their interest and appreciation.

After the volunteers share, help the students reflect on their behavior and interactions by briefly discussing the following:

Q What did you do during Writing Time that was responsible?

Q What can we do to make Writing Time even better next week?

About Eloise Greenfield

excerpted from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors & Illustrators
by James Preller and from eduplace.com

Except for three months in Parmele, North Carolina, Eloise Greenfield has spent her entire life in Washington, D.C. . . . The second oldest of five children, Eloise looks back on her childhood in Washington, D.C., with fondness. . . . “We didn’t have much money, but my father always had a job and we were able to manage.”

. . . On her ninth birthday, Eloise and her family moved into a new housing project named Langston Terrace. For Eloise, it was love at first sight. She remembers, “It was built on a hill, a group of tan brick houses and apartments with a playground at its center. . . . There were so many games to play and things to do. We played hide-and-seek at the lamppost, paddle tennis and shuffleboard, dodgeball and jacks. We danced in fireplug showers; jumped rope to rhymes; played Bouncy Bouncy Bally, swinging one leg over a bouncing ball; played baseball on a nearby field; had parties in the social room and bus trips to the beach.”

Although childhood was a magical time, it was also touched by racism. . . . “There were a lot of things we couldn’t do and places we couldn’t go. Washington was a city for white people. But inside that city, there was another city. It didn’t have a name and it wasn’t all in one area, but it was where black people lived.”

Eloise Greenfield has been writing since she was in her early 20s and has published 38 children’s books, including picture books, novels, poetry, and biographies. Her work often portrays strong, loving African American families and communities, such as the ones in which she grew up. . . . Mrs. Greenfield . . . has a son, a daughter, and four grandchildren.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

Atlantic

by G. Brian Karas
“I am the Atlantic Ocean” begins the narrator of this story of the sea.

Hello Ocean

by Pam Muñoz Ryan,
illustrated by Mark Astrella
A young girl experiences the ocean with all of her senses.

I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty

by Anita Ganeri
Interesting questions about the ocean are answered.

In November

by Cynthia Rylant, illustrated
by Jill Kastner
Sensory words describe this cold, autumnal month.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA11–WA16

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA4–CA5)
- “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1)
- “Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS1)

Reproducible

- Unit 1 family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Social Reflection” (AV14)

TEACHER AS WRITER

*“We do not write what we know;
we write what we want to find out.”*

— Wallace Stegner

In your writing notebook, write five questions that you have wondered about. For example:

- Why does a year seem to pass more quickly the older you get?
- What is dust made of?
- What was life like for your grandparents at your age?
- How does one ant let the rest of them know when you leave the sugar out?
- When socks go missing, where do they go?

Choose one question and write a possible answer. Include sensory details in your writing.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss nonfiction writing.
- Students use sensory details in their writing.
- Students explore prewriting techniques.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Partners begin to confer with each other.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students build on one another’s thinking during class discussion.
- Students learn procedures for pair conferences.
- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, write these three prompts on a sheet of chart paper (you will post the chart so the students can refer to it during Being a Writer lessons and throughout the school day):

“I agree with _____ because . . .”

“I disagree with _____ because . . .”

“In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 9 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 10 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student. (For more information about the family letters, see “Family Letters” on page lii.)

Day 1

Getting Ideas for Writing

Materials

- Atlantic
- Oceans and Seas from Week 2
- Charted discussion prompts, prepared ahead
- “I Could Be” chart (WA11)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA12)

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Teacher Note

If you have already taught your students these discussion prompts, simply review them and encourage their use today.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a narrative text
- Learn discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Teach Discussion Prompts

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that you have been reading and discussing various texts to help them get ideas for their own writing.

Point out that in class discussions it is important for the students to listen carefully and contribute their ideas. Direct the students’ attention to the charted discussion prompts and read them aloud. Explain that you would like them to use the prompts when they add to the discussion today and that doing so will help them listen and build on one another’s thinking. Keep the chart posted so the students can refer to it during the Being a Writer lessons and throughout the school day.

2 Read Atlantic Aloud

Show the cover of Atlantic and read the title and the author’s name aloud. Beginning with page 5, read aloud; then reread from the beginning, asking the students to listen carefully for anything they might have missed the first time. Continue reading slowly and clearly, stopping as described on page 49. Show the illustrations and clarify vocabulary as you read, using the procedure you used in Week 2, Day 2 (see page 29).

Suggested Vocabulary

ebb and flood: water goes away from the shore and comes back in (p. 19)

probed: carefully studied (p. 20)

longlines: long fishing lines (p. 23)

cerulean, cobalt, and ultramarine: different shades of blue (p. 24) skates: kind of fish (p. 27)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

conquered: controlled (p. 20)

oyster beds: areas at the bottom of the ocean where a lot of oysters grow (p. 23)

Stop after:

p. 11 "We are one big family."

Without stopping for discussion, reread again from the beginning. Ask the students to listen for anything they may have missed the first time, and then read aloud to the end of the book, including "Some Things About Me" on page 32.

3 Discuss Atlantic and Compare with Oceans and Seas

Show the cover of Oceans and Seas and remind the students that last week they heard part of this book. Ask and briefly discuss the question that follows. Remind the students to use the three prompts to add to the discussion. If you notice they are not using the prompts, pause and ask, "How could you say that using one of the discussion prompts?"

Q How is Atlantic similar to Oceans and Seas? How is it different?

Students might say:

"They are both about the ocean."

"I agree with [Joanne] because both books tell things about the ocean, like how there are tides and how the ocean changes shape."

"In addition to what [Kevin] said, Atlantic is more like a story."

"I agree with [Dierdre]. It doesn't have chapters or tell you what the words mean."

Point out that the author of Atlantic gives readers information about the Atlantic Ocean using I, as if the ocean were telling the story.

Q If you wanted to write a story in which I is a thing rather than a person, what could that thing be?

Display the "I Could Be" chart (WA11) (see diagram below) and record the students' ideas on the chart as they generate them.

I Could Be

- lava
- a shark
- a tree
- a fire truck

WA11

TEKS 10.E.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 (all)

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating ideas for I, suggest some like those in the diagram to stimulate their thinking.

4 Quick-write: Use I to Write as a Thing

Ask partners to work together to choose one of the recorded ideas and come up with a couple of I sentences they could write from that thing's point of view. Give partners a few moments to talk, and then have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Have each student pick another of the recorded ideas and do an individual 5-minute quick-write, writing several I sentences from that thing's point of view. Explain that if they run out of things to write from the point of view of that thing, they should pick another thing and continue writing. Have the students turn to the next blank page of their notebooks and begin writing.

After 5 minutes, call for the students' attention and have several volunteers read their sentences aloud. Encourage the students to continue to add to their pieces of writing during Writing Time, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA12) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the I piece you started during today's quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA12

Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Using Prompts

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q How do the discussion prompts help us talk as a class?

Encourage the students to continue to use the prompts in their discussions, and tell them that you will check in with them periodically.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to reinforce the students’ responsibility during class discussions by reminding them to turn and look at the person who will speak, having speakers wait until they have the class’s attention before starting to speak, and asking one another to speak up if they can’t hear. Also remind the students to use the discussion prompts to address their comments directly to one another.

Materials

- I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty
- Atlantic from Day 1
- Oceans and Seas from Week 2
- Charted discussion prompts from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA13)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- List questions about a nonfiction topic
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Learn procedures for pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read Part of I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty Aloud

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that earlier they heard Atlantic and parts of Oceans and Seas. Explain that today you will read from another nonfiction book about oceans that is organized differently. Invite the students to think about whether they might like to try writing a book like this today.

Show the cover of I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty and read the title aloud. Show the table of contents on pages 2–3 and read some of the questions aloud. Read pages 4–9 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

merchant ships: boats loaded with things to sell (p. 8)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

enormous: very big (p. 4)

Ask and discuss the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the book to help the students recall what they heard. Remind them to use the charted prompts to add to the discussion.

Q How does the author give us information about the ocean in this book?

Students might say:

“The author writes a question and then gives an answer.”

“In addition to what [Tanav] said, there’s information about the ocean in the captions that go with the pictures.”

Read several more questions in the table of contents aloud. Select a few as a class and read the answers aloud.

2 Quick-write: Generate Questions About a Nonfiction Topic

Remind the students that last week they wrote in their notebooks a list of nonfiction topics they would like to know more about. Ask them to review their nonfiction topics and pick one they are especially curious about. Have them open their notebooks to the next blank page and write that topic at the top of the page. Ask them to think quietly for a moment about:

Q If you were going to write a question-and-answer book about the topic you chose, what questions might you ask in your book?

Have the students take 5 minutes to jot down their own questions, and then have them discuss their topics and questions in pairs. Signal for their attention and give them a few minutes to write down any additional questions that came up while they were talking. Have a few volunteers share their topic and some of their questions with the class.

Encourage the students to add to their list of questions during Writing Time today, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA13) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more questions about a nonfiction topic.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA13

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Introduce Pair Conferences

Explain that the students will meet in pairs this year to confer, or to share and help each other with their writing. These meetings will be called pair conferences. The students will learn a lot this year about how to work with their partners to give and receive helpful feedback about their writing.

Explain that you would like the students to confer with their assigned partners about the writing they did yesterday. Point out that conferring means not just reading their writing to each other, but talking about the writing as well. Encourage partners to express their interest in and appreciation for each other’s writing today.

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What can you say or do after your partner reads his or her writing to you to show that you are interested in it and appreciate hearing it?

Teacher Note

In Unit 1, pairs begin conferring by informally sharing their writing with each other, usually during Sharing and Reflecting. They learn procedures for conferring and think about how to interact productively and respectfully. In subsequent units, the students will learn more about how to give and receive specific feedback about their writing.

If your students are already familiar with pair conferring from prior grades, simply review your expectations with them.

Students might say:

- "I could tell her what part I liked in her story."
- "I can ask him questions about what he wrote."
- "I can say, 'Thanks. I enjoyed hearing your writing.'"

Give partners several minutes to share and discuss their writing. Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students, without interacting with them, as they confer in pairs. Ask yourself:

- Do partners seem able to hear each other?
- Are they reading their writing to each other?
- Are they taking time to talk about the writing?

Note any problems pairs are having that you want to bring up during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4); see page 9 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When you notice the pair conferences winding down, signal for the students' attention and bring the class back together.

5 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Signal for the students' attention. Ask and have the class discuss questions such as:

- Q What went well in your pair conference today?
- Q What problems did you have? How will you avoid those problems the next time you confer?
- Q How did your partner express interest in or appreciation for your writing? How did that feel?

Students might say:

- "It was fun hearing my partner's writing and reading her mine."
- "There wasn't enough time for my partner to finish reading his writing. Next time I'll stop sooner."
- "My partner told me she thought my poem was funny. That made me feel good."

Explain that the students will have many opportunities this year to confer about their writing.

Teacher Note

It takes repeated experience for students to learn how to talk about their own behavior and social interactions. By hearing your observations first, the students come to understand over time what responsible behavior entails. For more information about the Reflecting step and other features of the lessons, see "Values and Social Skills" on page xxviii. To learn more, view "Social Reflection" (AV14).

Further Explore Oceans and Seas

If the students are interested, encourage them to research oceans and seas further by doing an online search using the keywords “oceans and seas.” They might also be interested in researching particular bodies of water (such as the Indian Ocean or the Gulf of Mexico) or particular animals that live in the ocean (such as sharks, whales, or dolphins).

Day 3

Getting Ideas for Sensory Details

Materials

- Hello Ocean
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA14)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a narrative text
- Use sensory details in their writing
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Use pair conference time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Build the Writing Community

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that they are working on creating a safe, caring writing community in which everyone feels comfortable expressing their creativity through writing. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q If a new student were to join our class, what would you tell him or her about our writing community? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Ask follow-up questions such as:

Q What would you want to tell the new student about our independent Writing Time? Pair conferring? Sharing our writing as a class?

Q What more can we do to make our writing community caring and respectful for everyone?

Encourage the students to keep their ideas in mind and to continue to build a community that feels good for everyone.

2 Read Hello Ocean Aloud

Explain that today the students will hear another book about the ocean.

Show the cover of Hello Ocean and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Ask the students to listen for words that help them imagine using their senses.

Read the book slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

chameleon: lizard that changes color (p. 4)

disclose: tell (p. 22)

fragrant ore: earth that smells (p. 23)

kelp: seaweed (p. 24)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

embrace: hug (p. 14)

aromas: smells (p. 22)

inhale: breathe in (p. 22)

3 Discuss the Story

Discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What is this place like?

Q (Show page 3.) What do you think is meant by “I’m here, with the five of me, again?”

If necessary, explain that “the five of me” are the child’s five senses. Point out that throughout Hello Ocean the child uses words that help us imagine what the ocean looks, sounds, tastes, feels, or smells like. Tell the students that we call such words sensory details. Explain that sensory details help us, as readers, imagine using those senses, too.

Show pages 14–19 of the book. Explain that in this part of the story, the child uses her sense of touch to describe the ocean. Tell the students that you will reread this part of the story, and as you read they should listen for sensory details (words) that help them imagine what the ocean feels like. After rereading the pages, ask:

Q What sensory details did you hear that help you imagine what this place feels like?

Students might say:

"I heard the words 'wet embrace.' I imagined the ocean giving her a hug."

"In addition to what [Kieran] said, the words 'sudden breezes' made me imagine the wind blowing on the beach."

"When I heard the words 'tide that tickles,' I imagined feeling the water tickling me."

4 Quick-write: Sensory Details for a Favorite Place

Ask the students to think of a place that they really like to be. After a moment, have them close their eyes and get a mental picture as they listen to the questions that follow. Pause between questions to give the students time to visualize. Ask:

- Q What do you see around you?
- Q What sounds do you hear?
- Q What do you smell and/or taste?
- Q What other things do you feel in this place?

Have the students open their eyes. Call on a few volunteers to share some of the sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and sensations they imagined. As they share, record their ideas as brief notes on a sheet of chart paper titled "Sensory Details."

Sensory Details

- white sand and blue water
- noises from electronic games
- the smell of pizza
- sweet chocolate flavor
- cold water in the pool

Have the students turn to the next blank page of their notebooks and write some other sensory details to describe the place they imagined. After 5 minutes, call for the students' attention and have a few volunteers read what they wrote to the class. Encourage the students to continue to include sensory details in the writing they do today.

Teacher Note

Save the "Sensory Details" chart to use on Days 4 and 5.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA14) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.
- Include sensory details like those you wrote during the quick-write.

WA14

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating questions, offer some suggestions like those in the “Students might say” note.

6 Discuss Asking a Question During Pair Conferences

Explain that today partners will ask questions about each other’s writing during pair conferences. Ask each student to take a moment to reread the writing he will share with his partner today. Then ask:

Q What is one question you’d like to ask your partner about your own piece of writing?

Students might say:

“I can ask my partner what part he liked best.”

“I can ask my partner to tell me if anything was confusing.”

“I want to ask my partner how she felt when I read her my piece.”

Briefly discuss:

Q What will you and your partner do to act responsibly during pair conference time today?

Tell the students that you will check in with them afterward to see how they did. Give them time to confer in pairs.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students, without interacting with them, as they confer in pairs. Ask yourself:

- Do partners seem able to hear each other?
- Are they reading their writing to each other?
- Are they asking each other questions about their own writing?

Note any problems pairs are having that you want to bring up during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5); see page 10 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When you notice the pair conferences winding down, signal for the students’ attention and bring the class back together.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Community

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

Q What question did you ask your partner about your writing today? How did your partner respond?

- Q I noticed that in some pairs, students [forgot to talk about the writing after reading it aloud]. How can we avoid that problem next time? Why is that important?
- Q How do you think we're doing building our writing community? What else can we do?

Getting Ideas for Sensory Details

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a narrative text
- Use sensory details in their writing
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard Hello Ocean and thought about sensory details in their writing. Direct the students' attention to the "Writing Ideas" chart and review the items on it. Add use sensory details to help the reader imagine using the senses (sight, hearing, smell, taste, touch). Remind the students to use the chart to help them get ideas for their own writing.

Explain that the students will hear another book in which the author uses many sensory details. Ask the students to listen for these as you read.

2 Read In November Aloud

Show the cover of In November and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations.

3 Discuss the Story and Generate Ideas About Other Months

Briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the book to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What is the month of November like in this book?
- Q What kinds of things do we smell in November? Hear? Taste? Feel?

Materials

- In November
- Hello Ocean from Day 3
- "Writing Ideas" chart from Week 2
- "Sensory Details" chart from Day 3
- "Writing Time" chart (WA15)

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating ideas, suggest some like those in the “Students might say” note and ask, “What else could you write about?”

As the students respond, record their ideas on the “Sensory Details” chart. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have the students first think about and then discuss:

Q If you wanted to write a story like this about a different month, what month would you choose and what would you say? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Record their ideas on the chart.

Students might say:

“I would write about October. In October you carve pumpkins and put on costumes.”

“I would write about June. That’s the beginning of summer vacation!”

“In August we go swimming and wear shorts and drink ice-cold lemonade.”

Encourage the students to write about a month they like during Writing Time, if they wish, and to use sensory details in their writing.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA15) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about a month you like.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA15

Join students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Confer in Pairs

Have partners confer. Remind them that partners will read and discuss their writing with each other. Encourage the students to listen for at least one thing they like about their partner’s writing to share with her.

6 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Signal for the students’ attention. Facilitate a discussion using the questions that follow, and encourage the students to give their full attention to the person who is speaking. Ask:

- Q Did you or your partner write about a month, like In November, today? Tell us about it.
- Q What sensory details did you or your partner include?

- Q What did you enjoy or appreciate about your partner’s writing today? [pause] Turn to your partner.

WRITING ABOUT READING

WRITING ABOUT READING ACTIVITIES

Writing About Reading activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they discuss in the Being a Writer program. The activities are optional and can be done at the end of the lesson or another time. For more information, see “Writing About Reading” on page xx.

Materials

- In November from Day 4

Make Connections to In November

Show the cover of In November and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the book In November?

Have volunteers share their thinking. After a few volunteers have shared, ask:

Q How does this book remind you of your own life?

Students might say:

“It reminds me of visiting my grandma for Thanksgiving last year.”

“I like playing in the snow, and this book reminds me of that.”

“This book reminds me of my little brother because he was born in November.”

Explain that when you write or talk about how a book reminds you of your own life you are making a connection to the book. Point out that making connections to books and stories helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how In November reminds you of your life.

You might say:

“I’m going to write about how this book reminds me of my own life. I’ll start by introducing the book and the author: In her book In November, author Cynthia Rylant tells about some foods people eat in November, such as squash and pumpkin. Next, I’ll describe the book’s connection to my own life: That reminded me of the first time I made a pumpkin pie. When I was making it, I forgot to add salt. That made the pie taste strange. Nobody wanted to eat it. Finally, I’ll write one last sentence to finish my paragraph: Now I always remember to add salt when I make pumpkin pie!”

Explain that the students will now write about how In November reminds them of their own lives. Have the students return to their seats and write about their connections. If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a narrative text
- Use sensory details in their writing
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Select and share a favorite sentence
- Give their full attention to the person who is sharing

Materials

- In November from Day 4
- Student Writing Handbook page 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA16)
- Copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Explore Sensory Details in In November

Have the students bring their pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard In November by Cynthia Rylant. Ask:

Q What do you remember from this book about the month of November?

Ask the students to close their eyes and imagine as you read a passage aloud from the book. Ask them to listen for words and phrases that help them get a mental picture. Read the following passage aloud twice:

p. 4 “In November, the earth is growing quiet. It is making its bed, a winter bed for flowers and small creatures. The bed is white and silent, and much life can hide beneath its blankets.”

Ask:

Q What words or phrases did you hear that helped you imagine?

Distribute the Student Writing Handbooks, one to each student. Explain that the Student Writing Handbook contains copies of passages from the read-alouds, as well as spelling lists and other kinds of pages to help the students with their writing this year.

Have the students open their copies of the handbook to page 2, and explain that this passage and several others from In November are reproduced on the page. Ask partners to work together to read the four passages and to underline words and phrases that help them get mental images.

After a few minutes, call for the students’ attention and have several pairs share words that they underlined. Encourage them to give their full attention to the people who are speaking.

Before Writing Time today, ask the students to circle a word or phrase they particularly like on Student Writing Handbook page 2. Challenge them to try to include that word or phrase somewhere in their own writing today.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will choose a favorite sentence after Writing Time today, and encourage them to write interesting sentences that they can share with the class. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA16) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.
- Try to include the circled word or phrase in your own writing.
- Include other sensory details.

WA16

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses:

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Share Favorite Sentences

Ask the students to take a moment to look over this week’s writing and underline a favorite sentence that they wrote to share with the class. Explain that it can be a sentence with good sensory details, interesting action, or anything else that makes it a special sentence.

After allowing sufficient time for the students to select their sentences, go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud, without discussion. Encourage the students to give their full attention to the person who is sharing his writing.

When everyone has shared, ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q Did knowing that you were going to share a sentence help you to write more interesting sentences today? Tell us about it.

4 Reflect on Sharing and Giving Full Attention to the Person Speaking

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q How does it feel to have everyone’s full attention when you share your writing? How does it feel when you don’t have everyone’s full attention?

Students might say:

“I feel like people are really interested in what I’ve written. That feels good.”

“I agree with [Henry]. When everyone listens, I feel like my writing is interesting to other kids.”

“In addition to what [Maria] said, if I know that people are really going to listen to my writing, it makes me try harder to be a good writer.”

Encourage the students to continue to build the writing community by giving their full, respectful attention whenever a classmate is sharing his thinking or writing.

EXTENSION

Discuss the Students’ Writing Goals and Interests

Remind the students that during individual writing conferences over the past few weeks, you asked each student questions about her ideas and feelings about writing. Tell the students that you learned a lot about

Teacher Note

The end-of-lesson reflection is important to the students’ growth as writers and to their social development. We encourage you to allow at least 5 minutes at the end of each period to help the students reflect on their work and interactions. For more information about the structure of the Being a Writer lessons, see “A Typical Daily Lesson” on page xix. To learn more, view “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3).

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see “End-of-unit Considerations” on page 68.

what the class is interested in writing about during the Being a Writer lessons, as well as how each student wants to improve as a writer.

You might say:

"Many of you said that you were interested in writing reports this year. We'll spend time learning how to research a topic, take notes, and then organize your notes into a report. Some of you said that you'd like to learn how to use dialogue in your writing, and others said that they would like to practice writing poems. I also learned that a few students are going to try to write longer stories this year."

Explain that you will use this information to make sure that everyone has fun writing this year. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What do you want to do better as a writer this year?
- Q What are you excited to write about this year?

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the end of Unit 1. Students will keep the same partners in Unit 2.
- Send home with each student a copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1) (see "Do Ahead" on page 47).

Assessments

- (Optional) Prior to moving on to the next unit, you might review the students' responses to the questions on the "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1) to identify patterns across the members of the class, as well as individual comments that stand out to you. After analyzing the students' responses, you might facilitate a class discussion with them about what you learned about them as writers and how you plan to build their love of writing over the course of the year. For ideas on how to facilitate this discussion, see the extension "Discuss the Students' Writing Goals and Interests" on page 67.
- (Optional) If you obtained beginning-of-year writing samples, you might want to reflect on each student's writing using the "Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record" sheet (WS1) on page 4 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information on analyzing the writing samples, see "Beginning- and End-of-the-year Writing Samples" on page ix of the Assessment Resource Book.

Unit 2

The Writing Process

During this two-week unit, the students learn about the writing process by working with pieces of writing from their first drafts through publication. They select drafts to develop and publish. They reread their work critically and revise it, replacing overused words with more interesting ones and exploring strong opening sentences and effective titles. They learn procedures for proofreading for spelling and conventions using the Word Bank and Proofreading Notes section of their Student Writing Handbooks. They write final versions, publish them as books, and present their books to the class from the Author's Chair. They learn about a professional author's writing process, and they continue to confer about their writing in a caring and responsible way.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“The beautiful part of writing is that you don’t have to get it right the first time, unlike, say, a brain surgeon. You can always do it better, find the exact word, the apt phrase, the leaping simile.”

— Robert Cormier

Select a short draft that you wrote during Unit 1 to revise and develop. Use self-stick notes to mark places you might revise.

Consider:

- What places in your draft do you really like? Why do you like them?
- Where could you write more clearly?
- What words could you replace with more interesting ones?
- How could you make your opening sentences stronger?
- What would be an effective title for your piece?

Revise your draft, either by marking up your first draft or by writing a second draft.

Writing Focus

- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.
- Students review their recent drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish.
- Students reread their writing critically and revise it.
- Students generate alternatives for overused words.
- Students explore strong opening sentences and effective titles.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selection with your English Language Learners before you read it to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 14 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, review the pieces you have written so far this year and select a short passage to use to model replacing overused words with more interesting ones. Prepare your sample writing to display. Alternatively, you can use the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3).
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a class set of the “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1) on page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 15 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Selecting and Completing Drafts

Materials

- “More About Judy Blume” (see page 94)
- The Pain and the Great One from Unit 1
- “Questions About First Drafts” chart (WA1)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

In this unit, the students will work with the same partners they had in Unit 1.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author’s writing process
- Review their recent drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first draft of their selected writing pieces
- Use Writing Time responsibly

ABOUT TEACHING THE WRITING PROCESS

In Unit 2, the students are introduced to the writing process. They select drafts to develop, analyze and revise the drafts, proofread their work, and publish it. They confer about their drafts and consider various ways to improve their writing. The process they learn in this unit will be repeated in each of the genre units, so the students will have multiple opportunities to hone their revision, proofreading, and publishing skills.

If your students are familiar with the writing process from prior years, acknowledge this prior learning and explain that during this unit they will review and learn more about the writing process.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that over the past weeks they have been hearing various kinds of books and getting many different ideas for writing. Explain that in the coming weeks, each student will develop one piece of writing into a book for the classroom library. Point out that because other people will read their books, they will want to make the books as interesting, enjoyable to read, and free of errors as any other book in the library. Today they will review all of the drafts they have written so far this year, and each will select one to finish and develop into a book.

Before the students select their drafts, explain that they will learn how Judy Blume, a professional author they met in Unit 1, develops a piece of writing into a book.

2 Review What the Class Has Learned About Judy Blume

Show the cover of The Pain and the Great One and read the title and the author’s name aloud. Remind the students that they heard this book earlier. If necessary, reread one or two passages to help the students recall the story.

Remind the students that they also learned a little about the author, Judy Blume. Ask:

Q What do you remember about Judy Blume?

After a few volunteers have shared, explain that today you will read a little more about Judy Blume from some interviews she has given. Point out that in this excerpt, Judy Blume talks about her typical day and her writing process, or how she writes.

Read the excerpt aloud slowly and clearly (see “More About Judy Blume” on page 94). After reading, use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What did you learn about Judy Blume’s writing process? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Why do you think she feels the most creative when she’s rewriting? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I learned that revising is what Judy Blume likes best about writing.”

“I think she means that she has her story together, and now she can have some fun coming up with ways to make it really good.”

3 Prepare to Review Drafts

Point out that professional authors usually work a long time on a piece of writing to get it ready to be published, or made into a book to be read by others. Authors start with an idea or a first draft. After that, they rewrite, do research, add and take out words and information, and make the piece as interesting and clear as possible. This process is called revision. Explain that in the coming two weeks, each student will revise a piece of writing to get it ready to publish.

Explain that during Writing Time today, you would like the students to carefully reread all of the drafts they have written in their notebooks and each select one draft to revise and publish. Encourage the students to select drafts that interest them, that they can imagine making changes to, and that will be fun to develop into books for their classmates to read.

4 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Ask the students to reread their drafts and each select one draft to develop into a book. Then have the students start

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I remember that . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question. For more information about supporting English Language Learners, see “Additional Strategies for Supporting ELLs” on page xlix.

To learn more, view “Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners” (AV32).

thinking about what they can add or change to make their drafts more interesting, clear, and complete.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room. Encourage the students to select pieces that offer revision possibilities. These include narratives of most kinds. If you notice them selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, pieces they feel are already “perfect,” or very long or very short pieces), gently guide them toward more appropriate choices. Also guide them away from drafts that are not double-spaced. Support the students by asking them questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?
- Q What can you imagine adding or changing in this piece to make it more interesting?

5 Discuss Completing First Drafts

When the students have finished reviewing their drafts, display the “Questions About First Drafts” chart (WA1). Ask the students to think quietly to themselves about each of the questions. Then read the questions one at a time, pausing after each to give the students time to think. (Do not stop to discuss the questions at this point.)

Questions About First Drafts

- Does your writing make sense? What parts might you want to check again to make sure that they make sense?
- What still needs to be added to your first draft for it to be finished?
- What else might readers want to know about when they are reading your piece?
- Read the last sentence of your piece. Does it feel like an ending? What more can you write to make it feel like an ending?

WA1

Have partners turn to face each other and discuss their thinking. After both partners have had a chance to share their writing and thinking, signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share with the class.

Explain that the students will finish their drafts today, making sure they have included everything they want to say at this point. Any student who finishes with her draft may set it aside until tomorrow and work on another piece of writing. Encourage the students to work responsibly and independently during Writing Time.

WRITING TIME

6 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Have the students work silently for 20–25 minutes to finish their first drafts. Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will most of the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?
- If not, how much additional time might they need to finish their drafts?

If you notice that many students need more time to finish their first drafts, make time for them to finish before you go on to the Day 2 lesson. Any student who has finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 14 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will begin to revise their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does it help to build our community when you do that?

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Learn More About Judy Blume

If the students are interested in finding out more about Judy Blume, have them watch a conversation with her or read another interview with her online. To find a video or print interview with the writer, search

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind students who finish writing their first drafts before Writing Time is over that they can look in the writing ideas section of their notebooks to get ideas for new pieces to write.

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind the students to use the discussion prompts they learned in Unit 1 as they respond. They are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

Technology Tip

You might teach the following Technology Mini-lessons to help your students learn how to participate safely in online communities: Mini-lesson 1, “Navigating Safely Online”; and Mini-lesson 2, “Maintaining Privacy Online,” in Appendix A. For more information, see “About Digital Citizenship Lessons” on page 702.

Day 2

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising for Uninteresting Words” chart (WA2)
- Your own charted first draft OR “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)
- Class set of “Conference Notes” record sheets (CN1)

Teacher Note

Teacher modeling is a regular feature of the Being a Writer program. You can use chart paper or interactive whiteboard charts (whiteboard activities) for your modeling. For more information about whiteboard activities in the Being a Writer program, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

TEKS 11.C.vii

Steps 1–3 (all, beginning on page 78 and continuing on to page 80)

In this lesson, the students:

- Generate alternatives for overused words
- Reread their drafts critically
- Revise their drafts
- Work independently during Writing Time
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

ABOUT TEACHING REVISION

The lessons in this unit are designed to give the students guided practice with rereading and critically analyzing their drafts before they put pencil to paper to revise. In the initial step of the process, you will ask the students specific questions about their drafts, and they will use self-stick notes to mark places where they could possibly revise. They will then watch you model making some revisions to your piece before they start to revise their own drafts.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Generate Interesting Words

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Review that they completed their first drafts yesterday. Remind the students that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces of writing as interesting and enjoyable to read as possible before publishing them. Explain that today you will ask them to think about specific ways that they might improve their drafts.

Explain that one thing authors do to make their writing better is replace uninteresting, everyday words with other, more interesting words to communicate exactly what they mean. Title a sheet of chart paper “Use More Interesting Words,” and write I read a good book beneath the title. Underline the word good and explain that this is an example of a word that can be used too often. Then ask:

Q What other words could we use to mean good in this sentence? For example, what words might we use to describe a book that was very, very good?

Record the words as students report them. Point out that the words the students suggest are not only more interesting and fun, but they also communicate exactly what the writer means.

Students might say:

“exciting”

“wonderful”

“amazing”

“excellent”

“great”

Follow the same procedure to have the students brainstorm alternative words for big and small. (Alternatives for big include large, huge, humongous, and enormous. Alternatives for small include tiny, little, short, petite, and microscopic.) Add these to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart.

Point out that in addition to adjectives (or descriptive words) like good, big, and small, many verbs (or action words) can be used too often, such as run, walk, sit, and said. Explain that these words can also be replaced with more interesting words.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What interesting words can you think of to replace said? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss for a few moments, and then signal for the students’ attention. Ask volunteers to report their ideas as you record them on the chart. Alternatives for said include asked, shouted, replied, exclaimed, mumbled, whined, and cried. Add these to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart.

2 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have each student open his notebook to his completed first draft and quietly reread it. Ask the students to look up when they are finished.

Teacher Note

This lesson may require an extended period. To ensure that the lesson is well paced and that the modeling in Step 3 goes smoothly, you might prepare the draft you will use and your remarks about revising it in advance.

Skill Practice Note

Recognizing adjectives and verbs and understanding their functions may be review for some of your students. However, if the students need more practice with these skills, take time to review them (see Lesson 13 and Lesson 19 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Teacher Note

Save the “Use More Interesting Words” chart to use on Day 3 and throughout the unit. For more practice with generating interesting words, see the extensions “Generate Alternatives for Other Overused Words” on page 83 and “Use a Thesaurus” on page 92.

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience thinking about their drafts and reading them critically before they begin to revise.

Teacher Note

Have pads of small self-stick notes available for the students to use during the revision phase of this unit and of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so that it marks the text without covering it.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about a couple of specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Uninteresting Words” chart (WA2) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark them with self-stick notes.

WA2

Revising for Uninteresting Words

- Look for the words good, big, and small in your draft. Mark them with a self-stick note.
- Look for other everyday, uninteresting words that you might be able to replace with more interesting words. For each one, mark the margin next to the word with a self-stick note and write replace on the note.

Have one or two volunteers share with the class the words they marked. Probe their thinking by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you decide to mark that word?
- Q What word could you use to replace the one you marked?

3 Model Revising

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will look at the words they marked with self-stick notes and replace them with more interesting words. Ask the students to watch as you model making revisions.

Display your own charted first draft or the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by identifying overused words and writing replace in the margin next to those words. Then model replacing words like said, good, big, and small by crossing them out and writing alternative words above or below them.

You might say:

“I used the word said to describe how I was talking to my parents. Said is an everyday, uninteresting word that can be used too often. What is a more interesting word that could replace it? I was talking very loudly, so maybe I’ll replace said with exclaimed.”

Sample First Draft

One Saturday last summer, my parents drove my brother and me to the home of their friends George and Patty. I didn't want to go. I <sup>exclaimed</sup> ~~said~~, "Mom and Dad, I want to stay home and ride my bike!" replace

George and Patty met us at the door with beaming smiles. We followed them through their house and out to the backyard. I heard some soft barks and some loud barks. Four <sup>tiny</sup> ~~small~~ puppies came running up to us! There also was a <sup>huge</sup> ~~big~~ dog that turned out to be the puppies' mother. replace

My brother and I played with the puppies for a while. They were all <sup>wonderful</sup> ~~good~~ dogs. Then my dad said something I still can't believe. replace "Which puppy do you want, kids?" he asked. "That is, if you even want one."

Did we ever! It only took us a minute to agree on the smallest puppy of the group. And that's how we got Beck, the best dog in the world.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to delete and replace everyday, uninteresting words in their own drafts. Encourage the students to refer to the "Use More Interesting Words" chart as they replace everyday, uninteresting words with more interesting words.

WRITING TIME

4 Revise Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA4) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

TEKS 11.C.vii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 4 (all, beginning on page 81
and continuing on to page 82)

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from talking with partners about words they have marked in their drafts. Provide a place for them to confer quietly during Writing Time.

Writing Time

- Review the places you marked with self-stick notes.
- Replace everyday, uninteresting words with more interesting words.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish the revision.
- If you finish, look for other places to make the words more interesting, or work on another piece of writing.

Explain that you will confer with the students after the first 5–10 minutes of Writing Time, so you expect the students to work independently. Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to revise their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Revisions and Reflect on Participation

Have the students put their pencils away and gather with their notebooks to share their writing. Have one or two volunteers share a revision they made today by first reading aloud their original passage and then reading their revised passage. Encourage the rest of the students to give their full attention to the person who is sharing. Facilitate discussion about each volunteer’s revised passage by asking questions such as:

- Q [Anna], why did you choose to revise that passage?
- Q How do you think [Anna’s] revision improves the piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Anna] about her revision?

Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q How did you do today giving your full attention to the person who was sharing his or her writing?
- Q If you weren’t giving your full attention today, what will help you give your full attention the next time we have a class discussion?

Students might say:

“I was distracted today. I think it would help for me to sit closer to the person who’s sharing.”

“It might help if we don’t have anything in our hands when people are sharing.”

“I want to remember to turn and face the person who’s sharing.”

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, offer suggestions like those in the “Students might say” note.

EXTENSION

Generate Alternatives for Other Overused Words

Using the same procedure you used in today’s lesson (see Day 2, Step 1 on page 78), brainstorm words that can replace other everyday, uninteresting words, such as bad and sad. Add these to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart. (Examples of words you might substitute for bad are awful, terrible, appalling, ghastly, and horrific; examples for sad include depressing, gloomy, miserable, pitiful, and tragic.) For an additional activity, see the extension “Use a Thesaurus” on page 92.

Day 3

Pair Conferencing

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- “Use More Interesting Words” chart from Day 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)

Teacher Note

This lesson may require an extended class period. To ensure that the lesson moves smoothly, keep discussions focused and brief. (See the Facilitation Tip on page 233 for additional support for pacing class discussions.)

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, suggest some ideas like those in the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart and ask, “What else can you ask your partner?”

In this lesson, the students:

- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Use pair conference time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare for Pair Conferences

Explain that today partners will meet to confer about their drafts. This is an opportunity for each student to get feedback from a reader about the strengths of her piece and how it might be improved.

Explain that, in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help the other person create the best possible piece of writing. It is important that each student shares what he likes about his partner’s piece and also offers suggestions and questions to help his partner improve the piece. Ask:

- Q What kind of feedback do you think would be helpful to improve a piece of writing? Why?*
- Q If you have questions or suggestions for improving the piece, how would you want to communicate that so it helps your partner?*

Encourage partners to use a helpful tone when giving each other feedback about their writing.

2 Think About What to Ask Partners During Pair Conferences

Before beginning the pair conferences, ask the students to reread their own drafts and think about what they want to ask their partners about their writing. After the students have had a chance to read, ask:

- Q What would you like to ask your partner today about your own draft?*

Have volunteers share their thoughts and record these as questions on a sheet of chart paper titled “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” (see diagram on page 85).

Questions for My Partner About My Draft

What part do you like best?

Is anything confusing?

What can I write to make it clearer?

Explain that partners will take turns reading their drafts, including revisions, aloud. Remind the students to use the questions on the chart to get specific feedback before going on to discuss their partners' drafts.

Before having the students work in pairs, model conferring with a volunteer. Begin by deciding together who will go first. When you discuss your draft, model referring to the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart to get ideas. When you discuss your partner's draft, model giving helpful feedback.

You might say:

"Would you like to read first, or would you like me to read first?"

"Is there anything in my draft that you found confusing?"

"I thought the part about [scoring a goal] was really exciting. I wasn't quite sure if that happened before or after [your coach called the time-out]. Maybe you could make that part clearer."

3 Confer in Pairs

Give the students ample time to confer in pairs. You might let pairs spread out in the classroom during the conferences so partners can hear each other.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe conferring pairs without interacting with them. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are they discussing questions from the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart?
- Are partners giving each other specific feedback?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe so you can discuss them with the students in Step 4. Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 15 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Teacher Note

For more information, view "Managing Pair Conferences" (AV8).

Facilitation Tip

Continue to prompt the students to turn and look at the person who will speak. (For example, you might say, “James is going to speak now. Let’s all turn and look at him.”) During the discussion, scan the class to ensure that the students are looking at the person who is speaking. If necessary, interrupt the discussion to remind them of your expectations.

Teacher Note

Save the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart to use in Week 2.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Feedback Received

Gather the class and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed, and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Explain that authors pay close attention to feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise Drafts Based on Conference Feedback

Have the students return to their desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart ( WA5) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes. Remind them to refer to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart, if needed.

Writing Time

- Add or change things in your draft based on partner feedback.
- Replace everyday, uninteresting words with more interesting words.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA5

As the students work, circulate around the room. Support any student who is having difficulty incorporating feedback into her draft by having her join you at a back table and quietly discuss questions such as:

- Q What feedback did your partner give you about your draft? Do you agree or disagree with it? Why?
- Q Your partner said that he [got confused at the end of your story]. What did he say was [confusing] to him? How can you rewrite it [so it’s clear]?

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Revisions

Have a few volunteers share revisions they made today by reading their original passages aloud and then reading their revised passages. Have the volunteers tell the class why they made their revisions and how the changes improve their pieces.

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore strong opening sentences
- Reread their writing critically
- Finish revising their drafts
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read and Discuss Strong Opening Sentences

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Tell the students that today they will focus on the opening sentences (the first few sentences) of their pieces. Explain that authors pay especially close attention to these sentences because good opening sentences get readers interested and make them want to keep reading. Explain that the students will listen to opening sentences from several read-aloud books from earlier in the year. They will think about how each author tries to grab our attention at the very beginning of the book.

Show the first page (page 5) of The Pain and the Great One and read it aloud twice. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How do these sentences grab your attention and make you want to keep reading? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss for a few moments. Then signal for the students’ attention and ask one or two volunteers to report their ideas.

Materials

- The Pain and the Great One from Unit 1
- Grandpa’s Face from Unit 1
- Atlantic from Unit 1
- In November from Unit 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA6)

Students might say:

"When the sister says her little brother won't get out of bed in the morning and the mom has to carry him into the kitchen, it makes you imagine what's happening."

"In addition to what [Nancy] said, it makes you want to keep reading to find out why she calls her brother a pain."

"In addition to what [Chris] said, the opening sentences make it seem like the book is going to be funny."

Repeat this procedure using the opening sentences from Grandpa's Face (page 5), Atlantic (page 5), and In November (page 4).

Point out that strong opening sentences often grab the reader's attention with interesting details ("In November, the earth is growing quiet. It is making its bed, a winter bed for flowers and small creatures"), hint at what is coming in the piece ("I am the Atlantic Ocean"), or introduce an important character ("Tamika loved her grandpa. She loved the quiet way he talked and the surprise of his loud laughter").

2 Review Opening Sentences in Drafts

Ask the students to reread the first few sentences of their own drafts. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q How might you revise your opening sentences to grab your reader's attention and make him or her want to keep reading? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students' attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Students might say:

"I think my opening sentence will grab the reader's attention because it says 'I thought it was going to be a regular old Saturday, but it wasn't.'"

"Maybe I'll add some more details so the reader can really imagine what everything looks like."

"I think I'm going to revise my opening sentences because right now my story just starts with 'One day I went to the store.' It's not very interesting."

Encourage the students to revise their opening sentences during Writing Time today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Drafts

Tell the students that tomorrow they will start writing final versions of their pieces to go into their books. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA6) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

Teacher Note

The students will learn more about the characteristics of strong opening sentences in the genre units this year.

Writing Time

- Revise your opening sentences so that they grab your reader's attention.
- Make any other revisions you think are needed to make your piece as interesting as it can be.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Revised Opening Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the opening sentences they revised by reading both their original and their revised sentences. As the students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions like those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q How is [Rodrigo's] revised opening different from his original?
- Q What do you think about when you hear the revised opening?

Day 5

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

- Q What questions can we ask [Rodrigo] about his revised opening sentences?
- Q What are you learning about revising to make your writing better?

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Unit 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final drafts

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering these questions, offer some ideas like those in the “Students might say” note.

Skill Practice Note

After the students have discussed the titles, you might point out that most, if not all, of the words in these titles are capitalized. Explain that this is generally true of book titles. (For example, all the words are capitalized in the titles Grandpa’s Face and In November. Most of the words in Things Will Never Be the Same are capitalized, except the.) If the students need more practice with this skill, see Lesson 26 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore effective titles
- Reread their writing critically
- Finish revising their drafts
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review and Discuss Effective Titles

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that yesterday they heard examples of strong opening sentences and thought about whether they wanted to revise their own opening sentences to make them stronger. Explain that, just as authors pay attention to their opening sentences, they also think carefully about what title to give their piece of writing. Display the read-aloud books from Unit 1 and read the titles aloud. Ask:

- Q What do you notice about these titles?
- Q How does the title [The Pain and the Great One] make you want to read the book?
- Q What are some things that you might want to keep in mind when you are deciding on a title?

Students might say:

“The title The Pain and the Great One makes me curious. I want to know who is the pain and who is the great one.”

“Good titles sometimes make readers get a question in their head, like ‘Why will things never be the same?’”

“A good title gives a clue about what the book is about.”

2 Have the Students Think About Their Own Titles

Ask each student to think about the title of the piece she is developing for publication. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q What might you title your piece to grab your reader’s attention and get him or her to open your book? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have briefly discussed the question, ask a few volunteers to share their thinking with the class.

Encourage the students to think about effective titles for their writing as they revise their drafts today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA7) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Think of an interesting title for your piece.
- Make other changes until you are satisfied that your piece is as interesting and as enjoyable to read as possible.

WA7

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that pairs will confer about their drafts next week.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Revisions as a Class

Have a few volunteers share their titles with the class. As the students share, encourage discussion by asking the class the questions that follow:

- Q What do you think about when you hear [Joslyn's] title?
- Q What questions can we ask [Joslyn] about this title?

Technology Tip

This activity focuses on using a print thesaurus, but you can modify it to support the students in using an online thesaurus. To find one, search online using the keywords “online thesaurus.” After the students have navigated to the thesaurus you selected, have them type a familiar word, such as scary or jump, into the Search box. Discuss the word entry format and the information provided for the word. Then have partners use the thesaurus to look up words from the “Use More Interesting Words” chart.

Teacher Note

You might point out that most thesauruses include helpful information at the beginning about how to use the thesaurus. If the particular thesaurus your students are using includes other features, such as antonyms or related words, point these out as well.

EXTENSION

Use a Thesaurus

Distribute a thesaurus to each pair of students. Tell the students that today they will have the chance to discuss and practice using a reference book called a thesaurus. Tell them that each pair of students will first look through their thesaurus and talk about what a thesaurus is and when they might use one. Then partners will share their ideas with the class. Give partners a couple of minutes to explore and discuss their thesaurus. Then discuss as a class:

- Q What is a thesaurus?
- Q When might you use a thesaurus? In what ways might a thesaurus be helpful?

If necessary, explain that a thesaurus is a “book of synonyms, or words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.” You might use a thesaurus when you are writing to help you find just the right word or to avoid using the same word over and over again.

Have each pair open their thesaurus to the first two-page spread of words. Point out that the words are listed alphabetically and that the guide words at the top of each page are the first and last words on the page. Explain that guide words help you find a word you are looking for. Also point out that, for each word, the thesaurus provides the word’s part of speech (for example, noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech) and its synonyms.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart, and review that these are synonyms for the overused words good, big, small, and said. Explain that partners will choose one of these overused words, look it up in the thesaurus, and share the synonyms they find with the class.

Give partners a minute or two to choose a word, find it in the thesaurus, and discuss its synonyms. When most pairs have finished, discuss the words and their synonyms as a class by asking:

Q What word did you look up? What synonyms did you find for the word?

Follow up by asking:

Q Which of these synonyms are already on our chart? Which synonyms should we add to the chart?

Add the synonyms the students suggest to the chart.

---

Teacher Note

Circulate as the students look up the words. If the students are having trouble finding a word, call for their attention and show them how to use the guide words to locate a word.

Teacher Note

You might explain that, when using a thesaurus, it is a good idea for the students to look up the synonyms they are finding in a dictionary for more information about the words' meanings and how they are used. Synonyms listed for a word in a thesaurus may have varying shades of meaning and uses.

More About Judy Blume

excerpted from Author Talk, compiled and edited by Leonard S. Marcus and from judyblume.com

What is a typical workday like for you?

When I'm working on a book, I eat my breakfast, get dressed, and go to work, pretending that I'm leaving the house and going to an office. I work until lunchtime. I force myself to sit at my desk. I might doodle a lot while I'm writing a first draft. Doodling is very important to me. I'll write down a word and decorate it. By the time I get to the end of a first draft, I have a good sense of the characters. During the next two rewrites I work longer hours and with more enthusiasm. By the third draft I'm so into my characters, I have to be dragged away from my desk.

How do you go about writing a book?

I start by filling a notebook with notes on characters—anything and everything that may never go into the book. This becomes my security blanket. Over the years I've learned to worry less that the words and ideas won't come. I trust that they will.

Do you know from the start how a book will end?

I know the beginning—about the day when something different happens—and generally where the story's going. But how it will get there is what I worry about every time I begin a new book. I ask myself, How am I going to fill up two hundred or three hundred pages! But if I think of it as a whole book too soon, I'm going to scare myself. So I try to focus on one scene at a time. It may be just a page, it may be five or ten pages.

Judy Blume's advice to young writers:

Whenever I talk to kids about writing and tell them it's the rewriting I enjoy most, they groan. I guess if you're in school, rewriting means copying your papers over. But to me, rewriting is the most exciting part of the process. When I'm rewriting, I feel most creative. I've got all the pieces to the puzzle and now I get to put them together. I go through four or five drafts of each book.

Read your work aloud! This is the best advice I can give. When you read aloud you find out how much can be cut, how much is unnecessary. You hear how the story flows. And nothing teaches you as much about writing dialogue as listening to it.

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students confer with one another and the teacher.
- Students learn procedures for proofreading their writing.
- Students write their final versions and publish them as books.
- Students present their books to the class from the Author’s Chair.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA8–WA13

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)
- “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1)
- “Social Skills Assessment Record” sheet (SS1)
- “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA1)
- “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1)

Reproducible

- Unit 2 family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Assessing Student Writing” (AV37)
- “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV74)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 16 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, collect enough writing folders (manila, pocket, or any other kind) for each student in the class to have one.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, create a sample handmade book by stapling together several blank pages with a construction-paper cover.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, establish a procedure for the students to follow when they are ready to present their completed books from the Author’s Chair. You might have the students place their finished work in a basket, and then, during the sharing time, you can call on authors in the order in which they completed their books to read them aloud to the class. Designate a place in the class library for the students to put their published books after they have shared them from the Author’s Chair and shown them to their families. (See “Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom” on page xli for other suggestions about organizing the writing program in your classroom.)
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student’s published piece.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have the students type and print their pieces for publication this week. You can also recruit parent volunteers to help with this task.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I believe more in the scissors than I do in the pencil.”

— Truman Capote

Carefully reread the draft you revised in Week 1. Consider:

- Are there words or sentences in this draft that seem extraneous—like they do not really belong?
- Are there ideas you can express in fewer words?

Think about what you can delete from your draft or rewrite for concision. Make these revisions, either by marking on your current draft or by writing a new one.

Day 1

Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

TEKS 1.A.i

Student/Teacher Activity
Step 1 (all, on page 98) and
Step 3 (all, on page 100)

In this lesson, the students:

- Begin writing the final versions of their pieces
- Initiate pair conferences
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Initiating Pair Conferences

Have the students stay at their seats. Explain that this week the students will work on final versions of the pieces they revised last week and make them into books for the class library. Explain that partners will confer about their revised drafts. Remind the students that, in earlier lessons, everyone conferred at the same time. This week, however, the students may initiate their own conferences whenever they want feedback about their writing.

Explain that today you will signal about halfway through Writing Time that the students may confer in pairs about their writing, if they wish. If possible, designate a place in the room for pair conferences that is a little apart from where the students are writing. Tell the students that they should ask their assigned partners to confer first. If a student’s partner is busy writing and would rather not stop to confer, the student may ask someone else. Ask questions such as:

- Q How can you respectfully ask someone to confer with you?
- Q If someone asks you to confer and you would rather keep writing, how can you respond to that person respectfully?
- Q What else will you do to be responsible if you confer with a partner today?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 1, and review the chart. Ask:

- Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions, if they choose to confer with a partner today.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently and Confer

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA8) and distribute loose, lined paper to each student. Have them work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Reread your draft.
- Make any other revisions you think are needed to make your piece the most interesting it can be.
- When you are satisfied with it, start copying it neatly, in pencil, on lined paper.

WA8

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed. About halfway through the writing period, signal that the students may confer in pairs, if they wish.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they initiate and participate in pair conferences.

Ask yourself:

- Are the students able to find partners and begin conferring, with minimal disruption to the class?
- What problems are the students having initiating pair conferences?
- Do conferring pairs seem to stay on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Do they return promptly to their writing at the end of their conferences?
- Is the noise level such that the students can continue to write if they wish?

Note any problems you observe and be ready to bring them up during the reflection discussion. Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3); see page 16 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to remind the students to turn and look at the person who will speak. Ask speakers to wait until they have the class's attention before starting to speak. Scan the class to ensure that all students are actively listening and participating in the discussion. Notice the effect of using this facilitation technique on the students' engagement in class discussions over time.

Teacher Note

Save the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart to use in the Personal Narrative and Fiction genre units.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Gather the students to discuss how they did writing and conferring during Writing Time today. Remind them that, in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help the other person create the best possible piece of writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q If you participated in a pair conference today, what questions did you ask your partner about your writing?
- Q What did your partner do or say that helped you?
- Q If you continued to write while pair conferences were going on, were you able to concentrate? Why or why not?
- Q I noticed that [the room got very noisy when people were walking around looking for partners to confer with]. What can we do next time to avoid this problem?

SOCIAL SKILLS ASSESSMENT NOTE

During the final week of this unit, assess the students' social skill development using the "Social Skills Assessment Record" sheet (SS1). Access and print the record sheet from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or make a copy from page 172 of the Assessment Resource Book. Note that you will use the same record sheet to document each student's progress when you reassess social skill development in the winter and spring.

Day 2

Proofreading

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- "Writing Time" chart (WA9)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Writing folder for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread their drafts for spelling
- Become familiar with their word banks and learn how to add words to them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Act considerately toward others

MORE ABOUT REVISION AND PROOFREADING EARLY IN THE YEAR

Remember that the students are just being introduced to the writing process in this unit. They will repeat the process in every genre unit, so they will have multiple opportunities to practice their revision and proofreading skills and to learn new skills (see “Skills and Conventions” on page xxiii). Do not worry at this point if you notice that students are publishing pieces that could have undergone more revision. The students will improve with repeated practice over time.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Proofreading for Spelling

Have the students stay at their seats. Review that this week the students are working on their final versions and making them into books for the class library. Point out that published pieces of writing need to include correct spelling and have as few errors as possible. Today and tomorrow the students will proofread their drafts, or check them for spelling, punctuation, and capitalization errors.

2 Introduce the Word Bank in the Student Writing Handbook

Ask the students to reread their revised drafts (even if they have already begun copying them as final versions) and circle any words they aren’t sure are spelled correctly. Stop the students after a couple of minutes and ask:

Q What words have you circled so far?

Have a few volunteers report the words they circled. Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Word Bank section. Explain that this section contains an alphabetical list of correctly spelled words students their age often use in writing.

Ask the students to each look up the first word that they circled in their word banks, check the spelling, and correct it in their drafts, if necessary. Briefly discuss as a class:

Q If the word does not appear in the word bank, what else might you do to check the spelling?

Students might say:

“I could ask someone at my table to help me spell it.”

“I could ask my partner about it during a conference.”

“I could ask you.”

“If I know where I read that word in a book, I can go look it up there.”

“I could look it up in a dictionary.”

Point out that each page of the word bank has blank lines where the students can add new words that they learn. After finding the correct spelling of a new word, they will add it to the appropriate page in the word bank (see diagram on page 102). Then the word will be there for them in the future, if they need it.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty looking up words, take time to review dictionary skills. Write a word where everyone can see it, and then look it up together as a class. Repeat with other words, if necessary. For more practice, see the technology extension “Use an Online Dictionary” on page 104.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, offer some examples like those in the “Students might say” note.

TEKS 1.A.ii
 Student/Teacher Activity
 Step 3 (all, beginning on page 102 and continuing on to page 103)

Explain that the word bank is the first place the students should go to check the spelling of a word. Tell them that they will check and correct their spelling before starting or continuing to work on their final versions today.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA9) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes. Distribute more loose, lined paper to the students, if needed.

Writing Time

- Check and correct your draft for spelling.
- Start or continue to write your final version neatly, in pencil.

WA9

If necessary, remind the students who have already begun writing their final versions to correct any misspellings they may have copied into them. Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs, if they wish. Briefly discuss:

Q If you choose to confer with a partner today, how will you go about it in a way that is considerate of your classmates?

Encourage the students to act responsibly and considerately during Writing Time.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Distribute a writing folder to each student, and tell the students that they will keep any loose pages they are working on in their folders. Ask the students to write their names on the front of their folders.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What words did you check the spelling of today? Which of these words did you find in your word bank? How did you check words that were not in the word bank?
- Q If you participated in a pair conference, what did you do to be considerate of your classmates? How do you think that helped your classmates today?

Explain that the students will continue to work on their final versions tomorrow.

Technology Tip

To find an appropriate online dictionary, search the Internet using the keywords “children’s dictionary” or “online dictionary for students.”

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use an Online Dictionary

Write the following words where everyone can see them: chorus, inlet, poet, seek, and heave.

Have partners sit together at computers. Have the students navigate to the dictionary you selected. Direct their attention to the Search box. Ask them to type a familiar word such as airplane or walk into the box and click the Search button or icon. Then discuss:

Q What information is provided for the word [airplane]?

Have volunteers share their thinking. As necessary, point out these key features:

- The division of the word into syllables
- The pronunciation of the word, which may include both a phonetic respelling and an audio pronunciation, accessed through an Audio button or icon
- The word’s part of speech (whether the word is a noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech)
- The definition(s) of the word
- A sentence or phrase that shows how the word is used

Point out any additional information or features, which may include lists of synonyms or antonyms, the etymology (history) of the word, or links to related words or other information. Then briefly discuss:

Q In what ways is this online dictionary [different from/the same as] a print (book) dictionary?

Q Which type of dictionary do you prefer? Why?

Direct the students’ attention to the words on the board, and explain that the words are from Atlantic, one of the stories they heard in Unit 1. Tell the students that partners will choose one of the words they want to know about, search for the word in the online dictionary, and share what they learned about the word with the class.

Give pairs a minute or two to choose a word, find it in the dictionary, and read and discuss the word’s entry. When most pairs have finished, discuss each word as a class by asking:

Q Who looked up the word [chorus]? What did you find out about the word?

Q Who else looked up the word [chorus]? What can you add to what [Sam and Katie] told us about the word?

Encourage the students to continue to use online or print dictionaries to look up the meanings of words they do not know.

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread for punctuation and capitalization
- Become familiar with their proofreading notes and start using them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Discuss problems that arise in pair conferences

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Proofreading for Punctuation and Capitalization

Have the students stay at their desks. Review that yesterday the students learned how to proofread their drafts for spelling. Remind them that published pieces of writing need to be as free from errors as possible. Today they will learn how to proofread their drafts for punctuation and capitalization.

2 Introduce the Proofreading Notes in the Student Writing Handbook

Explain that the students will reread their revised drafts and check that each of their sentences begins with a capital letter and ends with a period, question mark, or exclamation point. Also ask them to check whether they have capitalized the first letter of any names and other proper nouns. If necessary, remind the students that a proper noun is a “noun that names a specific person, place, thing, or group.”

Have the students take several minutes to proofread their drafts for punctuation and capitalization (even if they have already begun copying their final versions).

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Proofreading Notes section. Explain that the students will use this section to keep track of the conventions (rules) of writing that they will learn this year. Over time, this section will become a checklist of things to pay attention to when the students get ready to publish their drafts.

Display the “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA10) and write the notes from the diagram on page 106 on it. Ask the students to copy these notes onto the first page of the Proofreading Notes section in their handbooks.

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA10)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA11)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final drafts
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final drafts

Skill Practice Note

Using beginning and ending punctuation and capitalizing the first letters of proper nouns will be review skills for many of your students. However, if the students need more practice with these skills, take time to review them (see Lesson 1 and Lesson 7 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Teacher Note

Additional conventions are taught in the genre units of this program (see “Skills and Conventions” on page xxiii). The students will record the conventions that they learn in their proofreading notes as they learn them.

Proofreading Notes

Rule	Example	Notes
Capitalize the first letter of sentences.	Last week she visited . . .
Punctuate the end of sentences.	They ran. Did they run? They ran very fast!
Capitalize the first letter of proper nouns.	Judy, Doctor Cruz, Chicago, Illinois, United States, Friday, November, Empire State Building, Congress	A proper noun names a specific person, place, thing, or group.

Explain that the students will check and correct their punctuation and capitalization before they work on their final versions today.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA11) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Check and correct your draft for punctuation and capitalization.
- Finish checking and correcting your draft for spelling.
- Continue to write your final version neatly, in pencil.

Remind the students who have already begun writing their final versions to correct any punctuation or capitalization errors they may have copied into them.

Tell the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs. As the students write, confer with individual students.

Technology Tip

If computers are available, you might have some students type their final versions (see “Do Ahead” on page 97).

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread his writing using his proofreading notes?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Have them put their loose pages in their folders until tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Remind the students that the goal of conferring is to help one another create the best possible piece of writing. By helping one another, they build the writing community. However, sometimes problems can arise during pair conferences. Ask questions such as:

- Q What kinds of problems have you experienced when finding a partner to confer with? How can we avoid those problems?
- Q What kinds of problems have you experienced [during/at the end of] conferences? How can we avoid those problems?
- Q What can we do to make sure everyone is invited to confer sometimes?

Students might say:

“Sometimes I have to ask five different people before anyone will confer with me. It’s frustrating.”

“It seems like people don’t know what to do after they finish a conference. They hang around and start bothering people.”

“We want to make sure everyone gets asked to confer so no one feels left out of our community. Maybe we can try to ask someone we haven’t asked before.”

At the end of this discussion, summarize the students’ ideas for avoiding or solving problems during pair conferences. Encourage the students to keep these things in mind the next time they confer. Tell them that you will check in with them to see how they are doing.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use the Whiteboard to Play Web-based Grammar and Punctuation Games

Interactive games are an engaging way for students to review grammar and punctuation skills. Begin by teaching and practicing a skill using a lesson in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide. Then, for additional practice, use the interactive whiteboard to play a web-based game. To find age-appropriate games, search the community area provided by the manufacturer of your interactive whiteboard system or search online using the keywords “[grammar/punctuation] activities.” Introduce each game and play it as a class before inviting pairs of students or individuals to play the game.

Technology Tip

To learn more about using web-based whiteboard activities to support students’ writing, view the “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV74).

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore features of published books
- Make their final versions into books
- Handle materials responsibly
- Share materials fairly

ABOUT PUBLISHING FOR THE CLASS LIBRARY

In this lesson, the students learn a simple procedure for turning a final written version into a book. They will staple together the pages of their final versions, along with any illustrations they have created, using construction-paper covers. The goal at this point is to give the students a way to publish their writing quickly, without investing a great deal of time in a bookmaking project. For suggestions about publishing materials you might provide and other suggestions about managing the program, see “Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom” on page xli.

GETTING READY TO WRITE*1 Explore Features of Published Books

Have the students stay at their desks. Explain that the students who have finished writing their final versions may create their books today.

Show the sample book that you made and pass it around for the students to see. Explain that they may add illustrations on unlined paper, if they wish. They will assemble the completed pages, in the proper order, with a construction-paper cover and then write the book title and their name on the cover.

Explain that the students may wish to include additional features that professional authors sometimes include in their books. Use the read-aloud books from Unit 1 to review some of the features the students could include, such as a title page, dedication, author note, and back-cover blurb. Tell the students that these books will be available during Writing Time so they can look at these features more closely.

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Unit 1
- Sample handmade book
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Supply of unlined paper for illustrations
- Construction paper for book covers
- Markers, crayons, and other supplies for making illustrations
- Stapler
- “Writing Time” chart (WA12)
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Technology Tip

There are a number of methods for creating beautiful handmade books that you might teach your students later this year. Search for ideas online using the keywords “making books with children.”

Teacher Note

If you are teaching the Making Meaning reading comprehension program from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, you might include books from Making Meaning Units 1 and 2 in this discussion.

2 Discuss Handling Materials Responsibly and Sharing Them Fairly

Make sure all of the necessary bookmaking materials are in a central location, and explain the procedure you would like the students to follow to get and return the materials. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How will you handle the bookmaking materials responsibly?
- Q You may need to share supplies, like markers or the stapler. If someone is using something you need, what can you do?
- Q If you're using something that someone else needs, what can you do to share it fairly?

Encourage the students to keep these things in mind as they work today. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA12) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- Include illustrations and other features, if you wish.
- Assemble your book and staple it together with a cover.
- Write the title and your name on the cover and decorate it.

WA12

Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs. As the students write, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread her writing using her proofreading notes?

(continues)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, call for the students’ attention and explain that in a moment you will signal that they may confer in pairs. Remind them that yesterday they talked about some possible problems that could arise during pair conferences and how they might avoid those problems. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What do you want to remember today to help avoid problems during pair conference time?

Continue with Writing Time and then signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Have the students return classroom materials to their proper places.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Time and Conferring

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How did you handle our class materials responsibly today?
- Q What problems did we have with sharing the materials today? How can we avoid those problems tomorrow?
- Q What problems were you able to avoid or solve during pair conference time today?
- Q I noticed today that [people returned to their seats when they finished their conference]. How did that help our Writing Time go smoothly?

Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to be responsible during Writing Time and pair conference time.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Publish Student Writing Online

There are a number of websites where students can publish their writing online. Publishing online allows family members and friends to easily access and enjoy students' writing. You might make this an option for interested students. Search online for such websites using the keywords "publishing student writing online."

Day 5

Publishing

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- "Writing Time" chart (WA13)
- A chair to use for the Author's Chair
- Copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

If the students need more time to finish their writing, consider doing Steps 3-6 (Author's Chair sharing) on another day.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and reflect on the writing process
- Finish making their books
- Present their books to the class from the Author's Chair
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reflect on Writing Process and Community

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that over the past several weeks they have learned how to take a piece of writing through the writing process, from the very first idea to a published book. Ask:

Q What have you learned about how to take a piece of writing from a first draft to a published book?

Title a sheet of chart paper "Writing Process" and write the steps that follow as you remind the students what they did (see diagram on page 113).

Writing Process

1. Generate ideas.
2. Write drafts.
3. Select a draft to develop.
4. Analyze and revise it.
5. Proofread it.
6. Write a final version and publish it.

Explain that the students will go through this writing process numerous times this year as they explore different kinds of writing, including fiction, nonfiction, and poetry.

Remind the students that they have been building a writing community in which everyone feels safe, cared for, and supported. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q How will being part of a writing community help us as we go through the writing process? [pause] Turn to your partner.
- Q What part(s) of the writing process do you want to get better at this year? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently

Have the students return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA13) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- Include illustrations and other features, if you wish.
- Assemble your book and staple it together with a cover.
- Write the title and your name on the cover and decorate it.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA13

Teacher Note

Post the “Writing Process” chart where everyone can see it.

If necessary, review the procedures for getting materials. As the students write, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread his writing using his proofreading notes?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. As the students return classroom materials to their proper places, place the chair that you have designated as the Author’s Chair at the front of the area where you gather the class.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Introduce Author’s Chair Sharing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that when they publish pieces of writing this year, they will present them to the class from the Author’s Chair.

Explain the procedure you would like the students to follow when they are ready to present their books from the Author’s Chair (see “Do Ahead” on page 97).

4 Discuss Speaking Clearly and Expressing Interest in Other People’s Writing

Before asking a volunteer to share from the Author’s Chair today, have a discussion about how the students will act, both as presenting

TEKS 1.A.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Steps 4–6
(all, beginning on page 114 and continuing on to page 115)

authors and as members of the audience. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you're sharing your book with the class?
- Q If you're in the audience and you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her writing? Why is it important to express interest in other people's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive and considerate audience members. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

5 Conduct the Author's Chair Sharing

Ask for a volunteer who has finished publishing her book to read it aloud from the Author's Chair. Encourage the author to show any illustrations and any additional features she included. At the end of the reading, facilitate a discussion using questions like those that follow. Give the author an opportunity to respond to the class's comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Mona's] book?
- Q Which part did you really like? Why?
- Q What parts were [funny/scary/suspenseful/surprising]? Why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Mona] about her book?

Follow this procedure and have a few more students share from the Author's Chair. Assure the students that they will all have a chance to share their books from the Author's Chair in the next few days.

6 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author's Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How did we do today as an audience? What might we want to work on during the next Author's Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a book today, how did you feel? What did the members of the audience do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Show the students the place in the class library that you have designated for their published books. Explain that these books will be available for them to read during independent reading time. Emphasize that the students must handle their classmates' handmade books carefully and return them to the class library when they are done.

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see "End-of-unit Considerations" on page 117.

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, you will need to make a class set of the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1) on page 19 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Teacher Note

If necessary, you might model filling out the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet using your own writing or the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) from earlier in the unit.

EXTENSION

Introduce “Student Self-assessment”

Have the students bring their published writing and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Tell the students that when writers complete a piece of writing, they often reread it and think about what they did well and what they might do better in their next piece. Distribute a “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1) to each student, and explain that the sheet lists characteristics of good writing. Tell the students that today they will read their published pieces to see which of the characteristics they included in their writing and which characteristics they need to work on next time.

Refer to the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet. Ask the students to follow along as you read aloud the characteristics in the left column. After reading, explain that the students will read their stories and look for these characteristics in their own writing. Point out that if they see a characteristic in their writing a lot, they will put a check in the box under the words “I did it!” If they see the characteristic some of the time, they will put a check in the box under the words “I did it some of the time.” If they still need to work on including a characteristic in their writing, they will put a check in the box under the words “I’m still working on it.”

Read the reflection questions at the bottom of the record sheet aloud. Ask the students to think about the questions and write their responses in the space provided.

Give the students enough time to analyze their writing and fill out the record sheet. When most students have finished, have partners share with one another what they did well and what they want to continue to work on. Then ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to make your writing fun and interesting to read?
- Q What is something you want to continue to work on as you write this year?

Collect the record sheets to put in the students’ writing portfolios. At the end of the next unit, you might have each student complete another record sheet and compare his responses.

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the end of Unit 2. The next unit you teach will be a genre unit. While the genre units may be taught in any order, Personal Narrative or Fiction is a good choice at this point. We recommend that you teach the Expository Nonfiction unit later in the year. Whichever genre unit you select, continue to build the students' stamina toward the goal of writing independently for 30 minutes.
- You will need to reassign partners before you start the next unit.
- Send home with each student the student's published piece and a copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to share their published pieces with their families. Remind the students to bring the pieces back to class after their families have read them so they can be placed in the class library.
- Save the students' published writing (or copies of it) to use for reflection and discussion in Unit 9.

Assessments

- Before continuing with the next unit, take this opportunity to assess individual students' writing from this unit. See "Completing the Individual Writing Assessment" (IA1) on page 20 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- You might record your students' progress over the course of the year using the "Individual Writing Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1) on page 176 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- (Optional) Prior to sending the students' published writing home to share with their families, you might have each student analyze her writing using the "Student Self-assessment" record sheet (SA1) on page 19 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information about administering this assessment, see the extension "Introduce 'Student Self-assessment'" on page 116.

Teacher Note

For more information, view "Assessing Student Writing" (AV37).

Genre

Personal Narrative

During this four-week unit, the students explore the genre of personal narrative and write about significant topics and events from their lives. They explore the characteristics of a good personal narrative, including sensory details, temporal words and phrases, engaging openings, and effective endings. The students practice relevant skills and conventions, such as correcting commonly misused words, run-on sentences, and sentence fragments. They hear, discuss, and write personal narratives. Socially, they ask one another questions about their writing and give feedback in helpful and respectful ways. They also practice giving their full attention to the person who is speaking and expressing interest in and appreciation for other people's writing.

TEACHER AS WRITER

*“No surprise for the writer, no surprise for the reader.
For me the initial delight is in the surprise of remembering something I didn’t know I knew.”*

— Robert Frost

Think about memorable events from your life that you could write about. List these in your notebook, and then select one or two of the most vivid memories to describe in short drafts. Write about what happened, when it happened, who was involved, and what was memorable about each event.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss personal narratives.
- Students generate writing ideas from their own lives.
- Students visualize sensory details.
- Students draft personal narratives, focusing on single, interesting events or topics from their own lives.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Because the readings from Childdtimes do not have illustrations, consider bringing in visual aids (such as images of old-fashioned houses, coal-burning stoves, and antique irons) to support the students’ comprehension.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during this unit. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 32 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1) on page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring Personal Narrative

Materials

- Grandma's Records
- "Writing Time" chart (WA1)
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

For more information about personal narrative, view "Exploring Personal Narrative" (AV41).

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for the unit. If necessary, take a few minutes at the beginning of today's lesson to let them get to know each other better by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Hear and discuss a personal narrative
- Quick-write about something special done with loved ones
- Write freely about things that interest them

ABOUT PERSONAL NARRATIVE

Personal narratives offer writers the opportunity to think about and write true stories about the meaningful experiences of their lives. Personal narratives describe significant events and explain how those events led to learning or a change of some kind. Character change in a narrative, whether of a fictional character or a real person, often results from learning an important lesson or gaining a new realization about oneself or the world. Personal narratives also include sensory details to make the writing come alive for readers, as well as temporal words and phrases to help readers follow the sequence of events.

In the study of personal narrative at grade 3, the students identify interesting single events from their lives and write about them in detail. They use sensory details and temporal words and phrases, and they write engaging openings and endings that draw a story's events to a close.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair Students and Discuss Working Together

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other's names (see "Do Ahead" on page 125). Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that today's lesson is the beginning of a four-week unit in which the students will explore a kind of writing called personal narrative. In personal narratives, authors tell stories about true things that have happened to them. Explain that partners will stay together for the unit. Ask:

Q What have you learned about working with a partner that can help your new partnership go well?

Students might say:

"We can ask each other questions and help each other."

"I agree with [Zach]. You can work better together if you get to know someone."

"In addition to what [Felicia] said, you don't have to be best friends—you just have to work together."

Encourage the students to keep these ideas in mind as they begin working with their new partners today.

2 Introduce and Read Grandma's Records Aloud

Show the cover of Grandma's Records and read the title and the author's name aloud. Explain that the author, Eric Velasquez, has written a personal narrative about growing up in New York City in the 1960s. Read aloud the dedication on page 3, in both Spanish and English. Ask:

Q What does the dedication tell us about the author?

Students might say:

"The book is dedicated to the author's grandmother, so he must like her a lot."

"In addition to what [Mele] said, the dedication is in Spanish and English, so I bet the author's grandmother spoke Spanish."

Explain that in this book, the author describes memories of summers he spent with his grandmother. Ask the students to think as they listen about what it might be like to write about their own memories.

Read Grandma's Records aloud slowly and clearly, including the song lyrics and biographies on pages 31–32. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

El Barrio: (Spanish) a New York City neighborhood, also called Spanish Harlem (p. 4)

percussion: instruments such as drums and maracas (p. 15)

destiny's will: what had to happen (p. 31)

Borinquen: (Spanish) Puerto Rico (p. 31)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

concert: music performance (p. 17)

subway: underground train (p. 21)

Teacher Note

Regularly remind the students to use the discussion prompts they learned when they participate in class discussions. The prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because ..."
- "I disagree with _____ because ..."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think ..."

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for defining vocabulary during the read-aloud, see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 on page 29. For more information, view "Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud" (AV30).

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner,” see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 3 (page 13). To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

Teacher Note

Note that on Days 1 and 2 of this week, the students may write personal narratives or anything else they wish. On Day 3, after exposure to a few examples of personal narrative, they will all begin writing in this genre.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or a partner about their drawing. If necessary, write out key words and phrases they want to use so that they can copy the words into their writing.

3 Briefly Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

Q In this story, Eric writes about special things he did with someone he loved. What special things does he write about?

4 Quick-write: Special Things Done with a Loved One

Ask:

Q If you wanted to write about special things you’ve done with someone you love, what could you write about? Turn to your partner.

Scan the class as partners talk. When they have had sufficient time to discuss the question, signal for their attention. Have them open their writing notebooks to the next blank page in the writing ideas section, label it “Special Things I’ve Done,” and list some special things they have done with a loved one. After a few minutes, call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their lists with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may write about one of the ideas they listed or about anything that interests them.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Have the students sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA1) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about something special you’ve done with someone you love.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA1

Remind the students to double-space their writing. If necessary, review that during the writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Do they write readily about themselves?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do the students who have difficulty getting started eventually do so?

If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class's attention and have partners talk to each other about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class, and then have them resume silent writing. If necessary, remind students to double-space their writing.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 32 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Have partners share with each other what they wrote today. Then, as a class, briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

Q Who wrote about something special you did with a loved one? Tell us about it.

Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about them.

Help the students reflect on their partnerships by asking:

Q What did you find out about your partner today?

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Listen to and Write About the Music of Grandma's Records

Obtain a recording of Grandma's special song from Grandma's Records, "En mi viejo San Juan" by Noel Estrada. Recordings can be found online by searching for the song title. Provide the students with copies of the song lyrics (from page 31 of Grandma's Records).

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the "Using Web-based Teaching Resources" tutorial (AV75).

With your students, reread the lyrics of “En mi viejo San Juan” aloud. Then play the recording as the students listen and follow along with the lyrics. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you like about the words of this song? What do you like about the music? How does this song make you feel?
- Q Why do you think this song might be special to someone like Eric Velasquez’s grandma?
- Q Who has a song that you think is special? Tell us about it.

If your students are interested, invite them to write about their responses to “En mi viejo San Juan” or to write about songs that are special to them. Alternatively, you might invite the students to write lyrics about a special place.

Day 2

Exploring Personal Narrative

Materials

- “Our House” (Childtimes, pages 19–23)
- Chart paper and a marker
- She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl from Unit 1
- Grandpa’s Face from Unit 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)

Teacher Note

Save the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart to use later this week and throughout the unit.

In this lesson, the students:

- Informally explore features of personal narratives
- Hear and discuss a personal narrative
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Start “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard Grandma’s Records, a personal narrative by Eric Velasquez.

Title a sheet of chart paper “Notes About Personal Narratives.” Remind the students that a personal narrative tells a true story from the author’s own life. Add this to the chart. Explain that you will continue to add to the chart as the students learn more about what makes personal narratives different from other kinds of writing.

2 Introduce Childtimes

Show the cover of Childtimes and read the title, subtitle, and authors’ names aloud. Explain that the subtitle, A Three-Generation Memoir, means that this book of personal narratives contains true stories of the memories of three generations of women from a single family: Eloise

Greenfield; her mother, Lessie Jones Little; and her grandmother Pattie Ridley Jones. Remind the students that they heard the fiction stories Grandpa's Face and She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl by Eloise Greenfield earlier this year.

Show the photographs of the women on pages 1, 49, and 119, and explain that each section contains stories told by one of the women about what it was like to grow up during her time.

Explain that you will read some of the personal narratives from Childtimes in the coming days. Encourage the students to think about what it might be like to write narratives like these themselves.

3 Read "Our House" Aloud

Explain that the personal narrative you will read today is by Pattie Ridley Jones, the eldest of the three women. Read page 7 aloud slowly and clearly, and then read "Our House" (pages 19–23) aloud, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

plank: flat piece of wood (p. 22)

mill: factory where tree trunks are made into boards for building (p. 22)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

for the life of me: even if I try very hard (p. 22)

4 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What do we find out about Pattie Ridley Jones's childhood from this piece?
- Q What are some special things she remembers about her home?

Students might say:

"We found out that Pattie had a brother and three sisters. It sounds like they had fun playing together."

"I agree with [Jonel] that they had fun. Pattie also remembers how they had a big backyard with a garden."

"She remembers that her dad built their house and that her sisters planted some pretty trees in front."

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, we invite you to focus on two questioning techniques: asking open-ended questions and using wait-time. Notice that most of the questions we suggest are open-ended, inviting many responses. These questions cannot be answered with a single word and often begin with words like what, how, and why. We encourage you to try asking the questions as they are written and noticing how the students respond. Since these questions require thought, we suggest that you use at least 5-10 seconds of wait-time after asking each question before calling on anyone to respond. This gives everyone a chance to think before talking. To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view "Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time" (AV18).

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before you say “Turn to your partner.” To review the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share,” see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 (page 29). To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’” (AV13).

Q If you were going to write about your home, what might you say? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Invite the students to write about their home, a memory, or about anything else they wish during Writing Time today.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA2) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about your home.
- Write about a memory.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA2

Remind the students to double-space their writing. Join them in writing for a few minutes, and then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about their home today? Tell us about it.
- Q Who wrote about a memory today? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about them.

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Visualize sensory details
- Quick-write about sensory details

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that earlier the students heard Grandma’s Records and “Our House,” both personal narratives. Remind the students that, in each of these narratives, the author writes about things he or she remembers from childhood. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add write about a memory to it.

Explain that today you will read another personal narrative by Pattie Ridley Jones. Remind the students that she is the eldest of the three women who tell about their lives in Childtimes: A Three-Generation Memoir. Explain that in this personal narrative, Pattie Ridley Jones uses words that help the reader imagine what is happening. Invite the students to listen for these words as you read.

2 Read “Chores” Aloud

Read “Chores” (pages 31–33) aloud slowly and clearly, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

cooking eyes: (idiom) places on the stove where the pots and pans go (p. 31)

bedstead: wooden part of the bed (p. 32)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

mattress: part of the bed you sleep on (p. 32)

Materials

- “Chores” (Childtimes, pages 31–33)
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 2
- “Quick-write” chart (WA3)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheets (CN1)

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask:

Q What did you imagine (see in your mind) as you listened to this personal narrative? Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

"I imagined designs on the ground from the broom."

"In my mind, I saw a really hot stove with irons sitting on top of it."

"I imagined the bed with the puffed-up mattresses and lacy pillows."

4 Quick-write: Sensory Details

Display the "Quick-write" chart (WA3) and ask the students to think quietly as they listen to the questions on it. Say the questions one at a time, pausing after each question (without discussing it) to give the students time to think.

WA3

Quick-write

- What kinds of chores do you do at home?
- Imagine yourself doing one of those chores. What do you see? Hear? Smell?
- What do you touch with your hands when you do the chore? What does that feel like?

Ask the students to open their writing notebook to the next blank page and quick-write about what they imagined. Stop them after 3–4 minutes of silent writing and have partners talk about their thinking. Then have them resume silent writing for a few more minutes.

Call for the students' attention and have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class.

Explain that you would like all of the students to try writing about their own lives during Writing Time today. Encourage them to include sensory details, or words that help a reader see, hear, smell, taste, and feel what is happening. They may continue a piece about their own lives they started earlier or write any true story about their lives.

Teacher Note

The students are just beginning to explore personal narrative. They are not expected to know or incorporate specific features of the genre into their writing at this point. They will build on their understanding as they explore the genre in the coming weeks.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on their personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Remind them to double-space their writing.

Join them in writing for a few minutes, and then begin conferring with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, confer with individual students about their personal narratives. Ask each student to show you his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share and Reflect on Writing

Ask and discuss the question that follows, inviting the students to read passages of their writing aloud, if they wish.

- Q What event or memory from your own life did you write about? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will continue to write drafts of personal narratives during the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The students will write all first drafts of personal narratives, double-spaced, in their notebooks. In Week 3, they will select one of the drafts to develop and publish. Double-spacing now allows space for revision later. The students will write their final versions in Week 4 on loose, lined paper (or on a computer, if available).

Teacher Note

To see an example of a teacher conferring with individual students, view “Conferring About Personal Narrative” (AV40).

Day 4

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- My Father's Hands
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 3
- “Excerpt from My Father's Hands” (WA4)
- Student Writing Handbook page 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a personal narrative
- Explore sensory details in a passage
- Draft personal narratives
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Personal Narrative

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday they began writing drafts of personal narratives. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What makes personal narrative writing different from other kinds of writing?

If necessary, review the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart to help the students remember what they learned. Add any new ideas they mention.

2 Read Aloud and Discuss My Father's Hands

Show the cover of My Father's Hands and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Explain that in this personal narrative, author Joanne Ryder writes about a childhood memory of a special time she shared with her father. Encourage the students to listen for sensory words that help them imagine what is happening.

Read pages 3–10 of My Father's Hands aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations. Ask:

Q What do you think the father has found? Turn to your partner.

Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the end of the book.

3 Explore Sensory Details

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you imagine seeing as you listened to this book?

Q What did you imagine hearing?

Q What other senses did you imagine using?

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 2 as you display “Excerpt from My Father’s Hands” (WA4). Ask partners to reread the passage and together underline words that help them imagine what is happening, using their senses.

After a few minutes, ask pairs to share the words they underlined with the class. Underline words on the displayed excerpt as the students report them. Ask:

Q Which of your senses do you imagine using when you read those words?

Point out that in many personal narratives, including this one, the author includes sensory details that help us imagine with our senses what is happening.

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today, and encourage them to look for places where they can include sensory details. They may continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Join them in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each student show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

If it is helpful, write the five senses where everyone can see them: sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch.

Some sensory details in this narrative include: “hands curl like a flower budding, then unfolding wide,” “leaf-green mantis,” “long thin legs,” “green prickly feet,” “huge round eyes,” “so light,” and “my hands soft and warm.”

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have a few volunteers read their writing aloud. Encourage the other students to express their interest or appreciation after each reading, using questions such as:

Q What did you like about [Anil's] piece?

Q What questions can we ask [Maddy] about what she wrote?

Explain that the students will continue to draft personal narratives tomorrow.

---

EXTENSION

Recognize and Explain the Function of Adjectives in My Father's Hands

Review that in the book My Father's Hands, a father and daughter look at insects that live in their garden, including a mantis. Reread the passage beginning “Green prickly feet find their footing on my steady fingers” on page 22 of the book, and continue reading to the end of page 24.

Write the sentence Green prickly feet find their footing on my steady fingers where everyone can see it, and read it aloud. Circle the word feet and explain that feet is a noun, or a word that names a person (or other living creature), a place, or a thing. Point out that in this sentence, the author uses two words, green and prickly, to tell more about the mantis's feet. Explain that words that tell more, or describe, a noun are called adjectives, and that adjectives can describe how a noun feels, looks, tastes, smells, or sounds. In this sentence, green is an adjective that tells how the mantis's feet look, and prickly is an adjective that tells how the mantis's feet feel on the author's fingers. (You may wish to point out that adjectives can also describe a noun's size, such as big, or its quantity, such as three.)

Explain to the students that writers use adjectives to make their writing more interesting to readers. Point out that when writers add sensory details, many of the words they add are adjectives.

Ask the students to reread the sentence you have written: Green prickly feet find their footing on my steady fingers. Ask:

Q What is another adjective in this sentence? What noun does it describe?
Turn to your partner.

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. If necessary, follow up by asking questions such as:

Q How do we know that fingers is a noun?

Q How does the word steady tell us more about the author's fingers?

If time permits, you may wish to discuss adjectives in other sentences from My Father's Hands. Examples include:

p. 4 "Thin cracks run down my father's fingers."

p. 24 "The mantis tilts his pointed face, his huge round eyes watching me watch him."

p. 24 "He is so light, so bold, so strange."

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review sensory details
- Draft personal narratives
- Express interest in one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

Materials

- "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart from Day 4

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Review Sensory Details

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard My Father's Hands by Joanne Ryder. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you remember about the story My Father's Hands?

Review that Joanne Ryder uses sensory details in her personal narrative. Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart and add sensory details help the reader see, hear, smell, taste, or feel what happens to it.

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today. Encourage them to look for places where they can include sensory details. They may continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one.

WRITING TIME

2 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Join them in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each student show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Share One Sentence and Reflect

Ask the students to review the writing they did today. Ask each student to underline one sentence she would like to share with the class. Give the students a moment to select their sentences. Then go around the room and have each student read her sentence aloud, without comment.

Facilitate a brief discussion using questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that the students will continue to write drafts of personal narratives during the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The intention in this activity is to hear one sentence from every student in the class. This lets the students hear what their classmates are writing and builds their accountability. After they underline their sentences, have them put their pencils away. Have them read their sentences promptly, one after another, without stopping to comment. In the discussion afterward, they are not expected to remember every sentence they heard.

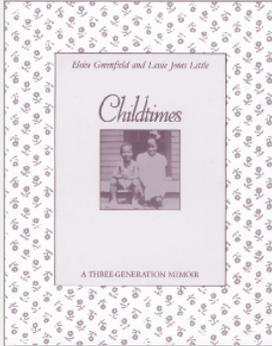

To see an example of this technique, view “Sharing One Sentence and Reflecting” (AV42).

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Childtimes: A Three-Generation Memoir

by Eloise Greenfield and Lessie Jones Little

Three generations of women remember their “childtimes.”

Essays

“First Day of School,” “Believing in Myself,” and “How I Saved a Dog’s Life”

excerpted from Kids Write Through It: Essays from Kids Who Have Triumphed Over Trouble, compiled by the editors at Fairview Press (see pages 162-165)

Young people write about how they have triumphed over trouble.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost!”

— Henry James

Select one of the pieces you wrote last week about a memorable event and reread it. Where could you include words and phrases that would help readers imagine using their senses? See how many senses you can appeal to with the sensory details you add to your piece.

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives.
- Students generate writing ideas from their own lives.
- Students explore sensory details.
- Students explore temporal words and phrases.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

🕒 DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 33 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “John and the Snake” (Childtimes, pages 35–38)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Explore writing about single, interesting incidents from their lives
- Explore sensory details in text

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review Week 1

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been exploring personal narratives. This week, they will continue to hear personal narratives and write their own drafts. Next week, they will select one of their drafts to revise and publish for the class library.

2 Read “John and the Snake” Aloud

Show the cover of Childtimes and remind the students that they heard “Our House” and “Chores,” two personal narratives by Pattie Ridley Jones, last week. Explain that today you will read “John and the Snake,” also by Pattie Ridley Jones. In this personal narrative, she describes one incident (event) from her childhood. Invite the students to imagine what is happening as they listen.

Read “John and the Snake” on pages 35–38 of Childtimes aloud slowly and clearly.

3 Briefly Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What incident does Pattie Ridley Jones describe in this personal narrative?

Q What did you see in your mind? What other senses did you imagine using?

Point out that many personal narratives, like this one, tell about just one interesting incident from the author’s life. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is one interesting incident from your life that you could write about?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today. Encourage them to think of interesting incidents from their own lives to write about and to use sensory details.

Teacher Note

After asking the question, pause for 10 seconds to give the students time to think. Then say “Turn to your partner” and have partners discuss the question.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA5) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about an interesting incident from your own life.
- Work on a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative about anything from your own life.

WA5

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

As you did in Week 1, continue to confer with individual students. Have each student show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about an interesting incident from your own life? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topics from your own life did you write about? Tell us about them.

Teacher Note

In grade 4 of the Being a Writer program, the students will hear the narratives “Hot Rolls,” “Learning the Hard Way,” “First Days,” “Mama Sewing,” and “Joe Louis” from Part II and Part III of Childtimes.

Materials

- Childtimes from Day 1

EXTENSION

Read More from Childtimes

If your students are interested, read and discuss other narratives from Childtimes. Take time to discuss how the narrators describe memories about specific incidents, using sensory details to help the reader imagine what happened. Encourage the students to continue to think about interesting events in their own lives that they can write about.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write Opinions About Childtimes

Show the cover of Childtimes and remind the students that they heard the personal narratives “Our House,” “Chores,” and “John and the Snake” by Pattie Ridley Jones. As a class, briefly review each narrative. Ask:

Q What do you remember about [“Our House”/“Chores”/“John and the Snake”]?

Have volunteers share their thinking. You might reread portions of each narrative aloud to help students remember them. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of these three personal narratives do you like best? Why is it your favorite? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I like ‘Our House’ best because it sounded like the family was really happy there.”

“My favorite is ‘Chores.’ It was fun to hear about the old-fashioned chores the author did. Her chores are so different from mine!”

“I like ‘John and the Snake’ best because it is exciting. I didn’t know if John would get well.”

If necessary, explain to the students that when they talk about liking something (or disliking it), they are giving an opinion, or expressing their own point of view. Point out that people might have different opinions about the same thing, and that is fine. Explain that what is important is that they give reasons that support their opinions.

Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing a short opinion paragraph about your favorite personal narrative from Childtimes.

You might say:

"I'll begin by telling the reader exactly what my opinion is: 'Our House,' by Pattie Ridley Jones, is my favorite personal narrative in Childtimes. I remembered to write the title of the narrative, the author's name, and the book title in my first sentence. That makes my first sentence very clear and easy for the reader to understand. Next I'll explain why 'Our House' is my favorite by giving a reason that supports my opinion. I'll write: It's my favorite because the author describes her family's garden really well. To make my reason convincing, I'll include some details from the narrative. I'll add: For example, she describes the cucumbers, sweet potatoes, and beans in the vegetable garden. She also tells about all the different flowers her mother planted. After I read that, it was easy for me to imagine this beautiful garden! Now I'll finish my paragraph by adding some sentences that remind the reader about my opinion and wrap up my paragraph. I'll write: 'Our House' is a very fun read. I definitely recommend it!"

Explain that each student will write his own short opinion paragraph about his favorite narrative from Childtimes. Ask each student to include a reason that supports his opinion and to end his paragraph with a sentence that reminds the reader what the opinion is. If time permits, invite the students to share their opinion paragraphs with the class.

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Explore writing about single, interesting incidents from their own lives
- Share their partners' thinking with the class
- Discuss and solve problems that arise in their work together

Materials

- "First Day of School" (page 162)
- "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart from Week 1
- "Writing Time" chart (WA6)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to "Notes About Personal Narratives" Chart

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students heard "John and the Snake" by Pattie Ridley Jones yesterday and talked about how a personal narrative can be about just one interesting incident, such as when the author's brother was bitten by a snake. Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart and add write about single, interesting incidents to it.

2 Read “First Day of School” Aloud

Explain that today you will read a personal narrative written by a ten year old named Jennifer. In it, she writes about a single incident in her life that was important to her. Encourage the students to think as they listen about the important incident she writes about.

Read the essay aloud slowly and clearly (see “First Day of School” on page 162).

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What incident does Jennifer describe in this personal narrative?

Q What did she learn on the first day of school?

 Q What do you remember about your own first day of school? Turn to your partner.

Explain that everyone will work on personal narratives during Writing Time today. Invite the students to write about what they remember about their first day of school, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Have the students take out their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA6) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write what you remember about your first day of school.
- Work on a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative about anything from your own life.

WA6

Join the students in writing for a few minutes. Then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Have each student show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing in Pairs

Explain that partners will share with each other what they wrote today. Alert the students to be ready to share what their partners wrote about during the whole-class discussion.

Have partners share, and then signal for their attention and ask questions such as:

- Q What did your partner write about today?
- Q Did your partner include any sensory details in his or her writing? Tell us about one.

Have the students reflect on their partner work by asking:

- Q What problems, if any, did you and your partner have working together today? What can you do to avoid those problems next time?

ELPS 2.I.iii
ELPS 2.I.iv
Step 5 (all)

Teacher Note

Questions like this help the students develop good working relationships with their partners. When students feel connected to others, they learn to relax and take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically. For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Day 3

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “Believing in Myself” (page 163)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Quick-write about perseverance
- Use sensory details in their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read “Believing in Myself” Aloud

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been writing drafts of personal narratives and that next week they will select one to develop, revise, and publish for the class.

Explain that today you will read another personal narrative, “Believing in Myself,” by a ten year old named Joshua. In it, he describes a challenge he faces and how he overcomes it. Encourage the students to think, as they listen, about how they might write about their own challenges.

Read the essay aloud slowly and clearly (see “Believing in Myself” on page 163). Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

corrective reading and math classes: classes to help students improve at reading and math psychologist: person who studies human behavior

learning disabilities: difficulties with learning

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

pronouncing: saying

had trouble grasping: had trouble understanding

2 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What challenges does Joshua describe in his personal narrative?
- Q In what ways do you think Joshua has persevered to overcome his challenges?

3 Quick-write: Perseverance Through Challenges

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss the following questions:

- Q What challenge have you faced that you might be able to write about?
[pause] Turn to your partner.
- Q What did you do to persevere when you faced that challenge? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Without discussing the questions as a class, ask the students to open their notebooks to the next blank page and spend a few minutes writing about a time they persevered in the face of a challenge. After about 5 minutes, signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

Students might say:

“I wrote about learning to ride a bike. I fell lots of times, and I had to keep getting back up.”

“Last year science class was very challenging for me, and I felt bad about it. But my parents helped me persevere and learn new ways of studying. Now I’m doing better.”

“It’s challenging to have a baby brother. I wrote that he needs lots of attention. Sometimes it’s hard to be patient with him, but I persevere!”

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today. They may continue the pieces they started during the quick-write or work on any personal narrative.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA7) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Continue a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.
- Include sensory details in your writing.

WA7

Teacher Note

If necessary, write the word persevere where everyone can see it, and explain that persevere is a verb that means “keep trying without giving up.”

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Have each student show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about a time you faced a challenge and persevered? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topic from your life did you write about? Tell us about it.

---

EXTENSION

Recognize and Use Abstract Nouns

Remind the students that they heard and discussed the personal narrative “Believing in Myself” (page 163) by Joshua, age ten. Write the word persevere where everyone can see it, and pronounce the word. Review that they learned this word, which means “keep trying without giving up.” Point out that persevere is an action word, or verb, as in the sentence Joshua persevered and overcame the challenge he faced.

Write the word perseverance under the word persevere, and pronounce the word. Explain that this is a related word, which means “the act of trying without giving up,” as in The coach admired Susan’s perseverance. Susan always tried hard, even when her team was losing. Tell the students that perseverance belongs to a group of nouns called abstract nouns. Explain that abstract nouns describe things that cannot be seen, touched, tasted, smelled, or heard. Provide examples of other abstract nouns, such as idea, childhood, honesty, responsibility, and curiosity, and write them next to perseverance. Point out that none of these nouns is a thing that you can experience with your five senses.

Tell the students that abstract nouns can help them explain important ideas in their writing. Point out that they might use an abstract noun in their personal narratives to explain what they learned from an experience. Give an example using an abstract noun such as responsibility.

You might say:

“Taking care of my hamster taught me about responsibility.”

Write your example sentence where everyone can see it. Invite the class to work together to brainstorm more sentences using such abstract nouns as responsibility, honesty, and curiosity. As students make suggestions, discuss them and then write them under the first sentence.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice recognizing and using abstract nouns, see Lesson 6 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Informally explore the idea of learning in personal narratives
- Express interest in one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard “First Day of School” and “Believing in Myself,” two personal narratives written by young people. Ask:

Q What do you remember about “First Day of School”?

Materials

- “How I Saved a Dog’s Life” (page 164)
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I remember that . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to these questions.

Teacher Note

The concept of learning in personal narratives can be challenging for young students. In this unit, the students begin to explore the idea informally. They are not expected to incorporate this into their own personal narrative writing at this point.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of times when they learned something, suggest ideas such as those in the “Students might say” note, and then ask, “What else have you learned?”

Point out that in “First Day of School,” Jennifer learns that even new and uncomfortable situations can turn out all right if you focus on looking for kind faces and being yourself. Explain that good personal narratives usually include something about what the writer learns as a result of what happens. Ask:

Q What do you remember about “Believing in Myself”? What did the author learn as a result of facing his learning disabilities?

Students might say:

“I think he learned that if he keeps working hard, he can do well in school.”

“I agree with [Ronin]. He named the story ‘Believing in Myself’ because that’s what he learned to do.”

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart, and add the writer learns something to it. Explain that you will read another narrative by a young person today. Invite the students to listen for what the writer learns.

2 Read “How I Saved a Dog’s Life” Aloud

Explain that today’s personal narrative was written by a seven year old named Kate. Read the essay aloud slowly and clearly (see “How I Saved a Dog’s Life” on page 164). Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

SPCA: place that cares for homeless animals

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

veterinarian: doctor who takes care of animals

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What experience does Kate write about in this personal narrative?

Q What does she learn from adopting Shelly?

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When did you learn something, and how did you learn it? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

"I used to be really shy. But after I met my best friend, I learned that I can be more outgoing."

"When I went camping for the first time, I learned that I really love nature and being outside."

"When I played after-school soccer, I learned about being a good teammate."

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today. Encourage them to write about situations in which they have learned something, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (📄 WA8) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.
- Try to include information about what you learned.

WA8

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students write with engagement about their own lives?
- Do they include sensory details in their writing?
- Will all of the students have personal narrative drafts that they can start to develop for publication next week?

If necessary, work with individual students to ensure that all of the students will have a draft that they can develop for publication, beginning on Day 1 of next week.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 33 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share One Sentence and Reflect

Ask the students to review the writing they did today and to each underline one sentence to share with the class. Give the students a moment to select their sentences. Then go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud, without comment.

After all the students have read their sentences, facilitate a brief discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else's writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Materials

- "How I Saved a Dog's Life" from Day 4 (see page 164)

WRITING ABOUT READING

Make Connections to "How I Saved a Dog's Life"

Remind the students that they heard the personal narrative "How I Saved a Dog's Life" by Kate, age seven, earlier. Ask:

- Q What do you remember about "How I Saved a Dog's Life"?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. After they have shared, ask:

- Q How does Kate's personal narrative remind you of your own life?

Students might say:

"It reminds me of my cat Snowball and how I adopted him when his old family moved away."

"Just like Kate, I want to be a veterinarian someday. Her narrative reminds me of that."

"It reminds me of how much I want a pet!"

Explain that when you write or talk about how a book or piece of writing reminds you of your own life, you are making a connection to it. Point out that making connections to books and other pieces of writing helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how "How I Saved a Dog's Life" reminds you of your life.

You might say:

"I'm going to write about how Kate's personal narrative reminds me of my own life. I'll start by introducing the narrative and telling the reader a little about it: In her personal narrative 'How I Saved a Dog's Life,' Kate tells how she got a new pet puppy. Next I'll explain why Kate's story makes me think of something in my own life: Kate's narrative reminded me of my grandma's pet parrot, Silver. He was the funniest pet I ever knew. Now I'll add some details about Silver and my feelings about him: He loved to say silly things and ride around on my grandma's shoulder. Sometimes he even rode the bus with her! I thought Silver was amazing. He lived to be 48 years old. Finally I'll write one or two sentences to finish my paragraph: I always smile when I remember Silver. Maybe someday I'll get a parrot of my own."

Have the students write about how "How I Saved a Dog's Life" reminds them of their own lives. If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

Exploring Personal Narrative and Pair Conferring

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore temporal words and phrases
- Draft personal narratives
- Practice procedures for pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review and Discuss "First Day of School"

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks, notebooks, and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that earlier this week, they heard "First Day of School" by a ten-year-old author named Jennifer. Remind them that Jennifer wrote about her first day of school, how she felt that day, and

Materials

- "First Day of School" (page 162) from Day 4
- "First Day of School" chart (WA9)
- Student Writing Handbook page 3
- "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart from Day 4
- Chart paper and a marker
- "Writing Time" chart (WA10)

TEKS 8.C.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 2 (all)

Teacher Note

Other temporal words and phrases in “First Day of School” are first, instantly, when I looked back, now, right away, and after a while.

Teacher Note

You might explain that temporal means “having to do with time.”

Teacher Note

Other temporal words and phrases include next, then, last, finally, later, yesterday, today, tomorrow, in the meantime, immediately, and any phrases that mention times of day, days of the week, months, or years.

how she feels about school now. Ask and briefly discuss the following questions. Be ready to reread the narrative to help students recall what they heard (see “First Day of School” on page 162).

- Q How did Jennifer feel when she first started going to school?
- Q How did Jennifer feel about school later, by the end of the essay?

Students might say:

“At first, Jennifer felt scared. She wasn’t sure that people would be friendly.”

“I agree with [Abdul]. Jennifer said that, at first, school felt like a strange place, and she didn’t like it.”

“Later on, Jennifer felt better about school. Her teacher was nice to her, and that helped.”

If necessary, point out to the students that Jennifer’s feelings changed over time.

2 Analyze Temporal Words and Phrases in “First Day of School”

Display the “First Day of School” chart (WA9) and point out that the author, Jennifer, uses the phrase When I first and the word before (in the first two sentences). Underline these words on the displayed story. Explain that these words and phrases help readers understand exactly when in the story something happened.

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 3, where the story is reproduced. Have partners work together to underline other words or phrases that tell exactly when in the story something happened.

After a few minutes, have volunteers share their ideas with the class. As they identify words and phrases that help them understand when in the story something happened, underline them on the displayed essay.

Explain that these are called temporal words and phrases and that authors use them to help readers understand exactly when something in the story happened (the order of events).

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart, and add temporal words and phrases help the reader understand when something happens in a story to it. Title another sheet of chart paper “Temporal Words and Phrases,” write the heading Tell when something in a story happens, and list the words and phrases you and the students have identified in “First Day of School.” Ask:

- Q What other temporal words and phrases might you use in a personal narrative to help readers understand when something happened?

Add the students’ ideas to the chart.

3 Analyze Writing for Use of Temporal Words

Have the students reread the writing they did yesterday and look up when they are finished. Say the following prompt and then give the students a few quiet minutes to review their drafts and mark passages.

Q Where do you use, or where might you use, a temporal word or phrase? Draw a small star in the margin next to that place.

After a moment, have partners turn and share their ideas with each other.

After a few moments, signal for the students' attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Add any temporal words and phrases they mention to the "Temporal Words and Phrases" chart.

Explain that the students will continue to work on personal narratives today. Encourage them to use temporal words and phrases to help readers understand exactly when something happened in their narrative, and to use sensory details to help bring their writing to life. They may continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one. Next week they will select one of their drafts to work on and publish for the class library.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students sit at desks with partners together. Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA10) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.
- Try to include sensory details and temporal words and phrases in your writing.

WA10

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then confer with individual students.

Teacher Note

Save the "Temporal Words and Phrases" chart to use throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time slightly to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 5.

TEKS 1.A.ii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5 (all)

TEKS 1.D.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5 and Step 6 (all,
beginning on page 160
and continuing on to page 161)

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Have each student show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What temporal words and phrases are you using to help readers understand when something happened?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book. Beginning next week, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

5 Confer in Pairs About Personal Narrative Drafts

Explain that today the students will each read one of their personal narrative drafts to their partner and confer about it. Briefly review the procedure you established for pair conferring (see Unit 1, Week 3, Day 2, Step 4 on page 54), and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well. Explain that today partners will each tell each other one thing they like about the other’s draft. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What will you do during the conference to show that you are interested in your partner’s draft?

Students might say:

“I’ll show I’m interested by asking my partner questions about her draft.”

“I’ll listen to my partner’s whole story without interrupting.”

“I will tell him things I liked in his story.”

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking questions such as:

- Q What did your partner do or say to show interest in your draft? How did that feel?
- Q Why is it important that we all get to feel that our partners are interested in our writing?

Facilitation Tip

Notice the open-ended questions that you are asking during this discussion. To study the effect of open-ended questions on students' thinking, experiment by asking a closed question first (Did your partner do or say something to show interest in your draft? Do you think it's important that we all get to feel that our partners are interested in our writing?) and noting the response. Then restate the question as an open-ended question and note the response. Remember to use 5-10 seconds of wait-time after the question before you invite the students to respond.

Essay

First Day of School

by Jennifer, age 10

from Kids Write Through It: Essays from Kids Who Have Triumphed Over Trouble

When I first started going to school, I was scared that the other kids might laugh at me. I had never been to school before, and I didn't really know what to think. I remember when I first saw my classroom I felt bad and started to cry. I instantly knew I wanted my mom, but when I looked back, my mom was gone. Being in a strange place, I wasn't sure everyone was friendly, and now that my mom was gone, I started to cry even more. My teacher came to me and kindly told me that everything was going to be fine. That didn't help right away, but after a while I felt better about being there.

Having a kind teacher and friends who were nice to me on my first day of school makes this memory a good one. If you ask me what I learned on my first day of school, I'd tell you that even though you're in a new place doing something you never did before, and it's uncomfortable, if you look for kind faces and be yourself, it'll be all right. Kind faces and loving acts can make everything around you seem a little better.

Essay

Believing in Myself

by Joshua Jay L., age 10

from Kids Write Through It: Essays from Kids Who Have Triumphed Over Trouble

Hi. My name is Joshua and I'm ten years old. I'm in the fourth grade. I seemed to have problems in school pronouncing words, understanding what I read, talking loud enough, and even doing some math problems. This led to me being put in corrective reading and math classes. There seemed to be a slight improvement, but I still needed more help.

The next step was to be tested by the school psychologist. I was diagnosed with learning disabilities. The school psychologist told my mom and dad that I had trouble grasping every word the teacher said. I needed help with my vowel sounds, speaking out in class, and other skills. The psychologist did say that I had potential and, with some hard work, could improve. They decided to keep me in corrective classes but added speech classes to the list.

I was upset. It was bad enough that I was in two of those classes, now they had added another one. I was angry at myself. I felt different from the other kids. I had no confidence in myself. I was afraid to speak in front of others because I felt they would laugh at me if I pronounced a word wrong. So I began writing my thoughts and feelings on paper. Then one day my mom saw an article in one of her magazines about a club for kids who like to write.

I joined the club, called The Write News. Every month or so, they have a contest in their newsletter. I decided to enter one of my essays and, to my surprise, I won! After that, I won about three or four other times. I also won a contest in school for a poem I wrote.

This made me believe in myself. I'm working harder at school and starting to read a lot better in class. I'm no longer afraid to speak in front of my classmates.

I'm still in corrective classes, but my teachers have seen a great improvement in me. They are great. With their help and the help of my family, I found the strength to overcome my disabilities.

I hope my story will help other children with learning disabilities to overcome their fears and to believe in themselves. I hope each of them will become the confident person that I have become.

Essay

How I Saved a Dog's Life

by Kate, age 7

from Kids Write Through It: Essays from Kids Who Have Triumphed Over Trouble

When my old dog, Winston, died, it was sad for all of us. So one day we went to the SPCA to look for a new dog. Of course, I knew we could never, ever, replace Winston, but if I didn't have a dog I would be sad forever. When I went in, I wanted every puppy in sight. Then I saw Shelly. I wanted her so badly, I thought my heart was going to hop right out of my chest. I had to get her.

Sometimes, the dogs at the SPCA are put to sleep if people don't buy them. Not this dog. I saved her.

Shelly is a very lucky puppy. She got a good owner, and she didn't have to be killed. I am glad she wasn't killed, and so is my whole family. Shelly is very cute and funny, but not always. Sometimes she gets into trouble. She is always cute, though.

To get her, we had to sign a sheet of paper, tell them what her name would be, and promise that we would take care of her. We had to promise to feed her the right food and to take her to the vet to get her shots.

I don't like to watch them give her shots, but I do anyway. I taught her some tricks, too. I taught her to catch the treat when I throw it in the air. And I taught her to fetch. I'm going to teach her more stuff, but I try to remember she is just a dog. Shelly is the best puppy in the world. I know that.

Sometimes I cry when I think of Winston. And sometimes Shelly makes me mad because she bites me. I don't like that. But I'm not the only one who gets bitten. My sister Katie, my mommy, and my step-dad also get bitten. She even bites herself sometimes. Other than that, she is a good puppy.

When I am grown up I'm going to be a veterinarian. I will help the sick puppies, especially Shelly. I really want to be a veterinarian. I hope I get the job because I like animals. . . .

What I learned from my experience of getting a dog from the SPCA is that you need to give a dog a chance. You need to give them a good home to live in. And you need to treat them like any other person. You also need to give your love, and a lot of it.

How I Saved a Dog's Life

You may cry sometimes when you remember your old dog. I do that a lot. I remember how I used to play with him. I bet other children will cry sooner or later if their dog dies, or maybe they already did. I'm glad to give them my experience for fair warning.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students review their drafts and each selects one to develop, revise, proofread, and publish.
- Students add sensory details to their writing.
- Students add temporal words and phrases to their writing.
- Students explore strong opening sentences.
- Students explore endings that draw a story's events to a close.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA11–WA19

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA3–CA5)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)

Professional Development Media

- “Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time” (AV18)
- “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 34 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, review the pieces you have written so far this year and select a page of personal narrative to use to model how to develop and revise a draft. Prepare your sample writing to display (see “Charts” on page xli for more information). Alternatively, you can use the “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12).
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 35 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 36 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2) on page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have some students type and print their drafts or recruit parent volunteers to help the students do so.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I am always surprised. I go through life perpetually astonished at everything that happens around me.”

— Eugene Ionesco

Select one of the personal narrative drafts you wrote in Week 1 and think about what you learned or how you changed as a result of the event you wrote about. Perhaps you expected something different to happen than what actually did. Perhaps you learned or realized something. Write a second draft of your narrative and include information about what you were like before the event, what you were like after it, and how the experience changed you.

Day 1

Selecting and Completing Drafts

Materials

- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Week 2
- “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart from Week 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

TEKS 12.A.i
Student/Teacher
Narrative
Step 2 and Step 3 (all,
beginning on page 168
and continuing on to
page 169)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review their drafts and select one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first drafts of their selected writing pieces
- Use Writing Time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Personal Narrative

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that over the past two weeks, the students have been writing drafts of personal narratives. Ask:

Q What have you learned about personal narrative, compared to other kinds of writing?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and review the items on it.

Explain that this week the students will each select one of their drafts and begin to develop it for publication. Each student will revise her draft to make it clearer and more interesting, proofread it for correctness, and publish it by contributing it to a class book.

2 Prepare to Review Drafts

Explain that today the students will reread all of the personal narrative drafts they have written so far, and each student will select one to develop for the class book. Explain that the drafts they select do not have to be complete, and they should choose drafts that they can imagine making changes to. Ask:

Q As you’re looking through your drafts, what might you want to look for to help you decide which one to develop?

Students might say:

“I want to look for a draft that I’m really interested in or have some strong feelings about.”

“I will look for drafts that describe situations where I learned something.”

“I want my story to be different from everyone else’s, so I’m going to look for a draft that is unique.”

3 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students return to their seats, reread their drafts, and each select one piece to develop and publish. Students who select their drafts before the time is up can start thinking about how they can change, add to, or improve their drafts.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room and support students by asking them questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?
- Q What can you imagine adding or changing in this piece to make it more interesting?

If you notice the students selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, pieces they feel are already “perfect,” very long or very short pieces, pieces that are not double-spaced), gently guide them toward a more workable choice.

WRITING TIME

4 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Have the students work silently for 20–30 minutes to finish their drafts. Encourage them to use sensory details and temporal words and phrases in their writing and to refer to the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart for ideas about temporal words or phrases they might include. Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

TEKS 12.A.i
Student/Teacher
Activity
Step 4 (all)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will all of the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?

If you notice that many students need more time to finish their drafts, make time for them to finish before going on to the Day 2 lesson. Students who have finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3); see page 34 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Facilitation Tip

After asking open-ended questions, remember to use at least 5-10 seconds of wait-time to give everyone a chance to think before talking. If you hear from the same few students during class discussions, extend the wait-time to encourage broader participation. To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time” (AV18).

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does it help to build our community when you do that?

Explain that the students will begin revising their drafts tomorrow.

Day 2

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising for Sensory Details” chart (WA11)
- Your sample writing OR “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA13)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience reading their drafts critically before they begin to revise.

Teacher Note

Have pads of self-stick notes available for students to use during the revision phase of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so that it marks the text without covering it up.

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where they might add sensory details
- Begin revising their drafts
- Use Writing Time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students take out their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Ask them to open their notebooks to the personal narrative drafts they selected yesterday. Explain that the students will carefully reread their drafts and that you will help them think about ways they can add to, revise, and improve them. Have them quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Sensory Details” chart (WA11) and read the prompts aloud one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes between each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with self-stick notes.

TEKS 12.A.ii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 and Step 2 (all,
beginning on page 170 and continuing on to page 172)

Revising for Sensory Details

- Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, what something looks like. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to it and write looks on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, what something sounds like. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write sounds on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, what something feels like. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write feels on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, how something smells or tastes. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write smells or tastes on it.

When most students have finished, call for their attention and ask a few volunteers to read what they marked.

2 Model Developing a Marked Section of the Draft

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and add details to help their readers imagine what is happening. Ask the students to watch as you model adding details to a draft.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing looks, sounds, feels, smells, or tastes in the margin next to places where you describe or could describe things using sensory details. Wonder aloud about sensory details you could add. Model using an arrow (caret) to insert new text.

You might say:

“I want to add words that tell what the gas station looked like. I’ll insert a new sentence: It was lit up brightly in the dark night. I also want to describe the blankets Mike and I were sleeping under and how they felt, so after ‘and him in the back seat’ I’ll write: under warm, soft blankets. Finally, I’ll add a new sentence after ‘The traffic light turned green, and my mom took off.’ I’ll write: Our tires screeched. The screeching tires add a detail about hearing to my piece.”

TEKS 11.B.ix

Student/Teacher Activity
Steps 2–4 (all, beginning on page 171 and continuing on to page 173)

Teacher Note

Teacher modeling is a regular feature of the Being a Writer program. You can use chart paper or interactive whiteboard charts (whiteboard activities) for your modeling. For more information about whiteboard activities in Being a Writer, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

Sample Personal Narrative

One summer evening, my mom packed up the car with suitcases, sandwiches, and my brother Mike and me, and we drove all night to visit my grandparents.

It was lit up brightly in the dark night. looks Around midnight, we pulled into a gas station. Mike and I were asleep, me in the front and him in the back seat, under warm, soft blankets feels

I didn't wake up until my mom slammed the door and said, "That should do it. We won't need to stop again for 100 miles."

Teacher Note

Save the revised "Sample Personal Narrative" to use on Day 3.

TEKS 12.A.i
 Student/Teacher Activity
 Step 3 (all, beginning on page 172 and continuing on to page 173)

TEKS 12.A.ii
 Student/Teacher Activity
 Step 3 and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 172 and continuing on to page 173)

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to add details to their own drafts today. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What sensory details might you add to your piece to help the reader imagine what's happening? [pause] Turn to your partner.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise First Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA13) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add sensory details to places you marked to help the reader imagine what is happening.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish adding details.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then walk around the classroom and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to add sensory details to their drafts?
- Do they seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking him questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What words could you add to help the reader imagine what's happening?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4); see page 35 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Have the students put their pencils and self-stick notes away and gather with their notebooks to share their writing. Discuss questions such as those that follow, and invite students to read from their drafts as they share.

- Q What sensory details did you add to your draft? Read us that part.
- Q What do you imagine when you hear [Mindy's] passage?

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does that help to build our writing community?

Explain that the students will continue to work on their drafts tomorrow.

Materials

- “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart from Day 1
- “Revising for Temporal Words and Phrases” chart (WA14)
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” (WA12) from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where they might add temporal words and phrases
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Purpose of Revision

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and self-stick notes and sit at desks with partners together. Ask them to open their notebooks to the personal narrative that they are developing. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their piece as interesting and readable as possible before they publish it for their classmates. Explain that today you will ask the students to think about another way they might improve their drafts.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart and read the list aloud. Remind the students that last week they thought about how the author of “First Day of School” uses temporal words and phrases to help readers understand exactly when various events happened in their stories. Explain that you will help them think about where they might add temporal words and phrases to their own pieces.

2 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Display the “Revising for Temporal Words and Phrases” chart (WA14) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their draft and mark passages with self-stick notes.

Revising for Temporal Words and Phrases

- Find a place where you use, or could use, a temporal word or phrase to help readers better understand exactly when something happens in your story. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write when on it.
- Find another place where you use, or could use, a temporal word or phrase to help readers better understand exactly when something happens in your story. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write when on it.

3 Model Developing a Marked Section of the Draft

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and add temporal words and phrases to their drafts. Ask the students to watch as you model adding details to a draft.

Display your own writing (or the revised “Sample Personal Narrative”) (WA12) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by identifying places where you use, or could use, temporal words or phrases, and writing when in the margin next to those places. Wonder aloud about temporal words and phrases you could add. Model using an arrow (caret) to insert new text.

You might say:

“I want to tell readers exactly when I heard the loud bang on the car window. I heard it as soon as we pulled up to the stoplight, so at the beginning of that sentence I’ll insert: Just then. When I yelled ‘Wait!’ I recognized my brother immediately, so just before the sentence that starts ‘I recognized that the person . . .’ I’ll insert: Right away. I think these revisions will help my readers understand exactly when things in my story happen.”

said, “That should do it. We won’t need to stop again for 100 miles.”

when She drove out of the gas station and pulled up to a stoplight. <sup>Just then</sup> I heard a loud bang on my window. I looked up to see a dark shape standing next to the car.

when “There’s someone trying to get in the car!” I screamed. <sup>Our tires screeched.</sup> <sup>sounds</sup> The traffic light turned green, and my mom took off. <sup>Right away</sup> “Wait!” I yelled. I recognized that the person outside the car was my brother!

Teacher Note

Save the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart to use again in Week 4. Save the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart to use in the Fiction genre unit.

Add any temporal words and phrases you use in your draft to the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to add temporal words and phrases to their own drafts today. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q What temporal words and phrases might you add to your writing to help readers understand exactly when events happen in your story? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

WRITING TIME

4 Revise First Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA15) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add temporal words and phrases to help readers understand exactly when events happen in your story.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish adding temporal words and phrases.
- Add to your story until it is finished.

WA15

As the students work, circulate around the room. Support students who are having difficulty adding to their drafts by having them join you individually at a back table and quietly discussing questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What were you thinking or feeling at this point in the situation? What sentence could you add to help your reader understand that?
- Q What temporal words and phrases could you add here to help your reader understand exactly when events happened?

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Revisions and Participation

Have a few volunteers share by reading an original and a revised passage aloud to the class. Encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to have the volunteers reread aloud, if necessary.

- Q What did you imagine as you listened to [Rob’s] revision?

Q How is [Rob’s] revision different from his original passage?

Q What questions can we ask [Rob] about his revision?

Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking questions such as:

Q How did you do today giving your full attention to the people who were sharing their writing?

Q If you weren’t giving your full attention today, what will help you give your full attention the next time we have a class discussion?

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore strong opening sentences
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Analyze Strong Opening Sentences

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and Student Writing Handbooks and sit at desks with partners together. Explain that they will continue to work on their personal narrative drafts today. Before they start working, they will take some time to think about an important feature of all narratives: strong opening sentences.

Explain that the opening sentences of a piece of writing need to grab a reader’s attention, making her want to keep reading. Explain that you will read the opening sentences from some personal narratives the students heard earlier in the unit. Ask them to think about how the authors get the reader interested with these openings.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 4, where the opening sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display the “Opening Sentences from Four Personal Narratives” chart (WA16). Together, reread the first passage, from Grandma’s Records, and ask:

Q What does the author do to get us interested in reading this piece?

Q What words or phrases help us imagine what’s happening?

Materials

- “Opening Sentences from Four Personal Narratives” chart (WA16)
- Student Writing Handbook page 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA17)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)

TEKS 11.B.iv

TEKS 11.B.vii

Student/Teacher Activity Steps 1–4 (all, beginning on page 177 and continuing on to page 179)

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- “a terrible thing happened,” “schoolyard” (from “John and the Snake”)
- “I was scared,” “kids might laugh at me” (from “First Day of School”)
- “my old dog, Winston, died,” “look for a new dog,” “I would be sad forever” (from “How I Saved a Dog’s Life”)

Students might say:

“The author gets us interested by making us imagine the beginning of summer vacation.”

“The words ‘cool summer clothes’ help me imagine shorts and T-shirts.”

“The words ‘my dog, Daisy’ make me think it must be fun to take your dog to your grandmother’s house with you.”

“‘El Barrio’ tells me that his grandmother probably lives in an interesting neighborhood.”

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Ask the students to work in pairs to read the remaining opening sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at making the reader want to keep reading the story.

After several minutes, signal for the students’ attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the openings and underline words and phrases they mention on the chart. As they report, ask:

Q How does that [word/sentence] help you get interested in reading the story?

2 Review Opening Sentences in Drafts

Ask the students to reread the first few sentences of their own personal narratives. Ask and have the students think quietly about:

Q How might you revise your opening sentences to grab the reader’s attention and make him or her want to keep reading?

Without discussion as a class, explain that the students will revise their opening sentences and then work on completing the writing and revision of their personal narratives today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise and Complete Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA17) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your opening sentences so that they grab your reader’s attention.
- Make any other revisions or additions so that your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.

WA17

Join the students in writing for a few minutes, and then walk around the classroom and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to revise their opening sentences so they grab the reader's attention?
- Do they seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking her questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you wrote this opening sentence?
- Q How could you revise this sentence to grab your readers' attention and make them want to keep reading?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA5); see page 36 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Opening Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the opening sentences of their personal narratives. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q What words did you hear in [Ernesto's] opening sentence(s) that make you want to keep reading?
- Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own opening sentences?

Materials

- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 1
- “Closing Sentences from Three Personal Narratives” chart (WA18)
- Student Writing Handbook page 5
- “Writing Time” chart (WA19)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheets (CN2)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore endings that draw a story’s events to a close
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Analyze Closing Sentences

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and Student Writing Handbooks and sit at desks with partners together. Review that yesterday the students thought about how to make their opening sentences strong. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add strong openings grab readers’ attention and make them want to keep reading. Explain that they will continue to work on their personal narrative drafts today. Before they start working, they will take some time to think about an important feature of all narratives: endings that draw a story’s events to a close.

Explain that the closing sentences of a piece of writing need to wrap up the piece. Tell the students that you will read the closing sentences from some personal narratives they heard earlier in the unit. Ask them to think about how the authors draw their story’s events to a close.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbook to page 5, where the closing sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display “Closing Sentences from Three Personal Narratives” (WA18). Together, reread the first passage, from Grandma’s Records, and ask:

Q What does the author do to wrap up this story?

Q What words or phrases show you that the story has reached an end?

Students might say:

“The author says that he still plays ‘Grandma’s special song’ today.”

“I agree with [Julia]. When the author says ‘I imagine I’m back in Grandma’s living room,’ that tells us a long time has passed and that the story is ending.”

“In addition to what [Kevin] said, the words ‘Grandma’s special song surrounds me’ also wrap up the story.”

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Ask the students to work in pairs to reread the remaining closing sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at wrapping up the pieces.

After several minutes, signal for the students' attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the closings. As they share, underline words and phrases they mention on the chart. For each word or phrase, ask:

Q How does that [word/sentence] help wrap up the story?

2 Review Closing Sentences in Drafts

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart and add endings that draw a story's events to a close. Ask the students to reread the last few sentences of their own personal narratives. Ask and have the students think quietly about:

Q How might you revise your closing sentences to wrap up your piece?

Without discussing as a class, explain that the students will revise their closing sentences and then work on completing the writing and revision of their personal narratives today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise and Complete Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA19) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your closing sentences to wrap up your piece in a satisfying way.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.

WA19

During Writing Time, begin conferring with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication.

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- "No one will ever bring me better treasures" (from My Father's Hands)
- "I hope my story will help other children with learning disabilities," "I hope each of them will become the confident person that I have become" (from "Believing in Myself")

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Today and over the next week, confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Closing Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the closing sentences of their personal narratives. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

Q What words did you hear in [Jenner's] closing sentence(s) that wrapped up the piece for you?

Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own closing sentences?

Week 4

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students assess their own writing.
- Students proofread for spelling, grammar, and punctuation.
- Students write their final versions and publish them in a class book.
- Students present their personal narratives to the class from the Author's Chair.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students help one another to improve their writing.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA12; WA20–WA26

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)
- “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA1)
- “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1)

Reproducible

- Personal Narrative genre unit family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8)
- “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, create a chart titled “Self-assessment Questions” with the following questions written on it:

Does my piece describe an interesting personal experience?

Is my meaning clear in every sentence?

Are there sensory details in it?

Are there temporal words or phrases in it?

Does it include a strong opening?

Does it include a closing that wraps the piece up?

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6) on page 37 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student’s published piece.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 7, “Creating Documents,” in Appendix A to help the students type and print the final versions of their stories. Alternatively, you might recruit parent volunteers to help them do so.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“For him no simple feeling any longer exists. All that he sees, his joys, his pleasures, his suffering, his despair, all instantaneously become objects of observation.”

— Guy de Maupassant

Look at the personal narrative draft you wrote in Week 3, in which you described an event and how it changed you. Close your eyes and try to remember what you felt before, during, and after the event. Look for places in your draft where you can insert information about your thoughts or feelings before, during, and after the event.

Day 1

Self-assessing and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Self-assessment Questions” chart, prepared ahead
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12) from Week 3
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Unit 2, Week 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA20)

In this lesson, the students:

- Assess their own writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Use pair conference time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Self-assess

Have the students get out their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Explain that partners will meet to confer about their drafts today. Before conferring, each student will ask himself some questions about his own draft and decide what he wants to ask his partner when they meet.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Self-assessment Questions” chart. Explain that you would like the students to ask themselves these questions as they reread their drafts. Read the questions aloud and then display your revised writing from Week 3 or the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12). Model rereading your draft, asking yourself the questions, and thinking aloud about the answers.

2 Self-assess and Think About What to Ask Partners

Have the students reread their own drafts and ask themselves the charted self-assessment questions. After most students have had time to finish, signal for their attention and ask:

Q What questions do you want to ask your partner today about your draft?

As the students report questions, record them on the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart. Remind the students that they started this chart earlier in the year, and review the questions on it. Ask:

Q What other questions on this chart do you want to ask your partner today?

Students might say:

“I want to ask my partner if she can imagine what’s happening.”

“I want to ask my partner if he can tell what I learned from what I wrote.”

“I want to find out whether anything is confusing to my partner.”

Explain that partners will read their drafts aloud to each other, including their revisions, and then ask each other questions about their own drafts.

3 Confer in Pairs

 Give the students ample time to confer in pairs.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Circulate among pairs and observe without intervening. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are the students asking each other questions about their own drafts?
- Are partners giving each other specific feedback?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe to discuss with the students in Step 4.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6); see page 37 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When most pairs have had time to discuss their drafts, signal for the class’s attention.

4 Reflect on Feedback

Gather the class and briefly discuss:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Remind the students that authors pay close attention to their readers’ feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

Explain that during Writing Time today, each student will revise her draft based on her self-assessment and the feedback she received from her partner. Encourage the students to finalize their drafts today so that they can begin proofreading and publishing them tomorrow.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise and Complete Drafts

Have the students return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart ( WA20) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so. For more information, view “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8).

Writing Time

- Revise your draft based on self-assessment and partner feedback.
- Finish revising your draft.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about the pieces they are publishing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by briefly discussing:

Q Who used feedback from your partner to revise your draft today? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will start proofreading their final versions tomorrow.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Publish Student Writing Online

This week, the students will publish their personal narratives for the class library. Some students might also be interested in publishing their writing online. A number of websites exist on which students can publish their writing; search for them using the keywords “publishing student writing online.” Publishing online allows family members and friends to easily access and enjoy the students’ writing.

Technology Tip

For more about online publishing sites and other Internet resources for students and teachers, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

Proofreading

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Check for correct use of your/you’re and then/than
- Proofread for sentence fragments
- Begin writing their final versions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Proofread First Drafts

Have the students stay at their desks today. Explain that tomorrow the students will begin copying their first drafts into final versions for the class book. Today they will take time to proofread their writing to make sure it is free from errors.

Remind the students that they learned to proofread their drafts using the proofreading notes in their Student Writing Handbooks (see Unit 2, Week 2, Day 3 on page 105). They will use this resource to proofread their personal narratives.

2 Discuss Proofreading for Commonly Misused Words

Write the words your and you’re where everyone can see them. Ask:

Q What do you know about these words?

If necessary, explain that your and you’re are pronounced the same but have different spellings and meanings. Explain that sometimes writers are not sure which of these words to use in a sentence. Tell the students that to use the words correctly, they need to think about what each word

Materials

- “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA21)
- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments” chart (WA22)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA23)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Teacher Note

If you have students who have not yet finished revising their first drafts, plan time for them to finish before they move on to proofreading. Ask all of the students to pay attention as you teach them about proofreading so that they will be able to do this step when they are ready.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice with possessive pronouns and contractions, see Lesson 10 and Lesson 27 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

TEKS 11.C.iii
TEKS 11.C.vii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 (all, beginning on page 190 and continuing on to page 191)

ELPS 4.C.iv
Step 3 and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 190 and continuing on to page 192)

means. Explain that your is a possessive pronoun that means “belonging to you,” while you’re is a contraction of you (a noun) and are (a verb).

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Proofreading Notes section as you display the “Proofreading Notes” chart (📄 WA21). Write the notes in the diagram below on the chart, and ask the students to copy them into their proofreading notes.

Proofreading Notes

Rule	Example	Notes
your	Open your book.	means “belonging to you”
you’re	You’re funny.	short for “you are”

WA21

Ask the students to see whether they used these words anywhere in their personal narratives and to circle them if they did. Explain that they will have an opportunity during Writing Time to make sure they used these words correctly.

Follow the same procedure to help the students distinguish between then (used when talking about time or order of events, for example, now and then and first you, then me) and than (used when comparing two things, for example, more than and less than).

3 Discuss Proofreading for Sentence Fragments

Explain that the students will also proofread their drafts today to see if they have any sentence fragments, or incomplete sentences. Point out that incomplete sentences should be changed to form complete sentences.

Display the “Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments” chart (📄 WA22). Ask the students to watch and listen as you read it aloud. Ask:

Q What did you notice about the way the passage sounded when I read it?

Students might say:

“It doesn’t sound right.”

“In addition to what [Angelo] said, some of the sentences sound funny—like something is missing.”

Q What sentence fragments, or incomplete sentences, do you see in the passage?

If necessary, point out that right now the passage does not sound right when read aloud because it contains several sentence fragments. Model rereading the passage and thinking aloud about how to transform the fragments into complete sentences or combine them with other complete sentences.

You might say:

"The first three sentences are complete. Each has a subject and a predicate. But 'Standing next to the car' is a sentence fragment. This fragment describes the dark shape the writer saw, so I'll add it to the complete sentence that came just before, 'I looked up to see a dark shape.' Now the revised sentence says: I looked up to see a dark shape standing next to the car. That sounds good and is still a complete sentence. 'Someone is trying to get in the car!'—this is a complete sentence so I'll leave it alone, but 'Very loudly' is a fragment; there is no subject or predicate. Very loudly tells how the writer screamed, so I'll try combining it with the sentence that contains screamed. Now it's part of a complete sentence: I screamed very loudly. The phrase 'The traffic light' is a fragment; it's a subject without a predicate. But if I delete It from the next sentence and make The traffic light the subject instead, we take care of the fragment, and the complete sentence becomes: The traffic light turned green."

Follow this same procedure with the second passage on the "Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments" chart.

WRITING TIME

4 Proofread and Write Final Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA23) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Check correct use of your/you're and then/than.
- Check for sentence fragments.
- If you finish proofreading, work on another piece of writing.

WA23

During Writing Time, confer with individual students.

Skill Practice Note

You might explain that a complete sentence contains a subject (the part that tells who or what the sentence is about) and a predicate (the part that tells what the subject does or did). The subject usually includes a noun or pronoun, and the predicate always includes a verb. Explain that many sentence fragments can be identified because they do not have both a subject and a predicate. For more practice recognizing and using subjects and predicates, and recognizing and correcting fragments, see Lesson 1 and Lesson 2 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words your/you're and then/than?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Proofreading

Briefly discuss questions such as:

Q What corrections did you make when you proofread your draft?

Q Who found errors by using your proofreading notes? Tell us about the errors.

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread for spelling and punctuation
- Listen for run-on sentences as they read their drafts aloud
- Begin writing their final versions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Proofread First Drafts

Have the students stay at their desks today. Explain that the students will begin copying their first drafts into final versions for the class book. Before this step, they will take time to proofread their writing for a few more things to make sure that it is free from errors.

Remind the students that they learned to proofread their drafts for spelling and punctuation using the word banks and proofreading notes in their Student Writing Handbooks. Explain that they will use these resources today to finish proofreading their personal narratives.

2 Discuss Proofreading for Spelling

Ask the students to begin rereading their drafts (even if they have not finished with them) and ask them to circle any words they are not sure how to spell. Stop the students after a couple of minutes and ask:

Q What words have you circled so far?

Have a few volunteers report the words they circled. Then ask the students to check their word banks to see if the words they circled are listed. If not, encourage them to check their spelling by another method during Writing Time today. Ask them to make sure to add the correctly spelled word to their word banks. The students can check the spelling of a word by asking you or another student, finding the word in a published book, or looking it up in a print or online dictionary.

3 Discuss Proofreading for Run-on Sentences

Remind the students that their proofreading notes make up a checklist of things to pay attention to when they proofread their drafts. Ask:

Q What is listed in your proofreading notes that you will check for in your draft today?

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart (WA24)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA25)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Teacher Note

If you have students who have not yet finished revising their first drafts, plan time for them to finish before they move on to proofreading. Ask all of the students to pay attention as you teach them about proofreading so they will be able to do this step when they are ready.

Point out that, in addition to checking for capital letters at the beginning of sentences and punctuation at the end, the students should also look for any run-on sentences. Explain that a run-on sentence is usually made of two or more complete sentences that have been “run together” without a joining word (a conjunction) such as or, and, so, or but. Point out that run-on sentences often look like really long sentences.

Display the “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart (C WA24). Ask the students to watch and listen as you read the first passage aloud, pausing only in those places where punctuation is included. Ask:

Q What did you notice about the way the passage sounded when I read it?

Students might say:

“It doesn’t sound right.”

“In addition to what [Kris] said, some of the sentences sound funny—like they go on too long.”

“I noticed a sentence that sounded like it might be two sentences squished together. It was confusing.”

Q What run-on sentences do you notice in the passage?

If necessary, point out that the passage does not sound right when it is read aloud because it contains several run-on sentences. Model rereading and revising the passage, while thinking aloud about how to split the run-ons into two or more complete sentences, capitalizing the first word in each new sentence, and adding a period at the end.

You might say:

“The first sentence is really long and sounds like two sentences squished together, so I think it’s a run-on. ‘One summer evening, my mom packed up the car’ is a complete thought and a complete sentence, so I’ll add a period after car. Then I’ll capitalize the S in She so the second complete sentence becomes: She filled it with suitcases and sandwiches. The next sentence sounds fine: it’s two complete sentences correctly joined with a comma and the word and. But I think the last sentence might be a run-on. ‘The plan was to drive all night to visit my grandparents’ should be one complete sentence, so I’ll put a period after grandparents. The next part, ‘they lived about 400 miles away,’ is a separate thought and should be its own sentence, so I’ll capitalize the T in They.”

Follow this same procedure with the second passage on the “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart.

Explain that during Writing Time you would like the students to read their drafts aloud to listen for run-on sentences. Encourage the students to split any run-on sentences into two or more complete sentences. Remind them to capitalize the first word of each complete sentence and to add a period at the end.

Skill Practice Note

The students will have more opportunities to practice proofreading for spelling and to practice recognizing run-on sentences in the other genre units. For more practice producing complete sentences and correcting run-on sentences, see Lesson 1 and Lesson 2 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

WRITING TIME

4 Proofread and Write Final Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📊 WA25) and have the students work silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Proofread your draft for spelling and punctuation.
- Check for run-on sentences.
- If you finish proofreading, begin copying your final version on loose, lined paper.

WA25

During Writing Time, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words your/you’re and then/than?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Technology Tip

If computers are available, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 7, “Creating Documents,” in Appendix A to help the students type and print the final versions of their stories. Alternatively, you might recruit parent volunteers to help them do so.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Proofreading

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What corrections did you make when you proofread your draft?
- Q What words did you find in your word bank? How did you check words that were not in the word bank?
- Q Who found errors using your proofreading notes? Tell us about them.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Record Personal Narratives

If you have access to recording equipment, consider having the students create audio or video recordings of their personal narratives. Make the recorded narratives available in the classroom, school library, or online for others to enjoy.

Day 4

Publishing

Materials

- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Chair to use for the Author's Chair
- Construction and/or drawing paper for class book cover and other features
- (Optional) Read-aloud books from Weeks 1 and 2
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

In this lesson, the students:

- Discuss features for their class book
- Write their final versions
- Share their writing from the Author's Chair
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Plan Features of the Class Book

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that the students will have today and tomorrow to finish the final versions of their personal narratives. Students who have finished after today's Writing Time will begin sharing their narratives from the Author’s Chair. Remind the students that the pages of all their stories will be bound together as a class book.

As a class, brainstorm and decide on a title for the class book, and decide whether any other features—such as a dedication page, back cover blurb, or illustrations—will be included. If it is helpful, review what these features look like by showing examples in read-aloud books from earlier in the unit. Assign volunteers to work on the book’s cover and any other features when they finish their final versions.

WRITING TIME

2 Finish Final Versions

Ask the students to return to their seats and work on their final versions for 20–30 minutes. Provide the materials needed for creating a cover, illustrations, and any other features the students have agreed upon for the class book. As they work, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words your/you’re and then/than?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Review Sharing Writing from the Author's Chair

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the Author's Chair. Explain that each student will read his personal narrative to the class from the Author's Chair. Remind the students of the procedure you would like them to follow when they are ready to present their personal narratives from the Author's Chair. If necessary, review the procedures you established for Author's Chair sharing in Unit 2, Week 2 (see "Do Ahead" on page 97).

4 Review Speaking Clearly and Expressing Interest in One Another's Writing

Before asking anyone to share from the Author's Chair today, have a discussion about how the students will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you're sharing your personal narrative with the class?
- Q If you're in the audience and you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her writing? Why is it important to express interest in other people's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive audience members. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

5 Conduct Author's Chair Sharing

Ask a student who has completed her personal narrative to read it aloud from the Author's Chair. At the end of the reading, facilitate a discussion using questions like those that follow, giving the author a chance to respond to the class's comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Jordana's] personal narrative? Turn to your partner.
- Q What sensory details did you hear as you listened to her narrative? What did they make you imagine?
- Q (Have the student reread her opening sentences.) How does [Jordana] grab the reader's attention with her opening sentences?
- Q What questions can we ask [Jordana] about her narrative?

Collect the students' completed narratives to be sent home to show their families and then bound into the class book.

Facilitation Tip

Reflect on your experience over the past four weeks with asking open-ended questions and using wait-time. Do these techniques feel comfortable and natural for you? Do you find yourself using them throughout the school day? What effect has repeated use of them had on your students' thinking and participation in discussions? We encourage you to continue to use and reflect on these techniques throughout the year.

Follow this procedure to have a few more students share from the Author’s Chair. Explain that they will continue to share tomorrow and that everyone will have an opportunity to share their personal narratives from the Author’s Chair.

6 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author’s Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did we do as an audience today to help Author’s Chair sharing go well? What might we want to work on during the next Author’s Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a narrative today, how did the audience members make you feel? What did they do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Publishing

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Reflect on personal narrative
- Write their final versions
- Share their writing from the Author’s Chair
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reflect on Personal Narrative

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that over the past four weeks the students have learned about personal narrative and took their own personal narratives through the writing process, from a first draft to a published book. Ask the following questions, referring the students, if necessary, to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart:

- Q What have you learned about writing a good personal narrative?

Materials

- “Writing Time” chart (WA26)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Students might say:

"I learned that personal narratives tell about something interesting that happened to the author."

"I learned that a good personal narrative has sensory details in it."

"I learned that a good personal narrative has temporal words in it."

"I learned that a good personal narrative tells what the author learned."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss questions such as the following:

Q What is one way your final personal narrative has turned out better than your first draft? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Q What is one thing you like about writing personal narrative? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Q What did you find challenging about writing personal narrative? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Remind the students that writers become better over time as they practice writing over and over. Encourage any student who feels particularly drawn to the personal narrative genre to continue to write it during his free time.

Explain that the students will work on finishing the final versions of their personal narratives today. Those who have finished may write whatever they wish during Writing Time. After Writing Time, they will continue to share their narratives from the Author's Chair.

WRITING TIME

2 Finish Final Versions

Have the students return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA26) and have them write silently for 20–30 minutes.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA26

Teacher Note

If most students have completed their pieces, you might shorten Writing Time to leave more time for Author's Chair sharing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does this student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words your/you’re and then/than?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Gather for Author’s Chair Sharing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the Author’s Chair. Briefly discuss how they will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask:

Q What will you do to be a respectful member of the audience today?

Encourage the students to be attentive and considerate audience members, and tell them that you will check in with them to see how they did.

4 Conduct Author’s Chair Sharing

Have some of the students read their personal narratives aloud from the Author’s Chair. Facilitate brief discussions about each of the readings, using questions like those that follow. Give the author a chance to respond to the class’s comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Rohana's] personal narrative?
- Q What did you [see/hear/smell/taste/feel] as you listened to her narrative and what words helped you imagine? Turn to your partner.
- Q (Have the student reread her opening sentences.) How does [Rohana] grab the reader's attention with her opening sentences?
- Q What questions can we ask [Rohana] about her narrative?

Collect each personal narrative to be sent home for the students to share with their families and then bound into the class book.

If all of the students have not had a chance to share, assure them that they will all have a chance to share their personal narratives from the Author's Chair in the next few days.

5 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author's Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did we do as an audience today to help Author's Chair sharing go well? What might we want to work on during the next Author's Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a personal narrative today, how did the audience make you feel? What did they do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Explain that after the students have shared their personal narratives from the Author's Chair, they may take the narratives home to share with their families. Then the students will bring the narratives back to class, and you will compile them into a class book. This book will be available for the students to read during independent reading time.

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see "End-of-unit Considerations" on page 203.

EXTENSION

Write Letters Home About Personal Narratives

Provide letter-writing practice for the students by having them write letters home about what they learned about personal narrative writing. Stimulate their thinking by reviewing the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart and discussing questions such as:

- Q What's special about personal narrative writing?
- Q What steps did you go through to develop and publish your personal narrative?
- Q What is one thing that you're proud of about your published personal narrative?

If necessary, review the elements of a letter (date, salutation, body, closing, and signature) by modeling or writing a shared sample letter with the class. Have the students write and proofread their letters. Then attach each student's letter to a copy of her own published personal narrative and send it home.

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the last week of the Personal Narrative unit. You will need to reassign partners before you begin the next genre unit.
- Send home with each student the student's published personal narrative and a copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to share their published pieces with their families. Remind the students to bring the pieces back to class after their families have read them so they can be placed in the class library.
- Save the students' published writing (or copies of it) to use for reflection and discussion in Unit 9.

Assessments

- Before continuing with the next unit, take this opportunity to assess individual students' writing from this unit. See "Completing the Individual Writing Assessment" (IA1) on page 42 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- (Optional) Prior to sending the students' published writing home to share with their families, you might have each student analyze his writing using the "Student Self-assessment" record sheet (SA1) on page 41 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information about administering this assessment, see the extension "Introduce 'Student Self-assessment'" on page 116.

Skill Practice Note

For practice with using commas in the addresses of letters, see Lesson 28 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Genre

Fiction

During this six-week unit, the students explore fiction writing and they draft, revise, and publish their own stories. By hearing different kinds of fiction and exploring the ways authors put stories together, the students learn how to integrate elements of character, setting, and plot into their own stories. They explore features of good fiction, including how characters are revealed through description, action, and speech, and discover how well-crafted endings bring a story's events to a close. They use temporal words and phrases to convey event order, and include interesting verbs and adverbs to make their writing dynamic. They learn important skills and conventions pertinent to fiction writing, such as punctuating dialogue and correcting run-on sentences. They cultivate a relaxed and creative attitude toward their writing and continue to be contributing members of the classroom writing community.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“My writing is full of lives I might have led. A writer imagines what could have happened, not what really happened.”

— Joyce Carol Oates

The work of the fiction writer is to invent new worlds. This week, imagine a life you might have led, and write your “memories” of this fictitious life. Perhaps you were born into a different culture, grew up in a different family, or chose a different profession. How do you imagine that these life experiences have shaped you? As you write, include your feelings and perspectives, and invent details to make that life seem real.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss fiction.
- Students informally explore elements of fiction.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students draft fiction pieces.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during this unit. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 54 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 55 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1) on page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring Fiction

Materials

- Tacky the Penguin
- She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl from Unit 1
- Grandpa's Face from Unit 1
- The Pain and the Great One from Unit 1
- Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

For more information about fiction writing, view “Exploring Fiction” (AV44).

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for the unit. If necessary, take a few minutes at the beginning of today's lesson to let them get to know each other better by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Hear and discuss fiction
- Informally explore the elements of fiction
- Write freely about things that interest them

IMMERSION IN AND DRAFTING OF FICTION

In a fiction story, something happens to someone somewhere in time. In this unit, the students build this understanding in stages over a six-week period.

The first half of this unit immerses the students in stories, stimulating their imaginations and developing their dispositions for creativity and experimentation. The students hear, enjoy, and make observations about different examples of fiction. Having heard some examples, they begin drafting fiction and continue to learn about the genre. Skills and conventions are taught later in the unit so that the students can focus first on the big ideas: inventing interesting characters, describing believable settings, and building imaginative plots that make sense.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair Students and Discuss Working Together

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other's names (see “Do Ahead” on page 211). Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that over the next six weeks, partners will work together to explore writing fiction. They will hear and discuss fiction stories and learn how to write engaging stories that grab the reader's attention.

Have partners take a few minutes to talk about some of the things they have written so far this year. Signal for their attention and ask:

Q What did you learn about the writing your partner has done this year?

2 Introduce Fiction

Show the covers of She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl, Grandpa's Face, and The Pain and the Great One. Remind the students that they heard these fiction stories at the beginning of the year. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you think you know about fiction?

Students might say:

"Fiction is made up. It's make-believe."

"Fiction has characters. Sometimes characters can be talking animals."

"Fiction can be funny or serious or scary."

"Some fiction stories are based on the author's life."

Record the students' ideas on a sheet of chart paper titled "Notes About Fiction." Post the chart and tell the students that you will continue to add ideas to the chart as they learn more about fiction in the coming weeks.

Point out that fiction writers try to tell stories that capture the interest and imagination of their readers. Explain that by the end of the unit, the students will have learned and practiced different techniques for writing a good fiction story and will have published their own stories for the class library.

3 Read Tacky the Penguin Aloud

Show the cover of Tacky the Penguin and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Invite the students to think as they listen about what it might be like to write such a story themselves.

Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

companions: friends (p. 3)

in the distance: far away (p. 14)

switch: branch or stick used for hitting something (p. 17)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

odd: strange, different (p. 5)

splashy cannonballs: jumps that spray a lot of water (p. 11)

blared: yelled (p. 22)

puzzled: confused (p. 25)

dreadfully: unpleasantly, terribly (p. 28)

4 Discuss the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Remind the students to use the discussion prompts to help them listen and build on one another's thinking. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

Teacher Note

Save the "Notes About Fiction" chart to use in Day 2 and throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

Your students may be familiar with some of the read-alouds in this program. Encourage them to listen to the read-alouds as writers, noticing what the author is trying to do and thinking about what they could try in their own writing.

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for defining vocabulary during the read-aloud, see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 (page 29). For more information, view "Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud" (AV30).

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because . . ."
- "I disagree with _____ because . . ."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think . . ."

Teacher Note

Note that on Days 1 and 2 of this week, the students may write fiction or anything else they choose. On Day 3, after exposure to another example of fiction, all of the students will be asked to begin writing in this genre.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or their partners about their drawings. If necessary, write down key words and phrases they want to use so that they can copy them into their writing.

- Q What makes Tacky a fun character to read about?
- Q If you were going to create a character like Tacky for a story, what odd things might you have that character do?

Students might say:

"Tacky is an odd bird. He doesn't do anything like anybody else."

"I agree with [Pete] because, instead of saying 'hello' politely, he says, 'What's happening?'"

"In addition to what [Kim] said, he does huge cannonballs in the water."

"I would make a character that blows giant bubbles with bubble gum."

Point out that some things that happen in fiction stories could actually happen in real life, while other things (like talking penguins) could happen only in the imagination. Invite the students to think about both kinds of events as they write freely today.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Have students get their notebooks and pencils, sit together at desks with partners, and write silently for 20–30 minutes. During this time they may write about anything they choose. Remind them that they should write double-spaced in their notebooks and that there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask partners to talk briefly about what they wrote today. After a moment, signal for their attention and ask questions such as:

- Q What did your partner write about today?
- Q What did you and your partner do to work well together when you were talking and sharing your writing?

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Read an Interview with Helen Lester

Helen Lester, the author of Tacky the Penguin, has written and illustrated many books for children. To learn more about the author and her work, have the students read an interview with her. To find a print interview with the author, search online with her name and the keyword “interview.” After the students read the interview, have them discuss what they learned about the author’s life and her thoughts about writing.

Teacher Note

An interview with Helen Lester is available on the Center for the Collaborative Classroom’s website (collaborativeclassroom.org/helen-lester).

Exploring Fiction

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing
- Hear and discuss fiction
- Informally explore the elements of fiction
- Write freely about things that interest them

Materials

- If You Were a Writer
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 1
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

THE IMPORTANCE OF ATTITUDE IN WRITING

To get enough practice writing during the elementary school years, it is extremely important that students learn to start writing fairly quickly after they sit down, and to write freely, abundantly, and without fear. This requires a relaxed attitude, free from inhibitions, especially during the early drafting stages. In this lesson, the students hear the first half of a story that includes some fanciful, far-fetched situations. The intent is to inspire their imaginations and help them know that writing can be lighthearted and about anything.

Regularly remind the students that they are writing primarily for themselves. Encourage them to be willing to write something that is less than perfect. The important thing is to repeatedly practice getting their ideas on paper.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Fiction” Chart

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students began exploring fiction, or invented stories. Remind the students that some fiction could happen in real life and some fiction could happen only in the imagination. Add this to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Explain that today they will hear another example of fiction and do more writing.

2 Discuss Writing Attitude

Point out that learning to write is like learning any new sport, musical instrument, or skill; you must practice over and over to become good at it. Ask:

Q What can be hard about starting to write, or continuing to write, for the whole Writing Time?

Students might say:

"It's hard to start writing when I don't know what to write."

"I stop writing if I don't know how to spell something."

Explain that you expect the students' writing to have spelling errors and to be imperfect and incomplete. This is natural for young writers. Assure them that practicing by writing many, many imperfect pieces is more important than writing just a few perfect pieces.

Encourage the students to try to bring a fun, relaxed attitude to their writing today.

3 Read the First Half of If You Were a Writer Aloud

Show the cover of If You Were a Writer and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Tell the students that you will read the first half of the book today and the second half tomorrow. Invite the students to think as they listen about what they learn about being a writer.

Read pages 5–13 of If You Were a Writer aloud, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

fragrance: smell; aroma (p. 7)

wedge: slice (p. 7)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

typewriter: writing machine used before home computers became popular (p. 5; see illustration on p. 4)

an evil spell: magic (p. 5)

Stop after:

p. 13 "Then they could slip between the sheets to snore and sleep!" she said."

4 Discuss the Story and Generate Ideas

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you find out about being a writer?
- Q In Tacky the Penguin, the events in the story are not realistic. In other words, they could not happen in real life. Are the events in today's story realistic? Explain your thinking.

Students might say:

"Sometimes writers need to think about what to write next, like Melia's mom."

"I agree with [Zeke]. Also, writers use interesting words like stamp and twirl and droop."

"Today's story could happen in real life. There's a mom having breakfast with her kids. That's realistic."

"In addition to what [Ellie] said, Melia's uncle comes to visit. That part could really happen, too."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

- Q What realistic or imaginary things might you write about today? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their ideas with the class.

Students might say:

"I could write a funny story about when our new puppy ran around the house with my only clean pair of socks."

"I might write about a race-car driver who wins a big race."

"It might be fun to write about a kid who can fly."

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may write about realistic or imaginary situations, or anything else they choose. Encourage them to relax and write as freely and imaginatively as possible.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats and write silently for 20–30 minutes. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before you say "Turn to your partner." To review the procedure for "Think, Pair, Share," see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 (page 29). To see an example, view "Using 'Think, Pair, Share'" (AV13).

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do they seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude?

If necessary, remind the students to double-space their writing. If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class's attention and have partners talk about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class; then have the students resume silent writing.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 54 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing Attitude

Talk briefly as a class about the students' attitudes as they wrote today. Ask questions such as:

- Q Were you able to relax and write freely today without getting stuck? If so, what happened? If not, what made you feel stuck? What did you do to try to get unstuck?

Explain that the students will continue to focus on developing a relaxed attitude toward their writing.

---

EXTENSION

Realistic and Imaginary Fiction Stories

Give the students more experience with distinguishing between realistic and imaginary stories in fiction by having them share about fiction stories they are reading independently. As a class, discuss questions such as:

- Q What's happening in your story?
- Q Could that story happen in real life? Why or why not?

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use a Class Blog for Reflection

Create a class blog and invite the students to reflect on their writing attitude as they draft and revise their stories in the coming weeks. Post reflection questions such as those in Step 6 on the previous page. After discussing the questions as a class, have interested students post their comments. Review the comments periodically and, with the respondents' permission, discuss comments with the class.

Technology Tip

For information about setting up and maintaining a class blog, view the "Creating a Class Blog" tutorial (AV76).

Drafting Fiction

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Generate and quick-write ideas for fiction
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

Materials

- If You Were a Writer from Day 2
- "Notes About Fiction" chart from Day 2
- "Writing Time" chart (WA1)
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read the Second Half of If You Were a Writer Aloud

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Review that the students are hearing examples of fiction and thinking about what fiction can be. Explain that today they will hear the second half of If You Were a Writer and begin drafting a fiction story.

Tell the students that you will stop several times during today's reading to have partners talk about what they heard. Read pages 15–30 of If You Were a Writer aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

alley: narrow street or passageway, usually between two buildings (p. 22)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

in disguise: wearing a costume to hide who you are (p. 17)

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner,” see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 3 (page 13). To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

Stop after:

- p. 17 “What if the boy is really a detective in disguise? What would happen then?”

Ask:

- Q What could happen then? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question for a few moments; then signal for their attention. Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the next stopping point:

- p. 22 “‘What dog?’ Veronica asked. ‘What monster? Tell me!’”

Ask:

- Q What could happen next in this story? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question for a few moments; then signal for their attention. Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the end of the story.

2 Briefly Discuss the Story and Quick-write: Interesting People

Facilitate a brief class discussion using the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What more did you find out about being a writer?
- Q What are some things that happen to Melia that give her ideas for writing?

Students might say:

“Melia and her mom see a boy running with a dog, and they make up a story from that.”

“Melia also makes up a story about the missing jar of honey. In her story, a bear comes in and eats it.”

Point out that Melia uses interesting people and situations in her own life to help her make up stories. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have the students discuss:

- Q What interesting people do you know outside of school whom you could make up a story about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Without discussing the question, have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page of the writing ideas section, label it “Interesting People I Know,” and write a list of interesting people they know outside of school about whom they could write a story. Stop them after 3–4 minutes and have partners share and discuss their lists with each other. Then have them resume listing for a few more minutes.

Explain that during Writing Time, you would like all of the students to try writing a fiction story. They may make up a story about one of the interesting people on their list, or they may write any other made-up story. Remind them to double-space their writing and to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get more ideas.

WRITING TIME

3 Begin Drafting Fiction Pieces

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA1) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Make up a story about an interesting person outside of school.
- Continue a fiction story you started earlier.
- Start any new fiction story.

WA1

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do they seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude?

If necessary, remind the students to double-space their writing. If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class’s attention and have partners talk to each other about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class; then have the students resume silent writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2); see page 55 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

The students are just beginning to generate ideas for fiction. They are not expected to know or incorporate specific features of the genre into their writing at this point. They will build their understanding as they explore the genre over the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The students will write all first drafts, double-spaced, in their notebooks. In Week 4, they will select one of the drafts to develop and publish. Double-spacing now allows space for revision later. The students will write their final versions in Week 6 on loose, lined paper (or on computers, if available).

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Were you able to make up a story about an interesting person you know? Tell us about it.
- Q What other fictional ideas did you write about today?
- Q (Point to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.) Which notes did you think about as you started writing today?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to read and draft fiction for the next couple of weeks. They will eventually select one of their fiction drafts to develop and publish as a book for the class library.

EXTENSION

Conduct Interviews with Interesting People

Some students may be interested in learning more about the interesting people about whom they are writing. Have your students compose a list of questions to ask and then arrange to interview the people they have selected. Once the interviews are completed, have the students write stories based on the information they collected in their interviews. These stories may be fiction or nonfiction.

Day 4

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- If You Were a Writer from Day 3
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review If You Were a Writer
- Quick-write “What if?” questions
- Draft fiction
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Fiction” Chart

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday they heard the second part of If You Were a Writer. Remind the students that Melia uses people and situations in her own life to help her make up stories. Add can be made-up stories about people and situations in our own lives to the “Notes About Fiction” chart. Add any other ideas about fiction that the students heard in the reading.

2 Review If You Were a Writer

Explain that today the students will explore another way that fiction writers think of ideas for stories. Show pages 14–15 of the story, and point out to the students that Melia’s mother suggests asking the question “What if?” to get ideas for stories.

Tell the students that you will reread some passages from the story. Ask them to think as they listen about “What if?” questions they could ask. Read aloud pages 15–17, starting with “‘Maybe the dog and the boy could turn into an idea,’ Mother said.” Continue reading through the end of page 17.

Without pausing to discuss, turn to page 18 and read aloud the paragraph that begins: “Melia thought about the missing jar of honey.”

3 Generate “What If?” Questions

Explain that authors may get ideas for stories by asking themselves “What if?” questions. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and add What if? to it. Ask:

Q What “What if?” questions can you think of that might lead to an interesting story?

As the students report their ideas, record them on another sheet of chart paper titled “What if _____?”

Students might say:

“What if a monkey got loose from the zoo and ended up in my backyard?”

“What if I became the president of the United States?”

“What if someone finds out she can read people’s minds?”

“What if a boy’s parents forgot who he was?”

4 Quick-write: What If?

Ask the students to select one of the charted “What if?” questions and write in their notebooks for a few minutes about imaginative ways to answer it. Encourage them to imagine things that could happen in real life, as well as things that could not. Stop them after 3–4 minutes of writing and have partners discuss their thinking; then have the students write for a few more minutes.

If you notice many students having difficulty quick-writing about a “What if?” question, call for the students’ attention and write the first

Teacher Note

Save the “What if _____?” chart to use on Day 5.

few sentences together as a class. (For example, you might write: What if a monkey got loose from the zoo and ended up in the backyard? We heard screeching and got up from our dinner to see what was happening. We found the monkey swinging wildly from the swing set. We decided it was hungry, so we brought it inside and fed it a plate of spaghetti.)

Signal for the students’ attention and ask a few volunteers to share the “What if?” question they selected and the ideas they wrote.

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may continue the “What if?” story they started, list other “What if?” questions, or work on any other fiction story. Assure them that it is perfectly fine to leave drafts incomplete and start new ones. Encourage them to relax and use their imaginations as they write today.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA2) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes. Invite them to refer to the posted “What if _____?” chart, if they wish.

Writing Time

- Continue the “What if?” story you started during the quick-write.
- Start a new “What if?” story.
- List “What if?” questions in your writing ideas section.
- Work on any other fiction story.

WA2

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Who wrote a “What if?” story? Tell us about it.
- Q What other fictional ideas did you write about today?
- Q (Point to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.) Which notes did you think about as you started writing today?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Remind the students that they will continue to focus on developing a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice and that they will continue to read and draft fiction for the next couple of weeks.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Make Connections to If You Were a Writer

Show the cover of If You Were a Writer and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

- Q What do you remember about the story If You Were a Writer?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. After they have shared, ask:

- Q How does this story remind you of your own life?

Students might say:

"This story reminds me of my own life because Melia wants to do what her mom does. I want to do what my aunt does—she's an architect."

"I like learning cool new words, just like Melia does."

"Melia has lots of good talks with her mom. That reminds me of having good talks with my grandpa."

Explain that when you write or talk about how a story reminds you of your own life, you are making a connection to the story. Explain that making connections to stories helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how If You Were a Writer reminds you of your life.

You might say:

"I want to write about how If You Were a Writer reminds me of my own life. I'll start by writing: In If You Were a Writer by Joan Lowery Nixon, Melia wants to be a writer, just like her mom. Notice that I put the title of the book and the author's name in the opening sentence. Now I'll explain how the book reminds me of my own life. I'll write: When I was growing up, my favorite person in the whole world was my aunt Sophie. She was a teacher. Just like Melia wants to be a writer like her mom, I wanted to be a teacher like my aunt. Aunt Sophie and I had many inspiring talks, just like Melia and her mom have in the book. Now I'll write a closing sentence to wrap up my paragraph: Reading this book makes me remember how important Aunt Sophie was in my life."

Explain that the students will now write about how If You Were a Writer reminds them of their own lives. Have the students begin writing about their connections to the story. If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

Materials

- If You Were a Writer from Day 4

Day 5

Drafting Fiction and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 4
- “What if _____?” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheets (CN1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Quick-write more “What if?” questions
- Draft fiction
- Practice procedures for pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review Fiction

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been exploring fiction. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What makes fiction writing different from other kinds of writing?

If necessary, review the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help the students remember what they have learned. Add any new ideas they mention.

2 Generate More “What If?” Questions

Remind the students that authors often get ideas for stories by asking themselves “What if?” questions. Direct the students’ attention to the “What if _____?” chart from Day 4. Ask:

Q What other “What if?” questions can you think of that might lead to an interesting story?

As the students report their ideas, add them to the chart.

Students might say:

“What if cats and dogs ruled the world?”

“What if some kids started their own restaurant?”

“What if my family moved to the South Pole?”

“What if I became the youngest-ever Olympic athlete?”

3 Repeat Quick-write: What If?

Ask the students to select a different charted “What if?” question and write in their notebooks for a few minutes about imaginative ways to answer it. Encourage them to imagine things that could happen in real life, as well as things that could not. Stop them after 3–4 minutes of writing and have partners discuss their thinking; then have them write for a few more minutes.

Signal for the students' attention. Ask a few volunteers to share the "What if?" question they selected and the ideas they wrote.

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may continue the "What if?" story they started, begin a new "What if?" story, or work on any other fiction story. Remind them that it is perfectly fine to leave drafts incomplete and start new ones.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Display the "Writing Time" chart (📄 WA3) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the "What if?" story you started during the quick-write.
- Start a new "What if?" story.
- Work on any other fiction story.

WA3

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then begin conferring with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next three weeks, confer with individual students to get an idea of their thinking as they write fiction drafts. Ask each student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Hold off on any feedback about grammar or spelling. Instead, focus on clarifying the student's ideas about the story she is writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 5.

Teacher Note

To see an example of a teacher conferring with individual students, view "Conferring About Fiction" (AV43).

TEKS 1.A.iii

 ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I would like my partner to . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so that partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through the sharing time so that partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Explain that partners will each read one of their fiction drafts to the other and confer about both partners’ drafts today. Briefly review the procedure you established for pair conferring (see Unit 1, Week 3, Day 2, Step 4 on page 54). Remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other, but talking about it as well. Explain that today partners will tell each other one thing they like about the other’s draft. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What would you like your partner to do to show that he or she is interested in your writing and your creative ideas?

Students might say:

“I would like my partner to listen as I read my story.”

“I would like my partner to ask me questions about the story.”

“I would like my partner to tell me the part he likes.”

“I would like my partner to say something nice about my story, like ‘I really want to read your story.’”

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before you signal for their attention.

6 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking:

Q What did your partner do to show interest in your writing and creative ideas?

Q What did you like about your partner’s writing?

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction drafts during the coming two weeks. Remind the students that they will eventually select one of their fiction drafts to develop and publish as a book for the class library.

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Cherries and Cherry Pits

by Vera B. Williams

Bidemmi draws stories about her life.

Julius, the Baby of the World

by Kevin Henkes

Lilly is jealous of her little brother Julius.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Don’t say the old lady screamed—bring her on and let her scream.”

— Mark Twain

Twain, like most fiction writers, found ways to “show, not tell” a story. What might happen in a passage in which the old lady is “brought on and screams?” How might that compare to a passage in which we’re simply told that she screams? This week, experiment by writing a fiction passage in which a reader can see, hear, smell, taste, or feel what is happening.

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft fiction.
- Students explore how character is developed in stories.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students cultivate creativity in their writing.

Social Development Focus

- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 56 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Cherries and Cherry Pits
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Become familiar with plot, character, and setting
- Visualize characters
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review the Elements of Fiction

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students heard fiction stories last week and began drafting their own stories. This week they will continue to draft fiction pieces. Remind them that they will eventually select one of their drafts to develop and publish for the class library.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and review the items on it. Explain that in fiction stories, something happens to someone somewhere in time. The terms plot, character, and setting are used to describe the different features of stories.

Add something happens (plot) to someone (character) somewhere in time (setting) to the chart. Encourage the students to try to notice things about the plot, characters, and setting as they listen to part of a story today.

2 Read Part of Cherries and Cherry Pits Aloud

Show the cover of Cherries and Cherry Pits and read the title and the author’s name aloud. Explain that you will read parts of this book aloud today and tomorrow. Ask the students to try to get pictures in their minds as they listen, and tell them that you will not show the illustrations today so they can make their own mental pictures.

Read pages 4–11 of Cherries and Cherry Pits aloud slowly and clearly, without showing the illustrations. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

subway: underground train (p. 7)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

pits: hard seeds found in the centers of some fruits (p. 10)

3 Briefly Discuss the Story

Facilitate a class discussion using the questions that follow, and be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard. Ask:

Q Who is this story about so far? What happens? When and where does the story happen?

Students might say:

"The story is about a girl named Bideemmi. She draws pictures."

"In addition to what [Ted] said, the story is also about a man. At first he's on the subway. He's got some cherries in a bag."

"I agree with [Lia]. Then the man goes home and gives the cherries to his children."

"The story is also about the man's children. All of them have names that start with D!"

4 Visualize a Character in the Story

Explain that good fiction writers like Vera B. Williams, the author of Cherries and Cherry Pits, include a lot of details to help readers make pictures of the characters in their minds. Tell the students that you will reread passages that describe the physical appearance of the man in the story (what he looks like). Have them close their eyes and imagine as they listen.

Turn to page 8 and read aloud, starting at the top of the page. Stop after:

p. 8 "It's from worrying and worrying, my mother says."

Ask:

Q What does this man look like in your mind so far? Turn to your partner.

Repeat this procedure by reading the rest of page 8 aloud, starting with "And his neck is thick and his arms are thick . . ." Remind the students to close their eyes and imagine as they listen. Stop after:

p. 8 "But he is only carrying this little white bag."

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What does this man look like in your mind now?

Students might say:

"In my mind, the man looks very strong. He has huge arms and big hands."

"I agree with [Hector]. In my mind, he also has wide shoulders with lots of muscles."

"In addition to what [Amani] says, I imagine that he's wearing dark blue jeans."

Explain that today the students will continue to write fiction stories. Encourage them to include details to help the reader imagine the physical appearance of their characters (what they look like). Remind them that they can look at the "Notes About Fiction" chart to help them get ideas.

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, we invite you to focus on pacing class discussions so they are lively and focused without dragging, losing the attention of your participants, or wandering off the topic. Class discussions should be long enough to allow time for thinking and short enough to sustain the students' attention. Good pacing requires careful observation of the class (not just the students who are responding) and the timely use of various pacing techniques. To speed up a discussion:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question, even if others have their hands up.
- Use "Turn to Your Partner" if many students want to speak; then call on just one or two students to share with the whole class.

To deepen or refocus a discussion:

- Restate the question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view "Pacing Class Discussions" (AV20).

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA4) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a fiction story you started earlier.
- Start a new fiction story.
- Include details to help readers imagine what the characters look like.

WA4

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask each student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Hold off on any feedback about grammar or spelling. Instead, focus on clarifying the student’s ideas about the story he is writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What’s interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class as they respond.

- Q What ideas came out of your imagination in your writing today?
- Q Who used details to help readers imagine what a character looks like? Tell us about them.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to hear, discuss, and draft fiction tomorrow.

---

EXTENSION

Describe a Portrait of a Person

Collect copies of painted portraits of different people from a book of classic art or from an art museum's website. (For example, you might go to a museum's website and search using the keyword "portrait.")

Distribute copies of the portraits to the students. Ask each student to choose one and write a brief description of the person in the portrait.

Encourage the students to write details to help readers imagine that person as a character in a story. Invite them to make up stories about the character.

Day 2

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Cherries and Cherry Pits from Day 1
- “Excerpts from Cherries and Cherry Pits” (WA5)
- Student Writing Handbook page 6
- “Writing Time” chart (WA6)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Visualize characters
- Describe characters through visual appearance
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

THE IMPORTANCE OF CREATIVITY IN WRITING

It is important for students to understand that writing fiction requires them to reach into their imaginations and tell things in their own way. Children come to school with vivid imaginations, full of possibilities. Nurture these possibilities by consistently showing interest in their ideas, actively asking them questions, and encouraging them to develop their ideas further.

The lessons in this program help to build a safe classroom environment in which students can take the risks necessary to develop their creativity. Further nurture their creativity by regularly sharing your own creative writing and ideas with them.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard the beginning of Cherries and Cherry Pits by Vera B. Williams and thought about how the man in the story is described. Explain that you will read more from this story today. Encourage the students to try to form pictures of the characters in their minds as they listen.

2 Read More from Cherries and Cherry Pits and Visualize Characters

Read pages 13–24 of Cherries and Cherry Pits aloud, without showing the illustrations. Stop during the reading as described on the next page, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

florist shop: store that sells flowers (p. 13)

escalator: moving staircase (p. 23)

stoops: front steps of houses (p. 23)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

pocketbook: purse (p. 13)

Stop after:

p. 13 “And in the pocketbook is a bag.”

Ask:

Q What do you see in your mind? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss their mental images for a few moments; then signal for their attention. Without stopping to share as a class, reread the last line and continue reading to the next stopping point, without showing the illustrations. Follow the same procedure at the stopping points on pages 18 and 24, having partners discuss their mental images:

p. 18 “They are both eating cherries and spitting out the pits, eating cherries and spitting out the pits.”

p. 24 “‘Don’t forget to spit out the pit.’”

Explain that you will make the book available so that students who wish to read the rest of it at another time may do so.

3 Analyze Passages from the Story

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 6 as you display the “Excerpts from Cherries and Cherry Pits” chart ( WA5). Explain that several passages from today’s reading are reproduced here. Ask partners to read through the passages in the Student Writing Handbook together and underline words or phrases that helped them imagine the characters.

After several minutes, signal for the students’ attention. Briefly discuss as a class:

Q What words or phrases did you underline? What do those words tell us about this character?

Students might say:

“I underlined ‘old, old shoes.’ Those words tell us that the old lady might not have a lot of money.”

ELL Note

You might provide the prompts “I underlined . . .” and “Those words tell me that . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions.

Teacher Note

During this lesson, the students are not expected to add details about characters' actions or speech to their own stories. They will explore character development in more depth later in this unit.

Teacher Note

You might explain that speech between characters is called dialogue. Using the "Excerpts from Cherries and Cherry Pits" chart (WA5), point out that dialogue is enclosed in double quotation marks that set it off from the rest of the story.

"We underlined the part where she says to the parrot, 'There's your own little cherry tree.' This sentence tells us that she has a good sense of humor."

"My partner and I underlined 'jumping on and off the stoops.' We could imagine this boy jumping all over the place. It tells us he's energetic."

Point out that good fiction writers like Vera B. Williams often describe their characters' physical appearance, actions, and speech (the words they say) to help readers imagine the characters.

Underline examples of each of these on the "Excerpts from Cherries and Cherry Pits" chart (WA5). Examples include:

- Physical descriptions: "On her head is a black hat with a pink flower, like a rose flower" and "And when he smiles you can see the space between his big front teeth like my brother's."
- Actions: "She laughs and dumps all of the cherries onto the geranium plant in front of the parrot" and "he's hollering to his little sister."
- Speech: "'You like it?' asks the lady. 'You like cherries, honeybird?'" and "'Hey come on out here. See what I got for you.'"

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction today. Invite them to think of ways to help the reader imagine their characters by describing their physical appearance, actions, and speech, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA6) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Continue to describe what your characters look like.
- If you wish, try describing your characters' actions or speech.

WA6

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

Explain that one of the most important things fiction writers do is tap into their creativity; they use their imaginations to create something new or to re-create something familiar in their own way.

Ask the students to review the writing they did today and each choose one sentence to share with the class. Encourage them to choose sentences that they like or that they believe shows their creativity. Ask them to underline their sentences. After a moment, go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else's writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that everyone is creative and can become more creative by writing and doing other creative things, such as drawing, playing musical instruments, and solving interesting problems in their own way. Explain that the students will continue to develop their creativity throughout the year.

Teacher Note

The intent of this activity is to hear one sentence from every student in the class. This lets the students hear what their classmates are writing and builds their accountability. After they underline their sentences, have them put their pencils away. Have them read their sentences in a loud voice, one after another, without stopping to comment. In the discussion afterward, they are not expected to remember every sentence they heard.

EXTENSION

Read and Discuss the Rest of Cherries and Cherry Pits

Read the rest of Cherries and Cherry Pits aloud and encourage the students to visualize the characters. The students might be interested in seeing the illustrations and talking about how they compare to the mental images they formed.

Day 3

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Julius, the Baby of the World
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 1
- “Quick-write” chart (WA7)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review character, plot, and setting
- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Describe and quick-write characters’ actions
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Refer to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and remind the students that in a fiction story, something happens to someone somewhere in time and that the terms plot, character, and setting are used to describe these features of fiction.

Remind the students that they are focusing on developing interesting characters using physical description, actions, and speech. Add includes descriptions of characters’ physical appearance, actions, and speech to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Explain that today you will read the first half of another story with interesting characters. Encourage the students to think about how the author makes the characters come to life.

2 Read the First Half of Julius, the Baby of the World Aboard

Show the cover of Julius, the Baby of the World and read the title and author's name aloud. Read pages 5–19 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

beady: small, round, and shiny, like a bead (p. 7)

nifty: very good (p. 12)

dazzled: amazed (p. 16)

restrain: control (p. 17)

verbal exuberance: loud, cheerful talking and singing (p. 18)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

it was a different story: Lilly changed (p. 6)

insulting comments: things said to hurt a person's feelings (p. 6)

disgusting: very unpleasant (p. 7)

extraordinary: wonderful (p. 10)

uncooperative chair: place where Lilly sits when she has not been nice to Julius (p. 13)

showered her with hugs and kisses: hugged and kissed her a lot (p. 14)

babbled and gurgled: made baby sounds (p. 16)

Stop after:

p. 14 " 'And I hate Julius.' "

Ask:

Q What has happened so far? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question briefly; then signal for their attention and continue reading through the end of page 19, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Explain that you will read the second half of the story tomorrow.

3 Discuss the Characters in the Story

Facilitate a brief class discussion using the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard. Ask:

Q What is Lilly like? What does she do in the story that makes you think that?

Teacher Note

To see an example of this technique, view “Guided Visualization and Quick-write” (AV45).

Students might say:

“Lilly is mean to Julius. She pinches his tail, yells at him, and tries to scare him.”

“I agree with [Brian]. Lilly tries to make Julius disappear. She also tells him a really mean story.”

“Lilly doesn’t want to change her mind about Julius. Even though her parents give her lots of hugs and treats, she is still mean to him.”

“In addition to what [Aida] said, I think she’s jealous. When Julius babbles, Lilly copies him to show that she can do the same thing, but even better.”

Point out that one way author Kevin Henkes shows us what Lilly is like is by describing things she does (her actions). Explain that good fiction writers often use actions to show the personalities of their characters.

4 Quick-write: Showing Character Through Action

Have the students open their notebooks to the piece of writing that they each worked on most recently and review it quietly.

Display the “Quick-write” chart (WA7). Ask the students to think about the charted questions for a moment as you read them aloud.

WA7

Quick-write

- Who is the main character in this story?
- What kind of person is this character? What does the character do that makes him or her unique, or different from everyone else?

Without discussing the questions, have the students open to the next blank page in the writing ideas section of their notebook and write the character’s name (or a temporary name, if they do not have one) at the top of the page. Tell them that they will do a 5-minute quick-write in which they will write actions that their character might do, based on his or her personality.

If the students have difficulty writing ideas for their characters’ actions, call for their attention and write an example together as a class. Ask:

Q I’m writing about a character who is very [nervous]. What are some actions that a [nervous] person might do?

Elicit ideas from the students and write them where everyone can see them.

Students might say:

“A nervous person could bite his fingernails.”

“A nervous person might walk around in circles.”

“A nervous person could be jumpy or look over her shoulder a lot.”

When you have recorded a few examples, have the students resume the quick-write for a few more minutes.

After several minutes, call for the students' attention and ask a few volunteers to share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that today the students may continue what they started during the quick-write, work on a fiction story they started earlier, or begin a new story. Encourage them to include actions in their stories to help readers imagine their characters.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA8) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more about the character you thought about during the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include descriptions of characters' actions.

WA8

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

(continues)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

Q Who wrote about a character’s actions? Tell us about them.

Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about them.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

---

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write an Opinion Letter to the Character of Lilly in Julius, the Baby of the World

Show the cover of Julius, the Baby of the World and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the story Julius, the Baby of the World?

Q What do you remember about the character Lilly?

Have a few volunteers share their ideas. Be prepared to read aloud from the story to help students recall what they have read.

Students might say:

“Lilly doesn’t like her baby brother, Julius. She calls him a germ.”

“She tries to scare Julius. She wishes he would go away.”

“Even though her parents are extra nice to her, Lilly is still mean to Julius.”

Materials

- Julius, the Baby of the World from Day 3

Then discuss:

Q If you were Lilly's friend, what advice might you give her about getting along with Julius?

Students might say:

"I'd tell Lilly to be patient. Soon Julius will get bigger, and then they'll be able to play together."

"I'd tell her that just because her parents have a new baby, it doesn't mean they love her less."

"I think that babies can actually be fun. They are very cute. That's what I'd tell Lilly."

"I'd tell her to try harder to be nice to Julius. Babies can be boring, but that's not Julius's fault."

Explain that the students will each write an opinion letter to Lilly. In the letter, they will give Lilly their opinion about why she should get along with Julius, as well as any advice they may have. Remind the students that writers often have different opinions about a topic and that is fine. What is important is that they support their opinions with facts and details.

Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing an opinion letter to Lilly. As you write, invite the students to suggest additional facts and reasons to support your opinion.

You might say:

"I'll start by addressing my letter to Lilly. Then I'll tell her my opinion in the first sentence. I'll write: Dear Lilly, I think you should try to be patient with Julius. Now I'll explain why I think she should be patient with him. I'll write: You should be patient because Julius is just a baby right now. But don't worry! Babies grow fast. Soon Julius will get bigger. Then you can play with him. Maybe I'll add another detail to support my opinion: It's lots of fun to have a brother. When I was a kid, my little brother and I played together all the time. It was great. Now I need some closing sentences to end the letter. I'll write: That's why I really think you should try to be patient with Julius. Hang in there, Lilly! Last of all, I'll sign my letter: Your friend, Mr. Shannon."

Explain that the students should start their letters by addressing Lilly and stating an opinion in the first sentence, giving facts or details to support their opinion, ending with a sentence that brings the letter to a close, and signing it at the bottom. Have the students return to their seats and write their letters. If time permits, invite the students to share their letters with the class.

Day 4

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Julius, the Baby of the World from Day 3
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- “Writing Time” chart (WA9)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the first half of Julius, the Baby of the World
- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Describe and quick-write characters’ speech
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they heard the first half of Julius, the Baby of the World by Kevin Henkes. Briefly discuss:

Q What is the character of Lilly like so far in the story?

Refer the students to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and review that authors develop interesting characters by describing their physical appearance, actions, and speech. Remind the students that yesterday they thought about how Kevin Henkes shows Lilly’s personality through her actions. Explain that another way he shows Lilly’s personality is by describing her speech (the words she says).

Explain that you will read the second half of the book today. Encourage the students to listen for speech that reveals the characters’ personalities.

2 Read the Second Half of Julius, the Baby of the World Aloud

Read pages 20–32 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

niceties: nice things, such as toys or new clothes (p. 24)

quivered: trembled (p. 28)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

glorious: wonderful (p. 22)

ghastly: terrible, awful (p. 23)

antique: special and old (p. 24)

quite a spread: lots of tasty foods and drinks (p. 26)

What's the big deal?: Why are we having a party for Julius? (p. 26)

3 Discuss Speech in the Story

Facilitate a class discussion by reading aloud the following lines of dialogue from the story. Show the illustrations as you read. Call on a few volunteers to say which character spoke those words and what they remember about each part of the story:

p. 7 "Disgusting."

p. 17 "Lilly, let's restrain ourselves, please."

p. 28 "I think his wet pink nose is slimy. I think his small black eyes are beady. And I think his sweet white fur is not so sweet."

p. 29 "You're talking about my brother. . . . And for your information, his nose is shiny, his eyes are sparkly, and his fur smells like perfume."

4 Quick-write: Revealing a Character's Personality with Speech

Point out that what a character says and how he or she says it can reveal a lot about the personality of that character. Explain that the students can also use speech in their stories to reveal a character's personality. Today they will do a quick-write and practice writing things that one of their characters might say.

Have the students open their notebooks to the quick-write they did yesterday. Ask the following question and have them think quietly for a moment about it:

Q What is something this character would probably say? How would he or she say it?

After a moment, have each student open to the next blank page in the writing ideas section of her notebook and brainstorm and write several typical things her character might say, based on the character's personality.

Teacher Note

You might review that when characters speak to each other, this kind of speech is called dialogue.

If the students have difficulty writing ideas for what their characters might say, call for their attention and write an example together as a class. Ask:

Q What are some things that my [nervous] character from yesterday might say?

Elicit ideas from the class and write them where everyone can see them.

Students might say:

"A nervous person might say, 'Why are you asking me that?'"

"A nervous person might say, 'I'm worried about what might happen.'"

"I have butterflies in my stomach!"

When you have recorded some examples, have the students resume the quick-write for a few more minutes.

After several minutes, call for the students' attention and ask a few volunteers to share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may continue to work on this piece or a story they started earlier, or they may start a new story. Remind them that it is perfectly fine to leave drafts incomplete and start new ones. Invite the students to try giving their characters words to speak as they write their fiction stories. Encourage them to relax and use their imaginations in their writing today.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA9) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more about the character you thought about during the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include descriptions of characters' physical appearances, actions, and speech.

WA9

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude, inspired by their own thoughts?
- If they seem overly cautious or inhibited, do they eventually start writing freely?

Support any student who is still struggling to start after about 10 minutes by asking her questions such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q Who is the character you are writing about? What is [he/she] like?
- Q What interesting thing happens to this character?
- Q What might this character say or do in this situation? Why would that make sense for [his/her] personality?

As the student responds to the questions, have the student write her responses in her notebook and continue to write what happens. Record your observations on the “Class Assessment” record sheet (CA3); see page 56 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote some words that a character might say? Tell us about them.
- Q Who wrote about a character’s physical appearance or actions? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Encourage the students to take a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice as they continue to draft fiction.

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Listen to Audiobook Versions of Stories

Some of the fiction stories from this unit, including The Paper Bag Princess, Tacky the Penguin, and Julius, the Baby of the World, may be available as audiobooks. To find an audiobook version of a story, search online with the book title and the keyword “audiobook.” You might play the audiobook for the class and discuss with the students what they found interesting, enjoyable, or surprising about the reader’s rendition of the story. Alternatively, you might invite interested students to listen to the audiobook and share their reactions to it with the class.

Day 5

Drafting Fiction and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA10)
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from previous units

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore how character is developed in stories
- Draft fiction
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review How Characters Are Developed in Stories

Have partners take out their notebooks and pencils and sit together at desks. Remind the students that this week they heard two stories that have interesting characters, Cherries and Cherry Pits and Julius, the Baby of the World. Review that good fiction writers describe the physical appearance, actions, and speech of a character to reveal his or her personality and to help the reader imagine that character. Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to reveal their characters’ personalities as they write today, and to refer to the “Notes About Fiction” chart for writing ideas.

WRITING TIME

2 Draft Fiction Pieces

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today’s Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 3.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Continue to describe the physical appearance, actions, and speech of your characters to reveal their personalities.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What is something this character would probably say?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that the students will read

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

one of their fiction drafts to their partner and confer about it today. If necessary, briefly review the procedure for pair conferring and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other, but talking about it as well.

Direct the students' attention to the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart you started in Unit 2, Week 1, Day 3 (page 84) and review the questions on it. Ask:

Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Students might say:

"I want to ask my partner to listen for her favorite part."

"I want to ask my partner to tell me if any parts are confusing."

"I want to ask my partner if he can imagine my story happening."

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions in their pair conferences today.

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class, without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking questions such as:

- Q What questions did you ask your partner about your story? What did your partner say?
- Q What did you do to show interest in your partner's writing?
- Q Why is it important that we ask other people questions about our own writing?

5 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

As you did earlier in the week, ask each student to review the writing she did today and choose a sentence that she likes or that shows her creativity. Give the students a moment to select and underline their sentences; then go around the room and have each student read her sentence aloud to the class, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a class discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else's writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that the students will continue to explore and draft fiction next week.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

The Paper Bag Princess

by Robert Munsch, illustrated by Michael Martchenko

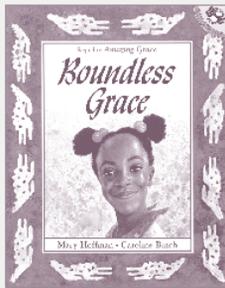

A feisty princess sets out to rescue her betrothed from a dragon.

Scarecrow

by Cynthia Rylant, illustrated by Lauren Stringer

A scarecrow witnesses the life around him.

Boundless Grace

by Mary Hoffman, illustrated by Caroline Binch

Young Grace gets to know her father's new family in Africa.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA11–WA16

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1)

Reproducible

- (Optional) “Excerpt from Boundless Grace” (BLM2)

Professional Development Media

- “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3)
- “Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners” (AV32)

TEACHER AS WRITER

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft fiction.
- Students explore how character is developed in stories.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students cultivate creativity in their writing.

Social Development Focus

- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 57 of the Assessment Resource Book.

“A young woman with long hair and a short white halter dress walks through the casino at the Riviera in Las Vegas at one in the morning. . . . I know nothing about her. . . . How exactly did she come to this?”

— Joan Didion

An entire novel can be inspired by an author's glimpse of a stranger in a curious situation. This week, look for an opportunity to sit in a public place with your notebook. Observe people who intrigue you and wonder about them. Consider:

- What are they doing?
- What brought them to this moment?
- What do they love? Hate? Hope for? Fear?

Write short character sketches in your notebook as you imagine their lives.

Day 1

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- The Paper Bag Princess
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA11)

Facilitation Tip

Continue to focus on  pacing class discussions  so they are neither too short nor too long. Scan the whole class (not just the students who are responding) and use techniques such as the following:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question, even if others have their hands up.
- Use “Turn to Your Partner” if many students want to speak. Then call on just two or three students to share with the whole class.
- Restate the question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how characters are developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Review that over the past two weeks the students heard fiction stories and drafted their own stories. This week, they will continue to draft fiction pieces. Remind them that they will eventually select one of their drafts to develop and publish for the class library.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and review the items on it. Ask:

Q What else are you learning about fiction that we could include on this chart?

Add the students’ ideas to the chart and encourage them to keep these things in mind as they listen to and write stories this week.

2 Read The Paper Bag Princess Aloud

Show the cover of The Paper Bag Princess and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Encourage the students to listen for ways the author describes the characters and the setting of the story.

Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations.

3 Briefly Discuss the Story

Facilitate a class discussion using the following questions, and be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q Who is the main character in this story? Why do you think so?

Q What happens to the main character?

Q When and where does this story take place? How would you describe the setting?

4 Visualize a Character in the Story

Tell the students that you will reread passages that describe the character of Elizabeth. Ask them to close their eyes and imagine what Elizabeth is like as they listen. Reread page 8 aloud, beginning at the top of the page. Stop after:

p. 8 “So she put on the paper bag and followed the dragon.”

Ask:

Q What might you guess about Elizabeth from this description? What makes you think so?

Students might say:

“I guessed that Elizabeth is brave. Only a really brave person would follow a dragon.”

“I agree with [Josh]. Also, I guessed that Elizabeth is tough. She doesn’t mind wearing a paper bag.”

“In addition to what [Cara] said, I guessed that Elizabeth is a kind person because she wants to rescue Ronald.”

Reread the following passages aloud. Remind the students to close their eyes and imagine as they listen. After you reread each passage, stop and ask:

Q What might you guess about Elizabeth from this passage? Turn to your partner.

p. 14 “‘Is it true,’ said Elizabeth, ‘that you can burn up ten forests with your fiery breath?’”

p. 26 “‘Ronald,’ said Elizabeth, ‘your clothes are really pretty and your hair is very neat. You look like a real prince, but you are a bum.’ They didn’t get married after all.”

After partners have briefly discussed the passages, explain that today they will continue to write fiction stories. Encourage them to include details to help the reader imagine their characters. Also remind them to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get ideas.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA11) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

ELL Note

You might provide the prompts “I guessed that Elizabeth . . .” and “I think so because . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions. To learn more, view “Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners” (AV32).

Teacher Note

You may wish to point out that both of these passages contain dialogue (speech between characters).

Teacher Note

The Writing Time routine established early in the year helps the students settle quickly into focused writing. To learn more, view “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3).

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include details to help a reader imagine the characters.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Have the student show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What is something this character would probably say?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Help the students reflect on their work together by discussing questions such as those that follow. Invite them to read passages of their writing aloud to the class as they respond.

- Q What writing ideas came out of your imagination today?
- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to hear, discuss, and draft fiction tomorrow.

EXTENSIONS

Explore Comparative Adjectives Using The Paper Bag Princess

Show the cover of The Paper Bag Princess and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the book The Paper Bag Princess? What is the main character Elizabeth like?

Students might say:

"I remember that Elizabeth is a princess. Then a dragon comes, smashes her castle, and takes Prince Ronald."

"I think Elizabeth is smart. She tricks the dragon and saves Ronald."

"Elizabeth decides not to marry Ronald at the end of the story."

After a few volunteers have shared, write this sentence where everyone can see it: Elizabeth is smart. Read it aloud and underline smart; point out that smart is an adjective, a word that describes a noun (in this case, Elizabeth).

Tell the class that now you will compare Elizabeth to another character in the book, the dragon. Ask the students to watch and listen as you model comparing Elizabeth and the dragon.

You might say:

"I think Elizabeth is smart. In fact, I think she is very smart because she tricks the dragon using just her brain. I want to write a sentence comparing how smart Elizabeth is with how smart the dragon is. It doesn't sound right to say 'Elizabeth is more smart than the dragon.' How can I say 'more smart' in another way, using one word? I'll add -er to the end of the adjective smart. That spells smarter, which means 'more smart.' Now I can write my sentence comparing these characters: Elizabeth is smarter than the dragon."

After you have written the sentence where everyone can see it, read it aloud and underline smarter. Explain that smarter is an example of a comparative adjective, and that writers use comparative adjectives to compare one noun (person, place, or thing) to another—in this case, comparing Elizabeth to the dragon. Point out that readers can recognize comparative adjectives because they often end in -er.

Next, write the sentence Elizabeth is kind where everyone can see it. Read the sentence aloud and underline kind; explain that kind is an adjective that describes Elizabeth. Explain that now the students will work with their partners to compare Elizabeth to Prince Ronald. Beneath the first sentence, write the sentence frame Elizabeth is _____ than Ronald. Read the sentence frame aloud and ask:

Q How might you complete this sentence if you wanted to write that Elizabeth is more kind than Ronald? Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

You might briefly review that a noun is a word that names a person, place, or thing. Point out that a proper noun (such as Elizabeth) names a specific person, place, or thing and begins with a capital letter.

Teacher Note

You might briefly review that the word than signals that the writer is comparing Elizabeth and the dragon. Point out that than is spelled with an a.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice forming and using comparative adjectives, take time to review these skills (see Lesson 20 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

After a moment, have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out to the students that they can add -er to the end of kind to form the comparative adjective kinder.

Write Comparisons Using a Character from The Paper Bag Princess

Show the cover of The Paper Bag Princess and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the book The Paper Bag Princess?

After a few volunteers have briefly shared their thinking, discuss:

Q Why does Elizabeth change her mind about marrying the prince?

Q What do you admire about Elizabeth?

Students might say:

"Elizabeth saves Ronald from the dragon, but he doesn't even thank her. That's when Elizabeth realizes he isn't so great."

"Ronald only sees that she's wearing a paper bag. He doesn't see how smart and brave she is. So she decides not to marry him."

"I admire Elizabeth because she tricks the dragon."

"In addition to what [Ricardo] said, I admire Elizabeth because she isn't afraid to tell Ronald that he's a bum."

Write the following prompts where everyone can see them. Invite the students to choose one to write about.

- In what ways are you like Elizabeth?
- In what ways is Elizabeth different from other storybook princesses?

If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how characters are developed in stories
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read the First Half of Boundless Grace Aloud

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that yesterday they heard The Paper Bag Princess and thought about how the main character in the story is described. Explain that you will read the first half of another story today and the second half of it tomorrow. Encourage the students to try to create pictures in their minds of the characters as they listen.

Show the cover of Boundless Grace and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud.

Read pages 2–12 of the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

particularly: especially (p. 2)

Beauty . . . the Beast: characters in a fairy tale (p. 3)

speechless: unable to talk (p. 5)

The Gambia: a country in Africa (p. 6)

compound: walled area containing a group of buildings (p. 8)

cross: angry; not pleased (p. 10)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

nana: grandmother (p. 2)

split up: separated; divorced (p. 2)

wicked: very bad; cruel (p. 10)

stepmother: father's new wife (p. 10)

Materials

- Boundless Grace
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA12)

Teacher Note

If the students are interested in learning more about The Gambia, you might teach the technology extension “Learn More About The Gambia” on page 264 at another time.

Stop after:

p. 8 “I’m one girl too many. Besides, it’s the wrong Ma.”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far? Turn to your partner.

Have partners briefly discuss the question; then signal for their attention and continue reading. Stop after:

p. 12 “Grace thought about it. ‘I’ll try,’ she said.”

Ask:

Q What has happened up to this point in the story? Turn to your partner.

2 Briefly Discuss the Story

Facilitate a brief class discussion using the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What have you found out about Grace so far in this story?

Q What does she say or do in the story to make you think that?

Q How do you picture Grace in your mind?

Remind the students that good fiction writers like Mary Hoffman often use physical descriptions, actions, and speech to make their characters feel real to the reader. Encourage the students to think of ways to help a reader imagine their characters by describing their physical appearance, actions, and speech as they work on their fiction drafts today.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA12) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include physical descriptions, actions, and speech to help a reader imagine your characters.

WA12

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What is something this character would probably say?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

As you did last week, ask the students to review the writing they did today and each choose one sentence to share with the class. Encourage each student to choose a sentence that she believes shows her creativity and to underline that sentence. After a moment, ask each student to read her sentence aloud to the class, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else's writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Remind the students that everyone is creative and can become more creative by writing and doing other creative things, such as drawing, playing musical instruments, and solving interesting problems in their own way. Review that the students will continue to develop their creativity throughout the year.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Learn More About The Gambia

Invite the students to learn more about The Gambia, the country Grace visits in the book Boundless Grace. As a class, brainstorm some questions the students have about The Gambia; record the questions where everyone can see them. Next, briefly discuss what keywords might be useful in an Internet search to answer these questions.

Guide the students in an online search for The Gambia, and help them identify reputable websites. As a class, browse the websites to find information and images that answer the students' questions. After the search is finished, briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What is something you have learned about The Gambia?
- Q *How does learning about The Gambia affect what you think about the book Boundless Grace?*

In addition, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 3, "Choosing Effective Search Terms"; Technology Mini-lesson 4, "Understanding Search Results"; or Technology Mini-lesson 5, "Using Filters to Narrow Results," in Appendix A to help the students learn how to search for information effectively on the Internet.

Day 3

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Boundless Grace from Day 2
- "Notes About Fiction" chart from Day 2
- "Writing Time" chart (WA13)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how characters are developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read the Second Half of Boundless Grace Aloud

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard the first half of Boundless Grace. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What happened in the first half of the story?

Explain that you will read the second half of the book today. Read pages 14–25 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

tame: gentle; not wild (p. 22)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

shopping: things that were bought (second use on p. 14)

homesick: missing home (p. 19)

holy place: place set aside for prayer (p. 22)

Stop after:

p. 19 “‘And remember, families are what you make them.’”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far in the story? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question briefly; then signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the last line and continue reading. Follow this procedure at the next stopping point:

p. 23 “Grace closed her eyes and made a wish, but she wouldn’t say what it was.”

After partners have discussed the question briefly, signal for their attention and continue reading to the end of the story.

2 Visualize a Character in the Story

Tell the students that you will reread passages from the story that describe Grace. Remind them that author Mary Hoffman uses details about Grace’s physical appearance, actions, and speech to reveal the character’s personality. Ask them to close their eyes and imagine what Grace is like as they listen. Reread the text on page 12 aloud, beginning with “When Papa came home from work, he found Grace in the backyard” and continuing to the end of the page. Ask:

Q What might you guess about Grace from this passage? Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I guessed that Grace is still sad that her mom and dad split up. She covered her ears when her dad talked about it.”

“I guessed that Grace really loves her dad. That’s why she is going to try to be nice to Jatou.”

“I agree with [Anatoly]. Also, I think Grace is probably homesick.”

Repeat this procedure with the passage on page 18.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating ideas, suggest some like the ones in the “Students might say” note; then ask, “What else might you guess about Grace?”

After partners have briefly discussed the passage and volunteers have shared with the class, explain that today the students will continue to write fiction stories. Encourage them to include details to help a reader imagine their characters. Also remind them to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get ideas.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA13) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include details about physical appearances, actions, and speech to help a reader imagine the characters.

WA13

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What’s interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What is something this character would probably say?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q What ideas came out of your imagination in your writing today?
- Q Who used details to describe a character? Tell us about some of those details.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Encourage the students to take a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice as they continue to draft fiction pieces.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write an Opinion Paragraph About the Character of Nana in Boundless Grace

Show the cover of Boundless Grace and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

- Q *What do you remember about the story Boundless Grace?*

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Distribute the copies of “Excerpt from Boundless Grace” (BLM2) and explain that it shows part of the beginning of the story. Point out that Nana, Grace’s grandmother, is one of the characters in the story. Remind the students that readers can figure out a lot about a character’s personality by paying attention to what the character says and does. Explain that you will read the passage from Boundless Grace aloud, and the students will follow along and think about what they are learning about Nana’s personality from what she says and does. Then read aloud the excerpt (page 4 of the book). After reading, ask:

- Q What have you learned about Nana’s personality from what she has said and done? What in the story makes you think that?

Students might say:

“I learned that Nana is very loving. She hugs Grace a lot. She always listens to what Grace has to say.”

“I think Nana is a wise person. She gives Grace good advice about her family.”

“I agree with [Carrie]. I also think Nana is adventurous. She traveled all the way to Africa with Grace.”

“I think that Nana is funny, too. She made a joke about their cat Paw-Paw not wanting a dog in the family!”

Explain that the students will write a paragraph of opinion about what kind of person Nana is, based on the things she says in the passage they just read. Tell the students that readers often have different opinions

Materials

- Boundless Grace from Day 3
- Class set of “Excerpt from Boundless Grace” (BLM2)

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the “Excerpt from Boundless Grace” (BLM2). Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a copy for yourself.

about what is written in a story and that is fine. What is important is that they support their thinking with facts and details from the story. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing an opinion paragraph about Nana’s personality, based on things she says. As you write, invite the students to suggest additional details to help you create a vivid picture of Nana.

You might say:

“I think that the things Nana says and does show that she is a very wise and kind grandmother. I’ll start by writing: I think that the character of Nana in Boundless Grace by Mary Hoffman is very wise and also extremely kind. Notice that I stated my opinion and put the title of the story and the author’s name in the opening sentence. Now I need to explain my opinion using facts and details. I’ll write: Nana is wise because she gives Grace good advice. She says many smart things. For example, she says to Grace, ‘Families are what you make them.’ Nana helps Grace understand that her family is great in its own way. Now I’ll write about things that show how kind Nana is: I think Nana is very kind because she always listens to Grace. She cares when Grace is feeling sad. She gives her lots of hugs. Now I need some closing sentences to wrap up my paragraph. I’ll write: That’s why I think Nana is a very wise and kind person. Grace is lucky to have Nana as her grandmother!”

Explain that each student should start his paragraph with an opening sentence that states his opinion and includes the title and author of the story, give facts or details from the story to support his opinion, and end with a closing sentence that brings the writing to a close. Have the students write about their opinions. If time permits, invite volunteers to share their opinion paragraphs with the class.

Day 4

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Scarecrow
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- “Quick-write” chart (WA14)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review character, plot, and setting
- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Quick-write about objects that could think
- Describe characters’ thoughts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Refer to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and remind the students that in a fiction story, something happens to someone somewhere in time, and that the terms plot, character, and setting are used to describe these features of fiction.

Explain that in addition to physical descriptions, actions, and speech, authors also use thoughts to show what a character is like. Tell the students that today you will read a story with an unusual character. Encourage the students to listen for the character's thoughts and think about what these thoughts tell us about the character.

2 Introduce and Read Scarecrow Aloud

Show the cover of Scarecrow and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. If needed, briefly discuss what a scarecrow is and why a farmer might want one to scare crows and other birds away from a field.

Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

crows, grackles, starlings, jays: kinds of birds (p. 8)

mammoth: very large (p. 15)

lapel: part of a coat (p. 20)

3 Discuss the Characters in the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q Who is the main character in this story? Why do you think so?

Q What thoughts does this character have? What do these thoughts tell us about his personality?

4 Quick-write: Stories About Objects

Point out that in Scarecrow, author Cynthia Rylant creates an entire story about a single object, a scarecrow. She imagines that the scarecrow is alive and describes its thoughts and experiences over time.

Ask the students think about other objects like the scarecrow that they might create a story about. Invite them to imagine those objects alive, thinking, and having experiences. Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page of the writing ideas section as you display the “Quick-write” chart (📄 WA14). As a class, brainstorm a few ideas (such as those suggested on the next page); then add the students’ ideas to the chart.

Quick-write

- Objects that could be alive and thinking
- musical instrument
- shoe
- car
- skateboard
- box of crayons

Give the students a few minutes to quick-write a list of any other objects they might create a story about.

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may continue what they started during the quick-write, work on a fiction piece they started earlier, or begin a new story. Encourage them to include characters' thoughts in their stories to help readers get to know the characters.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA15) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add to what you started in the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include characters' thoughts.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude, inspired by their own thoughts?
- If they seem overly cautious or inhibited, do they eventually start writing freely?

Support any student who is still struggling to start after about 10 minutes by asking her questions such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q Who is the character you are writing about? What is [he/she] like?
- Q What interesting thing happens to this character?
- Q What might this character say or do in this situation? Why would that make sense for [his/her] personality?
- Q What might this character be thinking in this situation?

As the student responds to the questions, have her write her responses in her notebook and continue to write what happens. Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4); see page 57 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

Ask each student to review the writing he did today and choose a sentence he likes or that shows his creativity. Give the students a moment to select their sentences and underline them; then go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud to the class, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a class discussion by asking:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Day 5

Drafting Fiction and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- Scarecrow from Day 4
- “Notes About Fiction” chart
- “Writing Time” chart (WA16)
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Quick-write characters’ thoughts
- Draft fiction
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Scarecrow

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that they heard Scarecrow yesterday and thought about the way the author shows the scarecrow’s personality through its thoughts. On the “Notes About Fiction” chart, add show what a character is like through thoughts. Facilitate a brief discussion about the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q In the book, the author writes that to be a scarecrow, “It takes . . . a liking for long, slow thoughts.” What are some of this scarecrow’s long, slow thoughts?

2 Quick-write: Showing Character Through Thoughts

Have each student choose a character she has created in her recent writing. Ask the students to open their notebooks to the next blank page of the writing ideas section and quick-write some thoughts that their characters might have. If you notice any students struggling to write the character’s thoughts, call them together and write some examples as a class. Ask:

Q What are some things that my [nervous] character from last week might be thinking?

As volunteers share ideas, write them where everyone can see them.

Students might say:

“A nervous person could think, ‘I feel so sweaty!’”

“A nervous person could think, ‘I can’t stop trembling.’”

“Maybe a nervous person would be thinking, ‘Calm down!’”

“He or she might be thinking, ‘My heart is beating fast.’”

When you have recorded a few examples, have the students resume the quick-write.

After the students have written for a few moments, call for their attention and have a few volunteers share some of their characters' thoughts with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may continue to work on this character, continue another story they started earlier, or begin a new fiction story. Invite them to include thoughts, as well as physical descriptions, actions, and speech, to help a reader imagine their characters. If necessary, remind the students that it is perfectly fine to leave drafts incomplete and start new stories.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Have students sit together at desks with partners. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA16) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more about the character you thought about during the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include descriptions of characters' thoughts, physical appearances, actions, and speech.

WA16

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 4.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What's interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] look(s) like?
- Q What do you imagine [he/she/they] might do?
- Q What is something this character would probably say?
- Q What might [he/she/they] be thinking at this moment in the story?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. Beginning next week, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Explain that partners will now each read one of their fiction drafts to the other and confer about both partners' drafts. If necessary, briefly review the procedure for pair conferring and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well.

Direct the students' attention to the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart. Remind the students that they started this chart earlier in the year. Review the questions on it and ask:

- Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Students might say:

"I want to ask my partner if she can imagine what's happening."

"I want to ask my partner if he can picture the setting."

"I want to find out whether anything is confusing to my partner."

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions in their pair conferences today.

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class, without intervening, providing sufficient time for all partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

5 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Writing Attitude

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking questions such as:

Q What questions did you ask your partner about your story? What did your partner say?

Q What did you do to show interest in your partner's writing?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to explore and draft fiction next week.

Teacher Note

If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

Week 4

OVERVIEW

An icon for an excerpt, featuring a purple square with a white cloud-like shape and the word "Excerpt" in white text. The background of the icon has faint, illegible text.

Excerpt

"About Kevin Henkes"

excerpted from kevinhenkes.com
(see page 297)

Kevin Henkes shares about his life as an author.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA17–WA25

Assessment Forms

- "Class Assessment Record" sheets (CA5–CA7)
- "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2)

Professional Development Media

- "Planning a Lesson" (AV33)
- "Using Web-based Teaching Resources" tutorial (AV75)

Writing Focus

- Students review their fiction drafts, and each selects one to develop, revise, proofread, and publish.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing process.
- Students analyze their drafts and think of ways to develop characters and plot.
- Students explore temporal words and phrases.
- Students explore endings that bring a story to a close.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 58 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6) on page 59 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, create a chart titled “Temporal Words and Phrases.” Add the heading: Tell when something in a story happens. Under the heading, list the following: first, next, then, last, before, after, now, later, right away, after a while, finally, suddenly, instantly, yesterday, today, tomorrow, and next week. If you already prepared such a chart for use in the Personal Narrative unit, simply locate that chart.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2) on page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

(continues)

“Before I write down one word, I have to have the character in mind through and through. I must penetrate into the last wrinkle of his soul . . . down to the last button, how he stands and walks, how he conducts himself, what his voice sounds like. Then I do not let him go until his fate is fulfilled.”

— Henrik Ibsen

Review the characters you have created in your drafts and select one who intrigues you. Write a detailed description of that character. Consider:

- What was this character like as a youngster?
- How does he or she dress?
- What physical movements does he or she do unconsciously?
- What is he or she unusually good or bad at?

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, create a chart titled “Questions About My Partner’s Draft” and write the following questions on it:

Am I getting to know the character’s personality? How?

Does something interesting happen to the character?

Can I follow what is happening in the story? Am I confused at any point?

Are there temporal words and phrases that help me understand the order of events?

Does the ending bring the story’s events to a close?

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA7) on page 60 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 2, review the fiction pieces you have written and select a single page to use to model adding details to a draft. Prepare your sample writing to display. Alternatively, you can use the “Sample Fiction Draft” (WA19). To learn more, view “Planning a Lesson” (AV33).

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author’s writing process
- Review their fiction drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first drafts of their selected fiction pieces

DEVELOPING AND PUBLISHING FICTION STORIES

In Weeks 4-6 of this unit, each student selects one fiction draft written in the prior three weeks to develop for publication for the class library. Each student takes this piece through guided analysis (in which you help look for specific ways to improve their stories) and revision, writing a second draft before publication. The students learn important writing skills and conventions as they proofread their drafts.

While students usually select pieces that are appropriate for class publication, you may occasionally have students who want to publish pieces containing content you feel is questionable (such as excessive violence or inappropriate language). Work with these students individually to help them understand that they may write about whatever they wish in their notebooks, but they should select pieces for publication that everyone will want to read and that will be appropriate for the class library.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce the Writing Focus for the Coming Three Weeks

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that over the past three weeks they have been drafting fiction pieces. Explain that today they will review their drafts, and each student will select one piece to develop into a published story for the classroom library.

Remind the students that so far this year they have learned about several professional authors and how they devote a lot of time to rethinking, revising, and improving their writing. Explain that today the students will learn about another professional author’s writing process before they begin their work.

Materials

- “About Kevin Henkes” (on page 297)
- Julius, the Baby of the World from Week 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA17)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)

2 Learn About Kevin Henkes

Show the cover of Julius, the Baby of the World and remind the students that they heard this book by Kevin Henkes earlier in the unit. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What other books by Kevin Henkes have you read?
- Q Based on his stories, what kind of person do you think he might be? Why?

Explain that you will read an excerpt from Kevin Henkes’s website. Read “About Kevin Henkes” (page 297) aloud, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

dog-eared: folded-over visual person: someone who notices many things with their eyes

card table: small folding table

Facilitation Tip

Continue to focus on pacing class discussions by scanning the class and using techniques such as the following:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question.
- Use “Turn to Your Partner” if many students want to speak. Then call on just two or three students to share with the whole class.
- Restate the original question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you find out about Kevin Henkes?
- Q Kevin Henkes is an artist and a writer. How does being an artist help him in his writing?

Students might say:

“He always loved to read. Also, he wanted to be an artist even when he was a kid.”

“In addition to what [Jamila] said, when he got older, he decided that he wanted to be a writer, too.”

“Being an artist helps him see his characters in his mind. He likes describing them a lot.”

Review that the students will create their own fiction books for the class library, and explain that they will begin revising their drafts today to make them the best stories they can be. Explain that, like Kevin Henkes, they will make sure to include their strong mental images and vivid descriptions of their characters and environments.

3 Prepare to Review Fiction Drafts

Explain that during Writing Time the students will reread all their fiction drafts, and each select one to revise and publish as a book. The drafts they select can be pieces they have started but not finished. Encourage them to choose pieces that they can imagine making changes to and that they think their classmates will enjoy. Ask:

- Q As you’re looking through your drafts, what might you want to look for to help you decide on one to develop?

Students might say:

"I want to look for a draft that I really like or have some strong feelings about."

"I will look for drafts that have characters I like."

"I want my story to be different from everyone else's, so I'm going to look for a draft that is unique."

4 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students return to their seats, reread all their fiction drafts, and each select one to develop and publish. Any student who selects a draft before the time is up can start thinking about what they can change, add, or improve in the draft.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room and support them by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?
- Q What can you imagine adding or changing in this piece to make it more interesting?

If you notice any students selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, pieces they feel are already "perfect," very long or very short pieces, or pieces that are not double-spaced), gently guide them toward a more workable piece.

WRITING TIME

5 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🕒 WA17) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish writing your draft.
- Add details about physical appearance, actions, speech, or thoughts that reveal your main character's personality.

WA17

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Teacher Note

If a student wants to publish a piece that is already very long, encourage her to identify one section of it to develop and publish for the class library. She may continue to work on other parts of the story on her own at another time.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?

If you notice that many students need more time to complete their drafts, make time for them to do so before going on to the Day 2 lesson. Any student who has finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5); see page 58 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What draft did you choose to revise?
- Q Why did you choose that piece to revise?

Explain that the students will begin revising their drafts tomorrow.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Watch or Read an Interview with Kevin Henkes

Kevin Henkes, the author of Julius, the Baby of the World, has written many books for children. To learn more about the author and his work, have the students watch a video of him speaking about his writing or read an interview with him. To find a video or print interview with Kevin Henkes, search online with his name and the keyword “video” or “interview.” After the students watch the video or read the interview, have them discuss what they learned about the author’s life and his thoughts about writing and illustrating children’s books.

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where characters are revealed through physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, or speech
- Begin revising their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students stay at their seats today. Ask them to open their notebooks to the fiction draft they each selected yesterday. Explain that today you will help them think about how they might revise and improve their drafts in preparation for publishing them. Ask the students to reread their drafts quietly and look up when they are finished.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising to Develop Characters” chart (WA18) and read the prompts aloud one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising to Develop Characters

- What does your main character look like? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, your main character’s physical appearance. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write looks on it.
- How does your main character act? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, your character’s actions. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write actions on it.
- What does your main character say or think? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, your character’s speech or thoughts. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write speech or thoughts on it.

WA18

Materials

- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising to Develop Characters” chart (WA18)
- Your sample writing OR the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA20)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience reading their drafts critically before they begin to revise.

TEKS 11.B.iii

TEKS 11.B.vi

TEKS 11.B.ix

Student/Teacher Narrative Step 1 and Step 2 (all, beginning on page 283 and continuing on to page 284)

Teacher Note

Plan to have pads of self-stick notes available for the students to use during the revision phase of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so it marks the text without covering it up.

Teacher Note

You might review that speech between characters is called dialogue.

2 Model Revising to Develop Characters

Without sharing as a class, explain that during Writing Time today the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and revise those places. Explain that they will each incorporate their revisions into second drafts next week.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing looks in the margin next to a place where you could describe your main character’s physical appearance, actions next to a place where you could describe his or her actions, and speech or thoughts next to a place where you could describe the character’s speech or thoughts. Ask the students to watch as you model adding information about your character. Think aloud about a place you want to revise. Model using a caret (arrow) to insert new text and crossing out text to delete it.

TEKS 11.C.ii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (second paragraph and “You might say” note)

You might say:

“I want to make room for some new details about what Larry the Lizard looks like. First, I’ll delete ‘and flicked his long tongue in and out of his mouth’ in the first sentence. Then I’ll write: He was green and bumpy and had a long, shiny tail. I also want to add an action to show how Larry feels about Chacha, so right after Larry asks Bertha about Chacha the Cat, I’ll add: His tail twitched nervously.”

Sample Fiction Draft

Larry the Lizard lounged on a rock ~~and flicked his long tongue in and out of his mouth.~~ He was green and bumpy and had a long, shiny tail. looks He spent his days in the backyard, slithering beneath the plants. He was friendly with almost all the backyard creatures, including the bees and the butterflies and the worms, but he wasn’t friendly with Chacha the Cat.

“Where’s that cat?” Larry asked Bertha the Bee. His tail twitched nervously. actions

“Beats me,” said Bertha, who buzzed on by. Bertha didn’t care, but Larry sure did, since the cat’s favorite activity was to sneak up on small lizards and pounce on their tails.

WA19

Teacher Note

Save the revised “Sample Fiction Draft” to use on Day 3.

Using the same procedure, model one or two more examples of adding details about physical appearances, actions, and speech or thoughts to your draft. Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to revise their own drafts today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise First Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA20) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, and speech to your draft to tell about your characters.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish revising.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA20

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the class and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?
- Are they focusing on developing their characters?
- Do they have ideas for physical descriptions, actions, speech, and thoughts they could write to reveal character?

Support students who are having difficulty by asking them questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What kind of personality does your character have?
- Q How might this character look?
- Q What could your character do or say at this point to show his or her personality?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6); see page 59 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to work on their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work by asking questions such as:

- Q What ideas did you have for describing your character today?

Day 3

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart, prepared ahead
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 3
- “Revising for Plot” chart (WA21)
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19) from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA22)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheets (CN2)

Teacher Note

If you have already taught the Personal Narrative genre unit, direct the students' attention to the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart you made for use during that unit and review it with your students.

Teacher Note

You might explain to the students that temporal means “having to do with time.”

Q What ideas did you have that you feel were creative or original today? Tell us about them.

Remind the students how important it is to use their imaginations, both when writing drafts and during revision. Encourage them to strive to make their stories as creative and interesting as they can.

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Explore temporal words and phrases
- Mark places in their drafts where interesting things happen or where there might be confusion about what is happening
- Revise their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Purpose of Revision

Have the students stay at their desks today. Ask them to open their notebooks to the stories they are developing. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces as interesting and as fun to read as possible before they publish them for their classmates.

Explain that today you will ask them to think about a way they might strengthen the plots (what happens) in their drafts.

2 Explore Temporal Words and Phrases

Explain that one way the students might make their plots clearer and easier to follow is by adding temporal words and phrases. Explain that these are words and phrases that help readers understand exactly when various events in a story happen (the order of events).

Direct the students' attention to the “Temporal Words and Phrases” chart. Read aloud the words and phrases listed under the heading Tell when something in a story happens. Ask:

Q What other temporal words and phrases might you use to help readers understand exactly when in your story something happened?

Add the students' ideas to the chart.

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add temporal words and phrases help the reader understand when something in a story happened to the chart.

3 Continue Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Have them get out their self-stick notes, and explain that you will ask them to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the "Revising for Plot" chart (📄 WA21) and read the prompts aloud one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising for Plot

- Find a place where you use, or could use, a temporal word or phrase to help readers understand exactly when in your story something happens. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write when on it.
- Find another place where you use, or could use, a temporal word or phrase to help readers understand exactly when in your story something happens. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write when on it.
- Find a place in your draft where something interesting happens, or could happen, to a character. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write interesting on it.
- Will your readers be able to follow what happens from the beginning to the end of your story? If you think a place might be confusing, mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write confusing on it.

WA21

Teacher Note

Developing the plot of a story is a focus of fiction study at grade 5 of the Being a Writer program and thus is treated with a lighter touch in grade 3. (See "Development Across the Grades" on page 208.)

4 Model Revising to Develop the Plot

Explain that, as they did yesterday, the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and make revisions to their stories. Remind them that they will incorporate these revisions into a second draft next week.

Display your own writing or the "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (📄 WA19) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing when in the margin next to a place where you could add a temporal word or phrase, interesting in the margin next to a place where you could add an interesting thing that happens to your main character, and confusing next to a place that might confuse your reader.

Ask the students to watch as you model revising to make your plot (what happens in your story) as clear and as interesting as possible. Model adding and, if necessary, deleting text.

You might say:

"I could help the reader understand exactly when Duffel the Dog saw Larry the Lizard by inserting a temporal word right before 'Out of the corner of his eye.' I'll insert: Suddenly. I also think that a reader might get confused about who's talking at the end of the story, so at the end of the last sentence I'm going to add the phrase: grumbled Bertha. Finally, I think the story might be more interesting if Bertha was afraid of somebody, too. At the very end I'm going to have her say: 'By the way, where's that bird?'" when <sup>Suddenly</sup> yawn. Out of the corner of his eye, he saw a tiny shape go scurrying under a bush. Duffel yelped and jumped back.

Larry the Lizard!

"Where's that lizard?" he asked Bertha the Bee.

"Beats me," said Bertha, who buzzed on by. Bertha didn't care, but Duffel sure did, since the lizard's favorite activity was to sneak up on napping dogs and bite them on the toes.

"Hmph, if everyone would learn to leave each other <sup>grumbled Bertha. "By the way, where's that bird?"</sup> alone, I wouldn't have to answer so many silly questions!" <sup>confusing interesting</sup>

Using this same procedure, model one or two more examples of adding temporal words or phrases and adding to the plot. Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to revise their own drafts today.

WRITING TIME

5 Continue Revising Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA22) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

WA22

Writing Time

- Add temporal words and phrases to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen.
- Add information or make changes so your story is as interesting and clear as possible.
- Remove the self-stick notes as you finish revising.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then begin conferring with individual students about the pieces they are developing for publication.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the coming two weeks, confer again with individual students, this time talking with them about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read some of his writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student’s story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through physical appearance, action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting thing happens to your character?
- Q What temporal words and phrases [did/could] you use to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work during Writing Time today by asking:

- Q How did you add to or revise your story to make it more interesting?
- Q What ideas did you have that you feel were creative or original today? Tell us about them.

Explain that the students will continue revising their stories tomorrow.

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- “Closing Sentences from Three Stories” chart (WA23)
- Student Writing Handbook page 7
- “Writing Time” chart (WA24)

TEKS 11.B.v
TEKS 11.B.viii
 Student/Teacher Narrative
 Step 1 (all, beginning on page 290 and continuing on
 to page 291)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore endings that bring a story’s events to a close
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Express interest in one another’s writing

1 Analyze Closing Sentences

Have the students gather their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces as interesting and as fun to read as possible before they publish them for their classmates. Explain that today you will ask them to think about an important feature of all narratives: endings that bring a story’s events to a close.

Point out that the closing sentences of a piece of writing need to wrap up the piece. Explain that you will read the closing sentences from some stories they heard earlier. Ask them to think as they listen about how the authors bring each story’s events to a close.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 7, where the closing sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display the “Closing Sentences from Three Stories” chart (WA23). Together, read the first passage, from Tacky the Penguin, and ask:

Q What does the author do to wrap up this story?

Q What words or phrases show you that the story has reached an end?

Students might say:

“To wrap up the story, the author has all the other penguins hug Tacky. They love Tacky because he saved the day.”

“I agree with [Louisa]. The author also wraps up the story by saying that even though Tacky is odd, he’s a great bird to have around.”

“In addition to what [Louisa and Jenner] said, I think that the author is telling us that being odd is what makes Tacky so great.”

“I think the author is wrapping up the story by telling us that it’s just fine to be different.”

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Have the students work in pairs to read the remaining closing sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at wrapping up the pieces.

After several minutes, signal for the students' attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the closings, and underline words and phrases they mention on the chart. As they report, ask:

Q How does that [word/sentence] help wrap up the story?

2 Review Closing Sentences in Drafts

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add an ending brings the story's events to a close. Have the students reread the last few sentences of their own fiction drafts. Ask and have the students think to themselves about:

Q How might you revise your closing sentences to bring your story to a close?

Without discussing as a class, explain that the students will revise their closing sentences today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Closing Sentences

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA24) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your closing sentences to end your story in a satisfying way.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA24

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEKS 11.B.v

TEKS 11.B.viii

Student/Teacher Activity
Steps 2–4 (all, beginning on page 291
and continuing on to page 292)

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- " "You look like a prince, but you are a bum." " and "They didn't get married after all." (from The Paper Bag Princess)
- "... clouds are floating across his button-borrowed eyes." and "The scarecrow is thinking his long, slow thoughts..." (from Scarecrow)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read some of her writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student’s story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through physical appearance, action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the ending bring the story’s events to a close?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting thing happens to your character?
- Q What temporal words and phrases [did/could] you use to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Closing Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the closing sentences of their fiction stories. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q What words did you hear in [Ian’s] closing sentence(s) that wrapped up the piece for you?
- Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own closing sentences?

Explain that partners will confer about their stories tomorrow.

In this lesson, the students:

- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Anticipate and solve problems that arise in their work together
- Share their partners' thinking with the class

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare for Pair Conferences

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that today partners will meet to confer about their drafts. Remind the students that in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help each person create the best possible piece of writing. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What have you learned about giving feedback respectfully?
- Q What problems can arise when you are conferring with a partner? How will you avoid those problems today?

2 Prepare to Give Feedback About Character and Plot

Tell the students that during pair conference time today, partners will read and tell each other about their stories, including their revisions, and receive feedback about character and plot.

Explain that as the students listen to their partners' stories, you would like them to ask themselves five questions. Direct the students' attention to the "Questions About My Partner's Draft" chart and read the questions aloud. Then display your revised writing from Day 3 or the revised "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (WA19) and read it aloud, along with any revisions. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to have the students discuss your draft using the charted questions.

After a few moments, signal for the students' attention and have a few volunteers give you feedback about your draft using the five questions.

3 Confer in Pairs

Encourage partners to listen carefully to each other and be ready to report to the class what each other said.

Give the students ample time to confer in pairs.

Materials

- "Questions About My Partner's Draft" chart, prepared ahead
- Your revised sample writing OR revised "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (WA19) from Day 3
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA7)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA25)

TEKS 1.A.iii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 and Step 2 (all)

TEKS 1.A.iii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 (all, beginning on page 293
and continuing on to page 294)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Circulate among conferring pairs and observe without intervening. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are they giving each other specific feedback about the questions related to character development and plot?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe to discuss with the students during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA7); see page 60 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When most pairs have had time to discuss their drafts, call for the class’s attention.

4 Reflect on Feedback

Gather the class and briefly discuss:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Remind the students that authors pay close attention to feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will revise their drafts based on their partners’ feedback.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise Drafts Based on Conference Feedback

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA25) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your draft based on partner feedback.
- Finish writing and revising your story.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about their writing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read some of his writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student's story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through physical appearance, action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story's events to a close?

Support students in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting thing happens to your character?
- Q What temporal words and phrases [did/could] you use to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by briefly discussing:

Q What feedback from your partner did you incorporate into your revision today? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will start writing the second drafts of their stories in the coming week.

Excerpt

About Kevin Henkes

excerpted from kevinhenkes.com

Some quotes from Kevin Henkes:

“I grew up desperately wanting to be an artist. That desire was a huge part of my identity for as far back as I can remember. It wasn’t until I was in high school that writing became as important to me. During my junior year of high school I decided I wanted to write and illustrate children’s books for a career.”

“I also loved books, and the ones I was lucky enough to own were reread, looked at over and over, and regarded with great respect. To me ‘great respect’ meant that I took them everywhere, and the ones I still own prove it. They’re brimming with all the telltale signs of true love: dog-eared pages, fingerprints on my favorite illustrations, my name and address inscribed on both front and back covers in inch-high crayon lettering, and the faint smell of stale peanut butter on the bindings. I wondered about authors and illustrators back then—What did they look like? Where did they live? Did they have families? How old were they?—but I never imagined that one day I would be one myself.”

“. . . because I’m a visual person, I do have very strong images in my head as I work. I love describing my characters and their environments. Setting a scene—providing proper lighting, the colors and textures of things, sounds—is one of my favorite things. . . .”

“I used to live with my parents and brothers and sister and work at a card table in my bedroom. Now I live with my wife and son and daughter in our own house and work at a drawing table in my own studio. I never thought I’d be lucky enough to be a real author and illustrator. I wouldn’t trade it for anything.”

Week 5

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students assess their own writing.
- Students analyze their drafts and think of ways to develop the setting.
- Students develop second drafts of their stories, integrating revisions.
- Students explore verbs and adverbs.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA19, WA26–WA29

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA8–CA10)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)

Professional Development Media

- “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1)
- “Pacing Class Discussions” (AV20)
- “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8) on page 61 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA9) on page 62 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, create a chart titled “Self-assessment Questions” with the following questions written on it:
  - In the story, does something interesting happen to someone somewhere in time?*
  - Does the main character act, think, and speak in a way that shows what he or she is like?*
  - Are there temporal words and phrases that help show the order of events?*
  - Does every sentence of the story make sense?*
  - Does the ending draw the story’s events to a close?*
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA10) on page 63 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have some students type and print out their final versions. In addition, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 8, “Creating Presentations,” in Appendix A to help the students learn how to incorporate visuals into their stories.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“The plot is the line on which I hang the wash, and the wash is what I care about.”

— Robert B. Parker

Reread the description of the character you wrote in Week 4. Explore plot this week by having something interesting, important, or challenging happen to your character. Describe what happens to the character before and after the event. Consider:

- What makes the experience interesting, important, or challenging to your character?
- What is this character like before the situation? After?
- What does the character learn by going through this experience?

Day 1

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- Scarecrow from Week 3
- “Revising for Setting” chart (WA26)
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19) from Week 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA27)

Teacher Note

Developing the setting of a story is a focus of the Fiction unit in grade 4 of the Being a Writer program and thus is treated with a lighter touch in grade 3. (See “Development Across the Grades” on page 208.)

Teacher Note

If necessary, repeat this discussion with other books from this unit that have noteworthy settings:

- Tacky the Penguin
- Cherries and Cherry Pits
- The Paper Bag Princess
- Boundless Grace

Teacher Note

You may wish to review that these are sensory details, or words that help a reader imagine seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, or touching what is happening in the story.

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts to develop setting and descriptive language
- Revise their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Setting in Fiction

Have the students stay at their desks today. Ask them to get out their notebooks and pencils. Explain that today they will finish revising their fiction stories by thinking more about the setting of the story. Tomorrow they will begin writing the second drafts of their stories, incorporating all their revisions.

If necessary, remind the students that the setting of a story is the place and time in which the story occurs. Ask the students to think quietly for a moment about where and when their stories occur.

Show the cover of Scarecrow and briefly discuss the time and place described in the story, using the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students remember the story. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the setting of this story? What did it look like? Sound like? Smell or feel like?

Students might say:

“The setting is on a farm. There are chirping birds and big yellow sunflowers and other growing things.”

“We see the farm at night and in the daytime.”

“There’s all kinds of weather, like snow and wind and warm sunshine.”

“I remember that sometimes it’s really quiet on the farm.”

2 Continue Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Have them get out their self-stick notes and explain that you will ask them to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Setting” chart (WA26) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising for Setting

- Where and when does your story take place? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, the setting. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write setting on it.
- What might someone see or hear in your setting? Find places where you could add words to describe how it looks or sounds. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write look or sound on it.
- What might someone smell or feel in your setting? Find places where you could add words to describe how it smells or feels. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write smell or feel on it.

WA26

3 Model Revising to Develop the Setting

Without sharing as a class, explain that, as they did last week, the students will look at the places in their drafts that they marked with self-stick notes and make revisions to their stories. They will revise directly on their first drafts, writing on self-stick notes if they run out of room on the paper. Remind them that they will incorporate these revisions into their second drafts.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing setting in the margin next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the setting; look or sound next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the look or sound of something; and smell or feel next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the smell or feel of something. Ask the students to watch as you model revising to more clearly describe the setting. Model adding text using a caret and, if necessary, deleting text.

You might say:

“I want to add a description of the setting—the backyard where all the animals live. I’ll insert this new description after ‘Chacha appeared in the backyard, nose and ears twitching.’ I’ll write: It was a sunny morning. I also want to describe what it sounded like, so I’ll add a second sentence: A gentle breeze rustled through the palm trees.”

“Beats me,” said Bertha, who buzzed on by. Bertha didn’t care, but Larry sure did, since the cat’s favorite activity was to sneak up on small lizards and pounce on their tails.

Before long, Chacha appeared in the backyard, nose and ears twitching. She glanced around for the lizard, feeling in the mood for a nice game of pounce-on-the-tail. Suddenly she smelled something that made her fur stand on end. It was Duffel the Dog!

“Where’s that dog?” she asked Bertha the Bee.

“Beats me,” said Bertha, who buzzed on by. Bertha

WRITING TIME

4 Revise to Develop Setting

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA27) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your draft to make the setting come to life using sensory details.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about their writing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read some of her writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student’s story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through physical appearance, action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story’s events to a close?
- Does the student use sensory details to convey the setting?

Support students in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What physical description, actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting thing happens to your character?
- Q What temporal words and phrases [did/could] you use to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?
- Q When and where does the story take place? What descriptive words can you use to tell the reader how the place looks, feels, sounds, or smells?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work by asking:

- Q What ideas did you have for describing your setting today?
- Q What ideas did you have that you feel are creative or original? Tell us about them.

ELL Note

Questions like this help to create a sense of community that benefits everyone.

English Language Learners in particular rely on having a supportive environment in which they can take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically. For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Day 2

Writing Second Drafts

Materials

- Your revised sample writing OR revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19) from Day 1
- Two pieces of chart paper (one with lines) and a marker
- Loose, lined paper for second drafts
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8)

Remind the students that it is important to use their imaginations, both when writing drafts and during revision. Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking:

Q What did you do during the sharing time today to show you were interested in what your classmates said?

Remind the students that they will begin to work on their second drafts tomorrow.

In this lesson, the students:

- Generate ideas for improvements to make while writing second drafts
- Begin writing second drafts

WRITING SECOND DRAFTS

Over the next several days, the students write second drafts of their stories. In the process, they add interesting verbs and adverbs to make their writing descriptive, learn how to punctuate speech, practice correcting run-on sentences, and explore writing creative and effective titles.

It is important that the students understand that a second draft is an improved, more interesting, and more complete version of the first draft. If you observe students who are copying their first drafts without making further revisions, work with these students individually to help them identify ways to revise and improve their writing.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Write Second Drafts

Have the students stay at their desks today. Tell the students that during Writing Time they will make revisions to the places they marked with self-stick notes and then begin writing their second drafts on loose, lined paper. Explain that they will write on every other line because this will give them space to make corrections as they get ready to write a final version later on.

Point out that second drafts should be improved, more interesting, and more complete versions of the stories they began in their first drafts.

If the students find themselves copying their first drafts onto the lined paper without any revisions, they are probably not writing true second drafts and should ask for help.

2 Model Beginning to Write a Second Draft

Ask the students to watch as you model beginning to write a second draft. Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA19). Read the first sentence aloud and model writing that sentence, with revisions, on every other line of the lined chart paper. Repeat this process until you have modeled incorporating several revisions into your second draft.

You might say:

“When I was revising, I changed my first sentence to delete ‘and flicked his long tongue in and out of his mouth.’ I like that change, but I think the sentence would be even more interesting if I added a temporal phrase to tell exactly when my story happens. Right at the beginning I’ll add: One Saturday morning. Now I’ll copy my new first sentence: One Saturday morning, Larry the Lizard lounged on a rock. When I was revising, I also added a new second sentence about Larry, ‘He was green and bumpy and had a long, shiny tail.’ I like those sensory details, so I’ll copy that sentence down. I like the next couple of sentences, too, so I’ll copy them without any changes. But I think I could make it clearer that Larry doesn’t like Chacha. That’s really important for readers to understand. So, at the end of the paragraph I’ll add: In fact, Chacha was his least favorite animal in the yard.”

Second Draft

*One Saturday morning, Larry the Lizard lounged on a rock. He was green and bumpy and had a long, shiny tail. He spent his days in the backyard, slithering beneath the plants. He was friendly with almost all of the backyard creatures, including the bees and the butterflies and the worms, but he wasn’t friendly with Chacha the Cat. In fact,
Chacha was his least favorite animal in the yard.*

307)

After you have written several sentences, ask:

Q What kinds of changes did you notice I made as I started writing my second draft?

As the students respond, write their observations on a sheet of chart paper titled “Things We Can Revise in Our Second Drafts.” Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What other kinds of changes might you make while writing your second draft? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their ideas with the class.

Students might say:

“You made the story clearer by adding a sentence about how Larry doesn’t like Chacha.”

“In addition to what [George] said, you added some sensory details to tell what Larry looks like.”

“You added One Saturday morning so readers know exactly when the story is happening.”

“We can show what the characters do and what they think and say.”

Add the students’ ideas to the chart. Encourage the students to refer to the chart while they are working on their second drafts.

WRITING TIME

3 Begin Writing Second Drafts

Distribute lined paper and have the students work silently on their revisions and second drafts for 20–30 minutes.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

Technology Tip

If the students write their second drafts on computers, they should double-space the drafts and print them out.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students incorporating their revisions into a second draft?
- Are the second drafts improvements on their first drafts?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking her questions such as:

Q I notice that you marked this part of your draft for revision. What were you thinking about when you marked it?

Q Read this passage aloud with the new sentence you want to add. Does that make sense? If not, how can you change it so it does make sense?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8); see page 61 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Second Drafts

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What was challenging about writing a second draft?
- Q Who made a further revision to your story as you were writing your second draft? Tell us about it.
- Q What other ideas can we add to the “Things We Can Revise in Our Second Drafts” chart?

Add any revision ideas the students have to the chart. Explain that tomorrow the students will continue to work on their second drafts.

Teacher Note

Save the “Things We Can Revise in Our Second Drafts” to use on Day 3 and throughout the process of writing second drafts.

You will need a complete, charted second draft of your story to use on Day 5 of this week. You might wish to create a projectable chart of the draft. For more information about whiteboard activities in the Being a Writer program, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

Writing Second Drafts

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore using interesting verbs to make writing descriptive
- Continue to write second drafts
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce Interesting Verbs

Have the students gather their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Explain that the students will continue to work on their second drafts today and that they will make their writing as descriptive as possible so readers will be able to imagine what is happening in their stories. Explain that one way writers make their writing descriptive and communicate exactly what they want to say is by using interesting verbs, or action words.

Briefly review that many verbs describe what someone or something does. Write several action verbs where everyone can see them and, together as a class, brainstorm ways to use the verbs in sentences (see diagram on the next page). Underline the verb in each sentence.

Materials

- Julius, the Baby of the World from Week 2
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Excerpts from Julius, the Baby of the World” chart (WA28)
- Student Writing Handbook page 8
- “Things We Can Revise in Our Second Drafts” from Day 2
- Loose, lined paper for second drafts
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA9)

Skill Practice Note

If the students need more practice recognizing and using verbs, take time to review this skill (see Lesson 13 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I remember that . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

Skill Practice Note

You might point out that the author writes “Lilly’s fur stood on end” and not “Lilly’s fur standed on end,” as well as “But if Lilly did the exact same thing, they said . . .” and not “they sayed.” Explain that the verbs stand and say are examples of irregular verbs. For more practice forming and using regular and irregular verbs, see Lesson 16 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

walk	My friends and I walk to class.
scamper	The mice scamper into the hole.
leap	The children leap over the puddle.
crash	The bike crashed into the bushes.
bounce	The girl bounced the ball.

2 Analyze an Excerpt from Julius, the Baby of the World

Show the cover of Julius, the Baby of the World and remind the students that they heard this story earlier in the unit. Briefly review the story using the question that follows, and be ready to reread from the text to help the students remember the story. Ask:

Q What do you remember about this story?

Have the students open to Student Writing Handbook page 8. At the same time, display the “Excerpts from Julius, the Baby of the World” chart (WA28). Explain that these are several passages from the story in which the author uses interesting verbs. Read the passages aloud to the class and ask:

 Q What verbs, or action words, does the author use in these passages? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question for a moment and underline any verbs they notice in their Student Writing Handbooks; then signal for their attention. Call on a few volunteers to share the verbs they found. Underline these on the chart. As the students report, ask the class follow-up questions such as:

Q What do you imagine when you hear the verb [stroked/exclaimed]?

Q What do the verbs [twitched and quivered] tell us about [how Lilly might be feeling]?

Students might say:

“My partner and I underlined ‘exclaimed.’ We could imagine the parents saying that in a high, happy voice.”

“I agree with [Pat]. They ‘exclaimed’ about Julius but they only ‘said’ about Lilly.”

“‘Stroked’ made me imagine that Julius’s parents touched his fur softly, with love.”

“The verbs ‘twitched’ and ‘quivered’ tell us that Lilly is getting ready for a fight!”

3 Review Drafts for Verbs

Ask the students to look closely at their own drafts and find places where they used, or could use, interesting verbs in their stories. After a few moments, ask and discuss as a class:

- Q Who found a verb they liked? Read us that sentence.
- Q If you did not find a verb you liked, where might you add one to make a sentence more interesting?

Explain that you would like the students to think about interesting verbs they could add to make their stories more descriptive as they write today. Encourage them to refer to the “Things We Can Revise in Our Second Drafts” chart for other revision ideas.

WRITING TIME

4 Continue to Write Second Drafts

Have the students work silently on their second drafts for 20–30 minutes, paying attention to using interesting verbs in their stories. Make sure they have access to more lined writing paper if they need it.

Join them in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the class and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to use verbs to enrich their descriptions?
- Are they able to incorporate their revisions into a second draft?
- Does their writing communicate clearly?

Identify what, if anything, is unclear in the students’ writing. Support any student who is having difficulty by asking him to reread his writing and by asking questions and offering suggestions such as:

- Q Does your story make sense? What part doesn’t make sense? How can you rewrite it so it makes sense?
- Q Can you find a place in your story where you used a verb you liked? Let’s read the rest of your story and see whether we can find places to use more interesting verbs.
- Q What verb could you use to help us imagine how the [cat] in your story is moving?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA9); see page 62 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Facilitation Tip

As you continue to focus on pacing class discussions this week, consider:

- Do most students stay engaged for the duration of most discussions?
- What do the students look like when they are engaged? What do they look like when they become disengaged?
- What contributes to loss of focus on the part of the students?
- Are the students getting used to you not calling on every student with a hand up?

Continue to practice the techniques listed in the previous Facilitation Tip for speeding up or deepening a discussion. To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Pacing Class Discussions” (AV20).

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Revisions and Reflect

Have a few volunteers share passages they revised by reading the original and revised passages. As the students share, probe their thinking by asking:

- Q [Zoltan], how do you think your revision improves your piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Zoltan] about his revision?

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q Who made revisions to the verbs in your story today? Tell us about them.

Explain that the students will continue to work on their second drafts tomorrow.

Day 4

Writing Second Drafts

Materials

- Tacky the Penguin from Week 1
- “Excerpts from Tacky the Penguin” chart (WA29)
- Student Writing Handbook page 9
- Loose, lined paper for second drafts

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore using interesting verbs and adverbs to make writing descriptive
- Continue to write second drafts
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Verbs

Have the students gather their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Remind them that yesterday they explored interesting verbs to make their writing more descriptive. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you learn about interesting verbs yesterday?

Students might say:

"Interesting verbs help readers imagine a story."

"I agree with [Eleni]. Interesting verbs tell more about what a character is doing."

"I learned that verbs are action words."

Remind the students that yesterday they looked at an excerpt from Julius, the Baby of the World and talked about the interesting verbs Kevin Henkes uses to help readers imagine what is happening. If necessary, review that verbs are action words and that many verbs describe what someone or something does.

Explain that today the students will look at another excerpt to see how the author uses verbs.

2 Analyze Verbs in Tacky the Penguin and Introduce Adverbs

Show the cover of Tacky the Penguin and remind the students that they heard this story earlier in the unit. Briefly review the story using the question that follows and be ready to reread from the text to help the students remember the story. Ask:

Q What do you remember about this story?

Display the "Excerpts from Tacky the Penguin" chart (WA29) as you have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 9. Read the passages aloud and ask:

Q What verbs, or action words, does the author use in these passages? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question for a moment and underline any verbs they notice in their Student Writing Handbooks; then signal for their attention. Call on a few volunteers to share the verbs they found. Underline these on the chart.

Explain that while verbs describe actions, adverbs are words that describe how the actions are done. Explain that adverbs often end in -ly and give more information about the verbs. For example, "quietly and politely" describe how the penguins "greeted" each other. Underline quietly and politely on the chart then ask:

Q What other adverbs could be used to describe the way characters in a story greet each other?

Students might say:

"Characters might greet each other happily."

"Sadly."

"Rudely."

"Nervously."

Teacher Note

You might differentiate the adverbs from the verbs by underlining them twice or by underlining them with a different-colored marker.

If the students have difficulty answering the question, suggest some ideas like those in the "Students might say" note, and then ask, "What other adverbs could be used?"

Teacher Note

The other adverbs in the excerpts are “neatly,” “gracefully,” “loudly,” and “dreadfully.”

Skill Practice Note

If the students need more practice recognizing and using adverbs, take time to review this skill (see Lesson 21 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Ask partners to spend a few minutes looking for and underlining adverbs in the excerpts. After sufficient time, signal for their attention and have volunteers share their thinking as you underline the adverbs they report on the chart.

As the students report, ask the class follow-up questions such as:

Q How do the adverbs [“loudly,” “dreadfully”] help us imagine [the penguins’ singing]?

Students might say:

“They help me imagine how awful the singing sounds.”

“I can imagine the hunters looking very surprised. They’re probably covering their ears because it’s so loud.”

“The adverb ‘dreadfully’ tells me that the singing wasn’t just bad. It was really, really bad.”

3 Review Drafts for Adverbs

Ask the students to look closely at their own drafts and find places where they used, or could use, adverbs to describe verbs in their stories. After a moment, ask and discuss as a class:

Q Who found an adverb that you like? Read us the sentence you found.

Q If you did not find an adverb, where might you add one to make a sentence more interesting?

Explain that you would like the students to think about verbs and adverbs they could add to make their stories more descriptive as they write today.

WRITING TIME

4 Continue to Write Second Drafts

Have the students work silently on their second drafts for 20–30 minutes, paying attention to verbs and adverbs in their stories. Make sure they have access to more lined writing paper.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read some of it his writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student’s story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through physical appearance, action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use temporal words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story’s events to a close?
- Does the student use sensory details to convey the setting?
- Does the student use verbs and adverbs to make the writing more descriptive?

Support students in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What physical description, actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting thing happens to your character?
- Q What temporal words and phrases [did/could] you use to help readers understand exactly when in the story events happen?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?
- Q When and where does the story take place? What descriptive words can you use to tell the reader how the place looks, feels, sounds, or smells?
- Q What verbs and adverbs could you use to help readers better imagine what your character is doing, and exactly what those actions are like?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book. Beginning next week, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Revisions and Reflect

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Who included any interesting verbs or adverbs in your story today? Tell us about them.

Have a few volunteers share passages they revised by reading the original and the revised passages. As the students share, probe their thinking by asking:

Q [Isis], how do you think your revision improves your piece?

Q What questions can we ask [Isis] about her revision?

Explain that partners will confer about their stories tomorrow.

---

EXTENSIONS

Continue to Explore Interesting Verbs and Adverbs

Give the students more experience with verbs and adverbs by occasionally having them share verbs and adverbs they come across in books they are reading independently. Ask questions such as:

Q What other verbs could the author have used there?

Q What does that adverb tell us about the verb?

Explore Comparative Adverbs Using Tacky the Penguin

Show the cover of Tacky the Penguin and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the character Tacky in Tacky the Penguin? What does he do?

Students might say:

"I remember Tacky is a funny penguin. He isn't like the others."

"Tacky talks loudly. He yells, 'What's happening?'"

"The other penguins dive gracefully, but not Tacky. He does splashy cannonballs."

After a few volunteers have shared, write this sentence where everyone can see it: Tacky talks loudly. Read it aloud and underline loudly; point out that this underlined word is an example of an adverb, a word that gives more information about a verb (in this case, talks). Remind the students that adverbs often end with -ly.

Teacher Note

You might review that verbs are action words.

Tell the class that now you will compare Tacky’s way of talking loudly to the way the other penguins talk. Ask the students to watch and listen as you model comparing Tacky to the other penguins:

You might say:

“Tacky talks loudly. The other penguins talk quietly, compared to Tacky. How can I write this comparison in a sentence using the adverb loudly? I’ll try adding the word more in front of loudly to help compare Tacky and the other penguins. I’ll write: Tacky talks more loudly than the other penguins.”

After you have written Tacky talks more loudly than the other penguins where everyone can see it, read the sentence aloud and underline the words more loudly. Explain that adding more in front of the word loudly creates a comparative adverb, and that writers use comparative adverbs to compare the action of one person (or thing) with the action of another person (or thing).

Next, write the sentence The other penguins dive gracefully where everyone can see it. Read the sentence aloud and underline gracefully; explain that gracefully is an adverb that describes how the other penguins dive. If necessary, remind the students that Tacky does not dive gracefully.

Explain that now the students will each work with their partner to complete a sentence that compares the other penguins’ way of diving with Tacky’s way. Beneath the first sentence, write the sentence frame The other penguins dive _____ than Tacky. Read the frame sentence aloud and ask:

Q How might you complete this sentence comparing the other penguins’ way of diving gracefully with Tacky’s way of diving? Turn to your partner.

After a minute, have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out to the students that they can write more gracefully to form a comparative adverb and complete the sentence.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice forming and using comparative adverbs, take time to review these skills (see Lesson 22 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Day 5

Self-assessing and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 4
- “Self-assessment Questions” chart, prepared ahead
- Your charted second draft from Day 2
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Unit 3, Week 4
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA10)

In this lesson, the students:

- Assess their own writing
- Initiate pair conferences about their drafts
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Write and confer responsibly during Writing Time

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Self-assess

Have partners get their notebooks and pencils and sit together at desks.

Remind the students that over the past few weeks they have learned about character, setting, and plot in fiction stories. Briefly review the “Notes About Fiction” chart and ask:

Q What else have you learned about fiction that we can record on this chart?

Add any suggestions to the chart. Then direct the students’ attention to the “Self-assessment Questions” chart. Explain that you would like the students to ask themselves these questions as they reread their drafts today. Read the questions aloud.

Show your revised second draft and briefly model rereading it, asking yourself the questions, and thinking aloud about the answers.

You might say:

“In my story, the characters Larry the Lizard, Chacha the Cat, and Duffel the Dog hide from each other, as Bertha the Bee buzzes around. I think describing Larry the Lizard as ‘green and bumpy’ with a tail that twitches nervously helps readers picture him in their minds. Funny dialogue like ‘Beats me’ helps them imagine Bertha the Bee’s personality. Chacha the Cat’s thoughts about wanting ‘a nice game of pounce-on-the-tail’ reveal her character, too. Details like ‘a gentle breeze rustled through the palm trees’ help readers imagine the backyard setting. Temporal words and phrases like ‘One Saturday morning,’ ‘before long,’ and ‘suddenly’ help readers understand exactly when events happen. As I reread the story, I can tell that there isn’t anything that doesn’t fit with the rest of the story. My ending wraps up the story in a funny, interesting way.”

2 Self-assess and Think About What to Ask Partners

Ask the students to reread their own drafts and ask themselves the “Self-assessment Questions.” After most students have had time to finish, signal for their attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. As they share, follow up by asking:

Q What will you add to or change in your story to make your [character] more [real/interesting/believable]?

Q What will you add or change to make your story make sense?

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What questions do you want to ask your partner today about your draft?

As the students report questions, record them on the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart. Remind the students that they started this chart earlier in the year, and review the questions on it. Ask:

Q What other questions on this chart do you want to ask your partner today?

Students might say:

“I want to ask my partner if she can imagine what’s happening.”

“I want to ask my partner if he can tell what I learned from what I wrote.”

“I want to find out whether anything is confusing to my partner.”

Explain that partners will read their drafts aloud to each other, including their revisions, and then ask each other questions about their own drafts.

3 Prepare to Write and Initiate Pair Conferences

Explain that today the students will make the revisions they are thinking about and then work on finishing their second drafts. When they finish their second drafts, they will initiate a conference with a partner to get feedback before starting to work on their final versions.

Remind the students of the procedure for initiating their own pair conferences by reviewing that you will give a signal about halfway through Writing Time, after which the students may confer in pairs if they are ready. The students should ask their assigned partners first. If their own partner is busy writing and would rather not stop to confer, they may ask another student. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q If someone asks you to confer, but you would rather keep writing, how will you respond to the person respectfully?

Q What problems can arise when you are initiating a pair conference? What will you do to avoid those problems today?

Redirect the students’ attention to the “Self-assessment Questions” chart and explain that you would like partners to discuss both pieces of writing during the pair conferences using the questions on the chart.

Teacher Note

Not all of the students will be ready to confer today. Those who need to should continue to work on their second drafts during Writing Time into Week 6 and confer about the drafts when they are finished.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently and Confer

Have the students work silently on their second drafts. After about 15 minutes of writing, signal that the students may confer in pairs if they are ready. Remind them to discuss the “Self-assessment Questions” during the conference. Assure students who are still working on their second drafts that they will have other opportunities in the coming week to confer in pairs.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they initiate and participate in pair conferences, and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to find a partner and begin pair conferences with minimal disruption to the class?
- What problems are they having initiating pair conferences?
- Are they giving each other feedback about the questions on the chart?

Support any pair that is having difficulty by asking questions such as:

- Q What difficulties are you having in your conference?
- Q What are you trying to accomplish during this conference? What is preventing you from accomplishing that?
- Q What can you do to solve that problem? If that doesn't work, what else can you try?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA10); see page 63 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Pair Conference Time

Gather the students to discuss how they did writing and conferring during Writing Time today. Remind them that, in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help each person create the best possible piece of writing. Ask:

- Q If you participated in a pair conference today, what feedback did you receive from your partner that was helpful to you?
- Q If you continued to write while pair conferences were happening, were you able to concentrate? Why or why not?

Q What problems arose today during the pair conference time? What effect did those problems have on our writing community? How can we avoid those problems next time?

Explain that the students will complete their second drafts next week and proofread and publish their stories.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Publish Student Writing Online

Next week the students will publish their fiction stories for the class library. Some students might also be interested in publishing their writing online. There are a number of websites where students can do so. Search for them using the keywords “publishing student writing online.” Publishing online allows family members and friends to easily access and enjoy students’ writing.

Teacher Note

Save the “Self-assessment Questions” chart to use in Week 6.

Week 6

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students proofread their second drafts for spelling and punctuation.
- Students learn how to punctuate speech and write creative, effective titles.
- Students write their final versions and publish them as a book.
- Students present their books to the class from the Author’s Chair.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA30–WA36

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA11–CA13)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 3” record sheet (CN3)
- “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA1)
- “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1)

Reproducible

- Fiction genre unit family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Social Reflection” (AV14)

J DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA11) on page 64 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 3” record sheet (CN3) on page 70 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA12) on page 65 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, decide on how you would like the students to make their books. Gather any materials they will need (for example, construction paper for covers, drawing paper for illustrations, markers, staplers).
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA13) on page 66 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student’s published piece.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have some students type and print out their final versions.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“By the time I am nearing the end of a story, the first part will have been reread and altered and corrected at least one hundred and fifty times. I am suspicious of both facility and speed. Good writing is essentially rewriting. I am positive of this.”

— Roald Dahl

Reread the drafts you have written and select one to develop. Consider:

- Who is telling this story?
- What physical descriptions, actions, thoughts, or speech could you add to reveal character traits or relationships among characters?
- What event or action that is both surprising and believable can you add to this plot?
- Where and when does this story take place? What descriptive language could you add to help the reader see, hear, smell, or feel this setting?

Day 1

Completing Second Drafts and Proofreading

Materials

- Student Writing Handbook page 10
- “Speech Punctuation from Two Stories” chart (WA30)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA31)
- “Self-assessment Questions” chart from Week 5
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA11)

Teacher Note

You might review that speech between characters is called dialogue.

Teacher Note

You might explain that there are several ways to correctly punctuate speech, but that ending punctuation in speech always goes inside the quotation marks. As examples, point out the question mark in the sentence “What’s happening?” and the period at the end of “That’s what’s happening.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore and practice punctuating speech
- Begin proofreading their drafts
- Initiate pair conferences about their drafts
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Write and confer responsibly during Writing Time

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Explore Speech Punctuation

Have the students remain at their seats. Have them get out their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils.

Remind the students that earlier they learned that good writers often include speech in a fiction story to help readers better understand a character’s personality. Explain that today they will learn how writers punctuate speech.

Display the “Speech Punctuation in Two Stories” chart (WA30) and ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 10, where the chart is reproduced.

Explain that the first excerpt is from Tacky the Penguin. Read the excerpt together as a class. Ask:

- Q Who are the characters that are speaking in this passage? How can you tell?
- Q How can you tell the difference between the words they are actually saying to each other—the dialogue—and the other words in the story?

Students might say

“Tacky and the hunters are speaking. I can tell because it says ‘blared Tacky’ and ‘they growled.’”

“The words each character is saying have quotation marks around them.”

Underline words, quotation marks, commas, and other punctuation on the chart as the students report them. Explain that authors use quotation marks to let the readers know which words the characters are saying aloud. Quotation marks surround what the characters say, marking the start and end of each piece of dialogue.

Explain that authors may use other punctuation to help readers notice dialogue in a story. Ask the students to follow along in their handbooks as you read aloud the sentence that begins “They growled, ‘We’re hunting. . . .’” Point out that the comma between the words “They growled” and “We’re,” the first word spoken by the hunters. Explain that this comma separates the hunters' dialogue (exact words) from the rest of the sentence.

Explain that the second excerpt is from The Paper Bag Princess. Read the excerpt together as a class and ask:

- Q Who is speaking in this passage? How can you tell?
- Q What do you notice about the way dialogue is punctuated in this passage?

Students might say:

"I notice that dialogue in quotation marks can be right at the beginning of a paragraph. Or it can be in the middle of a paragraph, or at the very end."

"I notice that the part that tells who's speaking can come before or after the part in quotation marks."

"I notice that a comma separates the phrase 'Elizabeth said' from the exact words she speaks."

Again, underline words, quotation marks, commas, and other punctuation on the chart as the students report them.

2 Review Drafts for Speech Punctuation

Ask the students to look closely at any speech they included in their own drafts to make sure they have used quotation marks around dialogue and have indicated who is speaking. Have them use the passages on Student Writing Handbook page 10 as a reference for the way to use quotation marks, commas, and other punctuation in dialogue.

Explain that the students will continue working on their second drafts today. Those who have completed their second drafts and conferred with partners may begin proofreading to get their stories ready for publication. Remind the students to use their word banks and proofreading notes, which they learned to use at the beginning of the year, to check spelling and correctness in their drafts.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA31) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Try to finish your second draft.
- Check to make sure you use quotation marks and commas to show speech.
- Begin proofreading your second draft for publication.

WA31

Skill Practice Note

For more practice with punctuating dialogue using quotation marks and commas, see Lesson 29 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Teacher Note

You will review using the word bank and proofreading notes with the whole class tomorrow. If any of the students need help using these today, review briefly with individual students or with a small group.

Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs about their drafts. Direct their attention to the “Self-assessment Questions” chart and remind partners to give each other feedback using these questions today.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to use quotation marks and commas to distinguish speech in their stories?
- Do they incorporate their revisions into a second draft?
- Does their writing communicate clearly?

Identify what, if anything, is unclear in the students’ writing. Support any student who is having difficulty by asking questions and offering suggestions such as:

Q What are some of the things your character says in your story?

Q Do you use quotation marks and commas to show speech? Show me.

Q How can you change the word said to a more interesting word?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA11); see page 64 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal to indicate that the students may confer in pairs; then signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Revisions and Reflect

Have a few volunteers share passages they revised by reading the original and revised passages. As the students share, probe their thinking by asking:

Q [Carl], how do you think your revision improves your piece?

Q What questions can we ask [Carl] about his revision?

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Did you make any revisions today to speech punctuation in your story? Tell us about it.

EXTENSION

Continue to Explore Speech in Fiction

Continue to raise the students' awareness of the use of speech in fiction by occasionally having them share examples of speech in books they are reading independently. Discuss questions such as:

- Q Who is speaking in the passage you read? What do you find out about the characters from their speech?
- Q What other words does the author use to mean [said]? Why might the author have chosen to use those words instead of [said]?

Proofreading

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review speech punctuation
- Listen for run-on sentences as they read their drafts aloud
- Proofread their second drafts for spelling and conventions
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Speech Punctuation and Record in Proofreading Notes

Have the students remain at their seats. Have them get out their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils. Remind them that they learned about punctuating dialogue (speech said aloud by characters) yesterday and thought about the dialogue in their own stories. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you learn about some of the ways to punctuate speech correctly?

Remind the students that they learned to proofread their drafts using the proofreading notes in their Student Writing Handbooks (see Unit 2, Week 2, Day 3 on page 105). They will use this resource to proofread their second drafts.

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Proofreading Notes section as you display the “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA32). Write the notes in the diagram on the next page on the chart and ask the students to copy them into their proofreading notes.

Materials

- “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA32)
- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Self-assessment Questions” chart from Week 5
- “Run-on Fiction Samples” chart (WA33)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA34)
- Loose, lined paper for final versions
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 3” record sheets (CN3)

Proofreading Notes

Rule	Example	Notes
Using quotation marks and commas to punctuate dialogue.	Elizabeth shouted, "Fantastic, do it again!"	See examples on Student Writing Handbook page 10.

Encourage the students to refer to their proofreading notes and other Student Writing Handbook pages to remind them about speech punctuation and to help them use it correctly in their stories.

2 Discuss Proofreading for Run-on Sentences

Explain that the students will proofread their second drafts today to make sure they have corrected all errors before publishing their stories. In addition to using their word banks and proofreading notes, they will also look for any run-on sentences. Explain that a run-on sentence is usually made of two or more complete sentences that have been “run together” without a joining word (a conjunction) such as or, and, so, or but. Point out that run-on sentences often look like really long sentences.

Display the “Run-on Fiction Samples” chart (WA33). Ask the students to listen as you read the first passage aloud. Ask:

- Q What did you notice about the way the passage sounded when I read it?
- Q What run-on sentences do you notice in the passage?

Students might say:

“It doesn’t sound right.”

“In addition to what [Andrea] said, some of the sentences sound funny—like they go on too long.”

“I noticed a sentence that sounded like it might be two sentences squished together. It was confusing.”

If necessary, point out that right now the passage does not sound right when it is read aloud because it contains several run-on sentences. Model rereading the passage while thinking aloud about how to split the run-ons into two or more complete sentences, capitalizing the first word in each new sentence and adding a period at the end.

You might say:

“The first sentence, ‘It was Saturday morning,’ sounds right. It’s a complete thought and a complete sentence all by itself, so I’ll leave it alone. I think the second sentence might be a run-on. I can hear it when I read ‘in the backyard he was green and bumpy . . . .’ That sounds like the end of one sentence and the beginning of another sentence squished together. I’ll put a period between backyard and he, remembering to capitalize the H in He. Now there are two complete sentences: ‘Larry the Lizard lounged on a rock in the backyard’ and ‘He was green and bumpy and had a long, shiny tail.’ I think the last sentence might be a run-on because it’s really long and sounds funny. I’ll try putting a period after Chacha the Cat and capitalizing In. Now I’ll read it aloud, ‘In fact, Chacha was Larry’s least favorite animal in the yard.’ That sounds better, and the sentence has both a subject (Chacha) and a predicate (was Larry’s least favorite animal in the yard).”

Follow this same procedure with the second passage on the “Run-on Fiction Samples” chart.

Explain that you would like the students to read their drafts aloud to listen for run-on sentences. Encourage the students to split any run-on sentences into two or more complete sentences. Remind them to capitalize the first word of each complete sentence and add a period at the end.

3 Review Proofreading for Spelling and Conventions

Remind the students that they learned how to use their word banks and proofreading notes to help them proofread their drafts for spelling and correctness (see Unit 2, Week 2, Day 2 on page 100 for review). Briefly review these procedures by reminding the students to:

- Circle words that they are unsure how to spell and look them up in their word banks. If necessary, they will add words to their word banks after looking up the correct spelling in a dictionary or other resource.
- Use their proofreading notes as a checklist of things to look for in their drafts. They will correct errors in their drafts by crossing them out and writing the corrections next to or above them.

Explain that the students will work toward finishing their second drafts and proofreading them today. Any students who have completed their proofreading may begin writing the final versions of their stories by copying their revised second drafts in their best handwriting on loose, lined paper. The students may single-space their final versions.

WRITING TIME

4 Complete Second Drafts and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA34) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice recognizing complete sentences and correcting run-ons, see Lesson 1 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Teacher Note

You may have students who have not yet finished their second drafts. Assure them that they will have time to finish the drafts and confer with their partners before moving on to proofreading. Ask all the students to pay attention as you review proofreading, so they will be able to do this step when they are ready.

Writing Time

- Read your draft aloud and check for run-on sentences.
- Correct any run-on sentences, capitalizing the first word in each new sentence and ending it with a period.
- Proofread your draft for spelling and correctness.
- Begin writing your final version on loose, lined paper.

Remind the students that you will give them a signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs when they are ready. Remind them to give feedback using the questions on the “Self-assessment Questions” chart.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Confer with individual students who seem to need extra support in preparing their second drafts for publication. Ask yourself:

- What does this student need to work on to be ready to publish his story?

Discuss questions such as:

- Q What are you working on right now?
- Q Do you have any long sentences that might be run-ons? Let's reread them and see whether they need to be divided into shorter sentences.
- Q What else do you need to do to be ready to write your final version?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 3” record sheet (CN3); see page 70 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal to indicate that the students may confer in pairs; then signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect as a Class

Gather the students to discuss how they did writing and conferring during Writing Time today. Discuss questions such as:

- Q If you worked on proofreading your draft for spelling today, how did that go? What words did you find in your word bank? How did you check on words that were not in your word bank?

Teacher Note

The end-of-lesson reflection is important for the students' growth as writers and for their social development. We encourage you to allow at least 5 minutes at the end of each period to help the students reflect on their work and interactions. For more information about social development, see “Values and Social Skills” on page xxviii. To learn more, view “Social Reflection” (AV14).

- Q If you participated in a pair conference today, how did you help your partner? How did your partner help you?
- Q What did you do to take responsibility for yourself during Writing Time today?

Completing Second Drafts and Proofreading

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore creative, interesting titles
- Continue proofreading their drafts
- Initiate pair conferences about their drafts
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Unit 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA35)
- “Self-assessment Questions” chart
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final drafts
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA12)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Have students sit together with partners at desks today. Remind them that earlier they discussed how writers punctuate dialogue in stories using quotation marks and commas. The students also read their second drafts aloud to listen for run-on sentences and corrected them by splitting any run-ons into two or more complete sentences.

2 Discuss Creative, Interesting Titles

Explain that today the students will explore another way writers improve their stories and make them more interesting for readers. Point out that fiction writers think carefully about how to title their stories. Display the read-aloud books from Unit 4 and read the titles aloud. Ask:

- Q Which title is your favorite? Why?
- Q How does the title [Boundless Grace/The Paper Bag Princess/Julius, the Baby of the World] make you want to read the book?
- Q What are some things that you might want to keep in mind when you are deciding on a title for your fiction story?

Teacher Note

You may also wish to display fiction titles from earlier in the year, such as The Pain and the Great One, Grandpa’s Face, and She Come Bringing Me That Little Baby Girl.

Skill Practice Note

After the students have discussed the titles, you might point out that most, if not all, of the words in each of these titles are capitalized. Explain that this is generally true of book titles. If the students need more practice with this skill, see Lesson 26 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Teacher Note

You will review the procedures for publishing stories with the whole class tomorrow. Support students who are ready to begin publishing today by reviewing procedures briefly with individuals or with a small group.

Students might say:

"The title The Paper Bag Princess might make readers curious. They might wonder, 'What does a paper bag have to do with a princess?'"

"The title Julius, the Baby of the World makes Julius sound really important, like he's a star. That title gets the reader's attention."

"I want to write a title that makes readers get a picture in their heads."

"I want to write a title that sounds like something a kid would really say, like The Pain and the Great One."

3 Have the Students Think About Their Own Titles

Ask each student to think about the title of the piece she is developing for publication. Encourage the students to bring a fun, relaxed attitude to thinking about titles. Remind them that there is no single "right" title for a story, and invite them to think of a few different ideas for titles they might use. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What might you title your piece to grab your reader's attention and get him or her to open your book? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have briefly discussed the question, ask a few volunteers to share their title ideas with the class.

Encourage the students to think about creative, interesting titles for their stories as they continue working on their second drafts today. Explain that those who have completed their second drafts and conferred with a partner may begin proofreading their stories. Remind the students to use their word banks and proofreading notes to check spelling and correctness in their drafts.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the "Writing Time" chart (☑ WA35) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Try to finish your second draft.
- Think of some creative, interesting titles you might use for your story.
- Begin proofreading your second draft for publication.

WA35

Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs about their drafts. Direct their attention to the "Self-assessment Questions" chart and remind partners to give each other feedback using these questions today.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to use quotation marks and commas to punctuate the speech in their stories?
- Are they able to think of creative, interesting titles for their stories?
- Do they incorporate their revisions into a second draft?
- Does their writing communicate clearly?

Identify what, if anything, is unclear in the students' writing. Support any student who is having difficulty by asking him questions and offering suggestions such as:

- Q What are some of the things your character says in your story?
- Q Are the quotation marks and commas in the right places? How do you know?
- Q What might make readers interested in your story? How can you put that in a title?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA12); see page 65 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal to indicate that the students may confer in pairs. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Revisions and Reflect

Have a few volunteers share their ideas for titles with the class. As the students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as:

- Q What do you think about when you hear [Punam's] title?
- Q What questions can we ask [Punam] about her title?

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q Did you make any other revisions today in your story? Tell us about one.
- Q How do you think your revision improves your story?

Materials

- “Writing Time” chart (WA36)
- Loose, lined paper for final versions
- Materials for publishing stories
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

In this lesson, the students:

- Finish writing and proofreading their second drafts
- Write their final versions and make them into books
- Share materials and equipment fairly
- Handle materials and equipment responsibly
- Act considerately toward others

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Publish Stories

Have the students remain at their desks. Explain that they will finish writing and proofreading their second drafts and then begin writing their final versions and making them into books today. Review any procedures you would like the students to follow to make their books (for example, how to handle art supplies, how to share computers, and where to place their published stories for Author’s Chair sharing tomorrow).

Briefly discuss how the students will share materials and equipment fairly and act considerately toward one another as they work on their books. Ask:

- Q What will you do today to take care of our book-making materials? Why is that important?
- Q If you want to use something that someone else is using, like the computer or the hole-punch, what can you do to share it fairly?
- Q If you’re using something that someone else wants to use, what can you do to share it fairly?
- Q What else can we do to act considerately toward one another as we publish our books today?

Explain that you will check in with the students at the end of the lesson to see how they did sharing the materials fairly and acting considerately toward one another.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Final Drafts and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA36) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish proofreading your draft for spelling and correctness.
- Write your final version on loose, lined paper.
- Gather your final pages into a book with a cover (and include illustrations, if you wish).

Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs about their second drafts. Join them in silent writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Confer with individual students who seem to need extra support in preparing their second drafts for publication. Ask yourself:

- What does this student need to work on to be ready to publish her story?

Discuss questions such as:

- Q What are you working on right now?
- Q Do you have any long sentences that might be run-ons? Let's reread them and see whether they need to be divided into shorter sentences.
- Q What else do you need to do to be ready to write your final version?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 3" record sheet (CN3); see page 70 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Reflect on Sharing Materials Fairly and Being Considerate

Have the students reflect on how they did sharing materials fairly and acting considerately toward one another by discussing:

- Q What did you do today to use our materials fairly? What problems did you have? How can we avoid those problems next time?
- Q What other considerate behaviors did you notice today? How did those help our writing community?

Explain that the students will begin sharing their published books from the Author's Chair tomorrow.

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 5
- Loose, lined paper for final versions
- Materials for publishing stories from Day 4
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA13)
- A chair to use as the Author’s Chair
- Copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

If necessary, refer the students to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Facilitation Tip

Reflect on your experience over the past weeks with pacing class discussions. Do the pacing techniques feel comfortable and natural to you? Do you find yourself using them throughout the school day? What effect has your focus on pacing had on your students’ participation in discussions? We encourage you to continue to think about how to pace class discussions throughout the year.

In this lesson, the students:

- Reflect on writing fiction
- Write their final versions and make them into books
- Present their books from the Author’s Chair
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reflect on Writing Fiction

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that over the past six weeks, they learned about fiction and each took a piece of fiction through the writing process, from a first draft to a published book. Ask:

Q What have you learned about how to write a good fiction story?

Students might say:

“I learned that a good fiction story has interesting characters. It also has a setting that readers can imagine.”

“I learned to use temporal words so that readers know exactly when things in my story happen.”

“I learned some ways to describe my characters. I can describe what they look like, what they do, or what they say.”

“I learned about using interesting verbs and adverbs.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners discuss each of the following questions. For each question, have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Q What is one way your final story has turned out better than your first draft? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Q What is one thing you are glad you learned about writing fiction? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Q What did you find challenging about writing fiction? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Remind the students that writers become better writers as they practice writing over and over. Encourage students who feel particularly drawn to fiction to continue to write fiction during their free time.

Explain that the students will continue to work on publishing their stories today and begin sharing their stories from the Author’s Chair.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Ask the students to return to their seats. Have them finish writing their final versions and making them into books. Remind them that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to let them know that they may confer in pairs. Join them in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students, without intervening, and ask yourself:

- Have most students had time to complete, or nearly complete, a fiction story for the class library?
- Have I conferred with every student twice during this unit?
- Which students would benefit from another conference with me to help them finish their stories?
- What evidence do I see that the students have learned something about character, plot, setting, and the other elements of fiction covered in this unit?
- Are the students bringing a relaxed, creative attitude to their writing?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA13); see page 66 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Review Sharing Writing from the Author’s Chair

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the Author’s Chair. Explain that in the coming days the students will read their published stories aloud and hear and enjoy one another’s stories.

Remind the students of the procedure you have established for presenting books from the Author’s Chair. If necessary, review the procedures you established for Author’s Chair sharing in Unit 2, Week 2 (see “Do Ahead” on page 97).

4 Review Speaking Clearly and Expressing Interest in One Another’s Writing

Before asking a student to share from the Author’s Chair today, discuss how the students will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask and discuss:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you’re sharing your book with the class?

- Q If you're in the audience and you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her story? Why is it important to express interest in one another's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive audience members, and tell them that you will check in with them afterward to see how they did.

5 Conduct Author's Chair Sharing

Ask a student who has completed his story to read it aloud from the Author's Chair. At the end of the reading, facilitate a discussion using questions like the ones that follow, and give the author an opportunity to respond to the class's comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Phineas's] story? Turn to your partner.
- Q What kind of character has [Phineas] created? What clues did you hear that told you that?
- Q What did you hear in the story that was creative?
- Q What sensory details did you hear as you listened to the story? What did they make you imagine?
- Q What questions can we ask [Phineas] about his story?

Follow this same procedure to have other students share from the Author's Chair, as time permits.

6 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author's Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did we do well as an audience today? What might we want to work on the next time authors share their work?
- Q If you shared a book today, how did the audience make you feel? What did the audience members do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Assure the students that everyone will have a chance to share published stories from the Author's Chair in the coming days. After they are read aloud, the stories will be placed in the class library so the students can read them during independent reading time.

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see "End-of-unit Considerations" on page 337.

Teacher Note

Make time in the coming weeks for the students to share their published fiction stories from the Author's Chair until everyone has had a chance to do so.

Activity Extension
(discussion questions)

EXTENSION

Write Letters Home About Fiction

Provide letter-writing practice for the students by having them write letters home about what they learned about fiction writing. Stimulate their thinking by reviewing the “Notes About Fiction” chart and discussing questions such as:

- Q What’s special about fiction writing?
- Q What steps did you go through to develop and publish your own fiction story?
- Q What is one thing you’re proud of about your published fiction story?

If necessary, review the elements of a letter (date, salutation, body, closing, and signature) by modeling or writing a shared sample letter with the class. Have the students write and proofread their letters; then attach each student’s letter to a copy of his own published story and send it home.

Skill Practice Note

For practice with using commas in the addresses of letters, see Lesson 28 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the end of the Fiction unit. You will need to reassign partners before you start the next unit.
- Send home with each student the student’s published piece and a copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to share their published pieces with their families. Remind the students to bring the pieces back to class after their families have read them so they can be placed in the class library.
- Save the students’ published writing (or copies of it) to use for reflection and discussion in Unit 9.

Assessments

- Before continuing with the next unit, take this opportunity to assess individual students’ writing from this unit. See “Completing the Individual Writing Assessment” (IA1) on page 72 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- (Optional) Prior to sending the students’ published writing home to share with their families, you might have each student analyze his writing using the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1) on page 71 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information about administering this assessment, see the extension “Introduce ‘Student Self-assessment’ ” on page 116.
- (Optional) Prior to beginning the next unit, you might wish to prepare the students for the end-of-year standards-based writing performance task by teaching the Narrative Writing unit on page 1 of the Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide. For more information, see “Teaching the Units” on page vi of the preparation guide.

Being a Writer™

SECOND EDITION

The Collaborative Classroom

The Collaborative Classroom differs from traditional learning environments in that students and teachers work together on shared academic and social goals.

The Collaborative Classroom is an intentional environment in which collaboration goes beyond conventional cooperation and compliance. Students become caring members of a learning community who take responsibility for their own learning. As students think, talk, and share ideas, they come to value the thinking of others. They become thoughtful writers and engaged speakers and listeners. They discuss and debate big ideas with respect, clarity, and understanding.

The Collaborative Classroom in Being a Writer

The Being a Writer program embodies the practices of the Collaborative Classroom.

Students of Being a Writer demonstrate:

- Deeper understanding of content
- Ownership of their own learning
- Intrinsic motivation to remain on task
- Improved self-esteem
- An increase in academic performance

“As we practice collaboration, we are building community. It has changed our school climate and helped our students academically. They now have the language to work together differently and resolve problems quickly. We have reduced interruptions during academic instruction and don’t lose important learning time. We have increased student engagement, which ensures increased academic achievement and gains.”

Expository Nonfiction

During this six-week unit, the students immerse themselves in nonfiction texts about animals. Then partners select an animal to research together. Each pair of students writes, revises, and publishes an informational report about the animal. The students learn research skills such as taking notes, categorizing information by subtopic, and conducting effective Internet searches. They learn about features of expository text, such as illustrations, captions, and tables of contents. Partners write an introduction to their report that captures the reader's interest. They use facts, details, and definitions to add substance to their writing; transitional words and phrases to link ideas; and conclusions that bring a report to a close. The students practice relevant skills and conventions, such as correcting run-on sentences and fragments. Partners share resources fairly, make decisions together, and take responsibility for their own part of the work.

Week 1

OVERVIEW

Are You a Dragonfly?

by Judy Allen, illustrated by Tudor Humphries

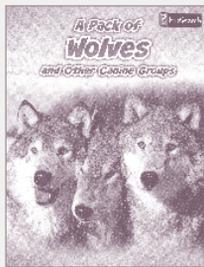

This book tells you what your life would be like if you were a dragonfly.

Reptiles

by Tom Greve

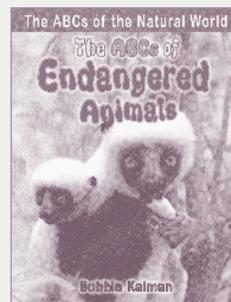

This book tells all about reptiles, from crocodiles to slithery snakes.

A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups

by Anna Claybourne

This book describes life in a wolf pack and discusses other canines that live in groups, including foxes, coyotes, and other wild dogs.

The ABCs of Endangered Animals

by Bobbie Kalman

Endangered animals are described in an alphabet format.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA1–WA3

Assessment Form

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Professional Development Media

- “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9)
- “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11)
- “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’” (AV13)
- “Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud” (AV30)
- “Cultivating Curiosity in Expository Writing” (AV47)

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Curiosity urges you on—the driving force.”

— John Dos Passos

Nonfiction writers aren't necessarily experts on the topics they write about, but they are curious and ask themselves questions, conduct research, and communicate what they learn in an interesting way.

In this unit, the students learn and write about animals that interest them. List animals you are curious about, followed by some things you are curious to know about them. Consider:

- What is amazing to you about animals?
- What is the most unusual creature you have ever seen up close? Describe the experience.
- If you could be an animal for a day, what would you be? Why?

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss expository nonfiction.
- Students explore different ways to organize and present information in nonfiction.
- Students begin reading and writing about animals that interest them.
- Students cultivate curiosity about nonfiction topics.

Social Development Focus

- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit's read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during this unit. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, collect nonfiction books, magazine articles, and other written materials about a variety of animals. Select texts that are informational (expository) in nature and that represent a variety of nonfiction styles.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 84 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 1, “Navigating Safely Online,” and Technology Mini-lesson 2, “Maintaining Privacy Online,” in Appendix A to help the students learn how to participate safely in online communities. For more information, see “About Digital Citizenship Lessons” on page 702.

Day 1

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- Are You a Dragonfly?
- Oceans and Seas from Unit 1
- I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty from Unit 1
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA1)

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for the unit. If necessary, take a few minutes at the beginning of today's lesson to let them get to know each other better by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Hear and discuss expository nonfiction
- Explore how information is organized and presented
- Explore and write about animals that interest them

ABOUT TEACHING NONFICTION WRITING

There are three phases to the Expository Nonfiction genre unit in grade 3: Immersion and Topic Exploration; Topic Selection, Research, and Drafting; and Revision, Proofreading, and Publication. During each two-week phase, the students learn about interesting ways that information can be organized and presented in nonfiction while letting their curiosity lead their exploration about animals.

In Weeks 1 and 2, the students read many nonfiction resources about animals and write short pieces about what they are learning. This process prepares them to select, in pairs, one animal to research and write an informational report about. During Weeks 3 and 4, pairs of students research their chosen animals and begin drafting their informational nonfiction reports. The last two weeks of the unit are spent exploring nonfiction craft and conventions and integrating these as appropriate into their final drafts.

The structure of this unit can be used as a model when having students research, write, and publish on topics other than animals, including states, nature topics, and other social studies or science topics.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair Students and Discuss Working Together

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other's names (see “Do Ahead” on page 347). Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that over the next six weeks, partners will work together to explore writing nonfiction. They will hear and discuss nonfiction books and write about topics that interest them.

Have partners take a couple of minutes to talk about some of the things they have written so far this year. Signal for their attention and ask:

Q What did you learn about the writing your partner has done this year?

2 Introduce Nonfiction

Show the covers of Oceans and Seas and I Wonder Why the Sea Is Salty from Unit 1. Remind the students that they heard these examples of nonfiction earlier in the year. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you think you know about nonfiction?

Students might say:

"Nonfiction is real. It's about true things."

"I agree with [Xavier] because you can learn facts from nonfiction."

"It's not a made-up story."

"In addition to what [Catie] said, it can be about science, like animals or planets."

Point out that nonfiction writers write about real things that they are curious about. They write about these topics in a way that helps readers become interested in and curious about them as well. Explain that in the coming weeks the students will hear different examples of nonfiction to help them get ideas for their own nonfiction writing.

3 Read Are You a Dragonfly? Aloud

Show the cover of Are You a Dragonfly? and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Explain that you will read the book aloud, and invite the students to think about what kinds of information the author gives about dragonflies in this book.

Read the book aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

prey: animal hunted or killed by another animal for food (p. 7)

crumpled: wrinkled; not smooth (p. 16)

hover: fly while staying in one place in the air (p. 17)

midges: very small flies (p. 21)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

beware of: watch out for (p. 10)

pounce: jump onto and grab someone or something (p. 10)

enormous: very big (p. 18)

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind the students to use the discussion prompts to connect their ideas to those of others. The prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because . . ."
- "I disagree with _____ because . . ."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think . . ."

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for defining vocabulary during the read-aloud, see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 (page 29). For more information, view "Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud" (AV30).

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before you say “Turn to your partner.” To review the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share,” see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 2 (page 29). To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’” (AV13).

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating ideas, stimulate their thinking by suggesting some of the ideas in the “Students might say” note. Then ask, “What other animals might you write about?”

Teacher Note

Note that on Days 1 and 2 of the unit, the students may write nonfiction or anything else they choose. On Day 3, after exposure to a few more examples of nonfiction, they will all begin writing in this genre.

4 Discuss the Story and Generate Animal Topics

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What is something you found out about dragonflies?

Point out that in this book the author asks a question: “Are you a dragonfly?” and then answers it by telling the reader what his life would be like if he were a dragonfly. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have the students discuss:

Q *If you were going to write an animal book like this one, called Are You a _____?, what animal might you write about, and why? [pause] Turn to your partner.*

Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class. As they report, record their ideas on a sheet of chart paper titled “Are You a _____?”

Students might say:

“I would write a book called Are You a Dog? because I love dogs.”

“I would write Are You a Fish? because when I went to the aquarium with my cousin, I saw lots of different fish.”

“I would write Are You a Cheetah? because cheetahs are my favorite animal.”

5 Review Nonfiction Topics in Notebooks

Ask the students to open to the writing ideas section of their notebooks and review the nonfiction topics they have listed so far this year. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Which nonfiction topics have you written about so far this year?

Q Which of your nonfiction topics are about animals?

Have the students put a star next to any topics on their lists that are related to animals.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may add animal topics to their writing ideas section, think of more ideas for an Are You a _____? book, or write about anything else they choose. Make Are You a Dragonfly? available for the students to look at, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

6 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (C WA1) and have them write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add animal topics to your writing ideas section.
- Think of other ideas for an Are You a _____? book.
- Write about anything you choose.

If necessary, remind the students to double-space their writing. Also review that during silent writing there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe them, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Share Writing and Reflect

Ask partners to briefly tell each other what they wrote about today. Encourage them to listen carefully, as they will be responsible for sharing what their partners wrote about with the class.

After a moment, signal for their attention and ask:

- Q What did your partner write about today?
- Q What did you and your new partner do to work well together when talking and sharing your writing?

EXTENSION

Explore Similar Titles

If students are interested, consider reading or making available other titles from the same series by Judy Allen and Tudor Humphries, including Are You an Ant?, Are You a Bee?, Are You a Snail?, and Are You a Spider?

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “My partner wrote about . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

Day 2

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups
- Are You a Dragonfly? from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)

Teacher Note

For more information about expository nonfiction, view “Cultivating Curiosity in Expository Writing” (AV47).

ELL Note

If necessary, define curiosity as “a wish to know more about something.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss expository nonfiction
- Explore how information is organized and presented
- Quick-write questions they could ask about animals
- Cultivate curiosity

ABOUT CULTIVATING CURIOSITY AS A WRITER

Curiosity is an important quality for students to cultivate, both as readers and as budding writers of nonfiction. We want them to learn that they do not need to know everything about a topic before they start writing about it; it is enough to be curious about it and to know how to go about finding information. Writing is a process of discovering what we do not know, finding out about those things, and communicating about them in a way that informs and/or makes others curious, too.

This is a good time of year to schedule field trips to stimulate the students’ curiosity about topics that they can then research back in the classroom. Consider taking the students to science museums, zoos, aquariums, and natural settings, such as parks or creeks.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Curiosity

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students began exploring nonfiction. They heard Are You a Dragonfly? and started thinking about animals they are curious about. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Why might curiosity be an important quality for a writer to have?

Students might say:

“It’s good for writers to be curious so they can find out lots of interesting things and write about them.”

“If writers aren’t curious, they won’t get interested in anything to write about.”

Explain that writers do not have to know a lot about a topic when they begin writing about it, but they do need to be curious about it. By researching things they wonder about, writers gather interesting information that they can share with others in their writing.

Explain that today the students will hear a nonfiction book that is also about animals but is written in a different style from Are You a Dragonfly?

2 Read Aloud and Discuss Parts of A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups

Show the cover of A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups and read the title aloud. Tell the students that the author of this book is Anna Claybourne (see the title page). Explain that canine groups means “dog-like animals that live together.” Invite the students to think, as they listen, about how the author chose to present the information about wolves and other canines in this book.

Show the table of contents on page 3, and explain that the “Contents” page lists the names of the chapters along with the page number where each begins. Read the chapter titles aloud. Explain that you will read aloud the first two chapters (“Welcome to the Pack!” and “Who Lives in a Wolf Pack?”) and part of the third chapter (“How Do Wolves Have Babies?”). Read pages 4–13 slowly and clearly. As you read, show the photographs and point out and read the captions, fact boxes, headings, and other text features. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

species: particular type of living thing (p. 5)

litter of cubs: group of babies all born at the same time (p. 6)

den: home or hiding place (p. 8)

track: follow another animal by its smell or the marks it leaves behind (p. 8) habitat: natural home or surroundings of a living thing (p. 10)

mammal: animal that has hair and feeds its young with milk from the mother’s body (p. 12)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

are loyal to: always take care of (p. 4)

on the alert: paying attention to something (p. 7)

spotted: seen (p. 7)

radio collar: special band around the neck that sends an electronic signal (p. 9) scent markers: things that smell (p. 10)

bare: show (p. 11)

watchfully: shyly and carefully (p. 13)

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What interesting things have you heard so far about wolves?
- Q What are you curious about?
- Q How does the author present the information about wolves in this book?

Teacher Note

Glossaries are introduced on Day 3 of this week.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty reporting things they are curious about, mention one or two things you are curious about and then ask the question again.

Teacher Note

Tomorrow you will read aloud the chapter “What Do Wolves Eat?” to the class. If students suggest that you read this chapter now, request that they choose a different one.

ELL Note

If necessary, simplify this question by rephrasing it in the following way:

- Q What animal do you want to know more about?
- Q What do you want to know about that animal? How can you write that as a question?

Teacher Note

If you notice that students are experiencing difficulty writing questions, stop and have a few students share the questions they have written and/or suggest a few of your own. Then have the students resume writing for a few more minutes.

If necessary, use the table of contents on page 3, as well as the headings and subheadings on pages 6 and 12, to point out that the author uses a question-and-answer format to give the information about wolves.

As a class, select one more question on the “Contents” page that the students are curious to hear about. Read that chapter aloud, showing the photographs and reading any captions and text boxes. (If the chapter is long, consider reading just part of it.)

Explain that tomorrow you will read other parts of the book aloud.

3 Quick-write: Generating Questions About an Animal

Ask each student to think of an animal she is curious about. The students may review the nonfiction topics in the writing ideas section of their notebooks, if they wish. Have them open to the next blank page in their notebooks and write their chosen animal’s name at the top of the page. Ask them to think quietly for a moment about the following question:

- Q If you were going to write a question-and-answer book about the animal you chose, what questions could you write?

Have the students take 5 minutes to jot down their questions. Then have them discuss their topics and questions in pairs.

Signal for the students’ attention and have them write any additional questions they thought of while they were talking. Have a few volunteers share their animal and some of their questions with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may write more questions about the animals they chose, write questions about other animals that interest them, or write about anything else they choose. Make A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups available for the students to look at, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA2) and have them write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more questions about the animal you chose.
- Write questions about other animals.
- Write about anything you choose.

WA2

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe them, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing and Reflect on Curiosity

Ask partners to talk briefly about what they wrote about today. Ask them to be ready to share with the class what their partners wrote about.

After a moment, signal for their attention and ask:

Q What did your partner write about today?

Q What did your partner write that you are curious to know more about?

Have a few volunteers share with the class.

---

EXTENSION

Recognize and Use Abstract Nouns

Remind the students that they discussed reasons why curiosity is an important quality for writers to have. If necessary, review that curiosity means “a wish to know more about something” and point out that by being curious and researching things they wonder about, writers gather interesting information that they can share with others in their writing.

Write the word curiosity where everyone can see it. Tell the students that curiosity belongs to a group of nouns called abstract nouns. Explain that abstract nouns describe things that cannot be seen, touched, tasted, smelled, or heard. Provide examples of other abstract nouns, such as truth, freedom, education, responsibility, information, cooperation, and knowledge, and write them next to curiosity. Point out that none of these nouns is a thing that you can experience with your five senses.

Tell the students that abstract nouns can help them explain important ideas in their writing. Point out that they might use an abstract noun in their nonfiction writing to explain something they learned about animals. Give an example using the abstract noun knowledge, such as By gaining more knowledge about animals, scientists hope to protect them. Write the example sentence where everyone can see it. Invite the class to work together to brainstorm more sentences using abstract nouns such as truth, cooperation, information, and education. As students make suggestions, discuss them and then write them under the first sentence.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice recognizing and using abstract nouns, see Lesson 6 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Day 3

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups from Day 2
- Expository nonfiction books, magazine articles, and other written materials about a variety of animals, collected ahead
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss expository nonfiction about animals
- Explore how information is organized and presented
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly
- Discuss and solve problems that arise in their work together

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Show the cover of A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups and review that yesterday the students heard parts of this nonfiction book. Ask:

Q What are some things you learned about wolves yesterday?

Students might say:

“Wolves like being with other wolves. That’s why they live in packs.”

“Baby wolves are called cubs or pups.”

“The dogs that people have as pets are actually related to wolves!”

“Wolves really do howl. It’s one of the ways they talk to each other.”

Remind the students that yesterday they also talked about curiosity and why it is an important quality for a writer to have. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What else are you curious to know about wolves? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I’m curious to know what wolves eat.”

“I want to find out how many wolves are alive today. Are there lots or just a few?”

“I’m curious to know what types of wolves live in the United States.”

“The title of this book says there are other canine groups. I’m curious to know about those other groups.”

2 Read More from A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups and Discuss

Turn to the table of contents on page 3. Briefly review that the “Contents” page lists the names of the chapters, along with the page number where each begins. Point out that the “Contents” page also lists special features at the end of the book. Explain that these features give more information about the topic. Read aloud the list of special features, beginning with “Fact File.”

Tell the students that today you will read more from this book. Turn to page 22 and read the chapter “What Do Wolves Eat?” (pages 22–29) aloud slowly and clearly. Show the photographs and point out features—such as headings, fact boxes, diagrams, and captions—as you read them. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

endangered: few in number and in danger of disappearing forever (p. 22)

well adapted: made in a way that is useful for its way of living (p. 24) slightly webbed toes: toes with a little bit of skin in between them (p. 24) control their numbers: make sure there aren’t too many of them (p. 25) scatter: run away in many different directions at the same time (p. 26) rare: unusual or not often seen (p. 26)

acid: liquid that burns or stings (p. 29)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

exhausted: very tired (p. 24)

trot: walk at a medium speed (p. 24)

top speed: the fastest they can move (p. 24)

Show pages 42–45 and read the headings and something on each page to acquaint the students with the special features that appear at the end of the book. (For example, on page 42 you might read the names and descriptions of several gray wolf subspecies, where each lives, and what its conservation status is.) After you read the “Glossary” heading on page 44, explain that a glossary is a list of words that the author defines for the reader. Point out that the words in a glossary are listed in alphabetical order; in the main text of a nonfiction book, words that appear in the glossary are often printed in bold type.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What is something you learned today from this book?

Q What is a question the author didn’t answer that you are still curious about?

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What are some different ways that the author of this book provides information about wolves and other canine groups? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Teacher Note

The glossary will be introduced today, after this read-aloud.

Students might say:

"The author asks questions and then answers them."

"She uses photos and the photos have captions that tell more information."

"Some pages in the book have little boxes with interesting facts."

"At the end of the book, there's a chart and a map."

Teacher Note

Some options for distributing the nonfiction books and materials are:

- While the class is still gathered, name some of the animal topics and hand books to the students who show interest in those animals.
- Lay out the materials on a table and call table groups to come and browse.
- Expand the nonfiction area of the class library and invite the students to browse and help themselves.
- Place a selection of materials in several baskets and rotate the baskets among table groups over the coming days.

ELL Note

Consider finding resources about animals written in your students' primary languages.

3 Discuss Nonfiction Resources

Explain that the students have now heard two books about animals and that they will have a chance to learn and write about different animals as well. Later in this unit, each pair of students will select an animal to research in detail, write about it, and share their writing with the class. To prepare, they will spend the rest of this week and next week exploring different animals they are curious about.

Emphasize that the students should not become attached to any particular animal at this point. The goal for the next week is to explore many different animals, rather than any one animal in depth.

Direct the students' attention to the animal books and materials you have collected. Explain that they may explore these resources, as well as any others they might find (for example, at the library or on the Internet), about animals of interest to them. Explain that the students will need to share these resources over coming weeks, and ask:

- Q What will we need to do to share these books and materials fairly?
- Q If someone is reading a book you want to look at, what can you do?
- Q If you are reading a book someone else is interested in, what can you do to share it fairly?

Encourage the students to try the ideas they suggested for sharing the materials fairly. Tell them you will check in with them at the end of the lesson to see how they did.

Explain how you will distribute the materials, and then have partners sit together at desks.

WRITING TIME

4 Read Nonfiction Texts about Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online during this period. Be ready to assist students with thinking about the animals they are interested in and finding information about them.

5 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students' attention and have them close their books and other materials. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What did you find out from your reading today, and what are you curious about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have shared, have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Students might say:

"I read about pandas. I found out that pandas eat bamboo. I'm curious to find out if they eat anything else."

"I read about owls. I found out that owls can turn their heads almost all the way around. I wonder what other animals can do that."

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the "Writing Time" chart (📄 WA3) and have them write silently for 5–10 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

WA3

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to write about things they have learned or are curious about?

If you notice many students struggling to write, call the class's attention and model writing as a class. Call on a volunteer to report what she read about, interesting things she learned, and things she is curious about.

Record this information where everyone can see it. After modeling, have the students resume writing on their own for a few more minutes.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 84 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to explore animals tomorrow.

Teacher Note

Note that Writing Time is shortened for a few days to accommodate reading the nonfiction texts.

Ask the students to return the nonfiction materials they read today so others can read them tomorrow. Remind them not to become attached to any particular book or animal at this point; they will explore many different animals before choosing one to explore in depth.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Sharing Materials Fairly

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to share the books and materials fairly today?
- Q What problems did you have sharing the materials? What can we do tomorrow to avoid those problems?

Students might say:

"I was waiting to look at the book about penguins, but the person who was reading it gave it to someone else when she was done."

"Maybe we could put a self-stick note on the front of the book with the names of the people who want to look at it."

"I agree with [Yann]. Then we can just pass the book to the next person on the list."

"In addition to what [Yann and Sierra] said, I think we should try not to take too long with a book if we know other people want to see it."

Explain that you will remind the students about their proposed solutions before they browse nonfiction books again tomorrow.

Teacher Note

Keep the collection of expository nonfiction texts available for the students' use throughout this unit.

Day 4

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- Reptiles
- A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups from Day 3
- Chart paper and a marker
- Collected nonfiction texts
- "Writing Time" chart (WA3) from Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss expository nonfiction about animals
- Explore how information is organized and presented
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly
- Discuss and solve problems that arise in their work together

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Nonfiction Writing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students heard text from A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups.

Point out that in this book the author used questions to communicate information.

Title a sheet of chart paper “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” and write questions and answers under the title. Explain that you will continue to record different ways nonfiction authors organize and present information as you read aloud in the coming days.

Explain that today the students will hear a book about another type of animal. Invite them to think, as they listen, about how this book presents information in a way that is similar to or different from A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups.

2 Read and Discuss Parts of Reptiles

Show the cover of Reptiles and read the title aloud. Then show the title page and read the author’s name aloud. As you did on Days 2 and 3, show and read aloud the table of contents on page 3. Ask:

Q What are some things we might learn from this book?

Tell the students that you will read the first four chapters aloud. Then briefly show the glossary on page 23 and explain that you will use it to define the words in bold type as you read.

Read pages 4–15 slowly and clearly, showing the photographs, reading captions, and pointing out text features such as maps. Define the words in bold type as you read by turning to the glossary on page 23 and showing and reading the definitions. If necessary, clarify other vocabulary as you read.

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

a dizzying variety of self-defense capabilities: many different ways to protect themselves (p. 4) mastered: become good at (p. 4) pacing themselves: doing things at the speed that is right for them (p. 4)

diets: foods they eat (p. 6)

in a heartbeat: (idiom) very quickly (p. 13)

rotate: move around in circles (p. 13)

defying: not following (p. 14)

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What is something you learned about reptiles from this book?

Q *How is this book similar to the book A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups? How is it different?*

Q (Show the table of contents on page 3.) How did the author organize information about reptiles?

TEKS 9.D.iii
TEKS 9.D.vi
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 2 (last discussion question on page 361)

As the students report ideas, add them to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart.

Students might say:

“I learned that turtles, crocodiles, and snakes are all reptiles.”

“A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups and Reptiles are similar because they both have chapters, tables of contents, and glossaries.”

“In addition to what [Sanjay] said, both books have lots of photos and captions.”

“The author of the wolf book uses questions to organize her writing. The author of the reptile book doesn’t use questions.”

If necessary, point out that Reptiles is similar to A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups in that both books have chapters; however, the books are different in that A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups uses questions as chapter titles, while the chapter titles in Reptiles describe various types of reptiles (except for the first chapter, which introduces all reptiles).

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will continue to read about and explore animals they are curious about. Encourage them to notice, as they read, how information is organized. Remind them of your expectations regarding the handling of the collected materials. Also remind the students of any solutions they proposed yesterday for sharing the materials more fairly. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit, partners together, at desks. Make Reptiles available for the students to look at, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online during this period. Be ready to assist students with thinking about animals they are interested in and finding information about them.

4 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students’ attention and have them close their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q When reading today, what did you notice about how the information is organized?

Q What did you find out from your reading today, and what are you curious to know more about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

TEKS 9.D.iii
TEKS 9.D.vi
Student/Teacher
Narrative
Step 2 (second paragraph on page 362)

Teacher Note

Save the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart to use on Day 5 and throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

As the students work, ask individuals what they notice about how information is organized in the sources they are reading.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA3) and have them work silently for 5–10 minutes.

WA3

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Ask the students to return the nonfiction materials they read today so others can read them tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Sharing Materials Fairly

Invite interested students to read aloud what they wrote in their notebooks today. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you hear your classmates share that makes you curious?
- Q What did you do to share the materials fairly today? How did that work?
- Q What problems, if any, are we still having with sharing materials fairly? What else can we do to avoid those problems next time?

Materials

- The ABCs of Endangered Animals
- Reptiles from Day 4
- “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart from Day 4 and a marker
- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3) from Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss expository nonfiction about animals
- Explore how information is organized and presented
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly
- Assess how a solution is working and modify it if necessary

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Direct their attention to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart and review that the chart shows different ways nonfiction authors can organize information. Show the cover, the table of contents (page 3), and a few pages from Reptiles. Ask:

Q How is information organized in Reptiles?

If necessary, point out that this book is about reptiles and that the information is organized into chapters by topics, such as types of reptile or threats reptiles face. On the chart, write chapters about different topics.

Explain that the students will hear another nonfiction book today containing animal facts. Encourage them to pay attention to the way information is presented in the book.

2 Read Aloud and Discuss Parts of The ABCs of Endangered Animals

Show the cover of The ABCs of Endangered Animals and read the title and the author’s name aloud. If necessary, remind the students that endangered means “few in number and in danger of disappearing forever.” Ask:

Q What are some animals that might be included in this book? What makes you think that?

Turn to the table of contents on page 3. Explain that you will read a few of the chapters aloud. Encourage the students to think, as they listen, about what they are curious about.

Read pages 4–7 slowly and clearly, showing the photographs, illustrations, captions, and other text features (such as the sidebar on page 5) as you read. Clarify vocabulary words in bold type as you read by turning to the glossary on page 32 and showing and reading the definition. Note that some of the bold words are defined in context where they appear in the book.

After you have read page 7, turn back to the table of contents on page 3. Invite the students to suggest three or four more chapters for you to read aloud. Read the selected chapters aloud slowly and clearly, clarifying vocabulary and turning to the glossary on page 32, as necessary.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q How is the information about animals presented in this book?

If necessary, point out that the author uses the alphabet to organize information about various endangered animals. Add alphabet books to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will continue to read about and explore animals they are curious about. Encourage them to notice, as they read, how information is organized. Remind them of your expectations regarding the handling of collected materials. Also remind them of any solutions they proposed earlier in the week for sharing the materials more fairly. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Make The ABCs of Endangered Animals available for the students to look at, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online. Be ready to assist the students with thinking of animals and finding information about them.

4 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students’ attention and have them close their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q When reading today, what did you notice about how the information you looked at is organized?

Q What did you find out from your reading today, and what are you curious to know more about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA3) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes.

Teacher Note

Save the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart to use in Week 2 and throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

As the students work, ask individuals what they notice about how information is organized in the sources they are reading.

Step 4 (last discussion question on page 365)

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner,” see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 3 (page 13). To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’ ” (AV11).

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Sharing Materials Fairly

Invite interested students to read aloud what they wrote in their notebooks today. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you hear your classmates share that makes you curious?
- Q What did you do to share the materials fairly today? How did that work?
- Q What problems, if any, are we still having with sharing the materials fairly? What else can we do to avoid those problems next time?

Explain that next week the students will continue to explore different animals they are curious about. Later in this unit, each pair of students will select an animal to research in detail and then write about it and share their writing with the class.

EXTENSION

Explore Comparative and Superlative Adjectives

Write this sentence where everyone can see it, and read it aloud: The dog is small. Point out that dog is a noun and that small is an adjective that describes dog. Underline small.

Beneath the first sentence, write: The cat is smaller than the dog. Read it aloud and ask:

- Q How is this sentence different from the first? How is it similar?
- Q What do you notice about the adjective small?

Students might say:

"The first sentence was just about a dog. This second one is about a dog and a cat."

"I agree with [Bella]. The second sentence is comparing the cat and the dog."

"I notice that small changed to smaller."

If necessary, point out that this second sentence compares two nouns (cat and dog) and that the adjective small has become smaller with the addition of -er at the end. Underline smaller.

Beneath the second sentence, write: The cat is smaller than the dog, but the mouse is the smallest of all. Read it aloud and ask:

Q How is this sentence different from the second one? How is it similar?

Q *What do you notice about the adjective small in this sentence?*

Students might say:

"This sentence is about a mouse, as well as the cat and dog."

"This sentence is comparing three animals."

"I notice that small changed to smallest."

If necessary, point out that this third sentence compares three nouns (cat, dog, and mouse) and that the adjective small has become smallest when describing the mouse with the addition of -est to the end of the word. Underline smallest.

Next, write this sentence where everyone can see it: The apple tree is tall. Read the sentence aloud and underline tall; explain that tall is an adjective that describes the noun apple tree.

Below the first sentence, write the following sentence frame: The oak tree is _____ than the apple tree, but the redwood tree is the _____ of all. Read the sentence frame aloud. Point to the first blank and ask:

Q *What form of the word tall would you use to compare the oak tree and the apple tree?*

Then point to the second blank and ask:

Q *What form of the word tall would you use to compare the redwood tree to the oak tree and apple tree? Why?*

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

"When we compare the oak and the apple tree, we're just comparing two things, so I would write taller."

"I would add -est to the end of tall and write tallest to describe the redwood tree."

If necessary, point out to the students that they can add -er to the end of tall to form the adjective taller and that they can add -est to the end of tall to form tallest.

Teacher Note

You might explain that writers can add -er to most adjectives to compare two nouns, and that they can add -est to most adjectives to compare more than two nouns.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice forming and using comparative and superlative adjectives, take time to review these skills (see Lesson 20 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Into the Sea

by Brenda Z. Guiberson, illustrated by Alix Berenzy
Follow a sea turtle through its life cycle.

Where Butterflies Grow

by Joanne Ryder, illustrated by Lynne Cherry
Experience a garden from a bug's point of view.

Panda Kindergarten

by Joanne Ryder, photographs by Katherine Feng
This book chronicles the lives of young pandas at the Wolong Nature Reserve in China.

"About Joanne Ryder"

excerpted from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors & Illustrators by James Preller (see page 387)

This profile of author Joanne Ryder tells how nature inspires her imagination and her writing life.

TEACHER AS WRITER

*“Writing is like exploring. . . .
As an explorer makes maps of the country he has explored, so a writer’s works are maps of the country he has explored.”*

— Lawrence Osgood

Choose one of the topics you listed last week that you are curious about and write that topic at the top of a blank page in your notebook. Below the name of the animal, write five questions you have about that topic and five places you could go to look for answers. For example, you might write:

Dolphins

- Are they really as smart as some people think?
- Do they mate for life?
- How have humans interacted with them?
- How many different kinds are there?
- How long do they live?

Places to look for answers might include library books, field guides, the Internet, an encyclopedia, or a local aquarium or natural history museum.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss expository nonfiction.
- Students think about different ways to organize and present information in nonfiction.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.
- Students read and write about animals that interest them.
- Students cultivate and express curiosity.

Social Development Focus

- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 85 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 86 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- Into the Sea
- “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart from Week 1
- Collected nonfiction texts from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3) from Week 1

Teacher Note

Although some of the read-alouds this week are written in a more narrative style, their inclusion is intentional. They are meant as examples of ways that nonfiction books for younger readers present information and serve as models for the students’ own writing.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss nonfiction about animals
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Nonfiction

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that last week they began exploring nonfiction writing, or writing that gives true information about real things. Explain that they will continue to hear, read, and discuss nonfiction this week in preparation for selecting an animal to research and write about next week.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart and review the listed items. Remind the students that the chart shows different ways that information can be organized and presented in nonfiction.

Show the cover of Into the Sea and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Tell the students that in this nonfiction book, the author gives a lot of information about the life cycle of sea turtles. Explain that you will read parts of the book today. Encourage the students to think about how the author presents this information.

2 Read Parts of Into the Sea Aloud

Read pages 3–10, slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations. Then explain that you will read just a few sentences from the middle of the book before reading the last few pages. Show and read the first two sentences on pages 10, 12, 15, 22, and 23. Then read pages 24–29 aloud, showing the illustrations. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

instinctively: without having being taught (p. 6)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

glistens: shines (p. 5)

uses the plant for camouflage: hides in the plant (p. 8)

3 Discuss the Story

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you find out about sea turtles?
- Q How does the author present the information about sea turtles?

Students might say:

"I learned that baby sea turtles are born from eggs."

"The author starts with the turtle being born and then tells how she grows up."

"Even though there are lots of facts about sea turtles in this book, it felt like reading a story."

Point out that the author tells us about the lives of sea turtles by following one female turtle through her life cycle: beginning with hatching from an egg, to growing into an adult turtle, to eventually laying her own eggs. We learn about what the turtle looks like, how she uses her body, how she finds food, and other details about her.

Explain that this is another way to organize and present information about animals in a nonfiction book. Add follow one individual to the "Ways to Present Nonfiction Information" chart.

Explain that during Writing Time the students will continue to explore animals they are curious about. Encourage them to read today about an animal they have not yet read about. Remind them of your expectations regarding the handling of collected materials. Have partners get their notebooks and pencils and sit together at desks. Make Into the Sea available for students to look at on their own, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online during this period. Be ready to assist students in thinking of animals and finding information about them.

5 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students' attention and have them close their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q When reading today, what did you notice about how the information you looked at is organized?

- Q What did you find out from your reading today and what are you curious about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

Consider finding resources about animals written in your students' primary languages.

After partners have shared, have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA3) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes.

WA3

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Nonfiction

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q You’ve had a chance to hear and read several nonfiction texts. What have you learned about nonfiction?
- Q What are some different ways that you’ve noticed nonfiction authors organize and present information?

As volunteers share ways authors communicate nonfiction, add any methods not yet listed to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart.

Invite interested students to read aloud what they wrote in their notebooks today.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss expository nonfiction about animals
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Curiosity

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that it is important for nonfiction writers to be curious about many things and that learning a little bit about a topic can often lead to greater curiosity about it. Remind the students that they have let their curiosity guide their exploration of nonfiction about animals. Ask them to review their writing from the past few days and think about what they have learned and what they would like to know more about.

After a few minutes, call for the students' attention and ask:

Q What animals are you curious about now that you weren't as curious about before? What has helped you become curious?

Encourage the students to continue to develop their curiosity as they explore and read about animal topics that interest them. Explain that you will read from another animal book today, and invite the students to think about what they are curious about as they listen.

2 Read Aloud Parts of Panda Kindergarten and Discuss

Show the cover of Panda Kindergarten and read the title and the author's name aloud. Explain that the author, Joanne Ryder, is a well-known children's author who has written many books about the animal world. (If you have already taught the Personal Narrative genre unit, the students may remember her book My Father's Hands.) Explain that you will read part of Panda Kindergarten to show the students another way to present information in nonfiction.

Read pages 3–15 of Panda Kindergarten slowly and clearly, showing the photographs.

Materials

- Panda Kindergarten
- Into the Sea from Day 1
- “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart from Day 1
- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3) from Day 1
- (Optional) My Father's Hands from Unit 3

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

tenderly: gently and lovingly (p. 7)

twins: two babies born at the same time, to the same mother (p. 8)

nursery: place that takes care of babies (p. 10)

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What have you found out about pandas so far?

Flip through a few more pages of Panda Kindergarten, showing the photographs. Point out that the author uses the photographs to help her tell the story of the pandas. She begins with photos of newborn pandas and continues through their lives. She explains what is happening in the photographs, and the text and the photographs work together. If either of them were missing, the book would not be complete. Show the cover of Into the Sea and briefly discuss:

Q How is Panda Kindergarten similar to Into the Sea? How is it different?

Students might say:

"Both Panda Kindergarten and Into the Sea tell about how animals grow up."

"Panda Kindergarten tells about a group of baby pandas growing up.
Into the Sea is the life story of one sea turtle."

"Panda Kindergarten has photographs. Into the Sea has illustrations that someone drew."

Explain that during Writing Time the students will continue to browse the nonfiction materials and read about animals they are curious about. Encourage them to notice books that give information through photographs. Also encourage them to read about animals today that they have not yet explored. Remind the students of your expectations regarding the handling of collected materials, and have partners sit together at desks. Make Panda Kindergarten available for students to look at on their own, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online. Be ready to assist students in thinking of animals and finding information about them.

Teacher Note

As the students work, ask individuals what they notice about how information is organized in the sources they are reading.

4 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students' attention and have them close their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q When reading today, what did you notice about how the information you looked at is organized and presented?

As students share ways authors organize and present nonfiction, add any methods not yet listed to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What did you find out from your reading today and what are you curious about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA3) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

WA3

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing and Reflect

Invite interested students to read aloud what they wrote in their notebooks today. As the students share, discuss as a class questions such as:

Q What can we ask [Manolo] about what he shared?

Q What did you hear that makes you curious about [Manolo's] animal?

Day 3

Exploring Nonfiction

Materials

- Where Butterflies Grow
- Panda Kindergarten from Day 2
- Into the Sea from Day 1
- “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart from Day 2
- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

ELL Note

You might rephrase this question in the following way:

Q (Show the cover of Panda Kindergarten.) Close your eyes and pretend you're a panda. Where are you?

Q What do you feel like?

Q What are you doing?

TEKS 10.E.i

Student/Teacher Activity

Step 2 (all, beginning on page 376 and continuing on to page 377) and Step 3 (discussion question)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, read, and discuss nonfiction
- Quick-write from an animal's point of view
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Panda Kindergarten

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students heard parts of two nonfiction texts this week: Into the Sea and Panda Kindergarten. From those books, they saw that a nonfiction book can follow an animal or a group of animals from birth until adulthood and can also use illustrations or photographs to help tell the story.

Direct the students' attention to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart and review the items on it. Add use illustrations or photographs to the chart.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q From hearing parts of Panda Kindergarten, what do you think it might be like to actually be a panda?

Students might say:

“When I got big enough, I'd go to kindergarten with lots of other pandas, just like I went to kindergarten with lots of other kids!”

“If I were a mother panda, it would be interesting to take care of such a tiny baby.”

“I would be covered with fur and walk on four legs.”

Tell the students that you will read a book today in which the author invites us to imagine being a very small animal.

2 Read Where Butterflies Grow Aloud

Show the cover of Where Butterflies Grow and read the title and the names of the author and the illustrator aloud. Remind the students that Joanne Ryder also wrote Panda Kindergarten. Read pages 3–31 aloud, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below.

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

acrobat: someone who does flips and other tricks (p. 8)

slings: loop or strap that holds something up (p. 17)

fragile: easily breakable (p. 27)

nectar: liquid from the flowers (p. 28)

Stop after:

p. 7 “When the wind tickles the leaf you and your world shake.”

Ask:

Q What do you notice about how the author is presenting the information so far? Turn to your partner.

Without stopping to discuss this question as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the end of page 31.

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the book to help the students recall what they heard. Ask:

Q How does Joanne Ryder present information about butterflies in this book?

If necessary, point out that the author writes in a way that allows the reader to imagine what it would be like to be a butterfly. On the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart, add imagine life from an animal’s point of view.

4 Quick-write: Imagine Being an Animal

Ask the students to close their eyes and think quietly about the following questions. Ask the questions one at a time, pausing between each question to give the students time to think.

Q If you could be any animal for a day, what would you be?

Q Imagine having that animal’s body. What does it feel like?

Q What do you see from that animal’s eyes? What do you hear? Smell?

Q You’re hungry. What are you looking for to eat? When you’ve found it, what is it like to eat it?

Have the students open their eyes, turn to the next blank page in their notebooks, and write for 5 minutes about being the animal they imagined. Tell them to start their writing with this sentence: “I am a _____.”

TEKS 10.E.i
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 3 (second paragraph)

After about 5 minutes, ask partners to share their writing with each other. After partners have talked, ask a few volunteers to read their writing to the class.

Explain that during Writing Time the students may continue the pieces they started during the quick-write or browse the nonfiction materials and read about other animals they are curious about. If any students want to continue their quick-writes, encourage them to look for more information about the animals they imagined so their stories are as realistic as possible.

Remind the students of your expectations regarding the handling of collected materials, and have partners sit together at desks. Make Where Butterflies Grow available for students to look at on their own, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

5 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes continuing what they started in the quick-write or browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search online for more information. Be ready to assist students in finding information about animals that interest them.

6 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students' attention and have them close their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q When reading today, what did you notice about how the information you looked at is organized and presented?

As students share ways authors organize and present nonfiction, add any methods not yet listed to the “Ways to Present Nonfiction Information” chart. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What did you find out from your reading today and what are you curious about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have shared, have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA4) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue your quick-write, "I am a _____."
- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious about.
- Add any new topics that interest you in the writing ideas section.

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to write information they have learned about animals?

If you notice many students struggling to write, call for the class's attention and ask a few volunteers to read aloud what they have written so far. Then have the students resume writing on their own for a few more minutes.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 85 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Share Writing and Reflect

Invite interested students to read aloud what they wrote today in their notebooks. As the students share, discuss as a class questions such as:

- Q What can we ask [Justine] about what she shared?
- Q What did you hear that makes you curious about [Justine's] animal?

EXTENSION

Explore Other Poetic Books by Joanne Ryder

Consider reading other books by Joanne Ryder that use poetic language to give factual information about nonfiction topics, including The Snail's Spell, Shark in the Sea, and Earthdance.

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Weeks 1 and 2
- Collected nonfiction texts

WRITING ABOUT READING

Make Connections to Where Butterflies Grow

Show the cover of Where Butterflies Grow and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the book Where Butterflies Grow?

Have volunteers share their thinking. After a few volunteers have shared, ask:

Q How does this book remind you of your own life?

Students might say:

"It reminds me of looking at funny insects at the park."

"It reminds me of a time when I found a fuzzy caterpillar in our yard."

"This book reminds me how much I like butterflies."

Explain that when you write or talk about how a book reminds you of your own life, you are making a connection to the book. Point out that making connections to books and stories helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how Where Butterflies Grow reminds you of your life.

You might say:

"I'm going to write about how this book reminds me of my own life. I'll start by introducing the book and the author. I'll write: In her book Where Butterflies Grow, author Joanne Ryder tells how a caterpillar turns into a butterfly. Next, I'll describe the book's connection to my own life: That reminds me of the time I found a tiny brown cocoon in my backyard. It was attached to a small branch. I didn't touch it, but I checked on that cocoon every day for a week. Then, one spring morning, I discovered that the cocoon was gone! Later that afternoon, I saw a beautiful orange-and-black butterfly. Maybe it came from the cocoon. Finally, I'll write one last sentence to finish my paragraph: Whenever I think of that spring day, I remember how beautiful that butterfly was."

Explain that the students may now write about Where Butterflies Grow (or another nonfiction book they have heard or read independently) and how it reminds them of their own lives. Have the students write about their connections. If time permits, invite the students to share their writing with the class.

Reading About an Author and Exploring Nonfiction

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author's writing practice
- Quick-write about things they want to know about animals
- Write about what they learned and what they are curious about
- Share materials fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read and Discuss "About Joanne Ryder"

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that this week they heard parts of two nonfiction animal books by Joanne Ryder, Panda Kindergarten and Where Butterflies Grow. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Based on hearing these books, what kind of person do you think Joanne Ryder might be?

Explain that you will share some information about Joanne Ryder. Ask the students to think as they listen about what Joanne Ryder might be like.

Read "About Joanne Ryder" (page 387) aloud slowly and clearly. First in pairs and then as a class, discuss:

Q What did you learn about Joanne Ryder's interest in animals? Turn to your partner.

Then, as a class, discuss:

Q What do you think Joanne Ryder might mean when she says, "A writer can be working even when he or she is outside looking at a tree"?

Students might say:

"I learned that she loved playing outside when she was a kid."

"Her dad liked nature, too. He used to show her interesting bugs."

"I think she's saying that looking at nature helps writers get curious about things that they might write about."

2 Quick-write: What I Want to Know About an Animal

Tell the students that, like author Joanne Ryder, they have been letting their curiosity guide their exploration of animals during the past two weeks. Explain that today they will quick-write about things they are curious to know about animals.

Materials

- "About Joanne Ryder" (see page 387)
- Where Butterflies Grow from Day 3
- Panda Kindergarten from Day 2
- Collected nonfiction texts
- Chart paper and a marker
- "Writing Time" chart (WA5)

Ask the students to think quietly to themselves for a minute or two about the following question:

Q Imagine you have just discovered an animal that no one has ever seen before. What might you want to know about that animal?

Have the students turn to the next blank page in their notebooks, title it “What I Want to Know About an Animal,” and list some things they would like to know.

After about 5 minutes, call for the students’ attention and ask partners to share their lists with each other. After the partners have talked, ask a few volunteers to share some of the topics on their lists with the class. As they report, record their ideas on a sheet of chart paper titled “Things We Want to Know About Animals.”

Things We Want to Know About Animals

Where does it live?

What does it eat?

How does it protect itself?

How long does it live?

Is it endangered?

Explain that during Writing Time the students may continue to browse the nonfiction materials and read about animals that interest them. Invite them to look for information about any of the questions listed on the chart. Remind them of your expectations regarding the handling of collected materials, and then have partners sit together at desks.

WRITING TIME

3 Read Nonfiction Texts About Animals

Have the students spend 15–20 minutes browsing the nonfiction materials and reading about animals they are curious about. Interested students might visit the school library or search the Internet. Be ready to assist students in finding information about animals that interest them.

4 Write About Nonfiction Reading

Call for the students' attention and have them close their books and other materials. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What did you find out from your reading today and what are you curious about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have shared, have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA5) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write one or two interesting things you found out about an animal today.
- Write one or two things you are curious to know.
- Add any new topics that interest you in your writing ideas section.

WA5

As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting them as needed. Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What animal did you read about today? What did you find out?
- Q What else would you like to add to our "Things We Want to Know About Animals" chart?

As the students suggest topics, add them to the chart.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Watch or Read an Interview with Joanne Ryder

Joanne Ryder has written many books for children. To learn more about the author and her work, have the students watch a video of her speaking about her writing or read an interview with her. To find a video

ELL Note

Tomorrow partners will begin working on a joint nonfiction report about an animal they agree to research.

If you have beginning English speakers, consider having each of them join an existing pair of fluent English speakers for this project. While you will need to provide support to trios to make sure pairs are integrating the third student and that they are sharing the work fairly, the benefit to ELLs of having two fluent English speakers to interact with and listen to will make this additional support worthwhile.

To learn more, view "Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners" (AV32).

Teacher Note

Post the "Things We Want to Know About Animals" chart for the students to refer to throughout the unit.

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the "Using Web-based Teaching Resources" tutorial (AV75).

or print interview with Joanne Ryder, search online with her name and the keyword “video” or “interview.” You might also include the book title Panda Kindergarten in the same search.

After the students watch the video or read the interview, have them discuss what they learned about Ryder’s life as a writer of children’s books and her interest in nature.

Day 5

Exploring Nonfiction and Pair Conferring

Materials

- A sheet of lined paper for each pair of students
- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

ELL Note

If you have decided to have any ELL students join existing pairs, give the trios a few minutes to talk informally and get to know one another before they begin to work together.

ELL Note

Monitor trios of students to make sure that ELLs are being integrated into the work and are contributing to the joint lists of animals.

In this lesson, the students:

- Identify and list animals they are curious about
- Narrow their lists
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Make fair decisions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Writing from the Past Two Weeks

Have partners get their notebooks and pencils and sit together at desks. Explain that to get ready to choose an animal to research and write about next week, each pair of students will list the animals they have explored up until now, identify any other animals of interest to them, and narrow their list.

Have the students spend a few moments quietly rereading the writing in their own notebooks and circling any animal names they have written.

2 Make a Joint List of Animals

After a few moments, call for the students’ attention and explain that part of the writing process is thinking of different topics to write about. Today partners will develop a joint list of animals they have read and written about so far. Provide each pair with a sheet of lined paper, and have partners write their names on it.

Give each pair a few minutes to make a joint list of all of the animals they have written about so far.

3 Identify Other Animals of Interest

When most pairs of students have completed their lists, call for their attention and ask:

Q Did you and your partner read and write about any of the same animals? Which ones?

Q Which animals on your list are both of you curious about? Turn to your partner.

Explain that today partners will find at least two more animals that they both might be interested in researching and writing about. Suggest that they explore animals that live in very different environments from the animals they have listed so far (such as insects, creatures that live in the ocean, birds, etc.). Explain that after they have added two more animals to their joint list, they may use the nonfiction resources to learn more about any of the animals on their list. Ask:

Q What can you and your partner do to be sure you both agree before adding an animal to your list?

Q If another pair is looking at a resource that you want to use, what can you do?

WRITING TIME

4 Identify More Animals of Interest

Give partners ample time to add at least two more animals they are both curious about to their list. As they work, walk around and observe, assisting as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are partners staying on task, using the resources and discussing the animals of interest to them?
- Are partners agreeing on animals to add to their list?
- Are they able to find information about the animals they have chosen?

Support any pair that struggles by asking questions such as:

Q What animals are you thinking about adding to your list?

Q If you can't agree on whether or not to add [cheetahs] to your list, what can you do?

Q If you can't find information on the animal you're thinking about, what other animal could you consider?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA3); see page 86 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, we invite you to practice asking facilitative questions during class discussions to help the students respond directly to one another, not just to you. After a student comments, ask the class questions such as:

- Q Do you agree or disagree with [Silas]? Why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Silas] about what he said?
- Q What can you add to what [Silas] said?

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view "Asking Facilitative Questions" (AV22).

Teacher Note

Have partners put their joint list in a safe place to use again next week.

Call for the students' attention and have them put away their books and other materials. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q How did you make decisions about the animals to add to your list? Did you both think that was fair? If not, what might you do differently next time?

5 Narrow the Lists

Explain that each pair of students will review their joint list and circle three animals that both partners are interested in researching and writing about. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

- Q What are some ways you and your partner can work together to choose animals? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

- "We can go through the list together and pick three that we are both curious about."
- "We can each pick six and see if we have three the same and choose those."
- "Maybe I could agree to one animal my partner really likes, he could agree to one I really like, and we could find one we both like."

Give partners a few minutes to agree on and circle three animals. Explain that next week they will decide together on one of the three animals to research and write about.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Partner Work

Ask and discuss questions such as:

- Q Today you and your partner worked together to make the first of many decisions you will make during the next few weeks. What did you do to make sure you both agreed before making a decision?
- Q Why is it important that your decision feels fair to both of you?
- Q How are we doing with building a caring writing community in our class? Why do you think so?
- Q What can we do to continue to make this a safe place for everyone to write and share their thinking?

About Joanne Ryder

from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors & Illustrators by James Preller

As a child growing up in Lake Hiawatha, New Jersey, and Brooklyn, New York, Joanne loved playing outdoors. In Lake Hiawatha, where Joanne lived for her first five years, there were always animals to encounter. Joanne fondly recalls, “It was a wonderful place to explore, full of treasures to discover. There were just a few houses on our street, but there were woods all around, filled with small creatures.”

Joanne’s parents influenced her deeply . . . She warmly remembers, “My father liked to pick things up and examine them. He was the one who introduced me to nature up close. He would hold little creatures in his hand and say, ‘Joanne, I have something really fabulous to show you.’ Then he would open his fingers and show me whatever it was he had found—a beetle, a snail, a fuzzy caterpillar. Then he would let me hold it, and I could feel it move, wiggle, or crawl as I held it in my hand. So I became very comfortable holding tiny animals.”

In many of Joanne’s books about nature, she invites readers to let loose their imagination. Combining fantasy and factual insight, they are asked to become another creature—to creep on long padded toes like a lizard, to shake the snow from their fur like a great bear, to stuff acorns inside their furry cheeks like a chipmunk. The journey is always strange and exciting, filled with wonder and delight.

---

Joanne loves her life as a writer. She tells this story: “When I see kids on school visits, I ask them, ‘What do you think I do as a writer?’ They say that I sit at a desk and write. I show them a photograph of me walking in Golden Gate Park and say, ‘This is me hard at work!’ A writer can be working even when he or she is outside looking at a tree. There are so many things around you that can trigger your imagination and fill your mind with images and words.”

Week 3

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students select animals to research and write about.
- Students do pre-research writing about their animals.
- Students explore using effective Internet search terms.
- Students identify and use various sources of information.
- Students take notes in their own words.
- Students cultivate curiosity.

Social Development Focus

- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA6–WA9

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA4–CA5)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1)

Professional Development Media

- “Conferring About Expository Nonfiction” (AV46)
- “Supporting Note-taking and Partner Work” (AV48)
- “Creating a Class Blog” tutorial (AV76)

J DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide on an animal (for example, dolphins) that you will use to model the process of researching and writing an informational report. Collect resources about that animal, such as books or information printed from online sources. Think ahead about what you know about the animal you have chosen.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 87 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, decide if you will allow small groups of students to visit the library, media center, computer lab, or another location in the school to research their animals during Writing Time. Arrange for this ahead of time with the librarian or other adults in the school.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, generate four or five questions about the animal you have chosen to use for modeling (for example, questions about the animal’s physical characteristics, habitat, diet, reproduction, and predators). Identify passages in your sources that give information about these questions.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, spend some time becoming familiar with a few search engines and decide which one you will use for modeling during the lesson. Many search engines are available, including some that are intended for students’ use. Check that the preferences on the search engine you select to use with the class have been set to “Strict,” “Safe,” or a comparable setting.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, prepare a paper chart titled “How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query,” with the following numbered items on it:
  1. Write down your research question.
  2. Circle the words you definitely need.
  3. Cross out unnecessary words.
  4. Add or substitute more specific words if needed.
  5. Decide in what order to write the words.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 88 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1) on page 94 of the Assessment Resource Book.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Get your facts first, and then you can distort ’em as much as you please.”

— Mark Twain

Choose another animal from the list you made in Week 2 and repeat that activity. Write five questions that you have about the animal and see if you can find answers to your questions at the library, on the Internet, or through other sources.

Day 1

Selecting Topics

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Weeks 1 and 2
- “Pre-research Writing” chart (WA6)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)
- “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart from Week 2 and a marker

Teacher Note

To see an example of this technique, view “Supporting Note-taking and Partner Work” (AV48).

In this lesson, the students:

- With a partner, select an animal to research and write about
- Do pre-research writing about their animals
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Make fair decisions
- Cultivate curiosity

ABOUT SUPPORTING PARTNER WORK

In this unit, each student works with a partner to produce a nonfiction report about an animal they are both curious about. The content of their writing in this unit will consist primarily of factual information that they have researched in books and other sources. The pair work is intended to support the students by inciting discussion about the facts they are finding, what those facts mean, whether they want to include those facts in their written report, and how they will write about those facts in their own words.

Both partners are responsible for the form and content of the final product, and each partner is responsible for researching and writing a part. During this process, partners talk about their thinking and learn from each other as they negotiate to reach agreements and make decisions together.

The cooperative work in this unit may challenge your students. The goals are for them to learn how to handle problems when they arise and to make decisions that both partners think are fair. If you notice partners struggling to work together, use these occasions as learning opportunities. Ask questions such as:

Q What problem are you trying to solve? Why is it important to solve it?

Q What is a solution you can both live with, even if it's not your first choice?

Q Is that solution fair to both of you? Why or why not?

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Have the students bring their pencils and their joint lists of animals from last week and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been hearing and discussing various kinds of nonfiction texts about animals and exploring animals that interest them.

Show the covers of the read-aloud books the students heard during the past two weeks and quickly review each. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q As we've read about different animals over the past two weeks, what have you become curious about?

Explain that in the coming weeks, each pair of students will explore and write a nonfiction informational report on an animal they are curious about. Like the authors of the books they have heard, they will write to satisfy their own curiosity and to help others learn and become curious about their animal. They will then publish their report and put it in the nonfiction section of the class library.

2 Discuss and Select Topics

Remind the students that last week partners worked together to select three animals that they are both curious about. Have partners review their three choices.

Signal for their attention and explain that they will now select one of the three animals they listed to research and write about in the coming weeks. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What can you do to make sure you choose an animal that both you and your partner are curious about?

Have partners talk about their three animals, and ask them to choose one. Encourage them to choose one animal that they are both very curious about. When most pairs of students have chosen, call for their attention. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q How did you and your partner make your decision? What are some ways that other partners decided?

Q What problems did you have making the decision? How did you handle those problems?

Have the students in each pair report the animal they will research to you. If many students have chosen the same animal, you might use this opportunity to discuss the need to provide the class library with information about a greater variety of animals. Ask if any pairs of students are willing to research a second choice.

3 Model Pre-research Writing About an Animal

Tell the students that you have selected an animal that you are curious about. You will research and write a report about this animal to model for the students what they will do in the coming weeks. Name the animal (for example, dolphins; see “Do Ahead” on page 389).

Explain that today the students will do some pre-research writing about their animal to find out what they already know, or think they know, about it. Display the “Pre-research Writing” chart (WA6). Ask the students to watch as you think aloud about what you know, or think you know, about this animal and what else you are curious to find out.

TEKS 1.E.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 2 (all)

ELL Note

Monitor trios of students to make sure that ELLs are participating in selecting the animal for their trios to research.

Teacher Note

In the coming three weeks, you will model researching your chosen animal, writing and organizing notes about it, and using the notes to begin writing a nonfiction report about it. (Diagrams throughout the unit show how to model the process for the students.) The students will follow your example to research and write about their own animals. Plan to research and take notes about your animal, gathering additional resources if necessary, so you have notes to use in the modeling.

Skill Practice Note

You might point out that, in the first sentence, the word dolphins is a noun, a word that names a person (or other living creature), place, or thing. Note that, in the second sentence, “They are mammals,” the noun dolphins is replaced with a pronoun, they. Explain that a pronoun is a word that takes the place of a noun. For more practice identifying and using nouns and pronouns, take time to review these skills. See Lesson 6 and Lesson 9 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Teacher Note

Save the “Pre-research Writing” chart (WA6) to use on Day 2 and throughout the unit.

You might say:

“Last week I read some nonfiction books about dolphins. I got curious to learn more about them, so I chose dolphins as the topic of my report. Now I’ll write some things I know, or think I know, about dolphins. I’ll start with where they live. I’ll write: Dolphins live in the sea. Next, I’ll write what type of animal they are: They are mammals. The word mammals has a certain meaning. Maybe I’ll try to explain what I think mammals means. I’ll write: That means they breathe air. Being a mammal also means that they are warm-blooded. What else do I remember from my reading? I’ll write what dolphins are like and what they usually eat: They are smart and friendly. Their diet is mainly fish. I’m still curious about many things about dolphins, though. I’ll write something about that here: One thing I wonder about dolphins is what their babies are like.”

Pre-research Writing

Dolphins live in the sea. They are mammals. That means they breathe air. Being a mammal also means that they are warm-blooded. They are smart and friendly. Their diet is mainly fish. One thing I wonder about dolphins is what their babies are like.

WA6

Explain that during Writing Time each student will do some pre-research writing about her pair’s chosen animal in her own notebook. Then partners will share what they have written with each other. Encourage the students to write freely about everything they know, or think they know, about their animal, as well as what else they are curious to find out.

WRITING TIME

4 Do Pre-research Writing

Have partners get their notebooks and sit together at desks. Have them spend 15–20 minutes writing quietly about what they know, or think they know, about their animal. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe them, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students write freely and with interest about their animals?

If you notice any student having difficulty writing, ask the student to tell you what he knows about the animal. You might also ask whether he has written anything about this animal in the past two weeks. If so, have the student review that writing. If not, ask the student to write what he is curious to know.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4); see page 87 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect in Pairs on Pre-research Writing

Have partners read and discuss their pre-research writing with each other. After they have had time to share, discuss:

Q What did your partner write about your animal that you didn't write?

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What are some things that you and your partner both wonder about your animal? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Add any topics not already listed to the “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart.

Explain that tomorrow partners will continue to discuss what they are curious about and then begin their research.

Teacher Note

Collect any additional resources you can find related to your students' chosen animals to use in Day 2.

Day 2

Developing Research Questions

Materials

- “Pre-research Writing” chart (WA6) from Day 1
- “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart from Day 1
- Chart paper and a marker
- A sheet of lined paper for each pair
- Collected nonfiction texts from Weeks 1–2, as well as additional resources related to the students’ chosen animals
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)
- A folder for each pair of students

TEKS 13.A.i
TEKS 13.A.ii
TEKS 13.B.i
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 (all, beginning on page 394 and continuing on
to page 395)

In this lesson, students:

- Review and discuss pre-research writing
- Generate research questions about their animals
- Identify and use various sources of information
- Cultivate curiosity
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Make fair decisions

ABOUT GENERATING RESEARCH QUESTIONS

This week and next, partners generate questions to research about the animals they have chosen and then research those questions. In today’s lesson, you will model the process of generating several questions, drawing on the “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart and your own pre-research writing for inspiration. Then partners will do the same. Generating research questions may prove challenging for your students. Support struggling students by asking questions such as:

Q What is a question on the “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart that you would like to ask about the animal you are researching? How might you write that question?

Q What did you include in your pre-research writing that you would like to learn more about?

After generating a list of questions, some students may become overly focused on finding the answers, ignoring other interesting information that could enrich their reports. Over the coming weeks, continue to discuss with your students the importance of approaching their research with curiosity. Encourage each pair of students to continue adding to their list of questions and to take notes on anything they find interesting about their chosen animal, whether or not it answers one of their original questions.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Pre-research Writing and Model Brainstorming Questions

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that partners selected an animal to research and write about together, and that they did pre-research writing about it yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of pre-research writing is to help them see what they already know, or think they know, and to determine what they want to find out.

Display the “Pre-research Writing” chart (WA6) from yesterday and read it aloud. Then look at the “Things We Want to Know About Animals” chart from yesterday and think aloud about particular things you want to find out more about, based on what you wrote. Record these as questions on a sheet of chart paper titled “Research Questions.”

You might say:

“In my writing yesterday, I wondered what baby dolphins are like. For example, I wanted to find out if baby dolphins are born knowing how to swim, so I’ll start by writing that question: Are baby dolphins born knowing how to swim? Yesterday I also wrote that dolphins breathe air. I’m curious to find out how long they can hold their breath. I’ll write: How long can a dolphin hold its breath? I also wonder about their food. I already know that they eat fish, but do they eat other types of food? I’ll add that question to my list. I’ll write: What types of food do dolphins eat? Another question I have is about dolphins’ life cycle. I’ll write: How many years can a dolphin live?”

Research Questions

Are baby dolphins born knowing how to swim?

How long can a dolphin hold its breath?

What types of food do dolphins eat?

How many years can a dolphin live?

Point out that the students will have an easier time finding information about their topics if they have specific questions that they can research.

Explain that today partners will review their pre-research writing and together agree on four or five questions about their chosen animal that they are both interested in researching.

2 Review Pre-research Writing and Brainstorm Research Questions

Ask the students to individually reread their pre-research writing from yesterday. Distribute a sheet of lined paper to each pair of students, and ask partners to agree on and write four or five questions about their chosen animal that both partners are curious about.

When most pairs of students are finished, signal for their attention and have a few volunteers report their research questions to the class. As they share, record their questions on the “Research Questions” chart.

Teacher Note

Save the “Research Questions” chart to use on Day 3 and throughout the unit.

TEKS 13.A.i

TEKS 13.B.i

Student/Teacher Activity
Step 2 (all, beginning on page 395 and continuing on to page 396) and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 396 and continuing on to page 397)

How long does a baby kangaroo live in its mother's pouch?

Are zebras born with stripes?

Do chimps have their own language?

Does anything eat whales?

How do polar bears catch fish to eat when everything is frozen solid?

Briefly discuss:

Q How did you and your partner agree on your research questions? What problems or challenges did you have? How did you handle them?

Explain that during Writing Time today the students in each pair may add to their list of questions and then begin looking for information about their animal, using various sources of information.

3 Discuss Searching for Resources

Explain that partners may use multiple sources, including the nonfiction books you have gathered for the class, other books or media materials available in the classroom or school library, or online resources. Ask partners to discuss:

 Q Where might you and your partner look for information about the questions you've chosen to research? Turn to your partner.

If you have decided to have small groups of students visit the library, media center, or other locations in the school to look for resources, discuss how the students will take responsibility for themselves outside the classroom. Discuss:

Q What will you do to act in a considerate and responsible way at the [library]? Why is that important?

WRITING TIME

4 Add to Research Questions and Search for Information

 Have partners sit together at desks. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA7) and have the students work in pairs on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes. Be ready to assist them in writing questions and finding information about their research questions.

Writing Time

- Add to your list of questions about your animal.
- Search for information about your animal.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Taking Responsibility During the Information Search

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Who added a research question to your list? Tell us about it.
- Q What did you and your partner do today to act responsibly as you looked for resources?
- Q What problems did you have? What can you do tomorrow to avoid those problems? Why will it be important for you to try to avoid those problems?

Explain that the students will continue to research their animals over the next couple of weeks. Distribute a folder to each pair of students and have partners write their names on it. Explain that they will keep all of the papers related to their informational report in this folder. Have them place their sheet of research questions and any other loose papers in their folder. Have partners decide who will keep the folder until the next lesson.

Day 3

Researching and Taking Notes

Materials

- Whiteboard with a search engine displayed, prepared ahead
- “Research Questions” chart from Day 2
- Chart paper and a marker
- “How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query” chart, prepared ahead
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)

Technology Tip

If after today's lesson your students need more support with choosing effective search terms, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 3, “Choosing Effective Search Terms,” which closely matches today's instruction. (If only some students need more support, you might teach Mini-lesson 3 just to those students.)

If your students do not need further support choosing search terms, you might skip Technology Mini-lesson 3 and teach Technology Mini-lessons 4–6, which provide further instruction on conducting online searches. If possible, teach this set of mini-lessons (located in Appendix A) in order and at corresponding stages in the students' research. For example, teach Technology Mini-lesson 6, “Evaluating Research Sources,” after the students have searched for and collected several online sources. For more information, see “About Teaching the Online Research Lessons” on page 710.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the terms search engine, search term, and search query
- Identify the best terms for an effective search query
- Reach agreement before making decisions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review and Introduce Searching for Information Online

Have the students bring their notebooks, folders, and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing the whiteboard. Review that each pair of students together selected an animal to research and write a nonfiction informational report about. They wrote down what they know about their animal and then agreed on four or five research questions.

Review that, to research their animals, the students may use multiple sources, including online resources. Explain that today the students will learn how to use a search engine to find information on the Internet. Explain that a search engine is a tool that searches the Internet using words you type into it. Finding the information you are looking for requires knowing how to choose the best words, or search terms, to type into a search engine.

2 Model Choosing the Best Terms for a Search Query

Direct the students' attention to the whiteboard with the search engine displayed, and show where to type in the search terms. Explain that good researchers start with a research question and then identify words within the question to use for their search.

Direct the students' attention to the “Research Questions” chart. Choose one of your charted questions and rewrite it on a sheet of chart paper. Explain that you will use the question to help you identify a set of words for your search and that the set of words you choose is called a search query.

Explain that a search query tells a search engine exactly what information you are looking for. Search queries are not usually complete sentences because they only use words directly related to the focus of the search. Ask the students to listen carefully as you think aloud about and model how to change the question (for example, “What types of food do dolphins eat?”) into a search query.

You might say:

"I know I need the word dolphins because those are the animals I'm researching. I also need food and eat because I want to research their diet. So dolphins, food, and eat are my keywords—I am going to circle them. I don't need the words What, types, of, or do because they don't describe the information I need, so I will cross them out. Because I think it's a good idea to put these keywords in an order that makes sense, my search query will be: food dolphins eat."

What types of food do dolphins eat?

Type the search query into the search engine and display the results. Read some of the results aloud. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q Which of these results do you think will have information about [the foods dolphins eat]? Why? [pause] Turn to your partner.

If the students do not mention it, point out any results that look like they directly address your research question.

3 Choose the Best Terms for a Search Query

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to turn a different research question into a search query. Post the chart titled "How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query" and read each step aloud.

How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query

1. Write down your research question.
2. Circle the words you definitely need.
3. Cross out unnecessary words.
4. Add or substitute more specific words if needed.
5. Decide in what order to write the words.

Write another research question (for example, “How long can a dolphin hold its breath?”) where everyone can see it, and have the students copy it onto the next blank page in their notebooks. Explain that partners will read the question carefully and follow the steps on the chart to decide on a search query. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What can you and your partner do if you don't agree about what words to include in your query or what order to put the words in?

Students might say:

“If we don't agree, we can talk about why we think a word should be used or not used in the query.”

“In addition to what [Patricia] said, we can explain why we think the words in the search query should go in a certain order.”

“We can write different search queries for the same question and later we can try them out and see how each one works.”

Have pairs work together to write search queries for the research question you wrote. Walk around the room and observe. If necessary, direct the students' attention to the “How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query” chart and remind them to follow each step. Review that search queries use only words directly related to the research question. When most pairs of students have finished, signal for their attention and have a few volunteers share their search queries with the class. Remind the students that a search query tells a search engine exactly what information to search for about a research question.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will follow the same procedure to turn one of their own research questions into a query.

Teacher Note

The students may decide on a search query such as dolphin hold breath or dolphin breath.

Teacher Note

Save the “How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query” chart to use throughout the unit.

TEKS 13.B.i

WRITING TIME

4 Write Search Queries

Have partners sit together at desks. Have each pair of students take their shared list of questions out of their folder and place it where both partners can see it as they work. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA8). Have partners work together on the charted tasks for 5–10 minutes. Encourage them to refer to the “How to Turn a Research Question into a Search Query” chart. As the students write, walk around and observe them, assisting students as needed.

WA8

Writing Time

- Pick a question from your list.
- Turn the question into a search query.
- Repeat these steps for other questions on your list.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on What the Students Learned

Have partners review their questions and search queries together. Then, as a class, discuss questions such as:

Q What is one question on your list? How did you and your partner turn that question into a search query? Tell us about it.

As volunteers share, type their search queries into the search engine on the whiteboard and ask:

Q Which of these research results do you think will have information about [the foods dolphins eat]? Why?

Explain that the students will continue to research their animals tomorrow. Have them place their sheets of research questions and any other loose papers in their folders.

Researching and Taking Notes

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Identify and use various sources of information
- Take notes in their own words
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Make fair decisions
- Share the work fairly

ABOUT TEACHING NOTE-TAKING SKILLS

In grade 3, the students focus on identifying interesting information about their animals, summarizing the information and writing notes in their own words, and categorizing their notes in preparation for writing. This process lays the foundation for work they continue in grades 4 and 5, in which they focus on narrowing their research topics, writing notes about specific research topics, and identifying source information for their notes.

In this unit, the students take notes on 3" x 5" or 4" x 6" index cards. The cards help them be succinct in writing notes and help them organize their notes in preparation for writing.

Be aware that writing notes in their own words can be challenging for elementary students. Look for opportunities to model this process frequently, asking the students to help you restate written information in their own words.

Materials

- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Research Notes” chart (WA9)
- “Research Questions” chart from Day 3
- Print and online sources of information about your chosen animal
- Index cards and rubber bands for students’ notes
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)

Teacher Note

This lesson may require an extended class period.

TEKS 13.C.ii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (all, beginning on page 402 and continuing on to page 403)

Teacher Note

If possible, model using a table of contents, index, glossary, and/or the Internet to locate information about your animal.

Plan to monitor and encourage the students, but do not worry if you notice them copying from the text, as many of them will not master taking notes in their own words until they are older.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that together partners selected an animal to research and write a nonfiction informational report about. They wrote about what they think they know about their animal and agreed on four or five questions to research. Then they wrote Internet search queries for some of their questions.

Explain that today the students will begin doing their research, both to confirm what they think they know and to get information about the questions they wrote. Pairs of students will work together to research and take notes about things they want to include in their informational report.

2 Model Researching and Taking Notes

Display the “Research Notes” chart (WA9). Ask the students to watch as you model how you would like them to take notes. Use the following procedure to model:

- Reread the “Research Questions” chart aloud and identify one question that you found some information about.
- Show the sources of information you found about your animal.
- Read aloud the information in each source that addresses the question.
- Think aloud about the information you read.
- On the “Research Notes” chart, model writing a note in your own words, indicating the source in parentheses (either by author and page number or by the web address). Also model writing your initials in the upper right, directly above the note.

You might say:

“I did an Internet search with the search query: food dolphins eat. I found a website called all-about-ocean-mammals.org and printed out some information about dolphins from that website. It says, ‘Although small fish are the major part of their diet, dolphins also eat squid, shrimp, crabs, and even octopuses. Dolphins usually swallow their food whole; their teeth are only used to grab and catch their prey.’ This tells me that dolphins mostly eat small fish, but they also like squid, shrimp, crabs, and octopuses.”

Point out that in finding information about your question (for example, about what dolphins eat) you found another interesting piece of information to include in your report. Use this procedure to model another example of taking notes.

You might say:

"The website all-about-ocean-mammals.org also says, 'Dolphins usually swallow their food whole; their teeth are only used to grab and catch their prey.' This is another interesting piece of information about dolphins and their food. I'll write it in my notes."

Research Notes

Dolphins mostly eat small fish. They also like squid, shrimp, crabs, and octopuses.

C.W.

They don't chew their food with their teeth. They just gulp it.

(all-about-ocean-mammals.org)

C.W.

WA9

Point out that notes are most helpful when they are brief and written in the writer's own words, rather than copied exactly from the source. Explain that if a writer copies the exact words or ideas from a source in her notes, she might accidentally copy those words and ideas into her own report. Tell the students that when a writer uses someone else's exact words and ideas in her own writing without giving the original writer credit it is called plagiarism. Explain that plagiarism is stealing someone else's work and calling it your own and that plagiarism can result in serious consequences for any writer, whether she is a student, a journalist, or a professional author.

Explain that the students will take their notes on index cards, one note per card. Point out that having the notes on cards will help the students organize them when they get ready to write their informational reports. Ask them to write both partners' initials on each card.

3 Get Ready to Work Together

Have partners reread their list of brainstormed research questions from yesterday. Explain that the questions are just starting places; partners should look for and take notes about any information that they find interesting about their animal.

Explain that partners will need to work together to research and take notes about their animal. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What will you and your partner do to share your work fairly today?

Teacher Note

You might model taking notes from a few different sources, such as the Internet, a book, and an encyclopedia.

Teacher Note

Save the "Research Notes" chart (WA9) to use on Day 5 and next week.

TEKS 13.F.i Student/Teacher Narrative Step 2 (second paragraph on page 403)

Teacher Note

If your school has an official policy on plagiarism, you might review it with your students. Facilitate a class discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What questions do you have about plagiarism?
- Q What might you do if you are having trouble writing a note in your own words?

TEKS 7.E.i
TEKS 13.C.i
TEKS 13.C.ii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 4 (all)

Teacher Note

Some pairs of students may still be looking for resources today. This is to be expected. On any given day, you are likely to have pairs working at different stages of their projects.

Technology Tip

You might enlist a parent volunteer or an older student to help small groups of students search online. Encourage the students to print out the information they find about their animals.

If your school has an acceptable use policy, review it with the students. Also confirm that the search settings on your school's computers are set to "Strict," "Safe," or a comparable setting.

Q What can you and your partner do if you don't agree about whether to take notes about a piece of information?

Students might say:

"We'll read a book together and stop when we want to write a note about something."

"We'll each look in a different book but talk to each other about interesting things we read, so we can take notes about them."

"We can take turns writing the notes."

"If we don't agree, we can say why we think something is interesting enough to take notes on."

Encourage partners to try the things they suggested, and tell them that you will check in with them to see how they did.

WRITING TIME

4 Research Animal Topics and Take Notes

Distribute index cards to the students and have them begin researching and taking notes about their animals. During this time, they may talk in soft voices about their work.

As the students write, circulate and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are partners agreeing on interesting facts to write about their animal?
- Are they writing notes in their own words?
- Are they writing just one piece of information per card?
- Are they sharing the work?

If necessary, stop the class to remind the students of the procedures to follow when taking their notes. If you notice partners having difficulty sharing the work, stop them and discuss questions such as:

Q What is each of you responsible for accomplishing?

Q Is the way you are sharing the work fair? Why or why not?

Q What can you do to share the work fairly?

Q Why is it important that both of you do your part of the work on this project?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA5); see page 88 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Remind them to write their initials on all of their cards.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on What the Students Learned

Have partners review their notes together. Then, as a class, discuss questions such as:

- Q What is one interesting fact you and your partner learned about your animal today?
- Q As you listened to [Donna and Juan] share about their animal topic, what did you hear that makes you curious?
- Q What was [interesting/challenging] about doing research today? What suggestions do you have that might help someone else with this challenge?

Point out that curiosity leads to learning, and that learning often leads to more curiosity.

6 Reflect on Sharing Work Fairly

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q How did you and your partner share the work fairly today?
- Q If you didn't share the work fairly, what will you do tomorrow to share the work fairly? Why will that be important to do?

Explain that the students will continue to share work fairly as they research their animals tomorrow. Provide the students with rubber bands to bind their cards together. Have them put their cards in their folders or another secure place until tomorrow.

---

EXTENSION

Continue Research During Other Times of the Day

You might have the students continue doing research and taking notes during other times of the day. They might use independent time, the library period, or after-school activity time. Also encourage the students to use the public library or their home computers to continue their research and writing.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to ask facilitative questions to help the students respond to one another. When students direct their responses to you, redirect them toward the class by asking questions like:

- Q Do you agree or disagree with what [Jayden] just said, and why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Jayden] about what he said?
- Q Why does what [Jayden] said make sense?

Much of the learning in this program relies on creating a dynamic discourse among the students. Facilitative questions teach them that their comments contribute to class discussion and that they are responsible for listening to one another and responding.

Materials

- Collected nonfiction texts
- “Research Notes” chart from Day 4 (WA9)
- Sources of information about your animal
- “Research Questions” chart from Day 4
- Index cards and rubber bands
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheets (CN1)

TEKS 13.E.i

Student/Teacher Narrative

Step 2 (all, beginning on page 406 and continuing on to page 407)

In this lesson, the students:

- Identify and use various sources of information
- Take notes in their own words
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Share the work fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss the Research Process

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students began researching their chosen animals yesterday. Explain that today they will continue to research and take notes about their animals. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Was it hard or easy to find information about your topic yesterday? What made it hard or easy?

Q What did you do to locate information about your topic?

Students might say:

“I looked in the table of contents of a book to see if there was a chapter on the life cycle of bees.”

“I looked up prey in the index, and that told me the page to go to in the book.”

“I wanted to find information about woodpeckers in North America. First, I tried searching online using the word woodpeckers. I got too many results, so I tried North America woodpeckers and found information just about woodpeckers in North America.”

As the students share ways they located information, stop periodically to ask pairs to discuss:

Q How might you use [Jennie’s] method of finding information?

2 Model Researching and Taking Notes

Display the “Research Notes” chart (WA9) from yesterday. Ask the students to watch as you model another example of researching and taking notes. Follow the procedure you used on Day 4, Step 2 (see page 402) to model locating information, reading it aloud, thinking aloud about it, and writing a note about it in your own words. This time, invite the students to help you write the note.

You might say:

"I printed out more information about dolphins from the Internet. This source says, 'Some dolphins have been seen working together to hunt schools of fish. They swim around the fish, herding them together. When the fish are surrounded and trapped, the dolphins eat them.' How can I capture that briefly in my own words? One idea I heard is that I write: Dolphins sometimes hunt in teams. I'll start with that. Then I might add: They swim in a circle around a school of fish. I'll write that next. Another suggestion is that I add: to capture and eat them. I'll write that too. Now my second sentence reads: They swim in a circle around a school of fish to capture and eat them."

Add your initials to the upper right-hand corner of the note, and write the source in parentheses beneath the note. Then model another example using the same procedure.

Explain that the students will continue to research and take notes about their animals today. Remind them to take notes not only about their questions but also about other interesting information they find. Remind them to try to write their notes briefly and in their own words.

WRITING TIME

3 Research Animal Topics and Take Notes

Have the students get their pencils and shared folders and sit at desks with partners together. Distribute more cards as needed and have partners research and take notes about their topics. As they work, circulate, observe, and offer assistance. When all partners seem to be working independently, begin conferring with pairs of students, one at a time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Today you will begin conferring with individual pairs and continue conferring with them into the next week. Ask partners to tell you the animal they are researching and what they are learning about that animal. Focus your conversations on what the partners are curious about, what they are learning, and how they are capturing what they are learning in their notes. Ask questions such as:

- Q What animal are the two of you researching? What question about that animal is each of you researching now?
- Q What have you found out about your question? Read me one of your notes.
- Q What else do you want to know? What sources might you use to find information about that?

(continues)

Teacher Note

You might have the students place self-stick notes in their sources on the pages containing information they are using in their notes, so that they can easily locate those pages later in the research process.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

If you ask a student to read you a note and you find it confusing, ask the student what the note means. Explain why you were confused and ask the partners how the note might be rewritten more clearly.

Document your observations for each student on a separate "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 94 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Remind both partners in each pair to write their initials on all of their cards.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Researching and Taking Notes

Have partners review their notes together to make sure that they are written in their own words and that what they have written makes sense. Explain that if they find a note confusing, they should work together to decide what is confusing about it and how to make it clearer. Explain that partners may need to refer to the source of the information to help them rewrite it.

After several minutes, briefly discuss:

- Q Who has an example of a confusing note? What did you do to make the note clearer?
- Q Why do you think it is important to paraphrase, or write notes using your own words, instead of plagiarizing or using the author's exact words?
- Q What have you learned about taking notes? What suggestions do you have to help others?

Have the students reflect on their partner work by asking:

- Q What did you and your partner do to share the work fairly today?

Explain that partners will continue to research their animals next week. Have them bind together their index cards with a rubber band and place the cards in their folders or another secure place until then.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use a Class Blog for Reflection

Create a class blog and, in the coming weeks, invite the students to reflect on what they are learning about writing informational reports. Post reflection questions, such as the second question in Step 4 above. After discussing the questions as a class, have interested students post their comments. Review the comments periodically and, with the respondents' permission, discuss them with the class.

Technology Tip

For information about setting up and maintaining a class blog, view the "Creating a Class Blog" tutorial (AV76).

Week 4

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students use various sources of information to research an animal.
- Students take notes in their own words.
- Students organize their notes in preparation for writing.
- Students draft nonfiction informational reports and include facts, details, and definitions.
- Students explore transitional words and phrases.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students work in a responsible way.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA9–WA14

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA6–CA7)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)

Professional Development Media

- “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8)

J DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, look for information about any of the research questions you charted last week about your animal (for example, questions about the animal's habitat, physical characteristics, diet, reproduction, and predators). Take notes on what you find, eight to ten notes altogether. Copy your notes onto 5" × 7" index cards, one note per card. Group your notes into categories and think about what heading you will assign to each group (for example "Habitat," "Physical Characteristics," "Diet," "Reproduction," and "Predators").
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, prepare wall space by the whiteboard where you can post your sorted index cards. The space should be close enough to the interactive whiteboard that you can read the notes while you model writing on the lined writing chart (WA12) on Day 3.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA6) on page 89 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, review your organized note cards from Day 2 and think ahead about how you might begin drafting an informational report. Include appropriate information from your pre-research writing as well as from your notes.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA7) on page 90 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, title a sheet of chart paper "Transitional Words and Phrases for Reports." Under the title, list the following: also, and, another, because, but, for example, in fact, more, since, first, next, last.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a class set of the "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2) on page 95 of the Assessment Resource Book.

TEACHER AS WRITER

"We write about what we don't know about what we know."

— Grace Paley

Reread the questions you wrote about an animal in Teacher as Writer during the past two weeks. Choose one or two questions and try to find some information about them using the resources you have collected for your students. As you look for information, consider:

- Is it hard or easy to locate information about your questions? If it's hard, what makes it hard? Would modifying your questions make it easier? How?
- What tools or methods are you using to locate the information (for example, tables of contents, indexes, glossaries, search engines)? What skills do you need to successfully use these tools?

Day 1

Researching and Taking Notes

Materials

- Collected nonfiction texts from Weeks 1–3
- Index cards and rubber bands
- “Writing Time” chart (WA10)
- (Optional) “Research Notes” chart (WA9) from Week 3
- (Optional) Sources of information about your animal from Week 3
- (Optional) “Research Questions” chart from Week 3

TEKS 13.A.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 1 (all)

Teacher Note

If necessary, model researching and taking notes about your topic again using the “Research Notes” chart (WA9) and the procedure you used in Week 3, Day 4, Step 2 on page 402. Model locating specific information using the table of contents, index, glossary, etc. Read information from your source aloud and ask the students to help you write brief notes in your own words.

In this lesson, the students:

- Continue to research animals
- Take notes in their own words
- Check each other’s notes for understanding
- Share the work fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Pre-research Writing and Notes

Have the students bring their notebooks and folders and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students began researching their animals in pairs last week. Ask the students to quietly reread their pre-research writing and their notes. Then call for their attention and ask:

Q After starting your research, did you change your mind about something you wrote in your pre-research writing? Tell us about it.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something new that both you and your partner have learned about your topic? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After partners have discussed the questions, have one or two volunteers share with the class. Remind the students that the purpose of their research (and the writing they will do later in the week) is to satisfy their own curiosity about their topics and also to help others become curious about it.

Explain that today partners will continue to research and take notes about their questions, things they thought they knew about their topics (from their pre-research writing), and any new things they have become curious about.

2 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today each pair of students will continue to research and take notes about their animal. Later this week partners will begin drafting a nonfiction report about their animal.

Q Ask partners to spend a few minutes discussing what they want to accomplish today and how they will share the work in a fair way.

WRITING TIME

3 Continue to Research Animal Topics and Take Notes

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10). Have partners sit together at desks and work on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Find resources about your animal.
- Research and take notes in your own words about your questions, things you thought you knew, and new things you have become curious about.
- Share the work fairly.

WA10

Distribute more index cards, as needed, as the students research and take notes about their topics. As they work, circulate, observe, and offer assistance. When pairs of students seem to be working independently, confer with one pair at a time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

As you did in Week 3, confer with individual pairs about their research and about taking notes. Ask partners to tell you about the animal they are researching. Focus your conversations on what the partners are curious about, what they are learning, and how they are capturing what they are learning in their notes. Ask questions such as:

- Q What animal are the two of you researching? What questions about that animal are each of you researching now?
- Q What have you found out about your questions? Read me one of your notes.
- Q What else do you want to know? What sources might you use to find information about that?

If you ask a student to read you a note and you find it confusing, ask the student what the note means. Explain why you were confused and ask the partners how the note might be rewritten more clearly.

Beginning on Day 4, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Document your observations for each student on a separate “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 94 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

The Writing Time routine established early in the year helps students settle quickly into focused writing. To learn more, view “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3).

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Researching and Taking Notes

Have partners review their notes together. Ask:

- Q What was it like to take notes in your own words today? Read us one of your notes.
- Q What is one interesting fact that you and your partner learned about your animal today?
- Q Take a look at your pre-research writing. What have you learned about your animal that confirms (is the same as) what you thought you knew? What have you learned that's different from what you thought you knew?

Explain that partners will begin organizing their notes tomorrow in preparation for writing their informational report. They will have time to continue researching their topic as well.

Provide rubber bands as needed and have partners bind together their cards and put them in their folders or another secure place until tomorrow.

Day 2

Organizing Notes

Materials

- Reptiles from Week 1
- A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups from Week 1
- Collected nonfiction texts
- Your research notes written on 5" × 7" index cards
- Blank wall space to post note cards
- Blank cards to write section titles for your research notes
- Index cards and rubber bands
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA11)

In this lesson, the students:

- Modify and expand their thinking, based on research
- Organize their notes in preparation for writing
- Reach agreement before making decisions
- Agree and disagree in a caring way
- Share the work fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the whiteboard. Review that they have been working in pairs to research and take notes about their animals.

Explain that nonfiction authors want their readers to become curious and learn about their topics, so they organize information ways that will interest readers and be easy to understand.

Review that the students have seen many ways authors can organize nonfiction information. Show the covers of Reptiles and A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups, and remind the students that they heard these books earlier in the unit. Show the table of contents of Reptiles, and explain that this book is organized by subtopics, or smaller topics within the larger topic of reptiles. Then show the table of contents of A Pack of Wolves and Other Canine Groups, and explain that this book is also organized by subtopics, including the members that make up a wolf pack, how wolves have babies, how wolves communicate, what they eat, and whether they are endangered. Explain that this week the students will organize their own nonfiction reports by subtopics this week.

2 Model Organizing Notes

Ask the students to watch as you model organizing your notes by subtopics. Read aloud the notes you wrote on index cards as you post them on a wall or the board. Explain that some of the notes can be put together because they are about the same subtopic. Model putting notes about similar subtopics together, and write a heading for each category on a blank index card above each group of notes.

You might say:

"I have information about how scientists classify dolphins (how they decide what kind of animal dolphins are). I also have information about what dolphins eat and information about how dolphins take care of their babies. I'll write the subtopic headings that I think will be helpful to readers. I'll write: What Are Dolphins?, Food Dolphins Eat, and Baby Dolphins."

Ask:

Q What other notes can we put together? What could we call this group of notes?

If possible, use the students' suggestions to categorize the notes. Write a subtopic heading above each group of notes. If the students have difficulty categorizing the notes, continue to model while thinking aloud.

Dolphins belong to a group of sea mammals called cetaceans. Whales are also part of this group.
(Abezi, p. 15)

Teacher Note

Prior to Day 3, research the students' suggestions and write additional notes on 5" x 7" index cards (about additional subtopics, if necessary).

Teacher Note

You might choose to keep the cards posted for the Day 3 lesson.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to ask facilitative questions to build accountability for listening and participation during class discussions. Redirect students' comments to the class by asking:

- Q Do you agree or disagree with [Hillary]? Why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Hillary] about what she said?
- Q What can you add to what [Hillary] said?

After categorizing all of the notes, point out that these are the facts that you will include in your written report about your topic. Ask:

- Q Do you think I have enough information for my written report? Why or why not?
- Q Which subtopics do you think might need more information? Why?
- Q What additional subtopics might I want to include in my report? Why?

Students might say:

"You only have one note under 'Habitat.' You might want to add a few more notes to that subtopic."

"Maybe you can include more information about their physical characteristics, like what helps dolphins swim so fast."

"Maybe readers will want to know how smart dolphins are. You could add a subtopic called 'Are Dolphins Smart?'"

"You can add a subtopic about any animals that hunt and eat dolphins."

Use rubber bands to bind together each group of notes with its subtopic heading.

3 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today each pair of students will organize their notes into subtopics (groups), write the names of the subtopics on blank index cards, decide where they need more information and do more research, and bind together each group of notes with the name of its subtopic.

Point out that there are usually multiple ways that notes can be organized and that partners will need to talk until they agree on the best way to organize their notes. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q If you and your partner disagree about how to organize your notes, what will you do?
- Q Why is it important to disagree in a respectful way?

Point out that people sometimes disagree when they are working together and that people can disagree while maintaining respect for one another. Encourage partners to be aware of how they are disagreeing with each other and tell them that you will check in with them at the end of the lesson.

Ask partners to spend a few minutes discussing what they will do and how they will share the work in a fair way.

WRITING TIME

4 Organize Notes for Writing

Have the students get their research notes, folders, and pencils and sit at desks, partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA11) and have partners work on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes. When pairs of students have finished organizing their notes, have them signal to you so that you can review their work.

Writing Time

- Organize your notes into subtopics (groups).
- Write the names of the subtopics on index cards.
- Decide where you need more information and continue researching.
- Bind together the groups of notes with the subtopic headings.

WA11

As the students work, circulate, observe, and assist as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do partners seem able to categorize their notes in ways that make sense?
- Do they categorize all their notes?
- Are they able to agree on how to categorize their notes?
- If they do not agree at first, do they keep talking until they reach agreement?

Support any pair that struggles by asking questions such as:

- Q What notes seem to belong together? Why do you think so?
- Q What other notes could go into your [“Food”] subtopic (group)? Why do you think so?

Be aware that categorizing information can be challenging for some students; this is to be expected. They may have difficulty defining subtopics or consistently sorting their notes into those subtopics. They may want to discard notes that do not fit or become preoccupied with having the same number of notes in each subtopic. Encourage them to try their best to organize all their notes in a way that makes sense (perhaps by creating an “Other Interesting Facts” category for outliers).

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6); see page 89 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Step 4 (all)

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Partner Work

Ask:

- Q Which subtopics did you and your partner decide you needed more information about? What made you decide that?
- Q Did you and your partner disagree about anything when you were organizing your notes? If so, what? What did you do to disagree in a respectful way? How did you reach agreement?

Explain that tomorrow partners will finish organizing their notes, if necessary, and begin writing their informational reports.

Have partners put their work away in a secure place until tomorrow.

Teacher Note

Allow students who need more time researching to do so before you teach the Day 3 lesson.

EXTENSION

Discuss Elements of Nonfiction Across the School Day

Take time at the end of independent reading periods, and other times during the day, to discuss the nonfiction the students are reading. Have the students share the titles and authors of the books they are reading and explain what the books are about. Discuss questions such as:

- Q How do you know that the book you are reading is nonfiction?
- Q What true information are you learning from the book?
- Q What features (such as illustrations, captions, diagrams, graphs, table of contents, and glossaries) of nonfiction do you see in your book?

In this lesson, the students:

- Order their grouped notes in preparation for writing
- Decide how they will share the writing fairly
- Begin drafting their informational report
- Include facts, definitions, and details related to their topic
- Check for understanding
- Reach agreement before making decisions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Ways to Organize Nonfiction

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the whiteboard. Review that they have grouped their research notes into subtopics in preparation for writing. Explain that today partners will put their grouped notes in the order in which they want to write about them and that they will then begin writing a draft of their reports. Ask:

Q What have you found out about your animal that you think other people will be curious to learn about? Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, signal for their attention and explain that you will model ordering your grouped notes and beginning to write a draft.

2 Model Ordering Your Notes and Beginning a Draft

Direct the students' attention to your posted index cards. Think aloud about the order in which you want to introduce each subtopic.

You might say:

"To get my readers' attention from the beginning, I think I'll first write about what dolphins and humans have in common. Then I will write about where they live and what they eat, in that order."

Display the lined writing chart (WA12). Read your first group of notes aloud and think aloud about how you might want to start writing this section of your report. Explain that you want to grab your readers' attention and provide facts, details, and definitions to make your report clear and accurate (correct).

Materials

- Your grouped research notes from Day 2, posted near the whiteboard
- Lined writing chart (WA12)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA13)
- Loose, lined paper for writing drafts
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA7)

TEKS 12.B.i

Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (all, beginning on page 419 and continuing on to page 420)

You might say:

"For the subtopic 'What Are Dolphins?' I have notes about how dolphins are mammals like humans, how they are warm-blooded, and how they breathe air. I think the fact that dolphins are mammals just like humans is surprising; it will grab my readers' attention. I'll start by writing: Dolphins are mammals, just like you and me. That will make my readers curious to learn more, and it gives some important information about dolphins."

Model writing a few sentences about this subtopic, double-spaced, on the chart, pointing out the notes you are using as you write. Ask:

- Q What is another sentence I can write [showing how dolphins are like people]?
- Q What shall I tell about next? What sentence can I write to tell about that?
- Q What is a fact, detail, or definition I can include to make this report as clear and accurate as possible?

WA12

What Are Dolphins?

Dolphins are mammals, just like you and me. Being a mammal means that dolphins are warm-blooded. Also, even though they live in the sea, dolphins breathe air like all mammals. While fish have gills to help them breathe underwater, dolphins have lungs like humans have. Dolphins belong to a group of sea mammals called cetaceans.

Teacher Note

Save the model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) to use on Day 4 and throughout the unit.

Use the students' suggestions to write a few more sentences. If the students have difficulty suggesting sentences, model writing a few more yourself. Point out that you are trying to write in a way that makes the topic as interesting and clear as possible for your readers.

3 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today partners will work together to order their notes, reread their notes to make sure the order makes sense, and begin writing. Tell them that you expect both partners to participate in the writing, so they will need to decide who will write which subtopics (groups). They will put the parts together into one report when they publish it for the class.

Ask partners to spend a few minutes discussing what they want to accomplish today and how they will share the work in a fair way. After a moment, signal for the students' attention. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What part of your pair work are you responsible for today?

WRITING TIME

4 Begin Drafting Informational Reports

Have the students get their research notes, folders, and pencils and sit at desks, partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA13) and have partners work together for 20–30 minutes to order their notes and draft their informational reports.

Writing Time

- Arrange your subtopics (grouped notes) in the order in which you want them to be in your report.
- Reread your notes and make sure the order makes sense.
- Begin writing a draft of your report, double-spaced, on loose, lined paper.
- Try to grab your reader’s attention and provide facts, details, and definitions.
- Share the writing fairly.

WA13

As the students work, circulate, observe, and offer assistance as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are partners able to decide on an order of the subtopics for their report?
- Does the order make sense?
- Are both partners writing sections of their report?
- Are the students able to use their notes to write coherently about their topics?
- Are they double-spacing their drafts?

Support any pair that struggles by asking questions such as:

- Q What do you want to write about first to grab your reader’s attention?
- Q What do you want to write about next?
- Q What part is each partner working on? Is that a fair way to share the work? Why or why not? [What will you do differently to share the work fairly?]

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA7); see page 90 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Student/Teacher Activity
Step 4 (all, beginning on page 421 and continuing on to page 422)

ELL Note

Monitor trios of students to make sure that ELLs are participating in the work. Students who speak very limited English may not be able to help with the writing. If necessary, help them contribute to their trio’s work in other ways, such as by reading the research notes aloud or by drawing and labeling diagrams to accompany the final report.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

Teacher Note

For more information, view “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8).

5 Confer in Pairs About Drafts

Have partners read their writing from today to each other and check to make sure they each understand what the other has written. After a few moments, signal for their attention and ask:

- Q Do you understand everything your partner wrote today? If not, what can you ask your partner to help you understand?
- Q If your partner is confused about something you wrote, how can you revise it to make it clearer?

Invite volunteers to share examples from their own writing as they answer these questions.

6 Reflect on Partner Work

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own part of the work today? How did that help your pair work?
- Q What did you and your partner do to reach agreement about how to write your informational report? If you didn't agree at first, what did you do to reach agreement?

Have pairs of students place all of the papers related to their informational reports their folders. If they have identified books or other resources about the animals they are researching, they may keep them in their desks to use later in the week.

In this lesson, the students:

- Draft their informational reports
- Explore transitional words and phrases
- Include facts, details, and definitions related to their topics
- Confer with one another about their drafts
- Work responsibly in pairs
- Share the work fairly

TEKS 11.B.ii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 1 and Step 2 (all, beginning on page 423 and continuing on to page 424)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Explore Transitional Words and Phrases

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they began writing drafts of their informational reports yesterday. Explain that they will continue to work on their drafts today.

Explain that one way the students might make their reports clearer and easier to follow is by adding transitional words and phrases. Explain that these are words and phrases that help readers connect related ideas in a report. Direct the students' attention to the "Transitional Words and Phrases for Reports" chart. Read aloud the words and phrases listed on the chart. Ask:

Q What other transitional words and phrases might you use in a report to help readers connect related ideas?

Add the students' ideas to the chart.

2 Model Adding to a Draft

Explain that before the students work in pairs on their drafts, you will model adding to your draft. Display the model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Day 3. Using the procedure from yesterday (see Day 3, Step 2 on page 419), model adding to your informational report by reading your notes, thinking aloud about what you might write, and writing. Include transitional words and phrases as you write. Also point out the facts, details, and definitions you are adding to your report.

Elicit the students' help in developing more sentences. Ask questions such as:

Q (Point to a note.) I want to include this information about [how dolphin calves stay with their mothers for 3–6 years]. What sentence could I write to get this information across in an interesting way?

Materials

- "Transitional Words and Phrases for Reports" chart, prepared ahead
- Your grouped research notes from Day 3, posted near the whiteboard
- The model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Day 3
- "Writing Time" chart (WA14)
- Loose, lined paper for writing drafts
- Class set of "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheets (CN2)

Teacher Note

If you have already taught the Opinion Writing genre unit, remind the students that they explored transitional words and phrases to connect opinions and reasons in that unit. Explain that the transitional words and phrases listed on this chart are especially useful in nonfiction reports.

Teacher Note

Keep the "Transitional Words and Phrases for Reports" chart posted for the students to use throughout the unit.

Technology Tip

For more transitional words and phrases, you might search online using the keywords "transitional words and phrases."

Student/Teacher Narrative Step 2 (first paragraph)

- Q What is another fact, detail, or definition I can include?
- Q What transitional word or phrase could I use here to make it clear that [I'm telling about a second way mother dolphins take care of their calves]?

WA12

Baby Dolphins

Like all mammals, dolphins give birth to live young. Baby dolphins are called calves. After a calf is born, its mother pushes it to the surface of the water so it can breathe. Also, mother dolphins feed their calves milk. The milk is very rich, and this helps calves to grow. In fact, calves double in weight during their first two months! Calves stay with their mothers about three to six years. Can you imagine only staying with your mother for three to six years?

If the students have difficulty suggesting sentences, continue thinking aloud and writing a few more yourself. Point out that you are trying to write in a way that makes the topic as interesting and clear as possible for your readers.

Encourage the students to continue to think about how to make their topics interesting and clear for their readers as they write today. Remind them to include facts, details, and definitions and use transitional words and phrases to connect ideas.

3 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Remind the pairs of students that you expect each student to participate in the writing. They will each write different subtopics (groups), and then they will put the parts together into one report when they publish it for the class.

Ask partners to spend a few minutes reviewing what they have written so far and deciding what they will write today.

4 Draft Informational Reports

Have the students get their research notes, folders, and pencils and sit at desks, partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA14) and have partners work for 20–30 minutes to draft their informational reports.

Writing Time

- Continue writing your report.
- Try to grab your reader’s attention and provide facts, details, and definitions.
- Use transitional words and phrases to connect ideas.
- Share the writing fairly.

WA14

When pairs seem to be working independently, confer with one pair at a time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

This week and next, confer with individual pairs about their drafts. Ask partners to read their drafts aloud and to tell you their plan for their report. Ask questions such as:

- Q What did you write in your pre-research writing that you want to include in your draft?
- Q What questions did you originally write that you will answer in your draft?
- Q How did you group and order your notes? What made you decide to organize them that way?
- Q What is a fact, detail, or definition that would help your reader learn about [how gorillas take care of their young]?
- Q What transitional word or phrase might you use to help the reader move from this idea to the next one?
- Q What else do you want to know? What sources might you use to find information about that?

Document your observations for each student on a separate “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 95 of the Assessment Resource Book.

- Include facts, details, and definitions related to their topics
- Explore transitional words and phrases
- Confer with one another about their drafts
- Work responsibly in pairs
- Share the work fairly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review

Have the students bring their folders, report drafts, and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been writing drafts of their informational reports. Remind the students that they have been using facts, details, and definitions in their reports and connecting those ideas using transitional words and phrases. Ask:

- Q Why is it important to use facts, details, and definitions in your report?
- Q Why is it important to use transitional words and phrases to connect ideas in your report?

Students might say:

"I want to give facts in my report because I want my readers to learn true information about [bald eagles]."

"Details are important to include because they make writing more interesting to read."

"I want to define a word when I think readers might not know it. Otherwise readers could lose interest and stop reading."

"It's important to use transitional words and phrases to help readers move from one idea to the next one, so they don't get confused."

Ask the students to reread what they have written so far and to notice whether their reports are interesting and make sense. Discuss:

- Q What do you notice about what you've written so far?
- Q What do you want to do today as you work to complete this draft?

Students might say:

"I notice that I left something out."

"My piece seems like a list of facts. I want to make it more interesting."

"I want to work on the order of the information for one subtopic so it makes more sense."

2 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today pairs of students will continue to draft their reports. If one partner finishes the part of the draft she has been working on, then both partners should review that part to make sure it is clear and complete. If partners agree that this part is complete, then they should choose another of their subtopics for the partner to work on.

Ask partners to spend a few minutes reviewing what they have written so far and deciding what they will write today.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Informational Reports

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA14). Have partners sit together at desks and work for 20–30 minutes to draft their informational reports.

Writing Time

- Continue writing your report.
- Try to grab your reader's attention and provide facts, details, and definitions.
- Use transitional words and phrases to connect ideas.
- Share the writing fairly.

When the students seem to be working independently, confer with one pair at a time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual pairs about their drafts. Ask partners to read their drafts aloud and to tell you their plan for their report. Ask questions such as:

- Q What did you write in your pre-research writing that you want to include in your draft?
- Q What questions did you originally write that you will answer in your draft?

Have pairs of students put all the papers related to their informational reports in their folders.

Week 5

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students finish drafting their informational reports.
- Students write introductions and endings for their reports.
- Students explore and integrate expository text features into their reports.
- Students revise their writing with input from others.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students build on one another's thinking.

Online Resources

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, think about where you might add two or three illustrations in your model informational report and what the accompanying captions might say.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, think about what you might include in an introduction to your report.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, finish writing your model informational report and include a concluding statement or section.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, prepare a sheet of chart paper titled “Revising Informational Reports” with the following questions written on it:
  - Order: Does the order of information make sense? How might I change it?*
  - Interest: What might I change to better capture my reader’s interest?*
  - Completeness: What more do I need to add so the report gives enough information about the animal?*
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, decide how you will combine pairs of students to form groups of four.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, prepare a sheet of chart paper titled “Does It All Make Sense?” with the following questions written on it:
  - Does this writing make sense? Can I track what the author is saying?*
  - Is there a place where I am confused? Where?*
  - What have I heard in this report that makes me curious?*
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8) on page 91 of the Assessment Resource Book.

“To me, writing a book is a great voyage of discovery; what attracts me to a subject in part is what I don’t know about it, what I can learn from it.”

— David McCullough

Think about the subjects that attract you. What is something you would like to know about those subjects? Write your reflections in your notebook.

Day 1

Drafting and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- The ABCs of Endangered Animals from Week 1
- Reptiles from Week 1
- The model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Week 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)
- Loose, lined paper for writing drafts
- A pad of 3" × 3" self-stick notes for each pair

In this lesson, the students:

- Draft their informational reports
- Explore expository text features
- Decide on illustrations and captions for their reports
- Agree and disagree in a caring way
- Assess how a solution is working and modify it if necessary
- Share the work fairly

MORE ABOUT FACILITATING PARTNER WORK

This week the students in each pair add expository text features to their drafts, combine their writing into a single report, write an introduction and a conclusion together, and make many decisions. Partners also give each other feedback about their writing. This cooperative work may challenge your students. If you notice partners struggling to work together, ask them questions such as:

Q What problem are you trying to solve? Why is it important to solve it?

Q What is a solution you can both live with, even if it's not your first choice?

Q Is that solution fair to both of you? Why or why not?

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reread and Share Sentences

Have the students bring their folders and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that last week they began drafting their nonfiction informational reports. Review that the purpose of these reports is for students to help their classmates become curious and learn about animals by presenting information in an interesting way.

Ask the students to quietly reread their own writing from last week and to each select one sentence that he feels might help others become curious about his animal. Tell them that you would like each student to read his sentence aloud. Ask the students to listen carefully to one another's sentences and to think about which sentences make them curious.

Go around the room and have the students read their sentences aloud, without comment. When all have read, ask and briefly discuss:

Q What sentences did you hear that made you curious?

Explain that pairs of students will continue to work on their drafts today. Encourage them to write in a way that helps others become as curious as they are about their topic.

2 Discuss Captions and Illustrations

Explain that nonfiction authors often include photographs or illustrations in their texts to provide information and spark interest. Show the covers of The ABCs of Endangered Animals and Reptiles and remind the students that they heard these books earlier in the unit. Flip through each book, stopping several times to read part of a page or show an image and read its caption. For each image, ask and briefly discuss:

- Q Why do you think the author included this [photograph/illustration]?
- Q How does the caption help us understand the [photograph/illustration]?

Students might say:

"The photograph shows something the author wrote about and that helps you understand it."

"The author included this picture because it is very [exciting/scary/pretty]."

"The caption explains the picture."

"This caption helps you see something in the picture you might not have noticed."

3 Model Marking Your Draft for Images and Captions

Explain that each pair of students will decide where in their piece they would like to put some images and captions. The images may be illustrations the students draw themselves or copies of photographs from magazines or the Internet. Explain that they will place a self-stick note in their draft to show where an image might go. The note will remind them to leave space for the image and caption when they copy their draft into its final version.

Ask the students to watch as you model thinking about where it might be helpful to have images and captions in your report. Display the model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Week 4. Draw a star next to each place where you might include an image in your final draft, and explain why you think it will be helpful to have an image there. Write a draft of the caption that will accompany your image in the margin next to where it will go.

You might say:

"In my report, I wrote a sentence about how social and playful dolphins are. Right after that sentence, I might include a photo of a group of dolphins jumping and splashing in the water, so I'll add a star there. The photo will help readers understand exactly what I mean. Now I'll add a draft caption in the margin: Dolphins are social, playful animals. These dolphins are riding the waves."

As you write, elicit suggestions from the students. If the students have difficulty suggesting places to add images and captions, continue thinking aloud and writing a few more captions yourself. Point out that you are trying to add images and captions that will help readers better understand and enjoy your report.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to practice asking facilitative questions during class discussions to help the students respond directly to one another. Redirect students' comments to the class by asking:

- Q Do you agree or disagree with [Yasmin]? Why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Yasmin] about what she said?
- Q What can you add to what [Yasmin] said?

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view "Asking Facilitative Questions" (AV22).

Step 5 (all, beginning on page
434 and continuing on to page
435)

4 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today partners will decide where to add images and captions to their draft informational reports. They will also continue working on their drafts. Briefly discuss:

- Q Today you and your partner have many decisions to make. What have you learned about making decisions with a partner that will help you?
- Q What are some ways to make a fair decision if you and your partner don't agree at first?

Ask partners to spend a few minutes deciding what they want to accomplish today and how they will share the work fairly. Remind them that both partners need to be writing sections of their joint draft. When partners are ready, have them sit together at desks.

WRITING TIME

5 Continue Drafting Informational Reports

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA15). Distribute self-stick notes and have partners work on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

WA15

Writing Time

- Decide where you want to include images and what kind they will be.
- Draw a star next to each place where you will include an image.
- Write draft captions on self-stick notes and place them in your report where the images will go.
- Continue drafting your informational report.

Circulate, observe, and offer assistance. When the students seem to be working independently, confer with one pair at a time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

As you did in Week 4, continue to confer with individual pairs about their drafts. Ask partners to read their drafts aloud and to tell you their plan for their report. Ask questions such as:

- Q What did you write in your pre-research writing that you want to include in your draft?
- Q What questions did you originally write that you will answer in your draft?

(continues)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

- Q How did you group and order your notes? What made you decide to organize them that way?
- Q What is a fact, detail, or definition that would help your reader learn about [how gorillas take care of their young]?
- Q What transitional word or phrase might you use to help the reader move from this idea to the next one?
- Q Where might you add an image and a caption in your report? How would this help the reader understand and enjoy your report?

Document your observations for each student on a separate “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 95 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Confer in Pairs and Reflect

Ask partners to read their writing from today to each other and check to make sure they each understand what the other has written. Give them time to clarify any confusion in their writing. Briefly discuss:

- Q What illustrations have you and your partner decided to include? How did you decide?
- Q If you had difficulty agreeing on images to include, what did you do to try to reach agreement? How did that work?
- Q What might you want to do differently tomorrow to reach agreement?

Have the pairs of students put all the papers related to their informational reports in their folders. Explain that tomorrow they will think about writing interesting introductions for their reports.

Teacher Note

Questions like these help the students develop good working relationships with their partners. When students feel connected to others, they learn to relax and take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically. For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Day 2

Drafting and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- Student Writing Handbook page 11
- “Interesting Introductions from Three Nonfiction Books” chart (WA16)
- The model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Day 1
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA17)
- Loose, lined paper for writing drafts

TEKS 11.B.iv
TEKS 11.B.vii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 (all)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore and write interesting introductions
- Draft their informational reports
- Reread their writing critically
- Check each other’s writing for understanding
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Explore Interesting Introductions

Have the students bring their folders and Student Writing Handbooks and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that their published reports will be placed in the class library for other students to read. Explain that today the students will spend some time thinking about what they want to write at the very beginning of their reports to capture their readers’ attention.

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 11, where the opening passages from three books they heard earlier are reproduced. Display the “Interesting Introductions from Three Nonfiction Books” chart (WA16). Ask the students to follow along as you read aloud. Invite them to think, as they listen, about what the author is doing in this opening to get readers interested in reading on.

Read the first passage from Into the Sea aloud twice and ask:

Q What do you think the author is doing in this opening to get us interested in reading the book? Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Students might say:

“The author says the baby sea turtle would make a good meal for a bird or a crab. That got my attention. It made me hope that the turtle will be safe!”

“The author describes the baby turtle as ‘not much bigger than a bottle cap.’ That helps me picture how tiny she is.”

“Words like tap and scritch made me imagine what it sounds like when the baby turtle breaks out of her egg.”

Repeat this procedure with the next two passages. Point out that all three authors have written openings that are descriptive and that capture their readers’ attention.

2 Model Writing an Interesting Introduction

Ask the students to watch as you model writing an interesting introduction. Display the model draft on the lined writing chart (WA12) from Day 1. Model writing an introduction to your draft on a sheet of chart paper, thinking aloud about what you might write.

You might say:

"For my introduction, I think I'll start with a description that helps readers picture how beautiful dolphins are and how exciting it is to see them in the wild. That will capture readers' attention and make them curious. Next, I'll tell readers a little bit about what they'll learn in my report. That will get them even more interested. Then I'll finish my introduction by telling readers that I hope my report will make them excited about dolphins, too."

As you write, elicit the students' help. Ask questions such as:

- Q What can I write to make readers feel excited about my topic?
- Q How can I get readers curious to learn about dolphins?
- Q What is an interesting detail I could include about dolphins that will make readers want to find out more?

If the students have difficulty suggesting sentences, continue thinking aloud and writing a few more yourself. Point out that you are trying to make your introduction as interesting as possible for your readers so they will want to read your report.

Introduction

A boat is sailing on the Pacific Ocean, near the California coast. Suddenly the water is full of leaping dolphins. They swim all around the boat. They splash playfully in the waves. The people on the boat are very excited. They point and smile at the dolphins. These animals are a beautiful sight to see!

In this report, you will read about the amazing lives of dolphins. You will learn where dolphins live, what they eat, and how they communicate with each other. You will find out how they raise their young. You will even learn how humans and dolphins are alike! By the end of this report, I hope you will be as excited as I am about these incredible animals.

Teacher Note

Save the charted introduction to the model draft to use on Day 4.

Tell the students that authors introduce their books in many different ways. Suggest that the students get other ideas by looking at some of the introductions in the books and other nonfiction resources they have used.

3 Discuss How Partners Will Work Together

Explain that today partners will decide on the type of introduction that they will write, discuss how they will share the work of writing it, and begin writing. They will also finish drafting the rest of their report.

Ask partners to spend a few minutes discussing what they want to accomplish today and how they will share the work fairly.

WRITING TIME

4 Continue Drafting Informational Reports

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA17). Have partners sit together at desks and work on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Decide on the type of introduction you will write.
- Write your introduction.
- Finish drafting your report, planning for any illustrations and captions.

As the students work, circulate, observe, and offer assistance. When the students seem to be working independently, confer with one pair at a time.
