Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.

PROMPT: “I think the word [boosts] could replace [pushes] because . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is 1; the second sentence is 2; the third sentence is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

3 Play the Game in Pairs

Now play the game with the students in pairs:

1. Click ② to reveal the second sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 2: Dr. Strand carefully studies the effects of global warming on animals and plants all over the world.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined words. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined words? Why? [Click ② again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [analyzes] could replace [carefully studies] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ② a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.
4. Click ② to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining sentences:

- Sentence 3: Julia is looking for information about icebergs on the Internet. (seeking)
- Sentence 4: After spending all summer in the hot, crowded city, Max longs for some time in the country. (yearns)
- Sentence 5: Sonia is feeling sad, so Martin tells her a joke to improve her spirits. (boost)
- Sentence 6: “I know I can do a better job painting your bike! Please give me another chance,” Terry begged. (pleaded)

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words to explain their decisions? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are they using the words spontaneously and accurately in conversations outside of vocabulary time?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 161 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by having the students act out the word or draw a picture that illustrates the word's meaning.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 9 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 5–8 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2" answer sheet (IA1) on page 165 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 162 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate his understanding of words taught in Weeks 5–8 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 166 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Teacher Note

For more information about the vocabulary assessments, see "About Vocabulary Assessments" in the Assessment Overview of the Assessment Resource Book.

- Recognizing shades of meaning (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Using the suffixes -ly and -er to determine word meanings (review)
- Using the prefix mis- to determine word meanings

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the stories.
- Students review using context to determine word meanings.
- Students review synonyms, shades of meaning, and words with multiple meanings.
- Students review the suffixes -ly and -er and discuss the prefix mis-.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students use discussion prompts to build on one another's thinking.

Introduce Survey, Bellow, and Luscious

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words survey, bellow, and luscious
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Review synonyms
- Review shades of meaning
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

survey (p. 10)

Survey means “look over or inspect something carefully.”

bellow (p. 18)

Bellow means “shout or roar loudly.”

luscious (p. 21)

Luscious means “delicious, or extremely good to eat.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SURVEY

1 Introduce and Define Survey

Briefly review Thunder Cake. Show pages 10–11. Review that the little girl is afraid of an approaching storm and that her grandmother is watching the sky. Read the first sentence on page 10 aloud, emphasizing the word surveyed.

Tell the students that survey is the first word they will learn today, and explain that survey means “look over or inspect something carefully.” Point out that Grandma surveys the black clouds, or looks over or inspects them carefully, to figure out how far away the storm is.

Display word card 49 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word survey.

2 Discuss Surveying

Tell the students that people usually survey things, or look at them carefully, to get information or make a decision.

Discuss as a class:

🗉 Why might a gardener survey his garden?

Materials

- Thunder Cake
- Word card 49 (WA1)
- “Sentences from Thunder Cake” chart (WA2)
- Word card 50 (WA3)
- Word card 51 (WA4)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the question, give a reason a gardener might survey his garden (for example, to see if the plants need watering). Then ask, “Why else might a gardener survey, or inspect, his garden?”

Click 1 on word card 49 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

survey

WA1

PROMPT 1: “A gardener might survey his garden to . . .”

Tell the students that you would like them to survey the classroom to see if they notice anything that needs to be tidied or straightened up. Explain that partners will share what they notice with each other. Then have them silently survey the classroom.

After a few moments, ask:

 Q When you surveyed the classroom, what did you notice that needed to be tidied or straightened up? [Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the next prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When I surveyed the classroom, I noticed that [the books on the shelves in the library center] needed to be straightened up.”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word survey and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE BELLOW

3 Introduce Bellow and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Show pages 18–19 of the book and review that Grandma and the girl count the amount of time between the lightning and the sound of the thunder as they gather ingredients for the cake. Read the following sentences from page 18 aloud, emphasizing the word bellowed:
“CRACKLE, CRACKLE BOOOOOOOM, KA-BOOOOOM, the thunder bellowed. It was dark and I was scared.”

Tell the students that bellow is the next word they will learn today. Display the “Sentences from Thunder Cake” chart (C WA2), and explain that these are the sentences you just read.

Point to the word bellowed and underline it. Tell the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like bellow—by rereading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentence that comes before or after it, to look for clues. Explain that as you read these sentences again, you want the students to think about what the word bellow might mean and which words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of bellow.

Read the sentences aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word bellow might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Sentences from Thunder Cake

CRACKLE, CRACKLE BOOOOOOOM, KA-BOOOOOM, the thunder bellowed. It was dark and I was scared.

PROMPT 1: I think bellow might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word bellow.

WA2

PROMPT 1: “I think bellow might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that bellow means “shout or roar loudly.” Point out that the thunder bellowed, or roared loudly, and scared the girl. Explain that bellow, shout, and roar are synonyms.

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word bellow?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘CRACKLE, CRACKLE BOOOOOOOM, KA-BOOOOOM’ and ‘I was scared’] help me figure out the meaning of the word bellow.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that “CRACKLE, CRACKLE BOOOOOOOM, KA-BOOOOOM” and “I was scared” are clues that help us figure out that if something bellows, it makes a loud noise and can be scary.

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the context sentences where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of bellow from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words bellow, shout, and roar to it.

Technology Tip

To find web-based activities that focus on recognizing shades of meaning, you might search online using the keywords “whiteboard shades of meaning activities.” For more information, view the “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV42).

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words luscious and delicious to it.

ELL Note

Using an illustration to provide visual support for a word’s meaning is especially helpful to English Language Learners, who may struggle to understand a verbal explanation.

Display word card 50 ( WA3) and have the students say the word bellow.

4 Play “Would You Bellow?” and Review Shades of Meaning

Remind the students that when you bellow, you do not simply shout—you roar. Point out that people might shout when they are excited at a sporting event, or they might shout just to get someone’s attention from across a long distance. However, people bellow only when they are very upset, angry, frustrated, frightened, or in a lot of pain. Tell the students that you will describe a situation; then partners will tell each other whether they would bellow in that situation and explain why.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- You reach into your lunch bag, and a big, hairy spider crawls onto your hand.

Ask:

 Q Would you bellow? Why? [Click  on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] bellow because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- You walk into the library and bang your knee painfully against a table.
- Your dog grabs your homework and chews it to pieces.

Point to the word bellow and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE LUSCIOUS

5 Introduce and Define Luscious and Review Synonyms

Show pages 20–21 of Thunder Cake and review that Grandma and the girl continue to gather ingredients for the cake as the storm gets closer. Read page 21 aloud, emphasizing the word luscious.

Tell the students that luscious is the last word they will learn today, and explain that luscious means “delicious, or extremely good to eat.” Explain that luscious and delicious are synonyms.

Tell the students that the tomatoes the girl is picking look luscious, or delicious. Direct the students’ attention to the illustration on page 20, and point out how big, round, and ripe the luscious tomatoes are.

Display word card 51 ( WA4) and have the students say the word luscious.

6 Discuss Luscious Fruit

Tell the students that you think many fruits are luscious, and give a few examples of fruits that you find particularly luscious, or delicious.

You might say:

"I think juicy, ripe peaches are luscious. I think all berries are luscious, particularly sweet strawberries."

Explain that partners will tell each other which fruits they think are luscious. Then a few students will share their partners' thinking with the class.

Ask:

Q What fruits do you think are luscious? [Click ❶ on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I think [mangoes, cherries, and grapes] are luscious."

After partners have talked, click ❷ on word card 51 (WA4) to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their partners' thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "My partner thinks [mangoes and oranges] are luscious."

Point to the word luscious and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Other Meanings of Survey

Write these definitions of survey on a sheet of chart paper or someplace where everyone can see them.

Survey means:

- Look over or inspect something carefully
- Ask people questions to find out about their opinions or behavior
- Measure the size and shape of a piece of land

Teacher Note

Having the students share their partners' thinking encourages them to listen to one another carefully, reinforcing an important social skill.

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker (optional)

Review that many words have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different.

Point to the first definition and review that survey means “look over or inspect something carefully.”

Point to the second definition and explain that survey can also mean “ask people questions to find out about their opinions or behavior.” Explain that you might survey your classmates, or ask them questions, to find out which television shows they watch or for whom they will vote in a class election.

Point to the third definition and explain that survey can also mean “measure the size and shape of a piece of land.” Explain that mapmakers survey land, or measure its size and shape, to make maps. Road builders survey land to determine the best place to build roads.

Remind the students that when they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a scenario, or imaginary situation, that includes the word survey. Partners will decide whether survey means “look over or inspect something carefully,” “ask people questions to find out about their opinions or behavior,” or “measure the size and shape of a piece of land.”

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Between 1815 and 1855, Missouri was surveyed into 6-mile-square sections to form townships.

Point to each definition and ask:

Q In the scenario, does survey mean “look over or inspect something carefully,” “ask people questions to find out about their opinions or behavior,” or “measure the size and shape of a piece of land”? Why? Turn to your partner.

Then write the following prompt where everyone can see it. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Survey means [‘measure the size and shape of a piece of land’] because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Sasha and Miguel survey their classmates to find out about their hobbies.
- Mrs. Yuan surveys the table to make sure that everything is ready for the holiday dinner.

Review Survey, Bellow, and Luscious

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words survey, bellow, and luscious from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another's thinking

Words Reviewed

survey

Survey means "look over or inspect something carefully."

bellow

Bellow means "shout or roar loudly."

luscious

Luscious means "delicious, or extremely good to eat."

ABOUT USING VOCABULARY WORDS IN SENTENCES

Using a vocabulary word in a sentence is an excellent way for the students to demonstrate their understanding of the word. However, creating a sentence that conveys a word's meaning—a sentence that goes beyond "I surveyed" or "It was luscious"—can be challenging. In this lesson, the students are introduced to using words in sentences through an activity called "Create a Sentence." The students begin by completing sentences that you start. In subsequent activities, these sentence starters will gradually disappear, and the students will develop their own sentences, supported by teacher questions as needed. For more information about "Create a Sentence" and other activities, see "Questions and Activities" in the Introduction.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA5). Review the pronunciation and the meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

- Q Which of yesterday's words do you think was especially fun to talk about? Why do you think that?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I think [bellow] was especially fun to talk about because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Introduce the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “Create a Sentence.” Explain that you will tell the students the beginning of a sentence that uses one of yesterday’s vocabulary words. They will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to finish the sentence. Tell the students that before partners do the activity together, they will practice as a class.

Point to the word bellow on the daily review cards (WA5), and review that bellow means “shout or roar loudly.”

Then read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Mr. Sawyer bellowed at the boys because . . .

Ask:

Q How might you complete the sentence? Why might Mr. Sawyer bellow at the boys?

Click 2 to reveal the prompt. Have two or three volunteers use the prompt to share their completed sentence with the class.

PROMPT 2: “Mr. Sawyer bellowed at the boys because . . .”

Then ask the following question:

Q Does it make sense to say “Mr. Sawyer bellowed at the boys because [they were making too much noise and he wanted to sleep]”? Why?

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to complete the sentence, review that people bellow when they are angry, frustrated, frightened, or in pain. Then repeat the questions. If the students continue to struggle, provide an example or two of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “Mr. Sawyer bellowed at the boys because they were riding their bikes over his newly planted lawn” or “Mr. Sawyer bellowed at the boys because a car was coming and he wanted them to watch out.” Then reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

The purpose of the follow-up question is to encourage the students to think more deeply about the word and whether the volunteer’s sentence conveys the word’s meaning.

3 Do the Activity in Pairs

Point to the word luscious on the daily review cards (WA5), and explain that the next sentence uses the word luscious. Review that luscious means “delicious, or extremely good to eat.” Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Jose thinks his lunch is luscious because . . .

Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you complete the sentence? Why might Jose think his lunch is luscious? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Jose thinks his lunch is luscious because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then ask the following question:

Q Does it make sense to say “Jose thinks his lunch is luscious because [the pizza is hot and has lots of cheese and tomato sauce]”? Why?

Point to the word survey on the daily review cards (WA5) and explain that the last sentence uses this word. Review that survey means “look over or inspect something carefully.” Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Jennifer is surveying her closet because . . .

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you complete the sentence? Why might Jennifer survey her closet? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Jennifer is surveying her closet because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then ask the following question:

Q Does it make sense to say “Jennifer is surveying her closet because [she is looking for her favorite sweater]”? Why?

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss Special Foods

Review that the students heard the story Thunder Cake, in which a girl and her grandmother make a special cake that helps the girl get over her

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reminding them that luscious food looks and tastes very good. Then repeat the questions. If the students continue to struggle, provide examples of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “Jose thinks his lunch is luscious because his mom made his favorite sandwich” or “Jose thinks his lunch is luscious because it includes a juicy apple.” Reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reminding them that you might survey, or look over or inspect something carefully, to find out information or make a decision. Then repeat the questions. If the students continue to struggle, provide examples of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “Jennifer is surveying her closet because she wants to find something to wear to the dance” or “Jennifer is surveying her closet because she wants to find things to donate.” Reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Introduce Humble, Rummage, and Mislead

Materials

- The Princess and the Pizza
- Word card 52 (WA6)
- Word card 53 (WA7)
- Word card 54 (WA8)

fear of thunderstorms. Ask the students to think about a special food that their family makes that they like to eat. Then ask:

Q What special food does your family make that you like to eat? What does it taste like?

Have the students use the following prompt to share their thinking with their partners:

PROMPT: “My family makes [salsa]. [Salsa] tastes [very spicy and hot].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the group.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words humble, rummage, and mislead
- Review synonyms
- Review using the suffixes -ly and -er to determine word meanings
- Discuss using the prefix mis- to determine word meanings
- Work in a responsible way
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking

humble (p. 3)

If something is humble, it is plain and simple. If someone is humble, that person is modest or not proud.

rummage (p. 6)

Rummage means “search for something by moving things around.”

mislead

Mislead means “lead someone to believe something that is not true.” If someone misleads you, the person intentionally gives you wrong information or lies to you.

INTRODUCE AND USE HUMBLE

1 Introduce and Define Humble

Briefly review The Princess and the Pizza. Show page 3 and read the first two sentences aloud, emphasizing the word humble. Tell the students that humble is the first word they will learn today. Explain that if something is humble, it is plain and simple; if someone is humble, that person is modest or not proud.

Point out that the king moved his family to a humble, or plain and simple, shack after giving up his throne to become a wood-carver.

Display word card 52 (🗉 WA6) and have the students say the word humble.

2 Play “Is Milton Humble?”

Explain that when we use the word humble to describe a thing such as a house, humble means “plain and simple.” When we use humble to describe a person, humble means “modest or not proud.” Explain that a humble person does not brag or show off.

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is Milton Humble?” Explain that you will describe something our make-believe friend Milton is doing; then partners will decide whether Milton is humble and explain why they think that.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- When Milton is called a hero for rescuing a kitten, he says softly, “I’m not a hero. Anyone would have done what I did, and I had lots of help from Sam.”

Ask:

Q Is Milton humble? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

WA6

PROMPT 1: “Milton [is/is not] humble because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton wins a race and jumps up and down yelling, “I won! I’m the best runner in the world!”
- Milton knows that he is a good artist, but instead of bragging about how well he can draw and paint, he always compliments others on their work.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think it is important to be humble? Why?

Click 2 on word card 52 (WA6) to reveal the prompt.

PROMPT 2: “I think it [is/is not] important to be humble because . . .”

Point to the word humble and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

3 Review the Suffix -ly and Discuss the Word Humbly

Write the word humbly where everyone can see it. Pronounce it, and have the students pronounce it. Point to the suffix -ly and review that the suffix -ly means “in a certain way.”

Remind the students that humble means “plain and simple or modest or not proud.”

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the word humble and the suffix -ly, what do you think the word humbly means? What does it mean if we say someone spoke humbly?

Click 3 on word card 52 (WA6) to reveal the prompt.

PROMPT 3: “Humbly means [‘in a humble way’]. If someone spoke humbly, the person [didn’t brag].”

If necessary, explain that humbly means “in a humble way” or “plainly, simply, or modestly.” If someone spoke humbly, the person spoke in a humble, or modest, way; that person did not brag.

INTRODUCE AND USE RUMMAGE

4 Introduce and Define Rummage

Show pages 6–7 of The Princess and the Pizza and review that Princess Paulina misses “princessing” after her father gives up his throne. Read page 6 aloud, emphasizing the word rummaged.

Tell the students that rummage is the next word they will learn today, and explain that rummage means “search for something by moving things around.”

Point out that the princess rummages, or searches, through her trunk, moving things around to find her princess stuff. Direct the students’

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of -ly words, add the word humbly to it.

attention to the trunk in the illustration on page 6, and point out the clothing Paulina tossed aside as she rummaged to find her gown and tiara.

Display word card 53 (🔊 WA7) and have the students say the word rummage.

5 Talk About Rummaging

Remind the students that when people rummage, they search by moving things around. Point out that people might rummage through closets, drawers, cabinets, boxes, purses, or backpacks. Explain that people sometimes rummage through trash cans looking for things they have thrown away, or they rummage through their refrigerators looking for things to eat.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you rummaged through something? What were you looking for? [Pause; click ❶ on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I rummaged through [my closet] to find [my baseball glove].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then ask:

Q What did [your closet] look like after you rummaged through it?

Click ❷ on word card 53 (WA7) to reveal the prompt.

PROMPT 2: “After I rummaged through it, . . .”

Point to the word rummage and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE MISLEAD

6 Introduce and Define Mislead and Introduce the Prefix mis-

Show pages 18–19 of The Princess and the Pizza. Review that Paulina is supposed to be cooking a feast. When the queen knocks on her door, Paulina tells her that she is taking a nap instead of cooking and that when she finishes her nap she will go home. Read page 19 aloud.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is mislead, and explain that mislead means “lead someone to believe something that is not true.”

Explain that if someone misleads you, the person intentionally gives you wrong information or lies to you. Tell the students that when the queen tells Paulina that the losers of the contest will be beheaded, she is misleading her, or causing her to believe something that is not true.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you rummaged through a drawer, cabinet, or box at home or at school to find something?” or “When have you rummaged through your backpack looking for something?” If the students cannot think of times they rummaged, ask alternative questions such as “When have you seen another person rummaging?” or “When might a person rummage through a closet or drawer?”

Explain that the queen misleads Paulina because she wants her to stay and finish the contest.

Display word card 54 (🗨️ WA8) and have the students say the word mislead. Point to the prefix mis- in the word mislead, and explain that mis- is a prefix. Review that a prefix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the prefix mis- means “wrong or wrongly, or bad or badly” and that when mis- is added to the word lead, it makes the word mislead. Review that, if someone misleads you, the person lies to you or leads you to believe something that is wrong or untrue.

7 Play “Does Milton Mislead Someone?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Does Milton Mislead Someone?” Explain that you will describe something our make-believe friend Milton does to someone; then partners will decide whether Milton misleads the person and explain why they think that.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton has a homework assignment that is due the next day. When Milton’s mom asks him if he has any homework, he tells her he does not, because he wants to watch television instead of studying.

Ask:

Q Does Milton mislead his mom? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Milton [does/does not] mislead his mom because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton and his sister have been invited to a birthday party, but Milton does not want his sister tagging along with him. He tells his sister that the party has been cancelled, and then he goes without her.

Q Does Milton mislead his sister? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Milton [does/does not] mislead his sister because . . .”

- A lady asks Milton for directions. He accidentally tells the lady to turn right when he means to say turn left.

Q Does Milton mislead the lady? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Milton [does/does not] mislead the lady because . . .”

Point to the word mislead and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -er

Show page 3 of The Princess and the Pizza. Remind the students that Princess Paulina’s family moved into a humble, or plain and simple, shack when her father gave up his throne. Point to the shack in the illustration and explain that Paulina’s new home is much humbler than the castle where she used to live. Write the word humble where everyone can see it, and then write the word humbler next to it.

Point to the suffix -er in humbler and remind the students that -er is a suffix that means “more.”

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word humble, what do you think the word humbler means? What do we mean when we say Paulina’s shack is humbler than the castle she lived in before?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think humbler means . . .”

If necessary, explain that humbler means “more humble” or “plainer and simpler.”

Remind the students that knowing the meaning of the suffix -er can help them figure out the meaning of other words that use the suffix. Write the word tastier where everyone can see it, and remind the students that Paulina’s pizza is tastier than any other dish entered into the queen’s contest.

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word tasty, what do you think tastier means? What do we mean when we say the pizza was tastier than any other dish?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think tastier means . . .”

If necessary, explain that tastier means “more tasty, or more delicious.”

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to humble, you drop the e to spell humbler.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -er, add the words humbler and tastier to it. For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to tasty, you change the y to i to spell tastier.

Day 4

Review Humble, Rummage, and Mislead

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words humble, rummage, and mislead from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another's thinking

Words Reviewed

humble

If something is humble, it is plain and simple. If someone is humble, that person is modest or not proud.

rummage

Rummage means "search for something by moving things around."

mislead

Mislead means "lead someone to believe something that is not true." If someone misleads you, the person intentionally gives you wrong information or lies to you.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

- Q Which of yesterday's words might you use when you talk to your family and friends? How might you use the words? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

humble rummage mislead

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when I talk to _____. I might say . . .

1 2 3 4

WA9

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [mislead] when I talk to [my friend Marie]. I might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Remind them that you will tell the students the beginning of a sentence that uses one of yesterday’s vocabulary words. They will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to finish the sentence. Explain that before partners do the activity together, they will practice as a class.

Point to the word rummage on the daily review cards (WA9) and review that rummage means “search for something by moving things around.”

Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Mrs. Wiffenpoof is rummaging through her garbage because . . .

Ask:

Q How might you complete the sentence? Why might Mrs. Wiffenpoof rummage through her garbage?

Click 2 on the daily review cards (WA9) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their completed sentences with the class.

PROMPT 2: “Mrs. Wiffenpoof is rummaging through her garbage because . . .”

Follow up on each response by asking the class to think about the student’s sentence:

Q Does it make sense to say “Mrs. Wiffenpoof is rummaging through her garbage because [she needs a paper she accidentally threw away]”? Why?

3 Do the Activity in Pairs

Point to the word mislead on the daily review cards (WA9), and explain that the next sentence uses the word mislead. Review that mislead means “lead someone to believe something that is not true.”

Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Monica misleads her little brother when she . . .

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you complete the sentence? How might Monica mislead her little brother? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Monica misleads her little brother when she . . .”

ELPS 4.F.viii
Step 2 and Step 3
(all, beginning on page 207 and continuing on to page 209)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to complete the sentence, remind them that a person rummages to find something. Then repeat the questions. If they continue to struggle, provide examples of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “Mrs. Wiffenpoof is rummaging through her garbage because she thinks she accidentally threw away a party invitation” or “Mrs. Wiffenpoof is rummaging through her garbage to find things to recycle.” Reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reminding them that mislead means “cause someone to believe something that is not true.” Then repeat the questions. If they continue to struggle, provide examples of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “Monica misleads her little brother when she tells him that mud pies are tasty” or “Monica misleads her little brother when she tells him it is time for bed when it isn’t.” Then reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reminding them that a humble person does not brag or show off. Then repeat the questions. If they continue to struggle, provide examples of ways the sentence might be completed. For example, say “You can tell that Jin is humble because he didn’t brag when he won a bowling trophy” or “You can tell that Jin is humble because he didn’t show off when he played basketball, even though he is really good.” Reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

If you started an idiom chart, add the expression “pull the wool over someone’s eyes” to it.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their completed sentences with the class.

Then ask:

Q Does it make sense to say “Monica misleads her brother when she [tells him his favorite TV show isn’t on because she wants to watch something else]”? Why?

Point to the word humble on the daily review cards (WA9) and explain that the next sentence uses this word. Review that one meaning of humble is “modest or not proud.” Remind the students that a humble person does not brag or show off.

Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- You can tell that Jin is humble because he . . .

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you complete the sentence? How might you know that Jin is a humble person? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “You can tell that Jin is humble because he . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their completed sentences with the class.

Then ask the following question:

Q Does it make sense to say “You can tell that Jin is humble because [he is a really good student but he doesn’t brag about it. He’s modest]”? Why?

EXTENSION

Discuss the Idiom “Pull the Wool Over Someone’s Eyes”

Review that an idiom is “an expression or phrase that means something different from what it appears to mean.” Explain that the expression “pull the wool over someone’s eyes” is an idiom that means “mislead or deceive someone.” It does not mean that you actually pull a piece of wool over someone’s eyes.

Some people think that this idiom came from a time several hundred years ago when judges and lawyers wore wigs made of wool in court. If a lawyer fooled a judge, it was said that the lawyer “pulled the wool,” meaning the judge’s wig, over the judge’s eyes, blinding the judge from seeing the facts of the case.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another's thinking

Words Reviewed

blotch

A blotch is a "spot or stain."

function

A function is a "purpose, role, or job."

ideal

Ideal means "perfect." Something ideal is the best that it can be.

lethal

Lethal means "deadly, or able to kill."

sensitive

Sensitive means "sharp, quick, or alert." Sensitive also means "easily offended or hurt."

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play "Which Word Am I?"

Tell the students that partners will play the game "Which Word Am I?" Point to the vocabulary words on the ongoing review cards (WA10), and review that you will give a clue about a word and partners will figure out the word. Then you will ask a few pairs to share their thinking with the class.

Begin by reading the following clue aloud twice:

- I'm how you describe weather that is perfect for a picnic.

Ask:

Q Which word am I? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Using the prefix mis- to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing shades of meaning (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the story.
- Students review synonyms and antonyms.
- Students review words with multiple meanings and using the prefix mis-.
- Students recognize shades of meaning.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students analyze why it is important to be caring and responsible.
- Students develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way.

Introduce Ceremony, Desire, and Pelt

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words ceremony, desire, and pelt
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way

ceremony (p. 5)

A ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

desire

Desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.”

pelt (p. 10)

Pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.”

INTRODUCE AND USE CEREMONY

1 Introduce and Define Ceremony

Briefly review Chicken Sunday. Show pages 4–5 and read the first two sentences on page 5 aloud, emphasizing the word ceremony. Tell the students that ceremony is the first word they will learn today, and explain that a ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

Explain that Stewart, Winston, and the narrator are neighbors and good friends. They are such good friends that they want to pretend to be brothers and sister, so they hold a ceremony, or special event, in their backyard that makes them brothers and sister.

Display word card 55 (C WA1) and have the students say the word ceremony.

2 Discuss Ceremonies

Remind the students that a ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.” Explain that a wedding ceremony celebrates the marriage of two people. A graduation ceremony celebrates a student’s graduation from elementary school, middle school, high school, or college. An awards ceremony honors someone who has achieved something or done something important. For example,

Materials

- Chicken Sunday
- Word card 55 (WA1)
- Word card 56 (WA2)
- Word card 57 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of ceremony is ceremonia.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you been to a ceremony to celebrate a graduation? To celebrate a wedding or a wedding anniversary? To celebrate becoming a member of a club or an organization? To give someone an award?” If the students continue to struggle, ask alternative questions such as “When have you seen a ceremony on TV or heard or read about a ceremony?”

students who attend a science fair are often honored by a ceremony at the end of the fair. The ceremony recognizes and celebrates the hard work the students did on their projects.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been to a ceremony? What was the purpose of the ceremony? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ceremony

PROMPT 1: I went to _____. The purpose was to _____.

1 2

WA1

PROMPT 1: “I went to [an awards ceremony at our school last year]. The purpose was to [give awards to volunteers who helped clean up trash around the school].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q What happened at the ceremony?

Click 2 on word card 55 (WA1) to reveal the prompt, and have the volunteer use the prompt to share his or her thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “At the ceremony, . . .”

Point to the word ceremony and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DESIRE

3 Introduce and Define Desire and Review Synonyms

Show pages 4–5 of Chicken Sunday again, and review that the narrator goes to church with Miss Eula, Stewart, and Winston. Read the last two paragraphs on page 5 aloud. Point out that Miss Eula always sighs when she looks in the hat shop window because she wants, or desires, one of the wonderful hats.

Tell the students that desire is the next word they will learn today, and explain that desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.” Point out that want, wish for, and long for are synonyms of desire. Display word card 56 (WA2) and have the students say the word desire.

Show pages 6–7 of the book and point out that the children are enjoying a “Chicken Sunday” dinner with Miss Eula. Tell the students that as you read this part of the story aloud, you want them to listen for what the children desire, or want.

Read the last two paragraphs on page 7 aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q What do the children desire?

Click 1 on word card 56 (WA2) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “The children desire . . .”

If necessary, explain that the children desire the beautiful hat for Miss Eula.

4 Discuss Desiring Something

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something you desire, or want, wish for, or long for? [Pause; click 2 on WA2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I desire . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Do you think you will get what you desire? Why?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt, and have the volunteer use the prompt to share her thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I think I [will/will not] get what I desire because . . .”

Point to the word desire and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE PELT

5 Introduce and Define Pelt

Show pages 10–11 of Chicken Sunday and review that the children decide to go to Mr. Kodinski’s shop to ask if they might sweep or do something else to earn money to buy a hat for Miss Eula. Read the first paragraph on page 10 aloud, emphasizing the word pelted.

Tell the students that pelt is the last word they will learn today, and explain that pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word desire and its synonyms to it. Remind the students that they can use synonyms—like desire—to replace overused words—like want—to make their writing more interesting.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may struggle to understand verbal definitions. Using illustrations in a book to introduce a word provides the students with critical visual support for the word's meaning.

Point out that the bigger boys pelt Mr. Kodinski's back door, or hit it again and again, with eggs. Direct the students' attention to the illustration on page 11 and point out the stains left by the eggs that pelted, or struck, the door.

Display word card 57 ( WA3) and have the students say the word pelt.

6 Play “How Might It Have Happened?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “How Might It Have Happened?” Explain that you will describe a scenario in which an animal or person has been pelted by something. The students will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to tell how the pelting might have happened.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- You leave your dog tied under a tree. When you return, you find that your dog has been pelted with acorns.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss the following:

 Q How might your dog have been pelted with acorns? [Pause; click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “My dog might have been pelted by acorns [when/by] . . .”

Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- You are at a picnic and are suddenly pelted by big drops of water.

 Q How might you have been pelted by water? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I might have been pelted by water [when/by] . . .”

Point to the word pelt and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Another Meaning of Pelt

Remind the students that many words have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Review that in the story pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.” Tell the students that pelt has another meaning. Explain that a pelt is the “skin and fur of an animal.”

Remind the students that when they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word pelt. Partners will decide whether pelt means “strike or hit something again and again” or the “skin and fur of an animal.”

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- An otter pelt has nearly one million hairs per square inch and is very soft and dense.

Ask:

Q In the sentence, does pelt mean “strike or hit something again and again” or the “skin and fur of an animal”? Why? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Pelt means the [‘skin and fur of an animal’] because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- When Shawn and Melody peeked over the wall of their snow fort, they were pelted by snowballs.

Teacher Note

You might write the two definitions where everyone can see them.

Review Ceremony, Desire, and Pelt

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words ceremony, desire, and pelt from Day 1
- Develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way

Words Reviewed

ceremony

A ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

desire

Desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.”

pelt

Pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

Discuss as a class:

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by reminding them that a ceremony is an "event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone." Then ask questions such as "What ceremonies have you attended? What did they celebrate?" Reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Activity "Create a Sentence"

Tell the students that partners will do the activity "Create a Sentence." Review that you will tell the students the beginning of a sentence that uses one of yesterday's vocabulary words. Then they will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to finish the sentence. Explain that before partners do the activity together, they will practice as a class.

Point to the word ceremony on the daily review cards (WA4), and review that a ceremony is an "event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone."

Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- Ted and Martha had a ceremony to celebrate . . .

Ask:

Q How might you complete the sentence? What might their ceremony celebrate?

Click 2 to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their sentences with the class.

PROMPT 2: "Ted and Martha had a ceremony to celebrate . . ."

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say “Ted and Martha had a ceremony to celebrate [their 50th wedding anniversary]”? Why?

3 Do the Activity in Pairs

Point to the word desire on the daily review cards (WA4), and tell the students that the next sentence will use the word desire. Tell them that instead of finishing a sentence you start, you want partners to work together to make up a sentence of their own that uses the word desire.

Review that desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word desire in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“I desire horseback riding lessons, but my parents say I must wait until I’m twelve”]? Why?

Point to the word pelt on the daily review cards (WA4) and explain that the last sentence will use this word. Review that pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word pelt in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“I might pelt someone when I have a snowball fight with my brother”]? Why?

EXTENSION

Discuss the Suffix -able and the Word Desirable

Write the words desire and desirable next to each other where everyone can see them, and pronounce each word. Review that a suffix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the word desirable is formed by adding the suffix -able, which means “worthy of being,” to the word desire. Explain that desirable means “worthy of being desired.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What is something you desire that you must wait until you are older to have?” or “What is something you can do to help you get what you desire?” If the students continue to struggle, provide sentence starters such as “Something I desire but must wait to have is . . .” or “To get what I desire, I can . . .”

Teacher Note

If a pair’s sentence does not convey the meaning of desire, help the students develop the sentence further by asking follow-up questions.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you pelted someone? What did you use to pelt the person? Why did you pelt the person?” and “When have you been pelted? What were you pelted with? Why were you pelted?” If the students continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as, “The rain pelted the . . .” or “I was pelted by . . .” Then repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add -able to the word desire, you drop the e to spell desirable.

Teacher Note

For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Tell the students that we use the word desirable to describe things worth wanting or having. Give some examples of things you consider desirable (for example, having a job you enjoy, good health, a car that runs well, or a comfortable place to live). Then ask the students to name things they think are desirable and explain why they think so.

Day 3

Introduce Misjudge, Glower, and Intricate

Materials

- Chicken Sunday
- Word card 58 (WA5)
- Word card 59 (WA6)
- Word card 60 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words misjudge, glower, and intricate
- Review the prefix mis-
- Review shades of meaning
- Review synonyms and antonyms
- Analyze why it is important to be caring and responsible
- Develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way

Words Taught

misjudge

Misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

glower (p. 18)

Glower means “stare angrily.”

intricate (p. 22)

Intricate means “complicated.”

INTRODUCE AND USE MISJUDGE

1 Introduce and Define Misjudge and Review the Prefix mis-

Show pages 10–11 of Chicken Sunday and review that when the children go to Mr. Kodinski’s shop, they see boys pelting the back door of the shop with eggs. Read the last three paragraphs on page 10 aloud.

Point out that when Mr. Kodinski sees the eggs splattered on his door and the children standing nearby, he forms a wrong opinion about the situation. He wrongly thinks that Stewart, Winston, and the narrator threw the eggs.

Point out that Mr. Kodinski misjudges the situation, and tell the students that misjudge is the first word they will learn today. Explain that misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

Display word card 58 (🗉 WA5) and have the students say the word misjudge. Point to the prefix mis- in the word misjudge and review that mis- is a prefix that means “wrong or wrongly” or “bad or badly.” Remind the students that they discussed the prefix earlier when they learned the word mislead. Explain that when the prefix mis- is added to the word judge, it makes the word misjudge, which means “judge wrongly.”

2 Review the Activity “What Might You Say or Do?”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “What Might You Say or Do?” Remind them that you will describe an imaginary situation. Then they will discuss what they might say or do in that situation. Explain that today partners will use the word misjudge to talk about the imaginary situations.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Your dog races through the house and breaks your mother’s favorite vase. Your mother misjudges the situation and thinks you broke the vase.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q What might you say or do when your mother misjudges the situation?
[Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

misjudge

PROMPT 1: When my mother misjudges the situation,
I might . . .

WA5

PROMPT 1: “When my mother misjudges the situation, I might . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- You think your best friend is making jokes about you behind your back, so you tell her you don’t want to be friends anymore. Later you find out that you misjudged her.

Teacher Note

For an example of how to introduce this activity, see Week 3, Day 2, Step 2.

Q What might you say or do when you find out that you misjudged your friend? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When I find out that I misjudged my friend, I might . . .”

Point to the word misjudge and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE GLOWER

3 Introduce and Define Glower and Review Shades of Meaning

Show pages 18–19 of Chicken Sunday and review that the children decorate eggs for Mr. Kodinski, bring them to his shop, and put them on the counter. Read the first paragraph on page 18 aloud, emphasizing the word glowered.

Tell the students that glower is the next word they will learn today. Explain that glower means almost the same thing as stare, with this important difference—when you glower, you don’t just stare at someone, you stare angrily at them. Explain that when Mr. Kodinski first sees the children, he glowers, or stares angrily, at them. Act out glowering as Mr. Kodinski might have glowered.

Display word card 59 (WA6) and have the students say the word glower.

4 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Ask:

Q Would you glower if someone cut in front of you in the lunch line? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] glower because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Would you glower if pears were the only fruit offered at lunch in the cafeteria? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Q Would you glower if someone misjudged you and thought you had done something wrong when you hadn’t? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word glower and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INTRICATE

5 Introduce and Define Intricate and Review Synonyms

Show pages 22–23 of Chicken Sunday and review that Mr. Kodinski invites the children to set up a table in his shop to sell their eggs. Read page 22 aloud, emphasizing the word intricate.

Tell the students that intricate is the last word they will learn today. Explain that intricate means “complicated” and point out that intricate and complicated are synonyms.

Point out that the people in Mr. Kodinski’s shop think that the designs on the children’s eggs are intricate. Show the illustration on page 23 and direct the students’ attention to the egg in the boy’s hand. Point out the egg’s intricate, or complicated, design.

Display word card 60 (🌐 WA7) and have the students say the word intricate.

6 Review Antonyms and Review the Game “Make a Choice”

Tell the students that the antonym, or opposite, of intricate is simple. Explain that partners will use the words intricate and simple to play the game “Make a Choice.”

Review that you will ask the students a question that gives two choices. Then partners will discuss which one they would choose and explain why.

Ask:

 Q Which would you rather have: a sweater with a simple design or a sweater with an intricate design? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I would rather have a sweater with [a simple/an intricate] design because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following choices:

 Q Which would you rather play: a simple video game or an intricate video game? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I would rather play [a simple/an intricate] video game because . . .”

 Q Which would you rather read: a story with a simple plot or a story with an intricate plot? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of intricate is intrincado/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words intricate and complicated to it.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words intricate and simple to it.

Teacher Note

For an example of how to introduce this activity, see Week 1, Day 2, Step 2.

Teacher Note

In this activity, the students might reasonably choose either option. What is important is that they understand the meaning of the word intricate and are able to explain their choices.

Teacher Note

You might review that the plot of a story is what happens to the characters in the story (the events that make up the story).

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

For a list of common prefixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (cclearninghub.org) to view the “Prefixes” list in the General Resources section.

PROMPT 3: “I would rather read a story with [a simple/an intricate] plot because . . .”

Point to the word intricate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss the Prefix mis-

Title a sheet of chart paper with the words “Words with the Prefix mis-.” Under the title, write The prefix mis- means “wrong or wrongly” or “bad or badly.” Write the word misjudge on the chart.

Remind the students that a prefix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Point to the prefix mis- in misjudge and review that the prefix mis- means “wrong or wrongly” or “bad or badly.” Review that when mis- is added to the word judge, it makes the word misjudge, which means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

Write the word mislead on the chart. Review that the students learned the word mislead earlier and that, if someone misleads you, the person leads you to believe something that is not true, or lies to you.

Write the word misunderstand on the chart. Point out that misunderstand is made up of the word understand and the prefix mis-.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word understand and the prefix mis-, what do you think the word misunderstand means? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think misunderstand means . . .”

If necessary, explain that misunderstand means “understand wrongly.” If you misunderstand what someone says, you fail to understand the person or you understand incorrectly.

Repeat the procedure to discuss the words misuse and mismatch.

Then discuss as a class:

Q What is a word that begins with the prefix mis- and means “read something in the wrong way or incorrectly”? (misread)

Q What is a word that begins with the prefix mis- and means “spell something in the wrong way or incorrectly”? (misspell)

Add the words misread and misspell to the chart. Encourage the students to listen and watch for other words that use the prefix mis-, and add the words to the chart.

Review Misjudge, Glower, and Intricate

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words misjudge, glower, and intricate from Day 3
- Develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way

Words Reviewed

misjudge

Misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

glower

Glower means “stare angrily.”

intricate

Intricate means “complicated.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Point to the word misjudge. Tell the students that partners will use the word misjudge to talk about an imaginary situation. Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Kerri thinks that she is the best speller in the class, but she doesn't do well on the spelling test.

Ask:

Q Has Kerri misjudged her spelling abilities? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA8

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 10 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

PROMPT 1: “Kerri [has/has not] misjudged her spelling abilities because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[glower]

- At the dog show, the judges announce that Mr. McMann’s dog is the grand prize winner.

Q Will Mr. McMann glower at the judges? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Mr. McCann [will/will not] glower at the judges because . . .”

[intricate]

- Mrs. Potter wants to make a dress with the simplest dress pattern she can find.

Q Will Mrs. Potter buy an intricate dress pattern? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Mrs. Potter [will/will not] buy an intricate dress pattern because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that you will tell the students the beginning of a sentence that uses one of the words. They will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to finish the sentence. Tell the students that before partners do the activity together, they will practice as a class.

Point to the word misjudge on the daily review cards (WA8), and review that misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

Read the following sentence starter aloud twice:

- I misjudged a friend when I . . .

Ask:

Q How might you complete the sentence? When have you misjudged a friend?

Click 4 to reveal the prompt, and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their sentences with the class.

PROMPT 4: “I misjudged a friend when I [thought he had taken my backpack and he hadn’t].”

Teacher Note

If the students are struggling, remind them that misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.” Then ask questions such as “When did you think a friend had done something, but your friend hadn’t done it?” or “When did you think a friend had said something, but you were wrong?” Then reread the sentence starter and repeat the questions.

Follow up by asking the following:

Q Does it make sense to say “I misjudged a friend when I [thought he had taken my backpack and he hadn’t]”? Why?

3 Do the Activity in Pairs

Point to the word glower on the daily review cards (WA8), and tell the students that the next sentence will use the word glower. Tell the students that, instead of finishing a sentence you start, you want partners to work together to make up a sentence of their own that uses the word glower.

Review that glower means “stare angrily.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word glower in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs use the prompt to share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“When my brother woke me up, I glowered at him and told him to let me sleep”]? Why?

Point to the word intricate on the daily review cards (WA8) and explain that the last sentence will use this word. Review that intricate means “complicated.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word intricate in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs use the prompt to share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“The directions were intricate and hard to follow”]? Why?

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss a Special Person

Briefly review the story. Remind the students that Miss Eula is very special to the children in the story. She is loving and kind to them. Ask the students to think about someone who is very special to them. Ask:

Q Who is very special to you?

Q Why is this person special?

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “Why might you glower at someone?” or “What might you do if someone glowers at you?” If they continue to struggle, provide sentence starters such as “I glowered at my cousin when he . . .” or “When the librarian glowered at me, I . . .”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What is something that is intricate because it has a lot of details or parts?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The model airplane was intricate because . . .” or “The story’s plot was intricate because . . .” Then repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 9 and 10, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 10 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Have the students use the following prompt to share their thinking with a partner:

PROMPT: “[My cousin Jemma] is special to me because . . .”

Day 5

Ongoing Review

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Develop the skill of agreeing and disagreeing in a caring way

Words Reviewed

edible

Edible means “safe to eat.”

inedible

Inedible means “not edible, or not safe to eat.”

mislead

Mislead means “lead someone to believe something that is not true.”

If someone misleads you, the person intentionally gives you wrong information or lies to you.

nosing around

“Nosing around” means “snooping, or searching in a sneaky way.”

rummage

Rummage means “search for something by moving things around.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

2 Do the Activity “Which Word Goes With?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Which Word Goes With?” Explain that you will write a word where everyone can see it and they are to think about which of the vocabulary words goes with the word you write. Tell the students that the word you write might go with more than one of the vocabulary words. Explain that partners may not always agree and that is fine. What is important is that they explain their thinking.

Write the word wrong where everyone can see it, and read the word aloud. Then point to the ongoing review cards (WA9) and ask:

Q Which of these words do you think goes with wrong? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA9

PROMPT 1: I think _____ goes with wrong because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think [mislead] goes with wrong because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Write the word refrigerator where everyone can see it, and ask:

Q Which of the words do you think goes with refrigerator? Why do you think that? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [edible] goes with refrigerator because . . .”

Use the same procedure to discuss the word secret.

Q Which of the words do you think goes with secret? Why do you think that? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [‘nosing around’] goes with secret because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, think aloud about associations you might make and why. For example, say “I think mislead goes with wrong, because I think it’s wrong to mislead someone. I also think it’s wrong to nose around in someone’s things, so wrong goes with ‘nosing around,’ too. I think inedible can go with wrong, also, because eating something that is inedible would be the wrong thing to do. It could make you sick.”

Teacher Note

If the students have trouble making associations, think aloud about associations you might make or ask questions such as “How might the word edible go with refrigerator? What edible things might you find in a refrigerator?” “How might the idiom ‘nosing around’ go with refrigerator? Why might you nose around in the refrigerator?” “How might the word rummage go with refrigerator? How is rummaging through a refrigerator different from nosing around in it?”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using or explaining any of the words? (Note which words they had difficulty with.)
- Are they using the prefixes and suffixes they have learned to figure out word meanings in their independent reading?

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice through an activity modeled on "Does That Make Sense?" (see Week 2, Day 2, Step 2). For example, if the students are struggling with the word inedible, play "Does That Make Sense?" by providing a scenario that uses the word—such as "Themis thought the roasted vegetables were so inedible that he asked for a large second helping"—and asking the students whether it makes sense and why.

Introduce Inspire, Rickety, and Jittery

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words inspire, rickety, and jittery
- Review synonyms
- Review antonyms
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Taught

inspire (p. 6)

Inspire means “make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it.”

rickety (p. 8)

Rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.”

jittery (p. 23)

Jittery means “worried and nervous.”

INTRODUCE AND USE INSPIRE

1 Introduce and Define Inspire

Briefly review The Bat Boy & His Violin.

Show pages 6–7 and review that Reginald plays the violin and his father manages a baseball team. Read page 6 aloud, emphasizing the word inspire in the last sentence. Tell the students that inspire is the first word they will learn today, and explain that inspire means “make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it.”

Point out that Papa hopes that making Reginald a bat boy will inspire him to become, or make him feel that he wants to become, a ball player.

Display word card 61 (🌐 WA1) and have the students say the word inspire.

2 Talk About Being Inspired

Point out that in the story, the experience of being a bat boy does not inspire Reginald to want to become a baseball player. Yet sometimes in real life, our experiences do inspire us to do things. Provide a few examples of experiences that have inspired you or someone you know.

Materials

- The Bat Boy & His Violin
- Word card 61 (WA1)
- Word card 62 (WA2)
- Word card 63 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of inspire is inspirar.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, ask questions such as “When have you done something that was so much fun that you wanted to do more of it?” “When have you learned about something that was so interesting that you wanted to learn more about it?” or “When have you seen something on TV and thought, ‘That looks like fun. I want to try that?’”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “Who has given you the confidence or desire to try something new or something you didn’t think you could do?” or “Who has made you believe you could do something better or be a better person?”

You might say:

“When I was little, I went to the ballet. It was so beautiful that it inspired me to take ballet lessons. When I was in high school, I helped teach young children in an after-school program. I loved it, and the experience inspired me to become a teacher. My son spent last summer on his grandfather’s farm. He helped take care of the cows and pigs and he loved it. Being around the animals inspired him to want to become a veterinarian.”

Discuss as a class:

Q When have you experienced something that inspired you? What did it inspire you to do?

Click 1 on word card 61 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: _____ inspired me to

1 2

WA1

PROMPT 1: “[Watching soccer on TV] inspired me to [learn to play soccer].”

Explain that people, as well as experiences, can inspire us, and give examples of people who have inspired you.

You might say:

“My mother inspired me. She told me that if I worked hard I could be anything I wanted to be. She gave me confidence and made me want to achieve something with my life. Martin Luther King inspired me. His words and actions made me believe that we could end racial discrimination and inspired me to work to help achieve this.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Who has inspired you? What did that person inspire you to do? [Pause; click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[My third-grade teacher, Ms. Averill,] inspired me [to be a writer].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q How did [Ms. Averill] inspire you [to be a writer]?

Point to the word inspire and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE RICKETY

3 Introduce and Define Rickety

Show pages 8–9 of The Bat Boy & His Violin and review that Reginald is traveling with the Dukes as a bat boy.

Read page 8 aloud, emphasizing the word rickety.

Tell the students that rickety is the next word they will learn today, and explain that rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.” Point out that the old bus is rickety, or in such bad shape that it is likely to break down.

Display word card 62 (🗨️ WA2) and have the students say the word rickety.

4 Play “Rickety or Not Rickety?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Rickety or Not Rickety?” Explain that you will describe something; then partners will discuss whether or not the thing you described is rickety and explain why they think so.

Begin with the following description:

 Q An old, scratched table with a wiggly leg: rickety or not rickety? Why?
[Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “The table [is/is not] rickety because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following:

 Q A rotting fence that is leaning and has broken boards: rickety or not rickety? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The fence [is/is not] rickety because . . .”

 Q A new bridge made with enormous steel cables: rickety or not rickety? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The bridge [is/is not] rickety because . . .”

Discuss as a class:

Q What is something you have seen that is rickety? Why do you say it is rickety?

Click 4 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 4: “I saw a rickety [wheelbarrow in my grandpa’s garage]. It was rickety because . . .”

Point to the word rickety and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE JITTERY

5 Introduce and Define Jittery and Review Synonyms and Antonyms

Show pages 22–23 of The Bat Boy & His Violin and review that the Dukes are about to play an important game. Read the first three paragraphs on page 23 aloud, emphasizing the word jittery. Tell the students that jittery is the last word they will discuss today, and explain that jittery means “worried and nervous.” Display word card 63 (🗉 WA3) and have the students say the word jittery.

Tell the students that the words jittery, worried, and nervous are synonyms. Remind the students that synonyms are “words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.” Explain that the team members are too jittery, or too worried and nervous, to sleep, so Reginald plays his violin to help them relax.

Review that antonyms are “words that have opposite meanings.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What words are antonyms, or opposites, of jittery?

Click 1 on word card 63 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “[Calm] is an antonym of jittery.”

If necessary, explain that calm and relaxed are antonyms of jittery.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words jittery, worried, and nervous to it.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the word jittery and its antonyms, calm and relaxed, to it.

6 Discuss Being Jittery

Tell the students that everyone gets jittery, or worried and nervous, at times. Give examples of things that make you jittery and what helps to calm you.

You might say:

“Making a speech in front of a lot of people makes me jittery. To calm myself, I take deep breaths before I speak. Getting a shot makes me jittery, too. To calm myself, I plan something fun to do as soon as it is over.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What makes you jittery? What helps calm you when you are jittery?
[Pause; click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[The first day of school] makes me jittery. To calm myself, I . . .”

Point to the word jittery, and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Find Objects That Are Rickety or Not Rickety

Review that rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.” Have the students walk around the school or neighborhood and look for objects that are rickety and not rickety. Ask them to notice what each object looks like and think about why it is rickety or not rickety. Have them draw a picture of the objects they find. Then have the students share and discuss their drawings with the group by asking questions such as:

- Q What is one object that you found that [was/was not] rickety?
- Q What did the object look like?
- Q Why did you say the object [was/was not] rickety?

Day 2

Review Inspire, Rickety, and Jittery

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words inspire, rickety, and jittery from Day 1
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Reviewed

inspire

Inspire means "make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it."

rickety

Rickety means "in bad condition and likely to break."

jittery

Jittery means "worried and nervous."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

- Q Would you be jittery if you were crossing a rickety bridge high above a river? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

inspirericketyjittery

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] be jittery if I were crossing a rickety bridge because . . .

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] be jittery if I were crossing a rickety bridge because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, ask:

Q Would you be inspired if someone said that you had a beautiful voice and could be a famous singer one day? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] be inspired because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that partners will work together to create sentences that use the vocabulary words.

Point to the word inspire on the daily review cards (WA4), and review that inspire means “make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word inspire in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“My brother inspired me to try out for a baseball team because he told me I was a good baseball player”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have partners create sentences for rickety and jittery.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to create sentences, ask questions such as “What experience or person has inspired you? How did the person or experience inspire you?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The teacher inspires her students to . . .” or “I am inspired by . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to create sentences using rickety, ask questions such as “What might be rickety? What might happen if it is rickety? What might you do to fix it?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The rickety bed . . .” or “The bike was so rickety that . . .” Then repeat the question.

If the students struggle to create sentences using jittery, ask questions such as “What might cause you to be jittery?” and “When have you seen someone who is jittery? Why was that person jittery?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “I was jittery when . . .” or “The man was jittery because . . .” Then repeat the question.

Day 3

Introduce Launch, Intimidate, and Circulate

Materials

- Teammates
- Word card 64 (WA5)
- Word card 65 (WA6)
- Word card 66 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words launch, intimidate, and circulate
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Discuss using Latin roots to determine word meanings
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

launch (p. 12)

Launch means “start or begin.” Launch also means “throw, hurl, or send off” and “put a boat or ship into the water.”

intimidate (p. 12)

Intimidate means “make someone feel afraid or timid.”

circulate (p. 24)

Circulate means “move or send from person to person or place to place.”

ABOUT USING GREEK AND LATIN ROOTS TO DETERMINE WORD MEANINGS

Research shows that teaching students to use word parts such as prefixes, suffixes, and roots to unlock word meanings can help them become more proficient independent word learners and contribute to their vocabulary growth (White 1989). This week the students discuss the first of three Latin roots they will learn this year, the root circ, meaning “circle or ring.” In subsequent lessons, they will learn the roots man, mani, and manu (“hand”), and the roots vis and vid (“see”). For tables of the roots taught, the words through which they are introduced, and the lessons in which they are taught and reviewed, see Appendix C. For more information about using roots and other word-learning strategies, see “Independent Word-learning Strategies” in the Introduction.

INTRODUCE AND USE LAUNCH

1 Introduce and Define Launch

Briefly review Teammates.

Show pages 12–13 and review that Branch Rickey was looking for a special man to end segregation in baseball. Read the first two sentences on page 12 aloud, emphasizing the word launched. Tell the students that launch is the first word they will learn today, and explain that launch means “start or begin.”

Explain that Branch Rickey launched, or began, a search to find a player in the Negro Leagues who could compete successfully with the white players of the Major Leagues and had the self-confidence to do it.

Display word card 64 (🗉 WA5) and have the students say the word launch.

2 Talk About Launching a Project

Explain that we often use the word launch to talk about starting a project. Give a few examples of projects that you have launched.

You might say:

“Every spring, I launch, or start, a spring-cleaning project in my house. I get all the supplies together, and then I clean each room from top to bottom. During the summer, I launch a reading program for myself by going to the library and checking out at least ten books.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What project have you launched? [Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

launch

PROMPT 1: I launched . . .

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I launched . . .”

3 Discuss Other Meanings of Launch

Remind the students that some words have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Point to the word launch on word card 64 (WA5), and review that in the story launch means “start or begin.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What project have you launched, or begun, at home or at school?” or “What project have you launched, or started, with a family member, a classmate, or a friend?”

Teacher Note

You might review that a ceremony is “an event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of intimidate is intimidar.

Teacher Note

You might point out that the word timid can be found within the word intimidate, and explain that timid means “shy or lacking courage or self-confidence.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word launch? What do we mean when we say a rocket is launched into space?

Click 2 on word card 64 (WA5) to reveal the next prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “When we say a rocket is launched into space, we mean . . .”

If necessary, tell the students that the word launch can also mean “throw, hurl, or send off.” When a rocket is launched, it is sent off into space. Explain that you might launch, or throw or hurl, a rock at a fence.

Tell the students that launch has a third meaning. Explain that launch can also mean “put a boat or ship into the water.” Explain that when a new passenger ship or battleship is built, there is often a ceremony to launch it, or put it into the water for the first time.

Point to the word launch and review the pronunciation and meanings of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INTIMIDATE

4 Introduce and Define Intimidate

Show pages 12–13 of Teammates again, and remind the students that Branch Rickey launched a search for a black player to integrate baseball.

Read the following sentence from page 12 aloud, emphasizing the word intimidate: “He would have to possess the self-control not to fight back when opposing players tried to intimidate or hurt him.”

Tell the students that intimidate is the next word they will learn today, and explain that intimidate means “make someone feel afraid or timid.”

Explain that Branch Rickey was looking for a black player who had the self-control not to fight back if other players tried to intimidate him, or make him feel afraid.

Display word card 65 ( WA6) and have the students say the word intimidate.

5 Play “Would You Be Intimidated?”

Tell the students that all of us face situations that intimidate us. Explain that a scary situation, such as riding a bicycle on a busy street or an encounter with a mean dog, can intimidate us, or make us feel afraid. A new situation, such as the first day at a new school or meeting people for the first time, can also intimidate us, or make us feel timid.

Tell the students that you will describe a situation the students might face. Then partners will discuss whether or not they would feel intimidated and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- You are in a toy store. You pick up a toy from a shelf to get a better look at it. Suddenly, a clerk bellows at you to put the toy back on the shelf.

Ask:

Q Would you be intimidated? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] be intimidated because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to discuss their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- You and your friends are playing a game of basketball at recess. You accidentally bump one of your friends, and she glowers at you.
- You are invited to a birthday party. When you arrive, you realize that you do not know most of the other guests.

Point to the word intimidate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CIRCULATE

6 Introduce and Define Circulate and Introduce the Latin Root circ

Show pages 24–25 of Teammates. Review that many of the Dodgers did not want Jackie Robinson on their team, but Pee Wee Reese thought Jackie should be given a chance to play.

Read page 24 aloud, emphasizing the word circulated.

Tell the students that circulate is the last word they will discuss today. Explain that circulate means “move or send from person to person or place to place.” Point out that Pee Wee’s teammates circulated a petition, or passed the petition from one player to another, to get the players’ signatures.

Display word card 66 (WA7) and have the students say the word circulate.

Point to the letters circ in the word circulate. Tell the students that circ is an example of a root. Explain that a root is a “word or part of a word that is used to make other words.” Explain that many roots come to English from other languages, such as Latin and Greek. Tell the students that circ comes from Latin, the language that was spoken by the people of ancient Rome. Tell the students that in Latin, circ means “circle or ring.” Point to the word circulate, and review that circulate means “move or send from person to person or place to place.” Point out that if you circulate something, you might send or pass it around in a circle.

Teacher Note

You might review that bellow means “shout or roar loudly.”

Teacher Note

You might review that glower means “stare angrily.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of circulate is circular.

Technology Tip

To find web-based activities that focus on using Greek and Latin roots to determine word meanings, you might search online using the keywords “whiteboard Greek and Latin roots activities.” For more information, view the “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV42).

7 Discuss Things That Circulate

Review that we use the word circulate to talk about things that move from place to place or person to person. For example, we say that our blood circulates in our body, or moves from place to place inside us. We say that a fan circulates the air in a room, or moves it from place to place throughout the room.

Discuss as a class:

Q What do we mean when we say that a rumor, or gossip about someone, circulates?

Click 1 on word card 66 (WA7) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “When a rumor circulates, it . . .”

Ask:

Q What do we mean when we say that a sign-up sheet for a class trip is circulating in our classroom? [Click 2 on WA7 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When a sign-up sheet is circulating, it . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What other things might circulate in our classroom?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “[A birthday card for everyone to sign] might circulate in our classroom.”

Point to the word circulate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss the Meanings of Launch

Write the following definitions on a sheet of chart paper or someplace where everyone can see them.

Launch means:

Start or begin

Throw, hurl, or send off

Put a boat or ship into the water

Point to the word launch and remind the students that launch has three different meanings. Point to and review each meaning.

Remind the students that when they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Tell the students that you will read a sentence or story that includes the word launch. Then partners will decide whether launch means “start or begin,” “throw, hurl, or send off,” or “put a boat or ship into the water.”

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- The men ease the sailboat off the trailer and launch it into the sea.

Ask:

Q In the sentence, does launch mean “start or begin,” “throw, hurl, or send off,” or “put a boat or ship into the water”? Why? Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Launch means . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Josh’s team will win if they can just keep the other team from scoring. The quarterback of the other team is running toward the goal line with the ball. Josh takes a deep breath and launches himself at the quarterback.
- Erika wants to earn money to give to a homeless shelter. She decides to launch a business helping other students with their homework.

Day 4

Review Launch, Intimidate, and Circulate

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words launch, intimidate, and circulate from Day 3
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Reviewed

launch

Launch means "start or begin." Launch also means "throw, hurl, or send off" and "put a boat or ship into the water."

intimidate

Intimidate means "make someone feel afraid or timid."

circulate

Circulate means "move or send from person to person or place to place."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words might you use when you talk to your family and friends? How might you use the words?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA8) to reveal the first prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [intimidate] when I talk to [my big brother]. I might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Point to the word launch on the daily review cards (WA8) and ask:

Q What would you do to launch a search for a lost kitten? [Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To launch a search for a lost kitten, I would . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

[intimidate]

Q If you saw a large crowd of people approaching you, would you be intimidated? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] be intimidated because . . .”

[circulate]

Q If you wanted everyone in class to sign a get-well card for a sick classmate, would you circulate the card? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] circulate the card because . . .”

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Explore Proverbs

Write the following proverb where everyone can see it: “Actions speak louder than words.”

Read the proverb aloud. Explain that “actions speak louder than words” is an example of an proverb and that a proverb is a “popular saying that expresses a wise thought.” Explain that the proverb “actions speak louder than words” means that what someone does is more important and meaningful than what that person says. Discuss:

Q In what way do Pee Wee Reese’s actions in Teammates show that “actions speak louder than words”?

If necessary, remind the students that Pee Wee Reese was able to silence the hateful crowd when he put his arm around Jackie Robinson’s

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

---

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

Common interpretations of the proverbs are:

- “The early bird catches the worm.” (“Someone who begins or arrives first has the best chance for success.”)
- “Haste makes waste.” (“Rushing through something may cause you to make mistakes.”)
- “Look before you leap.” (“It is important to know what you are getting into before you take action.”)
- “A stitch in time saves nine.” (“It’s easier to fix problems early than to wait until they become much more serious problems.”)
- “Don’t count your chickens before they hatch.” (“When expecting something good to happen, wait until it actually occurs before making plans or taking action.”) shoulders. This action was more powerful than any words Pee Wee Reese could have said.

Have the students discuss the meanings of the well-known proverbs that follow. You might write them where everyone can see them.

“Actions speak louder than words.”

“The early bird catches the worm.”

“Haste makes waste.”

“Look before you leap.”

“A stitch in time saves nine.”

“Don’t count your chickens before they hatch.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Reviewed*consistent

Consistent means "always the same."

humble

If something is humble, it is plain and simple. If someone is humble, that person is modest or not proud.

keen

Keen means "sharp, quick, or alert."

luscious

Luscious means "delicious, or extremely good to eat."

survey

Survey means "look over or inspect something carefully."

REVIEW THE WORDS*1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🔊 WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Point to the word luscious and ask:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word luscious?

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?”

Point to consistent on the ongoing review cards (WA9), and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word consistent. Partners will discuss whether or not consistent makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Habib wants to train his dog not to bark. He knows he needs to tell her “No!” each time she does. For two weeks, he is consistent about telling her “No!”

Ask:

Q Does consistent make sense in the scenario? Why do you think so? [Click 2 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Consistent] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[humble]

- “I’ll win the contest for sure!” says Donna. “I’m the best sand castle builder ever!” Her friend Derek replies, “You know, you shouldn’t be so humble.”

[keen]

- “I can’t read that street sign from here,” Patricia says to Oscar. “Can you read it? Your eyesight is much more keen than mine.”

[luscious]

- Valerie and her mother are looking at recipes. Valerie says, “Oh, this looks luscious! No one will like it.”

[survey]

- Mr. Kent is concerned about making the bike race safe. He surveys the bike path and removes any objects he finds blocking the track.

Introduce Offer, Rejoice, and Neglect

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words offer, rejoice, and neglect
- Review shades of meaning
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Taught

offer (p. 277)

Offer means "present something for someone to accept or refuse."

rejoice (p. 277)

Rejoice means "show or feel great joy."

neglect (p. 277)

Neglect means "fail to do something or take care of something properly."

INTRODUCE AND USE OFFER

1 Introduce and Define Offer

Briefly review "Demeter and Persephone." Remind the students that Demeter is searching for her daughter Persephone, who has been trapped in the underworld by Hades. If Persephone eats anything that grows in the underworld, she will be trapped there forever. Read the fourth paragraph of the myth aloud, emphasizing the word offered. Tell the students that offer is the first word they will discuss today, and explain that offer means "present something for someone to accept or refuse." Display word card 67 (🌍 WA1) and have the students say the word offer.

Review that Hades offers Persephone twelve pomegranate seeds—he presents the seeds to her to accept or refuse—and that the hungry Persephone accepts Hades' offer and eats six of the seeds.

Provide a few examples of times when you have offered something to someone.

You might say:

"When friends visit me at home, I usually offer them something to eat and drink when they arrive. That means that I prepare something for my friends to eat or drink, which they can accept or refuse. If I notice that a guest is chilly, I offer him a blanket or a sweater to wear. When my sister came to visit last week, I offered to pick her up at the train station. She accepted my offer."

Materials

- "Demeter and Persephone" (see page 277)
- Word card 67 (WA1)
- Word card 68 (WA2)
- Word card 69 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of offer is ofrecer.

Discuss as a class:

Q If you were having a birthday party, what would you offer your guests?

Click 1 on word card 67 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA1

PROMPT 1: “If I were having a birthday party, I would offer my guests [sandwiches and lemonade].”

2 Talk About Offering Help

Explain that people often offer to help one another. Give a few examples of times when someone has offered to help you.

You might say:

“The other day, I was unloading heavy boxes from the trunk of my car, and Mr. Rodriguez offered to help me. I accepted his offer. At the grocery store, the young man who bagged my groceries offered to carry the bag to my car, but I did not accept his offer. The bag wasn’t heavy.”

Ask:

Q When has someone offered to help you, or when have you offered to help someone? [Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[My friend Barry] offered to help me when . . .” or “I offered to help [my friend Barry] when . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word offer and review the meaning and pronunciation of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE REJOICE

3 Introduce and Define Rejoice

Remind the students that Hades offers Persephone pomegranate seeds to eat. Then read the following sentences aloud, emphasizing the word rejoiced: “Persephone was so hungry she ate six of them. Hades rejoiced! Persephone would now have to stay in the underworld.”

Tell the students that rejoice is the next word they will discuss today, and explain that rejoice means “show or feel great joy.” Explain that Hades rejoices, or feels great joy, because Persephone has eaten something grown in Hades. Now she must stay in the underworld.

Display word card 68 (🗨️ WA2) and have the students say the word rejoice.

4 Review Shades of Meaning and Play “Would You Rejoice?”

Explain that when people rejoice, they do not feel just a little happy or sort of happy—they feel very, very happy. People who are rejoicing sometimes jump up and down or whoop and holler or hug one another because they are filled with great joy. Provide examples of times when you have rejoiced or have seen others rejoice.

You might say:

“When my daughter was born, my husband and I rejoiced. We were overwhelmed with joy and shared the wonderful news with everyone. On TV, you often see fans at a football game rejoicing when their team scores a touchdown. The fans shout and jump up and down because they are so excited and happy.”

Tell the students that they will now play a game called “Would You Rejoice?” Explain that you will describe a scenario; then partners will discuss whether or not they would rejoice and explain why.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Your parents tell you that your family will visit your favorite amusement park this summer.

Ask:

Q Would you rejoice? Why or why not? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] rejoice because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following scenarios:

- Your friend invites you to go bowling with her family on Saturday.
- You find out that you are going to have a new baby brother or sister.

Point to the word rejoice and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE NEGLECT

5 Introduce and Define Neglect

Remind the students that Zeus, the king of the gods, wants to help Persephone and her mother Demeter. Then read the final two paragraphs of “Demeter and Persephone” aloud, emphasizing the word neglect.

Tell the students that neglect is the last word they will discuss today, and explain that neglect means “fail to do something or take care of something properly.” Remind the students that Demeter was the goddess who made the grass grow, the flowers bloom, and the fruit ripen. Demeter is so sad when Persephone is in the underworld that she neglects, or fails to do, her work. As a result, the weather turns cold, leaves fall from the trees, and the grass turns brown.

Display word card 69 (🗉 WA3) and have the students say the word neglect.

6 Discuss Neglect

Explain that people sometimes neglect something, or fail to do or take care of something properly, because they are very busy or they simply forget. Provide a few examples of times when you have neglected to do something.

You might say:

“I neglected to buy more breakfast cereal when I went to the market yesterday. I knew that I was running out of it, but I forgot when I was at the store. I also neglected to send a birthday card to my cousin last week. We’re very close, but I forgot that it was her birthday until five days later. I neglected to take care of my garden last spring. I had really hoped to grow lots of flowers and vegetables, but I never had time to take care of it.”

Ask:

Q When have you neglected to do something? Why did you neglect it?
[Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I neglected to [feed my dog] because . . .”

Point to the word neglect and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Offer, Rejoice, and Neglect

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words offer, rejoice, and neglect from Day 1
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners' thinking

Words Reviewed

offer

Offer means "present something for someone to accept or refuse."

rejoice

Rejoice means "show or feel great joy."

neglect

Neglect means "fail to do something or take care of something properly."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🎧 WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q If a friend were having trouble with her math homework, would you offer to help? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

- Daily review activity (WA5)

PROMPT 1: “If a friend were having trouble with her math homework, I [would/would not] offer to help because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, ask the following questions:

Q If your mother told you that you were going to the eye doctor, would you rejoice? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] rejoice because . . .”

PROMPT 3: “If my friend neglected to wish me a happy birthday, I [would/would not] be upset because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Introduce the Game “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Finish the Story.” Explain that you will read a story, leaving off the last word. Then partners will decide which word they think makes the best ending for the story. Tell the students that before partners play the game with one another, they will play the game as a class.

Display the daily review activity (🔊 WA5) and begin as follows:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first story (see WA5 on the next page). Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.

- Story 1: I told my sister that I'd be happy to help her fix her bike. She said she doesn't need any help, and she declined my _____.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the three word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word makes the best ending for the story? Why?

Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.

PROMPT: “I think [offer] makes the best ending because . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

Teacher Note

Each story on the ongoing review activity (WA5) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

- Story 2: After my brother was born, my grandparents came to visit. "Isn't it wonderful," said Grandpa, "that we can all be together and _____."

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which of yesterday's words makes the best ending for the story? Why?
 [Click 2 again and point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think [rejoice] makes the best ending because . . ."

Have partners use the prompt to share their thinking. After a few moments, signal for the students' attention and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 2 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.
4. Click 2 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 3: Dora was careful to feed her fish and clean their tank every day. She knew taking care of her goldfish wasn't something she could _____. (neglect)
- Story 4: "Our team should be very proud to have won the championship," said Coach Harris. "We'll get together on Saturday to celebrate and _____." (rejoice)

Day 3

Introduce Mysterious, Enraged, and Compromise

Materials

- “Co-chin and the Spirits” (see pages 278–279)
- Word card 70 (WA6)
- Word card 71 (WA7)
- “Sentences from ‘Co-chin and the Spirits’” chart (WA8)
- Word card 72 (WA9)

Teacher Note

You might point out that the word mysterious is related to the word mystery and explain that if something seems mysterious, its explanation is a mystery, or something that you cannot explain.

- Story 5: Samira tried to remember to check her mailbox for letters every day, but she often forgot. She was so busy at school that getting the mail just became something she would _____. (neglect)
- Story 6: “Everything at our store is half off this week only!” says the commercial on the radio. “Act now to accept this incredible _____!” (offer)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words mysterious, enraged, and compromise
- Review shades of meaning
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners’ thinking

Words Taught

mysterious (p. 278)

Mysterious means “very hard to explain or understand.”

enraged (p. 278)

Enraged means “furious or very angry.”

compromise (p. 279)

Compromise means “settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted.”

INTRODUCE AND USE MYSTERIOUS

1 Introduce and Define Mysterious

Briefly review “Co-chin and the Spirits.” Remind the students that Co-chin meets a stranger one day while gathering food. She tells the stranger that her people are starving because no corn will grow. Then read aloud the fourth paragraph of “Co-chin and the Spirits,” emphasizing the word mysterious.

Tell the students that mysterious is the first word they will discuss today. Explain that mysterious means “very hard to explain or understand.” Point out that Co-chin does not know where the man is from or where he got the corn that he gives her. To Co-chin, the man seems mysterious, or hard to explain or understand.

Display word card 70 (🌐 WA6) and have the students say the word mysterious.

2 Play “That’s Mysterious”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “That’s Mysterious.” Explain that you will describe a few mysterious scenarios; then partners will discuss what might explain the mystery.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- One morning you pick up your running shoes to put them on. You discover that your shoelaces have disappeared.

Ask:

Q What might explain this mysterious situation? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

mysterious

PROMPT 1: I think this mysterious situation could be explained by . . .

WA6

PROMPT 1: “I think this mysterious situation could be explained by . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- You are walking down the street. Suddenly, all the dogs on your block start barking.

Point to the word mysterious and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of mysterious is misterioso/a.

INTRODUCE AND USE ENRAGED

3 Introduce and Define Enraged and Review Shades of Meaning

Remind the students that the mysterious man that Co-chin meets is Miochin, the Spirit of Summer. Miochin brings Co-chin more corn, and together they go to Co-chin's village, where she lives with her husband Shakok. Read the following lines from the myth aloud, emphasizing the word enraged: "When Shakok caught sight of Miochin, he was enraged. Shakok challenged Miochin to fight for Co-chin's hand in marriage."

Tell the students that enraged is the next word they will learn today, and explain that enraged means "furious or very angry." Explain that when someone is enraged, the person is not just a little angry or kind of upset; he feels very, very angry. Explain that an enraged person is so angry that he might not be able to control his anger and may behave dangerously. Point out that in the myth, Shakok becomes enraged when he sees his wife with Miochin. He is so angry that he challenges Miochin to a fight.

Display word card 71 (🗨️ WA7) and have the students say the word enraged.

4 Play "Is Milton Enraged?"

Tell the students that they will now play a game called "Is Milton Enraged?" Explain that you will describe a few situations involving our make-believe fourth-grade friend Milton, and partners will decide whether Milton is enraged or not.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Milton's little brother spills his juice and accidentally ruins Milton's favorite book. Milton's face turns red. He leaps from his chair, stomps his feet, and shouts, "No! No! No!"

Ask:

Q Is Milton enraged or not enraged? Why do you think so? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I think Milton [is/is not] enraged because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss one or both of the following scenarios:

- Milton's team loses the soccer game. Milton is disappointed. He says, "We've got another game next week—I know we'll win then."
- Milton can't find his favorite sweatshirt. He looks everywhere, becomes angrier and angrier, and finally loses his temper completely. He jumps up and down in a fury and shouts, "Someone stole my sweatshirt!"

Teacher Note

You might point out that the word enraged is related to the word rage, and explain that rage means "extreme anger."

Point to the word enraged and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE COMPROMISE

5 Introduce Compromise and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Remind the students that Shakok and Miochin fight. Shakok stops the fight and tells Miochin that Co-chin can be his wife. Read the final paragraph of the myth aloud, emphasizing the word compromised.

Tell the students that compromise is the last word they will learn today. Display the “Sentences from ‘Co-chin and the Spirits’” chart (C WA8) and explain that these are the sentences you just read.

Point to the word compromised and underline it. Tell the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like compromise—by reading the sentence that includes the word or the sentence that comes before or after it, to look for clues. Tell the students that as you read the first two sentences of the paragraph again, you want the students to think about what the word compromise might mean and which words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of compromise.

Read the first two sentences aloud again. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word compromise might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Sentences from “Co-chin and the Spirits”

Then the two spirits compromised. Each agreed to rule the land for half of the year—Shakok would rule for six months during the winter and Miochin would rule for six months during the summer.

PROMPT 1: I think compromise might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word compromise.

WA8

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of compromise from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

PROMPT 1: “I think compromise might mean . . .

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that compromise means “settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted.”

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word compromise?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘each agreed’ and ‘half’] help me figure out the meaning of the word compromise.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that the words “each agreed” and “half” are clues that help us figure out that compromise means “settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted.”

Display word card 72 (🟢 WA9) and have the students say the word compromise.

6 Discuss Times the Students Have Compromised

Explain that people often compromise to settle a disagreement, with each person giving up something he or she wanted. Provide some examples of times when you have compromised.

You might say:

“I compromised with my brother when we ordered a pizza last week. I wanted to order one with sausage and mushrooms, and he wanted anchovies and spinach. We compromised and ordered a pizza with mushrooms and spinach. I also compromised when my daughter and I were listening to the radio in the car yesterday. I wanted to listen to the news, and she wanted to listen to music. We compromised and listened to the news for 15 minutes, and then we listened to her music.”

Ask:

Q When have you compromised? What did you agree to give up, and what did you get in return? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I compromised when I . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then use the same procedure to discuss the following:

Q After you compromised, were you happy with the agreement you reached? Why or why not? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “After I compromised, I [was/was not] happy because . . .”

Point to the word compromise and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Mysterious, Enraged, and Compromise

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words mysterious, enraged, and compromise from Day 3
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners’ thinking

Words Reviewed

mysterious

Mysterious means “very hard to explain or understand.”

enraged

Enraged means “furious or very angry.”

compromise

Compromise means “settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use if you were writing a story about two kingdoms in a faraway land? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA10 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA10)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 12 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student mysterious

compromise

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____. I might write . . .

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [mysterious]. I might write . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Which Word Goes With?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Which Word Goes With?”

Remind the students that you will write a word where everyone can see it; then partners will think about which of yesterday’s vocabulary words goes with the word you write. Explain that the word you write might go with more than one of the vocabulary words. Tell the students that partners may not always agree and that is fine. What is important is that they explain why they think the words go together.

Write the word disagreement where everyone can see it and read the word aloud.

Point to the daily review cards (WA10) and use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q Which of yesterday’s words do you think goes with disagreement? Why do you think that? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, think aloud about associations you might make and why. For example, say “I think enraged goes with disagreement, because if a disagreement becomes serious, people might get angry or even enraged. I also think compromise goes with disagreement, because two people might try to compromise if they don’t agree about something.”

PROMPT 2: “I think [enraged] goes with disagreement because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Write the word stranger where everyone can see it and read the word aloud. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words do you think goes with stranger? Why do you think that? [Pause; click to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [mysterious] goes with stranger because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 11 and 12, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 12 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Use discussion prompts to build on their partners’ thinking

Words Reviewed

ceremony

A ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

flee

Flee means “run away from danger.”

glower

Glower means “stare angrily.”

misjudge

Misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation.”

resemble

Resemble means “look or be like something or someone else.”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think Will Happen?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think Will Happen?” Point to the ongoing review cards (WA11), and explain that you will describe a situation that uses one of this week’s review words. Partners will use their imaginations and what they know about the words to discuss what they think will happen next.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Reggie is upset when he finds out that he is not tall enough to go on a ride at the amusement park. He glowers at the ride operator.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q What do you think will happen after Reggie glowers at the operator? [Pause; click 2 on WA11 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “After Reggie glowers at the operator, . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Tammy is excited because she gets to be the flower girl at her sister's wedding. When she sees all the people at the ceremony, she begins to get nervous.

Q What do you think will happen to Tammy at the ceremony? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

- A grizzly bear tries to get honey from a beehive in a tree, but a swarm of bees surrounds the bear. The bear hurries down the tree and tries to flee.

Q What do you think will happen when the bear tries to flee? [Pause; click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: "When the bear tries to flee, . . ."

- Angela is upset because she thinks her friend Russ has taken her backpack. She then finds out that she has misjudged the situation.

Q What do you think will happen when Angela realizes that she has misjudged Russ? [Pause; click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: "When Angela realizes that she has misjudged Russ, she . . ."

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' predictions indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words to explain their predictions? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Do the students enjoy learning and using new words?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 170 of the Assessment Resource Book.

(continues)

Assessment Notes (continued)

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write stories in which they use the word.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 13 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 9-12 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3" answer sheet (IA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 171 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 9-12 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 175 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Myth

Demeter and Persephone

Demeter was the goddess who made the grass grow, the flowers bloom, and the fruit ripen. She had a beautiful daughter named Persephone, whom she loved dearly.

Hades, the god of the underworld, fell in love with the beautiful Persephone. Hades decided that he would take her to the underworld and keep her there. He caused the ground to open up beneath Persephone, and she fell from this world into the world below. She badly wanted to return to her mother and the world above. Though hungry, Persephone ate nothing at all. She knew of Hades's rule: anyone who visited the underworld and ate something that grew there must live in the underworld forever.

Meanwhile, Demeter searched everywhere for her missing daughter. She grew so sad and worried that she stopped looking after the grass, the flowers, and the fruit. The air grew cold. All the plants on Earth turned brown and the leaves fell from the trees. While Demeter wept for her lost daughter, people on Earth began to starve.

Zeus, the king of the gods, saw what was happening and decided to help Demeter. He commanded Hades to return Persephone to her mother. But as Persephone left the underworld, Hades offered her twelve pomegranate seeds to eat. Persephone was so hungry she ate six of them. Hades rejoiced! Persephone would now have to stay in the underworld.

But Zeus knew that Earth needed Persephone. He decided that because she had eaten six seeds, she would remain in the underworld for six months of the year. She would live on Earth with Demeter for the other six months.

During the six months when Persephone lives in the underworld, Demeter mourns for her and neglects her work. The air grows cold. The leaves fall and the grass turns brown. But when Persephone returns, flowers blossom and the world turns green again.

That is why we have summer and winter.

Myth

Co-chin and the Spirits

The Acoma chief had a beautiful daughter named Co-chin who was the wife of Shakok, the Spirit of Winter. As was the custom, Shakok came to live with Co-chin's people. Soon after Shakok's arrival in the village, the air grew cold. Snow covered the land like a soft white blanket. The corn died, and the people had to eat cactus to survive.

One day Co-chin was gathering cactus for her people to eat. She was eating a cactus leaf when she saw a curious-looking stranger walking toward her, carrying an ear of corn. He wore bright yellow and green clothes and had flowers on his shoes. He approached Co-chin and asked, "What are you eating?"

Co-chin sadly explained, "My people are starving because no corn will grow, and we have nothing to eat but cactus." The man listened. He gave Co-chin his ear of corn to eat, and then he asked her to wait while he went to get a bundle of corn for her to take home.

The mysterious man walked south and soon returned with a large bundle of corn for her. Co-chin asked, "Where did you find this corn?" The man told her that he had brought it from his home in the far south where plenty of corn grows all year.

"I would love to see your home where it is warm and where so much corn still grows," said Co-chin. The man then told her that he was Miochin, the Spirit of Summer.

"Your husband, Shakok, the Spirit of Winter, would be angry if I took you away," he said.

Co-chin replied, "I do not care for Shakok. Ever since he arrived in my village, no corn has grown and my people starve."

"Take this bundle of corn home," Miochin said. "Tomorrow I will bring you more."

Co-chin brought the corn home and fed all her people. The next day she met Miochin again. He brought more corn for her, and together they took the corn to Co-chin's village.

When Shakok caught sight of Miochin, he was enraged. Shakok challenged Miochin to fight for Co-chin's hand in marriage. Miochin agreed, for he had fallen in love with Co-chin.

(continues)

Co-chin and the Spirits

The fight was fierce. Shakok's weapons of snow, sleet, and hail were melted by Miochin's fire. Finally, Shakok called a stop to the fight. He said, "Miochin, you are the winner. Co-chin is free to be your wife."

Then the two spirits compromised. Each agreed to rule the land for half of the year—Shakok would rule for six months during the winter and Miochin would rule for six months during the summer. That is why it is cold for half the year and warm during the other half.

Day 1

Introduce Wise, Unwise, and Greedy

Materials

- “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter” (Pushing Up the Sky, pages 11–23)
- Word card 73 (WA1)
- Word card 74 (WA2)
- “Sentences from ‘Gluskabe and Old Man Winter’” chart (WA3)
- Word card 75 (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words wise, unwise, and greedy
- Review antonyms
- Review using context to determine word meanings

wise (p. 14)

Wise means “having or showing good judgment and intelligence.” Wise people make good decisions and give good advice, often because they have a lot of experience.

unwise

Unwise means “not having or showing good judgment and intelligence.”

greedy (p. 16)

A greedy person is selfish and wants more of something than he or she needs.

INTRODUCE AND USE WISE

1 Introduce and Define Wise

Briefly review “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter.”

Show pages 14–15 and remind the students that Scene I of the play takes place in the wigwam of Grandmother Woodchuck. Read the following sentence from the Narrator’s dialogue near the top of page 14 aloud, emphasizing the word wise: “Long ago Gluskabe . . . lived with his grandmother, Woodchuck, who was old and very wise.”

Tell the students that wise is the first word they will learn today, and explain that wise means “having or showing good judgment and intelligence.” Explain that Grandmother Woodchuck knows many things that Gluskabe does not know. Gluskabe trusts Grandmother Woodchuck’s judgment and listens to her advice because she is so wise.

Display word card 73 (WA1) and have the students say the word wise.

2 Talk About Wise People

Explain that people who are wise are not just intelligent. Wise people make good decisions and give good advice, usually because they have a lot of experience. Point out that we often use the word wise when we describe older people, because they have lived a long time and have learned many things that younger people do not yet know.

Provide a few examples of people who you consider wise, and explain why you think of them this way.

You might say:

"My grandmother was very wise. She was incredibly smart and clever. She also had been through a lot in her life, and she always gave good advice. My uncle Henry is wise. He is a very smart man, and he always shows good judgment and knows what to do."

Then use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss the following:

Q Who is someone you know or someone you have learned about that you think is wise? Why do you think that person is wise? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA1

PROMPT 1: "I think [my great aunt Emma] is wise because . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3 Talk About Wise Decisions

Explain that we also use the word wise to describe actions or decisions that show intelligence or good judgment. Provide a few examples of wise actions that you or others have taken.

You might say:

"It was a wise decision when my family canceled our trip to the mountains. We all wanted to go skiing, but the weatherperson predicted a dangerous snowstorm, and it showed good judgment not to risk getting stuck in the blizzard. It was also a wise decision when my daughter stayed home to study for her math test instead of going out with a friend. She's very good at math, but it showed good judgment to be as prepared as possible for the test."

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you made a decision that showed good judgment?” or “Has someone you know made a decision or taken an action that showed great intelligence?”

Teacher Note

You might tell the students that the word unwise is formed by adding the prefix un-, which means “not,” to the beginning of the word wise.

If you started an antonym chart, add the words wise and unwise to the chart.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you or others you know made a wise decision? How was the decision wise? [Pause; click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[My sister] made a wise decision when [she took German classes a year before moving to Germany]. The decision was wise because [she could speak the language by the time she moved there].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word wise and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE UNWISE

4 Introduce and Define Unwise and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the second word they will learn today is unwise, and explain that unwise means “not having or showing good judgment and intelligence.” Point out that the words wise and unwise are antonyms, and remind the students that antonyms are “words with opposite meanings.”

Explain that an unwise action or decision is one that does not show good judgment or intelligence. Provide a few examples of unwise actions or decisions.

You might say:

“It was unwise of me not to bring a raincoat or an umbrella when I went to Seattle last month. I know that it rains a lot there, but I didn’t show good judgment when I packed for the trip. It would be unwise if I drove to the mountains without putting gas in my car. This would not be a wise decision because I might run out of gas far away from any gas stations.”

Display word card 74 (WA2) and have the students say the word unwise.

5 Play “Wise or Unwise?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Wise or Unwise?” Explain that you will describe a situation in which someone makes a decision; then partners will discuss whether the decision is wise or unwise and explain why they think that.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Jenna wants to go ice skating, but the ice on the pond looks a little thin in places. She decides not to skate on the pond.

Q Is this decision wise or unwise? Why? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think this decision is [wise/unwise] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Roger hasn’t used his tree house in three years, and he can see that some of the wood has rotted. He decides to climb up into the tree house anyway.
- Shilpi has a science report due in two weeks. She decides to start working on it early to make sure she does a good job.

Point to the word unwise and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE GREEDY

6 Introduce Greedy and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Review pages 16–17 of “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter” and remind the students that Gluskabe plans to visit the Summer Land people and bring summer back with him. Read aloud Grandmother Woodchuck’s last lines of dialogue at the bottom of page 16, emphasizing the word greedy: “Grandson, the Summer Land people are strange people. Each of them has one eye. They are also greedy. They do not want to share the warm weather. It will be dangerous.”

Tell the students that greedy is the last word they will learn today.

Display the “Sentences from ‘Gluskabe and Old Man Winter’” chart (WA3) and explain that these are two of the sentences you just read.

Point to the word greedy on WA3 and underline it. Remind the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like greedy—by reading the sentence that includes the word or the sentences that come before or after it to look for clues. Tell the students that as you read the sentences again, you want them to think about what the word greedy might mean and which words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of greedy.

Read the sentences aloud again. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word greedy might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of greedy from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

Sentences from “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter”

Grandson, the Summer Land people are strange people. Each of them has one eye. They are also greedy. They do not want to share the warm weather. It will be dangerous.

PROMPT 1: I think greedy might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word greedy.

PROMPT 1: “I think greedy might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that a greedy person is selfish and wants more of something than he or she needs.

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word greedy?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘do not want to share’] help me figure out the meaning of the word greedy.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that the phrase “do not want to share” is a clue that helps us figure out that a greedy person is selfish and wants more of something than he or she needs.

Display word card 75 (🍊 WA4) and have the students say the word greedy.

7 Play “Is That Person Greedy?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is That Person Greedy?” Explain that you will describe the way someone behaves; then partners will discuss whether that person is greedy or not greedy and explain why they think so.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Elsie has two oranges. She decides to peel the oranges, divide them in half, and share them evenly with three of her friends.

Q Is Elsie greedy? Why or why not? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think [Elsie] [is/is not] greedy because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Danny’s parents buy a glass of lemonade for him to share with his little brother, Chucky. Before Chucky has had any, Danny drinks the entire glass.

Q Is Danny greedy? Why or why not? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

- Cindy’s neighbor gives her seven dollars for raking the leaves in his yard. Cindy gives four dollars to her brother, Seamus, because he helped.

Q Is Cindy greedy? Why or why not? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word greedy, and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Wise, Unwise, and Greedy

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words wise, unwise, and greedy from Day 1

Words Reviewed

wise

Wise means “having or showing good judgment and intelligence.” Wise people make good decisions and give good advice, often because they have a lot of experience.

unwise

Unwise means “not having or showing good judgment and intelligence.”

greedy

A greedy person is selfish and wants more of something than he or she needs.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA5). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words might you use if you were telling a story about a boy who keeps making bad decisions and getting into trouble? How might you use the word?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA5) to reveal the first prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

wise unwise greedy

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when describing a boy who keeps making bad decisions. I might say . . .

1 2

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [unwise] when describing a boy who keeps making bad decisions. I might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Which Word Am I?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Which Word Am I?” Point to the vocabulary words on the daily review cards (WA5), and review that you will give a clue about one of these words; partners will figure out which word they think the clue is about and discuss why they think that.

Begin by reading the following clue aloud twice:

- I'm how you might describe a friend who has more pretzels than he can eat, but won't share any with you.

Ask:

Q Which word am I? Why do you think that? [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the word is [greedy] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following clues:

- I'm how you might describe a decision you make that you later wish you could take back. (unwise)
- I'm how you might describe someone who has lived a long time and has learned a lot from her many experiences. (wise)

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that an experience is “something you have done, seen, or taken part in.”

Introduce Pursue, Deceive, and Crouch

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words pursue, deceive, and crouch
- Review synonyms
- Confirm that they understand another person’s thinking by repeating back what they heard

Materials

- “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter” (Pushing Up the Sky, pages 11–23)
- Word card 76 (WA6)
- Word card 77 (WA7)
- Word card 78 (WA8)

Words Taught

pursue

Pursue means “follow or chase someone in order to catch him or her.”

deceive

Deceive means “trick or fool someone into believing something that isn’t true.”

crouch (p. 23)

When you crouch, you bend your legs and lower your body close to the ground.

INTRODUCE AND USE PURSUE

1 Introduce and Define Pursue

Briefly review “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter.”

Show pages 20–21 and review that after Gluskabe grabs one of the summersticks, the four crows chase after him. Point to the illustration on page 21 and point out that the crow is pursuing Gluskabe. Tell the students that pursue is the first word they will discuss today, and explain that pursue means “follow or chase someone in order to catch him or her.”

Display word card 76 (WA6) and have the students say the word pursue.

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Tell the students that you will describe an imaginary situation; then partners will discuss whether they would pursue someone or something in that situation and explain why.

Begin with the following:

-  Q If you were playing tag with your friends and you were “it,” would you pursue them? Why or why not? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA6

pursue

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] pursue _____ because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] pursue [my friends] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following:

-  Q If you were a police officer and saw someone drive through a red light without stopping, would you pursue the driver? Why or why not? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.
- Q If you were playing catch in your friend’s front yard and the ball went into the busy street, would you pursue it? Why or why not? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.
- Q If you were walking your dog and it ran away from you, would you pursue it? Why or why not? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word pursue and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DECEIVE

3 Introduce and Define Deceive and Review Synonyms

Show pages 20–21 again, point to the ball in the illustration on page 21, and tell the students that Gluskabe deceives the crows into thinking that they have grabbed his head. Tell the students that deceive is the next word they will discuss today. Explain that deceive means “trick or fool someone into believing something that isn’t true.” Tell the students that the words deceive, trick, and fool are synonyms. Remind them that synonyms are “words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.”

Display word card 77 (🗨️ WA7) and have the students say the word deceive.

4 Play “Was Milton Deceived?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Was Milton Deceived?” Explain that you will describe a situation involving our make-believe friend Milton. Then partners will decide whether Milton has been deceived or not and explain why they think that.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Milton’s aunt tells him that they are going to the toy store. When their car pulls into the parking lot, Milton looks up and sees that they are at the dress shop instead.

Ask:

Q Was Milton deceived? Why or why not? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think Milton [was/was not] deceived because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton’s brother offers to help Milton rake the leaves in the backyard after school. As promised, the brother meets Milton in the yard at 4:00 p.m. with a rake in his hand.
- Milton’s neighbor says that she wants to borrow his telescope for only a day, and then she refuses to give the telescope back to Milton.

Point to the word deceive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words deceive, trick, and fool to the chart.

INTRODUCE AND USE CROUCH

5 Introduce and Define Crouch

Show pages 22–23 of “Gluskabe and Old Man Winter,” and review that Gluskabe defeats Old Man Winter and brings back warm weather. Read the first two sentences of the stage directions at the top of page 23 aloud, emphasizing the word crouching: “The blanket walls of Old Man Winter’s wigwam collapse. Old Man Winter stands up and walks away as swiftly as he can, crouching down as if getting smaller.”

Tell the students that crouch is the last word they will discuss today. Explain that when you crouch, you bend your legs and lower your body close to the ground. Point to Old Man Winter in the illustration on page 23. Point out that Old Man Winter crouches as he hurries away, which makes him seem smaller.

Display word card 78 (🗨️ WA8) and have the students say the word crouch.

6 Act Out and Discuss Crouching

Remind the students that when people crouch, they bend their legs and lower their bodies close to the ground. Tell the students that people might crouch when they want to see something small on the ground, such as a flower or a bug. People might also crouch to pet an animal, such as a kitten or a puppy. People also crouch when they want to hide from other people.

Ask a volunteer to help you demonstrate crouching as if she is looking at a bug on the ground. Then discuss:

Q What did you see [Trina] do when she crouched?

Click ❶ on word card 78 (WA8) to reveal the first prompt, and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “When [Trina] crouched, she . . .”

Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss the following:

Q When have you crouched? Why did you crouch? [Pause; click ❷ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I crouched when [I played hide-and-seek and hid behind the piano].”

After partners have talked, click ❸ on word card 78 (WA8) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their partners’ thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “My partner said that she crouched when she [played hide-and-seek and hid behind the piano].”

Point to the word crouch and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you crouched to look at something on the ground?” “When have you crouched while playing a game?” and “When have you crouched to pet an animal or talk to a small child?” If the students struggle to recall when they have crouched, ask questions such as “When might you crouch?” and “Why might you have to crouch?”

Review Pursue, Deceive, and Crouch

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words pursue, deceive, and crouch from Day 3

Words Reviewed

pursue

Pursue means “follow or chase someone in order to catch him or her.”

deceive

Deceive means “trick or fool someone into believing something that isn’t true.”

crouch

When you crouch, you bend your legs and lower your body close to the ground.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

- Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use if you were describing a game of hide-and-seek? How might you use the word?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA9) to reveal the first prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

pursuedeceivecrouch

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when describing a game of hide-and-seek. I might say . . .

1234

WA9

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

ELL Note

You might explain that hide-and-seek is a game in which one player closes her eyes while other players hide. She then attempts to find the hidden players. In most versions of the game, the last person to be found wins.

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [pursue] when describing a game of hide-and-seek. I might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Tell the students that you will ask some “Would You?” questions that include the vocabulary words, and then partners will discuss their thinking.

Begin with the following question:

 Q If you were trying to reach for something sitting on a very high shelf, would you crouch? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] crouch because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

 Q If you knew someone had deceived you, would you rejoice? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “If I knew someone had deceived me, I [would/would not] rejoice because . . .”

 Q If your hat blew off in the wind, would you pursue it? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] pursue it because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that rejoice means “show or feel great joy.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier

Words Reviewed

bellow

Bellow means “shout or roar loudly.”

desire

Desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.”

launch

Launch means “start or begin.” Launch also means “throw, hurl, or send off” and “put a boat or ship into the water.”

pelt

Pelt means “strike or hit something again and again.”

rickety

Rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind them that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes one of the vocabulary words. Then the students will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to make up an ending for the story.

Display the “Tell Me a Story” chart (🗉 WA11) and show the first story and its accompanying prompt.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA11)

Teacher Note

For an example of how to introduce this activity, see Week 1, Day 1, Step 5.

Tell Me a Story

In the middle of the night, Mr. Williams walks barefoot into the kitchen to get a drink. Just as he opens the refrigerator, he steps on a toy soldier his son left on the floor. Mr. Williams hops up and down on one foot, bellowing . . .

PROMPT 1: Mr. Williams hops up and down on one foot, bellowing . . .

Point to the word bellow and tell the students that the first story uses the word bellow. Then read story 1 aloud slowly and clearly.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you finish the story? What does Mr. Williams bellow? [Pause; point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Mr. Williams hops up and down on one foot, bellowing . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

[desire]

- Story 2: Leila daydreams about what her life will be like when she grows up. She sighs and thinks, “More than anything, I desire . . .”

Q How might you finish the story? What might Leila desire for her life? [Pause; point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “She sighs and thinks, ‘More than anything, I desire . . .’”

[rickety]

- Story 3: Benny and Bessie are exploring in the woods. They come to a rickety bridge over a stream. Benny warns, “It’s not safe,” but Bessie scrambles onto the bridge anyway. When she crosses the rickety bridge . . .

Q How might you finish the story? What happens when Bessie crosses the rickety bridge? [Pause; point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “When she crosses the rickety bridge . . .”

[pelt]

- Story 4: Mac is playing in his snow-covered backyard. He hears giggling behind him, and then Mac is pelted by . . .

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of bellow and think aloud about an ending. For example, say “Mr. Williams bellows, ‘Ow! Ow! My poor foot!’” Then reread the beginning of the story and repeat the questions.

Q How might you finish the story? What is Mac pelted by? Who pelts him?
[Pause; point to prompt 4.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Mac is pelted by [snowballs that his friends threw].”

[launch]

- Story 5: “Oh, no!” Steve shouts. “The cat just ran through the gate!” Steve races after the cat. He launches himself into the air to catch her and . . .

Q How might you finish the story? What happens when Steve launches himself at the cat? [Pause; point to prompt 5.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “He launches himself into the air to catch her and . . .”

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the story.
- Students review synonyms.
- Students review the suffix -ly.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students analyze why it is important to be respectful.
- Students develop the skill of using clarifying questions and statements.

These materials can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Secure, Thoroughly, and Indignantly

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words secure, thoroughly, and indignantly
- Review synonyms
- Review the suffix -ly
- Use clarifying questions and statements

secure (p. 2)

Secure means “fasten or tie firmly.” Secure also means “safe and protected.”

thoroughly (p. 5)

Thoroughly means “in a thorough way, or completely.”

indignantly (p. 5)

Indignantly means “in an indignant way, or in a way that shows you are angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SECURE

1 Introduce and Define Secure and Review Synonyms

Briefly review Hurricane.

Show pages 2–3 and review that David and George are looking for their cat, Hannibal. Read page 2 aloud, emphasizing the word securing in the last sentence.

Tell the students that secure is the first word they will discuss today. Explain that secure means “fasten or tie firmly” and that fasten and tie are synonyms of secure.

Explain that Father is securing, or firmly tying down, things in the yard that might blow away in the hurricane. For example, if there is a swing set in the yard, Father might secure it by firmly tying it to a tree or fence post.

Display word card 79 (🌐 WA1) and have the students say the word secure.

2 Discuss Another Meaning of Secure

Explain that, like some other words the students have discussed this year, the word secure has more than one meaning. Review that in the

Materials

- Word card 79 (WA1)
- Word card 80 (WA2)
- Word card 81 (WA3)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word secure and its synonyms to it. Remind the students that they can use synonyms, like secure and fasten, in their writing to replace overused words, like tie, and make their writing more interesting.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of secure is seguro/a.

story, secure means “fasten or tie firmly.” Explain that secure has another meaning; it also means “safe and protected.”

Show pages 8–9 of Hurricane. Review that the lights have gone out and the family gathers by the fireplace as the storm blows outside. Explain that as you read this part of the story aloud, you want the students to listen for the words that tell them that the family feels secure, or safe and protected.

Read page 8 aloud.

Discuss as a class:

Q How do you know that the family feels secure?

Click 1 on word card 79 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA1

PROMPT 1: “I know that the family feels secure because . . .”

If necessary, explain that the words “it felt safe with everybody together” tell us that the family feels secure.

Point to the illustration on page 9, and explain that the illustration also shows that the family is feeling secure. Point out that they are warm and dry inside the house—safe and protected from the storm—and they do not look worried or scared.

3 Talk More About the Meanings of Secure

Remind the students that when they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a scenario, or imaginary situation, that includes the word secure. Partners will decide whether secure means “fasten or tie firmly” or “safe and protected” and explain why they think that.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may struggle to understand verbal definitions. Using illustrations in a book to discuss a word provides the students with critical visual support for the word’s meaning.

Teacher Note

You might write the two definitions where everyone can see them.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Robin's puppy, Buster, is lost and scared. Suddenly Buster hears Robin calling him. He runs to her, and she scoops him up. Buster snuggles in her arms, happy and secure.

Ask:

Q In the scenario, does secure mean “fasten or tie firmly” or “safe and protected”? Why? [Click 2 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Secure means . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- Robin's puppy, Buster, got out of the backyard because the gate flew open. She asks her dad to help her secure the gate so that it won't fly open again.

Point to the word secure and review the pronunciation and meanings of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE THOROUGHLY

4 Introduce and Define Thoroughly and Review Synonyms

Show pages 4–5 of Hurricane and review that the boys are worried about Hannibal. Read the first paragraph on page 5 aloud, emphasizing the word thoroughly.

Tell the students that thoroughly is the next word they will discuss. Explain that thoroughly means “completely” and that thoroughly and completely are synonyms.

Explain that Hannibal is thoroughly, or completely, wet.

Display word card 80 (C WA2) and have the students say the word thoroughly.

5 Review the Suffix -ly

Point to the word thorough in thoroughly on word card 80 (WA2), and explain that thorough means “complete.” Point to the suffix -ly, and review that -ly is a suffix that means “in a certain way.” Explain that when the suffix -ly is added to the end of thorough, it makes the new word thoroughly, which means “in a thorough way, or completely.”

6 Discuss Doing Something Thoroughly

Explain that when you do something thoroughly, you do it completely and carefully. You do not take shortcuts or leave anything undone. For example, if you do a homework assignment thoroughly, you do the

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words thoroughly and completely to it.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that a suffix is a “letter or a group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word” and that they discussed the suffix -ly when they learned the word consistently.

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word thoroughly to it.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What would you do with any clothing that is lying about? Games and toys on the floor? Trash on the floor or under the bed? Dirt or dust on the floor or furniture?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of indignantly is indignamente.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word indignantly to it.

assignment carefully and completely. You take your time and do the best work you can do. If you clean up thoroughly after an art project, you put away the markers, paints, paper, and other materials you used. You pick up any trash and clean up any paint or glue you spilled.

Ask the students to imagine that a friend is coming for a sleepover and you want to clean your bedroom thoroughly.

Ask:

Q What would you do to clean your bedroom thoroughly? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “To clean my bedroom thoroughly, I would . . .”

Point to the word thoroughly and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INDIGNANTLY

7 Introduce and Define Indignantly and Review the Suffix -ly

Show pages 4–5 of Hurricane again. Reread the following sentence, this time emphasizing the word indignantly: “A thoroughly wet Hannibal peered indignantly back at them.”

Tell the students that indignantly is the last word they will discuss today. Explain that indignantly means “in a way that shows you are angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.”

Explain that Hannibal looks at the boys indignantly, or in a way that shows he is angry, because he thinks it is unfair that he is outside getting soaking wet in the storm.

Display word card 81 (WA3) and have the students say the word indignantly.

Point to the word indignant in indignantly on word card 81 (WA3). Tell the students that indignant means “angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.” Point to the suffix -ly and review that -ly means “in a certain way.” Explain that when the suffix -ly is added to the end of indignant, it makes the new word indignantly, which means “in an indignant way, or in a way that shows you are angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.”

8 Discuss Feeling Indignant

Explain that all of us feel indignant at times, especially when we think we have been treated unfairly. Give a few examples of times when you or someone you know has felt indignant.

You might say:

“At the grocery store, I was waiting my turn in the checkout line. When I finally got to the clerk, she said, ‘Sorry. I’m going to lunch. Please go to another checkout line.’ I felt indignant, or angry, because I was being treated unfairly. Last weekend my six-year-old nephew stayed with me while his parents were out of town. When I told my nephew that he had to go to bed at eight o’clock, he was indignant. He thought it was unfair. He stays up until nine or ten at home and was insulted because he felt he was being treated like a baby. I explained that at my house the rules are different, but he was still angry because he thought I was being unreasonable.”

Discuss as a class:

Q When have you felt indignant? Why did you feel that way?

Click 1 on word card 81 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I felt indignant when [I couldn’t watch my favorite television show] because . . .”

9 Talk About Responding Indignantly

Explain that when something makes you indignant, you might respond indignantly, or in a way that shows you are insulted or angry. Model responding indignantly, using an indignant tone of voice and wearing an indignant expression.

You might say:

“When the grocery store clerk told me to go to another line, I indignantly said, ‘I’ve been waiting in line for 15 minutes. You should have told me you were closing to go to lunch when you saw me get into line!’”

Tell the students that you will read a scenario in which our make-believe fourth-grade friend Milton feels indignant. Then partners will discuss the indignant ways Milton might respond.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- At family dinners, Milton always had to sit with the little children at the children’s table. Now that he is ten, he hopes and expects to sit with the adults. At the next family dinner, Milton’s aunt tells him to take a seat at the children’s table. Milton indignantly says . . .

Q What does Milton say indignantly? How does he say it indignantly? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Milton indignantly says . . .”

Point to the word indignantly and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -ly and Discuss the Word Securely

Remind the students that a suffix is “a letter or a group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word.” Review that the suffix -ly means “in a certain way.” Review that the students learned the word thoroughly, which means “in a thorough way, or completely”; and the word indignantly, which means “in an indignant way, or in a way that shows you are angry because you feel you have been insulted or unfairly treated.”

Remind the students that secure means “fasten or tie firmly.”

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the meaning of the word secure and the suffix -ly, what do you think the word securely means? Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think securely means . . .”

If necessary, explain that securely means “in a secure way, or in a way that is fastened or tied firmly.”

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word securely to it. For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Day 2

Review Secure, Thoroughly, and Indignantly

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words secure, thoroughly, and indignantly from Day 1
- Use clarifying questions and statements

Words Reviewed

secure

Secure means “fasten or tie firmly.” Secure also means “safe and protected.”

thoroughly

-  Q How would you secure your dog if it kept running away? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “To secure my dog, I would . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Might You Say or Do?”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “What Might You Say or Do?” Remind them that you will describe a situation, and then partners will discuss what they might say or do in that situation.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud:

- Your father asks you to wash his car thoroughly.

Ask:

 Q What might you do to wash the car thoroughly? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “To wash the car thoroughly, I might . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- You have been practicing and are a much improved soccer player. Even so, the coach will not let you play, and you are indignant.

 Q What might you say to the coach to let her know you are indignant? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “To let the coach know I am indignant, I might say . . .”

- You are lost in a huge department store and do not feel secure.

 Q What might you say or do to feel secure? [Click 7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 7: “To feel secure, I might . . .”

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words sustain, serene, and stalk
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Use clarifying questions and statements

Words Taught

sustain (p. 7)

Sustain means “keep going for a long period of time.”

serene

Serene means “calm or peaceful.”

stalk (p. 17)

Stalk means “follow or hunt a person or animal quietly and secretly.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SUSTAIN

1 Introduce and Define Sustain

Show pages 6–7 of Hurricane and review that David and George are talking about the hurricane that is approaching. Read the first two paragraphs on page 7 aloud, emphasizing the word sustained.

Tell the students that sustain is the first word they will discuss today and explain that sustain means “keep going for a long period of time.”

Review that the radio said the hurricane would bring “sustained winds of fifty miles per hour.” Explain that “sustained winds” means that the hurricane’s winds would sustain, or keep blowing, at fifty miles per hour for a long period of time. Explain that winds that sustain, or blow continuously, at that speed can cause a lot of damage.

Display word card 82 (🗉 WA5) and have the students say the word sustain.

2 Discuss the Word Sustain

Explain that we often use the word sustain to talk about something we need to continue for a long period of time. For example, when you visit a library, you need to sustain silence, or keep being silent, until you leave the library. In that way, you do not disturb people who are reading. If you are listening to a story being read aloud, you need to sustain your attention, or keep paying attention to the story, so that you will not miss anything.

Explain that if something sustains your interest, it keeps you interested for a long time.

Ask:

-  Q What kind of [books/movies] sustain your interest? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Mysteries] sustain my interest because . . .”

Discuss as a class:

- Q Could you sustain a conversation with someone for two hours? Why?

Click 2 on word card 82 (WA5) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I [could/could not] sustain a conversation for two hours because . . .”

Point to the word sustain and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SERENE

3 Introduce and Define Serene and Review Synonyms

Show pages 10–11 and review that David and George talk about the hurricane after they go to bed. Read the first two paragraphs of page 10 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is serene. Explain that serene means “calm or peaceful” and that serene, calm, and peaceful are synonyms.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words serene, calm, and peaceful to it.

Explain that it is serene, or very calm and peaceful, inside the eye, or the center, of the hurricane.

Display word card 83 (🌍 WA6) and have the students say the word serene.

4 Play “Serene or Not Serene?”

Tell the students that partners will play “Serene or Not Serene?” You will describe something, and partners will discuss whether it is serene or not serene and why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- A meadow full of wildflowers blowing gently in the wind

Ask:

 Q Is the meadow serene or not serene? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I think the meadow [is/is not] serene because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following:

- A roaring river overflowing its banks, washing away houses and stores

 Q Is the river serene or not serene? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think the river [is/is not] serene because . . .”

- A baby’s room where soft music is playing and the baby is sleeping

 Q Is the baby’s room serene or not serene? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think the baby’s room [is/is not] serene because . . .”

Point to the word serene and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE STALK

5 Introduce and Define Stalk

Show pages 16–17 and review that after the storm the boys discover an elm tree lying across the neighbor’s lawn. The boys begin playing safari in the tree.

Read the sentence on pages 16–17 aloud, emphasizing the word stalking.

Tell the students that stalk is the last word they will learn today, and explain that stalk means “follow or hunt a person or animal quietly and secretly.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of serene is sereno/a.

ELL Note

You or a volunteer might act out how David and George looked as they stalked the leopard.

Point out that the boys are pretending to stalk a leopard, or hunt it by sneaking up on it quietly and secretly.

Display word card 84 ( WA7) and have the students say the word stalk.

6 Discuss Animals That Stalk

Explain that members of the cat family stalk their prey, or hunt their prey quietly and secretly.

Ask:

Q What does a cat look like when it stalks a mouse? How does it move?
[Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “When a cat stalks a mouse, it . . .”

Explain that people who hunt stalk wild animals such as deer and wild boar.

Discuss as a class:

Q What might a hunter do if she were stalking a deer? Why?

Click 2 on word card 84 (WA7) to reveal the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “If a hunter were stalking a deer, she might . . .”

Point to the word stalk and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Another Meaning of Stalk

Remind the students that many words have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Write the word stalk where everyone can see it, and review that in the story stalk means “follow or hunt a person or animal quietly and secretly.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word stalk? What do we mean when we talk about the stalk of a plant?

Write the following prompts where everyone can see them. Have one or two volunteers use the prompts to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Stalk also means [‘stem’]. The stalk of a plant is [the stem].”

If necessary, explain that a stalk is “the stem of a plant.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words sustain, serene, and stalk from Day 3
- Use clarifying questions and statements

Words Reviewed

sustain

Sustain means “keep going for a long period of time.”

serene

Serene means “calm or peaceful.”

stalk

Stalk means “follow or hunt a person or animal quietly and secretly.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use if you were writing a story about a trip to the mountains? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 14 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think About?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think About?” Point to yesterday’s words on the daily review cards (WA8), and explain that the students are to notice what they think about, or what pictures come into their minds, when they hear each of the words.

Point to the word sustain, and explain that sustain is the first word the students will think about.

Model the activity by closing your eyes and describing what comes into your mind when you hear the word sustain.

You might say:

“When I hear the word sustain, I think about a holiday tradition in my family. We make special spaghetti every New Year’s Eve. We have sustained this tradition, or kept it going, for more than 100 years. When I hear the word sustain, I also think about talking with my best friend. We can sustain a conversation for hours because we enjoy talking with each other and have a lot to share.”

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word sustain? What picture comes into your mind? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When I hear the word sustain, I think about [practicing the piano] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word serene and explain that serene is the next word the students will think about.

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word serene? What picture comes into your mind? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, support them by asking questions such as “What is a tradition you sustain in your family?” “When have you sustained something, or kept something going, even though it was hard?” and “What is something that sustains your interest or attention?”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, call for their attention and describe what comes into your mind when you hear the word serene. For example, close your eyes and say “When I hear the word serene, I picture a beach with palm trees and gentle winds because that is a place where I feel peaceful and calm.” If the students continue to struggle, support them by asking questions such as “What place comes into your mind when you think about the word serene?” and “When do you feel serene?”

PROMPT 3: “When I hear the word serene, I think about [a pond in the early morning] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word stalk? What picture comes into your mind? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “When I hear the word stalk, I think about . . .”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 13 and 14, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 14 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to the word neglect on the ongoing review cards (WA9), and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word neglect. Partners will discuss whether or not neglect makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Niva neglects her math homework. She is very careful and double-checks each problem to make sure she has the answer right.

Ask:

Q Does neglect make sense in the scenario? Why do you think so? [Click ❷ on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Neglect] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[circulate]

- It is getting stuffy in the room, so Joan turns on the fan to circulate the air.

[inspire]

- Stephanie goes to a piano concert. After the concert, she announces, "I am so inspired. I will never play the piano."

[intimidate]

- Mr. Wilson is intimidated by the instructions for setting up his computer. He worries that he will not understand the instructions and won't get his computer running.

[intricate]

- Tito thinks the intricate pattern of his mother's sweater is lovely. He says, "It is so simple, yet so beautiful."

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words correctly? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are the students using the independent word-learning strategies they have learned as they read independently?

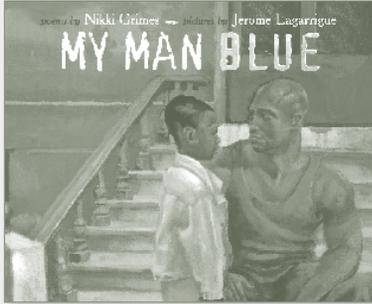

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 178 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences. For example, if the students are struggling with the word inspire, ask questions such as "When has someone inspired you?" and "What did that person inspire you to do?"

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the poems.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review synonyms.
- Students review the suffix -ly.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students develop the skill of including everyone in and contributing to group work.

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the “Week 15 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Rugged, Conceal, and Amiable

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words rugged, conceal, and amiable
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Review synonyms
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

rugged (p. 4)

Rugged means “tough and strong.” Rugged also means “having a rough, uneven surface” and “harsh or difficult.”

conceal

Conceal means “hide.”

amiable

Amiable means “friendly and pleasant.”

INTRODUCE AND USE RUGGED

1 Introduce and Define Rugged

Briefly review the book My Man Blue.

Show the poem “My Man Blue” on pages 4–5, and read the title of the poem aloud. Review that the boy Damon describes Blue in this poem.

Read the first six lines of the poem aloud, ending with the line “Of midnight black,” and emphasize the word rugged. Tell the students that rugged is the first word they will learn today. Explain that rugged means “tough and strong.”

Point out that Damon thinks Blue is a “rugged dude,” or a man who is tough and strong, and that Blue’s “leathery skin” and black clothes make him appear rugged to some people.

Display word card 85 (C WA1) and have the students say the word rugged.

2 Discuss Rugged People and Materials

Give an example of someone you know or a character in a book or movie who you think is rugged, and explain why you think the person is rugged.

Materials

- “My Man Blue” from My Man Blue (page 4)
- Word card 85 (WA1)
- Word card 86 (WA2)
- “Tell Me a Story” chart (WA3)
- Word card 87 (WA4)

You might say:

"My grandfather was rugged. All his life he worked on a farm, and farm work made him tough and strong. He could work from sunup to sundown, plowing fields and lifting bales of hay and sacks of grain. I think [name an action hero] is a rugged movie character. He's strong and tough enough to handle any bad guy that comes his way."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q Who do you know who is rugged, or what movie or book character do you think is rugged? Why do you say that person is rugged? [Pause; click ❶ on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

rugged

PROMPT 1: _____ is rugged because . . .

❶ ❷ ❸

WA1

PROMPT 1: "[My uncle] is rugged because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that building and clothing materials can also be rugged, or tough and strong. For example, buildings and bridges are built with rugged materials like iron, steel, concrete, and brick. Builders use these tough materials so that structures will be strong and safe. Winter boots and coats are often made of rugged leather. Tough, strong leather provides protection from wet, cold weather.

Explain that bicycles are made with rugged materials like metal and rubber.

Discuss as a class:

Q Why do you think bicycles are made with rugged materials?

Click ❷ to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "Bicycles are made with rugged materials because . . ."

3 Discuss Other Meanings of Rugged

Write the following definitions of rugged where everyone can see them.

Rugged means:
Tough and strong
Having a rough, uneven surface
Harsh or difficult

Direct the students' attention to the definitions, and explain that rugged has more than one meaning. Point to the first definition, and review that in the poem rugged means "tough and strong."

Point to the second definition, and explain that rugged can also mean "having a rough, uneven surface." Explain that rugged land is rocky and hilly and not easy to travel over. Tell the students that if they rode a bicycle down a rugged mountain trail, it would be a very bumpy ride.

Point to the last definition, and tell the students that rugged can also mean "harsh or difficult." Explain that the earliest European settlers in North America led rugged, or harsh or difficult, lives. They had to work very hard to survive, and they faced many hardships, including starvation and disease.

Tell the students that you will read a sentence that includes the word rugged. Partners will decide whether rugged means "tough and strong," "having a rough, uneven surface," or "harsh or difficult."

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- The explorers survived the rugged winter by eating berries and burning whatever wood they could find.

Ask:

Q In the sentence, does rugged mean "tough and strong," "having a rough, uneven surface," or "harsh or difficult"? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: "Rugged means . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Mr. Thompson's car broke down when he tried to drive over the rugged mountain road.
- Enrique has a rugged toy truck that does not break, even when he plays roughly with it.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that a hardship is "something that causes difficulty, pain, or suffering."

Point to the word rugged and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CONCEAL

4 Introduce and Define Conceal and Review Synonyms

Show pages 4–5 of My Man Blue again, and read the rest of the poem aloud, beginning with the line “Then there’s his teeth.” Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is conceal. Explain that conceal means “hide” and tell the students that conceal and hide are synonyms.

Explain that Blue looks rugged and fierce on the outside, but his tough appearance conceals, or hides, the gentle man he is inside.

Display word card 86 (🎧 WA2) and have the students say the word conceal.

Discuss as a class:

Q If you skinned your knee while playing kickball, how might you conceal your injury?

Click 1 on word card 86 (WA2) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “If I skinned my knee while playing kickball, I might conceal my injury by [putting a bandage on it and wearing long pants].”

5 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Explain that you will tell them the beginning of a story that uses the word conceal. Then the students will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to make up an ending for the story.

Display the “Tell Me a Story” chart (🎧 WA3) and show story 1 and its accompanying prompt. Then read the story aloud, slowly and clearly.

- Story 1: Abe peered around the tree and saw his friend. He quickly concealed himself behind the tree because . . .

Tell Me a Story

Abe peered around the tree and saw his friend. He quickly concealed himself behind the tree because . . .

PROMPT 1: Abe quickly concealed himself behind the tree because . . .

WA3

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words conceal and hide to it.

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, write each story where everyone can see it.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you finish the story? Why does Abe conceal himself behind the tree? [Pause; point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Abe quickly concealed himself behind the tree because . . .”

Show the next story and prompt, and repeat the procedure to discuss the following story:

- Story 2: Gita broke her mother’s favorite lamp. When her mother asked her what happened to the lamp, Gita concealed the truth by saying . . .

Q How might you finish the story? What did Gita say to conceal the truth? [Pause; point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To conceal the truth, Gita said . . .”

Point to the word conceal and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE AMIABLE

6 Introduce and Define Amiable and Review Synonyms

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is amiable. Explain that amiable means “friendly and pleasant” and that amiable, friendly, and pleasant are synonyms.

Explain that some people think Blue is a frightening, unfriendly person because of his rugged appearance, but he is actually an amiable, or friendly and pleasant, person. His tough appearance conceals his amiable nature.

Display word card 87 (🌐 WA4) and have the students say the word amiable.

7 Discuss Amiable People

Explain that amiable people are kind and easy to talk to. Give an example of an amiable person you know.

You might say:

“I think our school secretary, Mrs. Allan, is an amiable person. Every morning she greets me with a smile and a friendly hello. She’s kind to everyone. I’ve never heard her speak crossly to a teacher or student.”

Ask:

Q Who is an amiable person you know? Why do you say that person is amiable? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[My Uncle Lee] is amiable. I say he is amiable because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty thinking of an ending, review the definition of conceal and think aloud about an ending. For example, say “Abe quickly concealed himself behind the tree because he was playing hide-and-seek with his friend, and he didn’t want to be found.” Then reread the beginning of the story and repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words amiable, friendly, and pleasant to it.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of amiable is amable.

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Discuss as a class:

Q When we have a classroom visitor, what can we do to be amiable hosts?

Click 2 on word card 87 (WA4) to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “To be amiable hosts, we can . . .”

Point to the word amiable and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Play “Synonym Match”

Write these words in two columns on a sheet of chart paper or someplace where everyone can see them.

amiable	want
desire	tie
intricate	peaceful
secure	friendly
serene	complicated

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Synonym Match.” Point to the words in column 1, and explain that these are vocabulary words the students have learned.

Point to the words in column 2, and explain that these are synonyms of the words in column 1, or words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing as the vocabulary words. Explain that partners will match each vocabulary word to its synonym.

Point to the word amiable, read it aloud, and have the students say it. Then point to the words in column 2, and ask:

Q Which word in column 2 is the synonym of amiable? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “[Friendly] is the synonym of amiable.”

Have a volunteer draw a line from the word amiable to the word friendly.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining words. When you get to the final two words, have the students discuss them together by asking:

Q Which word in column 2 is the synonym of secure, and which word is the synonym of serene? Turn to your partner.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss Conceal Further

Review that the students learned the word conceal, which means “hide,” and that conceal and hide are synonyms. Tell the students that you will conceal something (such as your keys) in the classroom and that they will discuss with a partner where they think the item is concealed. Show them the item. Then have the students close their eyes while you hide it. Afterward, ask them to open their eyes. Then ask:

Q Where do you think I concealed [my keys]?

Have the students use the following prompt to share their thinking with a partner:

PROMPT: “I think [the keys] are concealed [behind the whiteboard].”

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the group. Then reveal where you concealed the item. Repeat the activity with different objects and hiding places.

Review Rugged, Conceal, and Amiable

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words rugged, conceal, and amiable from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

rugged

Rugged means “tough and strong.” Rugged also means “having a rough, uneven surface” and “harsh or difficult.”

conceal

Conceal means “hide.”

amiable

Amiable means “friendly and pleasant.”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA5). Review the pronunciation and the meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words might you use when you talk with your friends or family? How might you use the word?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA5

rugged conceal amiable

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when I talk with _____. I might say . . .

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [amiable] when I talk with [my friends]. I might say . . .”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “Who is a rugged person you know?” “What do you own that is made of a rugged material?” “When have you been on a rugged road or trail?” and “What would make a person’s life rugged?” If the students continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The rugged toy . . .” or “The rugged winter . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

If a pair’s sentence does not convey the meaning of rugged, help the students develop the sentence further by asking follow-up questions.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Explain that partners will do an activity called “Create a Sentence.” Review that they will use their imaginations and what they know about yesterday’s vocabulary words to create sentences that use the words.

Point to the word rugged on the daily review cards (WA5), and review that rugged means “tough and strong,” “having a rough, uneven surface,” and “harsh or difficult.” Tell the students that you want partners to work together to make up sentences of their own that use the word rugged.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q How might you use the word rugged in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say [“The rugged tent kept us safe from the wind and rain”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have the students create sentences that use the remaining words.

Introduce Dubious, Sandwiched, and Blurt Out

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words dubious, sandwiched, and blurt out
- Review synonyms
- Review using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

dubious

Dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful.”

sandwiched (p. 8)

Sandwiched means “squeezed in between two people or things.”

blurt out (p. 8)

If you blurt out something, you say it suddenly or without thinking.

Materials

- “When We First Met” and “Second Son” from My Man Blue (page 6 and page 8)
- Word card 88 (WA6)
- Word card 89 (WA7)
- Word card 90 (WA8)

INTRODUCE AND USE DUBIOUS

1 Introduce and Define Dubious and Review Synonyms

Show “When We First Met” on pages 6–7 in My Man Blue, and read the title of the poem aloud. Review that in this poem Damon meets Blue for the first time. Then read the poem aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is dubious. Explain that dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful” and that dubious, uncertain, unsure, and doubtful are synonyms.

Explain that when Damon first meets Blue, he is dubious, or uncertain, about him. He is not sure who Blue is or what he wants. He wonders why Blue stops him and his mother, and because he is dubious about Blue, he looks him up and down suspiciously.

Display word card 88 (WA6) and have the students say the word dubious.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word dubious and its synonyms to it.

2 Play “Would You Be Dubious?”

Explain that if you are dubious about something that you are told, you are doubtful about it—you are not sure that it is true or accurate. Tell the students that you will describe an imaginary situation in which they are told something. Partners will discuss whether or not they would be dubious about what they were told and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Someone knocks on your door. You open the door, and the person says, “Congratulations! You’ve won a million dollars!”

Ask:

Q Would you be dubious? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA6

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] be dubious because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Your little brother bursts into your room. “Guess what!” he shouts. “It’s snowing!”
- It’s 6:00 p.m. Your mother says, “Brush your teeth. It’s time for bed.”

Discuss as a class:

Q When have you been dubious about something that was said to you? Why were you dubious?

Click 2 on word card 88 (WA6) to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I was dubious when [my sister offered me her dessert] because . . .”

Point to the word dubious and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE SANDWICHED

3 Introduce and Define Sandwiched

Show “Second Son” on pages 8–9, and read the title of the poem aloud. Review that in this poem Damon and Blue discuss their friendship. Then read the poem aloud.

Reread the first stanza aloud, emphasizing the word sandwiched. Tell the students that sandwiched is the next word they will discuss. Explain that sandwiched means “squeezed in between two people or things.”

Explain that Damon thinks it looks like wedges of blue sky are sandwiched between, or squeezed in between, the roofs of the buildings and the white clouds drifting high in the sky. The clouds and rooftops are like the slices of bread in a sandwich, with pieces of blue sky squeezed in between them.

Display word card 89 (🌐 WA7) and have the students say the word sandwiched.

4 Talk About Being Sandwiched

Review that we use the word sandwiched to talk about people or things that are squeezed in tightly between other people or things. For example, three people sometimes need to share a seat on a crowded bus. The person in the middle is sandwiched between, or squeezed in between, the other two people. In a city you sometimes see a little house or building sandwiched between, or squeezed in between, two big buildings.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been sandwiched or seen someone or something sandwiched between two people or things? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I was sandwiched between [my brothers] when [we took a crowded subway train downtown]” or “I saw [my backpack] sandwiched between [two large suitcases] when [we packed the car for our trip].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

ELL Note

You might explain that sandwiched comes from the word sandwich, which is a food made by putting meat, cheese, peanut butter, or another spread between two slices of bread.

ELL Note

You might invite three volunteers to model how a person looks sandwiched between two other people.

Follow up by asking questions such as:

Q How did it feel to be sandwiched?

Q How did [your friend] look when [she] was sandwiched?

Q How did the sandwiched [plant] look?

Point to the word sandwiched and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE BLURT OUT

5 Introduce and Define Blurt Out

Show pages 8–9 again, and reread the second stanza of the poem “Second Son” aloud, emphasizing the words blurt out.

Tell the students that blurt out are the last words they will discuss today. Explain that if you blurt out something, you say it suddenly or without thinking.

Tell the students that Damon blurts out, or suddenly asks, “Why’d you want my friendship, Blue?” Explain that the question may have just popped into Damon’s mind, so he blurted it out, or asked it without thinking about it.

Display word card 90 (🗨️ WA8) and have the students say the words blurt out.

6 Play “Did Milton Blurt Out?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Did Milton Blurt Out?” Explain that you will describe something our make-believe friend Milton says; then partners will discuss whether or not Milton blurts it out and explain why they think so.

Begin by reading the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton is annoyed. His friend Santos is on the computer, and Milton wants to use it. Milton doesn’t want to start an argument, so he thinks quietly for a moment and then he says, “You’ve been on the computer for quite a while, Santos. Is it OK if I use it for a minute or two?”

Ask:

Q Did Milton blurt out what he said to Santos? Why do you think that?
[Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Milton [did/did not] blurt out what he said to Santos because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- The class is working quietly on math problems. Milton is struggling with a problem when suddenly he figures it out. He leaps from his chair and shouts, “I’ve got it! I’ve got it!”

Q Did Milton blurt out, “I’ve got it! I’ve got it!”? Why do you think that?
[Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Milton [did/did not] blurt out, ‘I’ve got it! I’ve got it!’ because . . .”

Discuss as a class:

Q When have you blurted out something or heard another person blurt out something?

Click 3 on word card 90 (WA8) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I blurted out _____ when . . .” or “I heard [my dad] blurt out _____ when . . .”

Point to the words blurt out and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -ly and Discuss the Word Dubiously

Write the words dubious and dubiously next to each other where everyone can see them. Remind the students that dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful.” Then read the word dubiously, and have the students say the word. Point to the -ly in dubiously and review that -ly is a suffix that means “in a certain way.”

Discuss as a class:

Q *Based on what you know about the word dubious and the suffix -ly, what do you think the word dubiously means?*

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Dubiously means [‘in a dubious, or doubtful, way’].”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following question:

Q *What does it mean if you say someone looked at you dubiously?*

PROMPT: “If someone looked at me dubiously, the person looked at me [in a dubious, or doubtful, way].”

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word dubiously to it. For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Explain that dubiously means “in a dubious way, or uncertainly, unsurely, or doubtfully.” If someone looks at you dubiously, that person looks in a way that shows he is uncertain or doubtful about what you have said or done.

Day 4

Review Dubious, Sandwiched, and Blurt Out

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words dubious, sandwiched, and blurt out from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

dubious

Dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful.”

sandwiched

Sandwiched means “squeezed in between two people or things.”

blurt out

If you blurt out something, you say it suddenly or without thinking.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words do you think was especially interesting or fun to talk about? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

dubious

sandwiched

blurt out

PROMPT 1: I think _____ was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think [blurt out] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that they will use their imaginations and what they know about yesterday’s vocabulary words to create sentences that use the words.

Point to the word dubious on the daily review cards (WA9) and review that dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q How might you use the word dubious in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up on each response by asking the class to think about the student’s sentence. Ask:

Q Does it make sense to say [“Because there was snow on the ground, I was dubious when my sister said I could go outside without my coat”]? Why?

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you been dubious about something you were told?” or “When has someone been dubious about something you have said or done?” If the students continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “I was dubious when my sister told me . . .” or “My mother was dubious when I said . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

If a pair’s sentence does not convey the meaning of dubious, point out that the sentence does not make the meaning of dubious clear, and help the students develop the sentence further by asking follow-up questions.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

crouch

When you crouch, you bend your legs and lower your body close to the ground.

greedy

A greedy person is selfish and wants more of something than he or she needs.

jittery

Jittery means “worried and nervous.”

rejoice

Rejoice means “show or feel great joy.”

unwise

Unwise means “not having or showing good judgment and intelligence.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Which Word Am I?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Which Word Am I?” Point to the vocabulary words on the ongoing review cards (WA10). Review that you will give a clue about a word and partners will figure out which word it is. Then you will ask a few pairs to share their thinking with the class.

Begin by reading the following clue aloud twice:

- I’m how you describe the way you might feel before an important test.

Ask:

Q Which word am I? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

crouch

jittery

rejoice

unwise

PROMPT 1: I think the word is _____ because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think the word is [jittery] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following clues:

- I’m what you might do if a new baby brother or sister were born. (rejoice)
- I’m what the catcher does behind home plate in baseball. (crouch)
- I’m how you describe someone who doesn’t look both ways before crossing the street. (unwise)
- I’m how you describe a person who helps himself to all the mashed potatoes before his sister has gotten any. (greedy)

Word-learning Strategies

- Using context to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Recognizing idioms (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the poems.
- Students review using context to determine word meanings.
- Students review antonyms and idioms.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students analyze the effect of their behavior on others and on the group work.
- Students develop the skills of using clarifying questions or statements and including everyone in and contributing to group work.

J DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 1, review the more strategy practice activity “Play ‘Use the Clues’” on page 345.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Discuss the Idiom ‘Reduced to Tears’” on page 353.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 179 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1); see page 183 of the Assessment Resource Book. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 5, make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1); see page 186 of the Assessment Resource Book. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the following materials: “Week 16 Word Cards” (BLM2) and “Week 16 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3). These materials can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Glum, Gleeful, and Fume

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words glum, gleeful, and fume
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Review antonyms
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Taught

glum (p. 12)

Glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.”

gleeful

Gleeful means “happy, delighted, or joyous.”

fume

Fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

INTRODUCE AND USE GLUM

1 Introduce Glum and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Show “Grounded” on pages 12–13 of My Man Blue and read the title of the poem aloud. Review that in this poem Damon’s asthma keeps him from playing stickball.

Read the poem aloud, emphasizing the word glum. Tell the students that glum is the first word they will learn today.

Display the “Lines from ‘Grounded’” chart (WA1), and explain that these are the first seven lines of the poem you just read.

Point to the word glum and underline it. Tell the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like glum—by rereading the line that includes the word, or the lines that come before or after it, to look for clues. Explain that as you read these lines again, you want the students to think about what the word glum might mean and which words in the poem are clues to the meaning of glum.

Read the lines aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word glum might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Materials

- “Grounded” from My Man Blue (page 12)
- “Lines from ‘Grounded’” chart (WA1)
- Word card 91 (WA2)
- Word card 92 (WA3)
- Word card 93 (WA4)

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the context lines where everyone can see them.

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of glum from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

Lines from “Grounded”

Asthma stole my Weekend dose of fun
Left me glum
And wheezing while
The stickball game
Went on as planned
Without me.

PROMPT 1: I think glum might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word glum.

PROMPT 1: “I think glum might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable,” and explain that glum, unhappy, gloomy, and miserable are synonyms.

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word glum?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘stole my weekend dose of fun’ and ‘went on as planned without me’] help me figure out the meaning of the word glum.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that “stole my weekend dose of fun” and “went on as planned without me” are clues that help us figure out that glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.”

Display word card 91 (🎧 WA2) and have the students say the word glum.

2 Talk About Feeling Glum

Explain that, like Damon in the poem, people feel glum when they are disappointed. People also feel glum when they hear sad or upsetting news. Give an example of a time you felt glum.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word glum and its synonyms to it.

You might say:

"My mother planned a swimming party for my tenth birthday. I had a new bathing suit and towel and I was looking forward to all the fun we would have. On the day of my party, there was a huge storm, so we had to have the party indoors. I was so glum that I did not enjoy any of it."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q When have you felt glum? Why were you glum? [Pause; click ❶ on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I felt glum when [my dog Ace ran away] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word glum and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE GLEEFUL

3 Introduce and Define Gleeful and Review Antonyms

Display word card 92 (🎧 WA3) and have the students say the word gleeful. Tell the students that gleeful is the next word they will learn today. Explain that gleeful and glum are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

Discuss as a class:

Q If gleeful and glum are antonyms, and glum means "unhappy, gloomy, or miserable," what do you think gleeful means?

Click ❶ on word card 92 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: "I think gleeful means ['happy']."

If necessary, explain that gleeful means "happy, delighted, or joyous," and tell the students that gleeful, happy, delighted, and joyous are synonyms.

4 Talk About Feeling Gleeful

Explain that when you are feeling gleeful, you are not just a little happy, you are very happy. You are delighted and full of joy.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q When have you felt gleeful? Why? [Pause; click ❷ on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "I felt gleeful when [I found my dog Ace] because . . ."

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words glum and gleeful to it.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word gleeful and its synonyms to it.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then discuss as a class:

Q On the last day of school this year, do you think you'll feel glum or gleeful? Why?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: "On the last day of school, I think I'll feel [glum/gleeful] because . . ."

Point to the word gleeful and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE FUME

5 Introduce and Define Fume

Display word card 93 (🌍 WA4) and have the students say the word fume. Tell the students that fume is the last word they will learn today, and explain that fume means "be very angry or irritated."

Tell the students that as you reread the next part of the poem "Grounded" aloud, you want them to listen for what Damon does that shows he is fuming, or feeling very angry.

Read the next four lines of the poem aloud, beginning with "I balled my fist."

Discuss as a class:

Q What does Damon do that shows he is fuming?

Click 1 on word card 93 (WA4) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: "Damon shows he is fuming by [shaking his fist at the sky]."

If necessary, explain that Damon shows he is fuming by balling his fist, shaking his fist at the sky, and asking why he is cursed with asthma.

6 Discuss Fuming

Explain that people who are fuming sometimes behave in ways that show that they are angry or irritated. For example, they ball or shake their fists, as Damon does, or they stomp their feet, become red in the face, or say things in angry voices.

Explain that at other times people fume silently—they keep their anger concealed inside so that no one can see it. Explain that people might fume inside because they do not want others to know how angry they are or because showing anger might get them into trouble. For example, if your mother asks you to do a chore you really do not want to do, you might fume silently but do as you are told.

ELL Note

You or a volunteer might act out how Damon looked when he fumed.

Teacher Note

Using a previously taught word such as conceal as you discuss a new word is an excellent way to review the word. You might review that conceal means "hide."

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you fumed? [Pause; click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.]

Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I fumed when . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q When you fumed, did you show your anger or conceal it? Why?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “When I fumed, I [showed/concealed] my anger because . . .”

Point to the word fume and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Play “Use the Clues”

Write the following sentences on a sheet of chart paper or someplace where everyone can see them, leaving blanks as shown:

Shondra and her family are at the zoo and see a most unusual creature. “I’ve never seen anything like that!” Shondra exclaims. “That animal is _____.”

Riding home in the car after a long day at the zoo, Shondra’s eyes begin to droop. She tells her parents, “That was fun, but I am _____.”

Remind the students that, when you are reading and come to a word you do not know, you can sometimes figure out the meaning of the word by rereading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentence that comes before or after it, to look for clues. Explain that today partners will play “Use the Clues,” in which they look for clues to a word that is missing from a sentence.

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

Listen as partners share. If the students cannot suggest a word that is supported by context or suggest words that are not supported by the context, call for their attention. Provide a word and point out the context clues. Then have the students discuss the second example.

Teacher Note

You might review that bizarre means “very strange or odd.”

Teacher Note

Possible responses include exhausted, tired, worn out, or beat.

Direct the students’ attention to the first example. Point to the blank, and explain that as you read the sentences aloud, you want the students to think about what the missing word might be and what words in the sentences are clues to the missing word. Tell the students that more than one word might make sense in the sentence and that the word does not have to be a vocabulary word. Explain that partners may not agree about what the missing word is and that is fine. What is important is that the students explain their thinking.

Read the sentences in the first example aloud twice, saying “blank” for the missing word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is the missing word? What words are clues to the missing word?
[Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think the missing word is [bizarre] because . . .”

Have volunteers share their thinking with the class. Accept any word the students can support with context clues from the sentences. If necessary, explain that the missing word might be bizarre, weird, peculiar, strange, or odd, and that “unusual” and “I’ve never seen anything like that” are clues.

Use the same procedure to discuss the second example.

Day 2

Review Glum, Gleeful, and Fume

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words glum, gleeful, and fume from Day 1
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

glum

Glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.”

gleeful

Gleeful means “happy, delighted, or joyous.”

fume

Fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗨️ WA5). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

-  Q If you are doing something you adore, are you likely to be glum or gleeful? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA5

glum gleeful fume

PROMPT 1: If I am doing something I adore, I will likely be [gleeful/glum] because . . .

1 2 3 4 5

PROMPT 1: “If I am doing something I adore, I will likely be [gleeful/glum] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following question:

-  Q If someone intimidated you, would you fume? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If someone intimidated me, I [would/would not] fume because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to glum on the daily review cards, and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word glum. Partners will discuss whether or not glum makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Teacher Note

You might review that adore means “love or be very fond of someone or something.”

Teacher Note

You might review that intimidate means “make someone feel afraid or timid.”

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Maxine is glum. It's a cold and rainy day, her kitten Rainbow has run away, and her best friend Trixie is mad at her.

Ask:

Q Does the word glum make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The word glum [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[gleeful]

- “Our class trip to the museum is cancelled,” says Garret with a gleeful expression on his face. “I’m so disappointed. I was looking forward to seeing the dinosaur exhibit.”

Q Does the word gleeful make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The word gleeful [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

[fume]

- Angelica is fuming. “I’ve never been so uncomfortable in my life,” she grumbles to herself as she sits sandwiched between two boys on the bus. “I can barely breathe.”

Q Does the word fuming make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “The word fuming [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might review that sandwiched means “squeezed in between two people or things.”

Introduce Imprudent, Prudent, and Reduce

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words imprudent, prudent, and reduce
- Review antonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Review idioms
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Taught

imprudent

Imprudent means “unwise or careless.” If you are imprudent, you do not use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

prudent

Prudent means “wise or careful.” If you are prudent, you use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

reduce (p. 14)

Reduce means “destroy or break down completely.”
Reduce also means “make less, fewer, or smaller.”

INTRODUCE AND USE IMPRUDENT AND PRUDENT

1 Introduce and Define Imprudent

Show “The Watcher,” on pages 14–15 of My Man Blue, and read the title of the poem aloud. Review that in this poem Blue saves Damon’s life.

Read the poem aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is imprudent, and explain that imprudent means “unwise or careless.” Explain that if you are imprudent, you do not use good judgment or think carefully before you do things. Display word cards 94–95 (WA6), and click to reveal word card 94. Have the students say the word imprudent.

Explain that as you reread the beginning of the poem aloud, you want the students to listen for what Damon does that is imprudent, or unwise or careless.

Reread the first four lines of the poem aloud.

Materials

- “The Watcher” from My Man Blue (page 14)
- Word cards 94–95 (WA6)
- Word card 96 (WA7)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of imprudent is imprudente.

Discuss as a class:

Q What does Damon do that is imprudent? Why is it imprudent?

Click 1 on word card 94 (WA6) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

imprudent 95

PROMPT 1: Damon _____. That is imprudent because . . .

1 2 3

WA6

PROMPT 1: “Damon [chases his ball into the street]. That is imprudent because . . .”

If necessary, point out that Damon is imprudent when he runs blindly into the street to get his ball. Explain that running into the street without looking is very unwise and careless. Damon is not using good judgment.

2 Introduce and Define Prudent and Review Antonyms

Direct the students’ attention to word cards 94–95 (WA6) and click to reveal word card 95. Have the students say the word prudent. Tell the students that prudent is the next word they will learn today.

Explain that prudent and imprudent are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

Discuss as a class:

Q If prudent and imprudent are antonyms, and imprudent means “unwise or careless,” what do you think prudent means?

Click 2 to reveal the prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I think prudent means [‘wise or careful’].”

If necessary, explain that prudent means “wise or careful.” Explain that, if you are prudent, you use good judgment and think carefully before you do things. Explain that, if Damon had been prudent, he would have

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words prudent and imprudent to it.

Teacher Note

You might explain that im- is a prefix that means “not.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of prudent is prudente.

looked both ways before running into the street. That would have shown wisdom and good judgment.

3 Play “Is Milton Prudent or Imprudent?”

Tell the students that you will describe something that our friend Milton does; then partners will decide whether Milton is prudent or imprudent and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton eats a huge meal right before he runs in a race.

Ask:

Q Is Milton prudent or imprudent? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Milton is [prudent/imprudent] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton does all of his homework on Friday evening so that he has the whole weekend to relax and have fun.
- The night before an important test at school, Milton stays up late playing video games.

Point to the words imprudent and prudent and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

INTRODUCE AND USE REDUCE

4 Introduce and Define Reduce

Show pages 14–15 again, and review that Damon is imprudent and runs into the street after his ball.

Read the rest of the poem aloud, emphasizing the word reduced. Tell the students that reduce is the last word they will learn today, and explain that reduce means “destroy or break down completely.”

Point out that when the truck runs over the ball, it reduces it to dust, or destroys it completely. It smashes the ball into dust.

Display word card 96 (🌐 WA7) and have the students say the word reduce.

5 Talk About Using the Word to with Reduce

Explain that when we use the word reduce to mean “destroy or break down completely,” we use the word to with reduce. For example, we say, “The truck reduced Damon’s ball to dust.” Explain that we might also say,

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of reduce is reducir.

“A bulldozer reduced the building to rubble,” “A fire reduced the house to ashes,” and “Smashing a rock with a hammer reduced the rock to pebbles.”

Ask:

Q What would dropping a glass jar on a hard floor reduce the glass to? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Dropping a glass jar on a hard floor would reduce it to [tiny pieces].”

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q What would chopping up a tree reduce the tree to? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Chopping up a tree would reduce it to [a pile of limbs, logs, or wood].”

6 Discuss Another Meaning of Reduce

Point to the word reduce on word card 96 (WA7), and review that in the poem, reduce means “destroy or break down completely.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word reduce?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Reduce also means [‘make less, fewer, or smaller’].”

Follow up by asking:

Q What do we mean when we say we want to reduce the amount of junk food we eat?

Click 4 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 4: “When we reduce the amount of junk food we eat, we . . .”

If necessary, explain that the word reduce also means “make less, fewer, or smaller.” Explain that if you reduce the amount of junk food you eat, you eat less junk food. Explain that on a computer you can reduce the size of a picture or document, or make the picture or document smaller.

7 Talk More About the Meanings of Reduce

Explain that you will read a sentence that includes the word reduce. Partners will decide whether reduce means “destroy or break down completely” or “make less, fewer, or smaller.”

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- During the sale, all the skateboards were reduced in price.

Teacher Note

You might write the two definitions where everyone can see them.

Ask:

Q In the sentence, does reduce mean “destroy or break down completely” or “make less, fewer, or smaller”? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “Reduce means . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following:

- The tornado reduced the building to a pile of bricks.
- I reduced the number of guests on my guest list from 20 to 10.

Point to the word reduce and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss the Idiom “Reduced to Tears”

Write the idiom “reduced to tears” where everyone can see it. Explain that “reduced to tears” is an idiom. Review that an idiom is “an expression or phrase that means something different from what it appears to mean.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What do you think this sentence means: “The sad movie reduced me to tears”?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “The sad movie reduced me to tears’ means . . .”

If necessary, explain that “reduced me to tears” means “caused me to cry.” Explain that if a movie is very sad, it can cause you to feel so emotional that all that seems to be left of you is tears.

EXTENSION

Discuss the Prefix im-

Remind the students that a prefix is “a letter or group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the prefix im- means “not.” Point out that when the prefix im- is added to the word prudent, it makes the new word imprudent, which means “not prudent, or not wise.”

Teacher Note

For a list of common idioms, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Idioms” list in the General Resources section.

Teacher Note

For a list of common prefixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the "Prefixes" list in the General Resources section.

Have the students discuss the meaning of other words that use the prefix im-, such as immature, immovable, impatient, impossible, and improper.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Read Another Poem from My Man Blue

Choose another poem from My Man Blue to read aloud, such as "Fearless" (page 10), "My Own Man" (page 25), or "Like Blue" (page 30). Read the title of the poem and tell the students that you will read the poem aloud twice while they think about what is happening in the poem.

Read the poem aloud twice. Then ask:

Q What is this poem about?

Have the students discuss the question in pairs. Then have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the group.

Day 4

Review Imprudent, Prudent, and Reduce

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Daily review activity (WA9)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 16 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words imprudent, prudent, and reduce from Day 3
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

imprudent

Imprudent means "unwise or careless." If you are imprudent, you do not use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

prudent

Prudent means "wise or careful." If you are prudent, you use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

reduce

Reduce means "destroy or break down completely." Reduce also means "make less, fewer, or smaller."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards ( WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words might you use when you talk with your family or friends? How might you use the word?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA8) to reveal the first prompt.

WA8

PROMPT 1: "I might use the word [imprudent] when I'm talking to my [little brother]. I might say . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play "What's the Missing Word?"

Tell the students that partners will play the game "What's the Missing Word?" Remind the students that you will read a story that has a word missing. Partners must decide which of the vocabulary words is the missing word and explain why they think so.

Display the daily review activity (🔊 WA9) and begin playing the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first story. Point to the sentence and read it aloud.
  - Story 1: Demarco is wise and makes good decisions. His parents let him babysit for his brother and sister because they know Demarco is _____.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q What's the missing word? Why do you think so? [Click 1 again to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think [prudent] is the missing word because . . ."

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the daily review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, you might write the review words and the stories where everyone can see them.

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

3 Continue Playing the Game

Use the same procedure to continue playing the game.

- Click ❷ to reveal the second story and read it aloud.
  - Story 2: To _____ his chance of falling, Grandpa uses a cane.
- Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q What's the missing word? Why do you think so? [Click ❷ again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think [reduce] is the missing word because . . ."

Have partners take turns using the prompt to talk about the questions. Then have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

- Conclude the discussion by clicking ❷ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.
- Click ❷ to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following sentences:

- Story 3: Jayla dashed out the door and left her suitcase behind. When she arrived at the airport, Jayla realized how _____ she had been. (imprudent)
- Story 4: Cleavon ate and ate until the sunflower seeds were _____ to a pile of shells. (reduced)

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 15 and 16, you might distribute a copy of the "Week 16 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) to each student.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words they learned earlier
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

indignantly

Indignantly means “in an indignant way, or in a way that shows you are angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.”

serene

Serene means “calm or peaceful.”

stalk

Stalk means “follow or hunt a person or animal quietly and secretly.”

sustain

Sustain means “keep going for a long period of time.”

thoroughly

Thoroughly means “in a thorough way, or completely.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think About?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think About?” Direct the students’ attention to the words on the ongoing review cards (WA10). Explain that you want the students to describe what they think about, or what pictures come into their minds, when they hear each of the words.

Model the activity by closing your eyes and describing what comes into your mind when you hear the word sustain.

You might say:

“When I hear the word sustain, I think about a train trip my family took from Chicago to New Orleans. The train sustained high speeds for hundreds of miles between stops. The train kept moving through the night, and when we woke up, we had arrived.”

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, support them by asking questions such as “What [things/events] do you think about when you hear the word sustain?” and “If something sustains, does it end quickly or last a long time?”

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word sustain? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 1 on WA10 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA10

PROMPT 1: “When I hear the word [sustain], I think about [a hurricane] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining words.

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students’ responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are they using the words in their speech and their writing outside of the vocabulary lessons?

(continues)

Assessment Notes (continued)

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 179 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by having the students act out the word in two or three scenarios you provide. For example, you might say “Imagine that you are a lion stalking a zebra across a wide valley. Act that out.”

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 17 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students’ understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16 using the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” on page 180 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16 using the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see “Completing the Student Self-assessment” on page 184 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)
- Using context to determine word meanings (review)
- Using an online dictionary to determine word meanings
- Recognizing idioms (review)
- Using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the story.
- Students review synonyms, antonyms, and using context to determine word meanings.
- Students discuss using an online dictionary to determine word meanings.
- Students review idioms and review the suffix -ly.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students take responsibility for their learning and behavior.
- Students develop the skills of using clarifying questions or statements and including everyone in and contributing to group work.

Introduce Loathe, Labor, and Crave

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words loathe, labor, and crave
- Review synonyms
- Review antonyms
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Use an online dictionary
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Taught

loathe

Loathe means “hate, or strongly dislike.”

labor (p. 5)

Labor means “work hard.”

crave

Crave means “want badly, long for, or desire very much.”

INTRODUCE AND USE LOATHE

1 Introduce and Define Loathe and Review Synonyms and Antonyms

Briefly review Amelia’s Road. Show pages 4–5 and review that Amelia and her family move from place to place to find work in the fields. Read pages 4–5 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is loathe. Explain that loathe means “hate, or strongly dislike” and that loathe and hate are synonyms.

Explain that Amelia loathes, or hates, roads because they take her to farms where her family must work, rather than to places she wants to go.

Remind the students that earlier they learned the word adore, and review that adore means “love or be very fond of someone or something.” Explain that adore and loathe are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

Display word card 97 (🎧 WA1) and have the students say the word loathe.

Materials

- Amelia’s Road
- Word card 97 (WA1)
- “Sentence from Amelia’s Road” chart (WA2)
- Word card 98 (WA3)
- Word card 99 (WA4)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words loathe and hate to it. Remind the students that they can use a synonym, like loathe, to replace an overused word, like hate, in their writing.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words loathe and adore to it.

2 Talk About Things People Loathe

Remind the students that we use the word loathe to talk about things we strongly dislike, and give examples of things you or someone you know loathes.

You might say:

“When I was your age, I loathed going to bed at 8:30 p.m., which was my bedtime on school nights. I wanted to stay up later. My son loathes green beans. He says they taste disgusting, and he refuses to eat them. I know some of you loathe rainy days because you can’t go outside for recess.”

Ask:

Q What is something you or someone you know loathes? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1:

I loathe . . .

or

WA1

PROMPT 1: “I loathe . . .” or “[My dad] loathes . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word loathe and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE LABOR

3 Introduce Labor and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Show pages 4–5 of the book again and review that Amelia loathes roads. Read the following sentence from page 5 aloud, emphasizing the word labored: “The roads Amelia knew went to farms where workers labored in sunstruck fields and lived in grim, gray shanties.”

Tell the students that labor is the next word they will learn today. Display the “Sentence from Amelia’s Road” chart (📄 WA2), and explain that this is the sentence you just read.

Point to the word labored and underline it. Tell the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like labor—by rereading the sentence that includes the word to look for clues. Explain that as you read this sentence again, you want the students to think about what the word labor might mean and which words in the sentence are clues to the meaning of labor.

Read the sentence aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word labor might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Sentence from Amelia’s Road

The roads Amelia knew went to farms where workers labored in sunstruck fields and lived in grim, gray shanties.

PROMPT 1: I think labor might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word labor.

WA2

PROMPT 1: “I think labor might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that labor means “work hard.” Explain that labor and work are synonyms.

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word labor?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘workers’ and ‘in the sunstruck fields’] help me figure out the meaning of the word labor.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that “workers” and “in the sunstruck fields” are clues that help us figure out that labor means work hard. Explain that the workers labor, or work hard, in the hot fields.

Display word card 98 (📄 WA3) and have the students say the word labor.

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you may wish to write the context sentence where everyone can see it.

TEKS 3.B.i

Student/Teacher Activity

Step 3

(second paragraph on page 365 to the end of the step)

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of labor from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words labor and work to it.

Teacher Note

You might show the illustration on pages 4-5 again and explain that illustrations can sometimes provide clues to the meaning of unfamiliar words. Point out that the illustration shows farm workers laboring, or working, in a field.

4 Talk About Laboring Physically and Mentally

Explain that you can labor, or work hard, physically (with your body) or mentally (with your mind). Give an example of each.

You might say:

“Last weekend I labored physically to put in a new fence around my yard. It was hot, sweaty work. Last night I labored mentally to write lessons for today. I thought a lot about how to make the lessons clear and interesting.”

Tell the students that partners will tell each other about times they have labored physically or mentally. Then a few volunteers will share their partners’ thinking with the class.

Ask:

Q When have you labored physically or mentally? [Click ❶ on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I labored [physically/mentally] when . . .”

After partners have talked, click ❷ on word card 98 (WA3) and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their partners’ thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “My partner labored [physically/mentally] when . . .”

Point to the word labor and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE CRAVE

5 Introduce and Define Crave and Review Synonyms

Show pages 6–7 of Amelia’s Road and review that Amelia does not enjoy her life because she has to move so often and labor in the fields. Read pages 6–7 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is crave. Explain that crave means “want badly, long for, or desire very much,” and that crave, want, long for, and desire are synonyms.

Explain that Amelia craves, or badly wants, a different kind of life. She longs to go to a place where people do not work so hard, move so often, or live in labor camps.

Display word card 99 (WA4) and have the students say the word crave.

6 Play “Does Milton Crave It?”

Tell the students that you will describe how our friend Milton is acting or feeling; then partners will discuss whether or not he is craving something and explain why they think that.

Teacher Note

You might review that desire means “want, wish for, or long for something.” If you started a synonym chart, add crave to the synonyms of desire.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton loves attention so much that he is constantly making jokes in class so the other students will notice him.

Ask:

Q Does Milton crave attention? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Milton [does/does not] crave attention because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- All day at school, Milton thinks about pickles. When he gets home, he begs his mother to give him a pickle for his snack.

Q Does Milton crave pickles? Why? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Milton [does/does not] crave pickles because . . .”

- Everyone in Milton’s class wants the newest cell phone, but Milton is happy with the old cell phone his grandfather gave him.

Q Does Milton crave a new cell phone? Why? [Click 3 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Milton [does/does not] crave a new cell phone because . . .”

Point to the word crave and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Use an Online Dictionary

Write the following words from Amelia’s Road where everyone can see them: tidy, occasion, rhythm, harvest, accidental, and wondrous.

Have partners sit together at a computer or with a tablet. Have the students navigate to the online dictionary you selected. Direct their attention to the Search box. Ask them to type a familiar word, such as steamboat or journey, into the box and click the Search button or icon. Then discuss:

Q What information is provided for the word [journey]?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class. As necessary, point out these key features:

- The division of the word into syllables
- The pronunciation of the word, which may include both a phonetic respelling and an audio pronunciation, accessed through an Audio button or icon

Materials

- Computers or tablets with Internet access for each pair of students

Technology Tip

To find an appropriate online dictionary, search online using the keywords “children’s dictionary” or “online dictionary for students.”

- The word's part of speech (whether the word is a noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech)
- The definitions of the word
- A sentence or phrase that shows how the word is used

Point out any additional information or features, which may include lists of synonyms or antonyms, the etymology (history) of the word, or links to related words or other information. Then briefly discuss:

Q In what ways is this online dictionary [different from/the same as] a print (book) dictionary?

Q Which type of dictionary do you prefer? Why?

Direct the students' attention to the words you have displayed, and explain that the words are from Amelia's Road. Tell the students that partners will choose one of the words they want to know about, search for the word in the online dictionary, and share what they learned about the word with the class.

Give partners a minute or two to choose a word, look it up in the online dictionary, and read and discuss the word entry. When most pairs have finished, discuss each word as a class by asking:

Q Who looked up the word [wondrous]? What did you find out about the word?

Q Who else looked up the word [wondrous]? What can you add to what [Kristen and Roberto] told us about the word?

Encourage the students to continue to use an online or print dictionary to look up the meanings of words they do not know.

Day 2

Review Loathe, Labor, and Crave

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words loathe, labor, and crave from Day 1
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

loathe

Loathe means "hate, or strongly dislike."

labor

Labor means "work hard."

crave

Crave means "want badly, long for, or desire very much."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🔊 WA5). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think was especially fun to talk about? Why do you think that?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: "I think [crave] was especially fun to talk about because . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity "What Do You Think About?"

Tell the students that partners will do the activity "What Do You Think About?" Point to the words on the daily review cards (WA5). Explain that you want the students to describe what they think about, or what pictures come into their minds, when they hear each of the words.

Point to the word loathe, and explain that loathe is the first word the students will think about.

Model the activity by closing your eyes and describing what comes into your mind when you hear the word loathe.

You might say:

"When I hear the word loathe, I think about mowing the yard and pulling weeds. I loathe mowing and weeding because it is hard, hot work."

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, support them by asking questions such as “What is something you loathe [doing/eating]?”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, signal for their attention and describe what comes into your mind when you hear the word labor. You might close your eyes and say “When I hear the word labor, I picture painting my kitchen walls because it was such hard work.” If the students continue to struggle, support them by asking questions such as “When do you do hard physical labor?” and “When do you do hard mental labor?”

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word loathe? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “When I hear the word loathe, I think about [getting up in the morning] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word labor on the daily review cards (WA5), and explain that labor is the next word the students will think about.

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word labor? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “When I hear the word labor, I think about . . .”

Use the same procedure to discuss the word crave. If the students struggle with the word, think aloud about what you picture when you hear the word, or ask supporting questions like those in the notes.

Day 3

Introduce “Lend a Hand,” Permanent, and Temporary

Materials

- Amelia’s Road
- Word card 100 (WA6)
- Word cards 101–102 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words permanent and temporary and the idiom “lend a hand”
- Review idioms
- Review antonyms
- Review using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Taught

lend a hand

“Lend a hand” means “help or assist.”

permanent (p. 18)

Permanent means “lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever.”

temporary

Temporary means “lasting or meant to last only a short time.”

INTRODUCE AND USE “LEND A HAND”

1 Introduce and Define “Lend a Hand” and Review Idioms

Show pages 12–13 of Amelia’s Road and review that Amelia and her family travel from place to place doing farm work. Read pages 12–13 aloud.

Tell the students that next they will discuss the idiom “lend a hand,” and explain that “lend a hand” means “help or assist.”

Show pages 12–13 again, point to the illustration on page 13, and explain that when the family gets up at dawn to pick apples, Amelia lends a hand, or helps.

Display word card 100 ( WA6) and have the students say “lend a hand.”

Remind the students that an idiom is “an expression or phrase that means something different from what it appears to mean.” Explain that when we say that Amelia “lends a hand,” we do not mean that she removes her hand from her body and gives it to her family. Instead, we mean that she helps her family—she helps them pick apples.

2 Discuss Times Students Have Lent a Hand

Tell the students that the past tense of lend is lent; then point out that all of us have lent a hand, or helped another person do something, at one time or another.

Give examples of times when you or someone you know lent a hand.

You might say:

“When I arrived at school this morning, I saw Mr. Juarez in the parking lot. He needed help carrying some books into the building, so I lent him a hand by carrying a box of books. I noticed that Alexandra lent Paula a hand this morning when she couldn’t find her library book. Alexandra helped Paula look for the book.”

Ask:

Q When have you lent someone a hand? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

You might explain that lend means “give someone something that you expect to get back.”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that earlier they discussed the idioms “get-up-and-go,” sidesplitting, “nosing around,” and “pay no mind.” If you started an idioms chart, add “lend a hand” to it.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the “past tense” is the form of a word we use to talk about past action.

PROMPT 1: “I lent [my sister] a hand when . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then discuss as a class:

Q When has another person lent you a hand?

Click 2 on word card 100 (WA6) to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “[Angel] lent me a hand when . . .”

Point to the idiom “lend a hand” and review the pronunciation and meaning of the phrase.

INTRODUCE AND USE PERMANENT AND TEMPORARY

3 Introduce and Define Permanent

Show pages 18–19 of Amelia’s Road and review that Amelia finds a shortcut from school to camp that she calls the “accidental road.” Read the last two paragraphs on page 18 aloud, emphasizing the word permanent. Tell the students that permanent is the next word they will learn today. Explain that permanent means “lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever.”

Display word cards 101–102 (WA7) and click to reveal word card 101. Have the students say the word permanent.

Point out that Amelia is amazed by the tree because it is so old and sturdy. She thinks it is the most permanent, or longest-lasting, thing she has ever seen.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think Amelia would be pleased if her family found a permanent place to live? Why?

ELPS 3.D.ii
(all, beginning on page 372 and continuing on to page 373)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of permanent is permanente.

Click 1 on word cards 101–102 (WA7) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I think Amelia [would/would not] be pleased if her family found a permanent place to live because . . .”

If necessary, explain that because Amelia travels around so much, she likes permanent things, or things that last for a long time. She would be pleased to find a permanent home—a place where she could live for a long time.

4 Introduce and Define Temporary and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the last word that they will learn today is temporary, and explain that temporary means “lasting or meant to last only a short time.” Explain that temporary and permanent are antonyms.

Direct the students’ attention to word cards 101–102 (WA7) and click to reveal word card 102. Have the students say the word temporary.

Show pages 8–9 of Amelia’s Road and remind the students that Amelia and her family are living in a cabin at the labor camp.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think the cabin is the family’s temporary or permanent home? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Why?

PROMPT 2: “I think the cabin is the family’s [temporary/permanent] home because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

5 Play “Permanent or Temporary?”

Tell the students that you will name something; then partners will discuss whether it is permanent or temporary and explain why they think that.

Begin with the following:

- Our school building

Ask:

Q Is it permanent or temporary? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “It is [permanent/temporary] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words permanent and temporary to it.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of temporary is temporal.

Using the same procedure, discuss:

- Your teeth
- The flu

Point to the words permanent and temporary and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -ly and Discuss the Words Permanently and Temporarily

Remind the students that a suffix is “a letter or group of letters that is added to the end of a word to make a new word.” Review that the suffix -ly means “in a certain way.”

Explain that when the suffix -ly is added to the word permanent, it makes the new word permanently. Explain that permanently means “in a permanent way, or in a way meant to last a very long time or forever.” When the suffix -ly is added to the word temporary, it makes the new word temporarily, which means “in a temporary way, or in a way meant to last only a short time.”

Write the words permanently and temporarily where everyone can see them, and have the students say the words.

Discuss as a class:

Q If you see a sign on a store that reads “Closed Permanently,” what does the sign mean?

Write the following prompt where everyone can see it and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “If the sign reads ‘Closed Permanently,’ it means . . .”

If necessary, explain that “closed permanently” means that the store is closed forever. It will not reopen.

Discuss as a class:

Q If you see a sign on a store that reads “Closed Temporarily,” what does the sign mean?

Write the following prompt where everyone can see it and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “If the sign reads ‘Closed Temporarily,’ it means . . .”

If necessary, explain that “closed temporarily” means the store will be closed for only a short time. It will reopen.

---

Teacher Note

You might point out that when you add the suffix -ly to temporary, you change the y to an i to spell temporarily.

---

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the words permanently and temporarily to it.

Review “Lend a Hand,” Permanent, and Temporary

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words permanent and temporary and the idiom “lend a hand” from Day 3
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

lend a hand

“Lend a hand” means “help or assist.”

permanent

Permanent means “lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever.”

temporary

Temporary means “lasting or meant to last only a short time.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words do you think was especially interesting or fun to talk about? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA8

PROMPT 1: “I think [‘lend a hand’] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

You might review that “get-up-and-go” means “energy.”

Teacher Note

You might review that glower means “stare angrily.”

Teacher Note

You might review that bellow means “shout or roar loudly.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Explain that you will ask the students questions that include yesterday’s words and words that they learned earlier in the year.

Ask:

 Q Would it make sense to ask someone with get-up-and-go to lend you a hand? Why? [Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “It [would/would not] make sense to ask someone with get-up-and-go to lend me a hand because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

 Q Would you glower if a friend said she had a permanent way to solve a problem you were having? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I [would/would not] glower if a friend said she had a permanent way of solving my problem because . . .”

 Q If you were at the movies, would you bellow if there was a temporary delay before the movie started? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] bellow if there was a temporary delay because . . .”

EXTENSION

Review the Prefix im-

Write the words permanent and impermanent next to each other where everyone can see them. Point to the letters im in impermanent and explain that im- is a prefix that means “not.”

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the prefix im- and the word permanent, what do you think the word impermanent means?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Impermanent means [‘not permanent’].”

If necessary, explain that impermanent means “not permanent or not lasting.” Explain that impermanent and permanent are antonyms.

Write the word temporary and the idiom “lend a hand” beside permanent and impermanent.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday’s vocabulary words is a synonym of impermanent?

Have a few volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “A synonym of impermanent is [temporary].”

---

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words impermanent and permanent to it.

---

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words impermanent and temporary to it.

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Use clarifying questions or statements

Words Reviewed

amiable

Amiable means “friendly and pleasant.”

blurt out

If you blurt out something, you say it suddenly or without thinking.

conceal

Conceal means “hide.”

dubious

Dubious means “uncertain, unsure, or doubtful.”

sandwiched

Sandwiched means “squeezed in between two people or things.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Tell the students that you will ask them questions that include the review words and other words that they learned earlier in the year.

Point to the word amiable on the ongoing review cards (WA9) and ask:

Q Would an amiable person be likely to intimidate you? Why? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “An amiable person [would/would not] be likely to intimidate me because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

[blurt out]

Q If a bizarre creature leaped out at you from behind a tree, would you be likely to blurt out something? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If a bizarre creature leaped out at me, I [would/would not] be likely to blurt out something because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might review that intimidate means “make someone feel afraid or timid.”

Teacher Note

You might review that bizarre means “very strange or odd.”

Teacher Note

You might follow up by discussing this question as a class: “What might you blurt out if a bizarre creature leaped out at you from behind a tree?”

[conceal]

Q If you were fuming because a friend hurt your feelings, would you conceal your emotions? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “If I were fuming because a friend hurt my feelings, I [would/would not] conceal my emotions because . . .”

[dubious]

Q Would you be dubious if someone tried to sell you a rickety bicycle? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] be dubious if someone tried to sell me a rickety bicycle because . . .”

[sandwiched]

Q If you were sandwiched between two older kids on the school bus, would you feel jittery? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I [would/would not] feel jittery if I were sandwiched between two older kids because . . .”

---

Teacher Note

You might review that fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

---

Teacher Note

You might review that rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.”

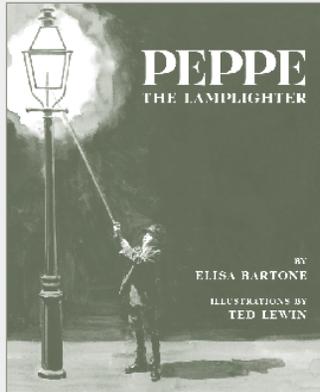

---

Teacher Note

You might review that jittery means “worried and nervous.”

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing Latin roots (review)
- Recognizing shades of meaning (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)
- Using a dictionary, glossary, or thesaurus (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words about the story.
- Students recognize Latin roots and shades of meaning.
- Students review antonyms.
- Students use a thesaurus to determine word meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students develop the skills of using clarifying questions or statements and including everyone in and contributing to group work.

① DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Use a Thesaurus” on page 392.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.

Introduce Circumstances, Elated, and Dejected

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words circumstances, elated, and dejected
- Review Latin roots
- Review shades of meaning
- Review antonyms
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

circumstances

Circumstances are the “facts or events that affect or explain a situation.”

elated

Elated means “extremely happy and excited.”

dejected

Dejected means “sad and discouraged or in low spirits.”

INTRODUCE AND USE CIRCUMSTANCES

1 Introduce and Define Circumstances and Review Latin Roots

Briefly review Peppe the Lamplighter.

Show pages 2–3 and review that Peppe and his family live in a section of New York City called Little Italy in the late 1800s. Read page 3 aloud.

Explain that because of the circumstances in which he lives, Peppe must find a job. Tell the students that circumstances is the first word they will learn today. Explain that circumstances are the “facts or events that affect or explain a situation.” Point out that the word circumstances comes from the Latin root circ, meaning “ring or circle.”

Explain that there are three circumstances, or facts, that surround Peppe’s life like a circle. One circumstance is that his father is sick and cannot support the family. Another circumstance is that his mother is dead. The third circumstance is that Peppe has many sisters who need food and clothing. To break through these difficult circumstances, Peppe must work.

Display word card 103 (WA1) and have the students say the word circumstances.

Materials

Technology Tip

To find web-based activities that focus on using Greek and Latin roots to determine word meanings, you might search online using the keywords “whiteboard Greek and Latin roots activities.” For more information, view the “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV42).

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of circumstances is circunstancias.

2 Do the Activity “Imagine That!”

Ask the students to imagine the following situation as you read it aloud:

- It is Monday morning. A group of students walk into a classroom. All of them have bright red cheeks and are wearing boots, gloves, and coats.

Ask:

Q What circumstances might explain the situation? What fact or event might explain why the students have bright red cheeks and are wearing boots, gloves, and coats? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: A circumstance that might explain the situation is . . .

WA1

Teacher Note

Circumstances the students might mention are that the day is a school holiday, it is summertime, or the school is closed because of a snow day.

PROMPT 1: “A circumstance that might explain the situation is . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Then repeat the procedure, asking the students to imagine this situation:

- It is Monday morning. The school bell rings, but no students enter the building. In fact, there are no students or teachers in school.

Ask:

Q What circumstances might explain the situation? [Point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word circumstances and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ELATED

3 Introduce and Define Elated and Review Shades of Meaning

Show pages 12–13 of Peppe the Lamplighter and review that Peppe looks hard for a job and finally finds one as a lamplighter. Read the first two paragraphs on page 12 aloud.

Tell the students that elated is the next word they will learn today, and explain that elated means “extremely happy and excited.” Explain that if you are elated, you don’t just feel somewhat happy, you feel very happy; you are overwhelmed with joy. Point out that Peppe and his sisters are elated, or extremely happy and excited, that he has a job. Display word card 104 (🗉 WA2) and have the students say the word elated.

Show pages 12–13 again and explain that as you reread this part of the story aloud, you want the students to listen for how we know that Peppe and his sisters are elated. Reread the first two paragraphs on page 12 aloud.

Discuss as a class:

Q How do we know that Peppe and his sisters are elated?

Click 1 on word card 104 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “We know that Peppe and his sisters are elated because . . .”

4 Discuss Feeling Elated

Give examples of times when you or someone you know has felt elated.

You might say:

“When I was your age, I was a big baseball fan. When my favorite team won the World Series, I was elated. I shouted and jumped up and down with joy. I was elated on my wedding day. It was one of the happiest, most exciting days of my life.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you felt elated? When has something happened to you that made you extremely happy and excited? [Pause; click 2 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I felt elated when . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word elated and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If the students cannot recall times they were elated, ask alternative questions such as “When have you seen someone who was elated?” or “What might happen that would cause you to feel elated?”

INTRODUCE AND USE DEJECTED

5 Introduce and Define Dejected and Review Antonyms

Show pages 12–13 of Peppe the Lamplighter again. Remind the students that Peppe and his sisters are elated when he gets a job, but that Papa has a very different reaction.

Read the rest of page 12 aloud, beginning with the sentence “But Papa sat silent and still, his face like stone.”

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is dejected. Explain that dejected means “sad and discouraged or in low spirits.”

Explain that when Papa does not approve of his new job, Peppe goes from feeling elated to feeling dejected, or sad and in low spirits. Peppe hangs his head and does not feel like smiling because he is dejected.

Display word card 105 ( WA3) and have the students say the word dejected.

Explain that dejected and elated are antonyms. Remind the students that antonyms are words that are opposite in meaning.

6 Play “Elated or Dejected?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Elated or Dejected?” Explain that you will describe something that happens to someone. Then partners will discuss whether the person is elated or dejected and explain why they think that.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Nicole plays softball. She has been working hard to improve her batting. When she hits a home run in her next game, she throws her cap in the air and shouts, “I did it! I did it!”

Ask:

 Q Is Nicole elated or dejected? Why? [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Nicole] is [elated/dejected] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Ahmed has been looking forward to his grandmother’s visit for weeks. When his mother tells him that his grandmother is ill and cannot travel, Ahmed’s shoulders sag, and he tries not to cry.
- On Saturday morning, Michaela’s mother surprises the family. “Grab your swimsuits,” she tells them. “We’re going to the beach.” Michaela and her sister hug each other, hop up and down, and shout for joy.

Point to the word dejected and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words dejected and elated to it.

Teacher Note

You might review that sag means “droop or hang down.”

Review Circumstances, Elated, and Dejected

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words circumstances, elated, and dejected from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

circumstances

Circumstances are the “facts or events that affect or explain a situation.”

elated

Elated means “extremely happy and excited.”

dejected

Dejected means “sad and discouraged or in low spirits.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “What Are the Circumstances?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “What Are the Circumstances?” Explain that you will read a scenario in which our friend Milton is feeling either dejected or elated. Partners will use their imaginations to think of circumstances that might have caused Milton to feel as he does.

Read the following scenario aloud twice.

- Milton is dejected because of something that happened at school.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss the following:

 Q What circumstances might have caused Milton to feel dejected? [Pause; click 3 on WA4.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “A circumstance that might have caused Milton to feel dejected might be . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenario:

- Milton is elated because of something he received in the mail.

 Q What circumstances might have caused Milton to feel elated? [Pause; click 4 on WA4.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “A circumstance that might have caused Milton to feel elated might be . . .”

Introduce Pessimistic, Optimistic, and Ambition

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words pessimistic, optimistic, and ambition
- Review antonyms
- Use a thesaurus to determine word meanings
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

pessimistic

Pessimistic means “expecting the worst to happen.”
A pessimistic person thinks that things will turn out badly.

optimistic

Optimistic means “expecting the best to happen.”
An optimistic person believes that things will turn out well.

ambition

An ambition is a “strong desire to do or achieve something.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PESSIMISTIC AND OPTIMISTIC

1 Introduce and Define Pessimistic

Show pages 18–19 of Peppe the Lamplighter and review that Papa is angry because Peppe has taken a job as a lamplighter.

Read page 19 aloud, stopping after “But Papa stayed angry. ‘You’ll never amount to anything,’ he grumbled.”

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is pessimistic. Explain that pessimistic means “expecting the worst to happen.” Explain that a pessimistic person thinks that things will turn out badly.

Point out that when Papa says, “You’ll never amount to anything,” he is being pessimistic about Peppe’s future. Explain that Papa thinks things will turn out badly for Peppe in the future because he is working as a lamplighter now.

Display word cards 106–107 (WA5), and click to reveal word card 106. Have the students say the word pessimistic.

Materials

- Peppe the Lamplighter
- Word cards 106–107 (WA5)
- Word card 108 (WA6)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of pessimistic is pesimista.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of optimistic is optimista.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words optimistic and pessimistic to it.

Teacher Note

You might review that focus means “concentrate your attention or effort on something.”

2 Introduce and Define Optimistic and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is optimistic. Explain that optimistic and pessimistic are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

Direct the students’ attention to word cards 106–107 (WA5) and click to reveal word card 107. Have the students say the word optimistic. Point to optimistic and pessimistic on the word cards, and discuss as a class:

Q If optimistic and pessimistic are antonyms, and pessimistic means “expecting the worst to happen,” what do you think optimistic means?

Click 1 on word cards 106–107 (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA5

PROMPT 1: “Optimistic means [‘expecting the best to happen’].”

If necessary, explain that optimistic means “expecting the best to happen.” Explain that an optimistic person believes that things will turn out well.

3 Play “Optimistic or Pessimistic?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Optimistic or Pessimistic?” Explain that you will describe a situation; then partners will discuss whether the person in the situation is optimistic or pessimistic and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud, twice:

- Quentin is having a hard time learning division facts. Even though he has been focusing and working hard, he still has not memorized them. He shouts, “I will never learn these facts! I’ll be fifty and I still won’t know them!”

Ask:

Q Is Quentin optimistic or pessimistic? Why? [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think Quentin is [optimistic/pessimistic] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Sasha learns that her parents are going on a trip and she is being sent to her Aunt Jo’s house for the summer. She says, “That’s ideal. Aunt Jo will teach me to swim, and I’ll have lots of fun playing with my cousins.”

Q Is Sasha optimistic or pessimistic? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think Sasha is [optimistic/pessimistic] because . . .”

- Tomo is going for a job interview. As he leaves the house, he says to his wife, “I don’t know why I’m even bothering to go to this interview. I’ll never get the job.”

Q Is Tomo optimistic or pessimistic? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think Tomo is [optimistic/pessimistic] because . . .”

Invite partners to create their own “Optimistic or Pessimistic?” scenarios and share them with the class.

Point to the words pessimistic and optimistic and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

INTRODUCE AND USE AMBITION

4 Introduce and Define Ambition

Show pages 22–23 of Peppe the Lamplighter. Review that Peppe comes to loathe his job as a lamplighter, and one night he decides not to light the lamps. When Assunta does not come home, Papa begs Peppe to change his mind.

Read the fourth paragraph on page 22 aloud, beginning with “Peppe couldn’t believe what he was hearing.”

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is ambition. Explain that an ambition is a “strong desire to do or achieve something.”

Explain that Peppe’s ambition, or strong desire, is to do something important with this life—to get an education and maybe become a doctor.

Display word card 108 (WA6) and have the students say the word ambition.

Teacher Note

You might review that ideal means “perfect.”

Teacher Note

Using a previously taught word, like loathe, when giving an explanation is an excellent way to review the word. You might review that loathe means “hate, or strongly dislike.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of ambition is ambición.

5 Talk About Ambitions

Remind the students that an ambition is a “strong desire to do or achieve something.” Give examples of ambitions you have now or have had in the past.

You might say:

“I love to cook. One of my ambitions is to learn to cook dishes from countries around the world. I also like to run, and my ambition is to run a marathon. When I was your age, one of my ambitions was to become a veterinarian. I loved animals and wanted to be able to help animals that were sick or hurt.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is an ambition you have? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “My ambition is to [play in a band].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word ambition and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Materials

- A print thesaurus for each pair of students

Teacher Note

If you have not created a synonym chart (see the more strategy practice activity “Start a Synonym Chart” in Week 4), write vocabulary words for which the students have discussed synonyms where everyone can see them (for example, transform, topple, analyze, boost, yearn, desire, and intricate) and have the students use the thesaurus to find synonyms for the words.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Use a Thesaurus

Display the synonym chart where all the students can see it.

Distribute a thesaurus to each pair of students. Explain that a thesaurus is a “book of synonyms, or words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.” As a class, discuss:

Q When might you use a thesaurus? When might a thesaurus be helpful?

If necessary, explain that you might use a thesaurus when you are writing to help you find just the right word or to avoid using the same word over and over again.

Have partners open their thesaurus to the first two-page spread of words. Point out that the words are listed alphabetically and that the guide words at the top of each page are the first and last words on the page. Explain that guide words help you find a word you are looking for. Also point out that the thesaurus provides each word’s part of speech (whether the word is a noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech) and its synonyms.

Direct the students' attention to the synonym chart and review that these are sets of synonyms the students have discussed this year. Explain that partners will choose one word from the synonym chart, look it up in the thesaurus, and share the additional synonyms they find with the class.

Give partners a minute or two to choose a word, find it in the thesaurus, and discuss its synonyms. When most pairs have finished, discuss the words and their synonyms as a class by asking:

Q What word did you look up? What synonyms did you find for the word?

Follow up by asking:

Q Which of these synonyms are already on our synonym chart? Which synonyms should we add to the chart?

Add the synonyms the students suggest to the chart.

Teacher Note

Circulate as the students look up the words. If the students are having trouble finding a word, signal for their attention and show the students how to use the guide words to locate a word.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when using a thesaurus, it is a good idea for students to look up the synonyms they are finding in a dictionary, where they can find more information about the words' meanings and how they are used. Synonyms listed for a word in a thesaurus may have varying shades of meaning and uses.

Review Pessimistic, Optimistic, and Ambition

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words pessimistic, optimistic, and ambition from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

pessimistic

Pessimistic means "expecting the worst to happen." A pessimistic person thinks that things will turn out badly.

optimistic

Optimistic means "expecting the best to happen." An optimistic person believes that things will turn out well.

ambition

An ambition is a "strong desire to do or achieve something."

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA7)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 18 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think was the most interesting to talk about? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA7

pessimistic   optimistic   ambition

PROMPT 1: I think the word _____ was the most interesting to talk about because . . .

1   2   3   4   5   6

PROMPT 1: "I think the word [optimistic] was the most interesting to talk about because . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity "What Might You Say or Do?"

Tell the students that partners will do the activity "What Might You Say or Do?" Explain that you will describe an imaginary situation and partners will discuss what they might say or do in that situation.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- You are about to run a race. You are feeling pessimistic about your chances of winning.

Ask:

Q What might you say if you were feeling pessimistic about your chances of winning the race? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "If I were feeling pessimistic, I might say ['I don't think I'll win this race'] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q Why might someone feel pessimistic about his or her chances of winning a race?

Click 3 on the daily review cards (WA7) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Someone might feel pessimistic because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following situations:

- You are about to take a math test. You are feeling optimistic about how you will do.

Q What might you say if you were feeling optimistic about how you will do on the test? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “If I were feeling optimistic, I might say [‘I know I’m going to do well on this test’] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q Why might someone feel optimistic about how well he or she will do on a test?

Click 5 to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 5: “Someone might feel optimistic because . . .”

- Your ambition is to become a famous writer and illustrator of children’s books.

Ask:

Q What might you do to prepare now if your ambition were to become a writer and illustrator of children’s books? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “If my ambition were to become a writer and illustrator of children’s books, I might prepare by . . .”

---

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

---

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 17 and 18, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 18 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA8)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

fume

Fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

gleeful

Gleeful means “happy, delighted, or joyous.”

imprudent

Imprudent means “unwise or careless.” If you are imprudent, you do not use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

rugged

Rugged means “tough and strong.” Rugged also means “having a rough, uneven surface” and “harsh or difficult.”

secure

Secure means “fasten, or tie firmly.” Secure also means “safe and protected.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

2 Do the Activity “Which Word Goes With?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Which Word Goes With?” Explain that you will write a word where everyone can see it and they are to think about which of the vocabulary words goes with the word you write. Tell the students that the word you write might go with more than one of the vocabulary words. Explain that partners may not always agree and that is fine. What is important is that they explain their thinking.

Write the word mountaintop where everyone can see it and read the word aloud. Then point to the ongoing review cards (WA8) and ask:

-  Q Which of these words do you think goes with mountaintop? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA8

fumegleefulimprudent

ruggedsecure

PROMPT 1: I think _____ goes with mountaintop because . . .

PROMPT 1: “I think [rugged] goes with mountaintop because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Write the word tease where everyone can see it, and ask:

-  Q Which of the words do you think goes with tease? Why do you think that? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [fume] goes with tease because . . .”

Use the same procedure to discuss the word helicopter.

-  Q Which of the words do you think goes with helicopter? Why do you think that? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [gleeful] goes with helicopter because . . .”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, think aloud about associations you might make and why. For example, say “I think rugged goes with mountaintop, because I think a mountaintop might have a rough, uneven surface. I also think you might be happy or delighted to reach the top of a mountain, so gleeful goes with mountaintop, too. I think secure can go with mountaintop, also, because if you camped on top of a mountain, you would want to make sure your tent and belongings were securely fastened.”

Teacher Note

If the students have trouble making associations, think aloud about associations you might make or ask questions, such as “How might the word imprudent go with tease? Why might it be imprudent to tease someone?” “How might the word fume go with tease? Would you expect someone to fume if they were teased?”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' associations and explanations show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using or explaining any of the words? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are the students using the independent word-learning strategies as they read independently?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 187 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences. For example, if the students are struggling with the word gleeful, ask questions such as "When have you felt gleeful?" and "What would make you feel most gleeful?"

Introduce Rove, Inadequate, and Adequate

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words rove, inadequate, and adequate
- Review synonyms
- Review antonyms
- Review the prefix in-
- Take responsibility for their learning and behavior

Words Taught

rove

Rove means “wander about or roam.”

inadequate

Inadequate means “not adequate, or not enough or not good enough.”

adequate

Adequate means “enough or good enough.”

INTRODUCE AND USE ROVE

1 Introduce and Define Rove and Review Synonyms

Briefly review Coming to America: The Story of Immigration.

Show pages 4–5 and review that the first people came to North America thousands of years ago. Read page 4 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is rove. Explain that rove means “wander about or roam” and that the words rove, wander, and roam are synonyms.

Tell the students that when people rove, they wander about, often without knowing exactly where they are going. Explain that thousands of years ago, ancient hunters roved, or wandered, to the Americas. These nomads roved to the Americas “more or less by accident” as they searched for food.

Display word card 109 (WA1) and have the students say the word rove.

2 Talk About Roving

Tell the students that roving, or wandering about, can sometimes lead to a fun experience or an unexpected adventure. Give examples of times when you roved, and tell the students what happened.

Materials

- Coming to America: The Story of Immigration
- Word card 109 (WA1)
- Word cards 110–111 (WA2)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word rove and its synonyms to it.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you roved through a neighborhood, park, or woods that you had never been to before? What did you see or do?” “When have you roved to someplace fun with a friend or family member? What made it fun?” or “When have you roved through a house or building? What did you see or do?” If the students cannot recall times when they have roved, ask alternative questions such as “Where would you like to rove? Why?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of inadequate is inadecuado/a.

You might say:

“My husband and I were on vacation in the mountains. One day we roved on foot through the woods and came upon a beautiful clearing by a stream where we saw a beaver building a dam. One Sunday we decided to rove in our car with no destination in mind. Our roving led us to a town that was having an outdoor festival. We stayed all day listening to music and eating great food.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you roved by foot, bike, or car? What did you see or do when you roved? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA1

rove

PROMPT 1:

I roved . . .

and

When I roved, I . . .

PROMPT 1: “I roved . . .” and “When I roved, I . . .”

Point to the word rove and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INADEQUATE AND ADEQUATE

3 Introduce and Define Inadequate

Show pages 12–13 of Coming to America and review that in the 1600s and 1700s thousands of European immigrants came to North America searching for a better life. Read the last paragraph on page 12 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is inadequate. Explain that inadequate means “not enough or not good enough.”

Point to the illustration on page 13, and point out that there was inadequate, or not enough, living space onboard the ships. Because the space was inadequate, the immigrants lived in cramped quarters where they could not sit or rest comfortably. Explain that their supplies of food and water often were inadequate as well. There was not enough food and water for everyone.

Display word cards 110–111 (WA2), and click to reveal word card 110. Have the students say the word inadequate.

4 Introduce and Define Adequate and Review Antonyms and the Prefix in-

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is adequate. Direct the students' attention to word cards 110–111 (WA2), and click to reveal word card 111. Have the students say the word adequate.

Point to inadequate and adequate on the word cards, and explain that inadequate and adequate are antonyms, or words with opposite meanings.

Discuss as a class:

Q If inadequate and adequate are antonyms, and inadequate means "not enough or not good enough," what do you think adequate means?

Click 1 on word cards 110–111 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: "I think adequate means ['enough or good enough']."

If necessary, explain that adequate means "enough or good enough." Explain that if living space had been adequate, or good enough, on the ships, then the immigrants would have had enough room to sit or rest comfortably. If food and water supplies had been adequate, there would have been enough food and water for everyone.

Point to the prefix in- in inadequate on the word card, and review that in- is a prefix that means "not." Point out that when the prefix in- is added to the word adequate, it makes the new word inadequate, which means "not adequate, or not enough or not good enough."

5 Play "Adequate or Inadequate?"

Tell the students that they will now play a game called "Adequate or Inadequate?" Explain that you will describe a situation; then partners will decide whether what you have described is adequate or inadequate and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- There is just enough milk in the carton for Rachel and her sister to have milk on their cereal.

Ask:

Q Is the amount of milk in the carton adequate or inadequate? Why?
[Click 2 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of adequate is adecuado/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix in-, add the word inadequate to it.

If you started an antonym chart, add the words inadequate and adequate to it.

PROMPT 2: “The amount of milk is [adequate/inadequate] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Miss Tam is handing out pencils to her students and discovers that she is one pencil short.

Q Is the number of pencils adequate or inadequate? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The number of pencils is [adequate/inadequate] because . . .”

- Mr. Billings is unhappy with the job Robby did weeding the garden because Robby didn’t pull all of the weeds.

Q Did Robby do an adequate or inadequate job weeding the garden? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Robby did an [adequate/inadequate] job because . . .”

Point to the words inadequate and adequate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

Teacher Note

Academic language is the language necessary for success in school. It includes general academic words commonly found across content areas and in many different kinds of texts as well as content area or domain-specific words and terms. Knowledge of academic language is important for all students’ success in school and is especially critical for English Language Learners.

Teacher Note

You might explain that after the American Revolution, the British colonies formed the first thirteen states of the United States.

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Colony

Explain that authors who write about social studies topics such as American history often use historical vocabulary to discuss their subjects. Explain that in the book Coming to America, author Betsy Maestro uses the word colony to describe the places where early European settlers lived in North America more than 300 years ago.

Write the word colony where everyone can see it. Tell the students that as you read the sentence from the book that includes the word colony, you want them to listen for the word and think about what it might mean. Then read these sentences from page 10 aloud: “By about 1700, thousands of settlers lived in the Spanish, French, and English colonies of North America. Other new Americans had arrived from the Netherlands, Sweden, Germany, Finland, and Wales.” Ask:

Q What do you think the word colony might mean?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that a colony is an “area or region controlled by another country and settled by people from that country.” Tell the students that the Spanish, French, and British governments each claimed areas of North America in the early 1700s. Point out that many people from other countries also moved to North America, but they did not form colonies at that time, and their countries of origin had no power over any part of North America.

Review Rove, Inadequate, and Adequate

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words rove, inadequate, and adequate from Day 1
- Take responsibility for their learning and behavior

Words Reviewed

rove

Rove means “wander about or roam.”

inadequate

Inadequate means “not adequate, or not enough or not good enough.”

adequate

Adequate means “enough or good enough.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA3). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

WA3

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] say that I roved because . . .”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA3)

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, ask:

-  Q If you had six quarters and wanted to buy a bottle of juice that cost $1.00, would the amount of money you had be adequate or inadequate? Why?
[Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The amount of money I had would be [adequate/inadequate] because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to rove on the daily review cards (WA3), and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word rove. Partners will then discuss whether or not rove makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Darius wants to rove, so he gets a map and plans exactly where he will go.

Ask:

-  Q Does the word rove make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that?
[Click 3 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The word [rove] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[adequate]

- Imani is planning a day at the beach. She packs towels, an adequate supply of sunscreen, a book, and a bottle of water.

[inadequate]

- Mr. Hitari is fuming. “I paid those boys to rake my lawn, but there are leaves everywhere. The job they did is inadequate.”

Teacher Note

You might review that fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

Introduce Scrutinize, Ineligible, and Eligible

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words scrutinize, ineligible, and eligible
- Review shades of meaning
- Review the prefix in-
- Review antonyms
- Take responsibility for their learning and behavior

Words Taught

scrutinize

Scrutinize means “look at very carefully.”

ineligible

Ineligible means “not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something.”

eligible

Eligible means “allowed to do or have something.”

Materials

- Coming to America
- Word card 112 (WA4)
- Word cards 113–114 (WA5)

INTRODUCE AND USE SCRUTINIZE

1 Introduce and Define Scrutinize

Show pages 26–27 of Coming to America. Review that many ships bringing immigrants to the United States anchored at Ellis Island, where doctors checked the immigrants for diseases.

Read the first paragraph on page 26 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is scrutinize. Explain that scrutinize means “look at very carefully.”

Explain that doctors first gave the immigrants a quick examination. Immigrants with health problems were marked with chalk so that doctors could scrutinize them, or look at them very carefully, later.

Display word card 112 (WA4) and have the students say the word scrutinize.

2 Review Shades of Meaning and Discuss Scrutinizing

Point out that scrutinizing is similar to looking, with this important difference—when you scrutinize something, you do not just glance at it or look at it for a few moments. You look at it very carefully.

Ask the students to pay close attention as you scrutinize a wristwatch. Then scrutinize the watch by looking at it carefully from all angles, including examining the back.

Discuss as a class:

Q What did you see me do when I scrutinized the watch?

Click 1 on word card 112 (WA4) to reveal the first prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

scrutinize

PROMPT 1: When you scrutinized the watch, you . . .

1 2 3

WA4

PROMPT 1: “When you scrutinized the watch, you . . .”

Discuss as a class:

Q Why might someone scrutinize a watch?

Click 2 to reveal the next prompt, and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “You might scrutinize a watch because . . .”

Tell the students that you are going to have them scrutinize their right hands. Explain that afterwards, you will have partners discuss what they did and what they noticed. Then give the students a minute to scrutinize their right hands.

Ask:

 Q What did you do when you scrutinized your hand? What did you notice?
[Click 3 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “When I scrutinized my hand, I . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word scrutinize and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE INELIGIBLE AND ELIGIBLE

3 Introduce and Define Ineligible

Show pages 26–27 of the book again, and review that doctors scrutinized immigrants with health problems. Read page 27 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is ineligible. Explain that ineligible means “not allowed to do or have something.”

Explain that immigrants with permanent health problems were ineligible to stay in the United States—they were not allowed to stay—and they were sent back to the countries from which they came.

Display word cards 113–114 (WA5), and click to reveal word card 113. Have the students say the word ineligible.

4 Introduce and Define Eligible and Review Antonyms and the Prefix in-

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is eligible. Have the students say the word eligible, and add it to the chart.

Direct the students’ attention to word cards 113–114 (WA5), and click to reveal word card 114. Have the students say the word eligible.

Discuss as a class:

Q If ineligible and eligible are antonyms, and ineligible means “not allowed to do or have something,” what do you think eligible means?

Click 1 on word cards 113–114 (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “I think eligible means [‘allowed to do or have something].”

If necessary, explain that eligible means “allowed to do or have something.” Explain that most new arrivals passed the health examination and were eligible, or allowed, to stay in the country.

Point to the prefix in- in ineligible on the word card. Point out that, like the word inadequate, the word ineligible uses the prefix in-, which means “not.” Explain that when the prefix in- is added to the word eligible, it makes the new word ineligible, which means “not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something.”

5 Discuss Eligible and Ineligible

Tell the students that a person must be 18 years old or older to be eligible, or allowed, to vote for president of the United States. Point out to the students that people their age are ineligible to vote for president because they are younger than 18 years old.

Teacher Note

Using a previously taught word, like permanent, when giving an explanation is an excellent way to review words. You might review that permanent means “lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever.”

Teacher Note

You might have the students say the syllables slowly and pronounce the word several times.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix in-, add the word ineligible to it.

If you started an antonym chart, add the words ineligible and eligible to it.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think it is right that people your age are ineligible to vote for president? Why?

Click 2 to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I [think/do not think] it is right that people my age are ineligible to vote for president because . . .”

Explain that in most states, a person must be 16 years old to be eligible to get a driver’s license. People who are younger than 16 years old are ineligible to get licenses.

Discuss as a class:

Q Do you think people who are younger than 16 years old should be eligible to get driver’s licenses?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I [think/do not think] people who are younger than 16 years old should be eligible to get driver’s licenses because . . .”

6 Play “Is Milton Eligible or Ineligible?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Is Milton Eligible or Ineligible?” Explain that you will describe something our friend Milton wants to do; then partners will decide whether he is eligible or ineligible and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton wants to play football. The rules say that players must be eleven years old and Milton is ten.

Ask:

 Q Is Milton eligible or ineligible to play? Why? [Click 4 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Milton is [eligible/ineligible] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton wants to ride the new roller coaster at the amusement park. The sign says that you must be 48 inches tall to ride. Milton is 49 inches tall.

 Q Is Milton eligible or ineligible to ride? Why? [Point to prompt 4.] Turn to your partner.

- Milton belongs to a science club and wants to earn a nature badge. To earn the badge, he needs to identify leaves from 15 different trees. Milton has identified the leaves of 12 trees.

Q Is Milton eligible or ineligible for the badge? Why? [Point to prompt 4.]
Turn to your partner.

Point to the words ineligible and eligible and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

---

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Explore Other Words That Use the Prefix in-

Write the words inadequate and ineligible where everyone can see them, and review that the words use the prefix in-, which means “not.” Review that inadequate means “not adequate, or not enough or not good enough,” and that ineligible means “not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something.” Review that the word pairs adequate and inadequate and eligible and ineligible are antonyms, or words that are opposite in meaning.

Tell the students that knowing that the prefix in- means “not” can help them figure out the meanings of other words that use the prefix.

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the prefix in- and the word expensive, what do you think the word inexpensive means? What do we mean when we say that something is inexpensive?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompts to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Inexpensive means [‘not expensive’]. If something is inexpensive, it . . .”

If necessary, explain that inexpensive means “not expensive, or low in price.” If something is inexpensive, it does not cost a lot of money.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following words:

- inconvenient
- inexact

---

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

---

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix in-, add the words inexpensive, inconvenient, and inexact to it.

Day 4

Review Scrutinize, Ineligible, and Eligible

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA6)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words scrutinize, ineligible, and eligible from Day 3
- Take responsibility for their learning and behavior

Words Reviewed

scrutinize

Scrutinize means "look at very carefully."

ineligible

Ineligible means "not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something."

eligible

Eligible means "allowed to do or have something."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA6). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q If you were going to form a basketball team, what would people need to do to be eligible to join your team? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

scrutinize ineligible eligible

PROMPT 1: To be eligible, people would need to _____ because . . .

1 2 3 4 5 6

WA6

PROMPT 1: "To be eligible, people would need to [show me that they can dribble and shoot] because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q If you wanted to join a club but were told that you were ineligible, what might you say or do? Why? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If I were told I was ineligible, I might [ask why I was ineligible and what I needed to do to become eligible] because . . .”

Q If you noticed someone scrutinizing you, what might you say or do? Why? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “If I noticed someone scrutinizing me, I might [tell the person to stop] because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Might You Say or Do?”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “What Might You Say or Do?” Remind the students that you will describe a situation; then partners will discuss what they might say or do in that situation and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Your teacher asks you to scrutinize a leaf on a plant.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What might you do to scrutinize the leaf? Why? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “To scrutinize the leaf, I would [use a magnifying glass] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Your class is going on a field trip. Your teacher says you are ineligible to go because you haven’t returned your permission slip.

Q What might you do if you were ineligible to go because you had not returned your permission slip? Why? [Pause; click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “If I were ineligible to go on the field trip, I would [ask the teacher to call my parents] because . . .”

- To be eligible to go to a camp for performers, you must show that you can sing or dance.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Q What might you do or say to show that you were eligible to go to the camp? Why? [Pause; click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: "To show that I was eligible to go to the camp, I would [sing as well as I could] because . . ."

Day 5

Ongoing Review

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA7)
- Ongoing review activity (WA8)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Take responsibility for their learning and behavior

Words Reviewed

glum

Glum means "unhappy, gloomy, or miserable."

inconsistent

Inconsistent means "not consistent, or not always the same."

mysterious

Mysterious means "very hard to explain or understand."

optimistic

Optimistic means "expecting the best to happen." An optimistic person believes that things will turn out well.

prudent

Prudent means "wise or careful." If you are prudent, you use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Introduce the Activity “Describe the Character”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “Describe the Character.” Explain that you will read a story aloud; then partners will decide which vocabulary word best describes the main character in the story and explain why they think so. Tell the students that before they do the activity in pairs, they will practice as a class.

Display the ongoing review activity (WA8) and begin the activity:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first story (see WA8 below). Point to the story and read it aloud, slowly and clearly.
  - Story 1: Roberta wants to go to college. She saves some of her allowance each week to help pay for it. When she is old enough, she gets a job after school and saves most of what she makes. When she is ready to go to college, Roberta has a good start on the money she needs.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Roberta? Why?

Give the students a few moments to think; then click 1 again to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “[Prudent] best describes Roberta because . . .”

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.

glum	inconsistent	mysterious	optimistic	prudent
------	--------------	------------	------------	---------

STORY 1: Roberta wants to go to college. She saves some of her allowance each week to help pay for it. When she is old enough, she gets a job after school and saves most of what she makes. When she is ready to go to college, Roberta has a good start on the money she needs.

1 2 3 4 5

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Teacher Note

Each story on the ongoing review activity (WA8) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, reread the story, and think aloud about which word best describes Roberta. For example, say “I think the word prudent best describes Roberta because prudent means ‘wise or careful.’ Roberta carefully saves money over many years so she can pay for college. This shows that Roberta uses good judgment.” Then read the next story and discuss it as a class rather than in pairs.

WA8

3 Continue the Activity “Describe the Character” in Pairs

Continue doing the activity with the students in pairs.

1. Click 2 to reveal the second story and read it aloud.
  - Story 2: Mr. Wilson serves his wife lunch at different times each day. On some days, he serves lunch at eleven o'clock. On other days, he serves lunch at noon or one o'clock.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Mr. Wilson? Why? [Click 2 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Inconsistent] best describes Mr. Wilson because . . .”

Have partners take turns using the prompt to talk about the questions. Then have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 2 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.
4. Click 2 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 3: Tallulah’s best friend has moved away. Tallulah spends most of her time alone in her room. She won’t go out to play. She grumpily tells her mom, “I’ll never have another best friend.” (glum)
- Story 4: Dwayne wakes up every morning with a smile on his face. “It’s a beautiful day,” he says, even if it is raining. “I know that good things will happen today.” (optimistic)
- Story 5: No one knew where Ms. Walker came from or what she did for a living. She always parked her car down the street instead of in her own driveway. She never looked up or said hello to people passing by. The neighbors all wondered about her, but nobody really understood. (mysterious)

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -er

Write the word glum where everyone can see it, and review that glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.” Then write the word glummer next to the word glum. Point to the suffix -er in glummer, and review that -er is a suffix that means “more.”

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the word glum and the suffix -er, what do you think the word glummer means?

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “The word glummer means [‘more glum’].”

If necessary, explain that glummer means “more glum, or more unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.”

Ask:

Q Would you be glummer if you lost your lunch or your homework? Why? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I would be glummer if I lost [my lunch/my homework] because . . .”

Use the same procedure to discuss the words rowdy and rowdier.

Ask:

Q When would you be rowdier: during a game of dodgeball or during a wedding ceremony? Why?

PROMPT: “I would be rowdier during [a game of dodgeball] because . . .”

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to glum, you double the m to spell glummer.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -er, add the words glummer and rowdier to it.

For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to rowdy, you change the y to an i to spell rowdier.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that a ceremony is an “event that celebrates a special occasion or honors someone.”

These materials can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Mistreat, Apprehensive, and Refuge

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words mistreat, apprehensive, and refuge
- Review the prefix mis-
- Review synonyms
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

mistreat

Mistreat means “treat badly, cruelly, or unfairly.”

apprehensive

Apprehensive means “worried or anxious that something bad may happen.”

refuge

Refuge means “shelter or protection from trouble or danger, or a place that provides shelter or protection.”

INTRODUCE AND USE MISTREAT

1 Introduce and Define Mistreat and Review the Prefix mis-

Briefly review A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman.

Show pages 6–7 of the book and review that Harriet loathed being a slave and that sometimes she did not do as she was told.

Read pages 6–7 aloud, and point out that Miss Susan acted very cruelly and violently toward Harriet. Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is mistreat, and explain that mistreat means “treat badly, cruelly, or unfairly.” Explain that Miss Susan horribly mistreated Harriet when she chased after Harriet and whipped her for taking a lump of sugar from the bowl.

Display word card 115 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word mistreat. Point to the prefix mis- in mistreat, and review that mis- is a prefix that means “wrong or wrongly, or bad or badly.” Explain that when the prefix mis- is added to the word treat, which means “act or behave toward someone in a particular way,” it makes the new word mistreat, which means “act or behave wrongly or badly toward someone, or treat someone badly.”

Materials

- A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman
- Word card 115 (WA1)
- Word card 116 (WA2)
- Word card 117 (WA3)

Teacher Note

Using a previously taught word, like loathe, to discuss a new word is an excellent way to review the word. You might review that loathe means “hate, or strongly dislike.”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that earlier they discussed these words that use the prefix mis-: mislead (“lead someone to believe something that is not true”) and misjudge (“judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation”).

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix mis-, add the word mistreat to it.

2 Discuss Whether Milton Is Mistreated

Explain that you will describe something that happens to Milton; then partners will discuss whether or not Milton is mistreated and explain why they think that.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton's mother divides a tuna sandwich into equal parts and gives one part to Milton and one to his sister.

Ask:

Q Is Milton mistreated? Why? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

WA1

mistreat

PROMPT 1: I think Milton [is/is not] mistreated because . . .

1

PROMPT 1: “I think Milton [is/is not] mistreated because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Two boys push Milton down and take his lunch money.
- At the park, a group of children won't let Milton play ball with them. They tell him that he is a bad player and that he should go home.

Point to the word mistreat and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE APPREHENSIVE

3 Introduce and Define Apprehensive and Review Synonyms

Show pages 8–9 of the book and review that Harriet and her family were owned by Edward Brodas and were forced to live and work on his plantation. Read page 8 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is apprehensive. Explain that apprehensive means “worried or anxious that something bad may happen.” Point out that the words apprehensive, worried, and anxious are synonyms.

Explain that Harriet was apprehensive, or worried, that one day she would be sold as her sisters were.

Display word card 116 (🌐 WA2) and have the students say the word apprehensive.

4 Discuss Being Apprehensive

Review that when you are apprehensive, you are worried or anxious that something bad may happen. You are jittery or uneasy about the future.

Give examples of times when you or someone you know has been apprehensive.

You might say:

“When I was 16, I had just gotten my driver’s license. I was a brand-new driver, and I was really apprehensive about driving. The first few times I drove by myself, I was worried that I might get into an accident and hurt someone. But I was a better driver than I thought, and everything went fine. My daughter was apprehensive the day she started kindergarten. I think most children are. They feel anxious because they don’t know the teacher or other children very well, and they worry that they might not like kindergarten.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q When have you felt apprehensive? Why were you apprehensive? [Pause; click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I felt apprehensive when [my family moved to Glen Cove] because . . .”

Point to the word apprehensive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word apprehensive and its synonyms to it.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of apprehensive is aprensivo/a.

Teacher Note

You might review that jittery means “worried and nervous.”

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you felt apprehensive because you were [doing something/going somewhere] for the first time?” or “When have you felt apprehensive because you didn’t know how something might turn out?”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that yearn means “wish or long for something very strongly, especially something difficult to get.”

Teacher Note

You might explain that the word refugee is related to the word refuge. A refugee is “a person who leaves his or her home or country to find safety, especially during a war or for political or religious reasons.”

Teacher Note

If necessary, explain that standing under a tree during a lightning storm is very dangerous because lightning strikes whatever is tallest in the area. Explain that the safest thing to do when there is lightning is to crouch down in a place that is away from anything tall and metal.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of refuge is refugio.

INTRODUCE AND USE REFUGE

5 Introduce and Define Refuge

Show pages 16–17 of the book and review that Harriet yearned to be free, so she escaped from the plantation and traveled north. Read page 16 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is refuge. Explain that refuge means “shelter or protection from trouble or danger, or a place that provides shelter or protection.”

Explain that a white woman Harriet knew gave her refuge, or shelter and protection. As Harriet traveled north, other people who thought that slavery was wrong also provided Harriet with refuge in their homes.

Display word card 117 (🗣️ WA3) and have the students say the word refuge.

6 Talk About Taking Refuge

Explain that when we find shelter or protection from a storm, we say we “take refuge” from the storm. For example, if you are caught outside in a rain shower, you might take refuge, or find shelter or protection, by standing in a doorway or going into a building.

Discuss as a class:

Q Would a tree be a good place to take refuge in a lightning storm? Why?

Click 1 on word card 117 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “A tree [would/would not] be a good place to take refuge because . . .”

Ask:

 Q Where would you take refuge in your house if a tornado or hurricane were coming? Why? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I would take refuge [in the basement] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following question:

 Q Where would you take refuge from hot weather? Why? [Click 3 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I would take refuge from hot weather [in a swimming pool] because . . .”

Point to the word refuge and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Mistreat, Apprehensive, and Refuge

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words mistreat, apprehensive, and refuge from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

mistreat

Mistreat means “treat badly, cruelly, or unfairly.”

apprehensive

Apprehensive means “worried or anxious that something bad may happen.”

refuge

Refuge means “shelter or protection from trouble or danger, or a place that provides shelter or protection.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Would you provide refuge to a dog that has been mistreated? Why?
[Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

mistreatapprehensiverefuge

PROMPT 1: I [would/would not] provide refuge to a dog that has been mistreated because . . .

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I [would/would not] provide refuge to a dog that has been mistreated because . . .”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following question:

[apprehensive]

Q Would you be apprehensive if you had to sing a song by yourself in front of the entire school next week? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "I [would/would not] be apprehensive because . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game "Which Word Goes With?"

Tell the students that partners will play the game "Which Word Goes With?" Review that you will write a word on the board, and they are to think about which of yesterday's vocabulary words goes with the word you write.

Write the word fear where everyone can see it, and read the word aloud. Then direct the students' attention to the daily review cards (WA4) and ask:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think goes with fear? Why do you think that? [Click 3 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: "I think [mistreat] goes with fear because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Write the word cat where everyone can see it, read it aloud, and ask:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think goes with cat? Why do you think that? [Click 4 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: "I think [apprehensive] goes with cat because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by thinking aloud about associations you make or by asking questions such as "How might mistreat go with fear? Why might someone feel fearful if he or she is being mistreated?" "How might apprehensive go with fear? Why might you feel fearful if you are apprehensive?" and "How might refuge go with fear? Why might a person who is feeling fearful seek refuge?"

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by thinking aloud about associations you might make or by asking questions such as "How might mistreat go with cat? How might a cat be mistreated?" "How might apprehensive go with cat? Why might you be apprehensive about a pet cat?" and "How might refuge go with cat? Where might a cat take refuge in a storm?"

Introduce Bliss, Valiant, and Revere

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words bliss, valiant, and revere
- Review synonyms
- Work in a responsible way

Words Taught

bliss

Bliss is “great joy or complete happiness.”

valiant

Valiant means “brave or courageous.”

revere

Revere means “greatly respect and admire.”

INTRODUCE AND USE BLISS

1 Introduce and Define Bliss and Review Synonyms

Show pages 18–19 of A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman. Review that Harriet Tubman traveled on the Underground Railroad until she reached Pennsylvania, a state that outlawed owning slaves. Read page 18 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is bliss. Explain that bliss is “great joy or complete happiness.” Point out that the words bliss, joy, and happiness are synonyms.

Explain that when Harriet became a free woman, she felt bliss, or great joy. She said, “I felt like I was in heaven.”

Display word card 118 (WA5) and have the students say the word bliss.

2 Discuss Feeling Bliss

Remind the students that earlier they learned the word elated and that elated means “extremely happy and excited.” Explain that when you feel bliss, you feel elated.

Give examples of times when you or someone you know felt bliss.

You might say:

“I felt bliss, or great joy, when my children were born. I recently went on a beach vacation. I did nothing but rest and relax. It was bliss. My son felt bliss when he got his dog Spanky. It was his first pet, and he was thrilled.”

Materials

- A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman
- Word card 118 (WA5)
- Word card 119 (WA6)
- Word card 120 (WA7)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word bliss and its synonyms to it.

Teacher Note

Using a previously taught vocabulary word like elated when giving an explanation is an excellent way to review the word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you felt bliss? [Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA5

bliss

PROMPT 1: I felt bliss when . . .

1

PROMPT 1: “I felt bliss when . . .”

Point to the word bliss and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE VALIANT

3 Introduce and Define Valiant

Show pages 30–31 of the book and review that after a long, remarkable life, Harriet Tubman was more than ninety years old when she died in 1913. Read page 31 aloud, emphasizing the words brave and courageous.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is valiant. Explain that valiant means “brave or courageous.” Point out that the words valiant, brave, and courageous are synonyms. Tell the students that when the author described Harriet, he could have replaced the words brave and courageous with the word valiant and written, “Harriet Tubman was a valiant woman.”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words valiant, brave, and courageous to it.

Display word card 119 (🗣️ WA6) and have the students say the word valiant. Then discuss as a class:

Q What did Harriet do during her long life that showed she was valiant?

Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “Harriet showed she was valiant when she . . .”

If necessary, explain that Harriet showed she was valiant when she ran away from the plantation to find freedom, led hundreds of other people to freedom, and acted as a spy during the Civil War.

4 Play “Valiant or Not Valiant?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Valiant or Not Valiant?” Explain that you will read a scenario. Partners will discuss whether the person or animal in the scenario is valiant or not valiant and explain why they think that.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Serena is very afraid of spiders, but when she sees a spider crawling on her sleeping brother’s arm, she reaches out and gently brushes it off him.

Ask:

Q Is Serena valiant? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Serena] [is/is not] valiant because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following scenarios:

- Dave and his dog Digger are playing on a frozen pond. The ice breaks and Dave falls in. Digger crawls to Dave, grabs his jacket in his teeth, and pulls him out of the water.

Q Is Digger valiant? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

- Ms. Brooks sees a traffic accident. People are hurt and one of the cars is on fire. Ms. Brooks drives away, saying to herself, “I’m late and I don’t want to get involved.”

Q Is Ms. Brooks valiant? Why? [Point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word valiant and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of valiant is valiente.

INTRODUCE AND USE REVERE

5 Introduce and Define Revere

Show pages 30–31 of the book again, and review that Harriet was a valiant woman.

Reread this sentence on page 31 aloud: “She was admired and loved by the many people who knew her.”

Tell the students that the last word that they will learn today is revere and explain that revere means “greatly respect and admire.” Explain that the people who knew Harriet revered, or respected and admired, her because of her courage and all that she accomplished.

Display word card 120 (🔊 WA7) and have the students say the word revere.

6 Discuss People We Revere

Explain that you might revere, or greatly respect and admire, someone you know, such as a family member, teacher, or coach; or you might revere someone you do not know personally but have seen on TV or read about, such as a sports star or a famous singer or movie star. Some people revere historical figures who have accomplished great things, such as Harriet Tubman, Abraham Lincoln, or John F. Kennedy.

Give an example of someone you know and someone you do not know whom you revere, and explain why you revere these people.

You might say:

“I revere, or greatly respect and admire, my grandmother. She raised me, and I revere her because she worked hard to give me a good life and taught me by her example how to be a good person. I also revere Martin Luther King Jr. because he was a valiant man who believed in nonviolence and led the struggle for civil rights.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Whom do you revere? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I revere [my big brother] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word revere and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

---

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Amendment

Remind the students that authors who write about social studies topics often use vocabulary terms specific to history, government, or geography to discuss their subjects. When we read about social studies topics, we may come across words that we do not often find in other books or stories.

Show pages 26–27 of A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman. Review that the Civil War lasted from 1861 until 1865 and that Harriet Tubman led hundreds of enslaved people to freedom during the war. Then read the following sentences from page 27 aloud: “In December 1865, soon after the Civil War ended, an amendment to the U.S. Constitution was passed. Slavery was no longer allowed in the United States.”

Write the word amendment where everyone can see it. Underline the base word amend and explain that amend means “change or improve.” Point out that when we add the suffix -ment to amend, we create the word amendment, which means “the act of changing or improving.” Tell the students that amendment has a very specific meaning when used to discuss the U.S. Constitution.

Explain that the U.S. Constitution is a document describing the beliefs and laws by which this country is governed. To add an amendment or make a change to the Constitution, members of Congress and the President must agree that the change is necessary to improve the lives of all people living in the United States. Explain that the amendments passed after the Civil War outlawed slavery and guaranteed that all Americans would be treated equally under the law.

Tell the students that there have been 27 amendments to the U.S. Constitution, and that these amendments were passed to protect and expand the rights of American citizens.

Day 4

Review Bliss, Valiant, and Revere

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 20 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words bliss, valiant, and revere from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

bliss

Bliss is "great joy or complete happiness."

valiant

Valiant means "brave or courageous."

revere

Revere means "greatly respect and admire."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think was especially fun or interesting to talk about? Why?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA8) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA8

bliss valiant revere

PROMPT 1: The word _____ was especially [fun/interesting] to talk about because . . .

PROMPT 1: "The word [bliss] was especially [fun/interesting] to talk about because . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that partners will work together to create sentences that use the vocabulary words.

Point to the word bliss on the daily review cards (WA8) and review that bliss is “great joy or complete happiness.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word bliss in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up on each response by asking the class to think about the students’ sentence:

Q Does it make sense to say, [“A cold drink of water on a hot day is bliss”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have partners create sentences for valiant and revere.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Use an Online Thesaurus

Post the synonym chart where everyone can see it. Alternatively, you might write the vocabulary words for which the students have discussed synonyms where everyone can see them (for example, secure, serene, conceal, amiable, and loathe).

Have partners sit together. Ask the students to navigate to the thesaurus you selected. Direct their attention to the Search box. Ask them to type a familiar word, such as brave or scary, into the box and click the Search button or icon. Then discuss:

Q What information is provided for the word [brave]?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. As necessary, point out these key features:

- The word’s part of speech (whether the word is a noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech)
- The word’s synonyms
- The word’s antonyms
- Definitions of the word

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you felt bliss? Why?” or “Where is a place you feel bliss? Why?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “I felt bliss when . . .” or “It would be bliss if . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 19 and 20, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 20 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Computers or tablets with Internet access for each pair of students

Teacher Note

For an activity on using a print thesaurus, see the more strategy practice activity “Use a Thesaurus” (see Week 18, Day 3).

Technology Tip

To find an appropriate online thesaurus, search online using the keywords “children’s thesaurus” or “online thesaurus for students.”

Teacher Note

Alternatively, you might have the students look up vocabulary words that are not on the synonym chart and add those words and their synonyms to the chart.

Then briefly discuss:

- Q In what ways is this online thesaurus [different from/the same as] a print (book) thesaurus?
- Q Which type of thesaurus do you prefer? Why?

Direct the students' attention to the synonym chart. Tell the students that partners will choose one of the words on the chart and use the online thesaurus to find synonyms for it. Explain that after partners search for the word they will share additional synonyms they found with the class.

Give partners a minute or two to choose a word, look it up in the online thesaurus, and discuss its synonyms. When most pairs have finished talking, signal for the students' attention. Then discuss the words and their synonyms as a class by asking:

- Q What word did you look up? What synonyms did you find for the word?

Follow up by asking:

- Q Which of these synonyms are already on our synonym chart? Which synonyms should we add to the chart?

Add the synonyms the students suggest to the chart.

Day 5

Ongoing Review

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- Ongoing review activity (WA10)
- "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5" answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1)
- "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way

Words Reviewed

compromise

Compromise means "settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted."

deceive

Deceive means "trick or fool someone into believing something that isn't true."

elated

Elated means "extremely happy and excited."

lend a hand

"Lend a hand" means "help or assist."

wise

Wise means "having or showing good judgment and intelligence." Wise people make good decisions and give good advice, often because they have a lot of experience.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Game “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Review that you will show several sentences that have one or more words underlined. Tell the students that you will read each sentence aloud; then partners will decide which of the vocabulary words could replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the ongoing review activity (🗉 WA10) and begin the activity:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first sentence (see WA10 on the next page). Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: “I’m thrilled to hear such wonderful news!” said Clara. “I couldn’t be more happy and excited!”
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined words. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined words in the sentence? Why? [Click ❶ again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [elated] could replace [happy and excited] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ❶; the second sentence is ❷; the third sentence is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the students may need to change the form of the word to complete the sentence by adding an ending such as -s, -ing, or -ed.

compromise	deceive	elated	lend a hand	wise
------------	---------	---------------	-------------	------

SENTENCE 1: "I'm thrilled to hear such wonderful news!" said Clara. "I couldn't be more elated!"

1 2 3 4 5

4. Finally, click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining sentences:

- Sentence 2: Donny decided to ask his Aunt Judy for advice. Judy always seemed to know what to do and made intelligent decisions. (wise)
- Sentence 3: "I think we should reach an agreement," Jolie said to her brother, Mark. "I'll lend you my volleyball if I can borrow your ski goggles." (compromise)
- Sentence 4: Rufus was so glad his sister, Kelly, could help out washing the car. It was much more fun with another person there to assist. (lend a hand)
- Sentence 5: "You have to believe me," Henry told his brother. "I wouldn't try to trick you." (deceive)

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Can the students answer the questions and replace the underlined words?
- Do the students have difficulty identifying or using any of the words? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are they using the words spontaneously and accurately in their speech and writing outside of the vocabulary lessons?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 188 of the Assessment Resource Book.

(continues)

Assessment Notes (continued)

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences. For example, if the students are struggling with the word compromise, ask questions such as "When have you compromised with someone?" and "When you compromised, what did you offer to give up, and what did you get in return?"

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 21 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 17-20 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5" answer sheet (IA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 189 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 17-20 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 193 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)
- Using the prefix in- to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing antonyms (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the articles.
- Students review synonyms and antonyms.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review the prefix in-.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students include everyone in and contribute to the group work.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

① DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 1, review the more strategy practice activity “Discuss the Meanings of Engage” on page 447.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the “Week 21 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Proficient, Engage, and Hinder

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words proficient, engage, and hinder
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Work in a responsible way
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Taught

proficient

Proficient means “skillful, or able to do something well.”

engage (p. 463)

Engage means “take part in or do something.”

Engage also means “promise to marry someone” and “get and hold someone’s interest or attention.”

hinder

Hinder means “get in the way of, or make it difficult for someone to do something.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PROFICIENT

1 Introduce and Define Proficient and Review Synonyms

Briefly review the article “Virtual Worlds: Community in a Computer.”

Review that one argument for playing video games is that they may improve a player’s motor skills.

Read the section titled “Improved Motor Skills” on page 462 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is proficient.

Explain that proficient means “skillful, or able to do something well.”

Point out that the words proficient and skillful are synonyms.

Review that professionals like pilots, firefighters, and police officers can use video games called simulation programs to practice important job skills and become more proficient, or skillful, at their jobs.

Display word card 121 (🎧 WA1) and have the students say the word proficient.

Materials

- “Virtual Worlds: Community in a Computer” (see pages 462–463)
- Word card 121 (WA1)
- Word card 122 (WA2)
- Word card 123 (WA3)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words proficient and skillful to it.

2 Talk About Being Proficient

Explain that all of us are proficient, or skillful, at doing certain things. Give two or three examples of things at which you are proficient.

You might say:

"I am proficient at playing the guitar. I have taken lessons and have practiced and now I can play very well. I am proficient in speaking German. I have studied the language and have traveled in Germany and now I can speak German well. I am also a proficient skier. I can ski most of the trails at a ski area."

Ask:

Q What is something you are proficient at doing? How did you become proficient? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as "What is a game or sport at which you are proficient?" "What is a hobby or activity at which you are proficient?" and "What is something you are proficient at doing at school?"

WA1

proficient

PROMPT 1: I am proficient at _____. I became proficient by . . .

PROMPT 1: "I am proficient at [playing basketball]. I became proficient by . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word proficient and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ENGAGE

3 Introduce and Define Engage

Review that one argument against playing video games is that there may be health risks. Read the section titled "Health Risks" aloud, emphasizing the word engage. Tell the students that engage is the next word they will learn today, and explain that engage means "take part in or do something."

Explain that there is a concern that some people who play video games may engage in, or take part in, dangerous behavior in real life because they engage in dangerous behavior as part of playing the games.

Display word card 122 (WA2) and have the students say the word engage.

4 Discuss Activities We Engage In

Explain that all of us enjoy engaging in, or taking part in, fun or relaxing activities on the weekend.

Ask:

Q What activities do you enjoy engaging in on the weekend? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I enjoy engaging in . . .”

Q What activities do you enjoy engaging in at school or in class? Why?

Click 2 on word card 122 (WA2) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I enjoy engaging in [sharing our writing] because [I like to hear people’s stories and talk about them].”

5 Discuss Other Meanings of Engage

Remind the students that words can have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Point to the word engage on word card 122 (WA2), and review that in the article engage means “take part in or do something.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word engage? What do we mean when we say two people are engaged?

If necessary, explain that engage can also mean “promise to marry.” When two people become engaged, they promise to marry each other.

Tell the students that engage has a third meaning. Explain that engage can also mean “get and hold someone’s interest or attention.” Give an example of something that engages you.

You might say:

“Birds engage me. I can spend hours engaged in watching the birds that come into my garden. I am also engaged by reading. If a book engages me, or gets and holds my interest, I might not put it down until I’ve finished it.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What is something that engages you, or holds your interest or attention?

Click 3 on word card 122 (WA2) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “[Watching my favorite football team play on TV] engages me because . . .”

Point to the word engage and review the pronunciation and meanings of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE HINDER

6 Introduce and Define Hinder

Review that another argument in the article against playing video games is that students may fall behind on their schoolwork if they spend a lot of time playing.

Read the section titled “Behind on the Books” on page 463 aloud.

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is hinder. Explain that hinder means “get in the way of, or make it difficult for someone to do something.”

Explain that some teachers worry that playing video games at home hinders, or gets in the way of, students’ schoolwork. Other people believe that playing video games may hinder students from thinking imaginatively.

Display word card 123 (WA3) and have the students say the word hinder.

7 Play “Will It Hinder Milton?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Will It Hinder Milton?” Remind the students that something that hinders you gets in your way or makes it difficult for you to do something. Explain that you will describe something that Milton is trying to do. Partners will discuss whether or not Milton is hindered and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton wants to make a sandwich. He goes into the kitchen and discovers that there is only one piece of bread.

Ask:

 Q Will having only one piece of bread hinder Milton from making a sandwich? Why? [Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Having only one piece of bread [will/will not] hinder Milton because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton wants to go to his friend Abe’s costume party, but Milton does not have a costume.

Q Will not having a costume hinder Milton from going to the party? Why?
[Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Not having a costume [will/will not] hinder Milton because . . .”

- Milton runs to the garage to get his bike so that he can go on a bike ride with his friends. His bike has a flat tire.

Q Will having a flat tire hinder Milton from joining his friends? Why?
[Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Having a flat tire [will/will not] hinder Milton because . . .”

Point to the word hinder and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss the Meanings of Engage

Write these definitions on a sheet of chart paper or where everyone can see them:

Engage means: Take part in or do something Promise to marry someone Get and hold someone’s interest or attention
---

Point to the word engage where you wrote it, and remind the students that engage has three meanings. Point to and review each meaning.

Remind the students that when they hear or read a word that has more than one meaning, they can usually figure out the correct meaning by thinking about how the word is used. Explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word engage. Partners will decide whether engage means “take part in or do something,” “promise to marry someone,” or “get and hold someone’s interest or attention.”

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

The word engage has these other meanings you might discuss:

- “Attack or begin to fight,” as in “the soldiers engage an enemy in battle”
- “Fit into and move together with another part,” as in “the gears of a machine engage”
- “Hire someone,” as in “engage an assistant”

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- The baby is crying and fussing. Lucy engages the baby by shaking a rattle and making silly faces. The baby stops fussing and begins to laugh.

Ask:

- Q In the scenario, does engage mean “take part in or do something,” “promise to marry someone,” or “get and hold someone’s interest or attention”? Why? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Engage means . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Andrew engages in different sports throughout the year. During the winter, his favorite is ice hockey because he loves to skate.
- Leticia burst through the door shouting, “Mom! Mom! Look at the ring Tyrel gave me. We’re engaged!”

Day 2

Review Proficient, Engage, and Hinder

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words proficient, engage, and hinder from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

proficient

Proficient means “skillful, or able to do something well.”

engage

Engage means “take part in or do something.” Engage also means “promise to marry someone” and “get and hold someone’s interest or attention.”

hinder

Hinder means “get in the way of, or make it difficult for someone to do something.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

-  Q What sport do you most like to engage in? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

proficientengagehinder

PROMPT 1: I most like to engage in _____ because . . .

1234

WA4

PROMPT 1: “I most like to engage in [swimming] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, ask the following questions:

-  Q In what sport are you most proficient? Why do you say that you are proficient in that sport? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I’m most proficient in [baseball] because . . .”

-  Q What might hinder someone from being good at a sport? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[Not practicing] might hinder someone from being good at a sport because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to proficient on the daily review cards (WA4), and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word proficient. Partners will then discuss whether or not proficient makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Sujin is having a hard time learning to swim. She doesn't like to put her head in the water, and she's afraid to let go of the edge of the pool. After swim class, Sujin tells her mother, "I need a lot more lessons, because I am a very proficient swimmer."

Ask:

 Q Does the word proficient make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The word [proficient] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[engage]

- Gabriel enjoys engaging in classroom discussions. Whenever the teacher asks a question, he looks away and hopes he won't be called on.

[hinder]

- Just before she tries out for the school choir, Juanita catches a cold. She is afraid her sore throat and raspy voice will hinder her chances of singing well at the tryout.

[engage]

- Joaquin tells his friend Alejandro to go to the skate park without him. "I've tried to like skateboarding," he says, "but it just doesn't engage me."

Introduce Humdrum, Formal, and Informal

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words humdrum, formal, and informal
- Review synonyms
- Review the prefix in-
- Review antonyms
- Work in a responsible way
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Taught

humdrum

Humdrum means “boring or dull.”

formal (p. 465)

Formal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for business or for official or special occasions.

informal

Informal means “not formal.” Informal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for relaxed or casual occasions or everyday activities.

INTRODUCE AND USE HUMDRUM

1 Introduce and Define Humdrum and Review Synonyms

Briefly review the article “School Uniforms: The Way to Go.”

Review that students all over the world wear uniforms to school. Then read the introduction below the subtitle “The Way to Go” aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is humdrum. Explain that humdrum means “boring or dull” and that the words humdrum, boring, and dull are synonyms.

Explain that many students say that uniforms look humdrum, or boring or dull.

Display word card 124 (WA5) and have the students say the word humdrum.

2 Discuss Humdrum Activities and Ways to Make a Humdrum Day Interesting

Explain that we sometimes use the word humdrum to describe the routine, ordinary, or uninteresting things we do day in and day out. For example, some people find everyday activities such as making the bed, washing the dishes, or walking the dog humdrum, or boring or dull.

Materials

- “School Uniforms: The Way to Go” (see pages 464–465)
- Word card 124 (WA5)
- Word cards 125–126 (WA6)

Teacher Note

Remind the students that they can use a synonym, like humdrum, to replace an overused word, like boring or dull, to make their writing more interesting.

If you started a synonym chart, add the words humdrum, boring, and dull to it.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something you do at home that is humdrum? Why is it humdrum? [Pause; click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

humdrum

PROMPT 1: _____ is humdrum because . . .

1 2

WA5

PROMPT 1: “[Eating breakfast] is humdrum because [I eat the same thing every morning. That’s boring].”

Explain that all of us occasionally have humdrum days, or dull or boring days, on which nothing interesting happens.

Discuss as a class:

Q What might you do on a humdrum day to make the day more interesting?

Click 2 on word card 124 (WA5) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “To make a humdrum day more interesting, I might [call my friend Keenan to see if he wants to ride bikes].”

Point to the word humdrum and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE FORMAL AND INFORMAL

3 Introduce and Define Formal

Review that a school uniform can give students a sense of identity and a sense of pride in their school.

Read the first paragraph of the section titled “Identity and Belonging” aloud, emphasizing the words formal clothes.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is formal. Explain that formal clothes are clothes that are appropriate for business or for official or special occasions such as weddings, graduations, and funerals.

Explain that a suit is an example of formal clothing and that some businesspeople wear suits to work. Point out that some people think that a school uniform is like a suit or other formal clothing. They believe that if students dress more formally in uniforms, they will feel more serious and ready to work in school.

Display word cards 125–126 (WA6) and click to reveal word card 125. Have the students say the word formal.

4 Play the Game “Make a Choice”

ELPS 3.G.ii
Step 4
(all)

Explain that we also use the word formal to describe polite or respectful language and behavior that is appropriate for business or official or special occasions. For example, people often use formal language or behave in formal, or polite and respectful, ways when they are talking with strangers or people like police officers or judges.

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Make a Choice.”

Explain that you will describe two ways of speaking, dressing, or behaving; then partners will discuss which way is formal and explain why they think so.

Ask:

 Q Which of these would be a formal way to greet a man you meet for the first time: “Hello, sir, how are you today?” or “Hey, dude, what’s up?” Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Hello, sir, how are you today?”] is a formal way to greet a man you meet for the first time because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

 Q Which might a woman wear to a formal party: a pair of jeans and a sweatshirt or a fancy gown and her best pair of shoes? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “A woman might wear a [fancy gown and her best pair of shoes] to a formal party because . . .”

 Q Which would be a formal way to behave if you were waiting to meet the president of the United States: standing straight and tall and waiting patiently or shoving your hands in your pockets and shifting impatiently from foot to foot? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[Standing straight and tall and waiting patiently] would be a formal way to behave because . . .”

ELL Note

Rather than having the students choose between options, you might have them discuss each option individually by asking, “Is ‘Hello, sir, how are you today?’ a formal way to greet a man you meet for the first time? Why?” and then asking, “Is ‘Hey, dude, what’s up?’ a formal way to greet a man you meet for the first time? Why?”

Teacher Note

You might explain that a fancy dress is sometimes called “a formal gown.” A dance where men dress in suits or tuxedos and women dress in fancy gowns is also called “a formal.”

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words formal and informal to it.

5 Introduce and Define Informal and Review the Prefix in- and Antonyms

Tell the students that the last word they will learn today is informal. Display word cards 125–126 (🗨️ WA6) and click to reveal word card 126. Have the students say the word informal. Point to the prefix in- in informal, and review that in- is a prefix that means “not.”

Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the word formal and the prefix in-, what do you think the word informal means?

If necessary, explain that informal means “not formal” and that formal and informal are antonyms. Explain that informal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for relaxed or casual occasions or everyday activities.

6 Play “Formal or Informal?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Formal or Informal?” Explain that you will describe something; then partners will decide whether it is formal or informal and explain why they think so.

Begin by reading the following aloud:

- Bowing to a king

Ask:

 Q Is bowing to a king formal or informal behavior? Why? [Click 4 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Bowing to a king is [formal/informal] behavior because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following descriptions:

- A backyard barbecue with friends

 Q Is a backyard barbecue with friends a formal or informal occasion? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “A backyard barbecue with friends is [a formal/an informal] occasion because . . .”

- Shorts and a T-shirt

 Q Are shorts and a T-shirt formal or informal clothing? Why? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “Shorts and a T-shirt are [formal/informal] clothing because . . .”

Point to the words formal and informal and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Design and Discuss School Uniforms

Review that in the article “School Uniforms: The Way to Go,” the author discusses reasons why students should wear school uniforms. Explain that the students will design and draw their own school uniforms and then share their drawings with their partners. Before they begin drawing, encourage the students to think about such things as the color or colors of their uniforms and whether the uniforms will include jackets or sweaters, shirts or blouses, and skirts or pairs of pants. (If the students have never seen a school uniform, show them the photograph of the girls wearing uniforms on page 465 of the article and bring in other photographs for the students to see and discuss.)

After the students have drawn their uniforms, have them share their drawings with their partners. Encourage the students to ask each other questions such as:

- Q Why did you decide to [put a large pocket in the front of the uniform]?
- Q Would you rather wear the uniform you designed or your regular clothes to school? Why?

Then have one or two volunteers share their pictures with the group.

Review Humdrum, Formal, and Informal

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words humdrum, formal, and informal from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

humdrum

Humdrum means “boring or dull.”

formal

Formal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for business or for official or special occasions.

informal

Informal means “not formal.” Informal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for relaxed or casual occasions or everyday activities.

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA7)
- Daily review activity (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗂️ WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which of yesterday's words do you think was especially fun or interesting to talk about? Why?

Click 1 on the daily review cards (WA7) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA7

PROMPT 1: The word _____ was especially [fun/interesting] to talk about because . . .

1

PROMPT 1: “The word [humdrum] was especially [fun/interesting] to talk about because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Game “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Finish the Story.” Review that you will tell a story, leaving off the last word; then partners will finish the story by deciding which of yesterday's vocabulary words will make the best ending for it and explain why they think that.

Direct the students' attention to the daily review activity (🗂️ WA8) and begin the game:

- Click 1 to reveal the first story (see WA8 on the next page). Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.
  - Story 1: Olivia is having a party. “Come in comfortable clothes,” she tells her friends. “The party is very _____.”

Teacher Note

Each story on the daily review activity (WA8) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; and the third story is 3. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

Q Which of yesterday's words makes the best ending for the story? Why? [Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think the word [informal] makes the best ending because . . ."

Have partners use the prompt to share their thinking. After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

The screenshot shows a digital interface with three word choices in a row: "humdrum", "formal", and "informal". The word "informal" is highlighted with a green background. Below the choices is a text box containing the following text: "STORY 1: Olivia is having a party. 'Come in comfortable clothes,' she tells her friends. 'The party is very informal.'" At the bottom of the interface are three numbered buttons: 1, 2, and 3. The button with the number 1 is highlighted.

WA8

4. Finally, click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining stories.

- Story 2: Alberto has played his video games many times. "Let's get some new games," he pleads with his dad. "These games are all _____." (humdrum)
- Story 3: To dance in the talent show, Isabella must try out in front of judges, fill out several forms, and get her parents' permission. "Goodness!" she exclaims. "This process is so _____." (formal)

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

crave

Crave means “want badly, long for, or desire very much.”

enraged

Enraged means “furious or very angry.”

labor

Labor means “work hard.”

loathe

Loathe means “hate, or strongly dislike.”

reduce

Reduce means “destroy or break down completely.” Reduce also means “make less, fewer, or smaller.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think Will Happen?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think Will Happen?” Remind the students that you will describe a situation that uses one of the vocabulary words. Partners will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to tell what they think will happen next.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Aneko and Sakarri are in charge of making dinner. Aneko craves spaghetti, but Sakarri craves chicken and dumplings.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think will happen, since each girl craves something different for dinner? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Since each girl craves something different, . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Kobi asks the barber to trim just a little hair from his head. When he looks in the mirror, he sees the barber has shaved his head. Kobi is enraged.

Q What do you think will happen, since Kobi is enraged? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Since Kobi is enraged, . . .”

- As soon as Lamont gets in the door, his mother asks him to help her clean out the garage. Lamont has been laboring all day.

Q What do you think will happen, since Lamont has been laboring all day? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Since Lamont has been laboring all day, . . .”

- Analise loathes anchovies. She goes to her friend Lilly’s house for dinner, and the pizza has anchovies all over it.

Q What do you think will happen, since Analise loathes anchovies? [Pause; click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Since Analise loathes anchovies, . . .”

Teacher Note

You might review that trim means “cut or clip something to make it tidy or make it fit.”

Teacher Note

You might review that misjudge means “judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or a situation.”

- Mr. Washington is mowing his lawn with a riding mower. He misjudges how close he is to his wife’s prize petunias and reduces them to a pile of leaves and stems.

Q What do you think will happen when Mrs. Washington sees her petunias reduced to leaves and stems? [Pause; click S to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “When Mrs. Washington sees her petunias reduced to leaves and stems, . . .”

VIRTUAL WORLDS

COMMUNITY IN A COMPUTER

These days, you don't have to leave your home to have fun or to play with other people. Within the world of a video game, a person can kick a virtual soccer ball, defeat a virtual army, or build a virtual city. Two players from opposite sides of the world can team up, create plans, and work together.

Video games are played in two out of three households in the United States. These games have never been more popular—or controversial. Some people say video games can help players learn skills such as quick thinking and problem-solving, but there is also evidence that gaming can be harmful to players' health and other parts of their lives.

PROS

TEAMWORK AND COMMUNITY

For people who are shy, video gaming can be a way to learn how to interact with others. Massively multiplayer online games, or MMOGs, are video games that allow thousands of players around the world to play the same video game at one time. Often, each MMOG player creates a virtual character that interacts with other players' characters in the virtual world. Players work together to accomplish goals—for example, building cities or defeating an army. In order to be successful in an MMOG game, players have to spend a lot of time playing and cooperating with other players.

IMPROVED MOTOR SKILLS

There is evidence that video gaming may improve motor skills, boosting your ability to use your muscles to do things. Gaming may also improve your hand-eye coordination, or how well your eyes and hands work together. Playing video games may also help increase your speed in responding to a situation. This can help with all kinds of real-world activities. Some video game programs even simulate, or imitate, certain activities to help people practice skills they will need in their careers. Using video games called simulation programs, airplane pilots, firefighters, and police officers can all practice skills needed for their jobs. The more that people can practice these skills, the more confident and better they become using them in real life.

PROBLEM-SOLVING

In the United States, intelligence test scores are rising higher than ever before. Some researchers say that one reason could be video gaming. Virtual games present a series of problems that players must solve to succeed in the game. Like anything else that is mentally challenging, this could make people smarter. In the fast-paced modern world, where decisions often need to be made quickly, young people could be learning skills that will help them to succeed in the future.

PLAYING TO LEARN

If video games could be used in the classroom, perhaps students would be able to pay more attention to what they are learning. For example, when learning about a historical event such as a battle, students could put themselves in the place of the soldiers to understand the situation better.

A pilot using a simulation program can practice skills, such as performing an emergency landing, without getting hurt.

CONS

REAL-WORLD ISOLATION

Video game critics worry that young people who spend too much time playing video games might not learn important social skills needed to make friends and succeed in the real world. Interacting with a person in an online video game is very different from interacting with a person face-to-face. The etiquette, or how someone is expected to behave, is different within each setting. So while a person might feel confident and make friends easily within the virtual world, outside of that world he or she might feel increasingly shy and have trouble talking to people.

HEALTH RISKS

Apart from exercising the hands and wrists, video gaming isn't a physical activity. Young people who spend hours gaming each day may not get enough exercise. One study found that teens who played video games ate more food, which could lead to overeating and weight problems over time. Doctors have also found that some gamers complain of eye strain, headaches, and wrist pain. People who spend hours playing these games can develop problems such as RSI (repetitive strain injury), which occurs when a person repeats the same action over and over for hours. Additionally, some people argue that since gamers can engage in dangerous behavior—such as racing cars at fast speeds—within the game world without worrying about hurting themselves or others, they might feel encouraged to take dangerous risks in real life.

VIOLENT TENDENCIES

Critics argue that violent video games can encourage players to solve problems using violence. A 2011 study monitoring brain reaction to violent video games found that the brains of people who played violent video games were less sensitive to violence than the brains of players of nonviolent video games. Because their brains were less sensitive to violence, players of violent video games were more likely to respond to situations with aggression.

BEHIND ON THE BOOKS

Teachers worry that students who spend hours playing video games may fall behind on schoolwork. There is also a risk that using video games as learning tools would keep students from learning the importance of reading and using their imaginations. Reading helps people learn and think about information independently. Through reading, a person uses his or her imagination to understand ideas. Educational video games in classrooms might discourage students from learning how to think imaginatively.

It's easy to lose track of time during an intense video gaming session—which means that schoolwork can suffer.

School Uniforms

The Way to Go

Jackets, ties, and dress pants; knee-high socks, skirts, and blouses—in schools around the world, students prepare for the school day by putting on uniforms. Love it or hate it, the school uniform is one of the most common kinds of uniforms in the world. School uniforms make schoolchildren look neat and clean and identify them as students of a certain school.

Many students say that uniforms look boring or that they don't allow kids to express themselves with the clothes they choose to wear. On the surface, school uniforms might not seem cool, but wearing them has some big benefits.

An End to Indecision

Being decisive about what to wear to school can be challenging. Many young people worry about how they look: “Will people judge me by what I’m wearing? Is green ‘in’ or ‘out’ this season?” Wearing a uniform helps you feel more confident because everyone else at school will be wearing the same outfit. Nobody will judge you by what clothing you wear.

Because you don't need to decide what to wear, a uniform helps you to save time in the morning. There is another advantage to wearing a uniform: It will help you save money because usually you'll need to buy only one or two uniforms at the start of the year—and there's no pressure to wear costly designer labels to school.

During the 2009–2010 school year, about 19 percent of public schools required their students to wear uniforms.

Identity and Belonging

It's good to feel that you belong! A school uniform gives you a sense of identity and school pride. Some studies have shown that wearing a uniform does even more than that: it can also help you to focus on your schoolwork. It's similar to how a businessperson dresses in a suit when he or she goes to work. Dressing in more formal clothes helps you to shift from "play mode" to "work mode." After all, the main reason you go to school is to study and learn.

Teachers and parents like school uniforms for another reason. Uniforms help keep students safer by showing who does—and doesn't—belong in the school. Intruders realize they will stand out if they enter a school where the students are all in uniform, so the intruders are more likely to stay away.

Judging people by how they look is human nature, but we need to find other ways of learning about one another, too.

Self-expression

Belonging is good, but what about expressing yourself? It's true that school uniforms limit the ways you can look. However, a uniform doesn't limit who you are, the way you speak, and how you behave. In fact, it helps you to learn to express yourself in more creative ways. Knowing how to talk about your opinions, ideas, and beliefs is a great life skill, and wearing a school uniform encourages you to practice that skill.

Have you ever heard the expression "judging a book by its cover"? It means to judge something by how it looks before you've taken the time to understand it. We all judge people a little by how they look—for example, we can guess that someone with spiky blue hair likes punk music or that someone who wears red from head to toe likes to stand out. But you can't know what a person is really like if you don't get past their appearance.

School uniforms encourage us to get to know people's personalities rather than judging them only by what they wear. That's one of the most valuable things we can learn from wearing school uniforms. Who knows what friendships, conversations, and ideas we miss out on by judging people only by their clothes?

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Using the suffix -ly to determine word meanings (review)
- Using Latin roots to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the functional text.
- Students review synonyms and the suffix -ly.
- Students review Latin roots and words with multiple meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students include everyone in and contribute to group work.
- Students build on one another's thinking during small group discussions.
- Students explain their thinking.

1 DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 1, review the more strategy practice activity “Think More About the Suffix -ly” on page 473.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, prepare a sheet of chart paper entitled “How to Make a Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich.” (See Step 2.)
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 3, review the more strategy practice activity “Discuss Other Meanings of Note” on page 480.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 196 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the following materials: “Week 22 Word Cards” (BLM2) and “Week 22 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3). These materials can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words process and initial and the phrase prior to
- Review synonyms
- Review the suffix -ly
- Explain their thinking

Words Taught

process

A process is a “way to do or make something that requires several steps.”

prior to

Prior to means “before or earlier.”

initial

Initial means “first.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PROCESS

1 Introduce and Define Process

Show “How to Make Oobleck,” and read the title aloud. Briefly review the directions.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is process. Explain that a process is a “way to do or make something that requires several steps.”

Show the directions again, and point out that the directions explain the process, or way to make, oobleck. Point out that there are four steps in the process.

Display word card 127 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word process.

2 Discuss the Process of Making Oobleck

Show the directions again, and point to Step 1. Explain that the first step in the process of making oobleck is to measure water and pour it into a bowl.

Point to Step 2 of the directions and discuss:

Q What is Step 2 of the process?

Click 1 on word card 127 (WA1) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Materials

- “How to Make Oobleck” (see page 487)
- Word card 127 (WA1)
- Word card 128 (WA2)
- Word card 129 (WA3)

Teacher Note

You might have the students bring their Making Meaning Student Response Books to the rug and turn to page 64 to follow along as you read from the directions.

PROMPT 1: “Step 2 of the process is [to add 15 drops of food coloring to the water].”

Point to the diagram that accompanies Step 2, and point out that there is a diagram for each step of the process.

Ask:

 Q In what way do the diagrams help you understand the process of making oobleck? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The diagrams help me understand the process [by/because] . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word process and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE PRIOR TO

3 Introduce and Define Prior to and Review Synonyms

Tell the students that next they will discuss the phrase prior to. Explain that prior to means “before or earlier” and that prior to, before, and earlier are synonyms. Display word card 128 ( WA2) and have the students say prior to.

Show the directions again and discuss the following question:

Q What do you need to do prior to, or before, beginning the process of making oobleck?

Click 1 on word card 128 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few students use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add prior to, before, and earlier to it.

PROMPT 1: “Prior to beginning the process of making oobleck, you need to [get the materials you will need].”

If necessary, explain that prior to, or before, beginning the process of making oobleck, you need to gather the necessary materials.

4 Discuss Doing Things Prior to Coming to School or Going to Bed

Remind the students that prior to means “before or earlier.”

Ask:

Q What is something you did prior to coming to school this morning?

[Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Prior to coming to school, I [ate breakfast].”

Discuss as a class:

Q What is something you usually do prior to going to bed at night?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Prior to going to bed, I usually [read a book].”

Point to the words prior to and review the pronunciation and meaning of the phrase.

INTRODUCE AND USE INITIAL

5 Introduce and Define Initial and Review Synonyms

Tell the students that the next word they will discuss today is initial. Explain that initial means “first” and that initial and first are synonyms.

Show the directions again, point to Step 1, and point out that “Measure water and pour into bowl” is the initial, or first, step in the process of making oobleck.

Display word card 129 (WA3) and have the students say the word initial.

6 Discuss Initial Steps

Explain that when you plan or start a project, your initial step is important, because getting the project off to a good start can help to make it a success. Give examples of an initial step you have taken to start a project and explain why the initial step was important.

ELPS 1.A.ii
Step 4 (all)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words initial and first to it.

You might explain that the word initial has another meaning the students may know and that your initials are the first letters of your first name and last name.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of initial is inicial.

Teacher Note

If you started a list of words that use the suffix -ly, add the second meaning of the suffix and the word initially to it.

You might say:

"Last year I had a backyard party for my neighbors. My initial, or first, step in planning the party was to decide on the date. This initial step was important because I needed to pick a day when my neighbors would be available and could come to the party. Each spring before planting my garden, my initial step is to order seed catalogs. I look through them, decide what I want to plant, and then order the seeds. Taking this initial step is important because it helps me plan the garden and make sure I have the seeds I need when it is time to plant."

Ask the students to imagine that they are responsible for planning a class trip.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What initial step would you take to plan the trip? Why would that step be important? [Pause; click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "An initial step would be to [ask the students where they'd like to go]. This initial step would be important because . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

7 Discuss Initially and Another Meaning of the Suffix -ly

Write the words initial and initially next to each other someplace where everyone can see them. Have the students say the word initially.

Point to initially, and explain that the word initially is made by adding the suffix -ly to the word initial.

Remind the students that earlier they learned that the suffix -ly means "in a certain way" and is used in words like consistently, thoroughly, and indignantly. Explain that in the word initially, the suffix -ly has another meaning. It means "happening at a certain time." Explain that initially means "happening at the initial time, or happening at first or at the beginning."

Ask:

Q What did you do initially, or at first, when you came to class this morning? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: "When I came to class this morning, I initially . . ."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word initial and review the pronunciation and meaning of initial and initially.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Think More About the Suffix -ly

Remind the students that the word initially is made up of the word initial, which means “first,” and the suffix -ly, which means “happening at a certain time.” Review that something that happens initially happens at first or at the beginning.

Write the word frequently where everyone can see it. Point out that frequently is made up of the word frequent, which means “often,” and the suffix -ly.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word frequent and the suffix -ly, what do you think the word frequently means? What do we mean when we say that something happens frequently? Turn to your partner.

Write the following prompts where everyone can see them. After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompts to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think frequently means [happening often or happening a lot]” or “When we say that something happens frequently, we mean [it happens often or a lot].”

If necessary, explain that frequently means “happening at frequent times, or often or a lot.”

Using the same procedure, discuss the words occasionally and finally.

TEKS 3.C.i
Student/Teacher Activity
More Strategy Practice (all)

Teacher Note

If you started a list of words that use the suffix -ly, add the words frequently, occasionally, and finally to it.

For a list of common suffixes, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Suffixes” list in the General Resources section.

Review Process, Prior to, and Initial

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words process and initial and the phrase prior to from Day 1
- Explain their thinking

Words Reviewed

process

A process is a “way to do or make something that requires several steps.”

prior to

Prior to means “before or earlier.”

initial

Initial means “first.”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)
- “How to Make a Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich” chart (prepared ahead)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

- 🗉 Q Which of yesterday's words might you use when you talk with your family and friends? How might you use the word? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA4

process prior to initial

PROMPT 1: I might use the word(s) _____ when I talk with _____. I might say . . .

1 2 3 4 5

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word(s) [prior to] when I talk with [my friend Matt]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, click 2 to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their partners' thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “My partner might use the word(s) [prior to] when he talks with [his mom]. He might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Directions for Making a Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich

Direct the students' attention to the “How to Make a Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich” chart that you prepared ahead. Explain that the students will work together to develop directions for the process of making a peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

Write the heading “Materials needed” on the chart.

Ask:

Q What materials would you gather prior to beginning the process of making a peanut butter and jelly sandwich? [Click 3 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Prior to beginning the process, I would gather . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. As volunteers share their thinking, list the materials they suggest on the chart.

Then ask:

Q What is the initial step in the process of making a peanut butter and jelly sandwich? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The initial step in the process is . . .”

After partners have talked, have a volunteer suggest an initial step.

Ask:

Q Does any pair have a different initial step?

If there is more than one suggestion for an initial step, agree on an initial step. Then write the number “1” and the initial step on the chart.

Write the number “2” on the chart.

Ask:

Q What is the second step in the process of making the sandwich? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “The second step in the process is . . .”

After partners have talked, have a volunteer suggest a second step.

Ask:

Q Does any pair have a different second step?

If there is more than one suggestion for a second step, agree on a second step, and write it on the chart next to the number “2.”

Using the same procedure, discuss and record one or two more steps.

Finally, read the directions for the process of making a peanut butter and jelly sandwich aloud.

Day 3

Introduce Precise, Manually, and Note

Materials

- “How to Make Oobleck” (see page 487)
- Word card 130 (WA5)
- Word card 131 (WA6)
- Word card 132 (WA7)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words precise, exact, and accurate to it.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of precise is preciso/a.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words precise, manually, and note
- Review synonyms
- Review the suffix -ly
- Review using Latin roots to determine word meanings
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Explain their thinking

Words Taught

precise

Precise means “exact or accurate.”

manually

Manually means “done by hand rather than by a machine.”

note (p. 487)

Note means “notice or pay careful attention to something.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PRECISE

1 Introduce and Define Precise and Review Synonyms

Show “How to Make Oobleck,” and remind the students that the initial step in the process of making oobleck is to measure water and pour it into a bowl. Then read the second step aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is precise. Explain that precise means “exact or accurate,” and that the words precise, exact, and accurate are synonyms.

Explain that the second step of the directions tells you the precise, or exact, number of drops of food coloring to add to the water—15 drops.

Display word card 130 ( WA5) and have the students say the word precise.

2 Discuss Precisely and Review the Suffix -ly

Write the words precise and precisely next to each other where everyone can see them, and have the students say the word precisely.

Remind the students that the suffix -ly has two meanings. Review that -ly can mean “happening at a certain time,” as in the word initially. The suffix can also mean “in a certain way,” as in the words consistently, thoroughly, and indignantly.

Explain that, in the word precisely, the suffix -ly means “in a certain way,” and that precisely means “in a precise way, or exactly or accurately.”

Discuss as a class:

Q In what type of job would someone need to work precisely? Why?

Click 1 on word card 130 (WA5) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA5

precise

PROMPT 1: A _____ would need to work precisely because . . .

1   2   3   4

PROMPT 1: “A [watchmaker] would need to work precisely because . . .”

3 Discuss “Would You?” Questions

Tell the students that partners will discuss questions that use the words precise and precisely.

Ask:

 Q If a fireworks display started precisely at 8:00 p.m., would you miss the beginning if you came at 8:15 p.m.? Why? [Click 2 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If the fireworks started precisely at 8:00 p.m., you [would/would not] miss the beginning if you came at 8:15 p.m., because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

 Q If a recipe required a precise amount of an ingredient, would you need to measure the ingredient? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word precisely to it.

PROMPT 3: “If a recipe required a precise amount of an ingredient, you [would/would not] need to measure the ingredient because . . .”

Q If you counted the number of students in the classroom slowly and precisely, is it likely you would make a mistake in counting? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “If I counted the number of students in the classroom slowly and precisely, it [is/is not] likely I would make a mistake in counting because . . .”

Point to the word precise and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE MANUALLY

4 Introduce Manually and the Latin Root manu and Review the Suffix -ly

Show the directions again, and review that Step 3 of the process is to add cornstarch and Step 4 is to mix the water and cornstarch by hand.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is manually. Display word card 131 (WA6) and have the students say the word manually. Point to the letters manu in manually. Tell the students that manu is a root, and remind the students that a root is a “word or part of a word that is used to make other words.” Tell the students that manu comes from Latin, and explain that in Latin, manu means “hand.” Explain that the word manually means “done by hand rather than by a machine.”

Point to the diagram that illustrates Step 4, and point out that the direction is to mix the water and cornstarch manually, or by hand. Explain that if you used an electric mixer to mix the water and cornstarch, you would not be mixing the ingredients manually.

Point to the suffix -ly in manually on the word card, and explain that manually is another word that uses the suffix -ly. Tell the students that in manually, the suffix -ly means “in a certain way.” Explain that manually means “in a way that uses the hands, or by hand.”

5 Play “Manually or Not Manually?”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Manually or Not Manually?” Explain that you will describe something that someone does; then partners will discuss whether or not the person does it manually and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Jeb uses a remote control to turn the TV off.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of manually is manualmente.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -ly, add the word manually to it.

TEKS 3.C.iv
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5
(all, beginning on page
487 and continuing on to page 488)

Ask:

Q Does Jeb turn off the TV manually? Why? [Click ❶ on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Jeb [does/does not] turn off the TV manually, because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Millicent uses an electric garage door opener to open her garage door.

Q Does Millicent open the garage door manually? Why? [Click ❷ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Millicent [does/does not] open the garage door manually, because . . .”

- Mrs. Bates uses a needle and thread to sew a button onto her blouse.

Q Does Mrs. Bates sew the button onto her blouse manually? Why? [Click ❸ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Mrs. Bates [does/does not] sew the button onto her blouse manually, because . . .”

- Mr. Keith uses a sponge to wash the dirty dishes in the sink.

Q Does Mr. Keith wash the dishes manually? Why? [Click ❹ to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Mr. Keith [does/does not] wash the dishes manually, because . . .”

Point to the word manually and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE NOTE

6 Introduce and Define Note

Show the directions again, point to Step 4, and reread the step aloud.

Point out that below this direction it says, “Note: If the oobleck does not flow out of the bowl when it’s tilted, add more water.”

Tell the students that note is the last word they will learn today. Explain that note means “notice or pay careful attention to something.”

Explain that the person who wrote the directions wants us to note, or notice or pay careful attention to, the instruction to add more water if the oobleck is too thick. The author thinks the instruction is important, so he uses the word note to call our attention to it.

Display word card 132 (🗨️ WA7) and have the students say the word note.

7 Note the Teacher's Actions

Tell the students that you are going to do something and that you want them to note, or notice or pay careful attention to, what you do. Explain that afterwards, you will ask partners to discuss what they noted.

Have the students watch you carefully as you do a series of four or five actions. (For example, you might stand up, lay your Vocabulary Teaching Guide on your chair, push the chair slightly aside, walk to your desk, and sit down.)

Ask:

Q What did you note that I did? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: "I noted that [Ms. Clements] . . ."

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers share what they noted with the class.

Explain that often we find ourselves in situations in which it is important to note what someone is doing or saying.

Discuss as a class:

Q When might it be important to note what someone is doing or saying?

Click 2 on word card 132 (WA7) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: "It might be important to note what someone is [saying] when [the person is giving you directions for going somewhere], because . . ."

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker (optional)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, ask additional questions such as "What do we mean when we say, 'I took notes when I was doing research for my report?'" "What do we mean when we say 'Mom left me a note on the kitchen counter?'" and "What do we mean when we say 'The musician played a wrong note?'"

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Other Meanings of Note

Remind the students that many words have more than one meaning and that the meanings are often very different. Write the word note where everyone can see it and review that in "How to Make Oobleck" the word note means "notice or pay careful attention to something."

Discuss as a class:

Q What else do you know about the word note? What is a note? When might you take notes?

Have a few volunteers use the following prompts to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPTS: "A note is . . ." or "You might take notes when . . ."

If necessary, explain that note can also mean “a short message or informal letter,” “a musical sound,” or “a word, phrase, or sentence written down to remind you of something.”

---

EXTENSION

Review the Suffix -able and Discuss the Word Notable

Write the words note and notable next to each other where everyone can see them; then read the word notable aloud. Explain that the word notable is formed by adding the suffix -able, which means “worthy of being,” to the word note, which means “notice or pay careful attention to something.” Explain that notable means “worthy of being noted.” Explain that if someone is notable, the person is worthy of attention or notice because of something the person has achieved.

Explain that George Washington is a notable figure in American history because he helped the American colonies win independence from Britain and because he was the first president of the United States. Ask the students to name other notable figures from American history and to explain why each figure is notable. You might also ask the students to name notable figures in sports, music, or movies.

Teacher Note

You might also discuss the following idioms that include the word note:

- “Hit, or strike, the right note.” If something you do or say hits the right note, it is suitable or effective.
- “Make a mental note.” If you make a mental note, you make an effort to remember something, often something you want to do later.

---

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add -able to the word note, you drop the e to spell notable.

Review Precise, Manually, and Note

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words precise, manually, and note from Day 3
- Explain their thinking

Words Reviewed

precise

Precise means “exact or accurate.”

manually

Manually means “done by hand rather than by a machine.”

note

Note means “notice or pay careful attention to something.”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 22 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

-  Q Would a precise description of a bank robber help the police catch the robber? Why? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

precisemanuallynote

PROMPT 1: A precise description [would/would not] help the police catch the robber because . . .

1 2 3

WA8

PROMPT 1: “A precise description [would/would not] help the police catch the robber because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

-  Q Would you use a washing machine to wash clothes manually? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] use a washing machine to wash my clothes manually because . . .”

-  Q Why might someone leave a sign that read “Note: Wet Paint” on a bench? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Someone might leave a sign that read “Note: Wet Paint” on a bench because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Point to yesterday’s words on the daily review cards (WA8), and review that partners will work together to create sentences that use the vocabulary words.

Point to the word precise, and review that precise means “exact or accurate.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word precise in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

Q Does it make sense to say, [“It is important to be precise when you give someone directions or the person might get lost”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have partners create sentences for manually and note.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to create sentences, ask questions such as “When might you need to be precise? Why?” or “When might you need to do something precisely? Why?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “It is important to be precise when . . .” or “I precisely . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 21 and 22, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 22 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Explain their thinking

Words Reviewed

eligible

Eligible means “allowed to do or have something.”

ineligible

Ineligible means “not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something.”

permanent

Permanent means “lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever.”

rove

Rove means “wander about or roam.”

temporary

Temporary means “lasting or meant to last only a short time.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to the word eligible on the ongoing review cards (WA9), and explain that you will read a scenario that includes the word eligible. Partners will discuss whether or not eligible makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- The sign on the auditorium door read “If you cannot sing, you are eligible to join the choir.”

Ask:

Q Does eligible make sense in the scenario? Why do you think so? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

eligible	ineligible	permanent
rove	temporary

PROMPT 1: _____ [does/does not] make sense because . . .

PROMPT 1: “[Eligible] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

[ineligible]

- Marcus is fuming. He wants to be a lifeguard this summer, but he is ineligible because he didn't get his application in on time.

[permanent]

- “I plan to park here for only an hour,” Mr. Kelso tells the parking attendant. “I would like a permanent parking space.”

[rove]

- Kathy informs her friends, “I'd rather stay home than travel. I love to rove.”

[temporary]

- Mrs. Evans asks Mr. Evans if he plans to keep his tool belt in the living room. “No,” he explains. “It's temporary, just until I finish fixing the chair.”

Teacher Note

You might review that fume means “be very angry or irritated.”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words correctly? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are the students using the words in their speech and writing outside of the vocabulary lessons?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 196 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice through an activity modeled on "Make a Choice" (see Week 1, Day 2, Step 2). For example, if the students are struggling with the word permanent, play "Make a Choice" by giving two objects or scenarios and have partners discuss which one describes a permanent condition. (You might say "Which one is permanent: a mountain range or the snow on the mountains' peaks?")

HOW TO MAKE OOBLECK

Materials needed:

- Newspapers to cover work area
- Paper towels for cleanup
- 1 box cornstarch
- 1½ cups water (more if your oobleck is too firm)
- Green food coloring (or another color)
- Mixing bowl

*It won't take long before you realize you've made oobleck.
It's a sticky goo that flows like a syrup but holds together like a solid.*

Day 1

Introduce Conditions, Humane, and Inhumane

Materials

- Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott
- Word card 133 (WA1)
- Word cards 134–135 (WA2)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words conditions, humane, and inhumane
- Review antonyms
- Review the prefix in-
- Work in a responsible way during group work

Words Taught

conditions (p. 7)

Conditions are the “circumstances in which someone works or lives or in which something happens.”

humane

Humane means “kind.” Humane people are kind, caring, and compassionate toward others.

inhumane

Inhumane means “not humane, or cruel.” Inhumane people are not kind, caring, or compassionate toward others.

INTRODUCE AND USE CONDITIONS

1 Introduce and Define Conditions

Briefly review Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott.

Show page 7 of the book and read the chapter title aloud. Review that the chapter tells how farm workers lived and worked before they formed unions. Remind the students that migrant farm workers move from place to place planting and harvesting crops.

Read the first paragraph on page 7 aloud, emphasizing the word conditions in the heading and in the paragraph. Tell the students that conditions is the first word they will learn today, and explain that conditions are the “circumstances in which someone works or lives or in which something happens.”

Explain that “working conditions” are the circumstances in which people work. Tell the students that working conditions include things such as how long the people must work each day, whether they have breaks, the temperature at the workplace, and whether they have water to drink. Explain that migrant workers were willing to work in bad conditions because they needed the work and could be easily replaced if they complained.

Teacher Note

You might review that circumstances are the “facts or events that affect or explain a situation.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of conditions is condiciones.

Display word card 133 (🌐 WA1) and have the students say the word conditions.

2 Discuss the Farm Workers' Working Conditions

Show page 7 of the book again, and review that migrant workers put up with bad working conditions because they needed jobs. Explain that as you read aloud about the working conditions, you want the students to listen for ways in which the working conditions were bad. Then read the second paragraph on page 7 aloud.

Ask:

Q In what ways were working conditions bad for migrant workers? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

conditions

PROMPT 1: One way that working conditions were bad was that . . .

1

WA1

PROMPT 1: “One way that working conditions were bad was that . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that the bad working conditions included working in the fields from dawn until late at night, not being able to take breaks to use the bathroom or drink water, and working in temperatures over 100 degrees.

Point to the word conditions and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE HUMANE AND INHUMANE

3 Introduce and Define Humane

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is humane. Explain that humane means “kind” and that humane people are kind, caring, and compassionate toward others.

Teacher Note

For further practice with the word conditions, read the rest of “Working Conditions” on pages 7-8 and have the students discuss other examples of bad working conditions.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of humane is humano/a.

Teacher Note

You might point out that the words human and humane are related. Explain that a humane person possesses such gentle human qualities as kindness, caring, and compassion.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of inhumane is inhumano/a.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words humane and inhumane to it. If you started a chart of words that use the prefix in-, add the word inhumane to it.

Display word cards 134–135 ( WA2) and click to reveal word card 134. Have the students say the word humane.

4 Introduce and Define Inhumane and Review Antonyms and the Prefix in-

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is inhumane. Explain that inhumane means “cruel” and that inhumane people are not kind, caring, or compassionate toward others. Click to reveal word card 135 and have the students say the word inhumane.

Point out that humane and inhumane are antonyms, or “words with opposite meanings.” Point to the prefix in- in inhumane on the word card and review that in- is a prefix that means “not.” Explain that when the prefix in- is added to the word humane, which means “kind,” it makes the new word inhumane, which means “not humane, or not kind, or cruel.”

5 Discuss Inhumane and Humane Working Conditions

Remind the students that farm workers worked very long hours in the hot sun and were often prevented from taking breaks.

Discuss as a class:

Q Were the working conditions of the farm workers humane or inhumane? Why?

Click 1 on word cards 134–135 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “Working conditions were [inhumane] because [they were cruel].”

Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q What might farm owners have done to make working conditions more humane for farm workers? [Pause; click 2 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To make working conditions more humane, farm owners might have . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

6 Discuss Humane and Inhumane Living Conditions

Show pages 8–9 and review that this part of the book tells about the living conditions of the migrant farm workers. Explain that “living conditions” are the circumstances in which people live; they include the kinds of housing in which people live, and whether or not they have electricity, safe drinking water, and nutritious food.

Point to the photograph on page 9 and explain that living conditions for many migrant workers were inhumane, or cruel. Explain that as you read a description of the living conditions aloud, you want the students to listen for ways in which the living conditions were inhumane.

Read aloud the last paragraph on page 9, which begins “In some farm housing, there were no bathing facilities or safe drinking water.”

Ask:

Q In what ways were living conditions for farm workers inhumane?
[Click 3 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “One way that living conditions were inhumane was . . .”

If necessary, explain that examples of the inhumane living conditions include overcrowded houses, a lack of medical care, and having no bathing facilities or safe drinking water.

Discuss as a class:

Q What might farm owners have done to make living conditions more humane for farm workers?

Click 4 to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 4: “To make living conditions more humane, farm owners might have . . .”

Point to the words humane and inhumane and review the pronunciation and meaning of the words.

Day 2

Review Conditions, Humane, and Inhumane

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words conditions, humane, and inhumane from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way during group work

Words Reviewed

conditions

Conditions are the “circumstances in which someone works or lives or in which something happens.”

humane

Humane means “kind.” Humane people are kind, caring, and compassionate toward others.

inhumane

Inhumane means “not humane, or cruel.” Inhumane people are not kind, caring, or compassionate toward others.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA3). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which word might you use in a story about an elephant that lives in a small, dirty pen in a zoo? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA3

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [conditions]. I might write . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Humane or Inhumane?”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “Humane or Inhumane?” Explain that you will describe living or working conditions; then partners will decide whether the conditions are humane or inhumane and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- The cat has a soft, warm bed, nutritious food, and toys to play with.

Ask:

Q Are the cat’s living conditions humane or inhumane? Why? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The cat’s living conditions are [humane/inhumane] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- At a school, the classroom is warm in the winter and cool in the summer. The teacher is kind to the students, and the students are nice to each other. There is a recess break and a lunch break every day.

Ask:

Q Are the conditions at the school humane or inhumane? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The conditions at the school are [humane/inhumane] because . . .”

- At the farm, the horse works from dawn to dusk in the hot sun. It gets only enough food and water to keep it alive, and no one brushes its coat.

Ask:

Q Are the horse’s living and working conditions humane or inhumane? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The horse’s living and working conditions are [humane/inhumane] because . . .”

Day 3

Introduce Ensure, Equitable, and Inequitable

Materials

- Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott
- Word card 136 (WA4)
- Word cards 137–138 (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words ensure, equitable, and inequitable
- Review the prefix in-
- Review antonyms
- Work in a responsible way during group work

Words Taught

ensure (p. 11)

Ensure means “make certain that something happens.”

equitable

Equitable means “fair and equal for everyone.”

inequitable

Inequitable means “not equitable, or not fair and equal for everyone.”

INTRODUCE AND USE ENSURE

1 Introduce and Define Ensure

Show page 11 of Farm Workers Unite, and read the chapter title aloud. Review that this chapter describes the way farm workers organized labor unions to fight for changes in their working and living conditions.

Read the heading “Unionization” and the first paragraph on page 11 aloud, emphasizing the word ensure. Tell the students that ensure is the first word they will learn today, and explain that ensure means “make certain that something happens.”

Review that labor unions protect workers’ rights by negotiating contracts with farm owners. These contracts ensure, or make certain, that there are fair work rules and that all workers are treated equally.

Display word card 136 (WA4) and have the students say the word ensure.

2 Discuss Ways to Ensure That Things Happen

Explain that there are certain things people can do to help ensure, or make certain, that they stay healthy.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is something you can do to help ensure that you stay healthy?
[Pause; click ❶ on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ensure

PROMPT 1: To help ensure that I stay healthy, I can . . .

❶   ❷

WA4

PROMPT 1: “To help ensure that I stay healthy, I can . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then discuss as a class:

Q If you were planning a party, what might you do to ensure that your guests had fun?

Click ❷ on word card 136 (WA4) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “To ensure that my guests had fun, I might . . .”

Point to the word ensure and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE EQUITABLE AND INEQUITABLE

3 Introduce and Define Equitable

Remind the students that labor unions help workers by making agreements with employers. Then reread this sentence from page 11: “These agreements, or contracts, ensure that the rules of working are fair and that all workers are treated equally.”

Tell the students that the next word they will discuss is equitable, and explain that equitable means “fair and equal for everyone.” Point out that labor union contracts ensure that work rules are equitable, or fair and equal for all.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of equitable is equitativo/a.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the words equal and equitable are related and point out that you can see part of the word equal in the word equitable.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of inequitable is inequitativo/a.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words equitable and inequitable to it.

If you started a list of words that use the prefix in-, add the word inequitable to it.

Display word cards 137–138 (🌐 WA5) and click to reveal word card 137. Have the students say the word equitable.

4 Discuss Being Equitable

Discuss as a class:

Q Would it be equitable if I let some students use calculators during a math test and not others? Why?

Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “It [would/would not] be equitable because . . .”

Then have the students imagine the following situation as you read it aloud:

- You and a classmate have a problem—you both want to read the same book, but there is only one copy of the book in the library.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you solve the problem in a way that is equitable, or fair to both of you? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To solve the problem in a way that is equitable, we might . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

5 Introduce Inequitable, Use the Prefix in- to Determine Its Meaning, and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the last word they will discuss today is inequitable. Click to reveal word card 138 (WA5) and have the students say the word inequitable.

Point to the prefix in- in inequitable on the word card. Explain that the word inequitable is made by adding the prefix in-, which means “not,” to the beginning of the word equitable.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word equitable and the prefix in-, what do you think the word inequitable means?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “Inequitable means [‘not fair and equal for everyone’].”

If necessary, explain that inequitable means “not equitable, or not fair and equal for everyone.” Point out that inequitable and equitable are antonyms.

6 Do the Activity “Equitable or Inequitable?”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “Equitable or Inequitable?” Explain that you will describe a situation; then partners will decide whether the situation is equitable or inequitable and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Rosa’s mother lets her twin brother watch television for an hour before bedtime, but not her.

Ask:

Q Is this equitable or inequitable? Why? [Click 4 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “It is [equitable/inequitable] because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- At the post office, men and women do the same job and receive the same pay.
- Some people have enough money to buy medicine when they are sick, but others do not.

Point to the words equitable and inequitable and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Play “Antonym Match”

Display the “Antonym Match” chart (WA6).

Antonym Match
1	2
elated	pessimistic
optimistic	adore
permanent	final
loathe	dejected

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Antonym Match.” Point to the words in column 1, and explain that these are vocabulary words the students have learned. Point to the words in column 2, and

Materials

- “Antonym Match” chart (WA6)

explain that these are antonyms, or “words that mean the opposite,” of the words in column 1. Explain that partners will match each word in column 1 to its antonym in column 2.

Point to the word elated, read it, and have the students say it. Then point to the words in column 2 and ask:

Q Which word in column 2 is the antonym of elated? Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “[Dejected] is the antonym of [elated].”

Then have a volunteer draw a line from the word elated to the word dejected.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining words. When you get to the final two words, have the students discuss them together by asking:

Q Which word in column 2 is the antonym of loathe and which word is the antonym of initial? Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then have a volunteer draw a line from the word loathe to the word adore and another line from the word initial to the word final.

---

EXTENSION

Discuss the Prefix en-

Remind the students that a prefix is a “letter or group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Explain that the prefix en- means “cause to” and that when en- is added to the beginning of the word sure, it makes the new word ensure. Review that ensure means “cause to be sure” or “make certain that something happens.”

Then write the word endanger where everyone can see it and ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word danger and the prefix en-, what do you think the word endanger means?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that endanger means “cause someone or something to be in danger.”

Use the same procedure to have the students discuss the meaning of other words that use the prefix en-, such as enable, enrage, and enrich.

Review Ensure, Equitable, and Inequitable

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words ensure, equitable, and inequitable from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way during group work

Words Reviewed

ensure

Ensure means “make certain that something happens.”

equitable

Equitable means “fair and equal for everyone.”

inequitable

Inequitable means “not equitable, or not fair and equal for everyone.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA7). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA7)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

You might review that thoroughly means “in a thorough way, or completely.”

Teacher Note

You might review that indignantly means “in an indignant way, or in a way that shows you are angry because you feel insulted or unfairly treated.”

Teacher Note

You might review that glum means “unhappy, gloomy, or miserable.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [inequitable] when I talk with [my parents]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Tell the students that you will ask them questions that include yesterday’s vocabulary words and words they learned earlier.

Ask:

Q If you wanted to ensure that you were thoroughly prepared to run in a race, what would you do? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To ensure that I was thoroughly prepared, I would . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Would you react indignantly if someone treated you in an equitable way? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “If someone treated me in an equitable way, I [would/would not] react indignantly because . . .”

Q Would you feel glum if someone treated you in an inequitable way? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “If someone treated me in an inequitable way, I [would/would not] feel glum because . . .”

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way during group work

Words Reviewed

initial

Initial means “first.”

note

Note means “notice or pay careful attention to something.”

precise

Precise means “exact or accurate.”

prior to

Prior to means “before or earlier.”

process

A process is a “way to do or make something that requires several steps.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗂️ WA8) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Review that you will show the students a sentence that has one or more words underlined. Tell the students that you will read the sentence aloud; then partners will decide which of the vocabulary words could replace the underlined part of the sentence.

Display the ongoing review activity (🗂️ WA9) and begin the game:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first sentence. Point to the sentence and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined words.
  - Sentence 1: “I know how to keep your pumpkin from getting moldy, if you want me to show you the way to do it,” Tara said to Zach.”

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA8)
- Ongoing review activity (WA9)

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the ongoing review activity (WA9) has a corresponding number: the first sentence is ❶; the second sentence is ❷; the third sentence is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the sentence.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the sentence with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the sentence and the underlined words. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word or words could replace the underlined words in the sentence? Why? [Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word(s) [process] could replace [way to do it] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the sentence with the correct word in place.

WA9

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

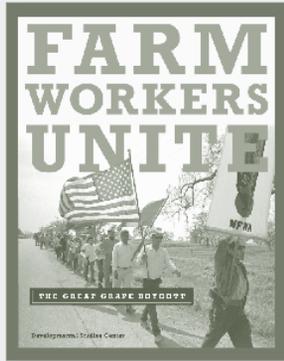

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining sentences:

- Sentence 2: “Before beginning the first step, gather together all of the materials you’ll need.” (prior to)
- Sentence 3: “The first step is to wipe the pumpkin clean with a paper towel.” (initial)
- Sentence 4: “Then,” said Tara, “you need to be very exact when you measure out the bleach and combine it with the water.” (precise)
- Sentence 5: “Pay attention to where the sun is shining, because the pumpkin should stay as cool as possible.” (note)

Introduce Perilous, Exclusive, and Inclusive

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words perilous, exclusive, and inclusive
- Review synonyms
- Review antonyms
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

perilous

Perilous means “risky or dangerous.”

exclusive (p. 18)

Exclusive means “limited or belonging to a single person or group, or not shared.”

inclusive

Inclusive means “involving or including a wide variety of people or things.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PERILOUS

1 Introduce and Define Perilous and Review Synonyms

Briefly review Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott.

Show pages 16–17 of the book. Review that in 1965, Filipino workers from grape vineyards in Delano, California, went on strike. César Chávez and Dolores Huerta had to answer a difficult question—should their union, the National Farm Workers Association, join the strike?

Read aloud the paragraph on page 16 that begins “The strike was risky for the National Farm Workers Association because the union was vulnerable.”

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is perilous. Explain that perilous means “risky or dangerous” and that perilous, risky, and dangerous are synonyms.

Explain that joining the strike was perilous, or risky, for the National Farm Workers Association—it might have caused the union great harm—because if the strike failed, it would likely be the end of the union.

Display word card 139 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say the word perilous.

Materials

- Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott
- Word card 139 (WA1)
- Word card 140 (WA2)
- Word card 141 (WA3)

Teacher Note

You might explain that vulnerable means “in a weak position and likely to be hurt or damaged in some way.”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words perilous, risky, and dangerous to it.

2 Play “Is Milton Doing Something Perilous?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is Milton Doing Something Perilous?” Explain that you will describe something our friend Milton is doing; partners will then discuss whether what Milton is doing is perilous and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton is riding his bicycle with his friend Marti. He takes his hands off the handlebars and shouts, “Look, Marti! No hands!”

Ask:

Q Is Milton doing something perilous? Why? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

perilous

PROMPT 1: Milton [is/is not] doing something perilous because . . .

WA1

PROMPT 1: “Milton [is/is not] doing something perilous because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton is hiking with some friends. He thinks his friends are walking too slowly, so he decides to leave his friends and hike on another trail alone.
- Milton is walking on the beach. He doesn’t want to get a sunburn, so he is wearing a hat, sunglasses, and lots of sunscreen.

Point to the word perilous and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE EXCLUSIVE

3 Introduce and Define Exclusive

Review that César Chávez made a speech to the members of the National Farm Workers Association before they voted on whether or not to take part in the Delano strike. His words inspired the workers, and they voted to join the Filipinos on the picket lines.

Show pages 18–19 of Farm Workers Unite and point to the text box on page 18. Explain that the box contains an extract, or part, of Chávez’s speech. Read the title and the text aloud, emphasizing the word exclusively. Tell the students that exclusive is the next word they will learn today. Explain that exclusive means “limited or belonging to a single person or group, or not shared.”

Explain that in his speech Chávez tells the Mexican-American workers that even though the Filipinos began the strike, it is not exclusive, or limited, to just Filipinos. Instead, it is for all migrant workers.

Display word card 140 ( WA2) and have the students say the word exclusive.

4 Play “Is It Exclusive?”

Remind the students that something exclusive is limited or belongs to a single person or group; it is not shared. For example, the exclusive winner of a contest is the only winner. She does not share the prize with anyone else. If a reporter gets an exclusive interview with a movie star, the reporter is the only person who gets to interview the star. If an organization is exclusively for ten-year-olds, only ten-year-olds can join the organization.

Tell the students that you will describe something, and partners will then discuss whether it is exclusive or not exclusive and explain why.

Begin by reading the following description aloud:

- A club that is only for girls

Ask:

Q Is a club that is only for girls exclusive? Why? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “The [club] [is/is not] exclusive because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following:

- A party to which everyone is invited
- A beach open only to people who live right next to the beach

Point to the word exclusive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You might review that inspire means “make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it.”

Teacher Note

You might explain that the word exclusive is related to the word exclude, which means “keep someone or something out.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of exclusive is exclusivo/a.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of inclusive is inclusivo/a.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the word inclusive is related to the word include, which means “contain or be part of.” When you include someone, you allow or ask the person to join you in doing something.

Teacher Note

You might explain that the in at the beginning of inclusive is not the prefix in-, meaning “not.” Remind the students that if a group of letters is a prefix, you have a real word left when you remove the letters.

INTRODUCE AND USE INCLUSIVE

5 Introduce and Define Inclusive and Review Antonyms

Explain that the last word the students will discuss today is inclusive. Display word card 141 ( WA3) and have the students say the word inclusive.

Point out that inclusive is the antonym, or opposite, of exclusive, and that inclusive means “involving or including a wide variety of people or things.”

Explain that, if a club is inclusive, anyone can join. If a party is inclusive, everyone is invited.

6 Play “Is Milton Being Inclusive?”

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is Milton Being Inclusive?” Remind the students that inclusive means “involving or including a wide variety of people or things.” Explain that you will describe something that Milton does; then partners will discuss whether or not Milton is being inclusive and explain why.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton decides to put on a play in his backyard. He invites everyone in the neighborhood to be in it.

Ask:

Q Is Milton being inclusive? Why? [Click  on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Milton [is/is not] being inclusive because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Milton decides to start a homework club, but he only wants his two best friends to be in the club.
- Milton asks his brother and his sister to join him when he goes to the movies.

Point to the word inclusive and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Review Perilous, Exclusive, and Inclusive

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words perilous, exclusive, and inclusive from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

perilous

Perilous means “risky or dangerous.”

exclusive

Exclusive means “limited or belonging to a single person or group, or not shared.”

inclusive

Inclusive means “involving or including a wide variety of people or things.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which word do you think was especially interesting or fun to talk about? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

perilousexclusiveinclusive

PROMPT 1: I think the word _____ was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .

WA4

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

PROMPT 1: “I think the word [inclusive] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Tell the students that partners will discuss questions that use the vocabulary words. Then ask:

Q Might a person be apprehensive before doing something perilous? Why? [Click 2 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “A person [might/might not] be apprehensive before doing something perilous because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Is riding your bike at night without a light perilous? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Riding your bike at night without a light [is/is not] perilous because . . .”

Q Would you rather be a member of a club that is exclusive or inclusive? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Why? Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I would rather be a member of a club that is [exclusive/inclusive] because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might review that apprehensive means “worried or anxious that something bad may happen.”

Introduce Harass, Jubilant, and Endure

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words harass, jubilant, and endure
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

harass (p. 20)

Harass means “bother or annoy someone repeatedly or over a long period of time.”

jubilant (p. 24)

Jubilant means “very happy, or joyful.”

endure (p. 31)

Endure means “continue or last for a long time.”

Endure also means “put up with something unpleasant such as pain, fatigue, or hardship.”

INTRODUCE AND USE HARASS

1 Introduce Harass and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Show page 20 of Farm Workers Unite, and read the chapter title aloud. Remind the students that the National Farm Workers Association went on strike to support Filipino farm workers in Delano, California. Review that the strike was long and difficult for the people on the picket lines. Read the section title “Hard Times on the Picket Lines” and the second paragraph on page 20 aloud, emphasizing the word harassed.

Tell the students that harass is the first word they will learn today. Display the “Sentences from Farm Workers Unite” chart (WA5), and explain that these are two of the sentences you just read.

Point to the word harassed and underline it. Remind the students that they can sometimes figure out the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like harass—by rereading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentence that comes before or after it, to look for clues. Explain that as you read these sentences again, you want the students to think about what the word harass might mean and which words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of harass.

Materials

- Farm Workers Unite: The Great Grape Boycott
- “Sentences from Farm Workers Unite” chart (WA5)
- Word card 142 (WA6)
- Word card 143 (WA7)
- Word card 144 (WA8)

ELPS 3.D.i
Step 1 and Step 2
(all, beginning on page 515
and continuing on to page 517)

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of harass from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

Read the sentences aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word harass might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

Sentences from Farm Workers Unite

Some farm bosses raced their pickup trucks up and down the picket lines, throwing clouds of dust onto the workers. Others harassed the picketers by yelling at them or spraying them with pesticide.

PROMPT 1: I think harass might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word harass.

WA5

PROMPT 1: “I think harass might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that harass means “bother or annoy someone repeatedly or over a long period of time.”

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word harass?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking.

PROMPT 2: “The clues “[‘throwing clouds of dust onto the workers,’ ‘yelling at them,’ and ‘spraying them with pesticide’] help me figure out the meaning of the word harass.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that throwing clouds of dust onto the workers, yelling at them, and spraying them with pesticide are clues that help us figure out that harass means “bother or annoy someone repeatedly or over a long period of time.”

Display word card 142 (WA6) and have the students say the word harass.

2 Play “Is Milton Being Harassed?”

Emphasize that we use the word harass to talk about bothering or annoying someone repeatedly or over a long period of time. We do not use the word to talk about bothering someone just once or for only a moment.

Tell the students that they will play a game called “Is Milton Being Harassed?” Explain you will describe a situation that our friend Milton is facing; then partners will discuss whether or not Milton is being harassed and explain why they think so.

Begin by reading the following situation aloud:

- Once in a while, Milton’s little brother pesters Milton, but most of the time Milton and his brother get along well.

Ask:

Q Is Milton being harassed by his brother? Why? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

harass

PROMPT 1: Milton [is/is not] being harassed because . . .

1 2

WA6

PROMPT 1: “Milton [is/is not] being harassed because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following situation:

- Almost every day, a bully intimidates Milton on the playground.

Follow up by discussing as a class:

Q What might Milton do to stop a bully from harassing him?

Click 2 on word card 142 (WA6) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “To stop a bully from harassing him, Milton might . . .”

Point to the word harass and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You might review that intimidate means “make someone feel afraid or timid.”

INTRODUCE AND USE JUBILANT

3 Introduce and Define Jubilant and Review Synonyms

Show pages 24–25 of Farm Workers Unite. Review that after weeks of the strike, the growers still refused to recognize the union or negotiate with it. To gain support for the strike, César Chávez and his followers organized a march from Delano to Sacramento.

Read aloud the first full paragraph on page 24, which begins “On Easter Sunday, 1966, 25 days after the march had begun, the pilgrims hobbled into Sacramento.” Emphasize the word jubilant.

Tell the students that jubilant is the next word they will learn today. Explain that jubilant means “very happy, or joyful” and that jubilant, happy, and joyful are synonyms.

Explain that the marchers were jubilant, or very happy, that they had completed the long march, because they had shown everyone that they were strong and determined to win in their battle against the growers.

Display word card 143 (🌐 WA7) and have the students say the word jubilant.

4 Discuss Feeling Jubilant

Explain that people often feel jubilant when their team wins a sports competition, whether they are watching their favorite team play or playing on a team themselves.

Ask:

Q When have you felt jubilant because your favorite team or a team you were on won? [Click ❶ on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I felt jubilant when [my team won the softball championship].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that people who feel jubilant often show their great happiness by jumping up and down. Then discuss as a class:

Q What else might someone who feels jubilant do? What might that person say?

Click ❷ on word card 143 (WA7) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “A person who feels jubilant might . . .”

Point to the word jubilant and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of jubilant is jubiloso/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words jubilant, happy, and joyful to it.

Teacher Note

If the students cannot think of times they felt jubilant about sporting events, ask alternative questions such as “When have you felt jubilant because something surprising or wonderful happened to you?”

INTRODUCE AND USE ENDURE

5 Introduce and Define Endure

Show page 31 of the book and explain that one of the leaders of the National Farm Workers Association wrote a document called “The Plan of Delano.” The document listed the goals of the Delano strikers. Explain that at each stop during the march to Sacramento, “The Plan of Delano” was read to inspire the protesters and boost their spirits.

Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the fourth goal of the plan. Then read the fourth goal aloud, emphasizing the word endure.

Tell the students that endure is the last word they will learn today, and explain that endure means “continue or last for a long time.”

Point out that one of the goals of the protesters was to endure, or continue or last for a long time. Explain that the protesters were determined to continue their struggle for as long as necessary to win the fight against the owners. They would not give up. They would endure.

Display word card 144 (🔊 WA8) and have the students say the word endure.

6 Talk About Fame and Friendships That Endure

Explain that we sometimes use the word endure to talk about people in history whose fame has endured, or lasted for a long time. These people’s fame has endured because they were important or accomplished great things. For example, Christopher Columbus’s fame has endured, or lasted a long time, because he was an important explorer. George Washington’s fame has endured because he was the first president of the United States. Jackie Robinson’s fame has endured because he was a great baseball player and the first African American in the major leagues. Amelia Earhart’s fame has endured because she was a great pilot and the first woman to fly across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans alone.

Discuss as a class:

Q Who is another person whose fame has endured? Why has the person’s fame endured?

Click 1 on word card 144 (WA8) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “[Abraham Lincoln]’s fame has endured because [he freed the slaves].”

Explain that we also use the word endure to talk about friendships that last a long time. If two people have been friends for many years, we say that their friendship has endured.

Teacher Note

Using previously taught vocabulary words, like inspire and boost, when discussing a text is an excellent way to review the words. You might review that inspire means “make someone feel that he or she wants to do something and can do it” and boost means “increase or improve.”

Teacher Note

You might later read and discuss the entire document with the students.

ELPS 3.C.iv

Step 6

(all, beginning on page 519 and continuing on to page 520)

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the question, ask questions such as “Who is a [president/sports figure/explorer/inventor/soldier/writer] from the past who is still famous today?”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q With whom would you like to have a friendship that endures, or lasts a long time? Why? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I would like to have a friendship that endures with [Jackie] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

7 Discuss Another Meaning of Endure

Remind the students that words can have more than one meaning. Point to the word endure on the word card, and review that endure means “continue or last for a long time.” Explain that endure can also mean “put up with something unpleasant such as pain, fatigue, or hardship.”

Give examples of times when you or someone you know has endured something.

You might say:

“When my son practices his drumming, I have to endure, or put up with, the noise. I once sprained an ankle badly and had to endure the pain for several days. When my grandparents first came to this country, they had to endure hardships, such as not having enough food to eat and living in an overcrowded apartment with two other families.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you or someone you know had to endure something, or put up with something unpleasant? [Pause; click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I had to endure [a toothache].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word endure and review the pronunciation and meanings of the word.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Synonyms and Antonyms of Jubilant

Write the following vocabulary words on a sheet of chart paper or where everyone can see them:

Remind the students that a synonym is a “word that means the same thing or almost the same thing as another word.” Review that jubilant means “very happy, or joyful,” and that the words jubilant, happy, and joyful are synonyms.

Direct the students’ attention to the list of words, and point out that these are vocabulary words that they learned earlier. Read the words and explain that two of the vocabulary words are synonyms of jubilant. Ask:

Q Which two words are synonyms of jubilant? Why do you say that? Turn to your partner.

Ask the students to use the following prompt to discuss their ideas with a partner:

PROMPT: “[Elated and gleeful] are synonyms of jubilant because [they mean ‘happy’].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Remind the students that antonyms are words that have opposite meanings. Direct the students’ attention to the list of words, and explain that two of the words are antonyms of jubilant.

Q Which two words are antonyms of jubilant? Why do you say that? Turn to your partner.

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

If the students are struggling, review the meanings of the words: bizarre (“very strange or odd”), dejected (“sad and discouraged or in low spirits”), elated (“extremely happy and excited”), gleeful (“happy, delighted, or joyous”), glum (“unhappy, gloomy, or miserable”), and luscious (“delicious, or extremely good to eat”). Then repeat the questions.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words elated and gleeful as synonyms of jubilant.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words jubilant, dejected, and glum to it.

Day 4

Review Harass, Jubilant, and Endure

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the "Week 24 Crossword Puzzle" (BLM3) for each student

Ask the students to use the following prompt to discuss their ideas with a partner:

PROMPT: "[Dejected and glum] are antonyms of jubilant because they mean ['unhappy or sad']."

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review the words harass, jubilant, and endure from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

harass

Harass means "bother or annoy someone repeatedly or over a long period of time."

jubilant

Jubilant means "very happy, or joyful."

endure

Endure means "continue or last for a long time." Endure also means "put up with something unpleasant such as pain, fatigue, or hardship."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday's words might you use in a conversation with your family or friends? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA9 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

harass

jubilant

endure

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when I'm talking to _____. I might say . . .

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [jubilant] when I’m talking to [my dad]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, click 2 on the daily review cards (WA9) to reveal the next prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their partners’ thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “My partner might use the word [jubilant] when he is talking to [his brother]. He might say . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think About?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think About?” Point to the words on the daily review cards (WA9), and explain that the students are to notice what they think about, or what pictures come into their minds, when they hear each of the words.

Point to the word harass, and explain that harass is the first word the students will think about.

Model the activity by closing your eyes and describing what comes into your mind when you hear the word harass.

You might say:

“When I hear the word harass, I think about how I harassed my big brother when we were young. I harassed him by always bothering him when he was trying to study and by always wanting to tag along when he went somewhere, which annoyed him.”

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word harass? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you felt harassed?” “When have you harassed someone?” and “How does it feel to be harassed?”

Teacher Note

If the students struggle, call for their attention and think aloud about what comes into your mind when you hear the word jubilant. For example, close your eyes and say “When I hear the word jubilant, I picture how excited I was to be picked to be the leader of my high school marching band.”

If the students continue to struggle, support them by asking questions such as “What experience comes into your mind when you think about the word jubilant?” and “When have you felt jubilant?”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 23 and 24, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 24 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

PROMPT 3: “When I hear the word harass, I think about [the older kids on my street] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word jubilant and explain that jubilant is the next word the students will think about.

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word jubilant? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “When I hear the word [jubilant], I think about [winning the spelling bee] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the word endure. If the students struggle with the word, describe what you picture in your mind when you hear the word, or ask supporting questions like those in the notes.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss Helping Others

Remind the students that Dolores Huerta and César Chávez worked to improve the lives of others. They started an organization and led protests to help farm workers in the southwestern United States receive better treatment.

Explain that we might not all start organizations to help others and improve their lives as Dolores Huerta and César Chávez did, but there are many other ways we can help others, including our friends and the people in our families. Give an example of something you might do to help someone you know.

You might say:

“I might go shopping at the grocery store for my grandmother. She is very old and has a hard time walking. I think she would be grateful if I helped her.”

Ask:

Q What is something you might do to help a friend or someone in your family? Turn to your partner.

Ask the students to use the following prompt to discuss their ideas with a partner:

PROMPT: “I might help . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their ideas with the group.

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

adequate

Adequate means “enough or good enough.”

circumstances

Circumstances are the “facts or events that affect or explain a situation.”

humdrum

Humdrum means “boring or dull.”

inadequate

Inadequate means “not adequate, or not enough or not good enough.”

scrutinize

Scrutinize means “look at very carefully.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA10) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA10)
- Ongoing review activity (WA11)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind them that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes one of the vocabulary words. Then the students will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to make up an ending for the story.

Display the ongoing review activity (🎧 WA11) and show the first story and its accompanying prompt.

WA11

Tell Me a Story

It is almost time for the party. Suddenly Josie realizes that she does not have an adequate supply of party favors for her guests. To get an adequate supply of party favors, she . . .

PROMPT 1: To get an adequate supply of party favors, Josie . . .

Point to the word adequate and tell the students that the first story uses the word adequate. Then read story 1 aloud slowly and clearly.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q How might you finish the story? What might Josie do to get an adequate supply of party favors? [Pause; point to prompt 1.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “To get an adequate supply of party favors, Josie . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

[circumstances]

- Story 2: For many years, the circumstances of Morgan’s life were unhappy. He didn’t like his job, he didn’t have many friends, and he was lonely. Then, the circumstances of his life changed for the better when . . .

 Q How might you finish the story? In what ways did the circumstances of Morgan’s life change for the better? [Pause; point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The circumstances of Morgan’s life changed for the better when . . .”

[humdrum]

- Story 3: Lydia yawns as she stares out her bedroom window. “My life is so humdrum,” she says to herself. “Beginning today I’m going to change my humdrum life. I’m going to . . .”

Q How might you finish the story? What might Lydia do to change her humdrum life? [Pause; point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “To change her humdrum life, Lydia might . . .”

[inadequate]

- Story 4: Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have a large family—five children, two dogs, two cats, and a goose named Audrey. The Gordons want to buy a new home for their family, but most of the homes they look at are inadequate because . . .

Q How might you finish the story? Why are the homes inadequate? [Pause; point to prompt 4.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Most of the homes they look at are inadequate because . . .”

[scrutinize]

- Story 5: Michael notices a spot on the floor. When he scrutinizes it, he is surprised to find . . .

Q How might you finish the story? What is Michael surprised to find when he scrutinizes the spot? [Pause; point to prompt 5.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “When he scrutinizes the spot, Michael is surprised to find . . .”

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Can the students complete the stories and answer the questions?
- Do the students’ responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Are they using the words accurately in their speech and writing outside of the vocabulary lessons?

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 197 of the Assessment Resource Book.

(continues)

Assessment Notes (continued)

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by having the students tell or write a story in which they use the word.

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 25 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 21-24 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6" answer sheet (IA1) on page 201 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 198 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of words taught in Weeks 21-24 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 202 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Word-learning Strategies

- Recognizing synonyms (review)
- Using the suffix -er to determine word meanings (review)
- Recognizing words with multiple meanings (review)

Vocabulary Focus

- Students learn and use six words from or about the story.
- Students review synonyms.
- Students review the suffix -er.
- Students review words with multiple meanings.
- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students develop the skill of giving reasons for their opinions.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

① DO AHEAD

- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 1, review the more strategy practice activity “Review the Suffix -er” on page 537.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, review the activity “What Does It Mean?” and write the sentences that you will use during that activity on a sheet of chart paper. Underline the vocabulary word appearing in each sentence.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “Week 25 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

Introduce Plunge, Vigilant, and Dense

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words plunge, vigilant, and dense
- Review synonyms
- Review the suffix -er
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

plunge (p. 8)

Plunge means “dive or fall suddenly.”

vigilant

Vigilant means “watchful and alert, especially for possible harm or danger.”

dense (p. 14)

Dense means “thick or crowded.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PLUNGE

1 Introduce and Define Plunge and Review Synonyms

Briefly review Flight.

Show pages 8–9 of the book. Review that on the morning of May 20, 1927, Charles Lindbergh took off from a New York airfield to fly across the Atlantic Ocean. Read the first two sentences on page 8 aloud, emphasizing the word plunge.

Tell the students that plunge is the first word they will learn today. Explain that plunge means “dive or fall suddenly” and that the words plunge, dive, and fall are synonyms. Explain that if Lindbergh’s plane touched the wire stretched across the field, it would plunge, or dive or fall suddenly, to the ground.

Display word card 145 (WA1) and have the students say the word plunge.

2 Talk More About the Word Plunge

Explain that we usually use the word plunge to talk about someone or something diving or falling from a height. For example, at a swimming pool you might see someone plunge, or dive, from a diving board into the water. Someone might accidentally plunge, or fall, from a ladder.

Materials

- Flight
- Word card 145 (WA1)
- Word card 146 (WA2)
- Word card 147 (WA3)

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words plunge, dive, and fall to it.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you or someone you know fallen or jumped from a high place such as a tree or wall?” and “When have you seen someone on TV or in a movie plunge, or dive or fall suddenly?”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of vigilant is vigilante.

A kite might become entangled in telephone wires and plunge, or fall suddenly, to the ground.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you plunged or seen someone or something plunge? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA1

plunge

PROMPT 1:

I _____ and plunged _____.

or

I saw _____ plunge _____.

1

PROMPT 1: “I [tripped on my shoelace] and plunged [down the front porch steps]” or “I saw [a pelican] plunge [into the ocean].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word plunge and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE VIGILANT

3 Introduce and Define Vigilant

Show pages 12–13 of Flight and review that Lindbergh left North America behind and began the long flight across the ocean. Read page 13 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is vigilant. Explain that vigilant means “watchful and alert, especially for possible harm or danger.”

Point out that when he was over the water, Lindbergh no longer had the shoreline to guide him, so he needed to be vigilant, or watchful and alert, to avoid becoming lost. Explain that Lindbergh was vigilant when he carefully charted his course and followed two compasses and the stars to navigate.

Display word card 146 ( WA2) and have the students say the word vigilant.

4 Play “Is Milton Vigilant?”

Review that we use the word vigilant to describe people who are watchful and alert because a situation is dangerous or because bad things might happen if they are not careful. Tell the students that they will now play a game called “Is Milton Vigilant?” Explain that you will describe something Milton does; then partners will discuss whether Milton is being vigilant and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario twice aloud:

- Milton loves tomatoes from his garden. To ensure that his tomato plants stay strong and healthy, each day he checks to see if they need water and pulls off any bugs that might harm them.

Ask:

Q Is Milton vigilant? Why? [Click 1 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Milton [is/is not] vigilant because . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- At a picnic, Milton is in charge of his baby sister. He watches her constantly to see that she doesn’t fall, put something in her mouth that she shouldn’t, or wander off.
- Milton’s mother asks him to keep checking the rice cooking on the stove and stir it so that it doesn’t burn. He forgets and plays video games with his brother until the rice becomes inedible.

Point to the word vigilant and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DENSE

5 Introduce and Define Dense and Review Synonyms

Show pages 14–15 of Flight and review that it was 9:00 at night and Lindbergh had completed one-third of the flight. Read the first sentence on page 14 aloud.

Tell the students that dense is the last word they will learn today, and explain that dense means “thick or crowded.” Explain that thick and crowded are synonyms of dense. Direct the students’ attention to the illustration on pages 14–15, and point out that Lindbergh was flying through dense, or very thick, fog.

Display word card 147 (WA3) and have the students say the word dense.

Teacher Note

You might review that ensure means “make certain that something happens.”

Teacher Note

You might review that inedible means “not edible, or not safe to eat.”

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of dense is denso/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words dense, crowded, and thick to it.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may struggle to understand verbal definitions. Using illustrations in a book to introduce a word provides the students with critical visual support for the word’s meaning.

6 Talk More About the Word Dense

Tell the students that we sometimes use the word dense to describe the plants in a rain forest or jungle.

Discuss as a class:

Q What does a dense rain forest or jungle look like?

Click 1 on word card 147 (WA3) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “A dense rain forest looks like . . .”

Ask:

 Q Where might you see a dense crowd of people? What might a dense crowd sound like? [Click 2 on WA3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “You might see a dense crowd [at a football game]. A dense crowd might sound like . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

7 Review the Suffix -er and Discuss the Word Denser

Write the words dense and denser where everyone can see them.

Point to the suffix -er in denser, and remind the students that -er is a suffix that means “more.”

Discuss as a class:

Q *Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word dense, what do you think the word denser means?*

Click 3 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I think denser means . . .”

If necessary, explain that denser means “thicker or more crowded.”

Review that the suffix -er means “more” and that it is used to compare two or more things. For example, if we say that the crowd at a restaurant is denser for breakfast than for lunch, we mean that the restaurant is more crowded at breakfast time than at lunchtime.

Ask:

 Q When is traffic likely to be denser: at 5:00 p.m. or at midnight? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “Traffic is likely to be denser at [5:00 p.m.] because . . .”

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to dense, you drop the final e to spell denser.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they discussed the suffix -er earlier when they learned the words rowdier and humbler.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the words dense and denser and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Suffix -er

Remind the students that the suffix -er means “more” and that it is used to compare two or more things. Write the words salty and saltier next to each other on the chart paper or somewhere everyone can see them. Explain that salty means “containing salt or too much salt.” Point out that ocean water is salty and that some foods, such as pretzels, are often salty. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word salty, what do you think the word saltier means? What do we mean when we say that one kind of food is saltier than another?

Write the following prompt where everyone can see it and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think saltier means _____. When we say one kind of food is saltier than another, we mean . . .”

If necessary, explain that saltier means “more salty.” When we say that one kind of food is saltier than another, we mean that it is more salty, or that it has more salt, than the other kind of food.

Then ask:

Q Which food would you expect to be saltier: a bowl of popcorn or a bowl of grapes? Why? Turn to your partner.

Write the following prompt where everyone can see it, and have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I would expect a bowl of _____ to be saltier because . . .”

On the next line after salty and saltier, write the words scary and scarier next to each other. Discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word scary, what do you think scarier means?

If necessary, explain that scarier means “more scary.”

Using the same procedure, discuss the words grumpier and happier.

---

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -er, add the word denser to it.

---

Materials

- (Optional) Chart paper and a marker

---

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -er, add the words saltier, scarier, grumpier, and happier to it.

Day 2

Review Plunge, Vigilant, and Dense

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words plunge, vigilant, and dense from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

plunge

Plunge means “dive or fall suddenly.”

vigilant

Vigilant means “watchful and alert, especially for possible harm or danger.”

dense

Dense means “thick or crowded.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q What is something a vigilant babysitter would do? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

plunge vigilant dense

PROMPT 1: A vigilant babysitter would _____ because . . .

WA4

PROMPT 1: “A vigilant babysitter would [make sure a child isn’t playing with anything dangerous] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. Then use the same procedure to discuss the following questions:

-  Q Would you want to live in a place with a dense population? Why?
[Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] want to live in a place with a dense population because . . .”

-  Q What might cause a model airplane to plunge to the ground? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “A model airplane might plunge to the ground [if it hit something like a tree or a telephone pole].”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that they will use their imaginations and what they know about yesterday’s vocabulary words to create sentences that use the words.

Point to the word plunge on the daily review cards (WA4), and review that plunge means “dive or fall suddenly.” Tell the students that you want partners to work together to make up sentences of their own that use the word plunge.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

-  Q *How might you use the word plunge in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.*

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up by asking:

- Q Does it make sense to say [“I screamed as our raft plunged over the waterfall and down to the pool below”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have the students create sentences that use the remaining words.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you plunged down a hill, into a pool, or onto the ground?” or “When have you seen something plunge?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “My bike hit a stone and I plunged . . .” or “The baby bird plunged . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

[vigilant] Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you been vigilant? Why?” or “When might a person need to be vigilant? Why?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “I need to be vigilant when . . .” or “The soldier was vigilant because . . .”

[dense] Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you seen dense [vegetation/ smoke/fog]? What did it look like?” or “Where might you see a dense crowd of people?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “I saw dense smoke when . . .” or “I saw a dense crowd when . . .” Then repeat the question.

Day 3

Introduce Uniform, Alternative, and Dazed

Materials

- Flight
- Word card 148 (WA5)
- Word card 149 (WA6)
- Word card 150 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words uniform, alternative, and dazed
- Review synonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Taught

uniform (p. 14)

Uniform means “consistent, or always the same.”
Uniform also means “all alike, or not different from one another.”

alternative (p. 20)

An alternative is an “option, or something you can have or do instead of something else.”

dazed (p. 28)

Dazed means “confused or unable to think clearly.”

INTRODUCE AND USE UNIFORM

1 Introduce and Define Uniform and Review Synonyms

Show pages 14–15 of Flight and review that Lindbergh was flying alone at night over the Atlantic Ocean. Read the first three sentences on page 14 aloud, emphasizing the word uniform.

Tell the students that uniform is the first word they will discuss today. Explain that uniform means “always the same,” and that uniform is a synonym of a word they learned earlier—consistent.

Explain that when the author says that Lindbergh’s plane was “moving up and down in the uniform blackness,” he means that the blackness of the sky was the same wherever Lindbergh looked. There was not a glimmer of light anywhere.

Display word card 148 (WA5) and have the students say the word uniform.

2 Talk About Uniform Temperatures

Explain that many people like to keep their bedroom at a uniform temperature during the night.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words uniform and consistent to it.

You might point out that the word uniform has another familiar meaning, and explain that a uniform is “the special clothing worn by all members of a group.”

Discuss as a class:

Q What does it mean to say “I want the temperature in my bedroom to be uniform during the night”?

Click 1 on word card 148 (WA5) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

WA5

PROMPT 1: To want the temperature to be uniform means that . . .

1 2 3

PROMPT 1: “To want the temperature to be uniform means that [you want the temperature to stay the same].”

Ask:

 Q Is the temperature outside uniform throughout the day? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The temperature outside [is/is not] uniform throughout the day because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3 Discuss Another Meaning of Uniform

Remind the students that words can have more than one meaning. Point to the word uniform on the word card, and review that in the story uniform means “consistent, or always the same.” Explain that uniform can also mean “all alike, or not different from one another.”

Explain that things that are uniform are alike in some way, such as the same color, height, size, or shape. For example, the eggs in a carton of eggs are uniform, or the same shape and size. Baseballs are uniform, or the same shape, color, and size.

Explain that you want the students to look around the classroom for things that are uniform, or alike. Then give the students a few moments to look around the room.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of alternative is alternativa.

Ask:

 Q What things in our classroom are uniform? In what way are they uniform? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[The books in the bookcase] are uniform. They are [the same height].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word uniform and review the pronunciation and meanings of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ALTERNATIVE

4 Introduce and Define Alternative

Show pages 20–21 of the book and review that Lindbergh had been flying over the ocean all night and now the sun was coming up. Read page 20 aloud, ending with the sentence “There’s no alternative but death and failure,” he writes.” Emphasize the word alternative.

Tell the students that alternative is the next word they will learn today. Explain that an alternative is an “option, or something you can have or do instead of something else.”

Point out that, because Lindbergh was more than halfway through his flight with nothing but water below him, he had only two alternatives, or choices: he could keep going and land in Paris, or he could crash into the water. Lindbergh chose to keep going.

Display word card 149 ( WA6) and have the students say the word alternative.

5 Discuss Alternatives

Point out that we choose among alternatives every day.

Ask:

 Q What is an alternative to eating a cookie as a snack? [Click 1 on WA6 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Eating an apple] is an alternative to eating a cookie.”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following question:

Q What is an alternative to riding your bike home after school? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Walking home] is an alternative to riding your bike home after school.”

Point to the word alternative and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DAZED

6 Introduce and Define Dazed and Review Synonyms

Show pages 28–29 of Flight and review that Lindbergh touched down in Paris. Read page 28 aloud, emphasizing the word dazed.

Tell the students that dazed is the last word they will learn today. Explain that dazed means “confused or unable to think clearly” and that dazed and confused are synonyms.

Point out that, when Lindbergh got out of his plane, he was dazed, or confused or unable to think clearly, for a moment. Explain that Lindbergh was dazed because he was very tired and because he was shocked by the number of people who surrounded his plane.

Display word card 150 (WA7) and have the students say the word dazed.

7 Discuss Being Dazed

Explain that like Lindbergh, all people can be dazed, or confused or unable to think clearly, because they are shocked or very surprised by things or because they are very tired. For example, some people are a bit dazed when they first wake up in the morning or when they wake up from a nap.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you been dazed? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I was dazed when . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word dazed and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words dazed and confused to it. You might explain that shocked, stunned, and bewildered are other synonyms of dazed and add those words to the chart, as well.

Teacher Note

You might explain that we say that someone who is dazed is “in a daze.”

Teacher Note

If the students cannot think of times they have been dazed, ask alternative questions such as “When have you seen another person who was dazed?” or “What is something that might happen to you that would leave you dazed?”

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss an Illustration

Tell the students that they will talk more about one of the illustrations from the book Flight. Show the illustration on pages 28–29 and ask the students to look carefully at the picture as you read from this part of the book. Then read page 28 aloud. Ask:

Q What did you notice about this illustration?

Have the students use the following prompt to discuss what they noticed with a partner:

PROMPT: “I noticed that [the people in the crowd look very excited].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their ideas with the group. Follow up by asking questions such as:

Q Why do you think [the people in the crowd look very excited]?

Day 4

Review Uniform, Alternative, and Dazed

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- “What Does It Mean?” chart (prepared ahead)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words uniform, alternative, and dazed from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

uniform

Uniform means “consistent, or always the same.” Uniform also means “all alike, or not different from one another.”

alternative

An alternative is an “option, or something you can have or do instead of something else.”

dazed

Dazed means “confused or unable to think clearly.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (🗉 WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, ask the following questions:

-  Q If your friend is tired of playing basketball at recess and asks you for alternatives, what is he asking you for? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “If he asks for alternatives, he is asking for . . .”

-  Q If your friend tells you that you looked dazed, what does your friend mean? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “If my friend tells me that I look dazed, she means . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Does It Mean?”

Display the “What Does It Mean?” chart that you prepared earlier in a place where everyone can see it.

Jill runs at a uniform pace.

The menu lists two alternatives for lunch.

Mr. Hernandez appears dazed after slipping on the ice and plunging to the sidewalk.

Three uniform houses sit side by side.

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “What Does It Mean?” Explain that you will read a sentence that uses one of yesterday’s vocabulary words aloud, and then partners will discuss what the vocabulary word means.

Direct the students’ attention to the first sentence, and read it aloud twice:

- Jill runs at a uniform pace.

Ask:

 Q What does the word uniform mean in the sentence? What is a “uniform pace”? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “The word uniform means [‘always the same’]. A ‘uniform pace’ is [a pace that never changes. She runs at the same speed the whole time].”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining sentences.

- The menu lists two alternatives for lunch.

 Q What does the word alternatives mean in the sentence? What alternatives might be listed on the menu? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “The word alternatives means [‘options’]. The alternatives on the menu might be . . .”

- Mr. Hernandez appears dazed after slipping on the ice and plunging to the sidewalk.

Q What does the word dazed mean in the sentence? Why might Mr. Hernandez appear dazed? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “The word dazed means [‘confused or unable to think clearly’]. Mr. Hernandez might appear dazed because . . .”

- Three uniform houses sit side by side.

Q What does the word uniform mean in the sentence? How do the uniform houses compare to each other? [Click 7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 7: “The word uniform means [‘all alike’]. The uniform houses [all are the same size and have the same appearance].”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way
- Give reasons for their opinions

Words Reviewed

bliss

Bliss is “great joy or complete happiness.”

dejected

Dejected means “sad and discouraged or in low spirits.”

mistreat

Mistreat means “treat badly, cruelly, or unfairly.”

refuge

Refuge means “shelter or protection from trouble or danger, or a place that provides shelter or protection.”

revere

Revere means “greatly respect and admire.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Do You Think About?”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “What Do You Think About?” Direct the students’ attention to the words on the ongoing review cards (WA9). Explain that you want the students to describe what they think about, or what pictures come into their minds, when they hear each of the words.

Model the activity by closing your eyes and describing what comes into your mind when you hear the word bliss.

You might say:

“When I hear the word bliss, I think about a boat trip I took with my family in Alaska. The weather was beautiful, the water was calm, and we saw whales and dolphins, puffins, and glaciers. It was bliss.”

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word bliss? Why? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, support them by asking questions such as “When have you felt bliss?” and “What do you like to do that fills you with bliss?”

WA9

bliss	dejected	mistreat
refuge	revere

PROMPT 1: When I hear the word _____, I think about _____ because . . .

PROMPT 1: “When I hear the word [bliss], I think about [going fishing with my grandfather] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word dejected, and explain that dejected is the next word the students will think about.

Have the students close their eyes. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What do you think about when you hear the word dejected? Why?
[Pause.] Open your eyes. [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

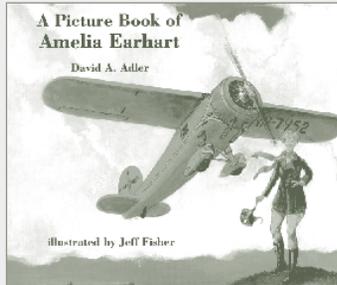

Use the same procedure to discuss the words mistreat, refuge, and revere. If the students struggle with the word or expression, think aloud about what you picture in your mind when you hear the word, or ask supporting questions like those in the notes.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to make associations, call for their attention and think aloud about what comes into your mind when you hear the word dejected. If the students continue to struggle, support them by asking questions such as “When have you felt dejected? Why?” and “When have you seen another person who was dejected? Why was that person dejected?”

Day 1

Introduce “Raises Eyebrows,” Reputation, and Desperate

Materials

- A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart
- Word card 151 (WA1)
- Word card 152 (WA2)
- Word card 153 (WA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words reputation and desperate and the idiom “raises eyebrows”
- Review idioms
- Give reasons for their opinion
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Taught

raises eyebrows

“Raises eyebrows” means “surprises or shocks.”

reputation (p. 7)

Reputation means the “opinion people have of someone or something.” Your reputation is the way others think of you and the way they judge your character.

desperate (p. 9)

Desperate means “extremely difficult, serious, or dangerous.”

INTRODUCE AND USE “RAISES EYEBROWS”

1 Introduce and Define “Raises Eyebrows” and Review Idioms

Briefly review A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart.

Show pages 4–5 of the book and review that Amelia Earhart grew up in the early 1900s in Kansas. Read pages 4–5 aloud.

Tell the students that they will start vocabulary work today by learning a new idiom—“raises eyebrows.” Explain that “raises eyebrows” means “surprises or shocks.”

Point to the illustration on page 5, and review that most girls Amelia’s age wore long dresses, but that Amelia and her sister wore pants called bloomers. Explain that wearing bloomers raised eyebrows, or surprised or shocked people such as the women in the illustration, because it was unusual in those days for girls to wear pants.

Point to the illustration on page 4, and explain that when Amelia played games like baseball and football, her behavior raised eyebrows because in those days girls did not usually play sports.

Display word card 151 (🗉 WA1) and have the students say “raises eyebrows.”

Remind the students that an idiom is “an expression or phrase that means something different from what it appears to mean.” Tell the students that this idiom actually does mean what it appears to mean. Explain that when people are surprised or shocked, they often really do raise their eyebrows. Then raise your eyebrows to model a surprised or shocked look.

2 Discuss Whether Something Would Raise Eyebrows

Tell the students that you will describe something; then partners will discuss whether it would raise eyebrows, or surprise or shock people, and explain why they think so.

Ask:

Q Would it raise eyebrows if a helicopter landed on the playground of our school? Why? [Click 1 on WA1 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

raises eyebrows

PROMPT 1: It [would/would not] raise eyebrows because . . .

1

WA1

PROMPT 1: “It [would/would not] raise eyebrows because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Would it raise eyebrows if [principal’s name] came to visit our class today? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Q Would it raise eyebrows if someone wore a superhero outfit to class? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the phrase “raises eyebrows” and review the pronunciation and meaning of the idiom.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of reputation is reputación.

INTRODUCE AND USE REPUTATION

3 Introduce and Define Reputation

Show pages 6–7 of the book, and review that this part of the book tells about Amelia’s education after high school. Read page 7 aloud, emphasizing the word reputation.

Tell the students that reputation is the next word they will learn today. Explain that reputation means the “opinion people have of someone or something.”

Explain that your reputation is the way others think of you and the way they judge your character. Review that at school Amelia had a reputation for brains, or for being smart. People’s opinion was that Amelia was intelligent.

Display word card 152 ( WA2) and have the students say the word reputation.

4 Talk More About the Word Reputation

Explain that the way you behave or treat others affects your reputation. For example, if you tell the truth and keep your promises, you will have a reputation for being honest and trustworthy. If you work hard in school and do your best, you will have a reputation for being a hard worker or a good student.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Who do you know who has a reputation for being friendly? What has the person done to earn that reputation? [Pause; click  on WA2 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Mr. Milner] has a reputation for being friendly. He has earned that reputation by . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Explain that a person can also get a reputation for bad behavior. For example, someone who teases or picks on others might get a reputation for being a bully. Someone who never shares might get a reputation for being selfish.

Discuss as a class:

Q If someone has a reputation for being selfish, what might the person do to change that reputation?

Click  on word card 152 (WA2) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “To change a reputation for being selfish, a person might . . .”

Point to the word reputation and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE DESPERATE

5 Introduce and Define Desperate

Show pages 8–9 of the book and review that in Toronto, Amelia saw soldiers returning from World War I. Read the first paragraph on page 9 aloud, emphasizing the word desperate.

Tell the students that desperate is the final word the students will learn today. Explain that desperate means “extremely difficult, serious, or dangerous.”

Point out that seeing so many wounded soldiers helped Amelia realize what a desperate, or extremely difficult and dangerous, struggle the First World War was.

Display word card 153 (🌐 WA3) and have the students say the word desperate.

6 Discuss Desperate Circumstances

Remind the students that earlier they learned the word circumstances. Review that circumstances are “the facts or events that affect or explain a situation.” Explain that desperate circumstances are circumstances that are extremely difficult, serious, or dangerous.

Tell the students that you will describe some circumstances; then partners will discuss whether the circumstances are desperate or not, and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- A family is lost in the desert. Their car has run out of gas. Their cell phones do not work.

Ask:

Q Are the family’s circumstances desperate? Why? [Click ① on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “The family’s circumstances [are/are not] desperate because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- At her sleepover, Clara runs out of juice and sandwiches. Her friends are annoyed.

Q Are Clara’s circumstances desperate? Why? [Click ② on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of desperate is desesperado/a.

Day 2

Review “Raises Eyebrows,” Reputation, and Desperate

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

PROMPT 2: “Clara’s circumstances [are/are not] desperate because . . .”

- Although the hurricane blew off their roof, everyone in the house survived, and they have electricity and water.

Q Are their circumstances desperate? Why? [Click 3 on WA3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Their circumstances [are/are not] desperate because . . .”

Point to the word desperate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words reputation and desperate and the idiom “raises eyebrows” from Day 1
- Give reasons for their opinion
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Reviewed

raises eyebrows

“Raises eyebrows” means “surprises or shocks.”

reputation

Reputation means the “opinion people have of someone or something.” Your reputation is the way others think of you and the way they judge your character.

desperate

Desperate means “extremely difficult, serious, or dangerous.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of yesterday’s words was especially interesting or fun to talk about? Why? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[‘Raises eyebrows’] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, click 2 on the daily review cards (WA4) to display the next prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their partners’ thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “My partner thinks [‘raises eyebrows’] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Tell the students that you will ask them questions that include yesterday’s vocabulary words and words they learned earlier in the year.

Ask:

Q Might bizarre behavior raise eyebrows? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Bizarre behavior [might/might not] raise eyebrows because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Would you like to have a reputation for having get-up-and-go? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I [would/would not] like to have a reputation for having get-up-and-go because . . .”

Q Would you like to have a reputation for being rowdy? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

You might review that bizarre means “very strange or odd.”

Teacher Note

You might review that “get-up-and-go” means “energy.”

Teacher Note

You might review that rowdy means “wild and noisy.”

Teacher Note

You might review that serene means “calm or peaceful.”

PROMPT 5: “I [would/would not] like to have a reputation for being rowdy because . . .”

Q Would you feel serene if you were in a desperate situation? Why? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “I [would/would not] feel serene if I were in a desperate situation because . . .”

Day 3

Introduce Precarious, Feat, and Hazard

Materials

- A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart
- Word card 154 (WA5)
- Word card 155 (WA6)
- Word card 156 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words precarious, feat, and hazard
- Review synonyms
- Give reasons for their opinion
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Taught

precarious

Precarious means “perilous, dangerous, or risky.”

feat

A feat is an “act or achievement that shows great courage, strength, or skill.”

hazard (p. 28)

A hazard is a “danger or a risk.”

INTRODUCE AND USE PRECARIOUS

1 Introduce and Define Precarious and Review Synonyms

Show pages 12–13 of A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart. Review that Amelia went for a 10-minute airplane ride and fell in love with flying.

Read the last two paragraphs on page 12 aloud, beginning with “In January 1921, Amelia took her first flying lesson.”

Remind the students that earlier they learned the word perilous and that perilous means “risky or dangerous.” Explain that the first word they will discuss today is a synonym of perilous, and tell them that the word is precarious. Explain that precarious means “perilous, dangerous, or risky.”

Teacher Note

You might explain that another meaning of precarious is “characterized by a lack of security or stability.” Point out that a teacup sitting on the edge of a wobbly table is an example of something that is precarious.

Explain that flying airplanes was a risky pastime in the 1920s. Review that Amelia crash-landed several times, and explain that once she found herself in a very precarious, or dangerous, situation—she was hanging upside down inside her crashed airplane, held in by her safety belt.

Display word card 154 (🌐 WA5) and have the students say the word precarious.

2 Discuss Whether a Situation Is Precarious

Explain that we often use the word precarious to describe situations that are unsafe and could lead to harm or damage. Tell the students that you will describe a situation; then partners will discuss whether it is precarious or not and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- As the astronaut struggles to fix the broken panel outside the space station, he realizes that his air is running low. He turns to go back into the station and catches his suit on the jagged edge of the panel. He hears a hiss.

Ask:

Q Is the astronaut in a precarious situation? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

precarious

PROMPT 1: _____ [is/is not] in a precarious situation because . . .

WA5

PROMPT 1: “[The astronaut] [is/is not] in a precarious situation because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- Jerome is sitting in his favorite chair reading a book. Right next to the chair is a large picture window. Outside the window two children are playing catch with a baseball.

Q Is Jerome in a precarious situation? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of precarious is precario/a.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the word precarious as a synonym of perilous.

- Marta is riding a horse down a mountain path. The path is covered with loose, wet rocks. On one side of the path is a steep drop to the canyon below.

Q Is Marta in a precarious situation? Why? [Point to the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Point to the word precarious and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE FEAT

3 Introduce and Define Feat

Show pages 24–25 of the book and review that in 1932 Amelia Earhart flew across the Atlantic Ocean by herself. Read page 25 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will learn today is feat.

Explain that a feat is an “act or achievement that shows great courage, strength, or skill.”

Explain that Amelia accomplished many feats, or did things that showed great courage, strength, and skill. She was the first woman to fly alone across the Atlantic, the first to fly from Hawaii to California, the first to fly alone across both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the first to fly alone from Los Angeles to Mexico City.

Display word card 155 (🗉 WA6) and have the students say the word feat.

4 Discuss Impressive Feats

Point out that we have all heard or read about impressive feats or seen impressive feats on TV or in the movies. For example, a firefighter rescuing people from a burning building is an impressive feat because it requires great courage, strength, and skill. An athlete winning a gold medal in the Olympics is an impressive feat. A superhero in a movie flying or lifting a bus full of people into the air is an impressive feat.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is an impressive feat that you have heard or read about or seen someone accomplish? Why was it an impressive feat? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “An impressive feat that I [saw on TV] was [a man walking on a tightrope over a canyon]. It was an impressive feat because [it took a lot of courage and skill to do that].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word feat and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You might review that something impressive has a strong effect on your mind. You notice and remember it.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “What is a feat you know about that required great [courage/strength/skill]?” and “When have you seen someone do something amazing on TV or in a movie?” If the students cannot recall an impressive feat, ask alternative questions such as “What is an impressive feat that you can imagine someone doing?”

INTRODUCE AND USE HAZARD

5 Introduce and Define Hazard and Review Synonyms

Show pages 28–29 of the book and review that Amelia Earhart and her navigator disappeared somewhere in the Pacific Ocean when they tried to fly around the world. Read the first paragraph on page 28 aloud, emphasizing the word hazards.

Tell the students that hazard is the last word they will learn today, and explain that a hazard is a “danger or a risk.” Explain that the words danger and risk are synonyms of hazard. Explain that Amelia was aware of the hazards, or dangers, of trying to fly around the world, but she wanted to do it anyway.

Display word card 156 (🗉 WA7) and have the students say the word hazard.

6 Talk About Hazards

Review that a hazard is a “danger or risk.” Point out that some things are obvious hazards, or hazards that are easy to recognize. For example, a loaded gun is an obvious hazard, or danger. Pieces of shattered glass are another obvious hazard. An icy sidewalk is an obvious hazard.

Explain that sometimes things that are usually harmless can also be hazards, especially if they are misused or used carelessly.

Discuss as a class:

Q In what ways might a pencil be a hazard?

Click 1 on word card 156 (WA7) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “A pencil might be a hazard if . . .”

Explain that a “fire hazard” is something that is dangerous because it might cause a fire. For example, a stack of newspapers stored next to a furnace is a fire hazard because the flame of the furnace might cause the paper to catch fire.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What else might be a fire hazard in a home? Why is it a hazard? [Pause; click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Leaving candles burning at night] might be a fire hazard because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word hazard and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

ELPS 3.D.i
Step 5 and Step 6

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words hazard, danger, and risk to it.

EXTENSION

Explore Domain-specific Words: Navigator

Remind the students that authors writing about social studies topics, such as the lives of major historical figures, often use complex vocabulary terms related to that person's accomplishments. When reading about great voyages of exploration and discovery, we may come across terms that describe the tools and methods that explorers used on their journeys.

Show pages 26–27 of A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart and review that Amelia Earhart planned to fly around the world. Then read the following sentence from page 26 aloud: “On June 1, 1937, Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, began the trip.” Write the word navigator where everyone can see it. Explain that a navigator is a “person responsible for planning the route that a ship or airplane takes and for making sure that the ship or airplane stays on course.” Tell the students that on Amelia Earhart's journey around the world, Fred Noonan navigated, or made sure that they were traveling in the right direction.

Write the word navigation where everyone can see it, and explain that navigation is the “act of navigating, or of planning the route that a ship or airplane takes.” Tell the students that navigation has changed dramatically since ancient times. Long ago, sailors used the position of the sun or the stars in the sky to help them know where they were and whether they were going the right way. Over time, people have developed complex tools to help them stay on course. During the time of Amelia Earhart's journeys, navigators used maps, compasses, and radio to help them know which direction to go. Today, we rely on even more complex technology, including signals from satellites in space, to keep ships and aircraft on course.

Review Precarious, Feat, and Hazard

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words precarious, hazard, and feat from Day 3
- Give reasons for their opinion
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Reviewed

precarious

Precarious means “perilous, dangerous, or risky.”

feat

A feat is an “act or achievement that shows great courage, strength, or skill.”

hazard

A hazard is a “danger or a risk.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use if you were writing a story about riding your bike at night? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA8

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [hazard]. I might write . . .”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 26 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

Teacher Note

You might review that secure means “safe and protected.”

Teacher Note

You might review that valiant means “brave or courageous.”

Teacher Note

You might review that lethal means “deadly, or able to kill.”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 25 and 26, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 26 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Discuss Questions Using the Words

Tell the students that you will ask them questions that include yesterday’s vocabulary words and words they learned earlier in the year.

Ask:

Q Would you feel secure if you found yourself in a precarious situation? Why? [Click 2 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] feel secure if I found myself in a precarious situation because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q Would a valiant person be capable of performing an impressive feat? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “A valiant person [would/would not] be capable of performing an impressive feat because . . .”

Q Is a lethal weapon a hazard? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “A lethal weapon [is/is not] a hazard because . . .”

EXTENSION

Review Homophones

Write the words feat and feet where everyone can see them. Ask the students what they notice about the words. Tell the students that the words are homophones. Explain that homophones are “words that sound the same, but have different spellings and meanings.” Discuss the different meanings of feat and feet.

Discuss other homophones, such as groan and grown, flour and flower, and male and mail. Ask the students for additional examples.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Give reasons for their opinion
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Reviewed

apprehensive

Apprehensive means “worried or anxious that something bad may happen.”

dazed

Dazed means “confused or unable to think clearly.”

jubilant

Jubilant means “very happy, or joyful.”

pessimistic

Pessimistic means “expecting the worst to happen.” A pessimistic person thinks that things will turn out badly.

proficient

Proficient means “skillful, or able to do something well.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗉 WA9) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Review the Activity “Describe the Character”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Describe the Character.” Remind the students that you will read a story aloud; then partners will decide which vocabulary word best describes the main character in the story and explain why they think so.

Display the ongoing review activity (🗉 WA10) and begin the activity:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud.
  - Story 1: The old grizzly bear loves honey. He knows exactly where the easy-to-reach hives are in the trees. He finds a twig that is just the right size, expertly sticks it in the hive, and pulls out a great gob of sweet, sticky honey.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- Ongoing review activity (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

Each story on the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, reread the story, and think aloud about which word best describes the bear. For example, say “I think the word proficient best describes the bear, because the bear is very skillful at finding hives he can reach and at getting the honey out of the hives.” Then read the next story aloud and discuss it as a class rather than in pairs.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q Which vocabulary word best describes the bear? Why? [Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[Proficient] best describes the bear because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word.

The screenshot shows a digital interface with a word bank at the top containing five words: apprehensive, dazed, jubilant, pessimistic, and proficient. The word 'proficient' is highlighted in a green box. Below the word bank is a text box containing the following text: STORY 1: The old grizzly bear loves honey. He knows exactly where the easy-to-reach hives are in the trees. He finds a twig that is just the right size, expertly sticks it in the hive, and pulls out a great gob of sweet, sticky honey. At the bottom of the interface are five numbered buttons (1-5), with button 1 highlighted.

WA10

4. Click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following stories:

- Story 2: The little mouse timidly peers out of her hole. She nervously looks around to see if a hawk is flying overhead. She cautiously creeps into the field, ready to flee back to the hole at the first sign of danger.

Q Which vocabulary word best describes the little mouse? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “[Apprehensive] best describes the little mouse because . . .”

- Story 3: Mrs. Cezanne is unhappy. She is a painter, but no one buys her paintings. “I’ll never sell a painting,” she says. “Never ever. I might as well give up.”

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Mrs. Cezanne? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “[Pessimistic] best describes Mrs. Cezanne because . . .”

- Story 4: Tommy exclaims, “This is the best day of my life! I did great on my math test. My best friend is coming over to play games. Then my dad is taking us to a basketball game, and we get to meet the team. What could be better?”

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Tommy? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “[Jubilant] best describes Tommy because . . .”

- Story 5: Shania is stunned. Her best friend is moving away. What will she do without her? Shania can't sleep, hardly eats, and has a difficult time paying attention to anything anyone says to her.

Q Which vocabulary word best describes Shania? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “[Dazed] best describes Shania because . . .”

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using any of the words correctly? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are the students using the independent word-learning strategies they have learned as they read independently?

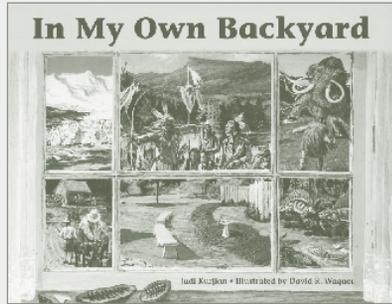

Record your observations on the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 205 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences. For example, if the students are struggling with the word proficient, ask questions such as “What is something that you are proficient at doing?” and “What did you do to become proficient at it?”

Introduce Speculate, Envision, and “In the Blink of an Eye”

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words speculate and envision and the idiom “in the blink of an eye”
- Review synonyms
- Review using Latin roots to determine word meanings
- Review idioms
- Give reasons for their opinions
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Taught

speculate

Speculate means “wonder or guess why something happened or what will happen next.”

envision

Envision means “picture in the mind, or imagine.”

in the blink of an eye (p. 16)

“In the blink of an eye” means “in an instant or extremely quickly.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SPECULATE

1 Introduce and Define Speculate and Review Synonyms

Briefly review In My Own Backyard.

Show pages 4–5 and review that one morning the narrator is awakened by the sound of a bluejay outside her window. Read page 4 aloud.

Tell the students that the first word they will learn today is speculate.

Explain that speculate means “wonder or guess why something happened or what will happen next,” and tell the students that speculate, wonder, and guess are synonyms. Point out that the narrator speculates about, or wonders, how many other jays lived in her backyard before she did and how many other people have stood where she is standing.

Display word card 157 (🌐 WA1) and have the students say the word speculate.

Materials

- In My Own Backyard
- Word card 157 (WA1)
- Word card 158 (WA2)
- Word card 159 (WA3)

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of speculate is especular.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words speculate, wonder, and guess to it.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “How do you speculate that your life will be different when you are 20 years old? Will you be in college or working at a job? Where will you be living? What will you be doing for fun?”

If you started a synonym chart, add the words envision, picture, and imagine to it.

2 Speculate About the Students’ Lives in Ten Years

Tell the students that people often speculate about the future, or wonder or guess what will happen in the years ahead. Ask them to imagine that ten years have passed and that they are now about 20 years old.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

-  Q What do you speculate that your life will be like when you are 20 years old? [Pause; click 1 on WA1 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

WA1

PROMPT 1: “When I am 20, I speculate that I will [be in college. I’ll have my own car and lots of friends].”

Point to the word speculate and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE ENVISION

3 Introduce and Define Envision, Review Synonyms, and Review Latin Roots

Show pages 6–7 of In My Own Backyard and review that the narrator speculates about the animals and people who lived in her backyard before she did. Read page 6 aloud.

Tell the students that the next word they will discuss is envision. Explain that envision means “picture in the mind, or imagine,” and tell them that envision, picture, and imagine are synonyms. Point out that the narrator envisions, or pictures in her mind or imagines, how her backyard might have looked 100 years before. Display word card 158 (WA2) and have the students say the word envision.

Point to the letters vis in the word envision and tell the students that vis is an example of a word root. Remind the students that a root is a “word or part of a word that is used to make other words.” Remind the students that many roots come to English from other languages, such as Latin and Greek. Tell the students that the roots vis and vid come from Latin, the language that was spoken by the people of ancient Rome. Explain that in Latin, vis and vid mean “see or appear.” Point to the word envision, and review that envision means “picture in the mind, or imagine.” Point out that if you envision something, you can see it in your mind.

4 Do the Activity “Imagine That!”

Tell the students that they will do the activity “Imagine That!” Remind them that they will make pictures in their minds as you ask them questions. Ask the students to close their eyes and envision themselves on a very hot day.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Where are you on this hot day? [Pause.] What are you doing? [Pause.] What are you wearing? [Pause.] What are you eating or drinking? [Pause.] Open your eyes. [Pause; click  on WA2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner, and tell each other what you envisioned.

PROMPT 1: “I envisioned . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word envision and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE “IN THE BLINK OF AN EYE”

5 Introduce and Define “In the Blink of an Eye” and Review Idioms

Show pages 16–17 of In My Own Backyard. Review that the narrator envisions her backyard in the ice age, about 10,000 years ago. Read page 16 aloud, emphasizing the idiom “in a blink of my eye.”

Tell the students that they will end their vocabulary work today by talking about the words “in the blink of an eye.” Explain that “in the blink of an eye” is an idiom that means “in an instant or extremely quickly.” Review that the narrator envisions the ice age in her backyard, and then, in the blink of an eye, or in an instant, the ice is gone and a new scene appears.

Display word card 159 ( WA3) and have the students say “in the blink of an eye.”

Point to “in the blink of an eye” on the word card, and review that an idiom is “an expression or phrase that means something different

Teacher Note

You might point to the word vision within the word envision and explain that vision and envision are related. Explain that our vision is our ability to see. When we envision something, we see it in our minds.

ELL Note

Idioms can be especially challenging for English Language Learners to understand and use. You might have the students blink their eyes to get a sense of how quick a blink of an eye is.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that they learned these other idioms this year: “get-up-and-go,” sidesplitting, “nosing around,” “lend a hand,” and “raises eyebrows.” If you started an idioms chart, add “in the blink of an eye” to it.

from what it appears to mean.” Tell the students that when we say that something happened in the blink of an eye, we do not mean that it happened when someone blinked her eye. Instead, we mean that it happened in the short time it takes to blink an eye, or that it happened very quickly.

6 Play “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Explain that you will read a scenario that includes the idiom “in the blink of an eye.” Partners will then discuss whether or not the idiom makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Explosive charges are set in the old building where no one has lived or worked for many years. At the push of a button, there is a huge “boom!” In the blink of an eye, the building is gone.

Ask:

Q Does the idiom “in the blink of an eye” make sense in the scenario? Why? [Click 1 on WAB to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “In the blink of an eye’ [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- The road from the farm to school is long, hot, and dusty. The boy walks slowly along, dragging his backpack behind him. In the blink of an eye, he is at school.
- Anisa’s dog Spike hungrily watches as Anisa eats a sandwich. When Anisa drops a piece of meat, Spike leaps at it. In the blink of an eye, the meat is gone.

Point to the words “in the blink of an eye” and review the pronunciation and meaning of the phrase.

Review Speculate, Envision, and “In the Blink of an Eye”

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words speculate and envision and the idiom “in the blink of an eye” from Day 1
- Give reasons for their opinions
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Reviewed

speculate

Speculate means “wonder or guess why something happened or what will happen next.”

envision

Envision means “picture in the mind, or imagine.”

PROMPT 1: “The word [speculate] was especially [interesting/fun] to talk about because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Tell Me a Story”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Tell Me a Story.” Remind them that you will tell them the beginning of a story that includes one of the vocabulary words. Then the students will use their imaginations and what they know about the word to make up an ending for the story.

Display the daily review activity (📄 WA5) and show the first story and its accompanying prompt.

Tell Me a Story

The students file into the classroom and stop suddenly. In the middle of the room is a large box with dozens of small holes in the sides. There are strange noises coming from the box. Addison points to the box and whispers to Joseph, “What do you think that is?” Joseph whispers back, “I speculate . . .”

PROMPT 1: Joseph whispers back, “I speculate . . .”

WA5

Point to the word speculate and tell the students that the first story uses the word speculate. Then read story 1 aloud slowly and clearly.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q How might you finish the story? What does Joseph speculate about the box? [Pause; point to prompt 1 on WA5.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “Joseph whispers back, ‘I speculate . . .’”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining stories:

[envision]

- Story 2: Marita’s mom tells her that she may redecorate her room, and Marita is jubilant. “How do you envision your room will look?” Marita’s mom asks. Marita says, “I envision . . .”

Teacher Note

You might review that jubilant means “very happy, or joyful.”

Q How might you finish the story? How might Marita envision her room?
[Pause; point to prompt 2.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Marita says, ‘I envision . . .’”

[in the blink of an eye]

- Story 3: Tony is writing a story. “What happens in the story?” his friend Greg asks. Tony explains, “There’s a huge, powerful tornado. It hits this town, and in the blink of an eye . . .”

Q How might you finish the story? What happens in the blink of an eye when the tornado hits the town? [Pause; point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “In the blink of an eye . . .”

Introduce Imposing, Recede, and Eerie

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words imposing, recede, and eerie
- Review synonyms and antonyms
- Review words with multiple meanings
- Review using the suffix -er to determine word meanings
- Give reasons for their opinions
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Taught

imposing

Imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength.”

recede

Recede means “move back or away or fade gradually.”

eerie (p. 26)

Eerie means “strange and frightening.”

Materials

- In My Own Backyard
- Word card 160 (WA6)
- Word card 161 (WA7)
- Word card 162 (WA8)

INTRODUCE AND USE IMPOSING

1 Introduce and Define Imposing and Review Synonyms

Briefly review In My Own Backyard.

Show pages 16–17. Review that the narrator envisions the ice age in her backyard; and then in the blink of an eye, the ice is gone and a new scene appears. Then read these sentences from page 16 aloud: “People wearing animal skins were trying to drive away an animal that looked like a big, furry elephant. I saw a frightened family crouching near their fire.”

Tell the students that imposing is the first word they will learn today. Explain that imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength.”

Remind the students that they learned the word impressive earlier and that something impressive has a strong effect on your mind. You notice and remember it. Explain that something imposing makes a strong impression on you because of its great size or strength. Explain that the words imposing and impressive are synonyms.

Point to the illustration on page 17, and explain that the big, furry animal is imposing, or impressive because of its great size and strength. Point out that because of its size and strength, the imposing creature is frightening to the people in the picture.

Display word card 160 (🌍 WA6) and have the students say the word imposing.

2 Discuss Imposing Animals and Structures

Remind the students that imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength,” and review that the elephant-like animal in the story is imposing.

Discuss as a class:

Q What animals living today do you think are imposing?

Click 1 on word card 160 (WA6) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of imposing is imponente.

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words imposing and impressive to it.

imposing

PROMPT 1: _____ are imposing.

PROMPT 1: “[Great white sharks and blue whales] are imposing.”

Explain that we can also use the word imposing to describe structures like buildings, bridges, and monuments.

Ask:

Q What might an imposing building look like? [Click 2 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “An imposing building might look . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Discuss as a class:

Q What is an imposing building you have seen? Why do you say it is imposing?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “An imposing building I have seen is [the White House]. It is imposing because . . .”

Point to the word imposing and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE RECEDE

3 Introduce and Define Recede

Show pages 26–27 of In My Own Backyard and review that the narrator envisions a time when her backyard was part of a great sea. Read the first two sentences on page 26 aloud.

Tell the students that recede is the next word they will learn today. Explain that recede means “move back or away or fade gradually.” Point out that as time went by, the waters of the great sea began to recede, or pull back, and the sea became so shallow that the fish disappeared.

Display word card 161 (🗨️ WA7) and have the students say the word recede.

4 Discuss Things That Recede

Remind the students that we use the word recede to talk about things that move back, move away, or fade gradually. For example, scientists say that global warming is causing glaciers to recede, or shrink or move back. Tell them that over time, memories recede, or fade away in our minds.

Discuss as a class:

Q What do we mean if we say that the pain of a headache is receding?

Click 1 on word card 161 (WA7) to reveal the first prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 1: “If we say that the pain of a headache is receding, we mean . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss:

Q What do we mean if we say that floodwaters are receding?

Click 2 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “If we say that floodwaters are receding, we mean . . .”

5 Review Antonyms and Play “Approaching or Receding?”

Point out that the words recede and approach are antonyms, or “words with opposite meanings.”

Tell the students that partners will play a game called “Approaching or Receding?” Explain that you will describe something, and then partners will discuss whether it is approaching or receding and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- The fog grew thicker and thicker as it moved from the ocean onto the shore.

Ask:

Q Is the fog approaching the shore or receding from it? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “The [fog] is [approaching/receding] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

You might explain that approach means “move closer to someone or something.” If you started an antonym chart, add the words recede and approach to it.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- The sound of the fire engine grew fainter and fainter as it sped away from the fire station.

Q Is the sound of the fire engine approaching the fire station or receding from it? Why? [Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

- The forest fire grew hotter and hotter as it burned through the forest toward the village.

Q Is the fire approaching the village or receding from it? Why? [Point to prompt 3.] Turn to your partner.

Point to recede and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE EERIE

6 Introduce and Define Eerie

Show pages 26–27 of the book again, and review that the water was receding from the backyard and becoming very shallow. Read the rest of page 26 aloud, emphasizing the word eerie. Tell the students that eerie is the next word they will discuss today, and explain that eerie means “strange and frightening.”

Point to the sky in the illustration on page 27, and review that to the narrator the sky is eerie, or strange and frightening. Point to one of the strange creatures in the illustration, and explain that some people might find these animals eerie, or strange and frightening.

Display word card 162 (🔊 WA8) and have the students say the word eerie.

7 Talk About Eerie Things

Remind the students that something that is eerie is strange in a scary way, and point out that sometimes things we cannot explain seem eerie. For example, a sound at night that you do not recognize might seem eerie, or strange and frightening. A mysterious light or a figure dimly seen in the fog might seem eerie.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q When have you seen or heard something eerie, or strange and frightening? [Pause; click 🔊 on WA8 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “I [saw/heard] an eerie [scratching sound coming from our attic at home. We found out that it was a squirrel].”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you heard a noise in the night that you did not recognize and you felt frightened?” and “When have you seen something that you did not recognize and you felt frightened?” If the students do not recall times they saw or heard eerie things, ask alternative questions such as “What sound might you hear at night that would seem eerie?” and “What might you see on a dark street that would seem eerie?”

Tell the students that sometimes dreams can be eerie. Then discuss as a class:

Q When have you had an eerie dream? Why was it eerie?

Click 2 on word card 162 (WA8) to reveal the prompt. Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “I had an eerie dream about [space aliens]. The dream was eerie because [the aliens were very weird looking and pretty scary].”

8 Review the Suffix -er and Discuss the Word Eerier

Write the words eerie and eerier next to each other where everyone can see them. Point to the suffix -er in eerier and remind the students that -er is a suffix that means “more.”

Discuss as a class:

Q *Based on what you know about the suffix -er and the word eerie, what do you think the word eerier means?*

Click 3 on word card 162 (WA8) to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I think eerier means . . .”

If necessary, explain that eerier means “more strange and frightening.”

Review that the suffix -er is used to compare two things. For example, to some people the sound of a screeching bat is eerier, or more strange and frightening, than the sound of a screeching cat.

Discuss as a class:

Q Which do you think would be eerier: hearing mysterious footsteps behind you on a foggy night or hearing mysterious breathing behind you in a dark room?

Click 4 to reveal the prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 4: “[Hearing mysterious breathing behind me in a dark room] would be eerier because . . .”

Ask:

 Q Which do you think would be eerier: walking alone through a deep, dark forest or walking alone through an old empty house? Why? [Point to prompt 4.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word eerie and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when you add the suffix -er to eerie, you drop the final e to spell eerier.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the suffix -er, add the word eerier to it.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Discuss Another Meaning of Imposing

Write the word imposing where everyone can see it, and review that imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength.” Review that the narrator of In My Own Backyard envisions imposing animals such as dinosaurs and huge sea creatures living in her backyard.

Tell the students that imposing has another meaning. Explain that imposing can also mean “making unfair or impolite demands on someone.” Point out that if someone comes to your house at dinnertime without being invited and insists that you feed him, that person is imposing on you, or making unfair or impolite demands.

Write the two definitions of imposing where everyone can see them. Tell the students that you will read a sentence that includes the word imposing. Partners will then decide whether imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength” or “making unfair or impolite demands on someone.”

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- Shoshanna is always imposing on people by asking for favors or getting them to do things for her.

Point to the definitions and ask:

Q In the sentence, does imposing mean “impressive because of great size or strength” or “making unfair or impolite demands on someone”? Why? Turn to your partner.

Have one or two volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “Imposing means . . .”

Using the same procedure, discuss the following sentence:

- Dressed in his royal robes and riding on his magnificent horse, the king is an imposing figure.

Day 4

Review Imposing, Recede, and Eerie

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA9)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words imposing, recede, and eerie from Day 3
- Give reasons for their opinions
- Discuss their opinions respectfully

Words Reviewed

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

- Q Which of yesterday's words might you use in a story about a recently discovered sea creature? How might you use the word? [Click 1 on WA9 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

WA9

PROMPT 1: "I might use the word [eerie]. I might write . . ."

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

ELPS 3.H.iii
Step 2 (all)

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that they will use their imaginations and what they know about yesterday’s vocabulary words to create sentences that use the words.

Point to the word imposing on the daily review cards (WA9) and review that imposing means “impressive because of great size or strength.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word imposing in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up on each response by asking the class to think about the students’ sentence. Ask:

Q Does it make sense to say [“The imposing mountain was huge and rugged with a plunging waterfall”]? Why?

Use the same procedure to have partners create sentences for recede and eerie.

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you seen an imposing animal? Why was it imposing?” or “What is something in nature that is imposing? Why is it imposing?” If the students continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The most imposing animal in the forest is . . .” or “The imposing river . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

If a pair’s sentence does not convey the meaning of imposing, point out that the sentence does not make the meaning of imposing clear. Then help the students develop the sentence further by asking follow-up questions such as “What was imposing and why?” or “Why do you think an elephant is imposing?”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “What Does It Mean?”

Post the “What Does It Mean?” chart (prepared ahead) where everyone can see it.

When people ask Inez what she wants to do when she grows up, she says, “I have no ambitions.”

“My ambition is to be a doctor,” says Robyn.

“Nothing will hinder me.”

The baby is engaged in the process of stacking blocks and knocking them down.

The sign outside the restaurant reads,

“Formal clothing required.”

The invitation reads, “The party will be held at the park. Please dress informally.”

Tell the students that partners will do an activity called “What Does It Mean?” Explain that you will read a sentence that uses one of the vocabulary words aloud; then partners will discuss what the vocabulary word means.

Direct the students’ attention to the first sentence, and read it aloud twice:

- When people ask Inez what she wants to do when she grows up, she says, “I have no ambitions.”

Ask:

Introduce Segregate, Integrate, and Safeguard

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words segregate, integrate, and safeguard
- Review using context to determine word meanings
- Review antonyms and synonyms
- Work in a responsible way
- Discuss their opinions respectfully
- Give feedback in a caring way

Words Taught

segregate (p. 8)

Segregate means “separate people or keep people apart, usually because of race.”

integrate

Integrate means “include everyone or allow everyone to join or participate.”

safeguard

Safeguard means “protect or guard.”

INTRODUCE AND USE SEGREGATE AND INTEGRATE

1 Introduce Segregate and Use Context to Determine Its Meaning

Briefly review A Picture Book of Rosa Parks.

Show pages 8–9 and review that Rosa Parks grew up in Alabama in the early 1900s. Read the following paragraph from page 8 aloud, emphasizing the word segregated:

“When Rosa was young, discrimination against African Americans was common. There were ‘Jim Crow’ laws that kept black people and white people segregated. They were kept apart on streetcars and trains, at parks and drinking fountains, in churches, hotels, theaters, and restaurants. Even the United States Army was segregated.”

Tell the students that segregate is the first word they will learn today. Display the “Sentences from A Picture Book of Rosa Parks” chart (WA1), and explain that these are the sentences you just read.

Point to the word segregated and underline it in both of the sentences in which it appears. Tell the students that they can sometimes figure out

Materials

- A Picture Book of Rosa Parks
- “Sentences from A Picture Book of Rosa Parks” chart (WA1)
- Word cards 163–164 (WA2)
- Word card 165 (WA3)

Teacher Note

If the students do not immediately determine the meaning of segregate from the context, give them the definition rather than having them guess.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of segregate is segregar.

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that inhumane means “not humane, or cruel.”

the meaning of an unfamiliar word—like segregate—by rereading the sentence that includes the word, or the sentences that come before or after it, to look for clues. Explain that as you read these sentences again, you want the students to think about what the word segregate might mean and which words in the sentences are clues to the meaning of segregate.

Read the paragraph aloud. Then discuss as a class:

Q Based on what you just heard, what do you think the word segregate might mean?

Point to the first prompt and read it aloud.

WA1

Sentences from A Picture Book of Rosa Parks

When Rosa was young, discrimination against African Americans was common. There were “Jim Crow” laws that kept black people and white people segregated. They were kept apart on streetcars and trains, at parks and drinking fountains, in churches, hotels, theaters, and restaurants. Even the United States Army was segregated.

PROMPT 1: I think segregate might mean . . .

PROMPT 2: The clues _____ help me figure out the meaning of the word segregate.

PROMPT 1: “I think segregate might mean . . .”

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class. If necessary, explain that segregate means “separate people or keep people apart, usually because of race.”

Then ask:

Q What clues help you figure out the meaning of the word segregate?

Point to the second prompt and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 2: “The clues [‘discrimination against African Americans’ and ‘they were kept apart’] help me figure out the meaning of the word segregate.”

Circle the context clues on the chart as the students identify them. If necessary, point out that discrimination against African Americans and they were kept apart are clues that help us figure out that segregate means “separate people or keep people apart, usually because of race.” Explain that laws that inhumanely segregated black people and white people kept them separate, or apart, from each other.

Display word cards 163–164 (WA2) and click to reveal word card 163. Have the students say the word segregate.

2 Talk More About the Word Segregate

Review that we usually use the word segregate to talk about separating one group of people from others based on their race. Review that when Rosa Parks was growing up, black people were segregated, or kept apart, from white people on streetcars, buses, and trains and in restaurants and other public places.

Discuss as a class:

Q Why is it unfair to segregate people based on race?

Click 1 on word card 163 (WA2) to reveal the first prompt. Have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

segregate 164

PROMPT 1: It is unfair to segregate people based on race because . . .

1 2 3 4 5 6

WA2

PROMPT 1: “It is unfair to segregate people based on race because . . .”

Explain that in some schools students are segregated, or separated, by gender (male and female)—boys attend only classes with other boys and girls attend only classes with other girls. Some people believe that students in gender-segregated classes do better in subjects such as reading, writing, and mathematics.

Ask:

 Q [Would/Do] you enjoy attending a school in which boys and girls are segregated in classes? Why? [Click 2 on WA2 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I [would/would not] enjoy attending a school in which boys and girls are segregated because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

ELL Note

The Spanish cognate of integrate is integrar.

Teacher Note

If you started an antonym chart, add the words segregate and integrate to it.

3 Introduce Integrate and Review Antonyms

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is integrate. Direct the students' attention to word cards 163–164 (WA2) and click to reveal word card 164. Have the students say the word integrate.

Explain that the words integrate and segregate are antonyms.

Discuss as a class:

Q If segregate means “separate people or keep people apart, usually because of race,” and the words segregate and integrate are antonyms, what do you think integrate means?

Click 3 to reveal the prompt, and have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT 3: “I think integrate means . . .”

Explain that integrate means “include everyone or allow everyone to join or participate.” Explain that if restaurants and other public places are integrated, they are open to everyone regardless of a person's race, religion, nationality, or gender; they are not segregated.

4 Do the Activity “Segregated or Integrated?”

Tell the students that they will do an activity called “Segregated or Integrated?” Explain that you will describe places or groups of people; then partners will discuss whether the places or people are segregated or integrated and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- In a neighborhood, people of many different races, nationalities, and religions live and work together.

Ask:

 Q Is the neighborhood segregated or integrated? Why do you say that?
[Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think the neighborhood is [segregated/integrated], because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- In a science experiment, people with green eyes are kept separate from people with brown eyes.

 Q Is the science experiment segregated or integrated? Why do you say that?
[Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: “I think the science experiment is [segregated/integrated], because . . .”

- On a kickball team, men and women of different ages, from different parts of the city, and with different ability levels all play together.

Q Is the kickball team segregated or integrated? Why do you say that?
[Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: “I think the kickball team is [segregated/integrated], because . . .”

Point to the words segregate and integrate and review the pronunciation and meanings of the words.

INTRODUCE AND USE SAFEGUARD

5 Introduce and Define Safeguard and Review Synonyms

Show pages 10–11 of A Picture Book of Rosa Parks. Review that an organization called the Ku Klux Klan threatened the lives of African Americans. Read the last sentence on page 10 aloud: “Rosa’s grandfather, Sylvester Edwards, carried a shotgun to protect his family from the Klan.”

Tell the students that the next word they will learn is safeguard. Explain that safeguard means “protect or guard,” and that the words safeguard, protect, and guard are synonyms. Explain that Rosa’s grandfather carried a shotgun to safeguard, or protect, his family.

Display word card 165 (🗨️ WA3) and have the students say the word safeguard.

6 Discuss Questions About Safeguarding

Remind the students that safeguard means “protect or guard.”

Ask:

Q What might you do to safeguard your bike from getting stolen at night?
[Click 1 on WA3 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “To safeguard my bike, I might . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following questions:

Q What might you do to safeguard a cut on your finger from infection?
[Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “To safeguard the cut on my finger, I might . . .”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words safeguard, protect, and guard to it.

Teacher Note

You might explain that safeguard is a compound word made up of the words safe and guard. If you safeguard something, you guard it to keep it safe.

 Q What might you do to safeguard against slipping on icy steps? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “To safeguard against slipping, I might . . .”

Point to the word safeguard and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Day 2

Review Segregate, Integrate, and Safeguard

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA4)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words segregate, integrate, and safeguard from Day 1
- Work in a responsible way
- Discuss their opinions respectfully
- Give feedback in a caring way

Words Reviewed

segregate

Segregate means “separate people or keep people apart, usually because of race.”

integrate

Integrate means “include everyone or allow everyone to join or participate.”

safeguard

Safeguard means “protect or guard.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA4). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

 Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use when you talk with your family or friends? How might you use the word? [Pause; click 1 on WA4 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

segregate integrate safeguard

---

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____ when I talk with _____. I might say . . .

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [safeguard] when I talk with [my friend Keith]. I might say . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Point to segregate on the daily review cards (WA4), and explain that you will read a sentence that includes the word segregate. Partners will then discuss whether or not segregate makes sense in the sentence and explain why they think so.

Read the following sentence aloud twice:

- To protect small dogs at the animal shelter, small dogs and big dogs are segregated.

Ask:

Q Does the word segregated make sense in the sentence? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “The word [segregated] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following sentences:

[integrate]

- In 1948 President Harry Truman integrated the army, and African American and white soldiers began to train and serve together.

[safeguard]

- To safeguard her teeth, Jemma brushes after every meal.

Day 3

Introduce Defy, Misfortune, and Merit

Materials

- A Picture Book of Rosa Parks
- Word card 166 (WA5)
- Word card 167 (WA6)
- Word card 168 (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn and use the words defy, misfortune, and merit
- Review using the prefix mis- to determine word meanings
- Review synonyms
- Work in a responsible way
- Discuss their opinions respectfully
- Give feedback in a caring way

Words Taught

defy

Defy means “resist or refuse to obey.”

misfortune

Misfortune means “bad luck or an unlucky event.”

merit

Merit means “deserve or be worthy.”

INTRODUCE AND USE DEFY

1 Introduce and Define Defy

Show pages 18–19 of A Picture Book of Rosa Parks. Remind the students that in 1955 Rosa got on a bus driven by a man named James Blake. What happened on the bus changed Rosa’s life and life in the United States.

Read page 18 aloud, beginning with the sentence “Rosa was coming home from her work as a tailor’s assistant at a Montgomery department store.”

Tell the students that the first word they will discuss today is defy. Explain that defy means “resist or refuse to obey.”

Review that James Blake told Rosa to give up her seat on the bus for the white passengers. Explain that Rosa defied the driver, or refused to obey him, because she knew that the law that segregated African Americans and whites on buses was unfair.

Display word card 166 (WA5) and have the students say the word defy.

2 Play “Did Milton Defy Someone?”

Tell the students that you will describe something that our friend Milton does; partners will then discuss whether Milton defies someone and explain why they think so.

Read the following scenario aloud twice:

- Milton’s dad is cooking soup. When Milton asks if he can have a taste, his dad says, “No. It’s too hot.” Milton frowns and walks out of the kitchen.

Ask:

Q Did Milton defy his dad? Why? [Click 1 on WA5 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

defy

PROMPT 1: Milton [did/did not] defy his dad because . . .

1 2 3

WA5

PROMPT 1: “Milton [did/did not] defy his dad because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Using the same procedure, discuss the following scenarios:

- It’s Milton’s turn at bat in the softball game. When he starts toward home plate, a teammate stops him. “You can’t bat because you’re not good enough,” the teammate says. “You’re wrong, and I’ll show you,” Milton replies, and he walks to the plate.

Q Did Milton defy his teammate? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “Milton [did/did not] defy his teammate because . . .”

- The lifeguard at the beach tells Milton to stay out of the water because the waves are getting rough. Milton shouts, “You can’t tell me what to do,” and he runs into the water.

Q Did Milton defy the lifeguard? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “Milton [did/did not] defy the lifeguard because . . .”

Point to the word defy and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE MISFORTUNE

3 Introduce and Define Misfortune and Review the Prefix mis-

Show pages 26–27 of A Picture Book of Rosa Parks and review that after Rosa defied the bus driver, she participated in many civil rights demonstrations and marches. In 1957 she left Alabama and went to work in Detroit, where she helped poor people find homes. Read the last paragraph on page 27 aloud.

Explain that the next word the students will learn today is misfortune, and explain that misfortune means “bad luck or an unlucky event.” Explain that in the late 1970s, Rosa had a series of misfortunes, or unlucky events. First her husband died, then her brother, and finally her mother.

Display word card 167 (🎧 WA6) and have the students say the word misfortune.

Point to the prefix mis- in misfortune on the word card, and review that mis- is a prefix that means “wrong or wrongly, or bad or badly.” Explain that when the prefix mis- is added to the word fortune, which means “the things that happen to you in your life,” it makes the new word misfortune, which means “the bad things that happen to you, or bad luck or an unlucky event.”

4 Discuss Misfortunes

Explain that misfortune, or bad luck or an unlucky event, happens to us all at some time in our lives. Describe one or two misfortunes you have experienced.

You might say:

“Last year I had the misfortune of having a flood in my basement. It was a misfortune because there were eight inches of water, and almost everything in the basement was ruined. Recently I had the misfortune of being in an airport when a snowstorm hit. It was a misfortune because I was stuck in the airport for two days.”

Teacher Note

You might remind the students that earlier they discussed these words that use the prefix mis-: mislead (“lead someone to believe something that is not true”), misjudge (“judge wrongly, or form a wrong or unfair opinion about a person or situation”), and mistreat (“treat badly, cruelly, or unfairly”).

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix mis-, add the word misfortune to it.

TEKS 3.C.ii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 4
(first paragraph and “Students might say” note on page 602)

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What is a misfortune that you or someone you know has experienced? Why was it a misfortune? [Pause; click 1 on WA6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[My grandfather] had the misfortune of [tripping and falling when he was walking down the sidewalk]. It was a misfortune because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word misfortune and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

INTRODUCE AND USE MERIT

5 Introduce and Define Merit and Review Synonyms

Show pages 28–29 of the book and review that Rosa Parks was honored for her work in the civil rights movement. Read the last paragraph on page 28 aloud.

Tell the students that the last word they will discuss today is merit. Explain that merit means “deserve or be worthy” and that the words merit and deserve are synonyms. Point out that people felt that Rosa Parks merited, or deserved, to be honored because of her lifelong fight for equality for all Americans.

Display word card 168 (WA7) and have the students say the word merit.

6 Discuss People Who Merit Respect or Admiration

Explain that people like Rosa Parks who try to help others merit, or deserve, our respect and admiration. People who accomplish difficult tasks also merit our respect and admiration. Give examples of people you know or know about who merit your respect or admiration.

You might say:

“A person who merits my respect and admiration is my father. He has worked hard all his life and has been a wonderful father to me. I really look up to him. Another person who merits my respect is my niece, Kit. She just graduated from high school and won a college scholarship. I think that is a wonderful accomplishment. I think Martin Luther King Jr. merits both respect and admiration because of his important work in the civil rights movement.”

Teacher Note

If you started a synonym chart, add the words merit and deserve to it.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Who is someone you know or know about who merits your respect and admiration? Why? [Pause; click 1 on WA7 to reveal the prompt.]
Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 1: “[My friend Claire] merits my respect and admiration because . . .”

After partners have talked, have one or two volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Point to the word merit and review the pronunciation and meaning of the word.

Teacher Note

If you started a chart of words that use the prefix mis-, add the words mispronounce, mislabel, miscalculate, misbehave, and mishandle to it.

MORE STRATEGY PRACTICE

Review the Prefix mis-

Remind the students that a prefix is “a letter or a group of letters that is added to the beginning of a word to make a new word.” Review that the prefix mis- means “wrong or wrongly, or bad or badly” and that when mis- is added to the word fortune, it makes the new word misfortune, which means “bad luck or an unlucky event.”

Remind the students that knowing the meaning of a prefix can help them figure out the meanings of words that use the prefix. Write the word mispronounce where everyone can see it. Point out that mispronounce is made up of the word pronounce and the prefix mis-.

Ask:

Q Based on what you know about the word pronounce and the prefix mis-, what do you think the word mispronounce means? Turn to your partner.

Have a few volunteers use the following prompt to share their thinking with the class.

PROMPT: “I think mispronounce means . . .”

If necessary, explain that mispronounce means “pronounce wrongly”; if you mispronounce a word, you say it incorrectly.

Using the same procedure, discuss the words mislabel and miscalculate. Then discuss as a class:

Q What is a word that begins with the prefix mis- and means “behave or act badly”? (misbehave)

Q What is a word that begins with the prefix mis- and means “handle something roughly or in the wrong way”? (mishandle)

Review Defy, Misfortune, and Merit

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and practice using the words defy, misfortune, and merit from Day 3
- Work in a responsible way
- Discuss their opinions respectfully
- Give feedback in a caring way

Words Reviewed

defy

Defy means “resist or refuse to obey.”

misfortune

Misfortune means “bad luck or an unlucky event.”

merit

Merit means “deserve or be worthy.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the daily review cards (WA8). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

Ask:

Q Which of yesterday’s words might you use if you were writing a story about a terrible day? How might you use the word? [Click 1 on WA8 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

defymisfortunemerit

PROMPT 1: I might use the word _____. I might write . . .

1

WA8

PROMPT 1: “I might use the word [misfortune]. I might write . . .”

Materials

- Daily review cards (WA8)
- Copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) Copy of the “Week 28 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) for each student

Teacher Note

Support struggling students by asking questions such as “When have you defied someone? Why did you defy that person?” or “When might you defy someone?” If they continue to struggle, provide a sentence starter such as “The little boy defied his mother when . . .” or “The dog defied its owner and . . .” Then repeat the question.

Teacher Note

If a pair’s sentence does not convey the meaning of defy (for example, “I defied her” or “She defied me”), point out that the sentence does not make the meaning of defy clear. Then help the students develop the sentence further by asking follow-up questions such as “Why did you defy her and what happened?” or “Why did she defy you and what did you do?”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week’s words with their families.

Teacher Note

To provide students with additional review of words taught during Weeks 27 and 28, you might distribute a copy of the “Week 28 Crossword Puzzle” (BLM3) to each student.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Do the Activity “Create a Sentence”

Tell the students that partners will do the activity “Create a Sentence.” Review that partners will work together to create sentences that use the vocabulary words.

Point to the word defy on the daily review cards (WA8) and review that defy means “resist or refuse to obey.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q How might you use the word defy in a sentence? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

After partners have talked, have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Follow up on each response by asking the class to think about the students’ sentence.

MORE ELL SUPPORT

Discuss the Word Courageous

Write the word courageous where everyone can see it, and explain that courageous means “brave.” Tell the students that if you are courageous, you do something even if you are afraid. Give an example of something that someone might do that is courageous.

You might say:

“When a firefighter rushes into a burning house to save someone, she is being courageous, or brave. Even though the firefighter might be afraid or knows she might get hurt, she is still willing to risk her life to help others.”

Briefly review A Picture Book of Rosa Parks. (You may want to read pages 18–23 to the students.) Then ask:

Q How does Rosa show that she is courageous?

Have the students use the following prompt to discuss the question with a partner:

PROMPT: “Rosa shows she is courageous by . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their ideas with the group.

Ask the students to think about a time when they or someone they know or heard about was courageous. Then have the students use the following prompt to discuss their ideas with the group:

PROMPT: “I think [my aunt] was courageous when [she came to the United States alone and did not speak any English].”

Ongoing Review

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Review words learned earlier
- Work in a responsible way
- Discuss their opinions respectfully
- Give feedback in a caring way

Words Reviewed

alternative

An alternative is an “option, or something you can have or do instead of something else.”

eerie

Eerie means “strange and frightening.”

equitable

Equitable means “fair and equal for everyone.”

feat

A feat is an “act or achievement that shows great courage, strength, or skill.”

precarious

Precarious means “perilous, dangerous, or risky.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the ongoing review cards (🗂️ WA9). Review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

2 Play the Game “Finish the Story”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Finish the Story.” Review that you will tell a story, leaving off the last word; then partners will finish the story by deciding which of yesterday’s vocabulary words will make the best ending for it and explain why they think that.

Materials

- Ongoing review cards (WA9)
- Ongoing review activity (WA10)
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1)
- “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1)

Teacher Note

Each story on the ongoing review activity (WA10) has a corresponding number: the first story is 1; the second story is 2; the third story is 3; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

Teacher Note

You might review that rickety means “in bad condition and likely to break.”

Display the ongoing review activity (WA10) and begin the game:

1. Click 1 to reveal the first story (see WA10 below). Point to the story and read it aloud twice, slowly and clearly.
2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

Q Which of these vocabulary words makes the best ending for the story? Why? [Click 1 again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [equitable] makes the best ending because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking 1 a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

alternative	eerie	equitable	feat	precarious
-------------	-------	-----------	------	------------

STORY 1: Mark and Val are sharing a pizza. Mark cuts it into two pieces, one larger than the other. “That’s not fair!” Val complains loudly. “You need to be equitable.”

WA10

4. Finally, click 1 to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining stories.

- Story 2: Mrs. Tolsen tells the students that during free time they can read their library books or work on their art projects. Neil responds, “I’ve finished my book and my project. Is there another _____?” (alternative)
- Story 3: Martha and Jacob are exploring a cave. In the distance, they hear a low growling sound. “I’ve never heard a sound like that before,” Martha says with a trembling voice. “It’s very _____.” (eerie)
- Story 4: “Be careful,” Mitch warns Anna as she steps onto the ladder. “This ladder is old and rickety and very _____.” (precarious)
- Story 5: The crowd roared with delight when the magician made an elephant disappear. “My goodness!” exclaimed Miss Markham. “That was quite a _____!” (feat)

Assessment Notes

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
- Do the students have difficulty using or explaining any of the words? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
- Are the students using the independent word-learning strategies they have learned as they read independently?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 206 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice through an activity modeled on "Make a Choice" (see Week 1, Day 2, Step 2). For example, if the students are struggling with the word eerie, describe two scenarios and have partners discuss in which scenario something seems eerie. (You might say "Which setting seems eerie: a green field on a warm June afternoon, or a dark forest on a cold November evening?")

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Before continuing with the week 29 lesson, take this opportunity to assess individual students' understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28 using the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7" answer sheet (IA1) on page 210 of the Assessment Resource Book. For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 207 of the Assessment Resource Book.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate his understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 211 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Week 29

ABOUT WEEK 29

In the week of the Making Meaning program that corresponds with this week's vocabulary lessons, the students read self-selected texts, rather than hearing a read-aloud. For that reason, no new vocabulary words are introduced. We suggest that the students spend this week reviewing words they learned in Weeks 25-28 through an activity called "Four Words and a Story," in which the students write stories that include four of the words.

- "Four Words and a Story' Preselected Word Sets" (BLM3)

OVERVIEW

Vocabulary Focus

- Students review words from Weeks 25–28.
- Students write a story using four of the words reviewed.
- Students share their stories with the class.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

🕒 DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week's family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, identify 16 words (four sets of four words) from Weeks 25–28 that you want the students to review and that can be used together in a cohesive story. Print or make a copy of “‘Four Words and a Story’ Word Sets” (BLM2) and write the words you selected on it. Alternatively you might prefer to use “‘Four Words and a Story’ Preselected Word Sets” (BLM3).
- ✓ Prepare enough copies of the word sets, by copying and cutting out the word-set slips, so that each pair of students will have a set of four words.
- ✓ Set aside a paper bag to use in the activity.

Teacher Note

If time permits, you may want to review all 16 of the words that the students will use this week and discuss as a class what the students know or remember about each word.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and use words learned earlier
- Write a story using four review words
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

ABOUT THIS WEEK'S VOCABULARY LESSONS

This week the students review words from Weeks 25–28 through an activity called "Four Words and a Story," in which the students write a story that includes four of the words. On Day 1, you will introduce the students to the activity, review words and meanings, and support the students as they plan and write their stories. On Days 2–5, the students will share and discuss their stories with the class.

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Introduce the Activity "Four Words and a Story"

Place the word-set slips that you prepared earlier into the paper bag.

Have partners sit together. Explain that today the students will review some of the words they have learned in previous weeks by doing an activity called "Four Words and a Story."

Show the paper bag to the students. Tell them that in it are slips of paper, and that each one lists four vocabulary words. Explain that each pair will draw one slip from the bag and read the words that are written on it. Partners will first talk about what they know about the words; then each student will write a story that uses all four words. Explain that partners will share their stories with each other and with the class later in the week.

2 Choose Words and Review Their Meanings

Have each pair draw one slip from the paper bag. When all the students have finished reading the words on their slips, ask:

Q What do you know about the words on your slip? Turn to your partner.

Give partners a few minutes to discuss what they know about each word. Tell the students that if they cannot remember the meaning of a word, they can ask you or another pair about the meaning. When most pairs have finished talking, ask:

Q What questions do you have about the words on your slip?

Discuss any questions that the students have about their words.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

3 Plan and Write a Story

Remind the students that each of them will write a story that uses all four words on the slip.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What story might you write using the words? [Pause.] Turn to your partner.

Give partners a few minutes to discuss story ideas. Circulate as partners share. If the students are having trouble generating ideas, signal for their attention. Ask a volunteer pair to share their story ideas with the class and discuss how they came up with the ideas. If the students continue to struggle, suggest that they pick one of the words, think about a story they might write using that one word, and then think about how they might use each of the other words in the story. You might use one of the word sets to model the strategy.

Give the students time to write their stories. If the students finish writing early, have them quietly share their stories with their partners. Encourage them to use comments from their partners to revise their stories.

Tell the students that starting tomorrow, you will ask volunteers to share their stories with the class. Explain that students who are not ready to share tomorrow can share their stories later in the week.

EXTENSION

Use Other Words in Stories

Invite the students to select another set of four or more words that they learned earlier in the year and to write another story using these words. You might display or print sets of word cards from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) and review the meanings of the words with the students. Before they begin writing, have the students discuss with their partners why they chose the words that they did and what they know about these words. After the students have completed writing their stories, partners can read their stories to each other or share them with the class and discuss the ways they used the vocabulary words in their stories.

---

Teacher Note

If the students need more time for writing, they might finish their stories during their writing period. They can then share the stories during the week at vocabulary time.

---

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk with their families about the words they use in their stories this week.

In this lesson, the students:

- Share their stories with the class
- Speak clearly
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Act in fair and caring ways

SHARE STORIES*1 Discuss Speaking Clearly and Listening Respectfully

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that this week they are writing and sharing stories that use four words that they learned earlier.

Before asking volunteers to share their stories, have a discussion about how the students will act—both as they share their stories and as they listen. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as the following:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you're sharing your story with the class?
- Q If you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her writing? Why is it important to express interest in other people's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive and considerate audience members. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

2 Share Stories and Discuss Them as a Class

Have volunteers share their stories with the class. After each reading, discuss the story by asking questions such as the following:

- Q What vocabulary words did you hear [Paco] use in the story?
- Q What was interesting about the way [Paco] used the word [dazed]?
- Q What questions or comments do you have for [Paco] about his story?
- Q What did you like about [Paco's] story?

3 Reflect on Being a Respectful Audience

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as the following:

- Q How did we do today as an audience? What might we want to work on as we continue to share stories?
- Q If you shared a story today, how did you feel? What did members of the audience do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

4 Continue the Activity During the Week

On Days 3–5 of this week, repeat the procedures in Steps 2 and 3 to have additional volunteers share their stories with the class.

Week 30

YEAR-END REVIEW

ABOUT WEEK 30

In the week of the Making Meaning program that corresponds with this week's vocabulary lessons, the students read self-selected texts, rather than hearing a read-aloud. For that reason, no new words are introduced this week. We suggest that the students spend the week reviewing some of the words they have learned during the year. The review will provide the students with the additional practice they need to make the words they have learned this year a permanent part of their vocabulary. The week will also prepare the students for Word Check 8, an end-of-year vocabulary assessment that focuses on the words reviewed this week.

The students review a set of words each day this week through an activity that varies from day to day. The table on the next page lists the words reviewed and identifies the weeks in which the words were originally taught.

impressive	jittery	imprudent	optimistic	perilous
plead	rummage	loathe	revere	raises eyebrows
reminisce		permanent		recede severe		pursue		uniform
yearn		serene

Vocabulary Focus

- Students review words learned earlier.
- Students build their speaking and listening skills.

Social Development Focus

- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, write each of the following review words on an index card (you might also use strips of paper): bizarre, boost, focus, impressive, plead, reminisce, severe, and yearn. Put the cards into a paper bag.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 214 of the Assessment Resource Book. Make a copy of the sheet for each day that you choose to use the Class Vocabulary Assessment Note.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this week’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student.

(continues)

① DO AHEAD (continued)

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1); see page 218 of the Assessment Resource Book. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 5, make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1); see page 221 of the Assessment Resource Book. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.
- ✓ (Optional) Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “Week 30 Word Cards” (BLM2). These cards can be used to provide your students with more opportunities to review the words.

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed*bizarre

Bizarre means “very strange or odd.”

boost

Boost means “increase or improve.” Boost also means “push up from below.”

focus

Focus means “adjust the eyes to see something clearly.” Focus also means “concentrate your attention or effort on something.”

impressive

Something impressive has a strong effect on your mind. You notice and remember it.

plead

Plead means “beg.” When you plead, you ask for something in a strong or serious way.

reminisce

Reminisce means “think or talk about events in the past.”

severe

Severe means “causing great damage or pain.”

yearn

Yearn means “wish or long for something very strongly, especially something difficult to get.”

REVIEW THE WORDS*1 Introduce the Activity

Tell the students that this week they will review and practice using words they have learned throughout the year. Remind them that thinking and talking about the words they have learned helps them remember the words.

Explain that today partners will do an activity called “It’s in the Bag.” Display the day 1 review cards (WA1); then show the paper bag. Tell the students that the bag contains index cards, and that one of today’s review words is written on each card. Explain that each pair of students will draw one card from the bag. Partners will first talk about what they remember about the word on the card and then write what they

Materials

- Day 1 review cards (WA1)
- A paper bag containing review words, prepared ahead
- A sheet of paper for each pair of students
- “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

You might choose to review additional words from Weeks 1-6. Write each word that you select on an index card and add the cards to the paper bag.

remember on a sheet of paper. Later partners will share what they wrote about their words with the class.

WA1

Give examples of what the students might write about a word.

You might say:

"If you remember what your word means, you can write that. You can use the word in a sentence that shows what the word means. You might also write about what you remember about acting out the word or talking about it in class. For example, if your word is creak, you might write about what types of things might creak and the way that they would sound when they creaked. If you have used the word outside of the vocabulary lessons or have heard someone use the word, you can write about that as well."

Tell the students that if they do not remember what their word means or anything else about the word, they can talk with you or another pair about the word.

Have each pair of students draw one word card from the paper bag. Ask the students to say the word but not discuss the meaning.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Write and Share What Partners Remember

Give each pair a sheet of paper. Then give the students several minutes to discuss and write about their words.

When most pairs have finished writing, have one or two pairs share what they remember about their words with the class. After a pair has shared, ask questions such as the following:

- Q What did you hear [Isabel and Henry] say they remember about the word [bizarre]?
- Q What questions do you want to ask [Isabel and Henry] about what they wrote about [bizarre]?
- Q What is something you remember and want to share about the word [bizarre]?

Teacher Note

Before asking the students to write about a word in pairs, you might write about a word as a class. Select a word, ask the students what they remember about it, and write a few of their ideas where everyone can see them. Then have pairs work on their own words.

Give the students additional time to discuss and write about their words.

CLASS VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students' responses indicate that they understand the words' meanings?
- Are they able to use the words to explain their thinking?
- Are they using the words they have learned this year in their writing and in conversations outside of vocabulary time?

Record your observations on the "Class Vocabulary Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 214 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, incorporate the word into one or more of the other activities used to review words this week.

Teacher Note

You might use this Class Vocabulary Assessment Note each day this week to evaluate your students' understanding of the words being reviewed.

Find Another Word

Day 2

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Reviewed

edible

Edible means "safe to eat."

ideal

Ideal means "perfect." Something ideal is the best that it can be.

intricate

Intricate means "complicated."

jittery

Jittery means "worried or nervous."

rummage

Rummage means "search for something by moving things around."

Materials

- Day 2 review cards (WA2)
- Day 2 review activity (WA3)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 2 review cards (🗂️ WA2) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Find Another Word”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Find Another Word.” Remind the students that you will show them a story that has one or more words underlined. You will read the story aloud; then partners will decide which of the vocabulary words could replace the underlined part of the story and explain why they think so.

Display the day 2 review activity (🗂️ WA3) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ❶ to reveal the first story. Point to the story and read it aloud, emphasizing the underlined word.

- Story 1: “This vacation has been wonderful!” said Mara. “We’ve had so much fun, the food has been delicious, and the weather has been just perfect.”

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story and the underlined word. Then point to the five word choices and ask:

- 🗨️ Q Which vocabulary word could replace the underlined word? Why? [Click ❶ again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: “I think the word [ideal] could replace [perfect] because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

Teacher Note

Each story on the day 2 review activity (WA3) has a corresponding number: the first story is ❶; the second story is ❷; the third story is ❸; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

WA3

STORY 1: “This vacation has been wonderful!” said Mara. “We’ve had so much fun, the food has been delicious, and the weather has been just ideal.”

❶   ❷   ❸   ❹   ❺

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to discuss the remaining stories:

- Story 2: Max tried to calm down before the soccer game, but he couldn't help feeling nervous. (jittery)
- Story 3: "We need to ask my uncle to take us looking for mushrooms," said Emma. "He's an expert and he knows which ones are safe to eat." (edible)
- Story 4: Jamal knew that making the special dinner for his parents would take all day. He needed to find more than 20 ingredients, and the recipe was very complicated. (intricate)
- Story 5: "I don't know where my wristwatch could have gone," said Yoshi. "It was in my suitcase, but I've searched through it three times, and I can't find it." (rummaged)

Does That Make Sense?

Day 3

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others

Words Reviewed

compromise

Compromise means "settle an argument with each side agreeing to give up something it wanted."

dubious

Dubious means "uncertain, unsure, or doubtful."

gleeful

Gleeful means "happy, delighted, or joyous."

imprudent

Imprudent means "unwise or careless." If you are imprudent, you do not use good judgment or think carefully before you do things.

loathe

Loathe means "hate, or strongly dislike."

permanent

Permanent means "lasting or meant to last a very long time or forever."

pursue

Pursue means "follow or chase someone in order to catch him or her."

serene

Serene means "calm or peaceful."

Materials

- Day 3 review cards (WA4)

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 3 review cards (WA4) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “Does That Make Sense?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “Does That Make Sense?” Remind the students that you will read a scenario that includes one of the review words. Partners will then decide whether or not the word makes sense in the scenario and explain why they think so.

Point to the word compromise on the day 3 review cards (WA4), and explain that the first scenario includes the word compromise.

Then read the following scenario aloud twice:

- “You can’t borrow my bicycle, no matter what,” Brad told his sister. “I’ll compromise all day if I have to, but you can’t have it.”

Ask:

Q Does the word compromise make sense in the scenario? Why do you think that? [Click 1 on WA4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Teacher Note

If the students struggle to answer the questions, signal for their attention. Reread the scenario aloud, and explain that compromise does not make sense. If Brad were willing to compromise, he might end the argument and lend his bicycle to his sister in exchange for something else.

PROMPT 1: “The word [compromise] [does/does not] make sense because . . .”

After partners have talked, have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

Use the same procedure to discuss the following scenarios:

[dubious]

- “I’m absolutely positive that this is the right way to get to the train station,” said Jolie. “I’ve never been more dubious.”

[gleeful]

- Mr. Harrison had to cancel his family’s trip to the beach, even though he knew they would be disappointed and gleeful.

[imprudent]

- Jenna started hiking alone late in the day and forgot to bring a map, a flashlight, or water. When she finally got home that night, she knew she shouldn’t have been so imprudent.

[loathe]

- Charlie absolutely loves blueberry pancakes. He eats them every year on his birthday because he loathes them so much.

[permanent]

- “It’s supposed to be warm and sunny tomorrow, so all of the snow will melt,” said Sarah. “I guess our snowman is only permanent.”

[pursue]

- When Officer Baker saw a car speed through a red light, he turned on his siren and pursued the driver down the street.

[serene]

- The hurricane was even stronger than people expected. The winds were powerful, the rain poured for hours, and the lightning was serene.

Day 4

What's the Missing Word?

Materials

- Day 4 review cards (WA5)
- Day 4 review activity (WA6)

Teacher Note

Each sentence on the day 4 review activity (WA6) has a corresponding number: the first story is ①; the second story is ②; the third story is ③; and so on. To play the game, click the corresponding number four times:

- The first click reveals the story.
- The second click reveals the prompt.
- The third click highlights the correct answer and reveals the story with the answer in place.
- The fourth click clears the screen.

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Act in fair and caring ways

Words Reviewed

formal

Formal clothing, language, or behavior is appropriate for business or for official or special occasions.

ineligible

Ineligible means “not eligible, or not allowed to do or have something.”

initial

Initial means “first.”

optimistic

Optimistic means “expecting the best to happen.” An optimistic person believes that things will turn out well.

revere

Revere means “greatly respect and admire.”

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 4 review cards (WA5) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game “What’s the Missing Word?”

Tell the students that partners will play the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Remind the students that you will read a story that has a word missing. Partners must decide which of the vocabulary words is the missing word and explain why they think so.

Display the day 4 review activity (WA6) and begin playing the game:

1. Click ① to reveal the first story. Point to the sentence and read it aloud.

- Story 1: Jacob hoped to enter his iguana into a “best pet in the world” contest, but only dogs and cats were allowed in the contest. Fish, reptiles, birds, and other kinds of animals were _____.

2. Give the students a few moments to think about the story. Then point to the word choices and ask:

Q What's the missing word? Why do you think so? [Click ❶ again to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT: "I think [ineligible] is the missing word because . . ."

Have a few volunteers use the prompt to share their thinking with the class.

3. Conclude the discussion by clicking ❶ a third time to highlight the correct vocabulary word and reveal the story with the correct word in place.

4. Click ❶ to clear the screen.

Use the same procedure to continue playing the game with the remaining stories.

- Story 2: Before the artist painted a picture, she always took the _____ step of making a simple pencil drawing. (initial)
- Story 3: Zach always expected the best to happen. Even when things didn't go his way, he stayed upbeat and _____. (optimistic)
- Story 4: "I've always looked up to my Aunt Martha," said Lizzy. "She's very wise and brave, and she's someone I truly _____." (revere)
- Story 5: Kevin usually wore jeans and a T-shirt, but at the wedding he wore a tuxedo and dress shoes. His friends barely recognized him in such _____ clothes. (formal)

Teacher Note

If you are not using an interactive whiteboard, you might write the review words and the stories where everyone can see them.

Day 5

Make a Choice

Materials

- Day 5 review cards (WA7)
- Copy of this week's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- Class set of the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8" answer sheet (IA1)
- Class set of the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1)
- "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1)
- (Optional) Class set of the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1)

ELL Note

Rather than having the students choose between two scenarios, you might have them discuss each one individually by first asking, "Is a family enjoying a picnic in an open field a dense group of people? Why?" and then asking, "Is a crowd getting on a subway train after a baseball game a dense group of people? Why?"

In this activity, the students:

- Review and practice using words learned earlier
- Build their speaking and listening skills
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

Words Reviewed

dense

Dense means "thick or crowded."

equitable

Equitable means "fair and equal for everyone."

misfortune

Misfortune means "bad luck or an unlucky event."

perilous

Perilous means "risky or dangerous."

raises eyebrows

"Raises eyebrows" means "surprises or shocks."

recede

Recede means "move back or away or fade gradually."

uniform

Uniform means "consistent, or always the same." Uniform also means "all alike, or not different from one another."

REVIEW THE WORDS

1 Briefly Review the Words

Display the day 5 review cards ( WA7) and review the pronunciation and meaning of each word.

PRACTICE USING THE WORDS

2 Play the Game "Make a Choice"

Tell the students that partners will play the game "Make a Choice." Point to the word dense on the review cards (WA7) and explain that partners will play the first round of the game with the word dense. Then ask:

Q Which of these groups of people is more dense: a family enjoying a picnic in an open field or a crowd getting on a subway train after a baseball game? Why? [Click 1 on WA7 to reveal the first prompt.] Turn to your partner.

Use the same procedure to continue playing the game using the following questions:

[equitable]

Q Which of these is equitable: three brothers at the movies sharing their popcorn evenly or the oldest brother eating almost all of the popcorn himself? Why? [Click 2 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 2: “I think [the three brothers sharing the popcorn evenly] is equitable because . . .”

[misfortune]

Q Which of these is a misfortune: winning the grand prize in a raffle or losing the raffle ticket that shows you had won? Why? [Click 3 to reveal the next prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 3: “I think [losing the raffle ticket that shows you had won] is a misfortune because . . .”

[perilous]

Q Which of these behaviors is perilous: swinging back and forth on the trapeze at the circus or sitting in the audience at the circus? Why? [Click 4 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 4: “I think [swinging back and forth on the trapeze] is perilous because . . .”

Teacher Note

Send home with each student a copy of this week's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to talk about this week's words with their families.

[raises eyebrows]

 Q Which of these actions would likely raise eyebrows: a mailman delivering the mail or a kangaroo predicting the weather? Why? [Click 5 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 5: "I think a [kangaroo predicting the weather] would likely raise eyebrows because . . ."

 Q Which of these sounds would recede: the whistle of a distant train as it speeds away or the whistle of a teakettle as the water inside boils? Why? [Click 6 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 6: "I think the whistle of a [distant train as it speeds away] would recede because . . ."

[uniform]

 Q Which of these groups of animals is uniform: the eight brown horses in a stable or the four cows, three pigs, and two sheep in a barn? Why? [Click 7 to reveal the prompt.] Turn to your partner.

PROMPT 7: "I think the group of [eight brown horses in a stable] is uniform because . . ."

Assessment Notes

INDIVIDUAL VOCABULARY ASSESSMENT NOTE

The final Individual Vocabulary Assessment of the year focuses on a representative group of words selected from Weeks 1-28 of the vocabulary lessons. (These words are reviewed through a series of activities in Week 30.) To assess individual students' understanding of the words, use the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8" answer sheet (IA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment" on page 215 of the Assessment Resource Book. We recommend that you pair this assessment with the Student Self-assessment described below.

STUDENT SELF-ASSESSMENT NOTE

In addition to or in place of the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, you might have each student evaluate her understanding of a group of words you select from Weeks 1-28 using the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1). For instructions on administering this assessment, see "Completing the Student Self-assessment" on page 219 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Introduction

English language arts/literacy and mathematics standards outline what students are expected to know and be able to do at the end of each grade. With the adoption of these standards come end-of-year summative assessments aligned with the standards.

The goal of the Reading Assessment Preparation Guide is to prepare students for the reading comprehension portion of standards-based assessments. This guide introduces the students to the types of passages and test items they will encounter in these end-of-year assessments. The instruction in the guide supports the students in two important ways. First, it guides the students in using the self-monitoring procedures and reading comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they have learned during the year to make sense of a passage. Second, it provides the students with a process they can use to read, understand, and respond to various types of test items. With guidance from you, the students work together to read and understand passages and respond to test items, helping them build the confidence they need to perform well on the assessment.

The unit in this guide uses the same pedagogy and four-day lesson structure as other units in the Making Meaning® program. Support materials—including student handouts, interactive whiteboard activities, assessment record sheets, and supplemental assessment passages and questions—can be accessed on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). For more information about the CCC Learning Hub, see “Using the Technology Features” in the Introduction of the Teacher’s Manual.

How the Unit Is Organized

The Reading Assessment Preparation Guide includes four days of instruction. With guidance and support, the students read two passages during the instructional week and respond to test items that correspond to the passages. The reading levels of the passages are within the grade 4 text-complexity band. The items represent the variety of formats the students will encounter on a standards-based assessment, including both selected-response items (multiple-choice) and constructed-response items (written responses of varying length). The items align with a range of reading, writing, and language standards. Extension activities on Days 2 and 3 provide additional test items for further practice. If the students require more instruction or practice, supplemental passages and items can be found on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). All of the instructional and supplemental passages are provided in the “Passages, Question Sets, and Answer Keys” section of this guide, beginning on page 31. Included with each passage are the test items associated with the passage, an answer key, and the skills each item addresses. For information about using the passages and test items at various times during the year, see “Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year” on page viii.

During the lessons, the students work as a class, in pairs, and individually to read and comprehend passages and analyze and answer questions about the passages. Through this process, the students develop a class set of “tips” for answering questions that they can apply to assessment items of all types.

DAY 1: READ-ALoud/STRATEGY LESSON

The students are introduced to the end-of-year reading assessment. They discuss their growth as readers during the year and review the self-monitoring procedures and comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they have learned and practiced to make sense of texts. You read aloud the first part of the passage “Marine Iguanas,” self-monitoring and thinking aloud about the strategies you are using to make sense of and remember the text. In pairs and as a class, the students discuss what they noticed you doing during your reading of the passage. The students then read the rest of the passage and discuss the strategies they use to make sense of the text.

DAY 2: STRATEGY LESSON

The students read “Marine Iguanas” independently and discuss the strategies they use to make sense of the text. As a class, they then analyze and respond to three test items in varying formats, developing a systematic process for responding to assessment items that you capture in a chart titled “Tips for Answering Questions”:

- Read the directions carefully so that you know how to mark your answers.
- Read the question carefully—more than once if necessary.
- Ask yourself: What information is the question asking for? What are the important words?
- Skim the passage to find the important information.
- Reread the part that helps you answer the question.

DAY 3: GUIDED STRATEGY PRACTICE

Independently, the students read the second passage of the week, “Observations of Marine Iguanas.” They monitor their comprehension and discuss the reading comprehension and “fix-up” strategies they use to make sense of the text. They then work with partners to analyze and respond to four test items, using the tips for answering questions they developed on Day 2. As on Day 2, the test items represent a variety of formats and address a range of reading and language skills.

DAY 4: GUIDED STRATEGY PRACTICE

As a class and with modeling support from you, the students respond to a final test item that requires them to write a paragraph, using information from both passages. The students then reflect on what they have learned during the week.

Planning and Teaching the Lessons

We recommend that you teach this unit a week or two before your end-of-year assessment is administered. This will ensure that the contents of the unit are fresh in the students’ minds while still providing you with the additional time you may need to reteach a lesson or provide additional practice. (For a suggestion for how to include the unit in your instruction for the year, see “Sample Calendar for Grade 4” in the Introduction of the Teacher’s Manual.)

To prepare to teach the lessons, begin by reading the unit’s introductory pages. The Resources list specifies the texts, extension activities, and assessments for the unit, while the Online Resources list indicates all of the materials that are available digitally on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). The Overview table provides a general outline of the unit.

Next, read the comprehension and social development focuses in the Week Overview. The “Do Ahead” section alerts you to special requirements for the week and any preparations you should make ahead of time. Preview the lessons and note how the instruction supports the unit’s comprehension and social development focuses from lesson to lesson.

Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year

In addition to the two sets of passages and the associated test items used for instruction during the week, you will find three sets of supplemental practice passages and test items on the CCC Learning Hub. All of the available sets are listed in the table below, along with their passage type and BLM (blackline master) number. The shaded rows are supplemental sets.

Grade 4 Passages and Test Items Sets

Passage and Associated Test Items	Passage Type	BLM #
"Marine Iguanas" "Questions: 'Marine Iguanas' "	Informational	1 2
"Observations of Marine Iguanas" "Questions: 'Observations of Marine Iguanas' "	Literary	3 4
"Where Is Greece?" "Questions: 'Where Is Greece?' "	Informational	5 6
"Athena and Poseidon's Contest" "Questions: 'Athena and Poseidon's Contest' "	Literary	7 8
"Our Family Trip to Greece" "Questions: 'Our Family Trip to Greece' "	Literary	9 10

Both the instructional and supplemental passages and test items can be used throughout the year in a variety of ways.

FALL

You might use the passages "Marine Iguanas" and/or "Observations of Marine Iguanas" and associated test items at the start of the school year as an informal baseline assessment of the students' reading comprehension and their comfort and facility with test-like passages and items. You can then use what you observe to help you plan instruction. You might use the supplemental passages periodically during the year for further evaluation or practice.

WINTER

If your school or district decides to administer an interim standards-based assessment, you might teach the unit in this guide as preparation for that assessment. (The modeling you do on Day 1 will need to reflect the strategies that have been taught.) You can then use the supplemental passages and test items to teach the lessons in this guide prior to the end-of-year assessment.

SPRING

After teaching the unit in this guide as preparation for the end-of-year assessment, you might assign one or more of the supplemental passages and their associated test items as seatwork or homework for the students, either as further practice or to use as an informal individual assessment of each student's progress on standards type assessment items.

Answering Questions in Response to Text

During this one-week unit, the students prepare for the reading comprehension portion of a standards-based end-of-year summative assessment. The students reflect on their growth as readers during the year and apply what they have learned about monitoring their comprehension and using comprehension and “fix-up” strategies to make sense of two practice passages. They work together as a class and in pairs to analyze and respond to various types of questions associated with the passages, including selected-response items (multiple-choice) and constructed-response items (written responses of varying length). Out of that process, they develop a set of “tips” for successfully answering assessment questions. Socially, the students focus on taking responsibility for their learning, sharing their thinking, and using prompts to build on one another’s thinking.

“Marine Iguanas” (BLM1)

This informational passage discusses the special abilities and features that help marine iguanas survive on the Galápagos Islands.

“Observations of Marine Iguanas” (BLM3)

These journal excerpts document a professor’s observations of marine iguanas.

Comprehension Focus

- Students reflect on their growth as readers.
- Students review the comprehension strategies they have learned.
- Students review self-monitoring and “fix-up” strategies.
- Students use strategies to make sense of assessment practice passages.
- Students learn a procedure for answering various types of assessment questions.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students use prompts to build on one another’s thinking.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during the unit.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make sure the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” and “Thinking About My Reading” charts are posted where everyone can see them. Display the charts throughout the week.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the student handouts for the unit (see “Reproducibles” on page 2). Make a class set of copies of each required handout listed (BLM1–BLM4) and any supplemental handouts you plan to use.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, prepare to model using strategies to make sense of the passage “Marine Iguanas” (see Step 4). For more information and examples of modeling, review IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, prepare a class set of folders for the students to use to organize their materials during the week.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, prepare a sheet of chart paper with the title “Tips for Answering Questions” (see Step 6).
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 88.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 89.

Day 1

Read-aloud/Strategy Lesson

Materials

- “Marine Iguanas” chart (WA1)
- Copy of “Marine Iguanas” (BLM1) for each student
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- A folder for each student

Teacher Note

We recommend that you teach this unit a week or two before your end-of-year reading assessment.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Reflect on how they have grown as readers
- Review the strategies they have learned to make sense of text
- Hear, read, and discuss a passage
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Work in a responsible way

ABOUT PREPARING FOR A STANDARDS-BASED END-OF-YEAR ASSESSMENT

This week, with guidance and support from you, the students prepare for the reading comprehension portion of a standards-based end-of-year assessment. As a class and in pairs, the students hear, read, and discuss passages and answer reading comprehension questions about the passages. After preparing your students for the assessment in a classroom environment, we recommend that you provide them with further practice in a computerized testing environment.

1 Pair Students and Introduce the End-of-year Assessment

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other’s names. Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Tell the students that at the end of the school year, all the students in their grade will complete a reading and writing assessment. Explain that the assessment is an opportunity for the students to show how they are growing as readers and writers and that the assessment provides information that is important for them, as well as for their families, teachers, and principal. Explain that during part of the assessment, the students will read passages and answer questions about the passages. Tell the students that during the next few days, they will work together to prepare for the reading portion of the assessment by hearing, reading, and discussing some practice passages and questions.

2 Review What Good Readers Do to Make Sense of Text

Point out that during the year, the students have learned what good readers do to make sense of text, and they have worked hard to become stronger readers themselves. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q In what ways have you grown as a reader this year? In what ways are you a stronger reader now than you were at the beginning of the year? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and review that good readers use various strategies to make sense of what they are reading. Ask:

Q What have you learned about the strategies good readers use?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” chart and review that another thing that good readers do is stop and ask themselves questions as they read to make sure they understand what they are reading. Remind the students that they learned “fix-up” strategies they can use when they do not understand what they have read. Ask:

Q What do good readers do when they realize they do not understand something they have read?

If necessary, review that good readers reread something they have not understood slowly and carefully. If that does not fix the problem, they read ahead and look for information that clears up their confusion. Explain that this week the students will use these strategies to help them make sense of the practice passages they read.

3 Introduce “Marine Iguanas”

Tell the students that today they will hear a nonfiction passage about iguanas called “Marine Iguanas.” Display the “Marine Iguanas” chart (WA1), and distribute a copy of the passage (BLM1) to each student. Point out that, unlike most passages, this passage shows the number of each paragraph. Explain that the numbers are provided to make it easier for you to point out and discuss particular paragraphs.

Point to the title of the passage and the photo of the marine iguana and ask:

Q What do you wonder about marine iguanas?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Teacher Note

The grade 4 reading comprehension strategies are:

- using text features
- questioning
- recognizing story elements
- making inferences
- visualizing
- analyzing how texts are organized
- determining important ideas and supporting details
- summarizing.

Teacher Note

The “Thinking About My Reading” prompts are:

- What is happening in my book?
- Do I understand what I am reading?
- Do I know what most of the words mean?
- Is this book interesting and fun to read?

Teacher Note

The “fix-up” strategies are:

- Go back and reread slowly and carefully. Look for clues in the text.
- Read ahead to look for more clues or information.
- Use a reading comprehension strategy.
- Ask for help.

4 Read Aloud and Model Self-monitoring and Using Strategies

Explain that you will read the first five paragraphs of the passage aloud and that you would like the students to follow along on their copies. Tell them that you will stop after each paragraph and think aloud about what you just read. Ask the students to listen carefully and notice what you are doing to check your understanding and fix comprehension problems as you read.

Read the first five paragraphs aloud slowly and clearly, stopping as described below to model monitoring your comprehension and using strategies to make sense of the passage.

Stop after:

Paragraph 1: “They are different from land-dwelling iguanas because of their ability to swim and get their food from the sea.”

You might say:

“I’ll ask myself: ‘Did I understand what I just read?’ The opening paragraph of a passage is important because it often tells what the passage is mainly about. I think this passage is going to be about how marine iguanas are different from land-dwelling iguanas and how they are able to survive on the Galápagos Islands, but I’ll reread the paragraph just to make sure. [Reread the paragraph aloud.] I was right. The last sentence says, ‘They are different from land-dwelling iguanas because of their ability to swim and get their food from the sea.’”

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 2: “They have special abilities and features that help them survive on the rugged islands they call home.”

You might say:

“Again, I’ll ask myself: ‘Did I understand what I just read?’ Yes, I understood this paragraph. As I read, I did something I know good readers do—I looked carefully at the photograph. [Point to the photograph.] I know that photographs and other text features help readers understand and remember what they read. The photograph will help me to remember how the text describes marine iguanas—they have ‘flat noses, wide-set eyes, and spiky backs.’”

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 3: “Over time, they changed in ways that helped them make the most of their new environment.”

You might say:

"I understood this paragraph. I know that to think more deeply about what they are reading, good readers wonder and ask questions as they read. The last sentence says, 'Over time, they changed in ways that helped them make the most of their new environment.' What I'm wondering is 'How did marine iguanas change over time?' Maybe I'll learn more about this when I read on."

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 4: "They can hold their breath underwater for up to 30 minutes at a time."

You might say:

"I understood what I read in this paragraph. To help me make sense of the information and remember it, I used another strategy good readers use—visualizing. I pictured in my mind the iguanas' long claws clinging to rocks and their crocodile-like tails. I also made an inference as I read. I inferred that marine iguanas are vegetarians from these clues: 'They use their flat noses and sharp teeth to scrape algae off rocks' and 'They can dive up to 49 feet to feed on seaweed.' Also, I found one answer to the question I had earlier about how marine iguanas changed over time. I learned that they became great swimmers. They can hold their breath for up to 30 minutes!"

Reread the last sentence before the stop and continue reading.

Stop after:

Paragraph 5: "So the darkness of the rocks and the darkness of their skin help the iguanas stay warm."

You might say:

"Hmmm. There is a lot of information in this paragraph, and I'm not sure that I understood all of it, especially the part about dark surfaces absorbing the sun's warmth. I'll reread to see if that helps me clear up my confusion. [Reread the last four sentences, beginning with 'Most marine iguanas are dark gray or black.'] Oh, I see. Dark colors absorb the warmth of the sun, so the iguanas lie on the warm dark rocks after swimming in the cold water. Their dark skin also absorbs the sun's warmth and helps them stay warm."

5 Discuss What the Students Noticed

Facilitate a discussion of what the students noticed you doing to make sense of the passage by asking questions like those that follow. Remind the students to use the discussion prompts they have learned to build on one another's thinking.

Q What did you notice me doing to make sense of the paragraphs I read?

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because..."
- "I disagree with _____ because..."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think..."

Q What comprehension strategies did I use? How did they help me understand or remember what I read?

Q What did I do when I did not understand something I read?

Students might say:

"I noticed that you stopped at the end of each paragraph to check if you understood what you read. That's something good readers do."

"In addition to what [Seema] said, I noticed that you reread part of a paragraph when you were confused about something."

"I agree with [Seema and Juan]. I also noticed that you used comprehension strategies. You visualized and wondered about what you were reading. You also made an inference, and you looked carefully at the photograph."

If necessary, explain that you read each paragraph slowly and carefully. After reading a paragraph, you asked yourself if you understood what you read, and then you reread to clear up any confusion. You also used reading comprehension strategies such as questioning, visualizing, making inferences, and using text features to help you understand and remember what you read.

6 Have the Students Read the Rest of the Passage

Explain that you would like the students to read the last three paragraphs of the passage quietly to themselves. Direct their attention to the "Thinking About My Reading" and the "Reading Comprehension Strategies" charts, and remind them to stop at the end of each paragraph to monitor their comprehension and use comprehension strategies to help them make sense of what they read. Also remind them to use the "fix-up" strategies of rereading and reading ahead if they do not understand something in the passage. Ask the students to look up when they are done reading.

When most students have finished, ask:

Q What did you learn about marine iguanas in the last three paragraphs of the passage?

Q What strategies did you use to make sense of what you read?

Q If you were confused, what did you do to clear up your confusion?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

Tell the students that tomorrow they will have an opportunity to read the passage again and work with their partners to answer questions about it. Distribute a folder to each student and explain that this is where the students will keep passages and other materials for the week. Have the students put their copies of "Marine Iguanas" inside their folders and keep the folders in their desks.

Teacher Note

Save the "Marine Iguanas" chart (WAI) to use during the week.

7 Reflect on Working Responsibly

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to work responsibly today?

Strategy Lesson

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread and discuss a passage
- Discuss various question formats
- Answer questions about the passage as a class
- Refer to the passage to support their thinking
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own

1 Review and Reread “Marine Iguanas”

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that during the end-of-year assessment, they will read passages and answer questions about the passages. Review that yesterday the students began to prepare for the assessment by reviewing the strategies good readers use to make sense of text. They also listened as you read and thought about the first part of a passage and used the strategies themselves to make sense of the rest of the passage. Explain that today the students will reread the passage and work together to answer questions about it.

Display the “Marine Iguanas” chart (📄 WA1), and remind the students that this is the passage they heard and read yesterday. Ask:

 Q What do you remember about the passage? Turn to your partner.

Without discussing as a class, tell the students that you would like them to quietly reread their copies of the passage (BLM1) to help them prepare to answer questions about it. Direct their attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” and “Reading Comprehension Strategies” charts, and remind them to monitor their comprehension and use the comprehension strategies to help them make sense of what they read. Also remind them to use the “fix-up” strategies of rereading and reading ahead if they do not understand something in the passage. Ask the students to look up when they are done reading.

Materials

- “Marine Iguanas” chart (WA1) from Day 1
- “Questions 1–3: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA2)
- Copy of “Questions: ‘Marine Iguanas’” (BLM2) for each student
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Tips for Answering Questions” chart, prepared ahead, and a marker

When most students have finished, ask:

Q What part of the passage, if any, did you have trouble understanding?

Q What did you do to help you make sense of that part?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

2 Discuss Question 1

Distribute a copy of “Questions: ‘Marine Iguanas’” (BLM2) to each student. Tell the students that these are questions about the passage that they will answer. Display question 1 on the “Questions 1–3: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA2).

Questions 1-3: “Marine Iguanas”

Question 1

Read the question. Circle the letter of the correct answer.

What main point does the author make in “Marine Iguanas”?

- A. Marine iguanas are protected by special laws.
- B. Marine iguanas may once have been land-dwelling creatures.
- C. Marine iguanas live in the Galápagos Islands off the coast of Ecuador.
- D. Marine iguanas have developed special abilities that help them survive in their environment.

WA2

Teacher Note

To avoid overwhelming the students with testing jargon, we refer to each assessment “item type” (multiple-choice, fill-in-the-blank, short-answer, essay, and other formats) as a “question” even though in some cases the item type is not literally a question.

You might explain that this type of question is called a “multiple-choice question” because it requires you to choose a single answer from among multiple, or several, possible answers.

Explain that question 1 is an example of one type of question the students may see on the end-of-year assessment. Point to the directions that precede the question (“Read the question. Circle the letter of the correct answer.”) and explain that an assessment question usually includes directions that tell you how to mark or record your answer. Tell the students that it is important to read directions like this carefully so that they mark their answers properly. Have the students read the directions quietly to themselves. Then ask:

Q According to the directions, how will you mark your answer to question 1?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out that the students will circle the letter of the correct answer.

Point to the question on the chart (“What main point does the author make in ‘Marine Iguanas’?”), and explain that it is important to read the question slowly and carefully and think about what it is asking. Explain that if the students are not sure that they understand a question, they should read it again.

Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the question aloud twice. Then read and reread the question. Ask:

- Q What information is the question asking for?
- Q What are the important words in the question? What words are important for finding the answer?

Students might say:

"The question is asking what the author's main point is."

"I agree with [Pete]. I think main point are the important words in the question."

"In addition to what [Sammi and Pete] said, I think main point probably means what the passage is mainly about. I think that's what the question is asking for."

As the students share their ideas, circle the important words they identify on the chart. If necessary, explain that main point are the important words in the question. Explain that the main point of a passage is the most important idea or information in the passage. It is the one idea or piece of information that the author considers most important for us to understand and remember. Explain that to answer the question, the students need to identify the most important thing the author of the passage is telling us about marine iguanas.

3 Answer Question 1

Tell the students that as you read the answer choices aloud, you want them to decide which choice tells the main point the author is making about marine iguanas in the passage. Then read the answer choices aloud slowly and clearly. Ask:

- Q Which answer choice states the main point of the passage? Why do you think that?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that answer choice D tells the main point of the passage. Explain that the important idea the author wants us to remember about marine iguanas is that they have developed special abilities over time that enable them to survive on the islands where they live. Point out that the other answer choices are details about marine iguanas; they are not what the passage is mainly about.

Circle letter D for question 1 on the "Questions 1–3: 'Marine Iguanas'" chart and have the students circle the letter D on their copies of the questions.

Display the "Marine Iguanas" chart, and explain that authors often state the main point of a passage in the first or second paragraph. Ask the students to follow along as you read the first two paragraphs of the passage and listen for the sentence that states the main point. Then read the paragraphs aloud. Ask:

Q Which sentence states the main point of the passage?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, point out that the last sentence of the second paragraph states the main point.

Tell the students that if they are asked a question on the end-of-year assessment about the main point or main idea of a passage, a strategy they can use to find the main point is to read the first two paragraphs of the passage and look for a sentence that tells what the passage is mainly about.

4 Discuss Question 2

Display question 2 on the “Questions 1–3: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart, and have the students turn to question 2 on their copies of the questions. Explain that question 2 is an example of another type of question the students may see on an end-of-year assessment.

WA2

Question 2

What are three examples of special abilities or features that help marine iguanas survive on the Galápagos Islands? Write the examples on the lines below.

Example 1:

---

---

---

---

Example 2:

---

---

---

---

Example 3:

---

---

---

---

Remind the students that it is important to read a question and any directions that come with it slowly and carefully. Ask the students to listen as you read question 2 and the directions for recording the answer.

Then read the question and directions aloud twice. Point to the question (“What are three examples of special abilities or features that help marine iguanas survive on the Galápagos Islands?”) and ask:

- Q What information is the question asking for?
- Q What are the important words in the question? Which words are important for finding the answer?

Students might say:

“The question is asking us to find special abilities or features that help marine iguanas survive.”

“In addition to what [Yadir] said, the question is asking for three examples.”

“I agree with [Julia and Yadir]. I think three examples, special abilities or features, and survive are important words.”

As volunteers share their thinking about important words, circle the words in the question on the chart. If necessary, explain that three examples, special abilities or features, and survive are important words.

Point to the directions (“Write the examples on the lines below.”) and ask:

- Q According to the directions, how will you record your answer to question 2?

Have one or two volunteers share their thinking.

Tell the students that to answer question 2, they will need to skim the passage, or read quickly through it, and find examples of the special abilities or features that help marine iguanas survive on the Galápagos Islands. Explain that as they skim, they might look for the important words they identified in the question—special abilities or features and survive—to help them find paragraphs with examples.

Display the “Marine Iguanas” chart, and have the students look at their copies. Ask:

- Q Which paragraphs have examples of marine iguanas’ special abilities and features? Skim the passage and circle the numbers of the paragraphs with examples.

When most students have finished, have a few volunteers share their thinking. If necessary, explain that paragraphs 4, 5, 6, and 7 have examples of the special abilities and features of marine iguanas.

Ask the students to read paragraphs 4, 5, 6, and 7, and underline at least three examples of marine iguanas’ special abilities or features. (You might point out that they may find more than three examples.) When most students have finished, display the “Questions 1–3: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart. Then ask:

- Q What is one example of a special ability or feature that helps marine iguanas survive on the Galápagos Islands?
- Q Do others agree that [long, sharp claws] is an example?

Teacher Note

If the students have little experience with skimming or seem unsure about what to do, call for the students’ attention and model skimming the passage to find the paragraphs about marine iguanas’ special abilities and features.

Teacher Note

These are examples of marine iguanas' special abilities or features:

- Paragraph 4: long, sharp claws; flat noses; sharp teeth; long, crocodile-like tails; dive up to 49 feet; hold their breath underwater for up to 30 minutes
- Paragraph 5: dark gray or black skin
- Paragraph 6: sneeze salt
- Paragraph 7: change their size when their food supply changes

As volunteers share their thinking and the students reach agreement about three examples, record the examples on the chart. Have the students record the examples on their copies of question 2.

5 Discuss Question 3

Display question 3 on the “Questions 1–3: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart, and have the students turn to question 3 on their copies of the questions. Explain that this is another type of question that the students might see on an end-of-year assessment.

WA2

Question 3

Read the excerpt from the passage below. Underline the sentence that tells how scientists think marine iguanas got to the Galápagos Islands. Then underline the name of the continent that the iguanas probably came from.

Marine iguanas are closely related to the land-dwelling iguanas that live in South America. In fact, many scientists believe marine iguanas were once land iguanas. These scientists think that storms blew land iguanas to the Galápagos on logs and seaweed. The land iguanas then adapted to life on the islands. Over time, they changed in ways that helped them make the most of their new environment.

Ask the students to listen carefully as you read the directions. Then read the directions aloud. Ask:

- Q What are these directions asking you to do?
- Q What are the important words in the directions? What information are you being asked to find?

Students might say:

“The directions are telling us to read the excerpt and underline some information.”

“In addition to what [Toby] said, the information we have to underline is how scientists think marine iguanas got to the Galápagos Islands and the name of the continent that marine iguanas probably came from.”

“I agree with [Keith]. The important words are how scientists think marine iguanas got to the Galápagos Islands and the continent that the iguanas probably came from.”

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Circle the important words the students identify on the chart. If necessary, explain that the students are to read the excerpt from the passage, underline the sentence that tells how scientists think marine iguanas got to the Galápagos Islands, and underline the name of the continent that the iguanas probably came from.

Ask the students to read the excerpt quietly to themselves and then underline the information the directions call for. When most students have finished, ask:

Q What did you underline?

Q Do others agree that ["These scientists think that storms blew land iguanas to the Galápagos on logs and seaweed" and "South America"] are the correct responses?

As volunteers share their thinking and the students reach agreement, underline their responses on the chart. Have the students underline the responses on their copies of the question.

6 Introduce the "Tips for Answering Questions" Chart

Remind the students that today they looked at three examples of assessment questions. Ask and discuss:

Q What did we learn about answering assessment questions?

Students might say:

"We learned that there are different types of questions."

"I agree with [Lindsey]. We also found out that we need to read the directions carefully so that we'll know how to answer each question. Sometimes you circle a letter. Sometimes you write an answer or underline sentences in the passage."

"In addition to what [Lindsey and Pedro] said, I learned that you have to read a question a couple of times and make sure you understand it. There are important words in the question that you need to pay attention to."

"Also, skimming and rereading the important part of the passage is really important—even if you think you know the answer."

As volunteers share their thinking, record their ideas on the "Tips for Answering Questions" chart. Be ready to paraphrase their responses so that your chart is similar to the example in the diagram on the next page.

Teacher Note

The correct responses are "These scientists think that storms blew land iguanas to the Galápagos on logs and seaweed" and "South America."

Tips for Answering Questions

Read the directions carefully so that you know how to mark your answers.

Read the question carefully—more than once if necessary.

Ask yourself: What information is the question asking for? What are the important words?

Skim the passage to find the important information.

Reread the part that helps you answer the question.

Teacher Note

If you would like to discuss additional “Marine Iguanas” practice questions with the students, see the extension “Discuss Practice Questions 4 and 5” below.

Teacher Note

The correct answer to question 4 is “It presents a variety of facts about one topic.” Correct answers to question 5 are “changed to fit in” (part A) and “Over time, they changed in ways that helped them make the most of their new environment” (part B).

Tell the students that the questions they discussed today are just a few examples of the kinds of questions they might be asked on the end-of-year assessment. Explain that tomorrow they will have a chance to hear and read another passage and work with their partners to answer questions about it. Have the students put their materials inside their folders. Tell the students that you will post the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart where everyone can see it and that they can use the tips throughout the week to help them answer questions.

EXTENSION

Discuss Practice Questions 4 and 5

Follow the procedures you used on Day 2 (see Steps 2–5) to have the students discuss and answer questions 4 and 5 on their copies of “Questions: ‘Marine Iguanas’” (BLM2). Remind the students to use the information on the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart to help them find the correct answers. Then use the “Questions 4–5: ‘Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA3) to discuss the students’ responses as a class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Read and discuss a passage
- Self-monitor and use comprehension and “fix-up” strategies to make sense of the passage
- Answer questions about the passage in pairs
- Refer to the passage to support their thinking
- Work in a responsible way

1 Review and Discuss Working with Partners

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that they are preparing for an end-of-year assessment, and review that yesterday they read a passage about marine iguanas and worked as a class to answer questions about the passage. Explain that today the students will read another passage about marine iguanas and work with their partners to answer questions about it.

Briefly discuss:

Q What do you want to keep in mind as you work with your partner today?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

2 Introduce the Passage and Have the Students Read Independently

Display the “Observations of Marine Iguanas” chart (WA4), and distribute a copy of the passage (BLM3) to each student. Read the title aloud. Explain that this passage contains excerpts from a journal by Professor Flora DeWitt. Explain that Professor DeWitt visited the Galápagos Islands, observed (watched) the marine iguanas on the island, and wrote down what she saw in her journal.

Tell the students that you would like them to read the passage quietly to themselves. Direct their attention to the “Thinking About My Reading” chart. Tell them that, as they read, you want them to stop occasionally and ask themselves if they understand what they are reading. If they do not understand something they have read, they are to put a check mark next to that part of the passage and use a “fix-up” strategy to try to fix the problem. Review that “fix-up” strategies include rereading slowly and carefully and reading ahead to find additional information. Direct the students’ attention to the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and remind them that they can also use the comprehension strategies they have learned to help them make sense of the passage.

Materials

- “Observations of Marine Iguanas” chart (WA4)
- Copy of “Observations of Marine Iguanas” (BLM3) for each student
- “Questions 1–4: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA5)
- Copy of “Questions: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” (BLM4) for each student
- “Thinking About My Reading” chart
- “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

The factual information about marine iguanas in the passage is accurate, but the journal itself is fiction. Professor DeWitt is a fictional character.

Tell the students that you will check in with them later to see how they did with reading and understanding the passage. Then have the students quietly read the passage.

Circulate as the students are reading. Confer briefly with the students about what they are doing to monitor their comprehension and fix comprehension problems.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Ask yourself:

- Are the students monitoring their comprehension?
- Are they using “fix-up” strategies to address comprehension problems?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 88. Use the following suggestions to support the students:

- If all or most students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, model reading a part of the passage, thinking aloud about what you are doing to monitor your comprehension and address comprehension problems (see Day 1, Step 4). You might also consider teaching or reviewing IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).

3 Discuss Self-monitoring and “Fix-up” Strategies

When the students have finished reading, briefly discuss the passage. Ask:

Q What did Professor DeWitt notice about marine iguanas?

Then facilitate a discussion about how they did with monitoring their comprehension and fixing problems. Ask:

Q What part of the passage, if any, did you have trouble understanding?

Q What did you do to help you make sense of that part?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. If the students had difficulty comprehending any part of the passage, read that part aloud and discuss it with the students.

4 Discuss Question 1 in Pairs

Review that the students will work with their partners to answer questions about the passage. Distribute a copy of “Questions: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” (BLM4) to each student. Display question 1 on the “Questions 1–4: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA5).

WA5

Questions 1-4: “Observations of Marine Iguanas”

Question 1

Read the questions in part A and part B. Circle the letter of the correct answer for each question.

Part A

Which sentence best states the author’s opinion of marine iguanas?

- A. They are dangerous, beautiful creatures.
- B. They are scary-looking, but they are amazing.
- C. They are boring, uninteresting creatures.
- D. They are gentle and would make good pets.

Part B

Which sentences from the passage best support your answer to part A?

- A. “I sat down to take notes on the creature’s appearance. When I looked up, it was crawling over the rocks toward the water.”
- B. “To my surprise, when I arrived I saw dozens of marine iguanas huddled together on the rocks and in the sand. It suddenly made sense to me.”
- C. “I gazed in wonder at the fierce-looking creatures cuddling up next to each other. I wondered what other surprising things I would learn about them.”
- D. “We have gotten very close to several marine iguanas while they were sunning. We now know what the white substance on their heads is. It’s sea salt!”

Tell the students that question 1 is the first question about the passage they will answer with their partners. Point out that this question has two parts: part A and part B. Direct the students’ attention to the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart, and tell the students that you want partners to use these tips to answer both parts of question 1. Briefly review the tips. Explain that when partners agree on the correct answer, each student is to mark the answer on his or her copy of the questions. Have partners work together to answer question 1.

Circulate as pairs work, offering support as needed.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What answers did you and your partner agree on for question 1?
- Q How did you mark your answers?
- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?

Teacher Note

For example, if the students are struggling to understand what the question in part A is asking, you might explain that the words the author’s opinion of marine iguanas are important words in the question, and that the question is asking which of the four answer choices tells what Professor DeWitt thinks about marine iguanas. In part B, the question is asking which of the answer choices supports, or is evidence of, Professor DeWitt’s opinion of marine iguanas.

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 1 are B (part A) and C (part B).

Q Who agrees with [Yvonne and Mike] that [B in part A and C in part B] are the correct answers?

Q Who marked different answers? Why did you choose those answers?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking.

5 Follow the Same Procedure to Answer Questions 2-4

Follow the same procedure to have partners answer questions 2, 3, and 4. Continue to circulate as pairs discuss each question and offer support as needed.

Teacher Note

If the students are struggling to answer question 2, have them reread the question and identify the important words (what do marine iguanas do to stay warm and paragraphs 6 and 8). Then guide them to paragraphs 6 and 8 and have them read the paragraphs to find details about what marine iguanas do to keep warm. (You might have the students skim the paragraphs for the word warm to help them find details.)

WA5

Question 2

According to the author, what do marine iguanas do to stay warm? Write your answer on the lines below. Use details from paragraphs 6 and 8 to support your answer.

---

---

---

---

---

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

Q What answers did you and your partner agree on for question 2?

Q How did you mark your answers?

Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?

Q Who agrees with [Binh and Yoldanda] that ["bask in the sun all day" and "stay close together at night"] are the correct answers?

Q Who wrote different answers? Why did you write those answers?

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 2 are "bask in the sun all day" and "stay close together at night."

Question 3

Read the excerpt from paragraph 8 of the passage below. Underline the sentences in the excerpt that tell what marine iguanas eat.

They use their strong legs and long claws to hang on to the rocks and not get swept away by the waves. It seems as if their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off the rocks close to the shore. When they go into deeper waters in search of seaweed to eat, they swim with grace. I watched several iguanas swim out, away from the rocks, and disappear underwater.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What answers did you and your partner agree on for question 3?
- Q How did you mark your answers?
- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?
- Q Who agrees with [Marcus and Kahlia] that ["It seems as if their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off the rocks close to the shore" and "When they go into deeper waters in search of seaweed to eat, they swim with grace"] are the correct answers?
- Q Who came up with different answers? Why did you mark those answers?

Teacher Note

If the students are struggling with question 3, have them reread the directions and circle the important words (sentences and what marine iguanas eat). Point out that the question is asking the students to underline more than one sentence. If necessary, tell the students that to find one of the sentences, they will need to make an inference, or use clues in the sentence to figure out what marine iguanas eat.

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 3 are "It seems as if their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off the rocks close to the shore" and "When they go into deeper waters in search of seaweed to eat, they swim with grace."

Teacher Note

If the students are struggling to answer question 4, have them reread both part A and part B and circle the important words (meaning, frigid, and detail in the excerpt). If necessary, explain that they are being asked to figure out the meaning of the word frigid, using clues from the excerpt. Have the students reread the sentence that includes the word frigid and try to determine the meaning based on clues in the sentence. If necessary, point out that the iguanas crawl back onto the warm rocks immediately after they climb out of the frigid waters, and ask, “What can you figure out about the word frigid from that clue? Why would the iguanas hurry onto the warm rocks?”

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 4 are “cold” (part A) and “they immediately crawl back on the rocks to warm themselves in the sun” (part B).

Teacher Note

If you would like to discuss additional “Observations of Marine Iguanas” practice questions with the students, see the extension “Discuss Practice Questions 5 and 6” on the next page.

Question 4

Read the excerpt from paragraph 8 below. Then complete part A and part B.

They are amazing divers. They can hold their breath for up to 30 minutes! When they reappear from the frigid depths, they immediately crawl back on the rocks to warm themselves in the sun.

Part A

What is the meaning of the word frigid as it is used in the excerpt? Fill in the circle of the correct answer.

- blue
- deep
- cold
- warm

Part B

Underline the detail in the excerpt that helps you understand the meaning of the word frigid.

When most students have finished, discuss the following questions:

- Q What answers did you and your partner agree on for question 4?
- Q How did you record your answers?
- Q What did you and your partner do to figure out the answers?
- Q Who agrees with [Rosco and Salena] that [“cold” and “they immediately crawl back on the rocks to warm themselves in the sun”] are the correct answers?
- Q Who chose different answers? Why did you choose those answers?

Tell the students that tomorrow they will answer one more question about the passages they have read. Have the students put their materials inside their folders.

6 Reflect on Partner Work

Briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility as you worked with your partner today?
- Q What did your partner do to take responsibility?

EXTENSION

Discuss Practice Questions 5 and 6

Follow the procedure you used on Day 3 (see Step 5) to have partners discuss and answer questions 5 and 6 on their copies of “Questions: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” (BLM4). Remind the students to use the information on the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart to help them find the correct answers. Then use the “Questions 5–6: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA6) to discuss the students’ responses as a class.

Teacher Note

The correct answers to question 5 are C and D. Correct answers to question 6 include “They have strong legs,” “They seem gentle,” “Humans can get close to them,” and “They huddle together to stay warm.”

Guided Strategy Practice

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Add sentences to a paragraph about this week’s passages
- Refer to the passages to support their thinking
- Reflect on what they have learned about preparing for an end-of-year assessment
- Listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking

Materials

- “Question 7: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA7)
- “Tips for Answering Questions” chart from Day 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

1 Briefly Review the Week

Have the students get their folders and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Remind the students that they have been preparing for the end-of-year assessment. Review that this week they have read two passages and answered questions about the passages. Explain that today the students will work with you and their partners to answer a final question about the passages.

2 Read and Discuss Question 7

Display the “Question 7: ‘Observations of Marine Iguanas’” chart (WA7), and ask the students to look at question 7 on their copies of the questions (BLM4). Explain that this is the question they will discuss today.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Tips for Answering Questions” chart and remind the students that it is important to read directions and

Teacher Note

Questions 5 and 6 are supplemental practice questions for “Observations of Marine Iguanas.” If you did not do the extension activity on Day 3, you might assign the questions as seatwork for the students to do individually or in pairs.

3 Model Writing the First Sentence of the Paragraph

Ask the students to watch and listen as you model writing the first sentence of the paragraph. Then write an opening sentence that states the main idea of the paragraph and uses the language of the question, thinking aloud as you plan and write.

You might say:

"A well-written paragraph starts with an opening sentence that tells what the paragraph is about. We know from the question that this paragraph is going to tell why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. I will use the language of the question to write my opening sentence: Marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities."

Ask:

Q What did you notice me doing as I wrote the first sentence of the paragraph?

Students might say:

"I noticed that you wrote an opening sentence that tells what the paragraph is about."

"In addition to what [Jin] said, I noticed that you used the words from the question to write the sentence."

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

4 Have the Students Add to the Paragraph

Tell the students that you want them to write a paragraph on their copies of question 7 by first copying the sentence you wrote as their opening sentence and then adding four or five sentences of their own that describe why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. Explain that you are asking them to add four or five sentences because when they write paragraphs on the end-of-year assessment that ask for details or evidence, it is a good idea to provide several examples.

Tell the students that to find details for their paragraphs they should read quickly through both "Marine Iguanas" and "Observations of Marine Iguanas" and underline sentences that tell why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. Then give the students several minutes to read, underline, and write their paragraphs. As the students work, walk around the room and observe, assisting as needed.

Teacher Note

You might explain to the students that several facts about marine iguanas are found in both "Marine Iguanas" and "Observations of Marine Iguanas," and that the students can include these overlapping facts in their paragraphs.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Ask yourself:

- Are the students able to write several sentences about how marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities?
- Do the sentences include details from both passages?
- Are they skimming the passages to find information?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 89. Use the following suggestions to support the students:

- If all or most students are writing several sentences and the sentences include details from the passages, proceed with the lesson.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are writing several sentences or the sentences do not include details from the passages, model skimming the passages and adding a couple of sentences to the paragraph. Have the students copy those sentences. Then have them skim the passages and add a few sentences of their own.

5 Use the Students’ Ideas to Add to the Paragraph and Model Writing a Closing Sentence

When the students have finished writing, discuss the following questions:

- Q What is one sentence you added to the paragraph about why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities?
- Q Where is that information in the passages?
- Q Who else added a sentence [about how marine iguanas eat algae]?

Use the students’ ideas to add several sentences to the paragraph on the chart. Then model writing a closing sentence.

You might say:

“A well-written paragraph ends with a strong closing sentence that wraps up the paragraph and lets the reader know that the paragraph has come to an end. From the passages, we’ve learned that marine iguanas are amazing animals that have adapted to their environment in special ways. So I’ll write: Marine iguanas are amazing animals that have adapted to their environment in many special ways.”

Teacher Note

Possible answers might include that marine iguanas: have long, sharp claws to cling to rocks; have flat noses and sharp teeth to scrape algae off of rocks; have long “crocodile-like” tails to help them swim; can dive up to 49 feet to feed on seaweed; can change their size when their food supply changes; stay close together to keep warm; and have glands near their noses to expel the salt from the water they swallow.

Question 7: “Observations of Marine Iguanas”

Write a paragraph on the lines below that describes why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. Include evidence and details from both “Marine Iguanas” and “Observations of Marine Iguanas.”

Marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. They have strong legs and long, sharp claws that help them cling to slippery rocks. Their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off of the rocks. Marine iguanas are also amazing swimmers. They have strong crocodile-like tails that help them swim. In addition, they can dive up to 49 feet into the ocean to eat seaweed. Another thing that’s amazing about marine iguanas is that they have glands near their noses that sneeze out the salt from the water they swallow. Finally, marine iguanas can change size when their food supply changes. Marine iguanas are amazing animals that have adapted to their environment in many special ways.

Read the paragraph aloud. Then point to the directions for question 7 and ask:

Q How did we do with following the directions of the question? Why do you say that?

6 Reflect on Preparing for the Assessment

Remind the students that this week they prepared for an end-of-year reading assessment by reading and discussing passages together and answering questions. Ask:

- Q What have you learned this week that will help you do well on the end-of-year assessment?
- Q Do you feel prepared for the assessment? Why do you feel [prepared/unprepared]?

EXTENSIONS

Provide Additional Practice with Supplemental Passages and Questions

Additional practice passages and questions are available on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). You might assign one or more of the passages and sets of questions as seatwork to be completed independently or in pairs or as homework. When the students have finished the assignment, discuss their responses to the questions, using questions like those you asked on Day 3 (see Step 5). The passages and questions can also be used for further class instruction if needed. For other uses of the passages and questions, see “Using the Instructional and Supplemental Passages and Test Items Throughout the Year” on page viii.

Help the Students Prepare for Assessment Day

Providing the students with strategies for making sense of passages and tips for answering questions is a critical step in getting them ready for an end-of-year assessment, but it is also important to help the students prepare physically and emotionally. In the days before the assessment, let the students know what to expect on the day of the assessment. Your school or district guidelines for administering the assessment will provide you with information about the location of the assessment, how the assessment will be administered, and the amount of time the students will have to complete the assessment. You might also share information about rules concerning talking during the assessment, breaks or rest periods, and what to do when the students are finished.

Tell the students that it is important for them to be well rested and feeling their best on the day of the assessment so that they can do their best work. Ask:

- Q What might you do to make sure you are well rested and feeling your best for the assessment?
- Q Why is it important to be responsible for taking care of yourself so you're ready for the assessment?

Students might say:

“I can go to bed early the night before the assessment so that I won't be sleepy that day.”

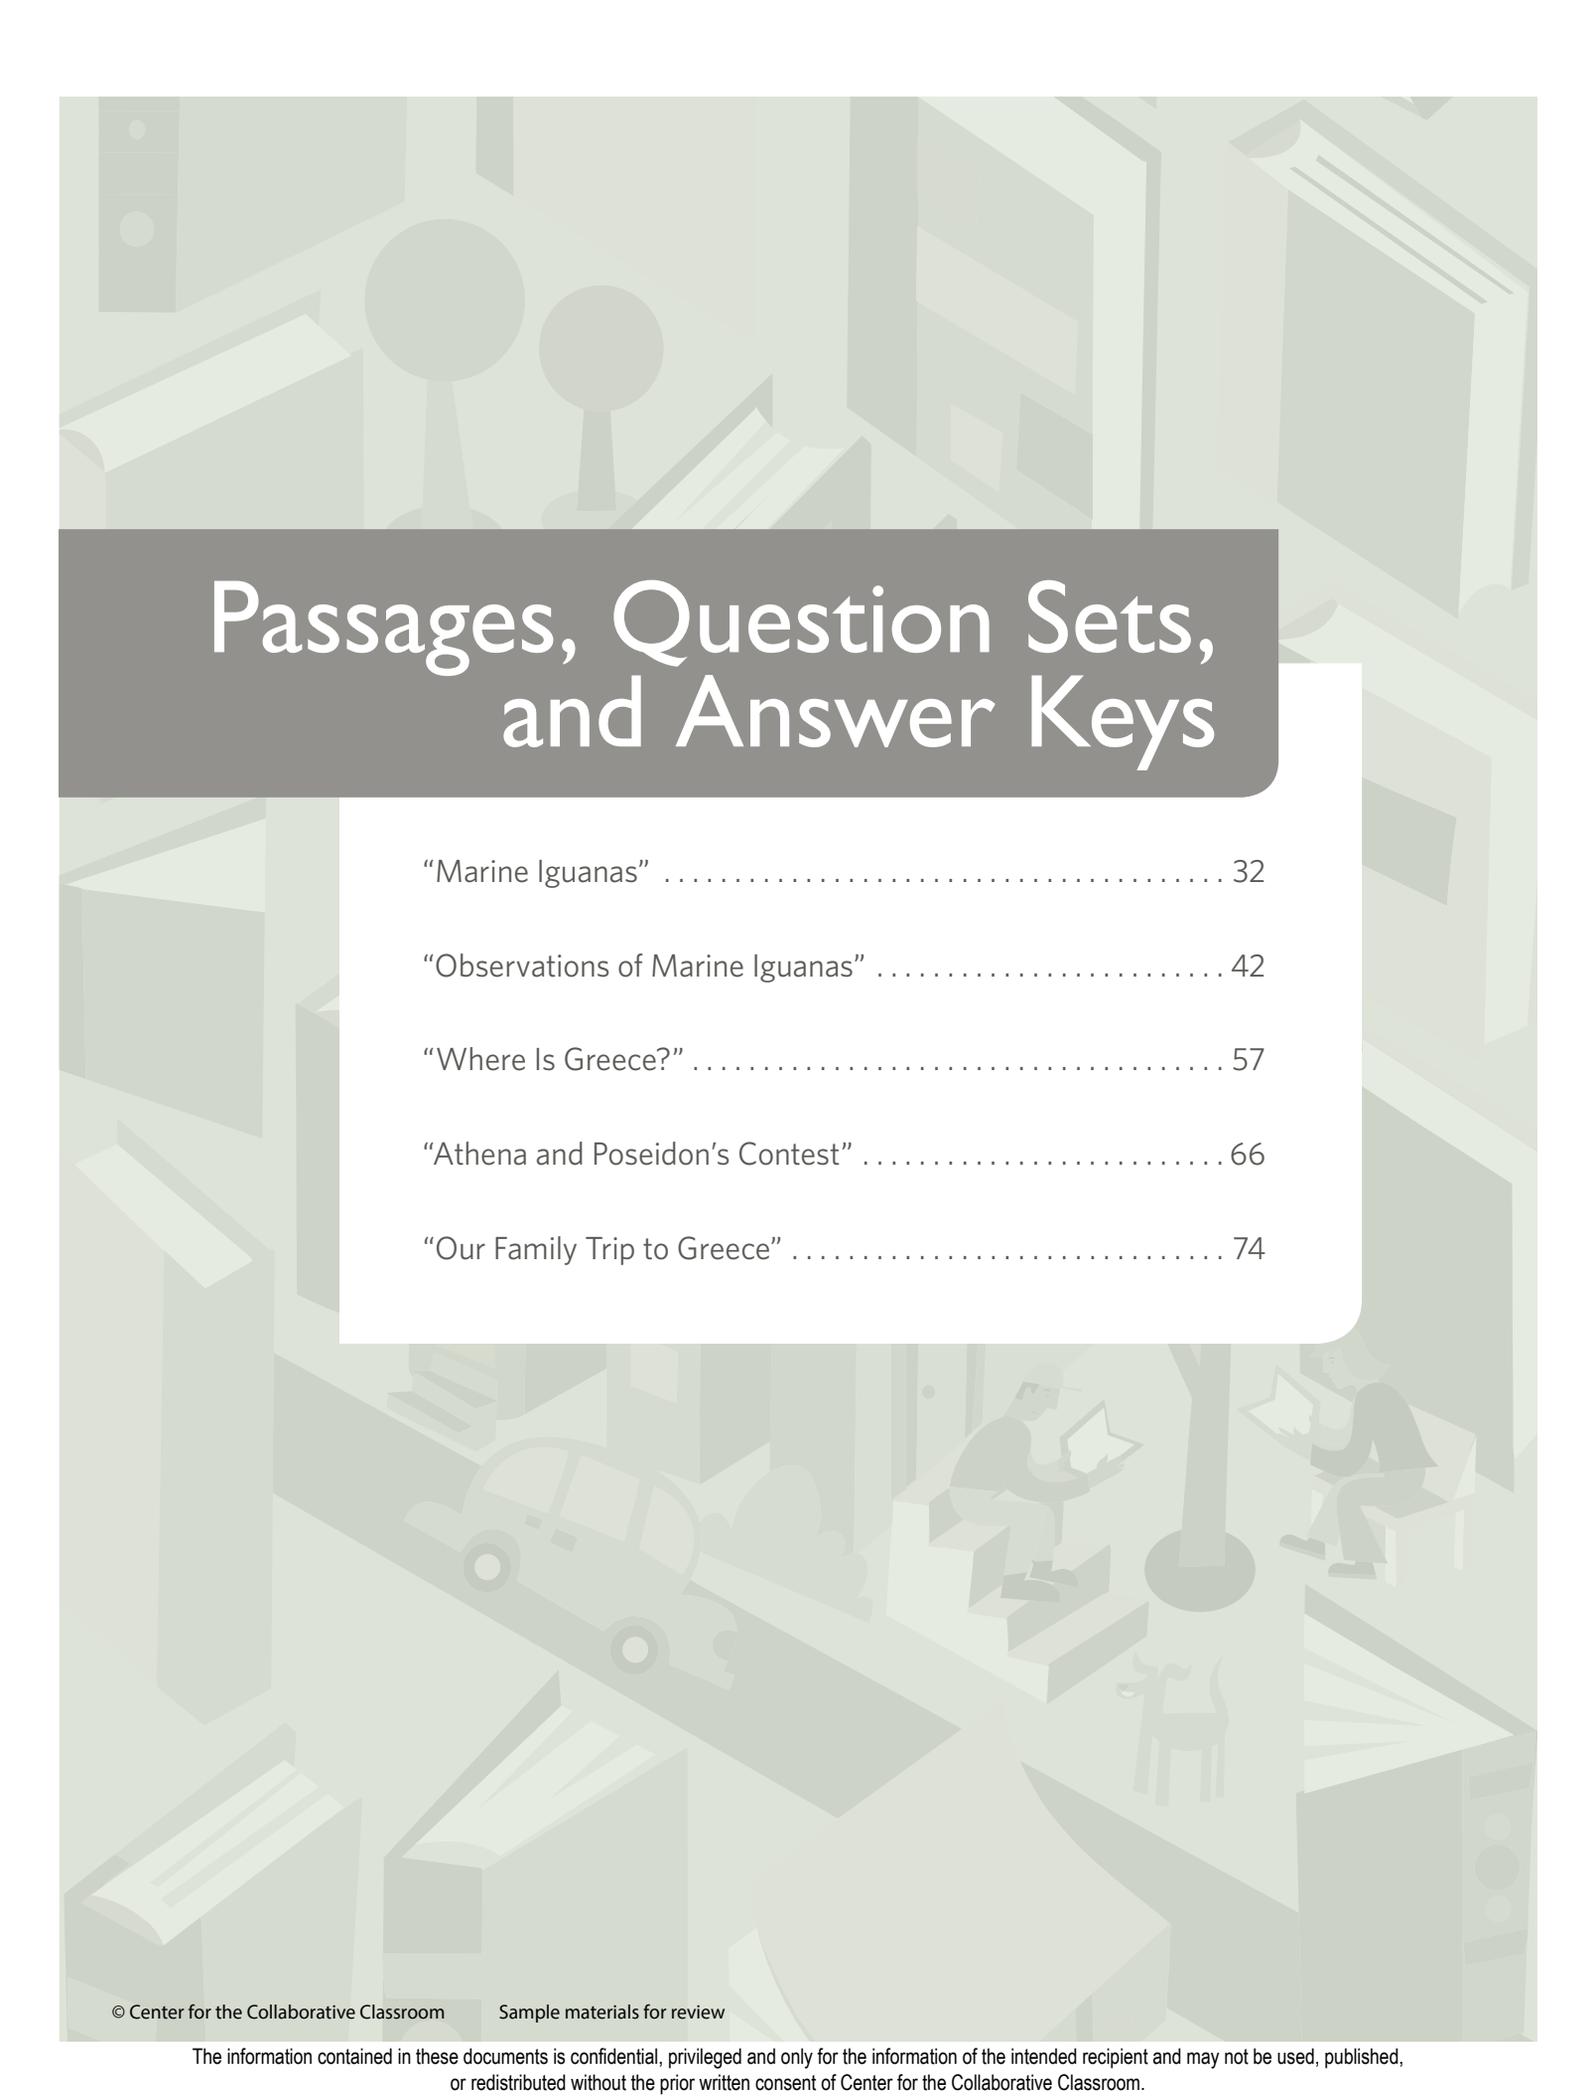

“I can set an alarm clock so I have enough time to get ready that morning.”

“I can eat a good breakfast so that I won't be hungry and grouchy.”

“If I take care of myself, then I'll feel good during the assessment.”

“In addition to what [Tanika] said, if we feel good when we do the assessment, that will help us do our best work.”

If necessary, emphasize the importance of getting a good night's sleep and eating a good breakfast on the day of the assessment. Encourage the students to be responsible and take care of themselves in these ways in preparation for the assessment.

Passage 1

Marine Iguanas

Paragraph 1 Marine iguanas live on the Galápagos Islands, which are off the coast of Ecuador in South America. They are different from land-dwelling iguanas because of their ability to swim and get their food from the sea.

Paragraph 2 Marine iguanas have flat noses, wide-set eyes, and spiky backs—they are not pretty! But marine iguanas are pretty amazing. They have special abilities and features that help them survive on the rugged islands they call home.

Paragraph 3 Marine iguanas are closely related to the land-dwelling iguanas that live in South America. In fact, many scientists believe marine iguanas were once land iguanas. These scientists think that storms blew land iguanas to the Galápagos on logs and seaweed. The land iguanas then adapted to life on the islands. Over time, they changed in ways that helped them make the most of their new environment.

Paragraph 4 Marine iguanas are at home in the water. Their bodies have special features that help them find food in the ocean. Long, sharp claws enable them to cling to rocks without getting swept away by waves. They use their flat noses and sharp teeth to scrape algae off rocks. Marine iguanas also have long, crocodile-like tails that make them great swimmers. They can dive up to 49 feet to feed on seaweed. They can hold their breath underwater for up to 30 minutes at a time.

Paragraph 5      Because marine iguanas are cold-blooded reptiles, they spend much of the day sunning on rocks by the shore. Lying in the sun to warm up is especially important after the iguanas have come out of the cold ocean. Most marine iguanas are dark gray or black. Their skin matches the color of the volcanic rocks they sit on. Dark surfaces absorb the sun's warmth. So the darkness of the rocks and the darkness of their skin help the iguanas stay warm.

Paragraph 6      Many marine iguanas look like they have a white crown between their eyes. This white area is salt that comes out of a gland near their noses. It seems like the iguanas are sneezing salt. This special ability helps them get rid of the salt they swallow while swimming in the ocean.

Paragraph 7      Marine iguanas are, on average, 2 to 5 feet long. They weigh from 1 to 3 pounds. Amazingly, marine iguanas can change their size when their food supply changes. Food can become scarce when there are violent storms or other environmental changes. Marine iguanas can make themselves thinner and even shorter when their food supply is low. When food is plentiful again, the marine iguanas will go back to their original size. This ability helps them survive during hard times.

Paragraph 8      Marine iguanas do not have many natural predators, but animals that are not native to the islands threaten their survival. Long ago, explorers and sailors brought animals such as rats, cats, and dogs to the Galápagos. These animals hunt baby iguanas and eat iguana eggs. Ecuador has passed special laws to protect marine iguanas. The hope is to keep the iguanas alive so they do not disappear from Earth forever.

Observations of Marine Iguanas: Excerpts from Professor Flora DeWitt's Journal

Paragraph 1

July 4, 2014, Isabela Island

As I walked toward the rocky shore from our makeshift lab, I saw a strange lizard-like creature lying in the sun. It had spikes down its back. Its rough, grayish skin matched the volcanic rock it was sitting on. The creature was about 3 feet long, much of which was its long tail.

Paragraph 2

I slowly crept closer and noticed that the creature had a large white spot between its eyes. With its wide-set eyes and flat nose, it occurred to me that this creature would look like the movie monster Godzilla if it stood up on its hind legs. Luckily, it didn't even try to stand up. I was glad, especially because of its long, sharp-looking claws.

Paragraph 3

In fact, the creature did not seem to be bothered by me at all. Even though it looked scary and fierce, it seemed to be gentle.

Paragraph 4

I sat down to take notes on the creature's appearance. When I looked up, it was crawling over the rocks toward the water.

Observations of Marine Iguanas: Excerpts from Professor Flora DeWitt's Journal (continued)

Paragraph 5 July 5, 2014, Isabela Island

I reported what I saw to my colleague, Dr. Lee. She told me that the creature was probably a marine iguana. She said she had seen several on the eastern shore on the other side of the island.

Paragraph 6 Late this afternoon, I headed to the east side of the island, where Dr. Lee had seen some marine iguanas the day before. The sun was beginning to set, and I was concerned that I would miss the iguanas. Dr. Lee had explained that marine iguanas like basking in the warm sun. Would they still be there as night approached? To my surprise, when I arrived I saw dozens of marine iguanas huddled together on the rocks and in the sand. It suddenly made sense to me. Like other reptiles, marine iguanas are cold-blooded, or creatures that become hotter or colder depending on the temperature outside. When the sun goes down, the iguanas stay close together to keep each other warm.

Paragraph 7 I gazed in wonder at the fierce-looking creatures cuddling up next to each other. I wondered what other surprising things I would learn about them. I took a few photographs and headed back to the lab.

Paragraph 8 July 8, 2014, Isabela Island

I have had several days to study the marine iguanas. Dr. Lee has come with me a few times. Though we have seen other kinds of iguanas inland, near our lab, the marine iguanas stay close to the ocean. They use their strong legs and long claws to hang on to the rocks and not get swept away by the waves. It seems as if their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off the rocks close to the shore. When they go into deeper waters in search of seaweed to eat, they swim with grace. I watched several iguanas swim out, away from the rocks, and disappear underwater. They are amazing divers. They can hold their breath for up to 30 minutes! When they reappear from the frigid depths, they immediately crawl back on the rocks to warm themselves in the sun.

Paragraph 9

We have gotten very close to several marine iguanas while they were sunning. We now know what the white substance on their heads is. It's sea salt! The iguanas spray salt out of a gland near their noses, and it lands on their heads. It looks like they are sneezing salt.

Paragraph 10

I look forward to observing the iguanas again tomorrow. I plan to return to the east side of Isabela Island to photograph these amazing creatures as they swim.

Question 7

Write a paragraph on the lines below that describes why marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. Include evidence and details from both “Marine Iguanas” and “Observations of Marine Iguanas.”

Possible answer: Marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities. They have strong legs and long, sharp claws that help them cling to slippery rocks. Their flat noses and sharp teeth help them scrape algae off of the rocks. Marine iguanas are also amazing swimmers. They have strong crocodile-like tails that help them swim. In addition, they can dive up to 49 feet into the ocean to eat seaweed. Another thing that’s amazing about marine iguanas is that they have glands near their noses that sneeze out the salt from the water they swallow. Finally, marine iguanas can change size when their food supply changes. Marine iguanas are amazing animals that have adapted to their environment in many special ways.

Where Is Greece?

Greece lies on the Balkan Peninsula in southern Europe. In fact, it is the southernmost country on the European continent. It is a relatively small nation of about fifty-one thousand square miles, approximately the size of the state of Alabama. Greece is a rugged land of mountains, forests, and lakes. Its highest peak is Mt. Olympus, famous in Greek mythology as the home of the gods. Greece is surrounded by water on three sides. It has the longest coastline in all of Europe and is well known for its more than two thousand islands.

Because of its location at the crossroads of three continents—Europe, Asia, and Africa—Greece is sometimes referred to as the “crossroad of cultures.” Europe lies to the north and to the west, across the Ionian Sea. To the east, across the Aegean Sea, are Turkey and the rest of western Asia. Across the Mediterranean Sea to the south is the continent of Africa.

Athena and Poseidon's Contest

Paragraph 1        Long ago in a land called Greece, twelve mighty gods ruled the land. The gods looked over the towns and cities and kept the people safe. Each town or city in ancient Greece was protected by one god. When a new town was created, the gods decided which one of them would take care of it.

Paragraph 2        This usually worked well. However, there came a time when the goddess Athena and the god Poseidon disagreed about who would get to watch over a new city. Both wanted to claim the biggest new city in Greece as their territory.

Paragraph 3        Athena, the goddess of wisdom, was the daughter of Zeus, king of the gods. Poseidon, Athena's uncle, was the god of the sea and water. They were both very powerful, and they almost went to war over the city. Athena, however, was very wise. She came up with a peaceful plan. Athena suggested that instead of fighting, she and Poseidon should have a contest. Whoever won would be the protector of the new city.

Paragraph 4        For the contest, each god was to give the city a gift, and the people would decide which gift was the most useful. Poseidon went first. He swiftly lifted his strong arms and struck his three-pointed spear, called a trident, into the earth. A frothy stream of water bubbled out of the earth. The people were excited because a good water source was important if they wanted their city to grow. The people rushed to the stream and drank from it. Upon putting the water to their lips, they spit it out because it was salty! They were not happy with Poseidon's gift after all.

Paragraph 5        Then it was Athena's turn. Quietly she bent down and planted a seed. From it grew a beautiful olive tree with plump, juicy olives. Everyone ran to the tree to taste the olives. They were delicious! The people of the city were very pleased with Athena's gift and decided it was much more useful than the salty stream Poseidon had given them. The olive tree would give them food to eat, oil to cook with, wood to build homes with, and twigs to fuel their fires. The tree would also shade the people from the hot sun. Athena had won the contest, and the new city was now her own to watch over! The city was named Athens in her honor.

Paragraph 6

Poseidon could not believe he had lost. In a fit of rage, he struck his trident into the earth again. The powerful blow caused a great storm in the sea that flooded the plains below Athens. The people learned that it was not a good idea to stir the wrath of Poseidon. Though their city was named Athens after Athena, the people honored both Poseidon and Athena. Both gods are pictured on the front of Athena's temple, the Parthenon.

Our Family Trip to Greece

by Jason Mavros

It is the third day of our trip to Greece, where my father’s grandparents were born. So far, we have been in the capital city of Athens. I love it! Athens is very old and is full of historic ruins and sites. There is so much to do and see in this ancient city!

Today we visited the Acropolis, which sits on a hill above modern Athens. The biggest structure there is a huge marble building with columns all around called the Parthenon. On the front of the Parthenon, at the top, a large triangle is carved in the stone. My mom says it once pictured a contest between the gods Athena and Poseidon to see which of them would be the god to protect Athens.

“Who won?” I asked.

“Can you guess?” my mom replied.

“Athena?” I guessed this might be the answer because Athena sounds a lot like Athens.

“Of course!” my mom cheered.

My older sister and I really wanted to explore the Parthenon, but we couldn’t go inside. Dad said that he had been able to go inside when he was a kid, but now there are new rules about who can enter. The people of Greece do not want the wear and tear of visitors trampling on it. They want the Parthenon to be around for many years to come.

As we were walking down from the Parthenon, we came upon a really cool site that we could go into. It was called the Odeon of Herodes Atticus. It is an outdoor theater in the shape of a half circle with steep marble seats going up on an angle. One reason it was built like this was so that everyone in the audience could hear the actors below. This was the ancient version of a sound system! When my mom spoke from the bottom of the theater, we could hear her really well from the top. The acoustics were amazing!

Our Family Trip to Greece (continued)

We learned that there was going to be a traditional Greek play there tonight. I really wanted to go, but my sister, who studies dance, wanted to go to a folk-dancing festival instead. It was our last night in Athens, so we had to choose which event to see.

“How do we choose?” I asked.

“I have an idea!” my sister offered excitedly. “Poseidon and Athena held a contest to settle their differences, so we could, too. Since the Olympic Games started in Greece, we should have a race!”

“They had a contest? The Olympics started here?” This was all news to me.

“Come on, Jason! Everybody knows the first Olympic Games were in Greece!” my sister explained.

We decided that whoever made it to the top of the first section of seats first would get to choose whether we would see the play or go to the folk-dancing festival. My sister is older, but I have longer legs, so we figured it was a fair race.

When my mom said, “Go,” we both bolted up the stone steps. My sister ran like the wind, but I wasn’t going to let her win. I pushed as hard as I could, and on the last few steps, I passed her and won! I’m looking forward to going to a real Greek play in a real Greek theater tonight!

Read the excerpt from the passage. Then answer the question that follows.

Dad said that he had been able to go inside when he was a kid, but now there are new rules about who can enter. The people of Greece do not want the wear and tear of visitors trampling on it. They want the Parthenon to be around for many years to come.

What does wear and tear refer to? Circle the letter of the correct answer.

- A. shoes that people wear when sightseeing
- B. ropes that keep people out of certain areas
- C. damage that occurs over time when something is used
- D. questions that tourists have when they visit the Parthenon

Question 5

Write a brief summary of “Our Family Trip to Greece” on the lines below.

Possible answer: In “Our Family Trip to Greece,” a boy named Jason Mavros describes a day his family spends in Athens during a vacation in Greece.

The family visits the Parthenon, but they discover that tourists are not allowed inside. Then they visit the Odeon of Herodes Atticus, which is an outdoor theater. When Jason and his sister disagree about going to a play at the theater, they settle their differences with a race. Jason wins and looks forward to going to a play with his family.

An isometric illustration of a school building in shades of green and grey. The building has multiple windows and a central entrance. In the foreground, a car is parked on a street. Two students are sitting on a bench, reading books. A dog is sitting on the ground nearby. A tree with a circular canopy is also present. The overall scene is a stylized representation of a school environment.

Assessments

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are the students monitoring their comprehension?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are they using “fix-up” strategies to address comprehension problems?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, proceed with the lesson and then continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are monitoring their comprehension and using “fix-up” strategies, model reading a part of the passage, thinking aloud about what you are doing to monitor your comprehension and address comprehension problems (see Day 1, Step 4). You might also consider teaching or reviewing IDR Mini-lesson 2, “Self-monitoring and Using ‘Fix-up’ Strategies” (found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual).

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are the students able to write several sentences about how marine iguanas are amazing animals with special abilities?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Do the sentences include details from both passages?</li> </ul>
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▪ Are they skimming the passages to find information?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are writing several sentences and the sentences include details from the passages, proceed with the lesson.
- If about half the students or only a few students are writing several sentences or the sentences do not include details from the passages, model skimming the passages and adding a couple of sentences to the paragraph. Have the students copy those sentences. Then have them skim the passages and add a few sentences of their own.

Excerpt from Shattering Earthquakes

by Louise and Richard Spilsbury

Where Do Earthquakes Happen?

Earthquakes can happen all over the Earth, on land or on the ocean floor. Some earthquakes happen in the middle of plates. They happen in places where there is a line of weakness in the Earth's crust. But most earthquakes happen where two of the Earth's plates meet.

Many earthquakes happen around the edges of the Pacific Ocean. This is where several plates meet and where hot liquid rock can escape to the surface. This means that many earthquakes and volcanoes happen in this area, which has been named the "Ring of Fire." Another area that suffers from many earthquakes is a zone that runs from Italy and Greece, through central Asia and the Himalayas.

This map shows the area where most of the earthquakes on Earth happen. The red circles mark places where some of the most damaging earthquakes of recent years have happened. Four out of every five earthquakes occur in the Ring of Fire.

CASE STUDY

United Kingdom, 2002

Earthquakes can happen in all sorts of places. Few people think of the United Kingdom as an area that has earthquakes. In fact, the United Kingdom has quite a few powerful earthquakes every ten years or so. One recent earthquake began at around 1:00 a.m. on September 23, 2002. Thousands of people awoke to feel their houses and furniture shaking and their windows rattling. The earthquake measured 4.8 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was in Dudley in the West Midlands. It shook buildings in parts of the West Midlands, Wales, North Yorkshire, London, and Wiltshire for up to 30 seconds.

“The house started shaking quite violently. All the power was cut off. Quite a few people came out of their houses wondering what was going on. The streets were in darkness.”

—Richard Flynn, West Midlands

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF WHALES

The sperm whale is named for the spermaceti oil that it produces in an organ located in its head.

Toothed Whales and Baleen Whales

There are two types of whales: toothed whales and baleen whales. Toothed whales have teeth like many other animals, which they use to eat mostly fish. Sperm whales are one example of a toothed whale.

Baleen whales have baleen instead of teeth. Baleen is like a filter made of fine, thickly packed hair. The whales take huge amounts of water into their mouths and push it back out through the baleen plates. The water can go through while the baleen catches krill and plankton, small animals that the whales feed on. The baleen whales include the blue whale, the gray whale, and the humpback whale.

Scientists have discovered that humpback whales sing long, complex "songs."

Goodnight, Whales

Whales, like humans, are mammals. They need to breathe to survive. But they are conscious breathers, which means they must think about coming to the surface to breathe; they do not breathe automatically like we do. Whales would be unable to survive if they fully went to sleep because they would not breathe. So, they have a way to sleep without drowning. Only half of their brain sleeps at a time. The other half is conscious and reminds them to breathe. Sleeping whales tend to swim slowly just below the surface and come up occasionally for air.

EXTREME WHALES

The biggest whale in the world is the blue whale. It can grow to 110 feet long and weigh 200 tons, or 400,000 pounds. The blue whale is the biggest animal that ever lived on Earth!

The smallest whale in the world is the dwarf sperm whale. It is only 8.5 feet long and weighs up to 450 pounds.

One of the fastest whales is the sei whale, which can swim up to 40 miles per hour.

Men, Women, and Basketball

In the Basket

In 1891, PE teacher James Naismith took on a challenge—to find an indoor game that would keep rowdy students busy during the cold winter months. He had the caretaker nail up a peach basket at each end of the gymnasium, and the game of basketball was born. Little did Naismith know that this sport would grow to be one of the most watched games in the world—and that the players would be paid multimillion-dollar salaries. Well, the male players, that is!

Early Days

In the beginning, professional men's basketball was seen as a kind of sideshow entertainment where players showed off their skills. Teams would travel from town to town, stopping to challenge local teams. All that changed on November 1, 1946, when the first game in the National Basketball Association (NBA) was played: the Toronto Huskies versus the New York Knickerbockers at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto, Canada. The game drew a crowd of 7,090 people—a huge number for that time.

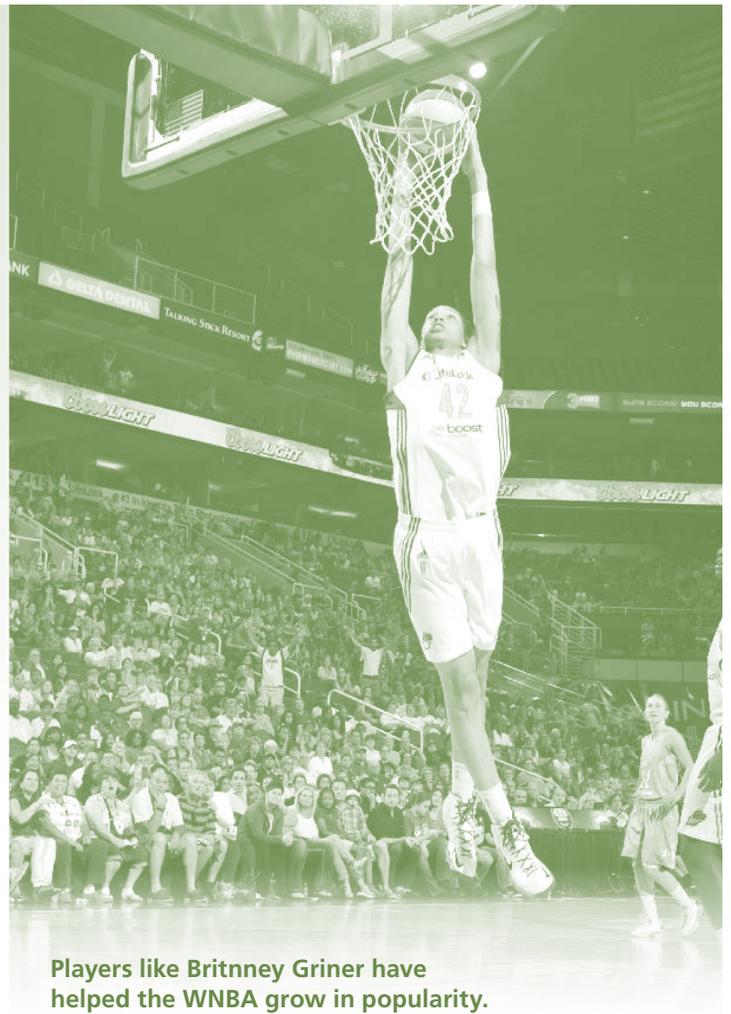

Women’s basketball got off to a slower start, but by the 1950s, women’s college basketball was going strong. Women even had their own superstar player—the extraordinary Nera White. Standing at an impressive 6 feet, 1 inch, White regularly sank baskets from center court. Fast-forward to 1996: hot on the heels of the U.S. women’s team winning a gold medal at the Olympics, the Women’s National Basketball Association (WNBA) was formed. Women finally had a national league of their own.

A Numbers Game

The WNBA is not yet as financially successful as the NBA, but that’s probably because men’s basketball had a 50-year head start. However, the number of WNBA fans keeps growing. In 2013, the WNBA signed a 10-year extension on its television contract with one of the largest sports networks, ESPN. Many WNBA players have become household names and have huge fan clubs.

Today, the NBA and WNBA are the same in some ways but very different in others. Both are exciting to watch, and they attract large crowds. However, an NBA player can earn close to 100 times more than a player in the WNBA. That’s something women players want to see changed. As more people watch WNBA games and advertisers pay higher prices for TV time slots, women players may just get their wish.

Players like Brittney Griner have helped the WNBA grow in popularity.

Cafeteria Menus Shape Up

It's your favorite time of day. In the cafeteria line, you're on the hunt for hot dogs, but you can't find them anywhere. No fries or Hawaiian pizza are in sight, either. Your stomach's growling. So what's on the menu today?

Lighten Up

School lunches aren't what they used to be. Before, you might have been able to fill your tray with foods such as pizza, hot dogs, or fries. Now, your lunch tray is more likely to include foods like grilled chicken, whole-wheat pasta, fresh fruits and vegetables, and low-fat yogurt. Your school isn't the only one that's changing its menu. Schools across the United States and around the world are replacing their high-fat, high-sugar lunches with healthier ones.

More than half of elementary and secondary students in the United States eat lunches provided by their schools. The increase in health problems such as diabetes and obesity made many people look closely at what students were eating. Schools realized that healthier lunch options could help stop some of the health problems from getting worse, so a trend toward healthier lunches began. Finally, in 2012, the government released guidelines that require schools to serve meals that limit calories and include whole grains, fruits, and a variety of vegetables.

A healthy lunch includes a variety of tasty foods.

Food for Focus

Research shows that food affects your concentration. Eating a healthy meal may help you to focus better on your schoolwork. Here are some food facts for thought:

- Although foods high in sugar—such as soda and cookies—will give you an energy boost, it won't last long. It's better to eat foods such as whole-wheat bread, whole-wheat pasta, and fresh fruit. These foods help keep your energy level consistent all day.
- Your brain does need a good supply of fat to work well, but not the kind of fat found in foods such as cheeseburgers and hot dogs. By eating foods containing healthier fats—like fish, nuts, and seeds—you'll be helping to keep your brain in good shape.
- Chocolate and many sodas contain caffeine, which can give you energy but also leave you feeling jittery, making it hard to concentrate on your work.

Switching from eating high-fat, high-sugar foods to healthier choices might not be easy, but the benefits are certain—you'll have more energy to get you through the day and the ability to concentrate when you need to.

Changes Schools Are Making

In school cafeterias across the United States, healthy foods have replaced foods high in sugar and fat. Here are some simple changes schools are making to provide healthy and delicious lunches for their students:

Increasing Whole Grains

- Replacing foods made with white flour—such as white bread, flour tortillas, and saltine crackers—with foods made with whole grains—such as whole-wheat or rye bread, whole-wheat tortillas, and whole-grain crackers
- Replacing white rice with brown rice, wild rice, or quinoa (KEEN-wah)

Reducing Sugar

- Replacing chocolate milk with plain, low-fat milk
- Replacing canned fruit with fresh fruit

Reducing Unhealthy Fat

- Replacing deep-fried foods like chicken nuggets and french fries with roasted chicken and root vegetables such as sweet potatoes, parsnips, carrots, and rutabagas
- Replacing potato chips and onion dip with raw vegetables and hummus dip

To America!

Lee begged his parents to let him go to America, and finally his father gave his blessing. He gave Lee $100. Lee traveled to Hong Kong with five other boys from his village. There, he bought a steerage ticket on a ship sailing east. Steerage was the cheapest ticket.

Many immigrants came to the United States in steerage. The journey was uncomfortable, but the tickets were cheap.

CHILDREN'S TRUE STORIES

The trip was both exciting and confusing for Lee. His grandfather had told him stories about wizards in the United States and their evil ways. Now Lee was afraid to eat their food. Finally, the ship landed in San Francisco, California. Lee found a place to live in the Chinese part of the city. There he could get a decent meal.

Lee Chew traveled nearly 11,500 kilometers (7,000 miles) from Hong Kong to San Francisco.

NUMBER CRUNCHING

In 1880 there were more than 100,000 Chinese men living in the United States, but fewer than 5,000 Chinese women. Like Lee Chew, many young men came to the United States on their own and sent money home to their families.

from “Co-chin and the Spirits”

When Shakok caught sight of Miochin, he was enraged. Shakok challenged Miochin to fight for Co-chin’s hand in marriage. Miochin agreed, for he had fallen in love with Co-chin.

The fight was fierce. Shakok’s weapons of snow, sleet, and hail were melted by Miochin’s fire. Finally, Shakok called a stop to the fight. He said, “Miochin, you are the winner. Co-chin is free to be your wife.”

Then the two spirits compromised. Each agreed to rule the land for half of the year—Shakok would rule for six months during the winter and Miochin would rule for six months during the summer. That is why it is cold for half the year and warm during the other half.

Gluskabe and Old Man Winter

Abenaki

The homeland of the Abenaki people is the area now known as northern New England, where the winters can be very cold. The Abenakis lived in small villages near the rivers, which were their highways. Their birchbark-covered homes were called wigwams and were shaped like domes or large cones. Their seasonal round of life would find them fishing at the rivers or the seashore in the spring and summer, and hunting for deer, moose, and caribou in the woods in the autumn and winter. Their fields of corn, beans, squash, and other plants were grown in the river valleys and at the edges of the big lakes. Today many Abenaki people still live in Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine, and Abenaki children still love to hear stories of Gluskabe's clever tricks.

Gluskabe and Grandmother Woodchuck's wigwam can be made of folding chairs placed back to back a few feet apart and draped with white sheets or blankets decorated to look like birchbark with ^-shaped marks cut from black construction paper. Shapes of ferns, half-moons, and stars can also be cut from construction paper and pinned to the sheets or blankets as decorations for the wigwams.

Old Man Winter's wigwam can be made by draping the same folding chairs with white sheets to look like snow.

Old Man Winter's fire made of ice can be suggested by a large ball of wax paper.

NARRATOR: Long ago Gluskabe (gloo-SKAH-bey) lived with his grandmother, Woodchuck, who was old and very wise. Gluskabe's job was to help the people.

GLUSKABE: It is very cold this winter, Grandmother.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Ni ya yo (nee yah yo), Grandson. You are right!

GLUSKABE: The snow is very deep, Grandmother.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Ni ya yo, Grandson.

GLUSKABE: It has been winter for a very long time, Grandmother.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Ni ya yo, Grandson. But look, here comes one of those human beings who are our friends.

HUMAN BEING: Kwai, kwai, nidobak (kwy kwy nee-DOH-bahk). Hello, my friends.

GLUSKABE AND GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Kwai, kwai, nidoba (kwy kwy nee-DOH-bah).

HUMAN BEING: Gluskabe, I have been sent by the other human beings to ask you for help. This winter has been too long. If it does not end soon, we will all die.

GLUSKABE: I will do what I can. I will go to the wigwam of Old Man Winter. He has stayed here too long. I will ask him to go back to his home in the Winter Land to the north.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Be careful, Gluskabe.

GLUSKABE: Don't worry, Grandmother. Winter cannot beat me.

Scene II: The Wigwam of Old Man Winter

Old Man Winter sits in his wigwam, "warming" his hands over his fire made of ice. The four balls of summer are on one side of the stage. Gluskabe enters stage carrying his bag and stands to the side of the wigwam door. He taps on the wigwam.

OLD MAN WINTER: Who is there!

GLUSKABE: It is Gluskabe.

OLD MAN WINTER: Ah, come inside and sit by my fire.

Gluskabe enters the wigwam.

Gluskabe and Old Man Winter (continued)

GLUSKABE: The people are suffering. You must go back to your home in the Winter Land.

OLD MAN WINTER: Oh, I must, eh? But tell me, do you like my fire?

GLUSKABE: I do not like your fire. Your fire is not warm. It is cold.

OLD MAN WINTER: Yes, my fire is made of ice. And so are you!

Old Man Winter throws his white sheet over Gluskabe. Gluskabe falls down. Old Man Winter stands up.

OLD MAN WINTER: No one can defeat me!

Old Man Winter pulls Gluskabe out of the lodge. Then he goes back inside and closes the door flap. The Sun comes out and shines on Gluskabe. Gluskabe sits up and looks at the Sun.

GLUSKABE: Ah, that was a good nap! But I am not going into Old Man Winter's lodge again until I talk with my grandmother.

Gluskabe begins walking across the stage toward the four balls. Grandmother Woodchuck enters.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: It is still winter, Gluskabe! Did Old Man Winter refuse to speak to you?

GLUSKABE: We spoke, but he did not listen. I will speak to him again; and I will make him listen. But tell me, Grandmother, where does the warm weather come from?

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: It is kept in the Summer Land.

GLUSKABE: I will go there and bring summer back here.

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: Grandson, the Summer Land people are strange people. Each of them has one eye. They are also greedy. They do not want to share the warm weather. It will be dangerous.

Gluskabe and Old Man Winter (continued)

GLUSKABE: Why will it be dangerous?

GRANDMOTHER WOODCHUCK: The Summer Land people keep the summer in a big pot. They dance around it. Four giant crows guard the pot full of summer. Whenever a stranger tries to steal summer, those crows fly down and pull off his head!

GLUSKABE: Grandmother, I will go to the Summer Land. I will cover up one eye and look like the people there. And I will take these four balls of sinew with me.

Gluskabe picks up the four balls, places them in his bag, and puts the bag over his shoulder.

Scene III: The Summer Land Village

The Summer Land People are dancing around the pot full of summer. They are singing a snake dance song, following their leader, who shakes a rattle in one hand. Four Crows stand guard around the pot as the people dance.

SUMMER LAND PEOPLE: Wee gai wah neh (wee guy wah ney),

Wee gai wah neh,

Wee gai wah neh, wee gai wah neh,

Wee gai wah neh, wee gai wah neh,

Wee gai wah neh.

Gluskabe enters, wearing an eye patch and carrying his bag with the balls in it.

Everyone stops dancing. They gather around Gluskabe.

LEADER OF THE SUMMER LAND PEOPLE: Who are you?

GLUSKABE: I am not a stranger. I am one of you. See, I have one eye.

SECOND SUMMER LAND PERSON: I do not remember you.

GLUSKABE: I have been gone a long time.

THIRD SUMMER LAND PERSON: He does have only one eye.

FOURTH SUMMER LAND PERSON: Let's welcome him back. Come join in our snake dance.

The singing and dancing begin again: “Wee gai wah neh,” etc. Gluskabe is at the end of the line as the dancers circle the pot full of summer. When Gluskabe is close enough, he reaches in, grabs one of the summersticks, and breaks away, running back and forth.

LEADER OF THE SUMMER LAND PEOPLE: He has taken one of our summersticks!

SECOND SUMMER LAND PERSON: Someone stop him!

THIRD SUMMER LAND PERSON: Crows, catch him!

The Crows swoop after Gluskabe. He reaches into his pouch and pulls out one of the balls. As each Crow comes up to him, he ducks his head down and holds up the ball. The Crow grabs the ball. Gluskabe keeps running, and pulls out another ball, repeating his actions until each of the Crows has grabbed a ball.

FIRST CROW: Gah-gah! I have his head.

SECOND CROW: Gah-gah! No, I have his head!

FOURTH CROW: Gah-gah! No, look—I have it too!

LEADER OF THE SUMMER LAND PEOPLE: How many heads did that stranger have?

SECOND SUMMER LAND PERSON: He has tricked us. He got away.

Scene IV: The Wigwam of Old Man Winter

Gluskabe walks up to Old Man Winter's wigwam. He holds the summerstick in his hand and taps on the door.

OLD MAN WINTER: Who is there!

GLUSKABE: It is Gluskabe.

OLD MAN WINTER: Ah, come inside and sit by my fire.

Gluskabe enters, sits down, and places the summerstick in front of Old Man Winter.

GLUSKABE: You must go back to your home in the Winter Land.

OLD MAN WINTER: Oh, I must, eh? But tell me, do you like my fire?

GLUSKABE: Your fire is no longer cold. It is getting warmer. Your wigwam is melting away. You are getting weaker.

OLD MAN WINTER: No one can defeat me!

GLUSKABE: Old Man, you are defeated. Warm weather has returned. Go back to your home in the north.

The blanket walls of Old Man Winter's wigwam collapse. Old Man Winter stands up and walks away as swiftly as he can, crouching down as if getting smaller. People carrying the cutouts of the Sun, Flowers, and Plants come out and surround Gluskabe as he sits there, smiling.

NARRATOR: So Gluskabe defeated Old Man Winter. Because he brought only one small piece of summer, winter still returns each year. But, thanks to Gluskabe, spring always comes back again.

from Hurricane by David Wiesner

“I can’t find Hannibal anywhere, Mom,” David said. “I thought he’d be home when we got back from the store.”

“I’m sure Hannibal is all right,” Mom answered. “Cats know more about storms than people do. But if it will make you feel better, why don’t you and George go look for him while I put the groceries away. Don’t go too far from the house, though. Your father will help you look as soon as he’s finished securing everything in the yard.”

“There he is!” David exclaimed. He and George peered through the gaps between the strips of tape they had put on the storm door. A thoroughly wet Hannibal peered indignantly back at them.

“Let’s get him inside before the wind blows him away,” George said.

Poem

My Man Blue

by Nikki Grimes

His leathery skin's
Like indigo ink
This rugged dude
Who some folk think
Looks fierce in clothes
Of midnight black.
Then there's his teeth:
One gold, three cracked.
And I suppose
The shades could go.
He wears them night
And day, I know.
Still, underneath
This shell, Blue hides
A harmless
Gentle-giant side.

When We First Met

by Nikki Grimes

My mom and me moved here without his help.
So why's this "Blue" guy stop us on the street?
His welcome is on Mom's account, I bet.
I circle, look him up and down and let Him know his grin's not winning points with me.
My flashing eyes warn "Do not trespass here,"
'Cause in this family I'm the only man.
He nods. He understands. So I ease up.
Mom sees me eyeing Blue and lets me know
He's her old friend. It's safe to say hello.
She says they both grew up here way back when.
I mumble, "Well, it's news to me!" But then
I throw my shoulders back and take my stance.
He seems alright. I might give him a chance.

Second Son

by Nikki Grimes

We're leaning on the stoop, see counting wedges of blue sky
Sandwiched in between the roofs and white clouds drifting by.

"Why'd you want my friendship, Blue?"
I blurt out there and then.
"I had a son named Zeke," Blue says.
"These streets became his friend.

"He needed me but by the time
I came, it was too late.
He'd passed the point of trusting his old man to steer him straight.

"Your missing daddy also left a hole in you," says Blue.
"If friendship fills it, there's less chance the streets will eat at you."

"That's cool," I say, all serious.
"But I can't take Zeke's place."
"I know," says Blue. "But your laugh sure helps conjure up his face!"

The Watcher

by Nikki Grimes

My favorite ball skipped off the curb
 And some dumb kid disguised as me
 Ran blindly after it then heard
 A tire's skid and spied a rig.
 My stubborn feet refused to fly
 But Blue reached out and grabbed my belt
 And set me on the sidewalk while
 The rig reduced my ball to dust.
 Blue took my hand and marched me home
 Then disappeared without a word.
 At times I think Blue's actually
 Some gold-toothed angel, guarding me.

from Amelia's Road

by Linda Jacobs Altman

Amelia found an old metal box that somebody had tossed into the trash. It was dented and rusty, but Amelia didn't care. That box was the answer to her problem.

She set to work at once, filling it with "Amelia-things." First she put in the hair ribbon her mother had made for her one Christmas; next came the name tag Mrs. Ramos had given her; then a photograph of her whole family taken at her last birthday; and after that the picture she'd drawn in class with the bright red star on it.

Finally, she took out a sheet of paper and drew a map of the accidental road, from the highway to the very old tree. In her best lettering, she wrote Amelia Road on the path. Then she folded the map and put it into her box.

When all the apples were finally picked, Amelia's family and the other workers had to get ready to move again. Amelia made one more trip down the accidental road, this time with her treasure box.

She dug a hole near the old tree, and gently placed the box inside and covered it over with dirt. Then she set a rock on top, so nobody would notice the freshly turned ground.

When Amelia finished, she took a step back and looked at the tree. Finally, here was a place where she belonged, a place where she could come back to.

from Peppe the Lamplighter

by Elisa Bartone

Once when Peppe got home, Papa was watching from the window. “You’ll belong to the streets!” he shouted.

Peppe sat on the stoop way past his bedtime, then cried himself to sleep when no one would hear. In the morning his shoulders drooped, just a little.

“Hey, Peppe, don’t look so sad!” Fat Mary teased, and Peppe tried not to.

But Papa stayed angry. “You’ll never amount to anything,” he grumbled.

Giulia took Peppe’s hand in hers. “Don’t worry about it,” she told him.

“Peppe, look up when you walk!” Nicolina reminded him as he left for work.

Peppe tried, but when he came home, Papa turned away. “I don’t even want to look at you, you make me so ashamed,” he said.

“You never play with me anymore, Peppe,” said Assunta.

Peppe just lowered his eyes and didn’t answer. And from then on he rushed through the lighting of the lamps, sometimes forgetting which was which.

“It’s a stupid job,” he said to himself. And he began to imagine that the people of the neighborhood laughed behind his back.

Soon he would not show his face outside the tenement . . . and one night, the streets of Little Italy were dark. “Where is Peppe the Lamplighter?” said the people to one another.

from Coming to America

by Betsy Maestro

Inspectors from the island boarded the ships at anchor to check the passengers. Wealthy passengers traveling first class were usually allowed to leave the ship right away. The inspectors looked for signs of contagious disease among the others. Those who were ill sometimes stayed aboard the ship or were sent to other islands to recover. Those who seemed healthy were taken to Ellis Island. . . .

First, the immigrants were given a quick examination by doctors. Those with health problems were marked with colored chalk. The doctors would examine these persons more closely. Some people were kept on the island for observation. After 1911, Ellis Island had its own hospital to treat the sick.

Sometimes immigrants had permanent health problems that would make it hard for them to work. This often meant that they would be sent back to their native country. But most of the new arrivals passed inspection and moved on to the next step.

Now, the immigrants were asked a long list of questions. Inspectors asked their names, where they were from, and how much money they had. Since most of the immigrants did not speak English, they needed help in understanding and answering the questions. Translators did what they could to help the inspectors and newcomers understand one another.

Even though it was difficult, most managed somehow to answer all the questions. Mothers often spoke for children who might be

from A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman

by David A. Adler

During the years between 1850 and 1860, Harriet worked as a cook, dish washer, and cleaning woman. She used much of the money she earned to make nineteen trips south to lead about three hundred slaves to freedom. Many of them were her own relatives.

Harriet took them from one safe house to the next. Sometimes she led them as far as Canada. She was a “conductor” on the Underground Railroad.

At times Harriet disguised herself as a weak old woman or as a man. She used songs as a secret code. When the runaways were hiding and it was safe to come out, she sang a joyful song, “Hail, oh hail ye happy spirits.” The runaway slaves always recognized Harriet’s deep, husky voice.

Once slaves began their journey north with Harriet, she wouldn’t let them turn back. When slaves were too scared to go on, Harriet pointed a gun at their heads and said, “You’ll go on, or you’ll die.”

Years later Harriet said proudly, “I never ran my train off the track. I never lost a passenger.”

Harriet was called “Moses” because she led her people out of slavery. There was a huge reward waiting for anyone who caught her, but no one ever did.

VIRTUAL WORLDS

COMMUNITY IN A COMPUTER

These days, you don't have to leave your home to have fun or to play with other people. Within the world of a video game, a person can kick a virtual soccer ball, defeat a virtual army, or build a virtual city. Two players from opposite sides of the world can team up, create plans, and work together.

Video games are played in two out of three households in the United States. These games have never been more popular—or controversial. Some people say video games can help players learn skills such as quick thinking and problem-solving, but there is also evidence that gaming can be harmful to players' health and other parts of their lives.

PROS

TEAMWORK AND COMMUNITY

For people who are shy, video gaming can be a way to learn how to interact with others. Massively multiplayer online games, or MMOGs, are video games that allow thousands of players around the world to play the same video game at one time. Often, each MMOG player creates a virtual character that interacts with other players' characters in the virtual world. Players work together to accomplish goals—for example, building cities or defeating an army. In order to be successful in an MMOG game, players have to spend a lot of time playing and cooperating with other players.

IMPROVED MOTOR SKILLS

There is evidence that video gaming may improve motor skills, boosting your ability to use your muscles to do things. Gaming may also improve your hand-eye coordination, or how well your eyes and hands work together. Playing video games may also help increase your speed in responding to a situation. This can help with all kinds of real-world activities. Some video game programs even simulate, or imitate, certain activities to help people practice skills they will need in their careers. Using video games called simulation programs, airplane pilots, firefighters, and police officers can all practice skills needed for their jobs. The more that people can practice these skills, the more confident and better they become using them in real life.

PROBLEM-SOLVING

In the United States, intelligence test scores are rising higher than ever before. Some researchers say that one reason could be video gaming. Virtual games present a series of problems that players must solve to succeed in the game. Like anything else that is mentally challenging, this could make people smarter. In the fast-paced modern world, where decisions often need to be made quickly, young people could be learning skills that will help them to succeed in the future.

PLAYING TO LEARN

If video games could be used in the classroom, perhaps students would be able to pay more attention to what they are learning. For example, when learning about a historical event such as a battle, students could put themselves in the place of the soldiers to understand the situation better.

A pilot using a simulation program can practice skills, such as performing an emergency landing, without getting hurt.

CONS

REAL-WORLD ISOLATION

Video game critics worry that young people who spend too much time playing video games might not learn important social skills needed to make friends and succeed in the real world. Interacting with a person in an online video game is very different from interacting with a person face-to-face. The etiquette, or how someone is expected to behave, is different within each setting. So while a person might feel confident and make friends easily within the virtual world, outside of that world he or she might feel increasingly shy and have trouble talking to people.

HEALTH RISKS

Apart from exercising the hands and wrists, video gaming isn't a physical activity. Young people who spend hours gaming each day may not get enough exercise. One study found that teens who played video games ate more food, which could lead to overeating and weight problems over time. Doctors have also found that some gamers complain of eye strain, headaches, and wrist pain. People who spend hours playing these games can develop problems such as RSI (repetitive strain injury), which occurs when a person repeats the same action over and over for hours. Additionally, some people argue that since gamers can engage in dangerous behavior—such as racing cars at fast speeds—within the game world without worrying about hurting themselves or others, they might feel encouraged to take dangerous risks in real life.

VIOLENT TENDENCIES

Critics argue that violent video games can encourage players to solve problems using violence. A 2011 study monitoring brain reaction to violent video games found that the brains of people who played violent video games were less sensitive to violence than the brains of players of nonviolent video games. Because their brains were less sensitive to violence, players of violent video games were more likely to respond to situations with aggression.

BEHIND ON THE BOOKS

Teachers worry that students who spend hours playing video games may fall behind on schoolwork. There is also a risk that using video games as learning tools would keep students from learning the importance of reading and using their imaginations. Reading helps people learn and think about information independently. Through reading, a person uses his or her imagination to understand ideas. Educational video games in classrooms might discourage students from learning how to think imaginatively.

It's easy to lose track of time during an intense video gaming session—which means that schoolwork can suffer.

School Uniforms

The Way to Go

Jackets, ties, and dress pants; knee-high socks, skirts, and blouses—in schools around the world, students prepare for the school day by putting on uniforms. Love it or hate it, the school uniform is one of the most common kinds of uniforms in the world. School uniforms make schoolchildren look neat and clean and identify them as students of a certain school.

Many students say that uniforms look boring or that they don't allow kids to express themselves with the clothes they choose to wear. On the surface, school uniforms might not seem cool, but wearing them has some big benefits.

An End to Indecision

Being decisive about what to wear to school can be challenging. Many young people worry about how they look: "Will people judge me by what I'm wearing? Is green 'in' or 'out' this season?" Wearing a uniform helps you feel more confident because everyone else at school will be wearing the same outfit. Nobody will judge you by what clothing you wear.

Because you don't need to decide what to wear, a uniform helps you to save time in the morning. There is another advantage to wearing a uniform: It will help you save money because usually you'll need to buy only one or two uniforms at the start of the year—and there's no pressure to wear costly designer labels to school.

During the 2009–2010 school year, about 19 percent of public schools required their students to wear uniforms.

Identity and Belonging

It's good to feel that you belong! A school uniform gives you a sense of identity and school pride. Some studies have shown that wearing a uniform does even more than that: it can also help you to focus on your schoolwork. It's similar to how a businessperson dresses in a suit when he or she goes to work. Dressing in more formal clothes helps you to shift from "play mode" to "work mode." After all, the main reason you go to school is to study and learn.

Teachers and parents like school uniforms for another reason. Uniforms help keep students safer by showing who does—and doesn't—belong in the school. Intruders realize they will stand out if they enter a school where the students are all in uniform, so the intruders are more likely to stay away.

Judging people by how they look is human nature, but we need to find other ways of learning about one another, too.

Self-expression

Belonging is good, but what about expressing yourself? It's true that school uniforms limit the ways you can look. However, a uniform doesn't limit who you are, the way you speak, and how you behave. In fact, it helps you to learn to express yourself in more creative ways. Knowing how to talk about your opinions, ideas, and beliefs is a great life skill, and wearing a school uniform encourages you to practice that skill.

Have you ever heard the expression "judging a book by its cover"? It means to judge something by how it looks before you've taken the time to understand it. We all judge people a little by how they look—for example, we can guess that someone with spiky blue hair likes punk music or that someone who wears red from head to toe likes to stand out. But you can't know what a person is really like if you don't get past their appearance.

School uniforms encourage us to get to know people's personalities rather than judging them only by what they wear. That's one of the most valuable things we can learn from wearing school uniforms. Who knows what friendships, conversations, and ideas we miss out on by judging people only by their clothes?

School Uniforms

No Way!

It's Monday morning—a school day—and you're thinking, "What will I wear to school today?" Well, you might consider the weather, your mood, the class party you're having that day, or the promise you made to your best friend to wear matching sweatshirts. But if you had to wear a uniform to school each day, you wouldn't be able to make wardrobe decisions. You'd have to dress like everyone else.

School uniform policies are being debated in public school districts across the United States. Supporters say that uniforms make schools safer, help prevent bullying and teasing, and even improve students' academic performance, but opponents say that school uniforms are not the way to go.

Self-expression

A common argument against school uniforms is that they limit self-expression. People often use the way they dress to express their personalities or feelings about themselves and the world. They might wear clothing that shows how they feel on a particular day, or they might dress to show how original or creative they are. What you are wearing is one of the first things people notice when they see you. Your clothes tell others something about yourself. Many feel that students would lose their freedom to express who they truly are if they had to wear a school uniform. For example, a group of students in Tennessee protested their loss of freedom by wearing patches on their uniforms that said things like "I Miss My Real Clothes."

Comfort

Students spend most of their day at school. During some of that time, they're working at a desk or table. At other times, they're sitting cross-legged on a rug with their classmates listening to a story, or they're on the playground kicking a soccer ball or shooting hoops. Whatever students are doing, it's important for them to be wearing clothing that is comfortable. If the fabric or design of a school uniform is uncomfortable, it can affect students' work and play. After all, who wants to wear a tie at recess?

Cost

Some people argue that school uniforms are less expensive than a typical school wardrobe, but that's not true for everyone. The cost of buying a set of uniforms at the start of a school year—one uniform for everyday use, another for special events, and a third for gym class—can be a hardship for families that are struggling financially.

Performance and Behavior

Many believe that if students wear school uniforms, they will perform better in class, be absent less often, and have fewer behavioral problems. While studies have been done to evaluate how school uniforms affect academic performance and student behavior, there is not enough evidence to come to a firm conclusion. One study from the University of Houston found that school uniforms improved student attendance, behavior, and learning. However, a study from the University of North Michigan found that uniforms made student behavior problems worse, not better. That same study found no proof that uniforms improved learning. A study from the University of Missouri also couldn't find any proof that uniforms helped students to learn better or that uniforms reduced behavioral problems or absences.

If students are allowed to choose the clothes they wear to school, then they can express who they are and feel comfortable, as well. Why would we want to change that?

COMPETITION FOR WORK

WHEN THERE ARE NOT enough jobs for everyone who wants them, workers have to compete for jobs. Beginning in the 1940s, migrant farm workers in the United States faced growing competition for jobs.

More migrant workers came into the United States because of the Bracero Program, which was set up by the government in 1942. Because so many men were overseas fighting in World War II, the government allowed growers to bring in extra workers (called braceros) from Mexico to plant and harvest crops. After the war ended in 1945, farm owners kept hiring braceros instead of other workers because the braceros were willing to work longer hours for less pay. The farmers wanted to spend less money paying workers so they could keep the cost of food lower and make a bigger profit.

More workers also came into the United States by crossing the border illegally. Farmers hired illegal workers for the same reason they hired braceros—because they were willing to work for much lower wages than local workers. The illegal workers didn't complain because their pay was still higher than it would have been in their home countries, and they feared deportation if they spoke out.

At the same time the number of workers was rising, jobs were disappearing. After World War II, new machines were invented to plant and harvest crops. The machines did a lot of the work that had been done before by migrant workers. More and more farmers used machinery on their farms during the 1950s and '60s. As a result, there were fewer jobs for the growing number of workers.

UNIONS AND CONTRACTS

A labor union is an organization that is formed to protect workers' rights. Members pay a small amount of money to the union, and, in return, the union takes care of them. Union staff, called organizers, draw up contracts with the employers. These contracts set out the rules of working—for example, the hours of work, pay, coffee breaks, and vacations. Union contracts also include general conditions, such as which tools and machinery can be used by the workers, and what employers must do to ensure workers' health and safety.

Employers can't fire members of a union or change their pay without talking to the union first. If there is a strike, the union pays workers or provides food and clothing for their families if they need it. If a union member has been unfairly treated at work, the union tries to find a solution with the employer. A union helps workers to stand together, which gives them more power.

CÉSAR CHÁVEZ AND DOLORES HUERTA

One man, César Chávez, was determined to help farm workers stand up for their rights. Chávez was born in Yuma, Arizona, in 1927. In the 1930s, his family moved to California, where, like other migrant worker families, they moved from place to place in search of work. Young César Chávez went to dozens of different schools and was often treated badly by teachers and other students. No matter how difficult their lives were, though, Chávez's father always stood up for his family.

In 1942, Chávez's father was badly injured in a car accident and was unable to work. To help the family, 15-year-old Chávez left school and went to work in the fields full time. During the years he spent as a farm worker, Chávez learned firsthand about the injustices the workers faced. He became more and more determined to help change the lives of farm workers for the better. In the early 1950s, he left farm work to fight for workers' rights.

In 1952, Chávez became an organizer for the Community Service Organization, a group in San Jose, California, that helped Mexican migrant workers improve their working and living conditions. The organization helped people with things like filling out forms in English, registering to vote, and enrolling their children in school. Through his work with the Community Service Organization, he got to know a woman named Dolores Huerta.

Like Chávez, Huerta was Mexican American. She was born in Dawson, New Mexico, in 1930. When she was three, she moved with her mother and two brothers to California. Her mother worked two jobs to support her children. When Huerta was 20, she began training to be a teacher. She went to work in an elementary school but left soon afterward. "I couldn't stand seeing kids come to class hungry and needing shoes," she said later. "I thought I could do more by organizing farm workers than by trying to teach their hungry children." *

After she left teaching, Huerta looked for ways to help set up health and education programs for struggling workers and their families. In 1955, she started an office of the Community Service Organization in Stockton, California. In

Excerpt from Farm Workers Unite (3)

1960, Huerta began working with a labor union called the Agricultural Workers Organizing Committee (AWOC). The union was trying to help farm workers and their families in Northern California. Huerta wasn't happy working with the AWOC because she didn't think the leaders, who had never lived the life of migrant workers, really understood the workers.

At around the same time, Chávez was beginning to realize that the best way to make a real change for farm workers was to get them to organize their own labor union. When Huerta heard Chávez's plan, she was excited and wanted to be part of it. She decided to leave the AWOC and work with him to create a new union.

A NEW UNION

Chávez and Huerta made a good team. He was quiet and shy, and she was bold and outgoing. Chávez had spent many years working in the fields, so he understood the workers. Huerta had a formal education and was a confident public speaker, so she could work well with government officials and with other union organizers. In 1962, they set up their own union, the National Farm Workers Association, in the city of Delano in California's Central Valley.

Over the next three years, Chávez and Huerta traveled around California trying to get migrant workers to join the union. At first, they struggled to find new members. Most workers didn't believe a union could make a difference in their lives. They had seen workers who joined unions lose their jobs. But Chávez and Huerta were very determined, and they got along with all kinds of people. Workers came to trust Chávez and Huerta because they were Mexican American, like the workers themselves. More and more workers joined the union.

THE GREAT DELANO GRAPE STRIKE

TO JOIN OR NOT TO JOIN

In September 1965, the National Farm Workers Association, Chávez and Huerta's union, faced its first major challenge. Filipino workers from grape vineyards in Delano went on strike. Grapes are one of the Central Valley's biggest and most important crops, and the grape harvest requires thousands of workers. That year, Filipino workers who belonged to the AWOC had their hourly wage for grape-picking lowered from $1.40 to $1.00, making their pay lower than the braceros'.

Chávez and Huerta had to decide whether their union would join the AWOC in the grape strike. There were many reasons for the National Farm Workers not to join the strike. For one thing, the AWOC was a rival union. Huerta had worked with the AWOC in the past and had been concerned that its organizers didn't really understand the workers. For another thing, Chávez and Huerta knew that the workers themselves might not want to strike in support of the AWOC. Many of them had seen growers retaliate against strikers in the past and were afraid of losing their jobs. Also, most members of the AWOC were Filipino, and Filipino and Mexican American farm workers had always lived and worked separately.

Grapes growing in vineyards in California

The strike was risky for the National Farm Workers Association because the union was vulnerable. It was new, still small, and not well-known, and it had relatively few members. The union did not have enough money to support its members during a strike. If the union went on strike and the growers were able to find other workers willing to work in those conditions, it would likely be the end of the union.

Mexican American grape pickers vote to go on strike in Delano, California.

There were also good reasons for the National Farm Workers Association to join the strike. Chávez and Huerta knew that, since grapes were such an important crop, the strike might get national attention. Therefore, being part of the strike would be a way to get more recognition, and hopefully more members, for the National Farm Workers Association. They hoped that publicity from the strike would help people all over the country learn about the struggles of farm workers.

Chávez hoped that striking would build strength and unity within the union, but more than that, he hoped it would build strength and unity among all the farm workers, not just the Filipinos or the Mexican Americans. He believed the grape strike could be more than just a strike. He wanted to turn it into a movement that would lead to big, lasting changes for all farm workers.

A week after the Filipino workers from the AWOC went on strike, Chávez called a meeting of the National Farm Workers Association so the members could vote on whether or not to join the strike. The meeting was packed, and crowds spilled onto the street. He told the workers they were taking part in a struggle for justice for all farm workers, not just Mexican American ones. He said that it must be a peaceful struggle, even if the growers used violence against the workers. Although Chávez was soft-spoken, people were inspired by his words. The meeting ended with thunderous cheers as the National Farm Workers Association voted to go on strike in support of the Filipinos and their union.

The following week, the National Farm Workers Association joined the Filipinos on the picket lines. Filipinos and Mexican Americans were working together for the first time. The strike became known as the Great Delano Grape Strike.

GATHERING SUPPORT

The farm workers' struggle became known as la causa, or the cause. It wasn't just a strike for higher wages for grape pickers. Chávez wanted to talk about all of the workers' rights and conditions

A LONG, HARD ROAD

HARD TIMES ON THE PICKET LINES

At the beginning of the strike, there were only about 200 picketers, not enough to picket the dozens of entrances to the growers' huge farms. Union organizers handled this problem by using "roving pickets"—moving the picket lines to wherever they would do the most good. When they found out a grower was hiring replacement workers, they set up a peaceful picket line wherever the replacement workers were entering the farm.

As the strike went on, there was more support for the workers, but striking and picketing were still difficult and sometimes dangerous. The growers tried to intimidate the strikers. Some farm bosses raced their pickup trucks up and down the picket lines, throwing clouds of dust onto the workers. Others harassed the picketers by yelling at them or spraying them with pesticide. The growers wanted the strikers to fight back so the police would have an excuse to arrest them.

The striking workers refused to fight back. They were committed to César Chávez's policy of nonviolence. The union held weekly meetings to help keep the workers' spirits up. Instead of responding to the growers' tactics with violence, the picketers sang songs and chanted union slogans, like "Sí, Se Puede!" Even so, many police officers sided with the growers and arrested picketers for “disturbing the peace.”

Though it was difficult, the National Farm Workers Association kept the pickets going all through that winter and into early 1966. Huerta led and organized the picketers. They were often women and children who stood all day at the vineyards while the men tried to get other kinds of work. The sense of pulling together for a shared cause and the growing support of the public helped the strikers and their families stay strong, despite the lack of money and the bullying by the growers. They continued to be inspired by Chávez’s determination and Huerta’s enthusiasm.

THE MARCH ON SACRAMENTO

Weeks went by, and the growers still refused to recognize or negotiate with the union. In response, Chávez decided to do something dramatic to draw more attention to the strike. He and his followers decided to organize a march to the state capital, Sacramento. Chávez called it a peregrinación, or pilgrimage.

The march left Delano in mid March of 1966. Hundreds of people joined the protesters as they walked the 300 miles north. TV crews followed them as they held parties and rallies in towns and villages along the way. Each time they stopped, they read out the Plan of Delano (see Appendix A, page 31).

A few days before the marchers arrived in Sacramento, one of the growers agreed to recognize the union, which meant they considered the union a legal representative of the workers. The grower, Schenley Industries, was one of the biggest in the Delano area. Dolores Huerta drew up a contract with Schenley. The company agreed to give workers a pay raise of 35 cents an hour and to use “hiring halls.”

Some of the smaller growers realized that, sooner or later, they would have to recognize the union, too. They also realized that if they paid lower wages than Schenley, there would be more strikes and boycotts, and they would lose money.

HIRING HALLS

A hiring hall is an office, usually run by a union, that matches up workers with growers and protects workers at the same time. Through the hiring hall, the union provides an employer with workers who have the right skills for a job. The union also makes sure that the employer is providing fair pay and safe working conditions.

Before the hiring halls, farm workers got jobs through labor contractors hired by the growers. Because the labor contractors made money by taking a percentage of the workers' pay, it was in their interest to get as many workers hired as possible, regardless of the workers' pay or working conditions.

On Easter Sunday, 1966, 25 days after the march had begun, the pilgrims hobbled into Sacramento. They were jubilant. Chávez had been right when he said "It can be done." The march was a victory for the union, but real and lasting change would not happen until more growers agreed to sign contracts.

THE UNITED FARM WORKERS OF AMERICA

Though the National Farm Workers Association still had a long way to go, the march to Sacramento was a turning point.

It made people all over the United States notice farm workers for the first time. Because of the strike and the march, more workers joined the union, and more of the growers signed contracts.

Chávez and Huerta each did what they were best at. Chávez spent a lot of time talking to farm workers, while Huerta negotiated the contracts for the union. She made sure that the contracts were followed, set up hiring halls, and helped hundreds of workers who had complaints against their employers.

In 1967, the National Farm Workers Association joined with the AWOOC to form a bigger, stronger union that later became known as the United Farm Workers of America.

from Flight

by Robert Burleigh

From above, all Lindbergh sees are many, many small lights.
But now he must concentrate on just one thing: “the sod coming up to meet me.”

Closer, closer, closer:

The plane touches the ground.

It bounces, rolls, hugs the solid earth.

It is 10:22, Paris time. The flight has taken thirty-three and a half hours.

Thousands of people are running toward the plane.

For a moment, Lindbergh is dazed.

It seems to him as if he were “drowning in a great sea.”

People surround the plane, cheering.

But Lindbergh can hardly hear them.

His ears seem to have been deafened by the hours of roaring engine.

Crowds pull him out of the cockpit.

Men and women are calling his name, over and over.

They carry him on their shoulders.

Others begin to tear pieces of the plane.

More than anything else, Lindbergh wants to save the Spirit of St. Louis.

His first words are a question: “Are there any mechanics here?”

But no one speaks English.

Finally, two French aviators arrive to help him.

Policemen guard the plane.

The aviators take Lindbergh away from the still-cheering crowd.

from A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart

by David A. Adler

In 1937 she planned to fly around the world. When she was told the flight was dangerous, Amelia said, “I’ve wanted to do this flight for a long time . . . If I should pop off, it will be doing the thing I’ve always wanted to do.”

On June 1, 1937, Amelia Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, began the trip. They flew from Miami, Florida, to San Juan, Puerto Rico. They flew to South America, then to Africa, India, Burma, Thailand, Singapore, Indonesia, Australia, and New Guinea. They had gone more than three fourths around the world. On July 2 they took off from Lae, New Guinea, for Howland Island, a tiny island in the vast Pacific Ocean.

They never made it.

Amelia Earhart and Fred Noonan disappeared somewhere in the Pacific Ocean. There was an enormous search, but they were never found.

Before she was lost, Amelia wrote to her husband, “I am quite aware of the hazards . . . I want to do it. Women must try to do things as men have tried. When they fail, their failures must be but a challenge to others.”

Amelia Earhart was America’s “First Lady of the Air.” She was a courageous flyer, a pioneer. She risked her life to prove that in the air, and elsewhere, women were up to the challenge. She certainly was.

Summary

of A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart

A Picture Book of Amelia Earhart, by David A. Adler, tells the life story of the famous pilot Amelia Earhart. Amelia was born in Kansas in 1897. She wasn't like other girls. She played sports, made her own roller coaster, and wore pants. Amelia wasn't interested in airplanes when she was little, but that changed when she grew up. In 1920 she went for her first airplane ride and decided she wanted to fly. In 1932 she became the first woman to fly alone across the Atlantic Ocean. Amelia tried to fly around the world in 1937, but her plane disappeared in the Pacific Ocean. She was never found. Today she is remembered for her courage and for proving that women can meet the same challenges as men.

Summary

of Flight

The book Flight, by Robert Burleigh, is the true story of how Charles Lindbergh became the first person to fly a plane solo across the Atlantic Ocean. On May 20, 1927, Lindbergh took off from an airfield in New York in a small airplane called the Spirit of St. Louis. At first, he followed the coastline for direction. When he could no longer see the coastline, he used compasses and the stars to navigate. Fog made it hard for him to see at times, and ice formed on the plane's wings. He had to fight to stay awake. Despite these obstacles, Lindbergh kept going. Finally, after more than thirty hours in the air, he landed safely in Paris. A big crowd greeted him. His flight made him the most famous man in the world.

Section 1

Twelve years later, on Thursday, December 1, 1955, Rosa Parks met James Blake again. Rosa was coming home from her work as a tailor's assistant at a Montgomery department store. She got on the Cleveland Avenue bus and took a seat in the middle section. African Americans were allowed to sit in the back and in the middle section, too, as long as no white passenger was left standing.

Section 2

At the next stop, some white passengers got on, and, because the bus was crowded, moved to the middle section, where Rosa was sitting. The driver told the four African American passengers in Rosa's row to get up. Three of them did, but not Rosa Parks. She had paid the same fare as the white passengers. She knew it was the law in Montgomery that she give up her seat, but she also knew the law was unfair. James Blake called the police, and Rosa Parks was arrested.

Beginning on December 5, to protest the arrest of Rosa Parks, African Americans in Montgomery refused to ride on public buses. They found other ways to get to work. Many walked, some as far as twelve miles.

Section 5

The bus boycott was led by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the new minister at the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church. On Monday evening, December 5, he spoke to a large crowd. He explained the reason for the boycott. “There comes a time,” he said, “that people get tired. We are here this evening to say to those who have mistreated us so long, that we are tired—tired of being segregated and humiliated, tired of being kicked about by the brutal feet of oppression.”

Section 6

The boycott lasted more than a year. During that time almost no African Americans rode a public bus in Montgomery, Alabama.

Rosa Parks, Dr. King, and many others were arrested. Homes of boycott leaders were bombed.

On November 13, 1956, the United States Supreme Court ruled that segregation on public buses was against the law. On December 21, after the court order reached Montgomery, the boycott ended. News reporters came to talk to Rosa and to photograph her sitting on a bus again.

from Rosa Parks: My Story

by Rosa Parks with Jim Haskins

When I got off from work that evening of December 1, I went to Court Square as usual to catch the Cleveland Avenue bus home. I didn't look to see who was driving when I got on, and by the time I recognized him, I had already paid my fare. It was the same driver who had put me off the bus back in 1943, twelve years earlier. He was still tall and heavy, with red, rough-looking skin. And he was still mean-looking. I didn't know if he had been on that route before—they switched the drivers around sometimes. I do know that most of the time if I saw him on a bus, I wouldn't get on it.

I saw a vacant seat in the middle section of the bus and took it. I didn't even question why there was a vacant seat even though there were quite a few people standing in the back. If I had thought about it at all, I would probably have figured maybe someone saw me get on and did not take the seat but left it vacant for me. There was a man sitting next to the window and two women across the aisle.

The next stop was the Empire Theater, and some whites got on. They filled up the white seats, and one man was left standing. The driver looked back and noticed the man standing. Then he looked back at us. He said, "Let me have those front seats," because they were the front seats of the black section. Didn't anybody move. We just sat right where we were, the four of us. Then he spoke a second time: "Y'all better make it light on yourselves and let me have those seats."

The man in the window seat next to me stood up, and I moved to let him pass by me, and then I looked across the aisle and saw that the two women were also standing. I moved over to the window seat.

Excerpt from Rosa Parks: My Story (continued)

I could not see how standing up was going to “make it light” for me. The more we gave in and complied, the worse they treated us.

I thought back to the time when I used to sit up all night and didn’t sleep, and my grandfather would have his gun right by the fireplace, or if he had his one-horse wagon going anywhere, he always had his gun in the back of the wagon. People always say that I didn’t give up my seat because I was tired, but that isn’t true. I was not tired physically, or no more tired than I usually was at the end of a working day. I was not old, although some people have an image of me as being old then. I was forty-two. No, the only tired I was, was tired of giving in.

The driver of the bus saw me still sitting there, and he asked was I going to stand up. I said, “No.” He said, “Well, I’m going to have you arrested.” Then I said, “You may do that.” These were the only words we said to each other. I didn’t even know his name, which was James Blake, until we were in court together. He got out of the bus and stayed outside for a few minutes, waiting for the police.

As I sat there, I tried not to think about what might happen. I knew that anything was possible. I could be manhandled or beaten. I could be arrested. People have asked me if it occurred to me then that I could be the test case the NAACP had been looking for. I did not think about that at all. In fact if I had let myself think too deeply about what might happen to me, I might have gotten off the bus. But I chose to remain.

Assessment Overview

The assessments that accompany the Making Meaning® Teacher’s Manual and Vocabulary Teaching Guide lessons are designed to help you (1) make informed instructional decisions as you teach the Making Meaning program, and (2) track and evaluate your students’ reading comprehension, social development, and vocabulary knowledge over time. For descriptions of these assessments, see “About Comprehension and Social Skills Assessments” on the next page and “About Vocabulary Assessments” on page xix.

As you teach the lessons in the Teacher’s Manual and the Vocabulary Teaching Guide, an assessment icon (📄) will alert you whenever an assessment is suggested. If you are using the Digital Teacher’s Set, you can tap the assessment icon to open the CCC ClassView™ assessment app.

Everything you need to conduct each assessment, including instructions and forms, can be found in this book or can be accessed through the CCC ClassView app (classview.org). Printable forms are also available on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

You may choose to record your students’ progress using forms copied from this book or printed from the CCC Learning Hub, or you may choose to enter the information electronically using the CCC ClassView app (for more information, see “CCC ClassView App” below).

CCC ClassView App

CCC ClassView is an online application that contains all of the same assessment forms and instructions that are included in this Assessment Resource Book. This tool also enables you to electronically collect, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student. When conducting the assessments, you can enter data directly into the CCC ClassView app and then generate reports on the progress of individual students and the class as a whole.

You can access the CCC ClassView app by tapping the assessment icons or links in the Digital Teacher’s Set, by going directly to the app (classview.org), or by clicking the CCC ClassView button on the grade-level program resources page on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). For more information about this assessment tool, view the “Using the CCC ClassView App” tutorial (AV41).

About Comprehension and Social Skills Assessments

The assessments that accompany the Making Meaning Teacher’s Manual include both formative and summative assessments. These assessments enable you to track and evaluate your students’ progress and needs, unit by unit and across the year.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students’ academic and social growth over time, through class observation and individual conferences. Formative assessments in the program include class assessments and IDR conferences.

The Class Assessment is designed to help you assess the performance and needs of the whole class. As you teach the lessons, a Class Assessment Note in the Teacher’s Manual will alert you when an assessment is suggested. These notes occur about once per week, during a time in the lesson when the students are demonstrating their use of the strategies they have learned to make sense of text.

During the class assessment, you have the opportunity to randomly observe students working in pairs or individually (select strong, average, and struggling readers) as you ask yourself questions that focus your observations. Each Class Assessment Note in the Teacher’s Manual has a corresponding “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA) where you can record your observations. The record sheet reiterates the suggestions from the Teacher’s Manual for how to proceed with the instruction based on your observations.

IDR conferences provide you with the opportunity to talk with individual students about their reading, identify areas of strength, and note areas in which students need more support. As you teach the lessons, an IDR Conference Note in the Teacher's Manual will alert you when a conference is suggested. Initially, your individual student conferences will focus on getting to know the students as readers and on ensuring that they are reading appropriately leveled texts (for more information, see “Student Reading Goals and Interests Survey” below). As the year progresses, the IDR conferences focus more on assessing the students’ comprehension, supporting students’ reading growth, and encouraging self-monitoring (for more information, see “Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences” on the next page).

You can document your observations and suggestions that result from each conference on an “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN). We recommend that you document at least one IDR conference per student per unit. The “IDR Conference Class Record” sheet (CR1) is provided for you to record the dates you confer with each student over the course of the year (see page 145).

You will refer to the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheets to help you evaluate each student’s comprehension development in the Individual Comprehension Assessment that occurs at the end of Units 2–8. For more information, see “Individual Comprehension Assessment” on page ix.

Invite each student to talk with you about his or her ideas and feelings about reading, reading habits, and reading interests. You might ask the student questions such as the following and record his or her responses:
Q Tell me about yourself as a reader. What do you like to read?
Q Tell me about your favorite books or authors. What do you like about them?
Q What do you like about the books we have read so far this year?
Q How do you feel about reading?
Q How do you feel when you are asked to read aloud?
Q What do you do best as a reader?
Q What are you interested in reading this year?
Q How do you want to grow as a reader this year?

Student Reading Goals and Interests Survey

The questions provided in the first “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet can be used as a beginning-of-year survey of your students’ reading goals and interests. After you have conferred with all of your students, we recommend that you review the students’ responses to the questions and look both for patterns across the class and for individual comments that stand out to you. For example, you might note authors, book series, and genres the students are interested in reading and whether the students enjoy reading. The information you gather can help you plan instruction in the coming months.

After analyzing your students’ responses, you might share with the class what you have learned about them as readers and how you plan to help them build their love of reading over the course of the year. For ideas on how to facilitate a class discussion about the survey, see the extension “Discuss the Students’ Reading Goals and Interests” on page 72 of the Teacher’s Manual.

The questions in the final IDR Conference Note of the year can serve as an end-of-year survey of your students’ perceptions of their growth as readers, a measure of their attitudes toward reading, and a summary of their goals for summer reading. After you have conferred with your students, you might share the information from the end-of-year survey with them, compare it with the information from the beginning-of-year survey, and discuss how the students’ attitudes toward reading have changed.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences In Units 2–8, you will use a unit-specific “Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences” to guide you as you confer (see pages 11–13). This resource sheet outlines a process you can use when conferring with your students about their independent reading. It includes questions you can ask to help you probe the students’ thinking about what they are reading and to assess the students’ comprehension of their texts. It also includes suggestions for supporting the students’ reading growth. Each section of the resource sheet has a corresponding section in the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN), where you can record notes and observations as you confer.

Unit 2
Using Text Features

IDR Conference Notes

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN); see page 15.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student’s thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

Unit 2
Using Text Features

IDR Conference Notes
(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the content and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

Q Based on the title, subtitle, and headings, what information might you find in this [book]?

Q What are you learning about the topic of this [book]?

Q What is one text feature on this page that adds to your understanding? What information does this feature give you?

Q Why do you think the author included [feature]?

Q What questions do you have at this point about this topic?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many minutes and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

The Social Skills Assessment enables you to assess how well each student is learning and applying the social skills taught in the program and how well each student integrates the values of responsibility, respect, fairness, caring, and helpfulness into his or her behavior. As you teach the lessons, a Social Skills Assessment Note in the Teacher's Manual will alert you when a social skills assessment is suggested. We recommend that you do this assessment three times: at the beginning, middle, and end of the year. The "Social Skills Assessment Record" sheet (SS1) allows you to track how individual students are doing with specific skills during the course of the year (see page 144).

Individual Comprehension Assessment

The Individual Comprehension Assessment is designed to help you assess the strategy use and comprehension development of individual students. It is administered once per unit in Units 2–8. The "Individual Comprehension Assessment" record sheet (IA) consists of two sections—Part A: Strategy Assessment and Part B: IDR Assessment—and reflection questions to help guide your assessment of each student's growth.

Part A: Strategy Assessment The Strategy Assessment section helps you analyze each student's independent strategy work on four activities completed during the unit. The four activities include two student response activities (usually focusing on strategy work with a read-aloud text) and two reading journal activities (asking the students to apply the unit's strategy work to their independent reading). Teacher Notes in the Teacher's Manual identify which activities will be assessed in that unit's Individual Comprehension Assessment. Examples of a student response activity, a journal entry, and an annotated Strategy Assessment rubric are provided for each unit as models to help you score your students' work using the rubric.

Part B: IDR Assessment The IDR Assessment section helps you assess each student's comprehension using a rubric that identifies various behaviors the students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. During the assessment, you will review the information you have collected on the student's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheets and think about the student's participation during class discussions and IDR. To complete the assessment, you will use the information to determine whether the student shows evidence of actively engaging with and making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student's reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student's attitude toward reading. This assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Analyzing the information in the IDR Assessment rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading and will help you evaluate the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify areas in which you can focus your instruction to support the student’s reading growth (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies). For information about supporting your students’ reading growth, see “Reading Development” on page xiii.

Examples of an annotated “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and an annotated IDR Assessment rubric are provided for each unit as models to help you analyze your students’ reading comprehension using the rubric.

Reflection The Reflection section of the IDR Assessment provides questions that help you reflect on the instructional support you provided to the student during the unit, the student’s ability to read and comprehend text, and what you would like to focus on during the next unit’s IDR conferences. Space is provided for recording observations and suggestions for future instruction.

The information from the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” and “IDR Conference Notes” record sheets constitutes a record of each student’s development over the unit. If you wish to use the Individual Comprehension Assessment as a basis for assigning a grade, the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet includes instructions for calculating an overall unit score. We recommend that progress in the Making Meaning program be determined by an increase in scores over time, rather than by each unit’s score. The assumption is that each student is growing into a strong reader at his or her own pace.

You can use the “Individual Comprehension Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR2) to create a cumulative record of each student’s scores on the assessment during the year. Space is provided on the record sheet for you to write comments about the student’s performance and suggestions for additional support. You can use the “Individual Comprehension Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR2) to record and track your students’ progress as a class.

To learn more about using the Individual Comprehension Assessment, view “Using the Individual Comprehension Assessment” (AV31).

In addition to the Individual Comprehension Assessment, you may wish to use other informal and formal tools to assess your students' comprehension of text (for example, running records and benchmark assessments). Regardless of which assessment tool(s) you use, it is important to monitor and record the students' progress across the year. The "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheet (SR1) can be used to record individual students' reading assessment data. You might wish to use the information recorded to discuss your students' reading growth with their families, to inform your instruction, and to help support individual students in their growth as readers.

Overview of Grade 4 Assessments

The table below provides an overview of the comprehension and social skills assessments in grade 4 of the Making Meaning program. The squares indicate the units in which a particular assessment can be found.

Individual Assessment Folders

We recommend that you create a folder for each student in which to store the "Individual Comprehension Assessment" and "IDR Conference Notes" record sheets. You may also want to make copies of each student's assessed student response activities and reading journal entries and file these in the student's assessment folder. Periodically, you can use the materials in the folder to discuss the student's progress with the student, as well as with parents and other adults in the school. The folders can travel to the next grade with the students.

Reading Development

Young students learn to read by being read to, by acquiring letter–sound and sight–word knowledge, and by exploring text—lots of text. They love to reread their favorite books and engage in rhyming activities, and it is through these and other activities that they begin to understand that print carries meaning. Young students read books in a variety of ways, such as by retelling familiar stories in their own words and by telling stories as they refer to the pictures. As the students’ knowledge of letter–sound correspondence develops and they grow a sight–word base, they begin to read the words on the page. With much practice, their reading starts to become more automatic. They focus less on decoding individual words and more on the meaning of the text.

The “Stages of Reading Development” chart starting on the next page shows the stages through which students commonly progress on their way to becoming independent and critical readers. Note that because reading development is a continuum, students may display behaviors from multiple stages at any given time as they encounter new and more complex texts. For each stage, the chart gives approximate Guided Reading Levels and lists behaviors students may display at each stage of development. The chart also lists ways you can support students at each stage.

Some of the characteristics identified in the chart appear at multiple stages (for example, “understands that print carries a message,” “reads with expression,” and “recognizes letters and letter–sound relationships”). This ongoing development of skills is to be expected as students begin to make connections between the spoken and written word and the many nuances of the English language.

You might use the information in the “Stages of Reading Development” chart in conjunction with the information you gather from the Individual Comprehension Assessment to discuss your students’ reading growth with their families, to inform your instruction, and to help support individual students as they become independent readers. Keep in mind that each student will progress through these stages at his or her own pace.

Stage 3

Early Reader

Approximate Guided Reading Levels

- B-J/K

Characteristics

- May still rely on pictures to gather information about a story's meaning
- Points to words only when a problem is encountered
- Is continuing to develop his or her sight-word vocabulary
- Is beginning to notice errors and attempts to correct them
- Is beginning to use more than one strategy to problem-solve unknown words (e.g., decoding, using context clues and/or picture clues, rereading)
- Is beginning to attend to punctuation and use expression while reading familiar texts
- Is beginning to self-monitor reading (e.g., asking questions to check for understanding during reading, predicting what will happen, summarizing what was read)

Support

- Read and reread books from a variety of genres.
- Ask the student questions about stories before, during, and after reading.
- Talk about stories and pictures in the stories.
- Work on phonics and phonological awareness.
- Listen to the student read books that he or she can read successfully.
- Encourage the student to read familiar texts with expression.
- Help the student locate words that he or she knows.
- Expand vocabulary by talking about words before reading the text.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently or with peers.
- Encourage the student to write every day (independently or through dictation).
- Encourage parents or other family members to read aloud to the student every day.

Approximate Guided Reading Levels

- J/K–M/N

Characteristics

- Relies less on pictures to gather information about a story's meaning and more on the text
- Uses more than one strategy to problem-solve unknown words (e.g., decoding, analyzing word parts, using context clues and/or picture clues, rereading)
- Consistently notices and then self-corrects errors
- Is continuing to expand vocabulary, which allows him or her to focus more on meaning
- Attends to punctuation and reads familiar text with phrasing and expression
- Begins to engage in silent reading
- Consistently self-monitors reading (e.g., asking questions to check for understanding during reading, predicting what will happen, summarizing what was read)

Support

- Encourage the student to choose books that he or she can read successfully.
- Encourage the student to read silently for longer periods of time.
- Engage the student in conversations about what he or she has read.
- Work with the student on deciphering longer words by analyzing word parts.
- Work on developing fluency.
- Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
- Provide the student with time every day to read self-selected texts independently.
- Encourage the student to write every day.
- Encourage parents or other family members to read aloud to the student every day and engage in discussion as they read.

About Vocabulary Assessments

The assessments that accompany the Vocabulary Teaching Guide lessons help you evaluate your students' knowledge of the words they are learning and track your students' progress throughout the year. In grade 4, both formative and summative assessments are included.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students' vocabulary growth through class observation and support you in differentiating instruction, as necessary.

Class Vocabulary Assessment

Week 2 Vocabulary		Class Vocabulary Assessment Record - CA1
Observe the students and ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
• Do the students' responses show that they understand what the words mean?
biome effective get-up-and-go ineffective
sag
• Do the students have difficulty explaining their thinking when responding to the questions? (Note the words with which they have difficulty.)
• Do they enjoy learning and using new words?
Other observations:
Suggestions Use the following suggestions to support struggling students: • If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model. • If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write stories in which they use the word.

The Class Vocabulary Assessment is designed to help you evaluate the performance and needs of the whole class. This assessment occurs every two weeks, beginning in Week 2, during the ongoing review activity. A Class Vocabulary Assessment Note in the Vocabulary Teaching Guide will alert you when an assessment is suggested. During the assessment, you will have the opportunity to observe the students and ask yourself questions about their understanding of the words, as well as note their use of words outside of vocabulary time and their enthusiasm for learning words. Each Class Vocabulary Assessment Note has a corresponding “Class Vocabulary Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on which you can record your observations. The record sheet includes the questions from the assessment note and provides suggestions for students who are struggling with words.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Summative assessments enable you to evaluate and score each student’s knowledge of the words taught during the vocabulary lessons.

Individual Vocabulary Assessment

© Center for the Collaborative Classroom

The Individual Vocabulary Assessment is designed to help you assess individual students’ knowledge of the words. This assessment occurs after weeks 4, 8, 12, 16, 20, 24, 28, and 30 and focuses on words taught during the previous four weeks (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). An Individual Vocabulary Assessment Note in the Vocabulary Teaching Guide will alert you when the assessment is suggested.

The Individual Vocabulary Assessment is a multiple-choice assessment that uses activity formats such as “Which Word Am I?” and “I’m Thinking of a Word” that are familiar to the students from the weekly lessons.

Each assessment includes a teacher instruction sheet and an answer key. The students record their answers on the corresponding “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check” answer sheet (IA1). We recommend that you discuss each item with the students after they have completed the assessment. Suggested follow-up questions that require the students to explain their thinking are provided on each instruction sheet. The instruction sheet also includes suggestions for scoring and assigning grades to the assessment.

You can use the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheet (SR1) to create a cumulative record of each student’s scores on the assessment throughout the year. Space is provided on the record sheet for you to write comments about the student’s performance and suggestions for additional support. You can use the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1) to record and track your students’ progress as a class.

To learn more about using the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, view “Using the Individual Vocabulary Assessment” (AV51).

Student Self-assessment

The Student Self-assessment empowers the students to become partners in their own assessment by giving them the opportunity to evaluate their understanding of the words they are learning. The assessment can also be used to identify which words the students need to practice and review further. We recommend that the Student Self-assessment be administered in place of or in addition to the Individual Vocabulary Assessment, with the students assessing their knowledge of a set of words you select. A Student Self-assessment Note during Ongoing Review will alert you when the assessment is recommended.

The Student Self-assessment includes a “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1), on which the students record whether they know what a word means (“yes”), whether they think they know what a word means (“maybe”), or whether they do not know what a word means or cannot remember (“no”). The assessment also includes instructions for preparing and conducting the assessment, as well as suggestions for how to use the results to help students identify which words they are struggling with and to support the students in reviewing those words.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2); see page 15.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student’s thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

TEKS 4.A.ii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 2 (all, including record sheet on page 15)

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Based on the [title, subtitle, and headings], what information might you find in this [book]?
- Q What are you learning about the topic of this [book]?
- Q What is one text feature on this page that adds to your understanding? What information does this feature give you?
- Q Why do you think the author included [captions]?
- Q What questions do you have at this point about this topic?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Unit 2

Using Text Features

Student's name: _____ Date: _____

Invite each student to talk with you about his or her ideas and feelings about reading, reading habits, and reading interests. You might ask the student questions such as the following and record his or her responses:

Q Tell me about yourself as a reader. What do you like to read?

Q Tell me about your favorite books or authors. What do you like about them?

Q What do you like about the books we have read so far this year?

Q How do you feel about reading?

Q How do you feel when you are asked to read aloud?

Q What do you do best as a reader?

Q What are you interested in reading this year?

Q How do you want to grow as a reader this year?

Other observations:

Student's name: _____ Date: _____

1 Initiate the Conference

Ask: What is your [book] about so far?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

TEKS 4.A.ii
Student/Teacher
Activity
Step 2

Does the student:

YES

- Attend to meaning?
- Read fluently?
- Pause and reread if having difficulty?
- Read most words accurately?
- Try to make sense of unfamiliar language?

Ask: What is the part you just read about?

YES

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

3 Discuss the Text

Ask comprehension questions.

YES

- Is the student comprehending the text?

4 Discuss Text Level

Ask: Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

YES

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 22–24. If you would like to record your assessment data electronically, go to classview.org to learn how you can access the Making Meaning assessments using the CCC ClassView app.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Think, Pair, Write About Text Features” on page 3
- “Five Things I Learned from the Text Features in the Excerpt” on page 14

TEKS 9.D.iii
TEKS 9.D.iv
Student/Teacher Activity
Student Response activity #2,
“Five Things I Learned....”

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal about the text you are reading. Include the title of your text and the author's name. Explain what the text is about and what you learned in the part of the text you read today. Also list one text feature you found and describe what the text feature helped you learn.
- Prompt: *Write a journal about the text you are reading. Include the title of your text and the author's name. Student/Teacher
Journal
Activities (both)

- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet, along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
- ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet (CN2) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

“Five Things I Learned from the Text Features in the Excerpt”

Five Things I Learned Name: Owen from the Text Features in the Excerpt

What information can you find in the text features in the excerpt on pages 12-13? Write the things you found out.

The picture shows people sleeping on the deck of the boat.

The caption says that tickets in steerage were cheap.

The map shows that Chinese immigrants crossed the Pacific Ocean to get to America.

I found out that it is more than 6,000 miles from Hong Kong to San Francisco.

I learned that more Chinese men came to America than Chinese women.

Reading journal entry 1

Reading Journal

Name: Owen Date: 9/17

I am reading Days of the Knights: A Tale of Castles and Battles by Christopher Maynard. This book tells about what it was like to live in a castle. On the side of each page, there are words in bold print. Each word has a picture and caption. The caption is the definition of the word. I learned what a bombard looked like. I also learned that it was used to fire stone cannonballs at castle walls.

Commentary: Owen’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is able to use text features to help him better understand a text. He was able to name several text features from the excerpted text (picture, caption, map) in the Student Response Book and explain what he learned from each feature. He was also able to use the map key to estimate the distance between Hong Kong and San Francisco. Owen’s journal entry includes a brief sentence that explains what the book is about and described a text feature found in the book (bolded words with pictures and captions). He ended his entry by explaining what he learned from the text feature.

Part B score (sum of 4 subtotals /10): 3.7

Commentary: Analysis of Owen’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he is able to understand text almost all of the time. He is using strategies such as rereading and using the text features (bolded words, pictures, and captions) to help him determine the meanings of unfamiliar words. He was able to tell about his book and answer comprehension questions about it. This book was challenging for Owen because of the content vocabulary, but because he used strategies to help him understand the meaning of unfamiliar words, his comprehension was not affected.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Do they refer to the texts when discussing their “I wonder” statements?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are generating and using “I wonder” statements to think about their texts, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Week 2.
- If about half of the students are generating and using “I wonder” statements to think about their texts, continue on to Week 2 and plan to monitor students who are having difficulty. Since this is the first of three weeks of questioning, the students may need more experience with, and modeling of, questioning to become comfortable with it.
- If only a few students are generating and using “I wonder” statements to think about their texts, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative book before continuing on to Week 2. Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Grade 4 Alternative Texts” list.

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
▪ Are the students able to ask questions?
▪ Are their questions relevant to the reading?
▪ Are they referring to the reading to determine whether their questions have been discussed?
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are asking relevant questions and referring to the text to determine whether their questions have been discussed, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Week 3.
- If about half of the students are asking relevant questions and referring to the text to determine whether their questions have been discussed, continue on to Week 3. Plan to monitor the students who are having difficulty with the strategy during IDR. You might have them read short passages from their books aloud to you and think of one or two questions they could ask at that point in the reading. Then have them continue reading for a while, and check in with them to see whether their questions were discussed.
- If only a few students are asking relevant questions and referring to the text to determine whether their questions have been discussed, you might want give the class additional instruction by repeating this week’s lessons using an alternative book before continuing on to Week 3. Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Grade 4 Alternative Texts” list.

Ask yourself:	All or most students	About half of the students	Only a few students
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are the students referring to the text to talk about their questions?</li> </ul>
Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students are referring to the text to talk about their questions, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Day 4.
- If about half of the students or only a few students are referring to the text to talk about their questions, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative book before continuing on to Day 4. Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Grade 4 Alternative Texts” list. Be aware that students will have more opportunities to practice “Stop and Ask Questions” in the coming units.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 33.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Based on the [title, subtitle, and headings], what information might you find in this book?
- Q What are you learning about the topic of this [book]?
- Q What is one text feature on this page that adds to your understanding? What information does this feature give you?
- Q What questions did you ask yourself before reading the book?
- Q What questions do you have at this point about this topic?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart, and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 40–42.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “‘I Wonder’ Statements” on page 17
- “Stop and Ask Questions About Slinky Scaly Slithery Snakes (2)” on page 19

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, what you wondered about your text, and what you learned about the topic.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, one question you wrote on a self-stick note, and what you found out about that question in your reading. If the reading didn't discuss your question, write about something you learned.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Commentary: Jolene’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to use questioning to help her better understand a text almost all of the time. She was able to write questions that were pertinent to the reading at each stop of a text read aloud. Jolene’s journal entry includes a sentence that explains what the book is about (dogs). She also wrote a question she had about the text before reading it (how did there get to be different breeds of dogs?). She didn’t find the answer to her question in the pages of the book she read, so she explained what she learned from reading the text (dogs have five senses just like people).

Commentary: Analysis of Jolene’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet along with observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that she is able to understand text almost all of the time. She is using strategies such as rereading and asking herself questions when she doesn’t understand what she read (asked about the meaning of domestic and subspecies). She is also noticing when she makes an error when reading aloud (skipped the word distance but stopped and reread the sentence). Jolene is also using other strategies such as sounding out words by breaking them into syllables and smaller words (shelter, mastiffs, shepherding) to help her read unfamiliar words. She was able to tell about her book and answer comprehension questions about it. This book is challenging for Jolene due to some content-specific vocabulary, but because she is familiar with the topic, she can decipher most unknown words. Because she has to sound out some of the words, her reading is not as fluent as it usually is. Jolene should continue reading this book and others like it.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 53.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Who are the characters in the story? Tell me about them.
- Q What is the setting of the story? Where does the story take place?
- Q Who is telling the story? What in the story makes you think so?
- Q In a few sentences, what is the plot of the story? What happens in the story?
- Q What is a conflict or problem in your story? How is the conflict ended or the problem solved?
- Q Do any of the characters change in your story? What makes you think so?
- Q What lesson or message do you think the author wants the reader to think about?
- Q What questions do you have about your book so far?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (cccllearninghub.org) or from pages 60–62.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Stop and Ask Questions about Teammates” on page 21
- “Story Elements in Gluskabe and Old Man Winter” on page 38

TEKS 8.A.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Student Response activity (second activity)

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the book you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the story is about, and what you learned about a conflict or problem a character is facing or a change in a character. If you didn't learn about a conflict or problem or a character change, write something else you learned about a character.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the book you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, a sentence describing the story, and one or two sentences describing something you learned about the setting, the plot, a conflict or problem in the story, or a theme of the story.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

TEKS 8.B.i
Student/Teacher Activity

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Commentary: Rodrigo's Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is able to analyze text structure to help him better understand a text almost all or much of the time. He was able to identify story elements (character, setting, plot, conflict or problem, and theme) in a play that was read aloud. Rodrigo's journal entry includes a sentence that explains what the story he is reading is about (a boy named Nick who likes to play jokes). Rodrigo included a sentence about a conflict he learned about in his book between Nick and his teacher, Mrs. Granger, but did not include any details about what the conflict is.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 71.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Who is one of the main characters in your [story]? What are you finding out about that character?
- Q What is the [plot/setting] of your [story]?
- Q What is a question you have about this [poem]?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [Arthur] from this part of the [story]? What clues helped you make that inference?
- Q What did you see in your mind as you read the [poem]? What sounds did you imagine? What feelings did you imagine as part of your mental picture?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 78–80.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Double-entry Journal About _____” on page 45
- “Double-entry Journal About _____” on page 48

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the story you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the story is about, one thing you know based on the part you read today, whether that is stated directly or indirectly in the text, and, if indirectly, what clue or clues helped you infer it.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, an inference you made as you were reading, and the clue or clues that helped you make the inference. If you didn't make an inference, write about a question you had as you read and whether your question was answered.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Commentary: Alena’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to make inferences about a text read independently almost all of the time. She was able to identify a line from her book from which she made an inference. She was also able to explain the inference that she made. Alena’s journal entry includes a brief description of what her book is about so far (a girl named Tate and a stray dog). She wrote that she learned the main character would like to keep the dog, but it is unclear if that information is stated directly in the text or if she figured that out by making an inference.

She is reading fluently and using punctuation to read expressively. She asked for help in defining a few colloquialisms (“served up a lecture” and “break her of stealing”) and was able to figure out the meanings from the context of the passage. She was able to tell what the book is about and describe what she visualized as she read the book. This book is at the right level for Alena.

Other observations:

Suggestions:

- If all or most students or about half of the students are able to make inferences, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Independent Strategy Practice on Day 4. Plan to monitor students who are having difficulty during independent reading by asking them questions such as:
  - Q What is one thing you know based on what you read today?
  - Q Does the book tell you that directly, or did you figure it out from clues? What clues?
- If only a few students are able to make inferences, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating Days 1, 2, and 3 of this week using an alternative text before continuing on to Day 4. Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to view the “Grade 4 Alternative Texts” list.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 89.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q Who is one of the main characters in your [story]? What are you finding out about that character?
- Q What is the [plot/setting] of your [story]?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [Arthur] from this part of the [story]? What clues helped you make that inference?
- Q What did you see in your mind as you read this part of the [story]? What sounds did you imagine? What feelings did you imagine as part of your mental picture?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [earthquakes] from this part of the [book]? What clues helped you make that inference?
- Q Why do you think the author says that [zoos are helping to save many animal species]? What clues support that statement?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 96–98.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Double-entry Journal About Peppe the Lamplighter” on page 51
- “Double-entry Journal About A Picture Book of Harriet Tubman” on page 55

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the story you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what is happening in the part of the story you read today, what you learned about a character, whether that is stated directly or indirectly in the text, and, if indirectly, what clue or clues helped you infer it.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the title and the author's name, what the text is about, a why question you had about the text, whether your question is answered, and, if it is, how it is answered.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

(continues)

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

The book I am reading is The Gold Cadillac by Mildred D. Taylor. In the part I read today, the dad bought a new gold Cadillac. Everyone in the family is excited about it but the mom. I learned that the dad likes to impress people with his car. I inferred that he likes to impress people because in the book it says that the dad “stood proudly by, pointing out the various features” while the people in the neighborhood were looking at the car. I think that he likes showing off his car to his neighbors.

Commentary: Joshua's Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is able to make inferences about texts heard read aloud and texts read independently almost all of the time. Joshua was able to identify part of an excerpt from which he learned something about the character Peppe and then explain what he inferred about the character from that part. Joshua's journal entry includes a brief description of the part of the text he read and something he learned about a character in the story (the father). He explained that he inferred what he learned about the father (that he likes to impress people with his car) and included an example from the text that helped him make his inference (the father "stood proudly by, pointing out the various features" while people looked at the car).

Commentary: Analysis of Joshua’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he is able to understand text almost all of the time. He is reading fluently and reading most words accurately. He asked for help in defining a few unfamiliar words (caravan and evident) but was able to figure out the meaning of the phrase “just outright stopped” using context clues from earlier in the passage. He was able to answer comprehension questions about the book and make inferences about the characters in the passage he read aloud (for example, he inferred that the mom and dad walk to dinner because she doesn’t want to ride in the car and that the mom thinks the car is a waste of money). This book is at the right level for Joshua.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 107.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What have you learned about [mountain climbing] so far?
- Q What questions do you have, or what do you wonder, about [Mt. Fuji/this set of instructions]?
- Q How does this [caption] help you make sense of the text?
- Q What did you visualize, or see in your mind, as you read about [butterflies]? How did visualizing help you make sense of the text?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [Tyrannosaurus rex] from this part of the [book]? What clues helped you make that inference?
- Q Did the author of this [article] convince you that [animal testing is wrong]? Why or why not?
- Q What makes this [TV channel guide] easy to use and understand?
- Q How is this [chapter] organized to help readers learn information?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Next steps:

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 114–116.

- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “School Uniforms: No Way!” on pages 60–61
- “Double-entry Journal About Farm Workers Unite” on page 81

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the text you are reading. Include the kind of text you are reading (functional or expository nonfiction), what the text is about or the purpose of the text, and what you notice about how the text is organized or how text features are used to help readers learn information.
- Prompt: Write a journal entry about the section you are reading. Include the title of the section and what the part you read today is about. Also include whether you notice a sequence of events (and, if so, the time frame in which the events happened) or a compare/contrast relationship (and, if so, what is being compared).

(second prompt)

- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
- ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit’s instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student’s most recent “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and think about the student’s participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student’s average performance across categories based on this rubric’s 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student’s strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school’s or district’s grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student’s work in the folder.

Reading Journal

Name: Mayumi Date: 4/1

The book I am reading is an expository nonfiction book called Soccer Skills by Clive Gifford. This book tells everything you need to know about how to play soccer. It tells about soccer skills, positions, and rules. The text is organized into four sections and each section has chapters in it. It also has illustrations with captions that help explain certain things. Some illustrations show what certain stretches look like and others show what it looks like when a ball is in play or out of play.

Commentary: Mayumi’s Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that she is able to analyze text structure in texts she hears read aloud and texts she reads independently. She was able to write about and find an example of information organized in a sequence and an example of a compare/contrast relationship in the excerpt from Farm Workers Unite. She was also able to write about how the text Soccer Skills is organized (in sections with chapters) as well as provide examples of text features found in the text (illustrations and captions) and what she learned from them (what certain stretches look like; what it looks like when a ball is in play or out of play).

Commentary: Analysis of Mayumi’s “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet and observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that she comprehends text almost all of the time. She uses text features such as illustrations, captions, and text boxes to better understand the text. She is able to explain what the text is about (“everything people need to know if they want to learn how to play soccer”) and what she learned from the section of the text she read aloud (“the instep pass, and ways you can practice it”). This book is at an appropriate level for Mayumi. She might benefit from reading another book about the same topic and comparing how the texts are written and organized.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student’s reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student’s attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

- If about half of the students are able to identify and distinguish between important ideas and supporting details, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Week 2. Closely observe students who are having difficulty identifying and distinguishing between the two. Many students will need repeated experiences to learn this complex skill.
- If only a few students are able to identify and distinguish between important ideas and supporting details, you might give the class additional instruction by repeating this week's lessons using an alternative book before continuing on to Week 2. - If about half of the students or only a few students are able to identify important ideas in each section and summarize the information in a few sentences, bring the class together and summarize the remaining sections of the excerpt together, as you did in Steps 2 and 3 of today’s lesson. - If about half of the students are writing summaries that successfully communicate what their books are about, collect the unsuccessful summaries, read them, and give feedback to the students. Have the students write second drafts based on your feedback. After that, proceed with the lesson and continue on to Unit 9.
- If only a few students are writing summaries that successfully communicate what their texts are about, do the extension "Analyze the Students' Summaries" on page 599 of the Teacher's Manual. If you have already done the extension once with the students' summaries of "Excerpt from A Picture Book of Rosa Parks," do it again using photocopies of the students' book summaries from Week 5. Make sure to copy the students' summaries without their names. After analyzing the summaries in the extension activity, have the students select another book to summarize, and give the class additional instruction by repeating this week's lessons before continuing on to Unit 9.

Resource Sheet for IDR Conferences

Confer with each student about his or her reading. Refer to this resource sheet to help guide your questioning during the IDR conference. Record your observations on this unit's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 127.

1 Initiate the Conference

Briefly look over the text the student is reading to familiarize yourself with it. Begin the conference by asking the student to tell you about the text. Ask:

Q What is your [book] about so far?

If necessary, ask questions like those that follow to probe the student's thinking:

Q Why did you choose this [book]?

Q Do you like this [book]? Why or why not?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the text is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 1 on the record sheet. Even if the student has difficulty telling what the text is about, proceed to Step 2.

2 Listen to the Student Read Aloud

Have the student read aloud a few pages from where he or she currently is in the text. Indicate whether the student exhibits the behaviors listed in Step 2 on the record sheet. After the student reads, ask and discuss:

Q What is the part you just read about?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to tell what the passage is about?

Record your observations in the "Notes" column next to Step 2 on the record sheet. If the student is able to tell what the passage is about, proceed to Step 3.

If the student has difficulty, repeat Step 2, this time having the student reread the passage silently. If the student continues to struggle after the second reading, skip Step 3 and go on to Step 4.

(continues)

3 Discuss the Text

Notice where the student is in the text and ask the student comprehension questions related to the context and to the text’s genre. You might ask questions such as:

- Q What have you learned about [segregation] so far?
- Q What questions do you have, or what do you wonder about [the history of football]?
- Q How does this [caption] help you make sense of the text?
- Q What did you visualize, or see in your mind, as you read about [life in the tropical rain forest]? How did visualizing help you make sense of the text?
- Q What did you infer, or figure out, about [Betsy Ross] from this part of the [book]? What clues helped you make that inference?
- Q How is this [chapter] organized to help readers learn information?
- Q What is an important idea in this part of the story? Why do you think that information is important?
- Q What is a supporting detail in this part of the story? What important idea does it support, or give more information about?
- Q If you were to tell someone in a few sentences what this [story] is about, what would you say?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student comprehending the text?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 3 on the record sheet, and then proceed to Step 4.

4 Discuss Text Level

Have the student evaluate the level of the text by asking:

- Q Do you think this [book] is at the right level for you—not too difficult and not too easy? Why do you say that?

Ask yourself:

- Is the student able to determine whether he or she comprehends the text?
- Is this text at the right level for this student?

Record your observations in the “Notes” column next to Step 4 on the record sheet, and then note ways you might support the student’s reading growth in “Next steps.”

SUGGESTIONS FOR SUPPORTING READERS

- If a student is reading a text that is not at the right level (there are many miscues and a lack of fluency and comprehension), you might help the student find a more appropriate text (perhaps by selecting two or three titles at the correct level from which he or she may choose) and plan to confer with the student again in the next day or two.
- If a student reads a passage fluently but is struggling to comprehend it, you might intervene using one or more of the following suggestions:
  - Define unfamiliar vocabulary words.
  - Provide necessary background knowledge.
  - Suggest an appropriate strategy on the “Reading Comprehension Strategies” chart and have the student reread the text, applying the strategy.
  - Ask clarifying questions about the text.
  - Help the student find a more appropriate text.
- If a student comprehends a passage but does not read it fluently, you might intervene using one or both of the following suggestions (depending on the student’s needs):
  - Provide opportunities for the student to practice reading fluently. For support with developing fluency, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 4, “Reading with Expression,” and IDR Mini-lesson 5, “Reading in Meaningful Phrases.” The mini-lessons can be found in Appendix A of the Teacher’s Manual.
  - Provide the student with strategies to use when he or she has difficulty reading unfamiliar words. For support with teaching word-analysis skills, you might teach IDR Mini-lesson 6, “Using Word-analysis Strategies” (see Appendix A in the Teacher’s Manual).
- If a student is reading a text that is at the right level, you might have the student continue to read texts at this level or help the student select texts at a slightly higher level.
- For more information about supporting students’ reading development, see “Reading Development” in the Assessment Overview.

Completing the Individual Comprehension Assessment

Before continuing on to the next unit, take this opportunity to assess the students' comprehension of texts read independently and their use of comprehension strategies. The Individual Comprehension Assessment consists of two parts. The strategy assessment (Part A) helps you assess whether a student is able to use a strategy when prompted to in a lesson. The IDR assessment (Part B) helps you assess a student's overall comprehension of self-selected texts read during IDR.

Be aware that a student may or may not use any particular strategy to make sense of his or her independent reading. The goal over time is for the students to be able to use appropriate strategies as needed to help them make sense of the texts they read independently.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from pages 134–136.
- ✓ Collect the students' Student Response Books. In Part A of the assessment, you will review and consider the following student work:

Student response activities

- “Excerpt from A Picture Book of Rosa Parks” (Sections 5 and 6) on pages 90–91
- “Summary of _____” on pages 94–95

Reading journal entries

- Prompt: Write a journal entry. Include the title and author's name, what the book is about, an important idea you marked in your reading and why you think it is important, and a supporting detail you marked and why you think it is a supporting detail.
  - Prompt: Write a journal entry. Include the title and author's name and a summary of the part of the book you read today.
- ✓ Locate the “IDR Conference Notes” record sheet(s) you completed for each student during this unit. In Part B, you will use the record sheet(s), along with any other observations you have made of the student during Making Meaning lessons and IDR, to assess the student's overall comprehension during IDR conferences.
  - ✓ Review Parts A and B on the “Individual Comprehension Assessment” record sheet (IA1) to help you prepare to score each student's Student Response Book work and evaluate his or her reading comprehension.

(continues)

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

For each student:

1. Part A: Read the student response activities and the reading journal entries from the unit. For each piece of work, consider whether evidence of the unit's instruction is demonstrated almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. In the Part A rubric, circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each piece of student work.
2. Part B: Review the student's most recent "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet(s) and think about the student's participation during class discussions and IDR. Consider whether the conference notes and your other observations show evidence that the student is actively engaging with and is making sense of text almost all of the time, much of the time, some of the time, or almost none of the time. Circle 4, 3, 2, or 1 to indicate your assessment of each item in the Part B rubric.
3. Calculate the scores for Part A and Part B, add the scores together, and then divide the sum by 2 to determine the overall unit score. Note that if you follow this formula, the overall unit score will reflect the student's average performance across categories based on this rubric's 4-point scale. Also note that the overall unit score will be based equally on the student's strategy work (Part A) and on the IDR assessment (Part B). You might wish to weight the scores differently, assign a percentage, or adapt the rubric scores to align with your school's or district's grading system.
4. Answer the reflection questions at the end of the assessment.
5. Attach the completed assessment to the student's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet(s) and file them in an individual assessment folder for the student. You might also want to include copies of the student's work in the folder.

Examples of Scored Student Work for Part A: Strategy Assessment

Student response activity: "Summary of _____"

Summary of Prince Caspian Name: Marcus

---

The book Prince Caspian by C. S. Lewis is the fourth book in the Narnia series. Lucy, Edmund, Peter, and Susan magically return to Narnia to help Prince Caspian defeat King Miraz. This summary is about the chapter "The Island." In this chapter Lucy, Edmund, Peter, and Susan are waiting at a train station in England to go back to school. All of a sudden some kind of magic takes them all to an island. They think they might be back in Narnia, but they aren't sure.

They search the island for water and find a stream. They follow the stream hoping that it will lead them to some kind of food. After a while, they find an old apple orchard. They eat a lot of apples and see a wall. They are now sure that someone used to live on the island. They find an opening in the wall and go in. They find themselves in a flat, open yard surrounded by walls.

Reading journal entry 1

Reading Journal

Name: Marcus Date: 5/1

The book I am reading is The Sad Night by Sally Schofer Mathews. It's about how the Aztecs built the great city of Tenochtitlán and how the Spanish come and try to take the Aztecs' gold. An important idea I marked is when Moctezuma's men remind him of a warning that danger will come to the Aztecs in the year 1519 by boat and that the god Quetzalcoatl will come to take over their kingdom. The god will look like a man instead of a feathered serpent. I think it's important because it explains what the Aztecs believe will happen in their future.

I think a supporting detail is when Moctezuma says that they will wait and make an offering to the god if he comes. I think that this detail gives more information about the Aztec people and their beliefs.

Commentary: Marcus's Student Response Book work and journal entries indicate that he is able to identify important ideas and supporting details and summarize texts he hears read aloud and texts he reads independently. He was able to choose a book he enjoyed reading from his reading log to write a summary about. He was able to choose a chapter to summarize, identify the important ideas in the chapter, and use the important ideas to write a cohesive summary about the chapter. He was also able to identify an important idea in a book read independently (Moctezuma's men remind him of a warning that danger would come to the Aztecs in the year 1519 by boat and that the god Quetzalcoatl will come to take over their kingdom. The god will look like a man instead of a feathered serpent) and a supporting detail that provided more information about the important idea (Moctezuma says that they will wait and make an offering to the god if he comes).

Part B score (sum of 4 subtotals/10): 4.0

Commentary: Analysis of Marcus's "IDR Conference Notes" record sheet and observations made during IDR and class discussions indicate that he comprehends text almost all of the time. He was able to explain what the text is about ("a Spanish soldier named Cortés who came to Mexico in search of gold and land"). He used the strategy of questioning in the part he read aloud (wondered why Cortés burned his boat and went off on his own) and made an inference to answer his question ("maybe he wanted all of the gold for himself"). This book is at an appropriate level for Marcus. Marcus would benefit from thinking about the comprehension strategies he is using as he reads.

Part B: IDR Assessment

The items below assess various behaviors that students exhibit when reading and thinking about texts. A student may exhibit a particular behavior with varying degrees of consistency based on the student's reading development and the complexity of the texts he or she is reading. Analyzing the information in the rubric will help you determine whether a student is able to comprehend what he or she is reading as well as the student's attitude toward reading. The assessment will also help you to identify reading skills in which a struggling student might need additional instruction (for example, fluency practice and word-analysis strategies).

Assessing Student Reading Level

Assessing individual students' reading levels throughout the year is critical for providing students with appropriate texts for independent reading and for grouping students for small-group instruction. The "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheet can be used to record individual students' reading assessment data that you have obtained using informal or formal assessments of your choice.

USING THE STUDENT READING LEVEL SUMMARY

- ✓ Make a class set of "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheets (SR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (teach.devstu.org) or from page 143. If you would like to record your assessment data electronically, go to classview.org to learn how you can access the record sheet using the CCC ClassView app.
- ✓ Collect any reading assessment data that you have obtained for each student (e.g., observation notes, running records, or record sheets from formal assessments).
- ✓ For each student, record the data you have collected about his or her reading behavior in the appropriate boxes on the "Student Reading Level Summary" record sheet (SR1). We recommend entering the data in whatever way will be most helpful to you when analyzing the student's progress and instructional needs. In the "Comments" sections, you might enter notes about the text used for each assessment (e.g., whether it is fiction or nonfiction, how many lines of text are on a page, or how much support is provided by the illustrations), observations about the student's reading behavior, and notes about future instruction for the student.
- ✓ If you choose to enter this data directly into the CCC ClassView app, the information will appear in each student's Student Profile. From there, the data can be shared digitally with parents, colleagues, and administrators.

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write stories in which they use the word.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1

Before continuing with the week 5 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 1–4.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 156. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record” sheets (SR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 224. Use this sheet to record each student’s scores from Word Check 1–8 over the course of the year.
- ✓ Make a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record” sheet (CR1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 225. Use this sheet to record the scores of all of the students in the class across the year.
- ✓ If the students are not familiar with the assessment’s multiple-choice format, you might make a copy of the answer sheet (IA1) and display it where everyone can see it. While conducting the assessment, you might point to each vocabulary word as you pronounce it. You might discuss the first few clues as a class and model circling the answers. This copy of the answer sheet is also useful for discussing the activity after the students have completed it.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 1” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “Which Word Am I?” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: boost, creak, or trim.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “Which Word Am I?” on page 155.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

(continues)

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students' understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [creak] describes what an old, rusty gate might do in the wind?
  - Q What do you know about the word [boost/trim]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.
3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 1" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

2. I'm how you would describe a tool that works well and produces the result you want.

Q Which word am I: sidesplitting, slight, or effective? (effective)

3. I'm the broken pieces of stone and brick left after a building has toppled to the ground.

Q Which word am I: rubble, trend, or get-up-and-go? (rubble)

4. I'm an antonym of "calm and quiet."

Q Which word am I: impressive, ineffective, or rowdy? (rowdy)

5. I'm what a flood might do to the landscape.

Q Which word am I: tilt, transform, or analyze? (transform)

6. I'm how you might feel when visiting a beach that you adore.

Q Which word am I: ineffective, severe, or enthusiastic? (enthusiastic)

7. I'm what a tree's branches might do if they drooped down after a severe snowstorm.

Q Which word am I: sag, reminisce, or adore? (sag)

8. I'm the way you might describe a movie that was very strange.

Q Which word am I: rowdier, bizarre, or enthusiastic? (bizarre)

4.	impressive	ineffective	rowdy
5.	tilt	transform	analyze
6.	ineffective	severe	enthusiastic
7.	sag	reminisce	adore
8.	rowdier	bizarre	enthusiastic

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 5 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 159. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

(continues)

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word's meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see "Retaining the Words" in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice through an activity modeled on the game "Make a Choice" (see Week 1, Day 2, Step 2).

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by having the students act out the word or draw a picture that illustrates the word's meaning.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2

Before continuing with the week 9 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 5–8.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 165. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.
- ✓ If the students are not familiar with the assessment’s multiple-choice format, you might make a copy of the answer sheet (IA1) and display it where everyone can see it. While conducting the assessment, you might point to each vocabulary word as you pronounce it. You might discuss the first few clues as a class and model circling the answers. This copy of the answer sheet is also useful for discussing the activity after the students have completed it.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 2” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and the students will circle the vocabulary word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: inconsistent, ideal, or edible.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 164.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [ideal] is the missing word?
  - Q What do you know about the word [inconsistent/edible]?

(continues)

2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.
3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 2" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

What's the Missing Word?

1. The thick grass and large shade trees make the park an _____ place for a picnic.
Q What's the missing word: inconsistent, ideal, or edible? (ideal)
2. It's hard to tell the difference between the brothers because they _____ each other.
Q What's the missing word: resemble, flee, or seek? (resemble)
3. Brad's _____ as president of the club is to plan and lead the meetings.
Q What's the missing word: hardship, obstacle, or function? (function)
4. The spy hoped his _____ sense of hearing would keep him from getting caught nosing around.
Q What's the missing word: keen, dissimilar, or edible? (keen)
5. The leaking ink pen left a purple _____ on the desktop.
Q What's the missing word: custom, blotch, or experience? (blotch)
6. The chef threw out the rotting meat because it was _____.
Q What's the missing word: critical, sensitive, or inedible? (inedible)
7. To be safe when you ride a bike, it's important to _____ consistently on the road ahead of you.
Q What's the missing word: plead, focus, or yearn? (focus)
8. To protect pets, it's important to keep _____ substances such as poisons locked away.
Q What's the missing word: lethal, keen, or consistent? (lethal)

Name: _____ Date: _____

Word Check 2: What's the Missing Word?

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	inconsistent	ideal	edible
2.	resemble	flee	seek
3.	hardship	obstacle	function
4.	keen	dissimilar	edible
5.	custom	blotch	experience
6.	critical	sensitive	inedible
7.	plead	focus	yearn
8.	lethal	keen	consistent

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 9 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 168. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

(continues)

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word's meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see "Retaining the Words" in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by inviting the students to tell or write stories in which they use the word.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3

Before continuing with the week 13 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 9–12.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 174. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 3” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “Which Word Am I?” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: rickety, humble, or luscious.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “Which Word Am I?” on page 173.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [luscious] describes a delicious meal of your favorite foods?
  - Q What do you know about the word [rickety/humble]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

Which Word Am I?

1. I'm how you might describe a delicious meal of your favorite foods.

Q Which word am I: rickety, humble, or luscious? (luscious)

2. I'm what you do when you form an opinion about someone and then find out you are wrong.

Q Which word am I: mislead, misjudge, or pelt? (misjudge)

3. I'm what you do when you carefully look over the birthday cards in a store to find just the right one.

Q Which word am I: survey, glower, or launch? (survey)

4. I'm what a note does when it passes from one friend to another friend, and then to another friend.

Q Which word am I: neglect, circulate, or desire? (circulate)

5. I'm what you might do at your cousin's wedding ceremony.

Q Which word am I: bellow, rummage, or rejoice? (rejoice)

6. I'm how you would describe a nervous passenger in a canoe who worries that the boat will leak.

Q Which word am I: jittery, mysterious, or intricate? (jittery)

7. I'm what a person who is enraged does when he picks on someone.

Q Which word am I: inspire, offer, or intimidate? (intimidate)

8. I'm what you do when you look through a box of buttons to find one particular button.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4

Before continuing with the week 17 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 13–16.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 183. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 4” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and the students will circle the vocabulary word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: amiable, prudent, or unwise.
4. Read question number 1 aloud twice. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 182.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [unwise] is the missing word?
  - Q What do you know about the word [amiable/prudent]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences.

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word’s meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word’s meaning, provide further practice by asking the students questions that require them to use the word to talk about their own experiences.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5

Before continuing with the week 21 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 17–20.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 192. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 5” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by doing the activity “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: rove, labor, or scrutinize.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “I’m Thinking of a Word” on page 191.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [rove] is a synonym of wander and roam?
  - Q What do you know about the word [labor/scrutinize]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

(continues)

3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 5" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

I'm Thinking of a Word

1. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of wander and roam.
Q Which word am I thinking of: rove, labor, or scrutinize? (rove)
2. I'm thinking of a word that means "expecting the best to happen."
Q Which word am I thinking of: pessimistic, optimistic, or dejected? (optimistic)
3. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of worried and anxious.
Q Which word am I thinking of: ineligible, elated, or apprehensive? (apprehensive)
4. I'm thinking of a word that means "enough or good enough."
Q Which word am I thinking of: adequate, inadequate, or temporary? (adequate)
5. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of brave and courageous.
Q Which word am I thinking of: permanent, eligible, or valiant? (valiant)
6. I'm thinking of a word that means "want badly, long for, or desire very much."
Q Which word am I thinking of: mistreat, crave, or revere? (crave)
7. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of dislike.
Q Which word am I thinking of: loathe, rove, or lend a hand? (loathe)
8. I'm thinking of a word that means "a strong desire to achieve or do something."
Q Which word am I thinking of: bliss, ambition, or refuge? (ambition)

Word Check 5: I'm Thinking of a Word

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	rove	labor	scrutinize
2.	pessimistic	optimistic	dejected
3.	ineligible	elated	apprehensive
4.	adequate	inadequate	temporary
5.	permanent	eligible	valiant
6.	mistreat	crave	revere
7.	loathe	rove	lend a hand
8.	bliss	ambition	refuge

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Before continuing with the week 21 lesson, use the Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they are learning, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words from the previous four weeks of vocabulary instruction (except for the week 30 assessment, which is a year-end assessment focusing on a range of words from across the year). We suggest that you choose at least one word from each week and include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 195. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word’s meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see “Retaining the Words” in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6

Before continuing with the Week 25 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 21–24.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 201. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 6” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “Which Word Am I?” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: informal, equitable, or inequitable.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “Which Word Am I?” on page 200.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [inequitable] describes conditions that you do not think are fair?
  - Q What do you know about the word [informal/equitable]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

Which Word Am I?

1. I'm how you describe conditions that you do not think are fair.

Q Which word am I: informal, equitable, or inequitable? (inequitable)

2. I'm what you do when you patiently put up with a long and difficult process.

Q Which word am I: note, endure, or harass? (endure)

3. I'm how you describe a measurement that is very accurate or exact.

Q Which word am I: humdrum, initial, or precise? (precise)

4. I'm the way you might describe someone who checks to ensure there is enough food prior to hanging her bird feeder outdoors.

Q Which word am I: humane, inequitable, or jubilant? (humane)

5. I'm how you describe a dangerous job such as building a skyscraper.

Q Which word am I: perilous, jubilant, or formal? (perilous)

6. I'm what a book does when it captures your attention.

Q Which word am I: harasses, hinders, or engages? (engages)

7. I'm how you describe a person who is not kind or caring toward others.

Q Which word am I: humane, inhumane, or proficient? (inhumane)

8. I'm how you describe a club that is only for people who ski.

Q Which word am I: exclusive, inclusive, or initial? (exclusive)

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7

Before continuing with the week 29 lesson, use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7 to assess each student’s understanding of words taught in Weeks 25–28.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 210. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 7” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about the words they have been learning by playing the game “What’s the Missing Word?” Explain that you will read a sentence that has a word missing and the students will circle the vocabulary word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: vigilant, dense, or desperate.
4. Read question number 1 aloud twice. (See “What’s the Missing Word?” on page 209.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [dense] is the missing word?

During the next few days, review the word’s meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see “Retaining the Words” in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Other observations:

Suggestions

Use the following suggestions to support struggling students:

- If only a few students understand a word's meaning, reteach the word using the vocabulary lesson in which it was first taught as a model.
- If about half of the students understand a word's meaning, incorporate the word into one or more of the other activities used to review words this week.

Completing the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8

Use the Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8 to assess each student's understanding of a representative set of words chosen from across the year.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Make a class set of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheets (IA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 218. Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a reference copy for yourself.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Individual Vocabulary Assessment: Word Check 8” answer sheet (IA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students they will think more about some of the words they have learned this year by doing the activity “I’m Thinking of a Word.” Explain that you will give a clue about one of the words and the students will circle the word that fits the clue.
3. Explain that the first clue is about one of these words, which are written next to the number 1 on the answer sheet: dubious, perilous, or serene.
4. Read clue number 1 aloud twice. (See “I’m Thinking of a Word” on page 217.)
5. Have the students circle the word that fits the clue.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining clues.

DISCUSSING AND SCORING THE ASSESSMENT

1. To fully assess the students’ understanding of the words, it is important to discuss the activity with them after they have completed it. Discuss each question with the class or with individual students. Have them explain the thinking behind their responses by asking questions such as:
  - Q Why did you say the word [serene] is a synonym of peaceful and calm?
  - Q What do you know about the word [dubious/perilous]?
2. Collect the answer sheet (IA1) from each student. If you wish to score the assessment, we suggest you award one point for each correct answer for a possible total score of 8 points for each word check. You might then assign a letter grade based on a scale or rubric you develop or by percentage correct.

(continues)

3. Record each student's individual score on the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Student Record" sheet (SR1) in the "Word Check 8" section. You might also record any comments on that student's performance, such as noting words that seem challenging for the student, and noting, if necessary, any suggestions for providing additional support and for continued growth during the summer.
4. If you wish to track your students' progress, as a class, for Word Checks 1–8, you might add each student's scores to the "Individual Vocabulary Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1).

(continues)

I'm Thinking of a Word

1. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of peaceful and calm.
Q Which word am I thinking of: dubious, perilous, or serene? (serene)
2. I'm thinking of a word that means "think or talk about events in the past."
Q Which word am I thinking of: compromise, reminisce, or revere? (reminisce)
3. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of complicated.
Q Which word am I thinking of: intricate, equitable, or imprudent? (intricate)
4. I'm thinking of a word that means "search for something by moving things around."
Q Which word am I thinking of: pursue, rummage, or yearn? (rummage)
5. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of first.
Q Which word am I thinking of: formal, dense, or initial? (initial)
6. I'm thinking of a word that means "causing great damage or pain."
Q Which word am I thinking of: severe, bizarre, or ideal? (severe)
7. I'm thinking of a word that is a synonym of consistent.
Q Which word am I thinking of: impressive, ineligible, or uniform? (uniform)
8. I'm thinking of a word that means "adjust the eyes to see something clearly."
Q Which word am I thinking of: loathe, focus, or boost? (focus)

Name: _____ Date: _____

Word Check 8: I'm Thinking of a Word

Listen to the clue. Then circle the word that fits the clue.

1.	dubious	perilous	serene
2.	compromise	reminisce	revere
3.	intricate	equitable	imprudent
4.	pursue	rummage	yearn
5.	formal	dense	initial
6.	severe	bizarre	ideal
7.	impressive	ineligible	uniform
8.	loathe	focus	boost

Completing the Student Self-assessment

Use the final Student Self-assessment to give the students an opportunity to reflect on how well they know the words they have learned this year, and to give you the chance to identify words in need of further review and practice for continued growth during the summer.

PREPARING FOR THE ASSESSMENT

- ✓ Identify the words to be assessed. We recommend that you select eight words across the year. For a representative set of words, you might choose one or two words from Weeks 1–4, one or two words from Weeks 5–8, etc. If you administered Word Check 8, you might select words not included in that assessment. We suggest that you include words that were challenging for the students to learn, as well as words that were especially interesting or fun for the students to use and discuss.
- ✓ Make a master copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or from page 221. Write the words you have chosen to be assessed on the master copy. Then make enough copies for each student to have one.

CONDUCTING THE ASSESSMENT

1. Distribute a copy of the “Student Self-assessment” response sheet (SA1) to each student.
2. Tell the students that today they will have an opportunity to think about how well they know the words they have been learning. Point to the list of words you have chosen and explain that these are some vocabulary words they have talked about in the past several weeks. Explain that you will read each word aloud and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then they will put a check mark in the column that tells how well they know the word.
3. Explain that if they are sure they know what the word means, they will put a check mark in the “yes” column, meaning “Yes, I know this word!” If they think they know what the word means but are not sure, they will put a check mark in the “maybe” column, meaning “Maybe I know this word. I’m not sure.” If they do not know what the word means or cannot remember, they will put a check mark in the “no” column, meaning “No, I don’t know this word.”
4. Tell the students that the purpose of the activity is to help them figure out which words they know well and which words they need to review and practice. Explain that it is fine if the students are not sure about a word or do not know what it means.
5. Point to the first word you have chosen, read it aloud, and give the students a few moments to think about the word. Then have them put a check mark in the column that describes how well they know the word.
6. Follow the same procedure with the remaining words.

(continues)

USING THE ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Here are some suggestions for ways you might use the results of the assessment:

- Ask the students to circle any words they are not sure they know or do not know on their own response sheets. Then have them discuss with their partners what they might do to review and practice those words. If the students have difficulty thinking of ideas, suggest a few of your own. For example, the students might use printable word cards to review the words by themselves or with partners, or they might take the word cards home and practice the words with family members. The students might also write stories using the words, draw pictures about the words, or act out the words with their partners.
- Briefly review the meaning of each word by having the students tell what they know about the word. If several students are not sure or do not know what a word means, write that word where everyone can see it. During the next few days, review the word's meaning periodically and look for opportunities to use the word. Encourage the students to use the word in conversations with classmates and others and in their writing.
- Collect the "Student Self-assessment" response sheet (SA1) from each student. Identify the words that many students are not sure of or do not know and review them as a class or in groups. For suggestions for reviewing words, see "Retaining the Words" in the Introduction of the Vocabulary Teaching Guide.

Introduction

We all dream of sending our elementary school students on to middle and high school with a love of writing; an ability to write clearly, creatively, and purposefully for sustained periods of time; and a familiarity with the crafts and conventions of writing in the major genres. We want them to approach writing with confidence and understand that writing, first and foremost, is communication. In pursuing this dream, we ask ourselves: What are the most important things for students to learn about writing during their elementary school years? What writing experiences are most important for students to have? The Being a Writer™ program is our carefully researched, fully articulated answer to these key questions.

The Being a Writer program is a yearlong writing curriculum for kindergarten through grade 6 and the first program of its kind to bring together the latest research in teaching writing with support for students' social and ethical development. The program marries a writing process approach with guided instruction, providing a clear scope and sequence to ensure that your students learn the important elements of writing at their grade level. This all happens in the context of a caring classroom community—so crucial to motivating and inspiring students to grow as writers, thinkers, and principled people. As members of the community, the students learn and act on the values that govern the community (responsibility, respect, caring, fairness, and helpfulness). They practice the skills and dispositions they need to bring these values to life in their daily interactions.

New to the Second Edition

In this second edition of the Being a Writer program, we have added content, assessments, and technology features designed to support your teaching and your students' writing and social development. These include:

- New Open Day and Writing Throughout the Week activities that supplement instruction at grades K–2
- A fifth day of instruction each week at grades 3–6
- New or revised Opinion Writing units at grades K–5 and a new Argumentative Writing unit at grade 6
- New Writing About Reading supplemental activities in which the students write opinions in response to literature
- New family letters in English and Spanish
- Enhanced lesson support for teaching writing skills and conventions

- An expanded Skill Practice Teaching Guide and Student Skill Practice Book at grades 1–6
- Print and digital teacher’s manuals with links to professional development media and lesson resources
- New and expanded writing assessments
- An online assessment tool, the CCC ClassView™ assessment app, for capturing and synthesizing assessment data
- A Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide that prepares students for standards-based writing performance tasks at grades 3–6
- Online, interactive whiteboard activities
- Additional support for incorporating technology through tips, tutorials, extension activities, and mini-lessons

You will find more information about new content, assessments, and technology features in the pages that follow.

Unique Pedagogy

The program’s unique pedagogy grows out of years of research on writing and child development. It focuses on character education and social and ethical development and supports teachers both as writers and as teachers of writing.

RESEARCH BASED/CLASSROOM TESTED

We have drawn on two decades of research in the areas of writing, motivation and learning theory, and social and ethical development to develop the Being a Writer program. In the 1980s, a major study of various modes of writing instruction showed that a writing process approach combined with clear objectives and opportunities for peer interaction produced an effect 22 times greater in students’ pretest–posttest writing quality than approaches characterized by lecture, teacher-only feedback, and writing assignments imitating patterns or following rules. Interestingly, the study also found that positive feedback (commenting exclusively on what writers had done well, rather than on their shortcomings) produced far greater effects in student writing than did negative feedback (Kelley 2002).

A meta-analysis published in 2007 identified the following as key elements of effective instruction (Graham and Perin 2007):

- Process writing approach
- Collaborative writing tasks
- Study of models
- Writing strategies

- Specific product goals
- Prewriting
- Inquiry activities

Additional work by researchers and leaders in the field, including Atwell, Calkins, Fletcher, and Graves,* supports these findings and also emphasizes the following as ways to improve students' writing practice and attitude:

- Teacher and peer conferences
- Classroom discussion
- Writing for real audiences and purposes
- Student self-assessment
- Regular periods of writing
- Choice of writing topics

The Being a Writer program has been developed in consultation with an advisory board of teachers (of varied backgrounds and experience) who piloted lessons and gave us extensive feedback to assure that the program addresses the needs of all students, is easy to implement, and fits into the language arts block.

DUAL FOCUS: ACADEMIC AND SOCIAL/ETHICAL LEARNING

Child development research tells us that children learn and grow best in environments where their basic psychological needs are met. Children need to feel physically and emotionally safe. They need to feel that they belong. They need to have a sense of themselves as autonomous and capable. Studies indicate that when these basic needs are met at school by helping students experience a sense of community, the students do better academically (as measured over time by grades and test scores), exhibit more pro-social tendencies, and show greater resistance to problem behaviors such as drug use and violence (Durlack et al. 2011).

The Being a Writer program helps you take deliberate steps to create a classroom writing community where your students feel empowered, supported in taking risks, and responsible to themselves and the group. The program weaves cooperative learning, social skill instruction, and discussion of values throughout the writing lessons.

TEACHER SUPPORT

The program is designed to help you hone your skills both as a teacher of writing and as a writer yourself. Detailed, easy-to-follow lesson plans include suggestions for managing the writing process, facilitating discussions, assessing the class, and conferring with individual students. Teacher Notes and references to professional development media throughout the lessons explain the underlying pedagogy of various activities and provide examples of what might happen in the classroom. The weekly Teacher as Writer section helps you cultivate your own writing voice while deepening your appreciation for what the students are asked to do in the program. ## Program at a Glance

The following sections describe the program components, writing development across the grades, and a typical daily lesson.

PROGRAM COMPONENTS

The Being a Writer program includes:

- Teacher’s Manual, two volumes per grade
- About 20–30 children’s trade books per grade to inspire students and model good writing
- Student Writing Handbook, one for each student (at grades 2–6), containing excerpts, practice activities, a spelling word bank, and proofreading notes
- Wipe-off boards and markers, one set for each student (at grades K–1), to use during Guided Writing Practice
- Assessment Resource Book (at grades K–6), containing information and record sheets to assess writing and social skill development for individual students and the class
- Skill Practice Teaching Guide (at grades 1–6), containing mini-lessons to supplement instruction in skills and conventions in the program
- Student Skill Practice Book, one for each student (at grades 1–6), containing additional skill practice activities to be used in conjunction with the lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide
- Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide (at grades 3–6), containing lessons to prepare students for standards-based writing performance tasks
- The Digital Teacher’s Set, with digital versions of the Teacher’s Manual, Skill Practice Teaching Guide, Assessment Resource Book, and Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide
- Access to online resources via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org), such as interactive whiteboard activities, assessment forms, reproducibles, and professional development media
- Access to the CCC ClassView app (classview.org), which allows for electronic recording, sorting, synthesizing, and reporting of assessment data for individual students and the whole class

For more information about the print format of the Teacher’s Manual, see the “Getting Started with Your Print Teacher’s Manual” tutorial (AV81). For more information about the digital format, see the “Getting Started with Your Digital Teacher’s Set” tutorial (AV72).

Students in grades 1–6 will each need a writing notebook and a folder for loose pages. In kindergarten, each student will need only a writing folder. See “Student Books, Notebooks, and Folders” on page xlii for further information.

ALIGNMENT WITH STANDARDS

The Being a Writer program develops students' abilities to draft, research, revise, discuss, proofread, and publish writing in narrative, informative/explanatory, and opinion genres. The program's focus on conversations about literature and the writing process, along with its teaching of social skills such as speaking clearly, listening to others, and asking questions about others' writing also addresses standards for speaking and listening. For more about how the program aligns to specific state standards, see the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

A TYPICAL DAILY LESSON

Lessons are generally divided into three sections: Getting Ready to Write, Writing Time, and Sharing and Reflecting.

- Getting Ready to Write. Most direct instruction happens during this section of the lesson. The students gather to hear and discuss a read-aloud, brainstorm ideas for writing, participate in shared or modeled writing, discuss how they will work together, or “quick-write” (participate in short, whole-class writing exercises in grades 3–5).
- Writing Time. During this period of sustained writing, you have the opportunity to write with the students, observe and assist as needed, and confer with individual students or pairs.
- Sharing and Reflecting. Students share and reflect on their writing and social interactions in this section. They listen to and express their appreciation for one another's writing. They discuss what is working in their partnerships, what problems they are encountering, and what they can do to avoid those problems in the future.

EXTENDING THE INSTRUCTION

In addition to the core lessons, the program features several opportunities to extend instruction:

- Open Days and Writing Throughout the Week. In grades K–2, each week of instruction includes one to two open days. On these days, you might consider teaching a Writing Throughout the Week activity. The activities provide ideas such as expanding on a writing idea from the week’s lessons, offering an additional writing idea related to the week’s read-aloud, or asking the students to engage in a different kind of writing (for example, writing opinions about a text, making lists, or engaging in an interactive writing activity), to supplement the instruction provided in the core lessons. Alternatively, you might use open days to provide your own writing instruction.
- Writing About Reading. These activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they hear and discuss in the Being a Writer program. Although the activities are optional, they provide a valuable opportunity for your students to practice writing opinions in response to texts, and we encourage you to do them. These activities can be done at the end of a lesson or at another time.

The Writing About Reading activities build in complexity across grades. In grades K–2, the students write personal opinions in response to texts. Starting in grade 1, the students are expected to provide reasons to support their opinions. In grade 3, in addition to writing about personal opinions, the students begin to more closely analyze the texts, backing up inferences with textual references. In grades 4–6, the latter is the primary focus of the Writing About Reading activities.

- Extensions. These activities provide additional learning opportunities that enhance the instruction in the core lessons. Examples of extensions include exploring text features, discussing authors’ use of language, and using technology to learn about an author or to publish work for an audience beyond the classroom. These activities can be done at the end of a lesson or at another time.
- Technology Mini-lessons. These ten mini-lessons encompass such topics as digital citizenship, online safety, word processing, and research skills. See “Technology Mini-lessons” on page xlvi for more information.

Understanding the Program

The Being a Writer program helps students develop as writers and as caring, collaborative people. This dual focus is based on two beliefs: that students' academic learning flourishes when social learning is integrated into the curriculum and that we are called on as educators to help students develop as whole people—academically, socially, and ethically.

Focus on Writing

Students spend their first few, precious years as writers in our classrooms. As elementary students, they are at the very beginning of their lifelong careers as writers. Learning to write is like learning to master other means of communication. Command of the written word, like command of the piano, oil paints, conversational French, or advanced mathematics, relies less on innate talent than on years of steady practice and encouragement.

MOTIVATION AND CREATIVITY

To get enough sheer practice writing during their elementary school years, students need to really, really want to write. Thus, all instruction in writing process, craft, skills, and conventions in this program grows out of the need to tap into students' intrinsic desire to express themselves and to be understood.

Throughout the program, read-alouds of exemplary writing stimulate the students' imaginations and fuel their motivation to write. Reading about professional authors helps students learn that creativity can be gloriously messy and that writers write to satisfy themselves first. In Being a Writer, students have a great deal of choice about what to write—even when writing about assigned topics, they draw on their unique experiences and interests to address those topics. Formal skill instruction is delayed in each unit so that students can focus initially on just getting their ideas onto paper. However, basic writing mechanics and skills are taught early in kindergarten and grade 1. (See “Flexible Approach to Skill Instruction” on page xxiii for suggestions about how to integrate skills instruction with the core lessons.)

THE BEGINNING OF WRITING (K-2)

Early writing develops on a foundation of oral language, drawing, and phonics instruction. In kindergarten, grade 1, and at the beginning of grade 2, we create many opportunities for students to draw and tell their stories and to see writing modeled. The students see you model thinking aloud about what to write and draw; writing letters, words, and sentences; using standard sentence punctuation; and rereading your writing.

As students become familiar with concepts of print, they begin to understand that marks on a page communicate meaning. They start to draw pictures, write symbols, and eventually form letters and sentences to tell their stories.

To help young students begin to communicate in writing as quickly as possible, it is necessary to provide early instruction in basic conventions of writing, such as writing from left to right and inserting spaces between words. In kindergarten and grade 1, the Guided Writing Practice and Shared Writing opportunities impart this instruction.

- Guided Writing Practice. During Guided Writing Practice in the early units of kindergarten and grade 1, you will model writing letters, words, and simple sentences as the students practice writing on individual wipe-off boards. During the practice, sentence starters like “I see _____” generate practice sentences quickly while connecting to the week’s read-aloud text and writing topic. When the students write their own stories, they may use the sentence starters they practiced or begin their stories in any way they choose. This practice ensures that beginning writers get the support they need, while more experienced writers have important skills reinforced.
- Shared Writing. During Shared Writing time, which occurs throughout the year, you elicit the students’ ideas to write a shared story about a topic. As you write, you model thinking aloud about getting ideas, adding details to the story, and using skills and conventions such as capitalizing sentences and proper nouns, punctuating the ends of sentences, and writing complete sentences. The shared writing activities can be adapted as interactive writing activities. Rather than you writing the students’ suggestions, invite student volunteers to come to the board and write individual letters, words, or sentences as they are able. Then have the students return to their seats for independent writing.

We assume that the students are receiving separate phonics instruction alongside this writing program, including instruction about concepts of print (such as learning letter names and recognizing upper- and lowercase letters), phoneme segmentation, sight word recognition, and letter formation. Throughout the primary grades, we suggest that you model writing using letter–sound relationships that the students have learned during phonics instruction.

The program structure at grades K–2 supports students in learning the basic skills they need to communicate in writing. Because this skill instruction is cumulative and builds on prior learning, we designed the units at these grades to be taught sequentially.

WRITING PROCESS, GENRE, AND CRAFT (3–6)

While students informally draft, revise, and publish their writing at grades K–2, it is not until grade 3 that the writing process becomes central to their writing. After being formally introduced to the writing process at the beginning of the year, students in grades 3–6 repeatedly engage in the cycle of prewriting, drafting, revising, proofreading, and publishing as they participate in the genre units.

The genre units, which focus on personal narrative, fictional narrative, expository (or informative) nonfiction, functional (or explanatory) nonfiction, opinion/argumentative writing, and poetry, immerse the students in authentic representative literature by having them hear, read, and discuss good examples of each genre. They learn about elements of a genre as they brainstorm ideas, quick-write, and write multiple drafts. After this immersion and drafting phase, each student selects a draft to develop and revise for publication in the class library. The students spend the later weeks of each genre unit revising, proofreading, publishing, and sharing their pieces from the Author’s Chair.

The genre units at grades 3–6 may be taught in any order, although we recommend that the expository nonfiction unit be taught later in the year due to its greater academic and social demands.

SKILLS AND CONVENTIONS

The first several weeks of the program are an immersion period during which the students are introduced to the lesson structure and cooperative learning skills, and develop their motivation and stamina for writing. This immersion period is about inspiring good ideas and getting those ideas—in whatever form—onto paper. Students’ motivation to learn the conventions of written English (beyond the basic writing skills discussed previously for K–2 students) grows out of their desire to communicate clearly with their readers in their published pieces. Grammar, usage, punctuation, capitalization, and some spelling skills are taught in the program after the students have had ample time to draft their ideas.

FLEXIBLE APPROACH TO SKILL INSTRUCTION

At grades K–2, most skill instruction occurs during the shared or modeled writing portions of the lesson, while at grades 3–6, most skill instruction occurs during the revision and proofreading phases of the writing process.

Additional instruction and practice in skills and conventions, and language skills assessments for grades 1–6 are provided in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide and the accompanying Student Skill Practice Book.

The program allows you to choose one of two possible approaches to teaching the skill lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide. You might choose to teach the 30 lessons in sequence, or you might teach specific skills when they naturally support the writing being done in a particular genre (for example, the need to punctuate speech arises when writing fiction, while learning to use conjunctions is appropriate for connecting ideas in nonfiction). Skill Practice Notes refer you to specific lessons in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide that provide further instruction or practice with a skill. For more information, see the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

At all grades, we assume that there is a separate spelling program in place to provide students with formal instruction in spelling patterns, inflectional endings, roots, syllabication, and other aspects of spelling.

The Grade 4 Skills and Conventions table on the following page shows where skills and conventions for your grade level are taught directly in the core lessons and suggestions for where they might be practiced. To see analogous information for other grade levels, see Appendix D, “Skills and Conventions Tables.”

THE 6+1 TRAIT® WRITING MODEL AND THE BEING A WRITER PROGRAM

The goals of the Being a Writer program correlate closely to those of the 6+1 Trait Writing model of instruction and assessment developed by Education Northwest. In this widely used framework, student writing is assessed using seven distinct characteristics of writing: ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, conventions, and presentation. The framework provides you and your students with a common language to discuss good writing and rubrics to assess the quality of writing.

While the Being a Writer program provides an assessment framework using our “Descriptors of Successful Writing” to help you and your students understand and assess good writing, you will find numerous parallels between the two approaches. Examples of ways in which Being a Writer supports the 6+1 traits are described in the Support for the 6+1 Trait Model table on page xxvi.

Focus on Social/Ethical Development

Research shows that building a safe and caring classroom community helps students develop a sense of responsibility for their own learning and behavior, as well as empathy and motivation to help others (Schaps 2004). Students who receive support in building their social and emotional skills demonstrate significant gains in academic achievement (Durlack et al. 2011). In the classroom writing community, students work in pairs, in small groups, and as a class to listen to and discuss writing, brainstorm ideas for writing, and share their writing.

BUILDING RELATIONSHIPS

Caring, respectful relationships are the foundation of the writing community and you, as the teacher, play a key role in building a warm relationship with each student as well as in facilitating and strengthening relationships among the students. The program creates deliberate opportunities to build these relationships. Early in the year, the students learn procedures (such as gathering for sharing and using cooperative structures) in which they are responsible to one another. As the year goes on, they regularly plan for, discuss, and solve problems related to their work together. They cultivate empathy by imagining how others might feel, and they explore why it is important to treat others with care and respect. When they feel connected to others and cared for, students learn to relax and take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically.

VALUES AND SOCIAL SKILLS

As you help the students build relationships, you also help them understand the values that underlie these relationships. Across every year of the program, broad social goals help the students think about and act on five core values: responsibility, respect, caring, fairness, and helpfulness. The students reflect on what it means to act on these values and how their actions affect the community. Lapses in applying the values are seen as normal learning experiences, rather than failures. In addition to these five core values, the students explore other values that arise in the read-alouds, such as courage, perseverance, gratitude, and compassion.

The social skills that students learn in the program help them to act on these values in a deliberate way. They learn basic social skills (such as listening to others and taking turns) early in the year, laying the foundation for the more sophisticated skills they learn and practice later in the year, when both their academic work and resulting social interactions become more demanding. (For example, learning how to express appreciation for other people's writing early in the year prepares the students to give and receive specific feedback about their writing later in the year.)

The table on the facing page gives an overview of some of the social goals of the program, the social skills taught in support of those goals, and the grade levels at which they are taught.

Social skills are taught when developmentally appropriate; a skill that is formally taught in the primary grades will be reviewed and integrated in subsequent grades.

RANDOM PAIRING

We recommend that you pair students randomly at the beginning of each unit and have those partnerships stay together for the entire unit. Working with the same partner over time helps students work through and learn from problems, build successful methods of interaction, and develop their writing skills together. Random pairing sends several positive messages to the students: there is no hidden agenda or reason behind how you pair students (such as achievement level), every student is considered a valuable partner, and everyone is expected to learn to work with everyone else. Random pairing also results in heterogeneous groupings over time, even though some pairs may be homogeneous in some way during any given unit (for example, both partners may be female). The box below suggests some methods for randomly pairing the students.

Some Random Pairing Methods

- Distribute playing cards and have each student pair up with someone who has the same number or suit color.
- Place identical pairs of number or letter cards in a bag. Have each student pull a card out of the bag and find someone who has the same number or letter.
- Cut magazine pictures in half. Give each student a picture half. Have each student pair up with the person who has the other half of the picture.

For more information about pairing English Language Learners (ELLs), see “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii.

COOPERATIVE STRUCTURES

Cooperative structures are taught and used at every grade level to increase students’ engagement and accountability for participation. These structures help the students learn to work together, develop social skills, and take responsibility for their learning. Students talk about their thinking and hear about the thinking of others. Cooperative structures are suggested for specific questions throughout the lessons and are highlighted with an icon (). In addition, you can use cooperative structures whenever you feel that not enough students are participating in a discussion, or, conversely, when many students want to talk at the same time.

Students at all grade levels learn “Turn to Your Partner” and “Think, Pair, Share.” In grades 3–6, you might consider introducing “Heads Together” and “Group Brainstorming,” when appropriate.

Cooperative Structures in the Program

- Turn to Your Partner. Partners turn to one another to discuss a question.
- Think, Pair, Share. Each student thinks individually about a question before discussing his or her thoughts with a partner. Pairs then report their thinking to another pair or to the class. This strategy is especially appropriate when the students are asked to respond to complex questions or when they are developing story ideas.
- Heads Together. Groups of four students discuss a question among themselves. Groups might then share their thoughts with the class.
- Group Brainstorming. Groups of four generate as many ideas as they can about a question as a group member records. These lists are then shared with the class.

PAIR CONFERENCES

In grades 2–6 of the Being a Writer program, the students learn to confer in pairs about their writing. They learn that the purpose of a conference is for partners to help each other improve their writing and that a conference entails not only sharing their writing, but discussing it as well. They learn to initiate and conduct conferences, and they practice both the academic and social skills necessary to discuss particular aspects of their writing, as well as how to ask for, give, and receive helpful feedback.

Partners confer at different stages of the writing process. Sometimes they review their drafts together to simply share their writing. At other times, they confer to give each other feedback about how to improve pieces they want to publish. Often the entire class will confer in pairs as you walk around, observe, and support them. In grades 3–6, the students sometimes initiate their own pair conferences as needed during the writing period, either with a regular writing partner or with another available student.

Through conferring, the students practice listening carefully and taking an interest in other people’s thinking and writing. They learn to focus on specific aspects of their partners’ writing, sometimes asking themselves questions like “Am I getting to know this character’s personality?” or “Can I follow what’s happening? Am I confused at any point?” The students learn to give feedback respectfully and to receive it thoughtfully. Before and after each pair conference session, you facilitate discussions to first help the students plan how they will interact and then to discuss what went well, the problems they had and how they might be avoided, and how they acted responsibly. (For more about pair conferences, see “Managing Pair Conferences” on page xliii.)

How the Grade 4 Program Is Organized

In the Being a Writer program at grade 4, there are nine units, each varying in length from one to six weeks. Each week has five days of instruction.

UNITS 1 AND 2

We intend for these units to be taught in order at the beginning of the year. Unit 1 builds the classroom writing community while inspiring the students to tap into their intrinsic motivation to write by drafting many pieces in a variety of genres. Unit 2 introduces them to the writing process as each student selects a draft to revise, proofread, and publish. During these first two units, the students learn the processes, procedures, cooperative structures, and social skills they need to successfully participate in the writing community throughout the year.

GENRE UNITS

The genre units focus on personal and fictional narrative, expository (informative) nonfiction, functional nonfiction, opinion writing, and poetry. They may be taught in any order, although we recommend that you teach the expository nonfiction unit later in the year. Each genre unit begins with an immersion period in which the students hear and read many examples of the genre. During this time, the students try their hand at writing drafts in that genre. Midway through most genre units, each student selects one draft to develop, revise, proofread, and publish for the classroom library.

UNIT 9

Unit 9, the last unit, is taught at the end of the year to help the students reflect on their growth as writers and as members of the classroom writing community.

OVERVIEW OF INSTRUCTION

The Being a Writer program comprises 30 weeks of instruction, which allows time for you to:

- Extend or finish units that take longer than expected
- Provide free writing time so students can practice what they have learned
- Confer with students in a way that is more general than is suggested in the units (see “Teacher Conferences” on page xxxviii)

- Teach Writing About Reading activities, Extensions, and/or Technology Mini-lessons (see “Extending the Instruction” on page xx)
- Teach a unit from the Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide
- Teach writing content not introduced in the Being a Writer program

As you plan the instruction for the year, you might want to build in additional time for these activities. (For example, after the opinion writing unit, you might set aside time to teach the opinion writing unit in the Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide.)

Sample Calendar for Grade 4

	Unit	Title	Length	Focus
FALL	1	The Writing Community	3 weeks	Build a caring community and get to know one another Get ideas for writing from read-alouds Draft many pieces in a variety of genres
	2	The Writing Process	2 weeks	Select drafts to develop and publish Revise drafts Proofread for spelling and conventions Write final versions and publish
	Genre	Personal Narrative	4 weeks	Write about single events from the students’ own lives Use sensory details Use transitional words and phrases Explore strong opening sentences and endings that draw a story’s events to a close
WINTER	Genre	Fiction	6 weeks	Develop interesting plots that make sense Use sensory details to develop a story’s setting Use interesting adjectives Punctuate speech

Sample Calendar for Grade 4 (continued)

Unit	Title	Length	Focus
SPRING	Genre	Functional Writing*	3 weeks Write directions for recipes, drawing cartoons, and games Explore audience, purpose, sequence, accuracy, completeness, and clarity in directions
	Genre	Opinion Writing	3 weeks Identify audience and purpose for opinion writing Write clear statements of opinion supported by reasons Explore strong openings and conclusions that restate the opinion
	OPINION WRITING UNIT FROM THE WRITING PERFORMANCE TASK PREPARATION GUIDE (1 WEEK)
	Genre	Poetry	2 weeks Explore imagery, sound, and form in poetry Tap into creativity
	9	Revisiting the Writing Community	1 week Reflect on growth as writers and as community members Plan summer writing

*Expository Nonfiction in Being a Writer corresponds to Informative Writing in some state standards. Functional Writing corresponds to Explanatory Writing in the standards.

Planning and Teaching the Lessons

We offer the following considerations to help you plan and teach the Being a Writer lessons.

UNIT AND WEEK OVERVIEWS

To prepare to teach a unit, begin by reading the unit’s introductory pages. The Resources list specifies the physical materials and the supplemental activities for the entire unit, while the Online Resources list indicates all of the materials that are available digitally on the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). The unit’s opening page and the Overview table acquaint you with the goals and general outline of the unit; in genre units, the Development Across the Grades table shows you how instruction within that genre builds across grades.

Week 1 OVERVIEW

Article

"About William Steig"
 excerpted from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors
 Illustrations by James Preller
 (see page 25)
 William Steig became a children's book author late in life.

Wizzil
 by William Steig
 Wizzil the witch becomes a mischievous glove.

Poems

"I'm Sorry!" and "I'm Much Too Tired to Play Tonight!"
 by Jack Preludsky
 (see pages 26–27)

"The Fly Is In"
 by Shel Silverstein
 (see page 28)

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students generate ideas for writing.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Students learn about a professional author's writing practice.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn procedures for Writing Time and for "Turn to Your Partner."
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Plan a space in the classroom, such as a rug area, for the class to gather for read-aloud. The students should sit facing you, close enough to you to see the books you will share with them. If a rug area is not available, plan how the students will arrange their chairs so they can sit facing you.
- ✓ Collect enough lined writing notebooks and pads of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes so every student in the class will have one of each. See "Student Books, Notebooks, and Pads" on page 66.
- ✓ Consider reading this unit's read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.

TEACHER AS WRITER

"I write to find out what I'm thinking about."
 —Edward Albee

Being a writer yourself can help you in teaching your students to write. In Teacher as Writer, we offer weekly prompts to help you in your own development as a writer, as well as instructive quotes by well-known writers. We encourage you to start a writing notebook to write in at least several times a week, and to share your writing regularly with colleagues who write. (See "Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School" on page 16 for ideas about creating a writing group at your school.)

In your notebook this week, describe yourself as a writer. Consider:

- What was writing like for you in school?
- What is it like for you now?
- How do you hope to develop as a writer?

PREPARING THE DAILY LESSONS

Each lesson, generally, is divided into three sections: Getting Ready to Write, Writing Time, and Sharing and Reflecting. Each section has its own requirements in terms of student movement and teacher facilitation. Keep these in mind as you plan to teach the lesson.

To prepare:

- Read the bulleted lesson purposes that precede the day’s instruction and keep them in mind as you read the entire lesson, including any Student Writing Handbook pages, reproducible materials, and whiteboard activities (WA), and anticipate how your students will respond.
- Collect materials and anticipate room arrangement needs.
- View any professional development media (AV) referred to in the lessons.
- Plan any teacher modeling required in the lesson.
- Review suggested discussion questions and decide which ones you will ask. Also review the week’s Facilitation Tip and look for opportunities in the lesson to use facilitation techniques.

- Plan how you will pace the lesson to keep it moving. A lesson (including writing time) is designed to take, on average, 35–40 minutes at grades K–2 and 45–60 minutes at grades 3–6.
- Review any optional activities and decide if and when you want to do them with the class. Some require additional materials or preparation.

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT MEDIA

Brief videos created for the second edition of the Being a Writer program help you with effective implementation. The videos, intended for viewing when planning lessons, provide a range of support, including tips for teaching various genres and conferring with the students, demonstrations of teachers modeling specific techniques (such as approximating spelling and punctuating sentences), and examples of students using cooperative structures. For a complete list of professional development media, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

HELPFUL LESSON FEATURES

The lessons include a number of features that help you navigate the instruction and that provide background information and tips. These lesson features are listed below.

Helpful Lesson Features

- Beginning-of-year Considerations. This feature appears in the Overview of each week in Unit 1 in kindergarten and grade 1. It provides information about how you might modify these early lessons based on where your students are developmentally.
- Topic Notes. These notes appear at the beginning of some lessons and provide background information about important aspects of the instruction, including lesson structure, purpose, pedagogy, and approach.
- Teacher Notes. These notes appear in the lesson margins and alert you to such information as the purposes of different activities, materials to be collected or saved, hints for managing the lesson, and ways to support the students.
- ELL Notes. These notes suggest various strategies to support English Language Learners (ELLs) during a lesson.
- Skill Practice Notes. In grades 1–6, these notes refer to specific lessons in each grade's Skill Practice Teaching Guide that provide direct instruction or additional practice with specific skills and conventions. The lessons identified in the notes are relevant to the writing that the students are doing in the core instruction.

Helpful Lesson Features (continued)

- Facilitation Tips. These notes suggest techniques you can use to facilitate class discussions (for example, asking open-ended questions, using wait-time, and not paraphrasing or repeating students' responses) in order to increase participation and encourage deeper conversations among your students.
- Cooperative Structure Icons. These icons indicate where in the lesson students work in pairs or small groups and where the cooperative structures "Turn to Your Partner" and "Think, Pair, Share" are used.
- Suggested Vocabulary. This feature identifies words in a read-aloud that you might want to define for your students as you read. We selected vocabulary words based on how crucial they are to understanding the text and on the unlikelihood that students will be able to glean their meaning from the context. Definitions are provided.
- ELL Vocabulary. This feature identifies and defines additional words in a read-aloud that you may want to address with your ELLs.
- "Students might say." This feature gives you ideas of the kinds of responses you might expect from your students. If the students have difficulty answering a question, you can suggest some ideas in the "Students might say" note and then ask them to generate additional ideas.
- "You might say." This feature provides sample language you can draw on when you model writing, revising, and proofreading, incorporating skill instruction as you do so. Providing the students with opportunities to see you model writing while thinking aloud helps them apply the instruction to their own writing.
- Chart Diagrams. These diagrams illustrate charting techniques and examples of text generated by the class or by teacher modeling. (For more information about the charts used in the program, see "Charts" on page xli.)
- Technology Tips. These notes suggest ways you might integrate technology in the writing lessons. In grades 3–6, they also refer to Technology Mini-lessons, which instruct students on topics such as how to navigate safely online and how to conduct online research. (For more information, see "Technology Mini-lessons" on page xlvi.)
- 2D Barcodes. You can scan these 2D barcodes with an app installed on your smartphone or tablet device to gain instant access to professional development and instructional media.
- Teacher Conference Notes. These notes help you confer with individual students during the writing lessons. (See "Teacher Conferences" on the following page.)
- Class Assessment Notes. These notes help you observe and assess the whole class during pair conferences and Writing Time. (See "Assessments" on page xxxix.)
- End-of-unit Considerations. This feature provides information on wrapping up a unit and conducting final unit assessments.

TEACHER CONFERENCES

Early in the year, you will begin conferring with individual students during the writing lessons. The purposes of these conferences are to assess and support individual students in their writing. You can keep an ongoing record of your conferences by documenting your observations and suggestions for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN).

- Conferring During the Units. Your initial conference focuses on just getting to know the students as writers—their skills, motivation, and interests. As the year progresses, you will focus more on particular aspects of writing that you have taught in the lessons. The Teacher Conference Notes suggest questions to guide your thinking as you read a student’s writing and listen to him or her read and talk about it. These questions are followed by suggestions for supporting the student based on what you noticed. The conferences in each unit focus on reinforcing the teaching you have done so far in that unit. During each unit, we encourage you to confer with every student at least once or twice, depending on the length of the unit.
- Additional Conferring. We suggest that, when possible, you conduct additional conferences with individual students during any free writing time, broadening your focus to respond more generally to their writing. Point out and discuss things that you might otherwise skip over during a unit conference, such as misused words (for example, there/their/they’re), missing punctuation, run-on sentences, or a tendency to “tell” rather than “show” (for example, The dog was happy versus The dog wagged his tail and jumped in circles while barking happily). In addition, you can discuss questions like:

- Q What are you writing?
- Q Where did you get the idea for this piece?
- Q What have you learned about good writing that you can use in this piece?
- Q What is one question you want to ask me about your piece?
- Q What do you want help with?

In the conferences, it is helpful to use a tone of genuine interest and curiosity to foster students’ confidence and willingness to learn about writing. You can point out elements of writing you see them experimenting with (“When I read the sentence ‘I crunched the red leaves with my feet,’ I could hear those dry, autumn leaves”) and ask open-ended questions about their writing (“What other words can you include to help your reader imagine what it’s like in this park?” or “What were you thinking about when you changed the words in this sentence?”). When teaching directly, it helps to discuss conventions in terms of how authors communicate with readers (“Let me show you how writers let us know when one character stops speaking and another one begins”), rather than simply following a rule (“All speech must have quotation marks”).

Assessments

The Being a Writer assessments have two main purposes: to help you make informed instructional decisions as you teach the program and to help you track your students' writing and social development over time. The program provides a range of assessments, including both formative and summative assessment tools.

Each assessment has a corresponding record sheet in the Assessment Resource Book. You may choose to record your students' progress using printed copies of the forms from the Assessment Resource Book or through the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). Alternatively, you can use the CCC ClassView app to electronically record, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student and the whole class. For more information, see "CCC ClassView App" on page xlv.

FORMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Formative assessments help you reflect on your students' academic and social growth over time through class observation, individual conferences, and analysis of student writing. Formative assessments in the program comprise the following:

- Class Assessment. Class Assessment Notes within the lessons occur about once per week. They are designed to help you assess the writing and sometimes the social performance of the whole class. During this assessment, we suggest that you walk around and observe students working individually or in pairs (perhaps selecting strong, average, and struggling writers to observe). Ask yourself the questions in the Class Assessment Note and follow up with the suggested interventions, if necessary. You can record your observations on the corresponding "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA).
- Teacher Conferences and Student Goals and Interests Survey. Teacher Conference Notes provide you with specific questions related to the students' writing that you might ask yourself or a student when conferring individually. Many notes also include suggestions for supporting struggling students. You can record your observations from each conference on the corresponding "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN). We encourage you to confer with each student at least twice per unit.

You might use the questions listed in the first Teacher Conference Note in the program as a beginning-of-year survey of your students' goals and interests. The questions in the final Teacher Conference Note of the year can serve as an end-of-year survey of the students' perceptions of their growth as writers, attitudes toward writing and goals for summer writing.

- Student Self-assessment (Optional). At grades 2–6, this assessment is included in all units in which the students formally publish a piece of writing. The “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA) provides questions for the students to think about as they analyze their published pieces for characteristics of good writing. The self-assessment also invites the students to think about what they did well in their writing and what they want to continue to work on.
- Beginning- and End-of-year Writing Samples (Optional). This assessment can be used to determine a baseline for individual students’ writing ability. The students are asked to write in response to a prompt and are encouraged to incorporate what they know about good writing and the writing process into their pieces. You can analyze each student’s writing using the “Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS). You can follow the same procedure to obtain end-of-year writing samples, and then analyze each student’s writing using the “End-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS). You can then compare the two pieces to evaluate the students’ progress made over the course of the school year.

For more information about the formative assessments in the program, see “Assessments” on page vi of the Assessment Resource Book.

SUMMATIVE ASSESSMENTS

Summative assessments allow you to evaluate and score each student’s writing for units in which the students produce a final or published piece of writing.

- Social Skills Assessment. At grades 1–6, the Social Skills Assessment allows you to note how well each student is learning and applying the social skills taught in the program. In addition to social skills, this assessment allows you to track how well each student integrates the values of responsibility, respect, fairness, caring, and helpfulness into his or her behavior. We recommend that you assess your students’ social development three times per year (at the beginning, middle, and end of the year), using the “Social Skills Assessment Record” sheet (SS).
- Individual Writing Assessment. This end-of-unit assessment is designed to help you assess growth in individual students’ writing. If needed, the “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA) can be used to help you assign grades.

For more information about the summative assessments in the program, see “Assessments” on page vi of the Assessment Resource Book.

Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom

We offer the following suggestions to help you manage the Being a Writer program in your classroom.

ROOM ARRANGEMENT AND MATERIALS

- We recommend a classroom arrangement that allows for quiet individual writing at desks, regular partner work at desks, and whole-class gatherings and discussion. A rug or classroom library area is ideal for whole-class gathering. If this is not possible, think of a way to have the students face and sit close enough to you to hear and see the read-alouds and participate in discussions.
- Plan a place and a chair (sometimes two) to use for Author’s Chair sharing.
- Free up wall space for a word wall (at K–2 only) and for posting paper charts generated in the lessons.
- Gather writing and publishing materials in a central location, and make students responsible for maintaining this area neatly. Materials might include lined and unlined paper, pencils, pens, pads of self-stick notes, highlighters, crayons or markers, construction paper, staplers, and any other desired materials for making books (such as hole punches and string).

CHARTS

In the Being a Writer program, charts are used to model shared writing, show sample writing, list ideas, and display writing tasks. The program features both paper charts and digital whiteboard charts. The latter are referred to in the lessons as whiteboard activity (WA) charts and are accessed via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org). If your classroom is not equipped with an interactive whiteboard, you can print the whiteboard activity charts and display them using a projection device. The weekly Do Ahead section and daily Materials lists make clear which type of chart will be used for any specific task. In cases where a chart needs to be displayed throughout the week, unit, or year, we recommend using paper charts. (Write large enough so the charts can be read from a distance.) For more information, see the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

STUDENT BOOKS, NOTEBOOKS, AND FOLDERS

- Each student in grades 2–6 is responsible for maintaining a Student Writing Handbook, a Student Skill Practice Book (optional), a writing notebook, and a writing folder for loose papers and works-in-progress. Students in grade 1 use all of the above materials except a Student Writing Handbook. Label the covers of all of these with the students’ names, and encourage the students to be responsible for maintaining these in good shape in their desks. These materials should stay in the classroom during the year, rather than go home with the students.
- Each student in grades 1–6 uses a writing notebook. Because writing notebooks are not included with the program, you will need to provide each student with a writing notebook at the beginning of the year (or have the students bring their own from home). We strongly recommend full-size notebooks (no smaller than a 7" × 9" composition book) with firmly bound pages, sturdy covers, and line spacing appropriate for your grade level. Being a Writer composition books are available for additional purchase on Center for the Collaborative Classroom’s website (collaborativeclassroom.org).
- The writing folders can be file folders or pocket folders, or they can be made out of folded construction paper or card stock.
- In kindergarten, we suggest that you provide writing folders to organize the students’ writing during the week. You might distribute them daily and collect them at the end of each writing period. You may wish to establish another system for managing the flow of student papers. For example, you may ask the students to place their completed work in a box on your desk and to keep works-in-progress in folders stored in their cubbies.

MANAGING WORKFLOW

- Establish procedures to help the students move works-in-progress through the writing process. For example, when a student finishes his or her final version and makes it into a book, the student might place it in a “Publication” basket in the corner of the class library to be read aloud during an upcoming Author’s Chair sharing time.

MANAGING PAIR CONFERENCES

- When the whole class is conferring in pairs, you might have pairs of students spread out around the room so they can more easily focus and hear one another. (Students learn specific procedures for conferring in pairs during the lessons.)
- In grades 3–6, when students initiate their own pair conferences during Writing Time, you might designate an area of the room where they may go to talk, away from other students who are working quietly.

Using the Technology Features

The Being a Writer program incorporates digital technology to enhance your students' learning experience and streamline your preparation, instruction, and assessment processes.

Digital Teacher Resources

The program comprises a suite of digital resources, including the Being a Writer Digital Teacher's Set as well as access to the CCC Learning Hub and the CCC ClassView app.

DIGITAL TEACHER'S SET

The Being a Writer Digital Teacher's Set includes electronic versions of the Teacher's Manual, Assessment Resource Book, Skill Practice Teaching Guide, and Writing Performance Task Preparation Guide for use on a tablet device or computer. Features of the Digital Teacher's Set include linked cross-references and direct access to the CCC Learning Hub, the CCC ClassView app (see the next page for more information), and professional development media.

CCC LEARNING HUB

The CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) is your source for the following resources:

- Whiteboard activity charts to display or print
- Printable blackline masters, such as family letters and student handouts
- Digital reference copy of the Student Writing Handbook
- Digital reference copy of the Student Skill Practice Book
- A link to the CCC ClassView app, as well as direct links to printable or interactive assessment forms
- Professional development and instructional media

For more information, see the “Using the CCC Learning Hub” tutorial (AV82).

CCC CLASSVIEW APP

The CCC ClassView app is an online application that contains all of the forms and instructions available in the Assessment Resource Book. This tool also enables you to collect, sort, synthesize, and report assessment data for each student electronically. You can access the app by tapping the assessment icon links in the Digital Teacher's Set, visiting the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org), or going directly to the CCC ClassView app (classview.org). For more information about the CCC ClassView app, view the “Using the CCC ClassView App” tutorial (AV80).

Additional Technology Features

Additional lesson features integrate technology into the program in a variety of ways.

TECHNOLOGY TIPS

These notes, located in the margins of the core lessons, suggest ways to incorporate technology into the instruction or list related professional development media that support your use of technology in the classroom.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSIONS

These optional activities identify ways in which you can use technology to extend instruction, when appropriate. For example, students might listen to and discuss an online interview with an author or publish their writing in an online format such as a class blog.

TECHNOLOGY TUTORIALS

These videos help you understand how to effectively implement the program's technology features and how to use widely available technology, such as presentation tools. They include:

- “Getting Started with Your Print Teacher's Manual” (K–6)
- “Getting Started with Your Digital Teacher's Set” (K–6)
- “Using the CCC Learning Hub” (K–6)
- “Using CCC's Whiteboard Activities” (K–6)
- “Using the CCC ClassView App” (K–6)
- “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” (3–6)
- “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” (K–6)
- “Using Presentation Tools” (3–6)
- “Creating a Class Blog” (3–6)
- “Using Social Networking Sites” (3–6)

TECHNOLOGY MINI-LESSONS

These optional lessons, located in Appendix A in grades 3–6, instruct students on a variety of technology subjects. These lessons include:

- “Navigating Safely Online”
- “Maintaining Privacy Online”
- “Showing Respect Online” (grades 4–6 only)
- “Choosing Effective Search Terms”
- “Understanding Search Results”
- “Using Filters to Narrow Results”
- “Evaluating Research Sources”
- “Citing Online Sources” (grades 4–6 only)
- “Creating Documents”
- “Creating Presentations”

Special Considerations

---

Teaching the Program in Multi-age Classrooms

If you are teaching a multi-age class, we recommend that you choose the level of the program that is appropriate for the majority of your students to use throughout the school year. Since the program provides plenty of time for writing practice and individual conferences, all of your students will be able to develop comfortably as writers even if the lessons are designed for students at a lower or higher grade level.

Supporting English Language Learners (ELLs)

The Being a Writer program helps you implement effective teaching strategies to meet the needs of all students, including ELLs. (For more information, see “How the Being a Writer Program Supports ELLs” on page xlviii.)

While the program is an effective tool in teaching writing to ELLs, it is not intended to stand alone as a comprehensive linguistic development program. It is assumed that additional support in second language acquisition is occurring for ELLs outside of this program.

ABOUT TEACHING WRITING TO ELLs

One myth about teaching ELLs is that good teaching alone will meet their linguistic and academic needs, that they will simply “pick up” the language in the typical classroom context. While “good teaching” (developmental, research-based instructional strategies) certainly benefits ELLs enormously, it is important to target their specific academic and linguistic strengths and needs. The first step is to develop an accurate picture of each student’s English language proficiency level and previous academic experience.

STAGES OF SECOND LANGUAGE ACQUISITION

Learning a new language is a developmental process. The following table outlines the generally accepted stages of acquiring a language and the characteristics of students at each stage. Progress from one stage to the next depends on a wide variety of factors, including cognitive and social development and maturity, previous academic experience, family education and home literacy practices, personality, cultural background, and individual learning styles.

Stages of Second Language Acquisition

Developmental Stages of Language Proficiency (under immersion)	Student Characteristics
Stage 1: Receptive or Preproduction (can last up to 6 months)	Often nonverbal during this period Acquires receptive vocabulary (words and ideas that children “take in” or learn before they begin to produce words verbally) Conveys understanding through drawing, writing, and gesturing Gradually becomes more comfortable in the classroom
Stage 2: Early Production (can last 6 months to 1 year)	Uses one- to two-word answers Verbally labels and categorizes Listens more attentively Writes words and some simple sentences
Stage 3: Speech Emergence (can last 1 to 3 years)	Speaks in phrases, short sentences Sequences stories using words and pictures Writes simple sentences
Stage 4: Intermediate Fluency (can last 3 to 5 years)	Uses increased vocabulary Speaks, reads, and writes more complex sentences Demonstrates higher-order skills, such as analyzing, predicting, debating, etc.
Stage 5: Advanced Fluency (can last 5 to 7 years)	Demonstrates a high level of comprehension Continues to develop academic vocabulary Continues to speak, read, and write increasingly complex sentences

HOW THE BEING A WRITER PROGRAM SUPPORTS ELLs

English Language Development strategies are an inherent part of the program’s design. In addition, the program suggests ways to modify the instruction to enhance support for ELLs. There are a number of effective English Language Development (ELD) instructional strategies integrated throughout the Being a Writer program. These strategies help make the content comprehensible, support students at their individual level of language proficiency, and help students see themselves as valuable members of the classroom community. The table on the next page shows the ELD strategies used in Being a Writer.

English Language Development (ELD) Strategies in the Being a Writer Program

Emphasis on writing as meaningful expression	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Balanced approach to listening, speaking, reading, and writing</li> <li>Teacher questioning</li> <li>Explicit teacher modeling</li> <li>Writing in narrative, expository (informative), and opinion genres</li> <li>Activating prior knowledge</li> <li>Making connections (i.e., text-to-self)</li> <li>Building intrinsic motivation through providing choice</li> </ul>
Visual aids and engaging materials	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Rich, meaningful literature</li> <li>Engaging book art</li> <li>Emphasis on writing and illustration</li> <li>Teacher modeling of writing, revising, and proofreading</li> </ul>
Explicit vocabulary instruction	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Opportunities to preview and discuss read-alouds before lessons</li> <li>Building academic vocabulary</li> <li>Brainstorming lists of words to use in students' writing</li> </ul>
Creating a respectful, safe learning community	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Active, responsible learning</li> <li>High expectations for classroom interactions</li> <li>Explicit classroom procedures and routines</li> <li>Explicit social skills instruction</li> <li>Regular discussions to reflect on classroom values and community</li> </ul>
Cooperative learning	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Cooperative structures ("Turn to Your Partner" and "Think, Pair, Share")</li> <li>Ongoing peer partnerships</li> <li>Opportunities to express thinking orally and listen to others' thinking</li> <li>Sharing work and reflecting</li> </ul>

ADDITIONAL STRATEGIES FOR SUPPORTING ELLs

In addition to the practices embedded in the Being a Writer lessons, ELL Notes provide specific suggestions for adapting instruction to meet the needs of ELLs. In addition, you can implement a number of general strategies to help ELLs participate more fully in the program. These include:

- Speaking slowly. Beginning English speakers can miss a great deal when the language goes by too quickly. Modifying your rate of speech can make a big difference in helping them to understand you.

- Using visual aids and technology. Photographs, realia (real objects), diagrams, and even quick sketches on the board can help to increase a student’s comprehension. When giving directions, physically modeling the steps and writing them on the board while saying them aloud are effective ways to boost comprehension. Audiovisual resources such as recordings of books read aloud, author interviews, and interactive versions of read-alouds can also be helpful.
- Inviting expression through movement and art. Having students express their thinking through movement and art can be enormously powerful. Drawing, painting, dancing, mimicking, role-playing, acting, singing, and chanting rhymes are effective ways for students to increase comprehension, build vocabulary, and convey understanding. The Total Physical Response (TPR) method, developed by James Asher, helps children build concepts and vocabulary by giving them increasingly complex verbal prompts (stand, sit, jump, etc.) that they act out physically and nonverbally (see Bibliography on page 745).
- Building vocabulary. ELL vocabulary is highlighted for most read-alouds in the program, and we recommend that you introduce this vocabulary (discuss it, act it out, draw it, etc.) and define it during the reading. In addition, you might brainstorm words related to particular read-alouds or themes (see the example below). The students can then illustrate each word and post the illustrations next to the printed words, creating a visual chart to refer to as they write.

- Preteaching. It is a good idea to preteach concepts with ELLs, when possible. This can mean previewing vocabulary, doing a picture walk of a story, or looking at realia or photographs before a lesson. Preteaching in a student’s primary language can be particularly effective—teachers, instructional aides, parents, or other community members can be enlisted to help. Some of the Being a Writer read-aloud books are available in Spanish. For a list of these titles, visit the Center for the Collaborative Classroom’s website (collaborativeclassroom.org).

- Simplifying questions. Open-ended questions are used throughout the Being a Writer program to elicit language and higher-order thinking from students. These questions are often more complex in structure than closed or one-word-answer questions. While all learners, including ELLs, benefit from the opportunity to consider such questions, you might modify complicated questions into simpler ones to increase comprehension and participation by your ELLs. The table below lists some suggestions for simplifying questions.

Suggestions for Simplifying Questions

Suggestion	Original Question	Simplified Question
Use the simple present tense.	What was happening at the beginning of the story?	What happens at the beginning of the story?
Use active rather than passive voice.	How was the window broken in the story?	Who broke the window in the story?
Ask who/what/where/when questions rather than how/why questions.	How are you and your partner working together?	What do you and your partner do to work well together?
Avoid the subjunctive.	If you were going to write about a family member, what might you write?	You will write a story about someone in your family. What will you write?
Provide definitions in the question.	Why is the old woman so reluctant to name the dog?	The old woman is reluctant ; she does not want to name the dog. Why?
Provide context clues as part of the question.	What happens at the beginning of the story?	Peter wakes up and it is snowing. What else happens at the beginning of the story?
Elicit nonverbal responses. (Stages 1-3)	What do you see in this picture that tells about the words?	This picture shows the sentence "I like to paint." Point to the paints. Point to the paintbrushes.
Elicit responses of 1-2 words or short phrases. (Stages 1-3)	What do you think will happen when Peter puts the snowball in his pocket?	Peter puts the snowball in his pocket. Is that a good idea?

- Assessing comprehension. When students are in the preproduction and early production stages of language acquisition, it can be hard to assess exactly what they understand. It is important not to confuse lack of verbal response with lack of understanding. Rather than force ELLs to produce language before they are ready (which can raise anxiety and inhibit their progress), you can assess nonverbal responses while the students are actively engaged by asking yourself questions such as:

- Q Do the student’s drawings and written symbols communicate thinking or show evidence of my teaching (such as completing a frame sentence and illustrating it appropriately, or including a beginning, middle, and end in a story)?
- Q Does the student nod, laugh, or demonstrate engagement through other facial expressions?
- Q Does the student pick up academic and social cues from peers?
- Q Does the student follow classroom signals and routines?
- Q Does the student follow simple directions (such as “Please get out your writing notebooks and pencils”)?
- Q Does the student utter, chant, or sing some familiar words or phrases?

By carefully observing your ELLs and employing some of the strategies suggested here (as well as those in the ELL Notes in the lessons), you will be able to support your students’ development as writers and as caring, collaborative participants in your writing community.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR PAIRING ELLs

A key practice in the Being a Writer program is to have students work in unit-long partnerships. Random pairing is suggested as a way to ensure equity by reinforcing the value of each child in the classroom (see “Random Pairing” on page xxix). However, when considering the needs of ELLs, it may be advantageous to partner these students in a more strategic way. You might pair a beginning English speaker with a fluent English or multilingual speaker. It can be effective if the multilingual partner shares the ELL’s primary language, but we recommend prudence in asking the more fluent English speaker to serve as translator. Another option is to place ELLs in trios with fluent English speakers to allow them more opportunity to hear the language spoken in conversation. In this case, it is important to make sure that all three students are participating and including one another in the work.

Building the Home-School Connection

Keeping families informed about their children’s participation in the Being a Writer program helps family members understand and appreciate how their children are developing as writers and how they can support that development.

FAMILY LETTERS

We provide a letter to send home with the students at the end of each unit, available in both English and Spanish. Each letter describes the unit’s focus, instruction, and social development goals and offers suggestions for encouraging writing development at home. The family letters are included in the Online Resources list for each unit and can be accessed via the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org).

Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School

Being a writer yourself helps you understand the writing process and the joys and struggles that come with writing. Writing regularly informs both your instructional decisions and your interactions with individual students about their writing. We strongly encourage you to become part of an active writing community that will support you in your own development as a writer. Some particularly powerful activities for building a writing community are listed below.

TEACHER AS WRITER

The Teacher as Writer section at the beginning of each week offers writing prompts and instructive quotes by well-known writers to inspire you. The prompts relate to the writing focuses for the students that week.

We suggest that you start a writing notebook and write in it several times a week, both in school during the daily Writing Time and outside of school. Find opportunities to share your writing regularly with a writing partner or group.

STARTING A WRITERS' GROUP AT YOUR SCHOOL

To start a writers' group at your school, find other adults (including teachers, administrators, parents, and other school staff) who are interested in writing regularly and supporting one another in writing. If there is a lot of interest, consider starting more than one writers' group to keep any one group from becoming too large. Schedule meetings at regular intervals (every month, every six weeks, or every other month) to share and discuss writing. Meetings can take place on or off school grounds, and the format can range from formal to informal. Many sources of information about how to start and conduct a writers' group are available online; search for this information using the keywords "starting a writers' group."

Using Being a Writer with Other Programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom

Center for the Collaborative Classroom has developed other programs that can be used in conjunction with Being a Writer in a language arts curriculum. For more information about any of these programs, visit the Center for the Collaborative Classroom's website (collaborativeclassroom.org).

Unit 1

The Writing Community

During this three-week unit, the students begin to see themselves as contributing members of a caring writing community. They hear and discuss examples of good writing and begin to learn about the writing practices of professional authors. They explore prewriting techniques and write freely in their writing notebooks about things that interest them. They learn cooperative structures that they will use throughout the year, as well as discussion prompts to help them listen and connect their comments during class discussions. Finally, they begin conferring with one another about their writing in a caring and responsible way.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I write to find out what I’m thinking about.”

— Edward Albee

Being a writer yourself can help you in teaching your students to write. In Teacher as Writer, we offer weekly prompts to help you in your own development as a writer, as well as instructive quotes by well-known writers. We encourage you to start a writing notebook, to write in it at least several times a week, and to share your writing regularly with colleagues who write. (See “Building the Adult Writing Community at Your School” on page liii for ideas about creating a writers’ group at your school.)

In your notebook this week, describe yourself as a writer. Consider:

- What was writing like for you in school?
- What is it like for you now?
- How do you hope to develop as a writer?

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students generate ideas for writing.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn procedures for Writing Time and for “Turn to Your Partner.”
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Plan a space in the classroom, such as a rug area, for the class to gather for read-alouds. The students should sit facing you, close enough to you to see the books you will share with them. If a rug area is not available, plan how the students will arrange their chairs so they can sit facing you.
- ✓ Collect enough lined writing notebooks and pads of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes so every student in the class will have one of each. See “Student Books, Notebooks, and Folders” on page xlii.
- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.

(continues)

DO AHEAD (continued)

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during Units 1 and 2. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, prepare to distribute a Student Writing Handbook to each student.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 6 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 7 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Plan a time during the first month of school to obtain a beginning-of-year writing sample from your students. For more information on how to obtain this writing sample, see “Obtaining a Beginning-of-year Writing Sample” on page 2 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Getting Ideas for Writing

Day 1

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Learn the procedure for gathering
- Gather in a responsible way
- Become familiar with their writing notebooks

ABOUT WRITING INSTRUCTION EARLY IN THE YEAR

All growth and learning in the art and craft of writing depend on a solid foundation of abundant, uninhibited writing. To get enough sheer practice with the physical and mental act of writing during their elementary school years, students must tap into their intrinsic motivation to write. Unit 1 helps students develop this motivation by inspiring them to write freely and daily about things that interest them. Engaging read-alouds are used to stimulate creativity and as examples to inspire writing. In this unit, it is more important for the students to write generously, free from concerns about making it right or “good,” than it is for them to write complete, correct pieces.

To support the students’ writing practice in Unit 1, formal skill instruction is delayed until Unit 2. It continues in the “Revision, Proofreading, and Publishing” phase of all the genre units. For the time being, relax your expectations about the students’ spelling and grammatical correctness, and encourage them to just write freely, getting their ideas down on paper.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce the Writing Community

Introduce the Being a Writer program by explaining that this year the students will be members of a classroom writing community. In the community, they will write about things that interest them, share and talk about their writing, learn about what professional authors do, and become stronger writers. Ask and briefly discuss as a class:

- Q What are some things you’ve written?
- Q When do you write in school? Outside of school? What are some reasons you write, in or out of school?

Students might say:

- “I write when I leave my parents a note about where I’m going.”
- “I have to write a list of things to do for homework every week.”
- “I wrote a long story about a field trip we took in third grade.”

Materials

- Sylvester and the Magic Pebble
- “Ideas for Magic Objects” chart (WA1)
- Writing notebook and a pencil for each student
- Self-stick note for each student

Teacher Note

For more information, view “Setting Up Procedures for the Year” (AV5).

Teacher Note

For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Technology Tip

The videos above are two in a series of professional development videos in the Being a Writer program. For more information about the content of the videos and how to view them, see “Professional Development Media” on page xxxvi.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching the Being a Writer program with other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, these notes alert you to connections between them.

If the students have already learned a procedure for gathering for a read-aloud, use the same procedure for gathering to discuss writing. Take this opportunity to remind the students of the procedure and your expectations.

Teacher Note

When more than one question appears next to a Q, ask the first question, discuss it, and follow up with the subsequent questions.

Explain that writers constantly read examples of good writing to help them get ideas for their own writing and to give them a sense of the way good writing looks and sounds. This year the students will have many opportunities to hear, read, and discuss good writing.

2 Learn and Practice the Procedure for Gathering to Discuss Writing

Explain that the class will gather to hear a read-aloud. Explain that you would like the students to gather and sit facing you, either on a rug or in their seats. Before asking the students to move, state your expectations.

You might say:

"I expect you to move quickly, quietly, and without bumping into one another."

Ask:

Q What do you want to keep in mind to make moving go smoothly?

Have the students move to their places. Ask:

Q What did you do to move responsibly? What might you do differently when we try it again?

If the students have difficulty answering the questions, you might share your own observations.

You might say:

"I noticed you were careful not to bump into anyone on your way to the rug. You came straight to the rug instead of doing something else first. Next time you might try moving more quietly."

If necessary, have the students return to their desks and practice the procedure until they are able to gather in an orderly way. Explain that the students will use the same procedure every time they gather to talk about writing.

Explain that today you will read aloud an example of good writing. Invite the students both to enjoy the story and to think about what it would be like to write such a story.

3 Read Sylvester and the Magic Pebble Aloud

Show the cover of Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and read the title and author's name aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations as you read. Clarify vocabulary as you encounter it in the text by reading the word, briefly defining it, rereading it in context, and continuing (for example, "'It CEASED'—ceased means 'stopped completely'—'It CEASED'").

Suggested Vocabulary

- ceased: stopped completely (p. 5)
vanished: disappeared (p. 5)
wart: bump on the skin (p. 7)
fetlock: part of a horse's leg (p. 7) inquiring of: asking (p. 13)
stone-dumb: unable to speak (p. 27)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

- pebble: small stone (title)
startled: surprised (p. 8)
panicked: suddenly got scared (p. 9) like mad: very quickly and wildly (p. 10)
colts and piglets: young horses and baby pigs (p. 14)
every nook and gully: every corner and hole (p. 16) found not a scent of him: didn't find anything that had his smell on it (p. 17)

4 Discuss the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the book to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What happens in this story after Sylvester finds the pebble?
- Q If you were going to write a story about an object (a thing) with magic powers, what object would it be? What magic powers would the object have?

Students might say:

"He wishes he was a rock and he turns into a rock. Then he has to wait till someone holds the pebble and wishes the rock was a donkey again."

"The magic object could be a feather that gave a wish if it touched someone's head."

"It could be a belt that made anyone who wore it invisible."

"My magic object would be a pen that made drawings come to life."

Display the "Ideas for Magic Objects" chart ( WA1). As the students offer ideas, record two or three of them as brief notes on the chart.

Teacher Note

William Steig's books are filled with words that are likely to be unfamiliar to your students. It is not necessary to stop and define every one, as the meaning of many can be gleaned from the context. A few exceptions are listed in "Suggested Vocabulary."

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering these questions, offer some examples like those in the "Students might say" note.

Technology Tip

FWhiteboard activities (WA) are digital charts that are intended to be displayed using an interactive whiteboard. Alternatively, you may print the PDF versions of the whiteboard activities and project them using a projection device.

For more information, view the "Using CCC's Whiteboard Activities"

Ideas for Magic Objects

- a feather: If it touches your head, your wish comes true.
- a belt: makes you invisible
- a pen: makes drawings come to life

WRITING TIME

5 Introduce Writing Notebooks

Distribute a writing notebook, a pencil, and a self-stick note to each student. Explain that this year the students will do all their drafting, or first-time writing, in their notebooks. They will also keep ongoing lists of writing ideas in the backs of their notebooks. Have the students count back ten pages from the backs of their notebooks, mark that page with the self-stick note, and write “Writing Ideas” in big letters on that page. Explain that the students will list all their ideas this year in this section of their notebooks.

On the first blank page of the writing ideas section, have each student write “Ideas for Magic Objects” at the top of the page. Have the students copy ideas that they like from the class chart and then add other ideas for stories about magic objects. Encourage them to talk to students sitting near them to get ideas.

After a few moments, call for the students’ attention. Have them share a few more ideas, and add these to the chart.

Explain that the students will begin drafting in their notebooks tomorrow and that they may wish to use their ideas from today. Have the students write their names on their notebooks. Explain that you will remind them to bring the notebooks with them when they gather to talk about writing.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect and Adjour

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you like about writing in your notebook today?

Tell the students how you would like them to return to their seats and have them return. If necessary, have them practice moving to their seats until they are able to move in an orderly way. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to be responsible as you moved back to your seat?

If the students have difficulty answering the question, you might share your own observations.

You might say:

"I noticed you returned to your seats quickly and quietly, without bumping into one another."

Ask the students to put their notebooks in their desks to use again tomorrow.

Teacher Note

You might tell the students that when they are being responsible, they are acting in ways that help them learn, work well with others, and make the classroom a caring and respectful learning community.

Getting Ideas for Writing

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story
- Begin working in pairs
- Learn "Turn to Your Partner"
- Learn procedures for the silent writing period
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair the Students and Introduce "Turn to Your Partner"

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other's names (see "Do Ahead" on page 5). Explain that pairs will stay together for Writing Time during the next few weeks.

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that you will often ask partners to turn and talk to each other. The purpose is to give everyone a chance to think more about what they are learning by talking to another person.

Materials

- Wizzil
- "Ideas for Turning into Something" chart (WA2)

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for Units 1 and 2. Take some time at the beginning of today's lesson to let them get to know each other by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere. You might have them report to the class some interesting things they learned about each other.

Teacher Note

If your students are already familiar with “Turn to Your Partner,” you do not need to model it here. Instead, take the opportunity to remind the students of your expectations for the procedure.

To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

Teacher Note

A visual signal, such as a raised hand, allows the students to finish what they are saying before turning back to face you. Build accountability by reminding the students to raise their own hands when they turn to face you.

Teacher Note

The Suggested Vocabulary and ELL Vocabulary lists include words that are important for the students to understand to comprehend the story. To maintain the flow of the story, these words should be defined during the reading but not discussed.

For more information, view “Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud” (AV30).

Explain the “Turn to Your Partner” procedure by saying, “Sometimes I will ask a question and say ‘Turn to your partner.’ When you hear this, you will turn to face your partner and talk about the question. When I raise my hand, you will finish what you’re saying, raise your own hand so others can see the signal, and turn back to face me.”

2 Model “Turn to Your Partner”

Have a student act as your partner, and model turning to face each other and introducing yourselves by your full names. Then ask partners to turn to face each other and introduce themselves. After a moment, raise your hand and have them turn back to face you.

Practice again by asking:

Q What are you interested in writing (or writing about) this year? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss their thinking. After a moment, signal for their attention. Have a few volunteers briefly share with the class what they discussed.

Explain that you will read a story aloud, stopping during the reading for the students to use “Turn to Your Partner” to discuss a question. State that later in the lesson you will ask them to report how they did.

3 Read Wizzil Aloud

Remind the students that they heard Sylvester and the Magic Pebble yesterday. Explain that you will read another story by William Steig to help them get more ideas for writing. Show the cover of Wizzil and read the title aloud.

Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you encounter it in the text by reading the word, briefly defining it, rereading it in context, and continuing (for example, “He detested every breed of fly’—detested means ‘hated’—‘He detested every breed of fly, especially Musca domestica’”).

Suggested Vocabulary

detested: hated (p. 5)

culprit: cause of the problem (p. 22)

blushing: turning pink in the face (p. 27)

gratitude: thankfulness (p. 27)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

resolved on revenge: having decided she would get back at him (p. 8) posting: mailing (p. 12)

pestering: bothering (p. 19)

Stop after:

p. 13 “‘Frimp, my man, it’s your lucky day!’ he exclaimed, and he traipsed back home with a happy harpy on his hand.”

Ask:

Q What has happened in this story so far? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. After a moment, signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, continue reading to the end of the book.

4 Discuss the Story

Briefly discuss the story using the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q How is this story similar to Sylvester and the Magic Pebble? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for their attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Ask:

Q In this story, the witch turns herself into a glove. If you were going to write a story like Wizzil, what might you turn yourself into, and what might happen?

Students might say:

“In both stories, there’s a character who uses magic.”

“Sylvester and Wizzil both turn into something.”

“I could write a story about turning into a hat and going somewhere on someone’s head.”

Display the “Ideas for Turning into Something” chart (WA2). As the students report ideas, record them on the chart.

Ideas for Turning into Something

- a hat: I could go somewhere on someone's head.

- a suitcase: I'd visit faraway places.

- a roller coaster: I would give people exciting rides.

WA2

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you do to be a responsible partner during “Turn to Your Partner”?

Students might say:

“I listened to my partner during ‘Turn to Your Partner.’”

“We talked about the question, and we didn’t talk about anything else.”

“We took turns and listened to each other.”

Teacher Note

Notice that you ask the question before saying, “Turn to your partner.” This gives everyone a chance to hear and consider the question before starting to move to face their partners.

Teacher Note

Double-spacing will give the students the necessary space to revise and edit pieces later on.

Teacher Note

A period of silent writing, during which you also write without interacting with the students, may feel new to you. We strongly encourage you to establish this routine early in the year. Students adapt to it quickly after a few reminders, and they learn to focus inward on their own thoughts during this time. By knowing that they are not to interrupt you or others, they come to rely on their own thinking and decisions as they write. As the writing period gradually lengthens over the coming weeks, you will write quietly for 5-10 minutes and then begin conferring with students.

(all, beginning on page 14 and continuing on to page 15)

Materials

- Wizzil

WRITING TIME

5 Learn Procedures for the Silent Writing Period

Have the students return to their seats. Explain that they will spend the next 5–10 minutes silently writing whatever they choose in their writing notebooks. They may add ideas to their writing ideas section or begin drafting a story at the front of their notebooks. Tell them that you would like them to double-space, or skip every other line, when they write in their notebooks.

Explain that during Writing Time, you would like the class to work in silence, without talking, whispering, or walking around. Tell the students that you will give them a signal when Writing Time is over. Explain that you will be writing along with them and ask that you not be interrupted. Give the students a moment to gather what they need, sharpen pencils, etc. Then have them write at their desks in silence for 5–10 minutes. Join the students in writing, periodically scanning the room.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you write about today?
- Q Was it hard or easy to start writing? Why?
- Q What helped you focus on your writing today?

Ask the students to put their notebooks in their desks to use again tomorrow.

WRITING ABOUT READING

WRITING ABOUT READING ACTIVITIES

Writing About Reading activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they discuss in the Being a Writer program. The activities are optional and can be done at the end of the lesson or another time. For more information, see “Writing About Reading” on page xx.

Make Connections to Wizzil

Show the cover of Wizzil and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

- Q What do you remember about the story?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Reread pages 24–28. Then briefly discuss:

- Q Why does DeWitt rescue Wizzil? What in the story makes you think so?
- Q What feelings might DeWitt be having during this episode? What in the story makes you think so?
- Q How does Wizzil respond? What in the story makes you think so?
- Q When is a time you felt gratitude to someone, the way Wizzil feels gratitude to DeWitt?

Students might say:

"DeWitt wants to help Wizzil because she's in trouble. The story says 'DeWitt couldn't bear to see a fellow creature drowning.'"

"DeWitt might be focused on saving Wizzil. Then he's surprised when she changes."

"Wizzil feels really grateful to DeWitt for saving her. In the story it says she was 'smiling with gratitude.'"

"I felt gratitude to Nick because he befriended me when I was new at our school."

Explain that the students will write about how the story from Wizzil reminds them of their own lives. Say that when you write or talk about how a story reminds you of your own life, you are making a connection to the story. Explain that making connections to stories helps us enjoy and remember them. Ask the students to watch as you model writing about how Wizzil reminds you of your life.

You might say:

"I want to write about how DeWitt's generosity reminds me of a time when someone has been generous to me. I'll write: In Wizzil by William Steig, DeWitt saves Wizzil even though she's a mean witch, and she responds to his kindness by becoming happy and loving. Notice that I included the name and author of the book in the first sentence. Now I want to compare the book to my own life. I'll write: I too have been transformed through other people's kindness. Now I want to give an example. I'll write: For instance, last week I came home from work feeling tired and grouchy. I growled at my husband when he asked me how my day was. Instead of growling back, my husband offered to make dinner. He set the table and did the dishes too! I want to include a final sentence that wraps up the piece. I'll write: My husband's kindness washed away my bad feelings just like DeWitt's kindness helped to wash away Wizzil's witchiness."

Have the students begin writing about their connections. If time permits, invite them to share their writing with the class.

TEKS 7.A.i

Student/Teacher Narrative
Writing About Reading
(fourth discussion question on page 15 through the "You might say" note)

Teacher Note

You might write the following prompts on the board and have each student choose one to write about:

- When is a time you felt gratitude in your life?
- When is a time you did the right thing even though you didn't feel like doing it?

TEKS 7.A.i

Day 3

Learning About an Author

Materials

- “About William Steig” (see page 25)
- Wizzil from Day 2
- Sylvester and the Magic Pebble from Day 1
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3)

ELL Note

Cooperative structures like “Turn to Your Partner” support the language development of English Language Learners by providing frequent opportunities for them to talk about their thinking and listen to others.

Teacher Note

Save the “Writing Ideas” chart to use throughout the unit.

In general, charts that the students will refer to over time are written on chart paper rather than displayed on the whiteboard. See “Charts” on page xli for more about the use of paper and whiteboard charts.

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I found out . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author’s writing practice
- Practice “Turn to Your Partner”
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they learned “Turn to Your Partner” yesterday. Briefly review the procedure and ask them to be ready to talk in pairs again today.

Explain that you are reading different kinds of texts aloud to help the students get ideas for their writing. Show the covers of Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and Wizzil and remind the students that they have heard the books earlier. On a sheet of chart paper labeled “Writing Ideas,” begin by listing write stories with magic in them. Explain that you will add other ideas to the chart over the coming weeks.

Remind the students that Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and Wizzil are both by William Steig. Ask:

 Q Based on these two stories, what kind of person do you think William Steig might be and why? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for their attention and ask a few pairs to share with the class what they discussed.

Students might say:

“His books are funny, so William Steig might be a funny person.”

“He might be someone who likes to think about things differently from other people.”

2 Read “About William Steig”

Explain that you will read some information about William Steig from a book about famous children’s book authors. Ask the students to listen for interesting things they learn about William Steig.

Read “About William Steig” (page 25) aloud; then ask:

 Q What did you find out about William Steig? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question. Signal for their attention and ask a few pairs to share their thinking with the class. Be ready to reread to help the students remember what they heard.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will spend the next 10 minutes silently writing whatever they choose in their writing notebooks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA3) and explain what the students can do during this time.

Writing Time

- Write something interesting you learned about William Steig.
- Add ideas to your writing ideas section.
- Work on the piece you started yesterday.
- Start a new piece of writing at the front of your notebook.

WA3

Have the students write for 10 minutes. Remind them to double-space, or skip every other line, as they write. Emphasize that during Writing Time, you would like the class to work in silence, without talking, whispering, or walking around. Remind the students that you will give them a signal when Writing Time is over. Explain that you will be writing along with them and ask not to be interrupted.

Join the students in writing, periodically scanning the room as you write.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

Q What did it feel like to write quietly today?

Q Did you remember to skip lines in your writing today?

Explain that it is important to skip lines so there is space to add or make changes later. Tell the students you will remind them to skip lines as they write.

Ask the students to put their notebooks in their desks to use again tomorrow.

Day 4

Getting Ideas from Poetry

Materials

- “I’m Sorry!” (see page 26)
- “I’m Much Too Tired to Play Tonight” (see page 27)
- Student Writing Handbook pages 1–2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)
- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Speak clearly and listen to one another
- Hear and discuss funny poems
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Build the Writing Community

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they are building a caring classroom writing community. Ask:

Q As a member of our writing community, you are responsible for listening to what others say. If you can’t hear, what can you do?

Encourage the students to speak clearly and listen responsibly. Tell them that you will check in with them to see how they are doing.

2 Read Poems Aloud

Review that this week the students have heard two stories by William Steig and have gotten ideas for their own writing from the stories. Explain that poetry is another type of writing that can spark writing ideas. Explain that today and tomorrow you will read poems aloud. Encourage the students to think about whether they might like to try writing poems themselves.

Explain that today you will read two poems by Jack Prelutsky. Read the poem “I’m Sorry!” (page 26) aloud slowly and clearly. Tell the students that you will reread the poem and ask them to listen for repeating words or patterns. Reread the poem; then ask:

Q What’s funny about this poem?

Q What patterns or repeating words did you hear?

Students might say:

“I heard ‘I’m sorry’ over and over.”

“It’s funny how it ends with ‘I’m sorry for being a brat!’”

Read the poem “I’m Much Too Tired to Play Tonight” (page 27) aloud slowly and clearly. Again, tell the students that you will reread the poem and ask them to listen for repeating words or patterns. Reread the poem; then ask:

Q What patterns or repeating words did you hear?

Students might say:

"It kept repeating 'I'm much too tired.'"

"It's funny because he keeps saying he's too tired, but he's not tired enough to go to bed."

3 Distribute Student Writing Handbooks and Look at Poems More Closely

Distribute the Student Writing Handbooks, one to each student. Explain that the handbook contains copies of some of the read-alouds, spelling lists, and other kinds of pages to help the students with their writing this year.

Ask the students to open their copies of the handbook to pages 1–2, where the two poems they heard are reproduced. Ask them to reread the two poems aloud in pairs and to talk about patterns or other interesting things they notice about the poems. After several minutes, signal for the students' attention and ask:

Q What patterns or other interesting things did you notice as you read these poems?

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA4) and explain what the students can do during this time.

Writing Time

- Try writing a funny poem.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.
- Add ideas to your writing ideas section.

WA4

Have the students write silently for 10–15 minutes. Remind them to double-space their writing.

Emphasize that during the silent writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Everyone (including you) will be writing silently. You will let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Teacher Note

In this lesson, the students informally explore poems. They are not expected to recognize elements of poetry or to be proficient in writing poems at this point (although some students may be able to do so). They will explore poetry in more depth in a later unit.

Teacher Note

Remember, joining the students for a few minutes of silent writing demonstrates that writing is important and that you expect the students to work independently and tap into their own thinking and creativity during this time.

Teacher Note

Have the students hold onto their pads of self-stick notes to use as needed at the end of each Writing Time to save blank pages for unfinished pieces.

ELL Note

Questions like these help the students get to know one another, which in turn creates a sense of community that benefits everyone. English Language Learners, in particular, rely on having a supportive environment in which they can take the necessary risks to practice and grow in their use of English.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then walk around the room and observe them.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?

If you notice students having difficulty staying in their seats or writing in silence, call for the class's attention and remind them of your expectations before having them resume writing. Be aware that some students may need to just sit and think for a while before they start writing. Give them uninterrupted time to do this.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 6 of the Assessment Resource Book.

At the end of Writing Time, signal for the students' attention. Ask them to briefly review their writing from today. Then ask:

Q Do you think you might want to continue adding to this piece later?

Explain that if they wish to add to this piece later, they will need to save space in their notebooks to do so. Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student and tell the students to place notes on the next two or three blank pages to remind them to save those pages to continue their pieces. When they start a new piece of writing, they will skip pages with self-stick notes. If they don't wish to continue their pieces, they do not need to save any pages today.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing as a Class

Have the students put their pencils and pads of self-stick notes away (but not their notebooks).

Have a few volunteers read their writing aloud. Encourage the other students to express their interest and appreciation after each reading. Use questions such as:

Q What did you like about [Lyle's] piece?

Q What questions can we ask [Molly] about what she wrote?

6 Reflect on Interactions

Explain that the students will have frequent opportunities this year to read their writing to other students and to the whole class. Ask questions such as the following.

- Q If you shared your writing with the class today, how did that feel?
- Q What did you do to listen responsibly to others when they shared their writing?

Students might say:

"I looked at the person who was sharing."

"I didn't talk while people were reading their writing."

"I turned my whole body toward the person reading so he'd know I was really paying attention."

Getting Ideas from Poetry

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a pattern poem
- Think of ideas to extend the pattern
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Hear Poetry

Have partners get out their writing notebooks and Student Writing Handbooks and sit together at desks today.

Explain that you will read another poem aloud today, this one by Shel Silverstein. Encourage the students to listen for patterns and to think about whether they might like to try writing poems like this themselves.

2 Read "The Fly Is In" Aloud

Read the poem "The Fly Is In" (page 28) aloud slowly and clearly. Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 3 and follow along as you read the poem again. Then ask:

- Q What is Shel Silverstein doing in this poem?

Students might say:

"He's connecting each thing to the thing after it."

"The poem repeats words like 'is in' or 'is on.'"

"Instead of saying 'the fly is in the milk, the milk is in the bottle,' it just says 'the fly is in the milk is in the bottle.'"

Materials

- "The Fly Is In" (see page 28)
- Student Writing Handbook page 3
- "Stanza for 'The Fly Is In'" chart (WA5)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA6)
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2)

Teacher Note

Note that on some days partners will need to be sitting at desks for Getting Ready to Write.

3 Write a Stanza for “The Fly Is In” as a Class

Ask the students to reread the first line of each of the four stanzas of the poem; then ask:

Q If we were going to write another stanza for this poem, what might the first line be?

Students might say:

“The ant is on . . .”

“The dog is near . . .”

“The bird is over . . .”

Display the “Stanza for ‘The Fly Is In’” chart (WA5). Using one of the students’ suggestions, write a first line on the chart. Add six lines to complete the stanza, using the students’ suggestions.

Stanza for “The Fly Is In”

The ant is on

The cake is on

The plate is on

The tablecloth is on

The table is on

The sand is on

The beach.

WA5

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA6) and have the students write silently for 10–15 minutes. Remind them to double-space their writing.

Writing Time

- Try writing a pattern poem.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA6

Review that during the silent writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Everyone (including you) will be silently writing on their own. You will let them know when Writing Time is over.

Join the students in silent writing for 5–10 minutes; then walk around and observe them.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?
- Are they skipping lines in their notebooks?

If necessary, remind the class of your expectations for silent writing during this time. Note which students write easily and which ones have difficulty getting started. If you notice any student struggling to start writing after 10 minutes, pull her aside quietly and ask questions such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q What interesting thing has happened in your life that you could write about? What could you write as a first sentence for that idea?
- Q What ideas have you written in your writing ideas section? Let's pick one and talk about what you might write.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 7 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Remind them to use self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share Writing and Reflect on Interactions

Have the students put their pencils away and have a few volunteers read their writing aloud. Encourage the other students to express their interest and appreciation after each reading. Use questions such as:

- Q What did you enjoy about [Rodrigo's] piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Bethany] about what she wrote?
- Q Why is it important that we show interest and appreciation for one another's writing?

---

EXTENSION

Read a Variety of Genres Aloud

One goal for the first few weeks of this program is to expose the students to a variety of genres through read-alouds. This week the students heard fiction stories about characters who could not exist in real life or events that could not happen in real life, and they heard funny poems. In Week 2, they will hear nonfiction stories drawn from the author’s life. In Week 3, they will hear more nonfiction.

Whenever you have time, read additional examples of fiction (such as historical fiction, mystery, and science fiction), nonfiction (such as memoir, biography, joke and riddle books, “how-to” books, magazine or newspaper articles, and other expository text), and poetry aloud.

About William Steig

excerpted from The Big Book of Picture-Book Authors & Illustrators
by James Preller

William Steig grew up in a creative household, where artistic and musical pursuits were encouraged. As a child he loved to read; Robinson Crusoe, Robin Hood, and Pinocchio were his favorite books. . . . Steig began his career as a cartoonist. The year was 1930, and the United States was in the throes of the Great Depression. To help support his family, Steig sold his first cartoon to The New Yorker magazine. . . . Steig found a job in advertising but, he says, “detested” it. Fortunately, in 1967, fellow New Yorker cartoonist and children’s author Robert Kraus suggested that Steig try his hand at writing children’s books. Steig jumped at the opportunity because he saw it as a way to leave advertising. His first book for children, CDB!, was soon published. And a new career had begun.

Although William Steig’s illustrations have been widely praised, it is his way with words that readers seem to enjoy most. He uses all sorts of long, outrageous words, like cantankerous and recumbent, that are not usually found in picture books. He also uses made-up words, such as dramberaberoomed and jibrakken sibibble digray.

William Steig respects the intelligence of kids—that’s why he doesn’t hesitate to insert long words into his stories. . . . William Steig’s career in children’s books almost didn’t happen. He never intended to become an author and illustrator. He once said, “If I’d had it my way, I’d have been a professional athlete, a sailor, a beachcomber, a painter, a gardener, a novelist, a banjo player, a traveler.”

I'm Sorry!

by Jack Prelutsky

I'm sorry I squashed a banana in bed,
I'm sorry I bandaged a whole loaf of bread,
I'm sorry I pasted the prunes to your pants,
I'm sorry I brought home the ants.

I'm sorry for letting the dog eat the broom,
I'm sorry for freeing a frog in your room,
I'm sorry I wrote on the wall with sardines,
I'm sorry I sat on the beans.

I'm sorry for putting the peas in my hair,
I'm sorry for leaving the eggs on your chair,
I'm sorry for tying a can to the cat,
I'm sorry for being a brat!

Poem

I'm Much Too Tired to Play Tonight

by Jack Prelutsky

I'm much too tired to play tonight,
I'm much too tired to talk,
I'm much too tired to pet the dog or take him for a walk,
I'm much too tired to bounce a ball,
I'm much too tired to sing,
I'm much too tired to try to think about a single thing.

I'm much too tired to laugh tonight,
I'm much too tired to smile,
I'm much too tired to watch TV or read a little while,
I'm much too tired to drink my milk or even nod my head, but I'm not nearly tired enough to have to go to bed.

OVERVIEW

The Bicycle Man

by Allen Say
Two strangers visit an elementary school in rural 1940s Japan.

“About Allen Say”

excerpted from houghtonmifflinbooks.com
(see pages 48–49)

Allen Say speaks about the origins of The Bicycle Man in his Caldecott Medal acceptance speech.

Tea with Milk

by Allen Say
May feels pulled between Japanese and North American cultures.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA7–WA12

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)
- “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1)

Reproducible

- (Optional) “Excerpt from Tea with Milk” (BLM2)

Professional Development Media

- “Setting Up Writing Conferences” (AV7)

- “Turning and Looking at the Speaker” (AV16)
- “Planning a Lesson” (AV33)

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I’m sure a beautiful empty notebook was the reason I wrote my first book. It was begging for filling.”

— Jacqueline Jackson

In your writing notebook, start a section at the back called “Writing Ideas.” Jot down events and ideas from your own life that you might want to write about. Consider:

- What is your earliest memory?
- When did something strange happen to you?
- When did you feel truly content or truly miserable?
- When did you realize something you didn’t know before?

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss good writing.
- Students learn how a professional author gets writing ideas from his own life.
- Students begin to explore prewriting techniques.
- Students explore first- and third-person points of view.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students learn the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share.”
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 8 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a class set of the “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1) on page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book. This week, you will begin conferring with individual students during Writing Time and documenting your observations and suggestions for each student.

Day 1

Getting Ideas from Our Own Lives

Materials

- The Bicycle Man
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

Teacher Note

To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’ ” (AV13).

If your students are already familiar with “Think, Pair, Share,” simply remind them of your expectations.

Teacher Note

During “Think, Pair, Share,” pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before saying “Turn to your partner.”

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story based on the author’s life
- Generate ideas from their own lives that they can write about
- Learn “Think, Pair, Share”
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that you have been reading different kinds of texts aloud to help the students get ideas for writing. Remind the students that last week they heard the poems “I’m Sorry!” “I’m Much Too Tired to Play Tonight,” and “The Fly Is In.” Direct the students’ attention to the “Writing Ideas” chart and add write funny poems. Explain that you will continue to add other ideas to the chart over the coming weeks.

2 Teach “Think, Pair, Share”

Explain that today the students will learn a cooperative structure called “Think, Pair, Share.” Explain that “Think, Pair, Share” is like “Turn to Your Partner.” The difference is that the students think quietly before they talk in pairs. Explain that you will ask the students a question, and they will think about it quietly for a moment. Then, when you say “Turn to your partner,” they will turn to their partners and begin talking. When you signal for their attention, they will end their conversations and turn their attention back to you.

To have the students practice “Think, Pair, Share,” ask:

Q What is one thing you want to keep in mind today to help your partner conversation go well? [pause] Turn to your partner.

After a few moments, signal for the class’s attention, and then have a few pairs share with the whole class what they discussed.

Encourage the students to try the ideas they talked about as they use “Think, Pair, Share” during today’s lesson.

3 Read The Bicycle Man Aloud

Remind the students that last week they heard Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and Wizzil, both fantasy stories by William Steig. Explain that today you will read a different kind of story—one based on the author’s own life.

Show the cover of The Bicycle Man and read the title and the author’s name aloud. Explain that this story takes place many years ago in Japan, at a time when it was unusual to see foreigners, or non-Japanese people, especially away from the cities.

Show the dedication on page 3 and read it aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations as you read. Clarify vocabulary as you read, using the procedure you used in Week 1, Day 1, Step 3 (see page 8).

Suggested Vocabulary

sensei: (Japanese) teacher (p. 3)

tiered: stacked (p. 9)

hoisted: lifted (p. 28)

gyroscope: tool with a wheel that spins (p. 32)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

piggyback: on the back and shoulders of another person (p. 18)

a hush fell: it got very quiet (p. 19)

cleared: jumped over (p. 22)

4 Discuss the Story and Generate Writing Ideas

Facilitate a class discussion using the question that follows. Encourage the students to listen responsibly to the discussion by turning to look at the person who is speaking.

You might say:

“Shawna is going to speak now. Let’s all turn and look at her.”

Q Why might Allen Say have dedicated this book to Morita Sensei?

Explain that authors often write about events or people from their own lives. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What has happened in your own life that you may be able to write about?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

After a few moments, signal for the class’s attention. Ask the students to open their notebooks to the writing ideas section and label the next blank page “Ideas from My Own Life.” Have them jot down some of their ideas on this page.

After the students have had a chance to write, call for their attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

Teacher Note

You might use self-stick notes to mark the places in the book the suggested vocabulary words appear. Write the meaning of the word on the note to help you define it smoothly without interrupting the reading. For more information about planning lessons, see “Preparing the Daily Lessons” (page xxxv). To learn more, view “Planning a Lesson” (AV33).

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, help the students learn that they are talking to one another (not just to you) during class discussions by directing them to turn and look at the person who will speak. Ask speakers to wait until they have the class’s attention before starting to speak. If students are unable to hear the speaker, encourage them to politely ask the speaker to speak up. Repeating these techniques over the next couple of weeks will help the students learn to participate responsibly in class discussions.

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Turning and Looking at the Speaker” (AV16).

Teacher Note

If you notice many students having difficulty coming up with ideas, call for their attention and have a few volunteers who have ideas share aloud what they have written. Then have the students go back to thinking and writing.

Teacher Note

The purpose of this unit is to give the students practice writing freely about topics they choose. Read-alouds are intended solely to stimulate creativity; the students may or may not be inspired to write something related to a read-aloud. At this point, they are not expected to know the features of genres or to write in any particular genre.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Explain that they will write silently for 10–15 minutes. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA7) and explain what the students can do during this time:

Writing Time

- Choose an idea in your writing ideas section and write about it.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA7

Remind the students that they do not need to finish one piece of writing before starting a new one. Also review that during the silent writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around. Everyone (including you) will be silently writing on their own. You will let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Have the students write for 10–15 minutes. Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes; then walk around the room and observe them, assisting students as needed. If necessary, remind them to double-space their writing.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students writing in silence?
- Are they staying in their seats?
- Are they skipping lines in their notebooks?

If you notice any student struggling to start writing after 10 minutes, pull him aside quietly and ask questions such as:

- Q What are you thinking about right now?
- Q What interesting thing has happened in your life that you could write about? What could you write as a first sentence for that idea?
- Q What ideas have you written in your writing ideas section? Let's pick one and talk about what you might write.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3); see page 8 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Remind them to use their self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away and have a few volunteers share what they wrote. Ask questions such as:

- Q Who wrote about an event from your own life? Tell us about it.
- Q Who added ideas from your own life to the writing ideas section? Tell us about them.
- Q What other things did you write about today?

Getting Ideas from Our Own Lives

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a story based on the author's life
- Generate ideas from their own lives that they can write about
- Practice "Think, Pair, Share"
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard The Bicycle Man, based on the life of the author, Allen Say. Explain that today you will read another story by Allen Say that is based on his life. Encourage the students to think as they listen about whether they might like to write something similar to it.

2 Read Tea with Milk Aloud

Show the cover of Tea with Milk and read the title aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Materials

- Tea with Milk
- "Quick-write" chart (WA8)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA9)

Suggested Vocabulary

calligraphy: beautiful handwriting (p. 10)

matchmaker: person who finds husbands or wives for single people (p. 10)

fuming: angry (p. 12)

crumpets: small, toasted cakes (p. 26)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

homesick: missing home (p. 6)

was drafty: allowed cold air to come in (p. 6)

kimonos: long Japanese robes (p. 6)

fee: money paid for work (p. 12)

trolley: kind of small train used in cities (p. 16)

Teacher Note

When more than one question appears next to a Q, ask the first question, discuss it, and follow up with the subsequent questions.

Teacher Note

Quick-writes are short exercises that everyone participates in and discusses. They are an opportunity for the students to learn a technique together and to practice overcoming their “inner critic” by writing quickly, continuously, and without planning or deliberation.

3 Discuss the Story and Introduce Quick-writes

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Who from his own life is Allen Say writing about? Why do you think so?

Explain that the students will do a quick-write to help them get ideas for their own writing. Explain that a quick-write is a 5-minute writing exercise that everyone will do together. It gives everyone a chance to practice a particular writing technique.

Display the “Quick-write” chart ( WA8) and read the questions on it.

Quick-write

- What is your earliest memory?
- When did something strange happen to you?
- When did you feel happy, sad, or afraid?
- When were you really, really surprised?

WA8

Ask the students to open to the next blank page in their notebooks, pick one question from the list, and write quickly about it for 5 minutes. Students who run out of things to say before the time is up should choose another question and keep writing. Encourage the students to keep their pencils moving and to write whatever comes to mind without thinking too much about it.

After 5 minutes of silent writing, call for the students' attention. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What was it like to try to keep your pencil moving for the whole time?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

After a few moments, signal for the students' attention and have one or two students share what they discussed with the class. Explain that the students will have more opportunities to practice writing quickly and continuously during quick-writes. Point out that this kind of writing can be very helpful in getting writing ideas flowing.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA9) and have the students write silently for 10–15 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing about anything that interests you.

WA9

Remind the students that they do not need to finish a piece of writing before starting a new one. Also review that during the silent writing period, everyone (including you) will be silently writing on their own. You will let them know when Writing Time is over.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. If necessary, remind them to use their self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces they wish to continue the next day.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away. Ask questions such as those that follow, inviting the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class, if they wish.

Q Who wrote about your own life today? Tell us about it.

Q What else did you write about? Tell us about it.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or a partner about their drawings. If necessary, support them by writing down key words or phrases they want to use so that the students can copy these words into their writing.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to prompt the students to turn and look at the person who will speak (for example, "Beth is going to speak now. Let's all turn and look at her"). During the discussion, scan the class to ensure that the students are looking at the person who is speaking. If necessary, interrupt the discussion to remind them of your expectations.

WRITING ABOUT READING

WRITING ABOUT READING ACTIVITIES

Writing About Reading activities provide the students with opportunities to write opinions about and make connections to texts they discuss in the Being a Writer program. The activities are optional and can be done at the end of the lesson or another time. For more information, see “Writing About Reading” on page xx.

Materials

- Tea with Milk
- Copy of “Excerpt from Tea with Milk” (BLM2) for each student

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, you will need to visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the “Excerpt from Tea with Milk” (BLM2).

Teacher Note

If necessary, explain to the students that an opinion is a strongly held point of view. When we give an opinion, we are telling what we think about something.

Write Personal Opinions About Tea with Milk

Show the cover of Tea with Milk and remind the students that they heard this book earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the book Tea with Milk?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Then explain that you will reread the part of the story where Masako moves to the city of Osaka. Distribute the copies of “Excerpt from Tea with Milk” (BLM2) and explain that the passages you will read are reproduced there. Ask the students to follow along as you read aloud. Reread aloud pages 12–18, skipping the second paragraph on page 16 as well as the sentence that starts “As Masako filled it out . . .” on page 18. After reading, ask:

Q Do you think it’s right of Masako to move to Osaka without talking to her parents about it? What in the story makes you think that?

Students might say:

“I think it is right because her parents want her to marry someone she doesn’t love. I think that because she calls him a ‘catfish’ and says, ‘I won’t marry a moneylender!’”

“I think she does the right thing because she isn’t really a Japanese girl; she was born in the United States. She wants to move away and live on her own, like a lot of American daughters do.”

“I think it’s wrong of her to move away without talking to her parents about it. They must be worried. The story says she doesn’t even let them know until she already has a job.”

Explain that each student will write a paragraph about whether Masako is right in moving away without asking her parents’ permission. Tell the students that readers often have different opinions about the characters and events in a story, and that is fine. What is important is that they support their thinking with facts and details from the story. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing an opinion about Masako’s actions.

You might say:

"I think that even though Masako's parents are worried, she does the right thing by moving to Osaka without talking to them about it. I'll start by writing: In Allen Say's book Tea with Milk, Masako's parents want her to marry a banker, but instead she moves to Osaka and only tells her parents after she has found a job. I think that Masako is right to move to Osaka without talking with her parents about it. Notice that I stated my opinion and I put the title and the author's name in the opening sentences. Now I need to explain my thinking using facts and details. I'll write: Masako's parents want her to marry someone she does not love. She says, 'I could never marry someone like that.' Masako does not want to live the life of a Japanese girl. She says, 'I should leave home and live on my own, like an American daughter.' She thinks that if she asks her parents, they probably would say, 'No.' Now I need a closing sentence. I'll write: Usually I think young people should talk with their parents about big decisions, but in this case I think Masako is smart not to ask her parents' permission."

Explain that each student should start with one or two opening sentences that state his opinion and include the title of the book and the author's name, a reason for his opinion, a fact or detail to support his reason, and a closing sentence that wraps up his writing. Have the students write about their opinions. If time permits, invite the students to share their opinions with the class.

Learning About an Author

Day 3

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author
- Practice "Think, Pair, Share"
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Learn About Allen Say

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Show the covers of The Bicycle Man and Tea with Milk. Remind the students that they heard these stories by Allen Say, which are based on events in his life, earlier in the week. Direct the students' attention to the "Writing Ideas" chart and add write stories from your own life.

Materials

- "About Allen Say" (see pages 48–49)
- Tea with Milk from Day 2
- The Bicycle Man from Day 1
- "Writing Ideas" chart from Day 1
- "Writing Time" chart (WA10)
- Class set of "Conference Notes" record sheets (CN1)

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q If Allen Say were here right now, what questions would you ask him about himself or his writing? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Explain that you will read some information about Allen Say from his website. Read the excerpt from the author’s biography in “About Allen Say” (pages 48–49) aloud, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

apprenticed himself: started working for another person in order to learn a trade emigrate: leave one country and settle in another autobiographical: about his own life

After reading, ask:

Q What did you find out about Allen Say?

Students might say:

“I found out that Allen Say was born in Japan but moved to America as a child.”

“I learned that he was a photographer before he was a writer.”

Point out that Allen Say has received the Caldecott Medal, a prize awarded every year to the illustrator of an outstanding children’s picture book. In a speech he gave when he accepted the Caldecott Medal, he described returning to Japan to visit his old elementary school. Tell the students that you will read an excerpt from his speech aloud.

Read the excerpt from Allen Say’s Caldecott Medal acceptance speech aloud; then ask:

Q What surprised you about his description of this visit?

2 “Think, Pair, Share” About Memories

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q Allen Say wrote about memories he had. What memory do you have that you might be able to write about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers report their thinking. Invite the students to jot down any ideas they want to keep thinking about under “Ideas from My Own Life” in the writing ideas section of their notebooks.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q How did it help you today to take time to think before talking to your partner?

Teacher Note

If many students have difficulty generating writing ideas from their own lives, you might signal for their attention and brainstorm some ideas together, for example:

- Things that make us mad
- Things we wonder or have questions about
- Things we notice or observe
- Our hobbies and interests
- Places we’ve visited or would like to visit

Q What problems did you have with “Think, Pair, Share” today? How can you avoid those problems next time?

Students might say:

“Taking time to think helped me get the idea in my head before I talked to my partner.”

“We ran out of time before both of us got to talk during ‘Think, Pair, Share.’”

“Next time we can make sure to take turns so both of us get to talk.”

“I did all the talking because my partner didn’t say much. Next time I will ask my partner what she thinks.”

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10) and have the students write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about an idea from your own life or memories.
- Choose an idea from your writing ideas section and write about it.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA10

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, call individual students to a back table and confer quietly with them for 5–10 minutes each to get a sense of their strengths and weaknesses as writers. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses.

(continues)

Teacher Note

The independent writing period is gradually getting longer. Observe the students carefully and increase the time more slowly if necessary. The goal is to get the students writing independently for at least 30 minutes per day by the end of Unit 1.

Teacher Note

For more information about conferring with students, see “Teacher Conferences” (page xxxviii). To learn more, view “Setting Up Writing Conferences” (AV7).

Teacher Note

You might use the “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1) as a survey of the students’ goals and interests. For more information, see “Student Goals and Interests Survey” on page vii of the Assessment Resource Book.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. If necessary, remind them to use self-stick notes to save blank pages in their notebooks for any unfinished pieces they wish to continue the next day.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have the students put their pencils away. Ask and discuss the questions that follow, inviting the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class, if they wish.

- Q Who wrote about your own life today? Tell us about it.
- Q What else did you write about? Tell us about it.

---

EXTENSION

Talk with Older Family Members

Tell the students that many authors, like Allen Say, write about stories told to them by older family members. Ask:

- Q Who in your family might have stories to tell you about a long time ago?

Invite the students to ask their parents, grandparents, or other older family members to tell them stories about the past. Encourage the students to write the stories down to share with the class.

You might also wish to invite the students’ older family members to the class to share their stories with all of the students.

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore a prewriting technique
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

Materials

- "Writing Ideas" chart from Day 3
- "Writing Time" chart (WA11)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce a Prewriting Technique

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that writers often get new ideas for writing from pieces they have written earlier. Today you will show the students a technique that some authors use to help them come up with new ideas.

Ask the students to open their notebooks to their latest pieces of writing and to read the pieces silently. After a moment, ask the students to reread the pieces and to underline one or two sentences they particularly like.

When the students finish, ask a few volunteers to read aloud sentences they underlined and explain what they like about those sentences.

Students might say:

"I like this sentence because I used the words rumbling thunder, and I like those words."

"I underlined this sentence because it tells what I pictured in my mind."

"I like the way this sentence sounds, so I underlined it."

2 Quick-write: Writing from a Favorite Sentence

Ask the students to copy one of the sentences they just underlined onto the top of the next blank page in their notebooks. Explain that the students will do a 5-minute quick-write in which they will begin with the sentences they copied. Remind them to try to keep their pencils moving and write whatever comes to mind without planning or thinking too hard about it.

Have the students write silently for 5 minutes. Then call for their attention and have partners turn to each other and share what they wrote. Have a few volunteers read what they wrote to the class. Ask:

- Q Was it hard or easy to start writing from the sentence you wrote at the top of your page? Why?
- Q When your partner read his or her writing to you, how did you show that you were interested?

Explain that starting a new piece with a sentence from an earlier piece is a technique the students can use whenever they feel stuck or when they don't know what to write about. On the "Writing Ideas" chart, add start with a good sentence from another piece.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA11) and ask the students to write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA11

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Writing and Reflect on Interactions

Have a few volunteers share what they wrote. Encourage the class to think about what they can do to express interest and appreciation as their classmates share. Ask questions such as:

- Q Who worked on the piece you started during the quick-write? Tell us about it.
- Q What questions or comments do you have for [Jalissa] about the piece she just shared?

- Q Why is it important that we show interest in and appreciation for one another's writing? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Exploring Point of View

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Reflect on their writing
- Generate ideas from their own lives that they can write about
- Explore writing from first- and third-person points of view
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Point of View in The Bicycle Man and Tea with Milk

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that this week they heard the stories The Bicycle Man and Tea with Milk, both by Allen Say. Explain that you will reread the first sentence of The Bicycle Man. Encourage the students to think as they listen about whom the sentence describes. Reread the first sentence on page 4 of The Bicycle Man. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q Who is the sentence about?

If necessary, explain that the sentence is about the author, Allen Say. Explain that you will read the first sentence from Tea with Milk, and ask the students to think about whom the sentence describes. Read the first sentence on page 4 of Tea with Milk.

Materials

- Tea with Milk from Day 3
- The Bicycle Man from Day 3
- “Writing Time” chart (WA12)

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before saying “Turn to your partner.”

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Who is the sentence about?

If necessary, explain that the sentence is about the author’s mother. Explain that both stories are about Allen Say’s own life, but in Tea with Milk he is writing about someone else’s experiences instead of his own.

Explain that when we write about ourselves using words like I and me, as Allen Say does in The Bicycle Man, we are using the first-person point of view. When we write about other people in our lives, using words like she or he, as the author does in Tea with Milk, we are using the third-person point of view.

2 “Think, Pair, Share” About People to Write About

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What person in your life might you write about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers report their thinking. Invite the students to add any ideas they want to keep thinking about under “Ideas from My Own Life” in the writing ideas section of their notebooks.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have the students sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA12) and ask the students to write silently for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Choose a memory or idea from your own life and write about it.
- Write about someone you know or remember.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA12

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to call individual students to a back table and quietly confer with them for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Writing and Reflect on Interactions

Have a few volunteers share what they wrote. Encourage the class to think about what they can do to express interest and appreciation as their classmates share. Ask questions such as:

Q What questions or comments do you have for [Noah] about the piece he just shared?

Q Why is it important that we show interest in and appreciation for one another's writing? [pause] Turn to your partner.

About Allen Say

Excerpted from houghtonmifflinbooks.com

Excerpt from Biography

Allen Say was born in Yokohama, Japan, in 1937. His father, a Korean orphan raised by a British family in Shanghai, and his mother, a Japanese American born in Oakland, California, divorced when Say was eight. . . . [As a youngster,] Say apprenticed himself to Noro Shinpei, a cartoonist whom he greatly admired. This period marked the beginning of his serious training in the arts and was to prove pivotal in Say's life. . . .

When Say turned sixteen . . . [his father] decided to move to America. He had by that time acquired a new family, but asked Say if he would like to emigrate as part of that family. Say left Tokyo, and with no knowledge of English but with a sense of adventure traveled to California. . . .

[As an adult,] he pursued the idea of commercial photography as a career. Say's work brought him in contact with art directors and designers, who were often impressed with his ability to sketch out ideas before committing them to film. . . .

[In 1988,] Allen Say quit photography completely and dedicated himself to writing and illustrating books for children. . . . Tree of Cranes, Grandfather's Journey (winner of the 1994 Caldecott Medal), Tea with Milk, and The Sign Painter are the most autobiographical of his works.

Excerpt from Caldecott Medal Acceptance Speech

. . . I returned to Japan in 1982, to attend a grammar school reunion. The Bicycle Man had just been published, and, carrying a stack of brand-new books, I went back to the place where the story took place thirty-six years earlier. Mrs. Morita, my first-grade teacher, came to meet me at the train station. It was like one of those teary Japanese movies.

Nineteen classmates came to the party, and we had to point one another out in the old school photographs someone had the sense to bring. I handed out copies of The Bicycle Man, and the banquet suddenly died. No one remembered the incident.

"That wonderful black American soldier, he rode the principal's bicycle, don't you remember?" I pleaded.

About Allen Say

They looked at me with embarrassment and incomprehension, even pity. Then they laughed and called me Urashima Taro, the fisherman of the ancient folktale who returns home after being away for four hundred years.

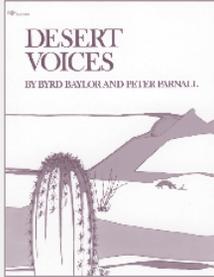

On the following day, some of my classmates took the day off and accompanied me to the street where I used to live. All the houses were still standing except mine. It had been demolished only a month before my return.

My homecoming wasn't turning out the way I had expected.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

Desert Voices

by Byrd Baylor and Peter Parnall

Desert creatures convey what life is like in lyrical verses.

Everything Reptile

by Cherie Winner

Questions about reptiles are answered.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA13–WA17

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA4–CA5)
- “Conference Notes” record sheets (CN1)
- “Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record” sheet (WS1)

Reproducible

- Unit 1 family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3)
- “Social Reflection” (AV14)

TEACHER AS WRITER

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss nonfiction writing.
- Students explore making lists as a prewriting technique.
- Students write freely about things that interest them.
- Partners confer with each other.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students build on one another's thinking during class discussion.
- Students use writing and pair conference time responsibly.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, write the following three prompts on a sheet of chart paper (you will post the chart so the students can refer to it during Being a Writer lessons and throughout the school day):

"I agree with _____ because . . ."

"I disagree with _____ because . . ."

"In addition to what _____ said, I think . . ."

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4) on page 9 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, collect a variety of examples of non-book writing, such as flyers, brochures, recipes, signs, instructions, advertisements, letters, newspapers, catalogs, magazines, and e-mail messages.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA5) on page 10 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit's family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student. (For more information about the family letters, see "Family Letters" on page lii.)

"From things that have happened and from things as they exist and from all things that you know and all those you cannot know, you make something. . ."

— Ernest Hemingway

Making lists can get your creative juices flowing. Make a list of things you know a lot about, for example:

- Owning a dog
- Having a twin
- Book clubs
- Important advice I've received
- Being an early riser
- Photography
- Planning a family vacation

Pick one of the items on your list and write a short draft telling what you know (and what you would like to know) about that topic.

Day 1

Getting Ideas for Writing

Materials

- Desert Voices
- Charted discussion prompts, prepared ahead
- “I Could Be” chart (WA13)

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Teacher Note

If you have already taught your students these discussion prompts, simply review them and encourage their use today.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a narrative text based on factual information
- Learn discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Quick-write / sentences from an animal’s point of view

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Teach Discussion Prompts

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that you have been reading and discussing various texts to help them get ideas for their own writing.

Point out that in class discussions it is important for the students to listen carefully and contribute their ideas. Direct the students’ attention to the charted discussion prompts and read them aloud. Explain that you would like them to use the prompts when they add to the discussion today and that doing so will help them listen and build on one another’s thinking.

Keep the chart posted so the students can refer to it during Being a Writer lessons and throughout the school day.

2 Read Aloud from Desert Voices

Show the cover of Desert Voices and read the title and authors’ names aloud. Read “Jackrabbit” (pages 7–9), “Rattlesnake” (page 13), and “Coyote” (pages 25–26) aloud. Read slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

gullies: large cracks worn into the earth by water (p. 8)

cast: throw (p. 13)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

shedding: falling off (p. 13)

3 Discuss Desert Voices

Discuss the question that follows. Remind the students to use the discussion prompts as they respond. If you notice that they are not using the prompts, pause during the discussion to ask, “How can you say that using one of the discussion prompts?”

Q What’s unusual about the way the authors use I in this book?

Students might say:

“The authors are letting animals speak for themselves.”

“I agree with [Gerald] because the animals tell about themselves using the word I.”

“In addition to what [Joselle] said, usually I is a human being in a story or poem. This book is unusual because the author writes about animals as if they had voices.”

Point out that in Desert Voices the author tells the story of the desert from the animals’ points of view, using I as if the animals had a voice and were talking to the reader. Remind the students that when an author uses I to tell a story, the author is writing from the first-person point of view. Ask:

Q If you wanted to write in the voice of an animal, what animal might you choose? What might you write?

Display the “I Could Be” chart (🗨️ WA13) and record the students’ ideas on the chart as they generate them.

I Could Be

- an ant: Everything around me would be really big.
- an elephant: using my trunk to spray water
- a bird: things I see as I am flying

WA13

WRITING TIME

4 Quick-write: Using I to Write as an Animal

Ask partners to choose one of the recorded ideas and together come up with a couple of I sentences from that animal’s point of view. Give partners a few moments to talk; then have a few pairs share their sentences with the class.

Have each student pick another of the recorded ideas and do an individual 5-minute quick-write, writing several I sentences from that animal’s point of view. Explain that if students run out of things to write from the point of view of that animal, they should pick another animal and continue writing. Have the students write on the next blank page of their notebooks.

After 5 minutes, call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers read their sentences aloud. Explain that students who wish to may continue writing from an animal’s point of view during Writing Time tomorrow.

Teacher Note

When more than one question appears next to a Q, ask the first question, discuss it, and follow up with the subsequent questions.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty generating ideas, suggest some like those in the “I Could Be” chart and ask, “What else could you write?”

Teacher Note

Save the “I Could Be” chart to use on Day 2.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to reinforce the students' responsibility during class discussions by reminding them to turn and look at the person who will speak, having speakers wait until they have the class's attention before starting to speak, and asking one another to speak up if they can't hear. Also remind them to use the discussion prompts to address their comments directly to one another.

Day 2

Materials

- Everything Reptile
- “I Could Be” chart (WA13) from Day 1
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Week 2
- Charted discussion prompts from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA14)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Using Prompts

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q How do the discussion prompts help us talk as a class?

Encourage the students to continue to use the prompts in discussions and tell them that you will check in with them periodically.

Getting Ideas from Nonfiction

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss a nonfiction text
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another's thinking
- List nonfiction topics they could write about
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Learn procedures for pair conferences

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard Desert Voices, in which the authors use I to write from an animal's point of view. Display the “I Could Be” chart (WA13) and remind the students that it lists animals that they might write about using I. Direct the students' attention to the “Writing Ideas” chart and add use “I” to tell a story from an animal's point of view.

Explain that today they will hear how an author deals with the topic of animals in a very different way.

2 Read Parts of Everything Reptile Aloud

Show the cover of Everything Reptile and read the title and the author's name aloud. Read the introduction on page 7; then read several of the chapter titles from the table of contents (pages 4–5). Explain that you will read a selection of pages from the book.

Read pages 8–11 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the photographs and clarifying vocabulary as you read. After you read each section aloud, read aloud the caption that accompanies the photograph.

Suggested Vocabulary

species: type [of reptile] (p. 8)

After reading, ask and discuss the question that follows and be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard. Remind them to use the charted prompts to add to the discussion.

Q How is this book different from Desert Voices in how it tells us about animals?

Students might say:

"The author writes a question, then an answer."

"I agree with [José] because this book tells facts. Desert Voices is told like a poem."

"In addition to what [Tania] said, this book has pictures of real reptiles."

Read aloud several more questions from the table of contents. From these, select a few as a class, and then read the answers.

Explain that Everything Reptile is part of a series of nonfiction question-and-answer books. Point out that other titles in the series are listed on the book's back cover. Read a few of the titles aloud.

3 Quick-write: Generating Nonfiction Topics

Ask the students to consider the following question individually for a moment:

Q What nonfiction topic would you like to know more about?

Have the students do a 5-minute quick-write in which they jot their ideas on a page labeled "Nonfiction Ideas" in the writing ideas section of their notebooks. After the quick-write, have partners share their ideas with each other, and then have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class. Encourage the students to continue to add to their nonfiction ideas during Writing Time, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA14) and have the students write silently for 20–25 minutes.

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because . . ."
- "I disagree with _____ because . . ."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think . . ."

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and to talk quietly with you or a partner about their drawings. If necessary, write down the key words and phrases the students want to use so they can copy these words into their writing.

Teacher Note

Continue to gradually lengthen the independent writing period. Observe the students carefully and increase the time more slowly if necessary. The goal is 30 minutes of independent writing per day by the end of Unit 1.

ELPS 2.I.iv
Step 5 and Step 6
 (all, beginning on page 56 and continuing on to page 57)

Teacher Note

In Unit 1, pairs begin conferring by informally sharing their writing with each other during Sharing and Reflecting. They learn procedures for conferring and think about how to interact productively and respectfully. In subsequent units, the students will learn more about how to give and receive specific feedback about their writing.

If your students are already familiar with pair conferring from prior grades, simply review your expectations with them.

Writing Time

- Add to your list of interesting nonfiction topics.
- Continue the I piece you started during yesterday's quick-write.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Introduce Pair Conferences

Explain that the students will meet in pairs this year to confer, which means to share and help each other with their writing. These meetings will be called pair conferences. The students will learn a lot this year about how to work with partners to give and receive helpful feedback about their writing.

Explain that you would like the students to confer with their assigned partners about the writing they did today. Point out that conferring means not just reading their writing to each other, but talking about the writing as well. Encourage partners to express their interest in and appreciation for each other's writing today.

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What can you say or do after your partner reads his or her writing to you to show that you are interested in it and appreciate hearing it?

Students might say:

- "I could tell him what part I liked in his story."
"I can ask her questions about what she wrote."
"I can say, 'Thanks, I enjoyed hearing your writing.'"

Give partners several minutes to share and discuss their writing.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students, without interacting with them, as they confer in pairs. Ask yourself:

- Do partners seem able to hear each other?
- Are they reading their writing to each other?
- Are they taking time to talk about the writing?

Note any problems pairs are having that you want to bring up during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4); see page 9 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When you notice the pair conferences winding down, signal for the students' attention and bring the class back together.

6 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Signal for the students' attention, and then ask questions such as:

- Q What went well in your pair conference today?
- Q What problems did you have? How will you avoid those problems the next time you confer?
- Q How did your partner express interest in or appreciation for your writing? How did that feel?

Students might say:

- "It was fun hearing my partner's writing and reading him mine."
"There wasn't enough time for my partner to finish reading her story. Next time I'll stop sooner."
"My partner told me he thought my poem was funny. That made me feel good."

Explain that the students will have many opportunities this year to confer about their writing.

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other.

Teacher Note

It takes repeated experience for students to learn how to talk about their own behavior and social interactions. By hearing your observations first, the students come to understand over time what responsible behavior entails. For more information about helping the students reflect on social development goals, see "Values and Social Skills" (page xxviii). To learn more, view "Social Reflection" (AV14).

Materials

- Everything Reptile from Day 2
- Charted discussion prompts
- “Writing Ideas” chart from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)

In this lesson, the students:

- List questions they can ask about a nonfiction topic
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Use writing and pair conference time responsibly
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Review Everything Reptile

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard parts of Everything Reptile. Ask the following question and remind the students to use the discussion prompts as they respond:

Q What do you remember about how the author communicates the information in this book?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Writing Ideas” chart and add nonfiction question-and-answer books to it. If the students are interested, select a few more questions from Everything Reptile as a class, and then read the answers aloud.

2 Quick-write: Generating Questions About a Nonfiction Topic

Ask the students to review the nonfiction topics they listed yesterday in their writing ideas section and pick one about which they are especially curious. Have them open their notebooks to the next blank page and write that topic at the top of it. Ask them to think quietly for a moment about the following:

Q If you were going to write a question-and-answer book about the topic you chose, what questions might you ask in your book?

Have the students take 5 minutes to jot down their own questions; then have them discuss their topics and questions in pairs. Signal for their attention and give them a few minutes to write down any additional questions that came up while they were talking. Have a few volunteers share their topics and some of their questions with the class.

Encourage the students to add to their lists of questions during Writing Time today, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA15) and have the students write silently for 20–25 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write more questions about a nonfiction topic.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA15

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Confer in Pairs

Have partners meet for pair conferences. Remind them that partners will both read and discuss their writing with each other. Invite them to listen for at least one thing they like about their partner’s writing and be prepared to share this with the class.

Day 4

Materials

- Collected pieces of non-book writing
- “Writing Time” chart (WA16)

5 Reflect on Pair Conferences

After pairs have conferred, signal for the students’ attention. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What is one thing you liked about your partner’s writing? Why did you like that part?
- Q What is one thing your partner liked about your piece of writing? You may read that part aloud, if you wish.

Getting Ideas from Nonfiction and Pair Conferencing

In this lesson, the students:

- Discuss examples of non-book writing
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Act responsibly during Writing Time and pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Discuss Collected Examples of Writing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Briefly review that the students have heard different kinds of writing in the past few weeks. Point out that there are many kinds of writing besides books. Show and briefly describe the flyers, brochures, instructions, advertisements, and/or other writing examples you have collected.

Explain that all of these pieces of writing are examples of the kinds of things the students can try writing on their own. Take just a few minutes to discuss questions such as:

- Q If you were going to write an advertisement for your favorite thing, what might you write about?
- Q If you were going to write a brochure for your fantasy vacation, what might you include in it?
- Q If you were going to write instructions for something you know how to do, what might it be?

Encourage the students to work on advertisements, instructions, or other kinds of non-book writing today during Writing Time, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently

Ask the students to get their notebooks and pencils, and have partners sit together at desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA16) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write advertisements, flyers, signs, recipes, brochures, or other kinds of non-book writing.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA16

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5–10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you his writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about his ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record his responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Day 5

Exploring a Prewriting Technique and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Writing Ideas” chart from Day 3
- Collected pieces of non-book writing from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA17)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)
- Copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

Encourage the students to continue to use the discussion prompts during whole-class discussions throughout the year to help them listen and connect their ideas to those of their classmates. Regularly remind them to use the prompts until it becomes natural for them to do so.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Confer in Pairs

Have partners confer. Encourage them to listen again today for at least one thing they like about their partners’ writing to share with the class.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences

After partners have conferred, signal for their attention. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What is one thing you liked about your partner’s writing? Why did you like that part?
- Q What is one thing your partner liked about your piece of writing? You may read that part aloud, if you wish.

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore making lists as a prewriting technique
- Write freely about things that interest them
- Use discussion prompts to build on one another’s thinking
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Discuss the writing community

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Discuss Using Prompts

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that they learned three prompts to help them build on one another’s thinking during class discussions. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q How do the discussion prompts help us talk as a class?

Encourage the students to continue to use the prompts today and tell them that you will check in with them periodically.

2 Quick-write: Making Lists

Review that yesterday the students looked at examples of non-book writing. Direct the students' attention to the "Writing Ideas" chart and add non-book writing to it.

Explain that a list is another kind of non-book writing that can be helpful for getting creative ideas flowing. Explain that writers sometimes make lists to help them think about topics and to lead them into longer pieces of writing.

Explain that one type of list writers sometimes make is a list of things they know a lot about. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to have partners first think about and then discuss:

Q What is something you know a lot about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students' attention and have one or two volunteers share what they discussed with the class.

Students might say:

"I'm an expert at skateboarding."

"I know how to knit a scarf."

"I know a lot about being an only child."

Ask the students to quickly jot in their notebooks a list of things they know a lot about. After 5 minutes, call for their attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may choose one of the items on their lists and write what they know about it, if they wish. They may also work on advertisements, instructions, other kinds of non-book writing, or anything they choose.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have partners sit together at desks. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA17) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about something you know.
- Write advertisements, flyers, signs, recipes, brochures, or other kinds of non-book writing.
- Work on a piece you started earlier.
- Start a new piece of writing.

WA17

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

ELL Note

You might invite English Language Learners to write their lists in their primary languages as well as in English.

Teacher Note

If students have difficulty generating ideas, stimulate their thinking by suggesting some of the ideas in the "Students might say" note; then repeat the question.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students for 5-10 minutes each. Ask each student to show you her writing, read some of it aloud to you, and talk about her ideas and feelings about writing. Ask the student questions such as the following and record her responses.

- Q Where did you get this idea?
- Q What do you like about writing so far this year?
- Q How do you feel about your writing?
- Q How do you feel when you are asked to read your own writing to the class?
- Q What do you do best as a writer?
- Q What kinds of things do you want to write (or write about) in the coming year?
- Q How do you want to improve as a writer this year?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 11 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Discuss Asking a Question During Pair Conferences

Explain that today partners will ask each other questions about their own writing during pair conferences. Ask each student to take a moment to reread the writing he will share with his partner today. Then ask:

- Q What is one question you'd like to ask your partner about your own piece of writing?

Students might say:

"I can ask my partner what part she liked best."

"I can ask my partner to tell me if anything was confusing."

"I want to ask my partner how he felt when I read him my piece."

Briefly discuss:

- Q What will you and your partner do to act responsibly during pair conference time today?

Tell the students you will check in with them afterward to see how they did. Give them time to confer in pairs.

Teacher Note

If students have difficulty generating questions, offer some suggestions like those in the “Students might say” note.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students, without interacting with them, as they confer in pairs. Ask yourself:

- Do partners seem able to hear each other?
- Are they reading their writing to each other?
- Are they asking each other questions about their own writing?

Note any problems pairs are having that you want to bring up during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5); see page 10 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When you notice the pair conferences winding down, signal for the students’ attention and bring the class back together.

5 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Community

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What question did you ask your partner about your writing today? How did your partner respond?
- Q I noticed that in some pairs, students [forgot to talk about the writing after reading it aloud]. How can we avoid that problem next time? Why is that important?
- Q How do you think we’re doing building our writing community? What else can we do?

EXTENSION

Discuss the Students’ Writing Goals and Interests

Remind the students that during individual writing conferences over the past few weeks you asked each student questions about his ideas and feelings about writing. Tell the students that you learned a lot about what the class is interested in writing about during the Being a Writer lessons as well as how each student wants to improve as a writer.

You might say:

“Many of you said that you were interested in writing reports this year. We’ll spend time learning how to research a topic, take notes, and then organize your notes into a report. Some of you said that you’d like to learn how to use dialogue in your writing, and others said that they would like to practice writing poems. I also learned that a few students are going to try to write longer stories this year.”

Teacher Note

The end-of-lesson reflection is important to the students’ growth as writers and to their social development. We encourage you to allow at least 5 minutes at the end of each period to help the students reflect on their work and interactions. For more information about the Being a Writer lessons, see “A Typical Daily Lesson” (page xix).

To learn more, view “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3).

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see “End-of-unit Considerations” on page 66.

Explain that you will use this information to make sure that everyone has fun writing this year. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you want to do better as a writer this year?

Q What are you excited to write about this year?

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the end of Unit 1. Partners will stay together in Unit 2.
- Send home with each student a copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1).

Assessments

- (Optional) Prior to moving on to the next unit, you might review the students' responses to the questions on the "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1) and to identify patterns across the members of the class as well as individual comments that stand out to you. After analyzing the students' responses, you might facilitate a class discussion with them about what you learned about them as writers and how you plan to build their love of writing over the course of the year. For ideas on how to facilitate this discussion, see the extension "Discuss the Students' Writing Goals and Interests" on page 65.
- (Optional) If you obtained beginning-of-year writing samples, you might want to reflect on each student's writing using the "Beginning-of-year Writing Sample Record" sheet (WS1) on page 4 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information on analyzing the writing samples, see "Beginning- and End-of-the-year Writing Samples" on page ix of the Assessment Resource Book.

Unit 2

The Writing Process

During this two-week unit, the students learn about the writing process by working with pieces of writing from their first drafts through publication. They select drafts to develop and publish. They reread their work critically and revise it, deleting extraneous information and clarifying confusing passages. They replace overused words with more interesting ones and explore strong opening sentences. They learn procedures for proofreading for spelling and conventions using the Word Bank and Proofreading Notes section of their Student Writing Handbooks. They write final versions, publish them as books, and present their books from the Author's Chair. They learn about a professional author's writing process, and they continue to confer about their writing in a caring and responsible way.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“The beautiful part of writing is that you don’t have to get it right the first time, unlike, say, a brain surgeon. You can always do it better, find the exact word, the apt phrase, the leaping simile.”

— Robert Cormier

Select a short draft that you wrote during Unit 1 to revise and develop. Use self-stick notes to mark places you might revise. Consider:

- What places in your draft do you really like? Why do you like them?
- Where could you write more clearly?
- What words could you replace with more interesting ones?
- How could you make your opening sentences stronger?

Revise your draft, either by marking up your first draft or by writing a second draft.

Writing Focus

- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.
- Students review their recent drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish.
- Students reread their writing critically and revise it.
- Students look for confusing or extraneous information in their drafts.
- Students generate alternatives for overused words and explore strong opening sentences.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this week’s read-aloud selection with your English Language Learners before you read it to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 14 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, review the pieces you have written so far this year and select a short passage to use to model deleting extraneous information and clarifying confusing passages. Prepare your sample writing to display. Alternatively, you can use the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3).
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a class set of the “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1) on page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 15 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Selecting and Completing Drafts

Materials

- “More About Allen Say” (see page 92)
- Tea with Milk from Unit 1
- The Bicycle Man from Unit 1
- “Questions About First Drafts” chart (WA1)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

In this unit, the students will work with the same partners they had in Unit 1.

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author’s writing process
- Review their recent drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first drafts of their selected writing pieces
- Use Writing Time responsibly

ABOUT TEACHING THE WRITING PROCESS

In Unit 2, the students are introduced to the writing process. They select drafts to develop, analyze and revise the drafts, proofread their work, and publish it. They confer about their drafts and consider various ways to improve their writing. The process they learn in this unit will be repeated in each of the genre units, so the students will have multiple opportunities to hone their revision, proofreading, and publishing skills.

If your students are familiar with the writing process from prior years, acknowledge this prior learning and explain that during this unit they will review and learn more about the writing process.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that over the past weeks they have been hearing various kinds of books and getting many different ideas for writing. Explain that in the coming weeks, each student will develop one piece of writing into a book for the classroom library. Point out that because other people will read their books, they will want to make the books as interesting, clear, and free of errors as any other book in the library. Today the students will review all of the drafts they have written so far this year, and each will select one to finish and develop into a book.

Before the students select their drafts, explain that they will learn how Allen Say, a professional author they met in Unit 1, develops a piece of writing into a book.

2 Review What the Class Has Learned About Allen Say

Show the covers of Tea with Milk and The Bicycle Man and remind the students that they heard these two stories by Allen Say earlier. They also learned a little about the author.

Ask:

Q What do you remember about Allen Say?

After a few volunteers have shared, explain that today you will read more about Allen Say from an interview that appears on his website. Point out that the author talks about his writing process, or how he writes, in this part of the interview.

Read the excerpt aloud slowly and clearly (see “More About Allen Say” on page 92). Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

alter: change

it's very labor intensive: it takes a lot of work

After reading, use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What did you learn about Allen Say's writing process? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students' attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class. Then use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q He says that he tries to do one book a year—that “It's a ten to twelve month marathon while I'm doing the book; it's very labor intensive.” Why do you think it takes so long for him to create a book? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students' attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“I learned that Allen Say writes the story from his drawings.”

“Maybe it takes him so long to write a book because he keeps working on it to make it better.”

3 Prepare to Review Drafts

Point out that professional authors usually work a long time on a piece of writing to get it ready to be published, or made into a book to be read by others. Authors start with an idea or a first draft. After that, they rewrite, do research, add and take out words and information, and make the piece as interesting and clear as possible. This process is called revision. Explain that, in the coming two weeks, each student will revise a piece of writing to get it ready to publish.

Explain that you would like the students to carefully reread all the drafts they have written in their notebooks and each select one draft to revise and publish. Encourage the students to select drafts that interest them, that they can imagine making changes to, and that will be fun to develop into books for their classmates to read.

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt “I remember . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question. For more information about supporting English Language Learners, see “Additional Strategies for Supporting ELLs” on page xlix. To learn more, view “Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners” (AV32).

4 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Ask them to reread their drafts and each select one to develop into a book. Then have the students start thinking about what they can add or change to make their drafts more interesting, clear, and complete.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room. Encourage the students to select pieces that offer revision possibilities. These include narratives of most kinds. If you notice them selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, a list, pieces they feel are already “perfect,” very long or very short pieces), gently guide them toward more appropriate choices. Also guide them away from drafts that are not double-spaced. Support the students by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?
- Q What might you add or change in this piece to make it more interesting?

5 Discuss Completing First Drafts

When the students have finished reviewing their drafts, display the “Questions About First Drafts” chart (WA1). Ask the students to think quietly to themselves about each of the questions. Then read the questions one at a time, pausing after each to give the students time to think. (Do not stop to discuss the questions at this point.)

Questions About First Drafts

- Does your writing make sense? What parts might you want to check again to make sure they make sense?
- What still needs to be added to your first draft for it to be finished?
- What else might readers want to know about when they are reading your piece?
- Read the last sentence of your piece. Does it feel like an ending? What more can you write to make it feel like an ending?

WA1

Have partners turn to face each other to discuss their thinking. After both partners have had a chance to share their writing and thinking, signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share with the class.

Explain that the students will finish their drafts today, making sure they have included everything they want to say at this point. Any student who finishes early may set her draft aside until tomorrow and work on another piece of writing. Encourage the students to work responsibly and independently during Writing Time.

WRITING TIME

6 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Have the students work silently for 20–30 minutes to finish their first drafts. Join them in silent writing for 5–10 minutes, and then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will most of the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?
- If not, how much additional time might they need to finish their drafts?

If you notice that many students need more time to complete their first drafts, make time for them to do so before you go on to the Day 2 lesson. Any student who has finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1); see page 14 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will begin to revise their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does it help to build our community when you do that?

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind students who finish writing their first drafts before Writing Time is over that they can look in the writing ideas section of their notebooks to get ideas for new pieces to write.

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind the students to use the discussion prompts they learned in Unit 1 as they respond. They are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

Technology Tip

You might teach the following Technology Mini-lessons in Appendix A to help your students learn how to participate safely in online communities: Mini-lesson 1, “Navigating Safely Online”; Mini-lesson 2, “Maintaining Privacy Online”; and Mini-lesson 3, “Showing Respect Online.” For more information, see “About Digital Citizenship Lessons” on page 690.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Learn More About Allen Say

If the students wish to learn more about Allen Say, have them watch a conversation with him or read another interview with him online. To find a video or print interview with the author, search online with his name and the keyword “video” or “interview.” Have the students listen to or view portions of the interview to learn more about how Allen Say gets ideas and creates the illustrations for his stories. You might provide the students with the opportunity to use some of Allen Say’s techniques to create illustrations for their own stories.

Day 2

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising for Extra or Confusing Information” chart (WA2)
- Your sample writing OR “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)
- Class set of “Conference Notes” record sheets (CN1)

Teacher Note

Teacher modeling is a regular feature of the Being a Writer program. You can use chart paper or interactive whiteboard charts (whiteboard activities) for your modeling. For more information about whiteboard activities in the Being a Writer program, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their drafts critically
- Think about extraneous information or confusing parts in their drafts
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

ABOUT TEACHING REVISION

The lessons in this unit are designed to give the students guided practice with rereading and critically analyzing their drafts before they put pencil to paper to revise. In the initial step of the process, you will ask the students specific questions about their drafts, and they will use self-stick notes to mark places where they could possibly revise. They will then watch you model making some revisions to your piece before they start to revise their own drafts.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students sit at their desks today. Explain that they will think about how they might revise and improve their drafts to make them into books that are as interesting and clear as possible. Have them open their notebooks to their completed first drafts and quietly reread them. Ask the students to look up when they are finished.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about a couple of specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Extra or Confusing Information” chart (WA2) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with self-stick notes.

Revising for Extra or Confusing Information

- Look for places in your draft where you might be able to delete, or take out, information that doesn't belong. Mark the margin next to each place with a self-stick note and write delete on it.
- Imagine reading your draft for the first time. Look for any places that might be confusing or where what's happening might be unclear. Mark the margin next to each place with a self-stick note and write confusing on it.

WA2

2 Model Revising and Deleting

Display your own writing or the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing delete in the margin next to any extraneous information and confusing in the margin next to any potentially confusing places. Then model deleting extraneous information and clarifying potentially confusing places by thinking aloud and revising on the draft.

You might say:

“This part is confusing. So it's clear where the carnival came, I think I will add these words: to my town. The sentence ‘I wonder if that small pony gets tired of giving rides all the time’ doesn't really go with the story. I'll delete it.”

TEKS 11.C.ii

Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 and Step 2 (all, beginning on page 77 and continuing on to page 78)

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience thinking about their drafts and reading them critically before they begin to revise.

Teacher Note

Have pads of self-stick notes available for the students to use during the revision phase of this unit and of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so that it marks the text without covering it up.

Teacher Note

Learning to identify confusing and extraneous text can be very challenging for students. The goal in this lesson is to introduce the idea and to continue to build on it throughout the year. You will model revising and deleting in Step 2 of this lesson.

TEKS 11.C.vii

Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (all, beginning on page 77 and continuing on to page 78)

Skill Practice Note

You might point out that we say “a small brown pony,” not “a brown small pony.” Explain that when we use adjectives (describing words) for size and color, the size comes before the color. Explain that “a brown small pony” sounds wrong because the words brown and small are in the wrong order. For more practice with ordering adjectives within sentences according to conventional patterns, see Lesson 22 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Sample First Draft

One Friday, the carnival came <sup>to my town</sup>. Big trucks pulled into the <sup>confusing</sup> fairground and started unloading a Ferris wheel and other rides, colorful booths, and even a small brown pony you could ride on for a dollar. We were in for an exciting, fun weekend!

~~I wonder if that small pony gets tired of giving rides all the time.~~ <sup>delete</sup>

Teacher Note

Save the revised “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) to use on Day 4.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to delete and revise information in their own drafts.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA4) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Review the places you marked with self-stick notes.
- Rewrite places that might be confusing.
- Cross out words or sentences that don’t belong.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

(continues)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to revise their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Revisions and Reflect on Participation

Have the students put their pencils away and gather with their notebooks to share their writing. Ask one or two volunteers to share revisions that they made today by reading the original passages aloud and then reading the revised passages. Encourage the students to give their full attention to the person who is sharing. Facilitate discussion about each volunteer’s revised passage by asking questions such as:

- Q [Teena], why did you choose to revise that passage?
- Q How do you think [Teena’s] revision improves the piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Teena] about her revision?

Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking:

- Q How did you do with giving your full attention to the person who was sharing? Why is it important that we try to do that every time?

Teacher Note

The students will use their pads of self-stick notes again on Day 4 of this week.

Day 3

Pair Conferencing

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)

Teacher Note

This lesson may require an extended class period. To ensure that the lesson moves smoothly, keep discussions focused and brief. (See the Facilitation Tip on page 233 for additional support for pacing class discussions.)

ELPS 2.I.iv

Steps 1–6

(all, beginning on page 80 and continuing on to the top of page 83)

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, suggest some ideas like those in the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart and ask, “What else can you ask your partner?”

In this lesson, the students:

- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Use pair conference time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare for Pair Conferences

Explain that today partners will meet to confer about their drafts. This is an opportunity for each student to get feedback from a reader about the strengths of a piece and how it might be improved.

Explain that, in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help the other person create the best possible piece of writing. It is important that each student share what he likes about his partner’s piece and also offer suggestions and questions to help his partner improve the piece. Ask:

Q What kind of feedback do you think would be helpful to improve a piece of writing? Why?

Q If you have questions about or suggestions for improving the piece, how would you want to communicate them so it helps your partner?

Encourage partners to use a helpful tone when giving each other feedback about their writing.

2 Think About What to Ask Partners During Pair Conferences

Before beginning the pair conferences, ask the students to reread their own drafts and think about what they want to ask their partners about their writing. After the students have had a chance to read, ask:

Q What would you like to ask your partner today about your own draft?

As the students generate ideas, record them on a sheet of chart paper titled “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” (see diagram on page 81).

Questions for My Partner About My Draft

What part do you like best?

Is anything confusing?

What can I write to make it clearer?

Explain that partners will take turns reading their drafts, including revisions, aloud. Remind the students to use the questions on the chart to get specific feedback before going on to the other partner's draft.

Before the students work with their partners, model conferring with a volunteer. Begin by deciding together who will go first. When you discuss your draft, model referring to the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart to get ideas. When you discuss your partner's draft, model giving helpful feedback.

You might say:

"Would you like to read first or would you like me to read first?"

"Is there anything in my draft that you found confusing?"

"I thought the part [about seeing the bear] was exciting. I wasn't sure if you were [inside the car or outside] when that happened. Maybe you can make that part clearer."

3 Confer in Pairs

Give the students ample time to confer in pairs. You might let pairs spread out in the classroom during the conferences so partners can hear each other.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe conferring pairs without interacting with them. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are they discussing questions from the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart?
- Are partners giving each other specific feedback?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe so you can discuss them with the students in Step 4. Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 15 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Teacher Note

For more information, view "Managing Pair Conferences" (AV8).

Facilitation Tip

Continue to prompt the students to turn and look at the person who will speak. (For example, you might say, “Archie is going to speak now. Let’s all turn and look at him.”) During the discussion, scan the class to ensure that the students are looking at the person who is speaking. If necessary, interrupt the discussion to remind them of your expectations.

Teacher Note

Save the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart to use in Week 2.

TEKS 11.C.ii
TEKS 11.C.v
TEKS 11.C.ix
TEKS 11.C.x
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5 (all, beginning on page 82 and continuing on to page 83)

When most pairs have had time to discuss their drafts, signal for the students’ attention.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Feedback Received

Gather the class and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Explain that authors pay close attention to feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise Drafts Based on Conference Feedback

Have the students return to their desks. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA5) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add or change things in your draft based on partner feedback.
- Rewrite places that might be confusing.
- Cross out words or sentences that don’t belong.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA5

As the students work, circulate around the room. Support students who are having difficulty incorporating feedback into their drafts by having them join you at a back table and quietly discussing questions such as:

- Q What feedback did your partner give you about your draft? Do you agree or disagree with it? Why?
- Q Your partner said that she [got confused at the end of your story]. What did she say was [confusing] to her? How can you rewrite it [so it’s clear]?

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Revisions

Have a few volunteers each share a revision they made today by reading the original passage aloud and then reading the revised passage. Have the volunteers tell the class why they made their revisions and how the changes improve their pieces.

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Generate alternatives for overused words
- Reread their drafts critically
- Revise their drafts
- Work independently during Writing Time
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students get their notebooks, pencils, and self-stick notes and sit at desks with partners together. Review that they began to revise their drafts earlier this week. Remind the students that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces of writing as interesting and clear as possible before publishing them. Explain that today you will ask them to think about several more specific ways they might improve their drafts.

2 Generate Interesting Words

Explain that one thing authors do to make their writing better is to replace overused words (uninteresting, everyday words that we use over and over) with other, more interesting words. Title a piece of chart paper “Use More Interesting Words” and write I saw a good movie beneath the title. Underline the word good. Explain that good is an example of an overused word. Ask:

Q What other words could we use to mean good in this sentence? For example, what words might we use to describe a movie that was really, really good?

Record the words on the chart as the students report them. Point out that the words the students suggest are not only more interesting and fun, but they also communicate exactly what the writer means.

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- “Revising for Overused Words” chart (WA6)
- Your revised sample writing OR revised “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)

Teacher Note

This lesson may require an extended period. To ensure that the lesson is well paced and that the modeling in Step 4 goes smoothly, you might prepare the draft you will use and your remarks about revision in advance.

Skill Practice Note

Recognizing adjectives and verbs and understanding their functions may be review for some of your students. However, if the students need more practice with these skills, take time to review them (see Lesson 14 and Lesson 22 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Teacher Note

Save the “Use More Interesting Words” chart to use throughout the unit.

For more practice with generating interesting words, see the extensions “Generate Alternatives for Other Overused Words” on page 87 and “Use a Thesaurus” on page 90.

Students might say:

“excellent”
“terrific”
“spectacular”
“fantastic”
“stupendous”

Point out that in addition to adjectives (or descriptive words) like good, there are many overused verbs (or action words), such as run, look, sit, and said, that can be replaced with more interesting words.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What interesting words can you think of to replace the word said? [pause]
Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss for a few moments; then signal for the students’ attention and have volunteers report their ideas as you record them on the chart. Alternatives for said include asked, shouted, replied, exclaimed, mumbled, whined, and cried.

Follow the same procedure to have partners brainstorm alternative words for look. Alternatives for look include see, stare, glance, glimpse, and view. Add these to the chart.

3 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Display the “Revising for Overused Words” chart (WA6). Using the same procedure you used previously (see Day 2, Step 1 on page 77), take the students through the charted prompts.

WA6

Revising for Overused Words

- Look for the words good, said, and look in your draft. Mark them with self-stick notes.
- Look for other overused words that you might be able to replace with more interesting ones. For each one, mark the margin next to the word with a self-stick note and write replace on the note.

Have one or two volunteers share words they marked with the class. Probe their thinking by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you decide to mark that word?
- Q What word could you use to replace the one you marked?

4 Model Revising

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will look at the words they marked with self-stick notes and replace them with more interesting words. Ask the students to watch as you model making revisions.

Display your own writing or the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by identifying overused words and writing replace in the margin next to those places. Then model replacing words like good, look, and said by crossing them out and writing alternative words above or below them.

You might say:

“I used the word said to describe the part where the clown spoke to me. Said is an overused word—it’s an everyday, uninteresting word that can be used too often. What could I replace it with? He asked me a question, so I’ll replace said with asked.”

WA3

“How about one for you?” he ~~said~~<sup>asked</sup> ~~looking~~<sup>glancing</sup> at me. I ~~looked~~<sup>stared</sup> back at him nervously.

He started blowing up another balloon. Suddenly, it popped with a loud BANG! I almost jumped out of my skin! I ran all the way home.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to delete and replace overused words in their own drafts, and encourage them to refer to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart as they do so.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA7) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

WA7

Writing Time

- Review the places you marked with self-stick notes.
- Replace overused words with more interesting ones.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish the revision.
- If you finish, look for other places to make the words more interesting, or work on another piece of writing.

Explain that you will confer with students after the first 5–10 minutes of Writing Time, so you expect the students to work independently. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEKS 11.C.vii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5 (all, beginning on page 85 and continuing on to page 86)

 ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from talking with partners about places they have marked. Provide a place for them to confer quietly during Writing Time.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to revise their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share Revisions and Reflect on Participation

Have a few volunteers share one of the revisions they made today by reading their original passages aloud and then reading their revised passages. Encourage the rest of the students to give their full attention to the person who is sharing. Facilitate discussion about each volunteer’s revised passage by asking questions such as:

- Q [Robbie], why did you choose to revise that passage?
- Q How do you think [Robbie’s] revision improves the piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Robbie] about his revision?

Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q Were you able to give your full attention to the person who was sharing his or her writing today?
- Q If you weren’t giving your full attention today, what will help you give your full attention the next time we have a class discussion?

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, offer some examples like those in the “Students might say” note.

Students might say:

"I was distracted today. I think it would help for me to sit closer to the person who's sharing."

"It might help if we don't have our hands on our papers or pencils when people are sharing."

"I want to remember to turn and face the person who's sharing."

EXTENSION

Generate Alternatives for Other Overused Words

Using the same procedure you used in today's lesson (see Step 2 on page 83), brainstorm and chart words that can replace other overused words, such as bad and sad. Add them to the "Use More Interesting Words" chart. (Examples of words you might substitute for bad are awful, terrible, appalling, ghastly, and horrific; for sad, examples include depressing, gloomy, miserable, pitiful, and tragic.) For an additional activity, go to the extension "Use a Thesaurus" on page 90.

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore strong opening sentences
- Reread their writing critically
- Finish revising their drafts
- Ask one another questions about their writing

Materials

- Sylvester and the Magic Pebble from Unit 1
- Wizzil from Unit 1
- Tea with Milk from Unit 1
- "Writing Time" chart (WA8)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read and Discuss Strong Opening Sentences

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Tell the students that today they will focus on the opening sentences (the first few sentences) of their pieces. Explain that authors pay especially close attention to these sentences because good opening sentences get readers interested and make them want to keep reading. Explain that the students will listen to opening sentences from several read-aloud books from earlier in the year. They will think about how each author tries to grab our attention at the very beginning of the book.

Show the cover of Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and read the title and author's name aloud. Show and read page 3 and the first two sentences on page 4 aloud twice. Ask:

Q What does William Steig do in the first few sentences to get us interested in reading the story?

Students might say:

"When he says that Sylvester found a quite extraordinary pebble, it makes you think the story is going to be about the pebble."

"In addition to what [Charlotte] said, it makes you want to keep reading to find out what is so special about the pebble."

"In addition to what [Edward] said, there's something strange about the pebble. Pebbles you find in nature aren't usually flaming red and perfectly round. The pebble seems kind of mysterious."

Repeat this procedure to explore the opening sentences in Wizzil (page 3) and Tea with Milk (page 4).

Point out that strong opening sentences often grab the reader's attention with interesting details ("It was flaming red, shiny, and perfectly round, like a marble") or problems ("I'm bored stiff"), or by introducing an important character ("From the window in her room, the girl could see the city of San Francisco").

2 Review Opening Sentences in Drafts

Ask the students to reread the first few sentences of their own drafts. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q How might you revise your opening sentences to grab your reader's attention and make him or her want to keep reading? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students' attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class.

Students might say:

"I think my opening sentence will grab the reader's attention because the first word is Pow! My partner agrees."

"I think I'm going to revise my opening sentences because right now my piece starts with 'Once there was a little girl.' It's not very interesting."

Encourage the students to revise their opening sentences during Writing Time today.

Teacher Note

The students will learn more about the characteristics of strong opening sentences in the genre units this year.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Drafts

Tell the students that next week they will start writing final versions of their pieces to go into their books. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA8) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 15–20 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your opening sentences so they grab your reader’s attention.
- Make any other revisions you think are needed to make your piece the most interesting it can be.

WA8

Join the students in silent writing for 5–10 minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer for 5–10 minutes with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Revised Opening Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share opening sentences they revised by reading the original and revised sentences. As the students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions like those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q How is [Emilia's] revised opening different from the original?
- Q What do you think about when you hear the revised opening?
- Q What questions can we ask [Emilia] about her revised opening sentences?
- Q What are you learning about revising to make writing better?

Technology Tip

This activity focuses on using a print thesaurus, but you can modify it to support the students in using an online thesaurus. To find one, search online using the keywords “online thesaurus.” After the students have navigated to the thesaurus you selected, have them type a familiar word such as worry or large into the Search box. Discuss the word entry format and the information provided for the word. Then have partners use the thesaurus to look up words from the “Use More Interesting Words” chart.

Teacher Note

You might point out that most thesauruses include helpful information at the beginning about how to use the thesaurus. If the particular thesaurus your students are using includes other features, such as antonyms or related words, point these out as well.

EXTENSION

Use a Thesaurus

Distribute a thesaurus to each pair of students. Tell the students that today they will have the chance to discuss and practice using a reference book called a thesaurus. Tell the students that each pair of students will first look through their thesaurus and talk about what a thesaurus is and when they might use one. Then they will share their ideas with the class. Give partners a couple of minutes to explore and discuss their thesaurus, and then discuss as a class:

- Q What is a thesaurus?
- Q When might you use a thesaurus? In what ways might a thesaurus be helpful?

If necessary, explain that a thesaurus is a “book of synonyms, or words that mean the same thing or almost the same thing.” You might use a thesaurus when you are writing to help you find just the right word or to avoid using the same word over and over again.

Have partners open their thesaurus to the first two-page spread of words. Point out that the words are listed alphabetically and that the guide words at the top of each page are the first and last words on the page. Explain that guide words help you find a word you are looking for. Also point out that for each word, the thesaurus provides the part of speech (for example, noun, verb, or adjective) and synonyms.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Use More Interesting Words” chart, and review that these are synonyms for the words good, said, and look on the board. Explain that partners will choose one of these overused words, look it up in the thesaurus, and share the synonyms they find with the class.

Give partners a minute or two to choose a word, find it in the thesaurus, and discuss its synonyms. When most pairs have finished, discuss the words and their synonyms as a class by asking:

Q What word did you look up? What synonyms did you find for the word?

Follow up by asking:

Q Which of these synonyms are already on our chart? Which synonyms should we add to the chart?

Add the synonyms the students suggest to the chart.

---

Teacher Note

Circulate as the students look up the words. If the students are having trouble finding a word, call for their attention and show them how to use the guide words to locate a word.

Teacher Note

You might explain that when using a thesaurus, it is a good idea for the students to look up the synonyms they are finding in a dictionary for more information about the words' meanings and how they are used. Synonyms listed for a word in a thesaurus may have varying shades of meaning and use.

More About Allen Say

excerpted from an interview by Stephanie Loer at houghtonmifflinbooks.com

How do you begin a picture book?

Usually, my books start with a very vague notion or idea. Then I begin to draw things that come into my mind. Eventually, I see a pattern within the pictures. It is this pattern that develops into a tentative plot. My next step is to complete all my paintings for the book. After they are finished, I write the story. This may seem like the reverse of what appears to be the natural storytelling process, but for me, the plot of the story develops through the pictures.

Where do you get your ideas?

I often go for walks to look for ideas. Ideas are what I call “found objects.” I can see them with the naked eye or visualize them in my mind. Finding ideas is a process of feeding one’s mind with seemingly unrelated images and information. Then these things spark a thought or a progression of thoughts.

How do you work once you have a story in mind?

In most cases, I work better with a deadline. Once the images are in my mind, I like to work pretty much nonstop until the book is complete. Over the years, I’ve learned to trust this process, because it works for me.

What do you think makes a good story?

A good story should alter you in some way; it should change your thinking, your feeling . . . the way you look at things. A story is . . . rather like venturing through a maze. When you come out of it, you should feel slightly changed.

How long does it take you to write and illustrate a book?

I try to do one book a year. It’s a ten to twelve month marathon while I’m doing the book; it’s very labor intensive. But I just love what I’m doing so much that, although it’s difficult, it makes me very happy.

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students confer with one another and the teacher.
- Students learn procedures for proofreading their writing.
- Students write their final versions and publish them as books.
- Students present their books to the class from the Author's Chair.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA9–WA14

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)
- “Social Skills Assessment Record” sheet (SS1)
- “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA1)
- “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1)

Reproducible

- Unit 2 family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Assessing Student Writing” (AV38)
- “Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV74)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 16 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, collect enough folders (manila, pocket, or any other kind) for each student in the class.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, create a sample handmade book by stapling together several blank pages with a construction-paper cover.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, establish a procedure for the students to follow when they are ready to present their completed books from the Author’s Chair. You might have the students place finished work in a basket; then, during the sharing time, you can call on authors in the order they completed their books to read them aloud to the class. Designate a place in the class library for the students’ published books after the students have shared them from the Author’s Chair and shown them to their families. (See “Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom” on page xli for other suggestions about organizing the writing program in your classroom.)
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student’s published piece.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have the students type and print their pieces this week. You can also recruit parent volunteers to help with this task.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I believe more in the scissors than I do in the pencil.”

— Truman Capote

Carefully reread the draft you revised in Week 1. Consider:

- Are there words or sentences in this draft that seem extraneous—like they do not really belong?
- Are there ideas you can express in fewer words?

Think about what you can delete from your draft or rewrite for concision. Make these revisions, either by marking on your current draft or by writing a new one.

Day 1

Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA9)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Begin writing the final versions of their pieces
- Initiate pair conferences
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Initiating Pair Conferences

Have the students stay at their seats. Explain that this week the students will work on final versions of the pieces they revised last week and make them into books for the class library. Explain that partners will confer about their revised drafts. Remind the students that in earlier lessons, everyone conferred at the same time. This week, however, the students may initiate their own conferences whenever they want feedback about their writing.

Explain that today you will signal about halfway through Writing Time that the students may confer in pairs about their writing, if they wish. If possible, designate a place in the room for pair conferences that is a little apart from where other students are writing. Tell the students that they should ask their assigned partners to confer first. If a student’s partner is busy writing and would rather not stop to confer, the student may ask someone else. Ask questions such as:

- Q How can you respectfully ask someone to confer with you?
- Q If someone asks you to confer and you would rather keep writing, how can you respond to that person respectfully?
- Q What else will you do to be responsible if you confer with a partner today?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 1 and review the chart. Ask:

- Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions if they choose to confer with a partner today.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently and Confer

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA9) and distribute loose, lined paper to each student. Have them work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Reread your draft.
- Make any other revisions that you think are needed to make your piece the most interesting it can be.
- When you are satisfied with it, start copying it neatly in pencil on lined paper.

WA9

Join the students in silent writing for 5–10 minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed. About halfway through the writing period, signal that the students may confer in pairs, if they wish.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they initiate and participate in pair conferences.

Ask yourself:

- Are the students able to find partners and begin conferring with minimal disruption to the class?
- What problems are the students having initiating pair conferences?
- Do conferring pairs seem to stay on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Do they return promptly to writing at the end of their conferences?

Notice if the noise level is such that students can continue to write if they wish. Note any problems that you observe and be ready to bring them up during the reflection discussion. Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3); see page 16 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to remind the students to turn and look at the person who will speak. Ask speakers to wait until they have the class's attention before starting to speak. Scan the class to ensure that all students are actively listening and participating in the discussion. Notice the effect of using this facilitation technique on the students' engagement in class discussions over time.

Teacher Note

Save the "Questions for My Partner About My Draft" chart to use in the Personal Narrative and Fiction genre units.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Gather the students to discuss how they did writing and conferring during Writing Time today. Remind them that, in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help the other person create the best possible piece of writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q If you participated in a pair conference today, what questions did you ask your partner about your writing?
- Q What did your partner do or say that helped you?
- Q If you continued to write while pair conferences were going on, were you able to concentrate? Why or why not?
- Q I noticed that [the room got very noisy when people were walking around looking for partners to confer with]. What can we do next time to avoid this problem?

SOCIAL SKILLS ASSESSMENT NOTE

During the final week of this unit, assess the students' social skill development using the "Social Skills Assessment Record" sheet (SS1). Access and print the record sheet from the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) or make a copy from page 176 of the Assessment Resource Book. Note that you will use the same record sheet to document each student's progress when you reassess social skill development in the winter and spring.

Day 2

Proofreading

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- "Writing Time" chart (WA10)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Writing folder for each student

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread their drafts for spelling
- Become familiar with their word banks and learn how to add words to them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Act considerately toward others

MORE ABOUT REVISION AND PROOFREADING EARLY IN THE YEAR

Remember that the students are just being introduced to the writing process in this unit. They will repeat the process in every genre unit, so they will have multiple opportunities to practice their revision and proofreading skills and to learn new skills (see “Skills and Conventions” on page xxiii). Do not worry at this point if you notice that students are publishing pieces that could have undergone more revision. The students will improve with repeated practice over time.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Proofreading for Spelling

Have the students stay at their seats. Review that this week the students are working on their final versions and making them into books for the class library. Point out that published pieces of writing need to include correct spelling and have as few errors as possible. Today and tomorrow the students will proofread their drafts, or check them for spelling, punctuation, and capitalization errors.

2 Introduce the Word Bank in the Student Writing Handbook

Ask the students to reread their revised drafts (even if they have already begun copying them as final versions) and circle any words they are not sure are spelled correctly. Stop the students after a couple of minutes and ask:

Q What words have you circled so far?

Have a few volunteers report the words they circled. Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Word Bank section. Explain that this section contains an alphabetical list of correctly spelled words students their age often use in writing.

Ask the students to each look up the first word they circled in their word banks, check the spelling, and correct it in their drafts, if necessary. Ask:

Q If the word does not appear in the word bank, what else might you do to check the spelling?

Students might say:

“I could ask someone at my table to help me spell it.”

“I could ask my partner about it during a conference.”

“I could ask you.”

“If I know where I read that word in a book, I can look it up there.”

“I could look it up in a dictionary.”

Point out that each page of the word bank has blank lines where the students can add the new words they learn. After finding the correct spelling of a new word, they will add it to the appropriate page in the word bank (see diagram on page 100). The word will be there for them in the future, if they need it.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty looking up words, take time to review dictionary skills. Write a word on the board, and then look it up together as a class. Repeat with other words, if necessary. For more practice, see the technology extension “Use an Online Dictionary” on page 102.

Teacher Note

If the students have difficulty answering this question, offer some examples like those in the “Students might say” note.

Explain that the word bank is the first place the students should go to check the spelling of a word. Tell them that they will check and correct their spelling before starting or continuing to work on their final versions today.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🕒 WA10) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes. Distribute more loose, lined paper to the students, if needed.

Writing Time

WA10

- Check and correct your draft for spelling.
- Start or continue to write your final version neatly in pencil.

If necessary, remind the students who have already begun writing their final versions to correct any misspellings they may have copied into them. Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs, if they wish. Briefly discuss:

Q If you choose to confer with a partner today, how will you go about it in a way that is considerate of your classmates?

Encourage the students to act responsibly and considerately during Writing Time.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Distribute a writing folder to each student and tell the students that they will keep any loose pages they are working on in their folders. Ask the students to write their names on the front of their folders.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect as a Class

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What words did you check the spelling of today? Which of these words did you find in your word bank? How did you check on words that were not in the word bank?
- Q If you participated in a pair conference, what did you do to be considerate of your classmates? How do you think that helped your classmates today?

Explain that the students will continue to work on their final versions tomorrow.

Technology Tip

To find an appropriate online dictionary, search the Internet using the keywords “children’s dictionary” or “online dictionary for students.”

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use an Online Dictionary

Write the following words where everyone can see them: remarkable, exclamation, incognito, genuine, traipse, repulsive, and kibitz.

Have partners sit together at computers. Have the students navigate to the dictionary you selected. Direct their attention to the Search box. Ask them to type a familiar word such as airplane or skate into the box and click the Search button or icon. Then discuss:

Q What information is provided for the word [airplane]?

Have volunteers share their thinking. As necessary, point out these key features:

- The division of the word into syllables
- The pronunciation of the word, which may include both a phonetic respelling and an audio pronunciation, accessed through an Audio button or icon
- The word’s part of speech (whether the word is a noun, verb, adjective, or other part of speech)
- The definition(s) of the word
- A sentence or phrase that shows how the word is used

Point out any additional information or features, which may include lists of synonyms or antonyms, the etymology (history) of the word, or links to related words or other information. Then briefly discuss:

Q In what ways is this online dictionary [different from/the same as] a print (book) dictionary?

Q Which type of dictionary do you prefer? Why?

Direct the students’ attention to the words on the board and explain that the words are from Sylvester and the Magic Pebble and Wizzil, two stories they heard earlier in the year. Tell the students that partners will choose one of the words they want to know about, search for the word in the online dictionary, and share what they learned about the word with the class.

Give pairs a minute or two to choose a word, find it in the dictionary, and read and discuss the word’s entry. When most pairs have finished, discuss each word as a class by asking:

Q Who looked up the word [traipse]? What did you find out about the word?

Q Who else looked up the word [traipse]? What can you add to what [Sam and Katie] told us about the word?

Encourage the students to continue to use online or print dictionaries to look up the meanings of words they do not know.

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread for punctuation and capitalization
- Become familiar with their proofreading notes and start using them
- Act responsibly while writing and conferring during Writing Time
- Discuss problems that arise in pair conferences

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Proofreading for Punctuation and Capitalization

Have the students stay at their seats today. Review that yesterday the students learned how to proofread their drafts for spelling. Remind them that published pieces of writing need to be as free from errors as possible. Today they will learn how to proofread their drafts for punctuation and capitalization.

2 Introduce the Proofreading Notes in the Student Writing Handbook

Explain that the students will reread their revised drafts and check that each of their sentences begins with a capital letter and ends with a period, question mark, or exclamation point. Also ask them to check whether they have capitalized the first letter of any proper nouns. If necessary, remind students that a proper noun is a “noun that names a specific person, place, thing, or organization.”

Have the students take several minutes to proofread their drafts for punctuation and capitalization (even if they have already begun copying their final versions).

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Proofreading Notes section as you display the “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA11). Explain that the students will use this section to keep track of the conventions (rules) of writing that they will learn this year. Over time, this section will become a checklist of things to pay attention to when the students get ready to publish their drafts.

Write the notes from the diagram on page 104 on the chart, and ask the students to copy these notes onto the first page of the Proofreading Notes section in their handbooks.

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA11)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA12)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final drafts
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Skill Practice Note

Using beginning and ending punctuation and capitalizing the first letters of proper nouns will be review skills for many of your students. However, if the students need more practice with these skills, take time to review them (see Lesson 1 and Lesson 27 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide).

Teacher Note

Additional conventions are taught in the genre units of this program (see “Skills and Conventions” on page xxiii). The students will record the conventions they learn in their proofreading notes as they learn them.

Proofreading Notes

Rule	Example	Notes
Capitalize the first letter of sentences.	Once upon a time . . .
Punctuate the end of sentences.	He ran. Did he run? Boy, can he run!
Capitalize the first letter of proper nouns.	John, Doctor Lee, Topeka, Kansas, United States, Saturday, November, Golden Gate Bridge, Senate	A proper noun names a specific person, place, thing, or group.

Explain that the students will check and correct their punctuation and capitalization before they work on their final versions today.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA12) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Check and correct your draft for punctuation and capitalization.
- Finish checking and correcting your draft for spelling.
- Continue to write your final version neatly in pencil.

Remind the students who have already begun writing their final versions to correct any punctuation or capitalization errors they may have copied into them.

Tell the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs. As the students write, confer with individual students.

Technology Tip

If computers are available, you might have some students type their final versions (see “Do Ahead” on page 95).

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread his writing using his proofreading notes?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Have them put their loose pages in their folders until tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Remind the students that the goal of conferring is to help one another create the best possible piece of writing. By helping one another, they build the writing community. However, sometimes problems can arise during pair conferences. Ask questions such as:

- Q What kinds of problems have you experienced when finding a partner to confer with? How can we avoid those problems?
- Q What kinds of problems have you experienced [during/at the end of] conferences? How can we avoid those problems?
- Q What can we do to make sure everyone is invited to confer sometimes?

Students might say:

"Sometimes I have to ask five different people before anyone will confer with me. It's frustrating."

"It seems like people don't know what to do after they finish a conference. They hang around and start bothering people."

"We want to make sure everyone gets invited to confer so no one feels left out of our community. Maybe we can try to ask someone we haven't asked before."

At the end of this discussion, summarize the students' ideas for avoiding or solving problems during pair conferences. Encourage the students to keep these things in mind the next time they confer, and tell them that you will check in with them to see how they are doing.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use the Whiteboard to Play Web-based Grammar and Punctuation Games

Interactive games are an engaging way for students to review grammar and punctuation skills. Begin by teaching and practicing a skill using a lesson in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide. Then, for additional practice, use the interactive whiteboard to play a web-based game. To find age-appropriate games, search the community area provided by the manufacturer of your interactive whiteboard system or search online using the keywords "[grammar/punctuation] activities." Introduce each game and play it as a class before inviting pairs of students or individuals to play the game.

Technology Tip

To learn more about using web-based whiteboard activities to support students' writing, view the "Using Web-based Whiteboard Activities" tutorial (AV74).

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore features of published books
- Make their final versions into books
- Handle materials responsibly
- Share materials fairly

ABOUT PUBLISHING FOR THE CLASS LIBRARY

In this lesson, the students learn a simple procedure for turning a final version into a book. They will staple together the pages of their final versions, along with any illustrations they have created, using construction-paper covers. The goal at this point is to give the students a way to publish their writing quickly, without investing a great deal of time in a bookmaking project. For suggestions about publishing materials you might provide and other suggestions about managing the program, see “Tips for Managing the Program in Your Classroom” on page xli.

GETTING READY TO WRITE*1 Explore Features of Published Books

Have the students sit at their desks. Explain that the students who have finished writing their final versions may create their books today.

Show the sample book you made and pass it around for the students to see. Explain that they may add illustrations on unlined paper, if they wish. They will assemble the completed pages in the proper order with construction-paper covers. They will then write the book titles and their names on the covers.

Explain that the students may wish to include additional features that professional authors sometimes include in their books. Use the read-aloud books from Unit 1 to review some of the features the students could include, such as a title page, dedication, author note, and back-cover blurb. Tell the students that these books will be available during Writing Time so that everyone can look at these features more closely.

Materials

- Read-aloud books from Unit 1
- Sample handmade book
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Supply of unlined paper for illustrations
- Construction paper for book covers
- Markers, crayons, and other supplies for making illustrations
- Stapler
- “Writing Time” chart (WA13)
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Technology Tip

There are a number of methods for creating beautiful handmade books that you might want to teach your students later this year. Search for ideas online using the keywords “making books with children.”

Teacher Note

If you are teaching the Making Meaning reading comprehension program from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, you might include books from Making Meaning Units 1 and 2 in this discussion.

2 Discuss Handling Materials Responsibly and Sharing Them Fairly

Make sure all the necessary bookmaking materials are in a central location and explain the procedure you would like the students to follow to get and return the materials. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How will you handle the bookmaking materials responsibly?
- Q You may need to share supplies, like markers or the stapler. If someone is using something you need, what can you do?
- Q If you're using something that someone else needs, what can you do to share it fairly?

Encourage the students to keep these things in mind as they work today. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently and Confer in Pairs

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA13) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- Include illustrations and other features, if you wish.
- Assemble your book and staple it together with a cover.
- Write the title and your name on the cover and decorate it.

WA13

Remind the students that you will signal after 10–15 minutes of silent writing to indicate that they may confer in pairs. As the students write, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread her writing using her proofreading notes?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes” record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

After 10–15 minutes, call for the students’ attention and say that in a moment you will signal that they may confer in pairs. Remind them that yesterday they talked about some possible problems that could arise during pair conferences and how they might avoid those problems. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What do you want to remember today to help avoid problems during pair conference time?

Continue with Writing Time and signal that the students may confer in pairs.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Have the students return classroom materials to their proper places.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Time and Conferring

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How did you handle our class materials responsibly today?
- Q What problems did we have with sharing the materials today? How can we avoid those problems tomorrow?

Q What problems were you able to avoid or solve during pair conference time today?

Q I noticed today that [people returned to their seats when they finished their conferences]. How did that help our Writing Time go smoothly?

Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to be responsible during Writing Time and pair conference time.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Publish Student Writing Online

There are a number of websites where students can publish their writing online. Publishing online allows family members and friends to easily access and enjoy students' writing. You might make this an option for interested students. Search online for such websites using the keywords "publishing student writing online."

Day 5

Publishing

Materials

- Chart paper and a marker
- "Writing Time" chart (WA14)
- A chair to use for the Author's Chair
- Copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1) for each student

Teacher Note

If the students need additional time to finish their writing, consider doing Steps 3-6 (Author's Chair sharing) on another day.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review and reflect on the writing process
- Finish making their books
- Present their books to the class from the Author's Chair
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reflect on Writing Process and Community

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that over the past several weeks they have learned about how to take a piece of writing through the writing process, from the very first idea to a published book. Ask:

Q What have you learned about how to take a piece of writing from a first draft to a published book?

Title a sheet of chart paper “Writing Process” and write the steps that follow as you remind the students what they did (see diagram below).

Explain that the students will go through this writing process numerous times this year as they explore different kinds of writing, including fiction, nonfiction, and poetry.

Remind the students that they have been building a writing community in which everyone feels safe, cared for, and supported. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss questions such as:

- Q How will being part of a writing community help us as we go through the writing process? [pause] Turn to your partner.
- Q What part(s) of the writing process do you want to get better at this year? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Signal for the students’ attention and have one or two volunteers share their thinking with the class.

WRITING TIME

2 Write Independently

Have the students return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA14) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Teacher Note

Post the “Writing Process” chart where everyone can see it.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- Include illustrations and other features, if you wish.
- Assemble your book and staple it together with a cover.
- Write the title and your name on the cover and decorate it.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

If necessary, review the procedures for getting materials. As the students write, confer with individuals.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece that each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Do the ideas connect in a way that makes sense?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize misspelled words and correct them?
- Does the student proofread his writing using his proofreading notes?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?
- Q What is another way you can say this? Write that down.
- Q What sentence could you add to give your reader more information?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes" record sheet (CN1); see page 17 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. As the students return classroom materials to their proper places, move the chair you have designated as the Author's Chair to the front of the area where you gather the class.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Introduce Author's Chair Sharing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that when they publish pieces of writing this year, they will present them to the class from the Author's Chair.

Explain the procedure you would like the students to follow when they are ready to present their books from the Author's Chair (see "Do Ahead" on page 95).

4 Discuss Speaking Clearly and Expressing Interest in Other People's Writing

Before asking a volunteer to share from the Author's Chair today, have a discussion about how the students will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you're sharing your book with the class?
- Q If you're in the audience and you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her writing? Why is it important to express interest in other people's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive and considerate audience members. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

5 Conduct Author's Chair Sharing

Ask for a volunteer who has finished publishing her book to read it aloud from the Author's Chair. Encourage the author to show any illustrations and any additional features she included. At the end of the reading, facilitate a discussion using questions like those that follow. Give the author an opportunity to respond to the class's comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Janice's] book?
- Q What part did you really like? Why?
- Q What parts were [funny/scary/suspenseful/surprising]? Why?
- Q What questions can we ask [Janice] about her book?

Follow this procedure and have a few more students share from the Author's Chair. Assure the students that they will all have a chance to share their books from the Author's Chair in the next few days.

TEKS 1.A.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Steps 4-6
(all, beginning on page 113 and continuing on to page 114)

6 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author’s Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q How did we do today as an audience? What might we want to work on during the next Author’s Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a book today, how did you feel? What did the members of the audience do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Explain that the students may take their books home to share with their families. Then they will bring the books back to class to be kept in the class library. Show the students the place in the class library that you have designated for the students’ published books. Explain that these books will be available for them to read during independent reading time. Emphasize that the students must handle their classmates’ handmade books carefully and return them to the class library when they are done.

Teacher Note

For information about wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see “End-of-unit Considerations” on page 115.

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, you will need to make a class set of the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1) on page 19 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Teacher Note

If necessary, you might model filling out the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet using your own writing or the “Sample First Draft” chart (WA3) from earlier in the unit.

EXTENSION

Introduce “Student Self-assessment”

Have the students bring their published writing and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Tell the students that when writers complete a piece of writing, they often reread it and think about what they did well and what they might do better in their next piece. Distribute a “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1) to each student. Explain that the sheet lists characteristics of good writing. Tell the students that today they will read their published pieces to see which of the characteristics they included in their writing and which characteristics they need to work on next time.

Refer to the “Student Self-assessment” record sheet. Ask the students to follow along as you read aloud the characteristics in the left column. After reading, explain that the students will read their stories and look for these characteristics in their own writing. Point out that if they see a characteristic in their writing a lot, they will put a check in the box under the words “I did it!” If they see the characteristic some of the time, they will put a check in the box under the words “I did it some of the time.” If they still need to work on including a characteristic in their writing, they will put a check in the box under the words “I’m still working on it.”

Read the reflection questions at the bottom of the record sheet aloud. Ask the students to think about the questions and write their responses in the space provided.

Give the students enough time to analyze their writing and fill out the record sheet. When most students have finished, have partners share with one another what they did well and what they want to continue to work on. Then ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What did you do to make your writing fun and interesting to read?
- Q What is something you want to continue to work on as you write this year?

Collect the record sheets to put in the students' writing portfolios. At the end of the next unit, you might have each student complete another self-assessment record sheet and compare his responses.

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the end of Unit 2. The next unit you teach will be a genre unit. While the genre units may be taught in any order, Personal Narrative or Fiction is a good choice at this point. We recommend that you teach the Expository Nonfiction unit later in the year.
- You will need to reassign partners before you start the next unit.
- Send home with each student the student's published piece and a copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to share their published pieces with their families. Remind the students to bring the pieces back to class after their families have read them so they can be placed in the class library.
- Save the students' published writing (or copies of it) to use for reflection and discussion in Unit 9.

Assessments

- Before continuing with the next unit, take this opportunity to assess individual students' writing from this unit. See "Completing the Individual Writing Assessment" (IA1) on page 20 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- You might record your students' progress over the course of the year using the "Individual Writing Assessment Class Record" sheet (CR1) on page 180 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- (Optional) Prior to sending the students' published writing home to share with their families, you might have each student analyze her writing using the "Student Self-assessment" record sheet (SA1) on page 19 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information about administering this assessment, see the extension "Introduce 'Student Self-assessment'" on page 114.

Teacher Note

For more information, view "Assessing Student Writing" (AV38).

Genre

Personal Narrative

During this four-week unit, the students explore the genre of personal narrative and write about significant topics and events from their lives. They explore the characteristics of a good personal narrative, including sensory details, transitional words and phrases, engaging openings, and effective endings. They learn about the writing practices of professional authors as they hear, discuss, and write personal narratives. Socially, they ask one another questions about their writing and give feedback in helpful and respectful ways. They also practice giving their full attention to the person who is speaking and expressing interest in and appreciation for other people's writing.

Week 1

OVERVIEW

Childtimes: A Three-Generation Memoir

by Eloise Greenfield and Lessie Jones Little

Three generations of women remember their “childtimes.”

The Moon and I

by Betsy Byars

Author Betsy Byars remembers a snake named Moon in this memoir.

TEACHER AS WRITER

*“No surprise for the writer, no surprise for the reader.
For me the initial delight is in the surprise of remembering something I didn’t know I knew.”*

— Robert Frost

Think about memorable events from your life that you could write about. List these in your notebook; then select one or two of the most vivid memories to describe in short drafts. Write about what happened, when it happened, who was involved, and what is memorable about each event.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss personal narratives.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing practice.
- Students generate writing ideas from their own lives.
- Students visualize sensory details.
- Students draft personal narratives, focusing on single, interesting events or topics from their own lives.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Since this week’s readings have few illustrations, consider bringing in visual aids (such as needle and thread, or photographs of Joe Louis or of a snake) to support the students’ comprehension.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during this unit. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 32 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1) on page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring Personal Narrative

Materials

- “First Days” and “Mama Sewing” (Childtimes, pages 129–130 and 142–143)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA1)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Teacher Note

For more information about personal narrative, view “Exploring Personal Narrative” (AV41).

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for the unit. If necessary, take a few minutes at the beginning of today’s lesson to let them get to know each other better by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Hear and discuss a personal narrative
- Quick-write about early memories
- Write freely about things that interest them

ABOUT PERSONAL NARRATIVE

Personal narratives offer writers the opportunity to think about and write true stories about the meaningful experiences of their lives. Personal narratives describe significant events and explain how those events led to learning or a change of some kind. Character change in a narrative, whether of a fictional character or a real person, often results from learning an important lesson or gaining a new realization about oneself or the world. Personal narratives also include sensory details to make the writing come alive for readers, as well as transitional words and phrases to help readers connect events or ideas.

In the study of personal narrative at grade 4, the students identify significant single events from their lives and write about them in detail. They learn to focus on the most important parts of the events they are describing, use sensory details and transitional words and phrases, and write engaging openings and endings that draw a story’s events to a close.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair Students and Discuss Working Together

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other’s names (see “Do Ahead” on page 123). Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that today’s lesson is the beginning of a four-week unit in which the students will explore a kind of writing called personal narrative. In personal narratives, authors tell stories about true things that have happened to them. Explain that partners will stay together for the unit. Ask:

Q What have you learned about working with a partner that can help your new partnership go well?

Students might say:

"We can ask each other questions and help each other."

"In addition to what [Tammy] said, you can work better together if you get to know someone."

"I agree with [Josh]. You don't have to be best friends—you just have to work together."

Encourage the students to keep these ideas in mind as they begin working with their new partners today.

2 Introduce Childtimes

Show the cover of Childtimes and read the title, subtitle, and authors' names aloud. Explain that the subtitle, A Three-Generation Memoir, means that this book of personal narratives contains true stories of the memories of three generations of women from a single family: Eloise Greenfield; her mother, Lessie Jones Little; and her grandmother Pattie Ridley Jones.

Show the photographs of the women on pages 1, 49, and 119, and explain that each section contains stories told by one of the women about what it was like to grow up during her time.

Explain that you will read some of the personal narratives from Childtimes in the coming days. Encourage the students to think as they listen about what it might be like to write narratives like these themselves.

3 Read "First Days" and "Mama Sewing" Aloud

Explain that the personal narratives you will read today were written by Eloise Greenfield. In these narratives, she tells some of her earliest memories. Read "First Days" (pages 129–130) and "Mama Sewing" (pages 142–143) aloud slowly and clearly.

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

scrapbook: book with blank pages used for saving pictures or clippings (p. 129)

sewed: made clothes, using cloth, needle, and thread (p. 142)

pout: stick out your bottom lip, usually because you are sad, mad, or disappointed (p. 143)

ashamed: embarrassed (p. 143)

Teacher Note

Regularly remind the students to use the discussion prompts they learned when they participate in class discussions. The prompts are:

- "I agree with _____ because . . ."
- "I disagree with _____ because . . ."
- "In addition to what _____ said, I think . . ."

Teacher Note

Students who experienced the Being a Writer program at grade 3 may remember being introduced to Childtimes last year, when they explored several personal narratives in it. Briefly discuss what the students remember about the book, and then explain that they will hear and explore several new narratives in it this year.

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before you say “Turn to your partner.” To review the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share,” see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 1 on page 32. To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’” (AV13).

Teacher Note

Note that on Days 1 and 2 of this week, the students may write personal narratives or anything else they wish. On Day 3, after exposure to a couple of examples of personal narrative, they will all begin writing in this genre.

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or their partners about their drawings. If necessary, write out key words and phrases they want to use so they can copy the words into their writing.

4 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread passages to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What do we find out about Eloise Greenfield’s childhood from these short pieces?
- Q In “First Days,” Eloise Greenfield says, “It’s the first day of my life—my remembered life.” What do you think she means?

5 Quick-write: Early Memories

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q If you were to write a story about your own “remembered life,” what memories could you write about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Scan the class as partners talk. When they have had sufficient time to discuss the question, signal for their attention. Have them open their writing notebooks to the next blank page in the writing ideas section, label it “Memories,” and list some of the early memories they could write about. After a few minutes, call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may write about one of the memories they listed, or they may write about anything that interests them.

WRITING TIME

6 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats, with partners sitting together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA1) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about an early memory.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA1

Remind the students to double-space their writing. If necessary, review that during the writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Do they write readily about themselves?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do the students who have difficulty getting started eventually do so?

If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class's attention and have partners talk to each other about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class, and then have them resume silent writing. If necessary, remind students to double-space their writing.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 32 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

7 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Have partners share with each other what they wrote today. Then ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

Q Who wrote about early memories? Tell us about them.

Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about them.

Help the students reflect on their partnerships by asking:

Q What did you find out about your partner today?

Day 2

Exploring Personal Narrative

Materials

- “Joe Louis” (Childtimes, pages 143–144)
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)

Teacher Note

Save the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart to use later this week and throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for defining vocabulary during the read-aloud, see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 1, Step 3 on page 8. For more information, view “Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud” (AV30).

In this lesson, the students:

- Informally explore features of personal narratives
- Hear and discuss a personal narrative
- Write freely about things that interest them

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Start “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that yesterday they heard “First Days” and “Mama Sewing,” personal narratives by Eloise Greenfield.

On a sheet of chart paper, write “Notes About Personal Narratives.” Remind the students that a personal narrative tells a true story from the author’s own life. Add this to the chart. Explain that you will continue to add to the chart as they learn more about what makes personal narratives different from other kinds of writing.

2 Read “Joe Louis” Aloud

Explain that you will read another personal narrative by Eloise Greenfield called “Joe Louis.” Explain that Joe Louis was an African American boxing champion during the 1930s and 1940s.

Read “Joe Louis” (pages 143–144) aloud slowly and clearly, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

caddied: carried golf clubs for a golfer (p. 144)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

heavyweight boxing champion: big, strong person who wins many boxing matches (p. 143)

referee: person who makes sure a game is played by the rules (p. 144) afford: pay for (p. 144)

victory: win (p. 144)

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q Why might the author have chosen to write about this memory?
- Q She describes a “big day,” when Joe Louis came to play on a nearby golf course. If you were going to write your own personal narrative about a special day, what might you write about?

Students might say:

“It was probably special to Eloise and her neighbors when Joe Louis won because African Americans were proud of him.”

“I agree with [Pilar] because the book says ‘black people loved him.’”

“I would write about the day my little brother came home for the first time.”

“I would write about my birthday. That was a special day.”

Point out that in each of the three personal narratives the students have heard, Eloise Greenfield chooses to write about just one special memory or event. She does not try to write about her whole childhood in one story. Invite the students to think and write about just one special memory, topic, or event during Writing Time today.

WRITING TIME

4 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA2) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about a special memory or event.
- Write about anything else that interests you.

WA2

Remind the students to double-space their writing. If necessary, review that during the writing period there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

TEKS 6.E.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 (all)

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, we invite you to focus on two questioning techniques: asking open-ended questions and using wait-time. Notice that most of the questions we suggest are open-ended, inviting many responses. These questions cannot be answered with a single word and often begin with words like what, how, and why. We encourage you to try asking the questions as they are written and noticing how the students respond. Because these questions require thought, we suggest that you use at least 5–10 seconds of wait-time after asking each question before calling on anyone to respond. This gives everyone a chance to think before talking. To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time” (AV18).

Day 3

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about an interesting memory or event from your life? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topics did you write about today? Tell us about them.

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “A Snake Named Moon” (The Moon and I, pages 1–4)
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 2
- “Quick-write” chart (WA3)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheets (CN1)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Learn about a professional author’s writing practice
- Visualize sensory details
- Quick-write about single, interesting events

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that earlier they heard three personal narratives by Eloise Greenfield: “First Days,” “Mama Sewing,” and “Joe Louis.” Remind the students that, in each of these narratives, the author writes about one small thing she remembers from her childhood. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add write about a single event, memory, or thing to it.

Explain that today you will read a personal narrative by a different author. Encourage the students to think about what single event the author is writing about.

2 Read “A Snake Named Moon” Aloud

Show the cover of The Moon and I and read the title, subtitle, and author’s name aloud. Explain that, like Eloise Greenfield, Betsy Byars is a professional children’s author and that in this memoir, she writes about interesting events she has experienced.

Read aloud pages 1–4 of “A Snake Named Moon,” stopping after “I had let my writing get in the way of my snake watching!” Read slowly and clearly, stopping as described below. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

overhead beam: long piece of wood that holds up the ceiling of a building (p. 1)

beneficial: helpful (p. 2)

distraction: something that takes attention away from something else (p. 3) engrossed: involved in something (p. 4)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

snake: long, thin reptile that has no legs (see p. 1 illustration)

word processor: computer (p. 2)

harmless: not dangerous (p. 2)

on the prowl: hunting for food (p. 3)

Stop after:

p. 2 “I settled down to watch.”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far? Turn to your partner.

Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the next stop:

p. 3 “. . . and I like distractions—especially when I’m writing.”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far? Turn to your partner.

Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last sentence and continue reading to the end of the selection.

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner,” see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 2 (page 11). To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q What event does Betsy Byars write about in this story?
- Q (Reread the following passage on page 1: “The snake lay on an overhead beam. . . . the round, unblinking eyes were looking at me.”) What do you see in your mind when you hear this passage?

Students might say:

“Betsy Byars writes about seeing a snake on an overhead beam as she’s writing one day.”

“I agree with [Mitch]. Her husband wants to catch it and take it to the airport, but she wants to keep it.”

“I imagine the snake staring down at her with big, black eyes.”

“In addition to what [Chitra] said, the word pillowed makes me think it’s resting its head on its body.”

4 Quick-write: Single Interesting Events

Remind the students that the single, interesting event that Betsy Byars writes about in “A Snake Named Moon” is the time she encountered a snake on her front porch. Display the “Quick-write” chart (WA3) and ask the students to think quietly as they listen to the questions on it. Say the questions one at a time, pausing after each question (without discussing it) to give the students time to think.

WA3

Quick-write

- What are some interesting events from your own life that you could write about?
- What is something funny or scary that has happened to you?
- What is something interesting that has happened to you at school? At home?

Ask the students to open their notebooks to the next blank page and do a quick-write about an interesting event that has happened to them. Stop them after 3–4 minutes of silent writing and have partners talk about their thinking; then have them resume silent writing for a few more minutes.

Call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class.

Explain that you would like all the students to try writing about one interesting event from their own lives during Writing Time today. They may continue what they started in the quick-write or write about another event.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Remind them to double-space their writing.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then begin conferring with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, confer with individual students about their personal narratives. Ask each student to show you his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share and Reflect on Writing

Ask and discuss the question that follows, inviting the students to read passages of their writing aloud if they wish.

- Q What interesting event from your own life did you write about? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will continue to write drafts of personal narratives during the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The students are just beginning to explore personal narrative. They are not expected to know or incorporate specific features of the genre into their writing at this point. They will build on their understanding as they explore the genre over the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The students will write all first drafts of personal narratives, double-spaced, in their notebooks. In Week 3, they will select one of the drafts to develop and publish. Double-spacing now allows space for revision later. The students will write their final versions in Week 4 on loose, lined paper (or on a computer, if available).

Teacher Note

To see an example of a teacher conferring with individual students, view “Conferring About Personal Narrative” (AV40).

Materials

- The Moon and I from Day 3
- Copy of “Excerpt from ‘A Snake Named Moon’” (BLM2) for each student

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print the “Excerpt from ‘A Snake Named Moon’” (BLM2). Make a copy for each student; set aside one copy for yourself.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write Opinions About Betsy Byars’s Feelings Toward Writing

Show the cover of The Moon and I and remind the students that earlier they heard a story from the book called “A Snake Named Moon.” Remind the students that in the story, the author, Betsy Byars, describes her writing process. Ask:

Q What do you remember about Betsy Byars’s writing process?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Then explain that you will reread part of what Betsy Byars wrote about her writing process. Distribute copies of “Excerpt from ‘A Snake Named Moon’” and explain that the passages you will read are reproduced there. Ask the students to follow along as you read aloud. Reread page 2 of the book aloud, starting with “Here’s the way I write a book” and ending with “And it’s worked for thirty years.” Then read aloud page 4 of the book, starting with “Now most of the time . . .” and ending with “Of all the stupid things to do—I had let my writing get in the way of my snake watching!”

Q How does Betsy Byars feel about writing? What in the story makes you think so?

Students might say:

“I think Betsy Byars doesn’t like writing. She says she let it get in the way of her snake watching, so she would rather be watching snakes.”

“I agree with [Bindi] because most of the time she thinks her writing is terrible.”

“I disagree with [Ralph and Bindi] because Betsy Byars says she has written lots of things for thirty years. She must really love writing to do it so much.”

“In addition to what [Juan] said, I think the author is trying to show what the life of a real writer is like. It’s not easy, but she loves it, especially when she goes into high gear.”

Explain that the students will each write a paragraph about how they think Betsy Byars feels about writing. Tell the students that readers often have different opinions about what is written in a story, and that is fine. What is important is that they understand the author’s opinion and explain it accurately. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing a paragraph about how you think Betsy Byars feels about writing.

You might say:

"I think that even though Betsy Byars complains about writing, she actually loves it. I'll start by writing: In Betsy Byars's story 'A Snake Named Moon,' the author complains about writing, but I believe that deep down she loves to write. Notice that I stated my opinion and put the title of the story and author in the opening sentence. Now I need to explain my thinking using facts and details. I'll write: Betsy Byars writes a lot about her writing process. She describes every step she goes through to write a piece. She wouldn't bother to do that if she didn't think that the writing process was interesting and important. Also, she describes what happens when she gets inspired while writing. She says it's a 'magical flow' and that she goes into a 'higher gear.' These words show that she loves writing. Now I need a closing sentence. I'll write: Betsy Byars complains about writing, but I think she does so because it's not easy to write well. Even though she's honest about the challenges of writing, Betsy Byars clearly loves being an author."

Explain that the students should start their paragraphs with an opening sentence that states their opinion and includes the title and author of the story, give a reason for their opinion and a fact or detail from the story to support their reason, and provide a closing sentence that wraps up their writing. Have them return to their seats and write in their writing notebooks. If time permits, invite them to share their opinions with the class.

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Learn about a professional author's writing practice
- Explore sensory details in a passage
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Personal Narrative

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday they began writing drafts of personal narratives. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What makes personal narrative writing different from other kinds of writing?

Materials

- "The Missing Moon" (The Moon and I, pages 13–16)
- "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart from Day 3
- "Excerpt from 'The Missing Moon'" chart (WA4)
- Student Writing Handbook page 4

If necessary, review the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart to help the students remember what they learned. Add any new ideas they mention.

2 Read Aloud and Discuss “The Missing Moon”

Explain that you will read another section from The Moon and I by Betsy Byars. In it, she continues to tell about the snake she encounters in “A Snake Named Moon.”

Read “The Missing Moon” on pages 13–16 aloud, skipping the following passage on page 13: “This was worse than losing a chapter. . . . But with a snake . . .” Resume reading with “I heard a noise.” Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Teacher Note

The skipped passage on page 13 refers to a section of text earlier in the book that the students have not heard.

Suggested Vocabulary

tentacles: arms like those of an octopus (p. 13)

mercury: silver liquid found in glass thermometers (p. 14)

crevice: narrow crack or opening (p. 15) regretfully: sadly (p. 16)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

vanished: disappeared (p. 13)

condominium: type of apartment (p. 15)

3 Explore Sensory Details

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you imagine seeing as you listened to this passage?

Q What did you imagine hearing?

Q What other senses did you imagine using?

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 4 as you display “Excerpt from ‘The Missing Moon’” (C WA4). Ask partners to reread the passage and together underline words that help them imagine using their senses.

After a few minutes, ask pairs to share the words they underlined with the class. Underline words on the displayed excerpt as the students report them.

Point out that in many personal narratives, including this one, the author includes sensory details that help us imagine what is happening, using our senses.

Teacher Note

If it is helpful, write the five senses where everyone can see them: sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch.

Some sensory details in this narrative are “my heart actually leapt,” “low, throaty growls,” “coiled, silent, alert, and ready,” “the tip of its tail began to quiver,” “testing the climate with flicks of its dark, forked tongue,” “the black color was startling against the green ivy,” “a series of graceful S-curves,” and “as slick as mercury.”

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today, and encourage them to look for places where they can include sensory details. They may continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Join them in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each student show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Share and Reflect on Writing

Have a few volunteers read their writing aloud. Encourage the other students to express their interest or appreciation after each reading, using questions such as:

- Q What did you like about [Jack's] piece?
- Q What questions can we ask [Anushka] about what she wrote?

Explain that the students will continue to draft personal narratives tomorrow.

---

EXTENSION

Discuss the Past Progressive Tense in “The Missing Moon”

Review that at the beginning of the story “The Missing Moon,” Betsy Byars hears a noise and finds out that it is coming from the neighbor’s cat. Reread the passage beginning with “I heard a noise” on page 13 of the book and continuing through “These were low, throaty growls that couldn’t have had much effect because snakes don’t have ears.”

Write the sentence The sounds I had heard were coming from the cat where everyone can see it, and underline the words were coming. Explain that the words are the past progressive tense of the verb come. Explain that writers use the past progressive tense to show that action was continuing over a period of time. If Betsy Byars had written “The sounds came from the cat,” it would suggest that the cat, Ginger, made the sounds just once. Betsy Byars wrote “were coming” to show that Ginger continued to growl at the snake for a while.

Explain that writers also use the past progressive tense to show that one thing was happening when something else happened. Write the following sentence on the board: Joe was eating when the doorbell rang. Underline the words was eating and explain that this is the past progressive tense of the verb eat. Explain that in this sentence, was eating is used to show that Joe was in the process of eating when something else happened: the doorbell rang.

Write the following sentence on the board: Lin [blank] when she suddenly heard a clap of thunder. Explain that a verb in the past progressive tense is needed to complete the sentence. Ask:

Q What was Lin doing when she suddenly heard a clap of thunder?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. If necessary, follow up by asking questions such as:

Q How do we know that [“was swimming”] is in the past progressive tense?

---

Skill Practice Note

For more practice forming and using the progressive verb tenses, see Lesson 16 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

In this lesson, the students:

- Review sensory details
- Draft personal narratives
- Express interest in one another's writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review Sensory Details

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard “The Missing Moon” by Betsy Byars. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you remember about the story “The Missing Moon”?

Review that Betsy Byars uses sensory details in her narrative. Direct the students' attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add sensory details help the reader see, hear, smell, taste, or feel what happens to it.

Explain that the students will continue to write personal narratives today, and encourage them to look for places where they can include sensory details. They may continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one.

WRITING TIME

2 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students return to their seats and work silently on personal narratives for 20–30 minutes. Join them in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Materials

- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 4

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Share One Sentence and Reflect

Ask the students to review the writing they did today and each underline one sentence they would like to share with the class. Give the students a moment to select their sentences; then go around the room and have each student read her sentence aloud, without comment.

Facilitate a brief discussion using questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that the students will continue to write drafts of personal narratives during the coming weeks.

---

EXTENSION

Read More from The Moon and I

If your students are interested, read and discuss other chapters from The Moon and I. Take time to discuss the way the author’s experiences with the snake provided ideas for an entire book. Encourage the students to continue to think about interesting events in their own lives that they can write about.

Teacher Note

The intention in this activity is to hear one sentence from every student in the class. This lets the students hear what their classmates are writing and builds their accountability. After they underline their sentences, have them put their pencils away. Have them read their sentences promptly, one after another, without stopping to comment. In the discussion afterward, they are not expected to remember every sentence they heard.

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Childtimes: A Three-Generation Memoir

by Eloise Greenfield and Lessie Jones Little

Three generations of women remember their “childtimes.”

Essays

“The Mirror” and “Little Things”

excerpted from Teen Ink: What Matters by Jijo Vilayanickal and Sara Roberts, edited by Stephanie H. Meyer, John Meyer, and Peggy Veljkovic

(see pages 159–161)

Young people write about their experiences with family members.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Try to be one of the people on whom nothing is lost!”

— Henry James

Select one of the pieces you wrote last week about a memorable event and reread it. Where could you include words and phrases that would help a reader imagine using her senses? See how many senses you can appeal to with the sensory details you add to your piece.

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives.
- Students explore sensory details.
- Students informally explore learning (or change) in personal narratives.
- Students explore transitional words and phrases.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 33 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “Hot Rolls” (Childtimes, pages 61–62)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Explore sensory details in text
- Quick-write about sensory details
- Write about single, interesting events from their lives

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review Week 1

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that they have been exploring personal narratives. This week they will continue to hear personal narratives and write their own drafts. Next week they will select one of their drafts to work on and publish for the class library.

2 Read “Hot Rolls” Aloud

Show the cover of Childtimes and remind the students that they heard “First Days,” “Mama Sewing,” and “Joe Louis” by Eloise Greenfield last week. Explain that today you will read “Hot Rolls” by Lessie Jones Little, Eloise’s mother. Invite the students to imagine what is happening as they listen.

Read “Hot Rolls” on pages 61–62 aloud slowly and clearly. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

preserves: jam (p. 62)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

knees: joints between the thighs and the lower legs (p. 61)

elbows: bends of the arms between the forearms and the upper arms (p. 62)

3 Briefly Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What experience does the author describe in this personal narrative?
- Q What did you see in your mind? What other senses did you imagine using?

4 Quick-write: Sensory Details About Breakfast

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

- Q If you were going to write about eating breakfast at your house, what sensory details might you include? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page and spend a few minutes writing about breakfast in their homes. Encourage them to include words that describe what things look, sound, smell, taste, and feel like. After a few moments, call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students may continue the piece each started during the quick-write or work on any personal narrative.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA5) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Write about a single, interesting event in your life.
- Work on a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative about anything from your own life.

WA5

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Teacher Note

After asking the question, pause for 10 seconds to give the students time to think. Then say “Turn to your partner” and have partners discuss the question.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

As you did in Week 1, continue to confer with individual students, having each show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about breakfast at home? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about it.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Explore sensory details in text
- Share their partners' thinking with the class
- Discuss and solve problems that arise in their work together

Materials

- “Learning the Hard Way” (Childtimes, pages 79–80)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA6)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read “Learning the Hard Way” Aloud

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard “Hot Rolls” by Lessie Jones Little, from the book Childtimes. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you remember about the story “Hot Rolls”?

Explain that you will read another personal narrative by Lessie Jones Little, and encourage the students to think, as they listen, about the single experience she writes about.

Read “Learning the Hard Way” on pages 79–80 of Childtimes aloud slowly and clearly, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

kerosene: oil used for heating, cooking, and light (p. 79)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

electricity: source of power (p. 79)

matches: small pieces of wood used to light a fire (p. 80)

2 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did Lessie learn the hard way in this story?

Q What did you imagine seeing or feeling as you listened? Turn to your partner.

Q What’s something you’ve learned the hard way that you could write about?

Explain that everyone will work on personal narratives during Writing Time today. Invite the students to write about something they learned the hard way, if they wish.

WRITING TIME

3 Write Independently

Have the students get out their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA6) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about something you’ve learned the hard way.
- Work on a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative about anything from your own life.

WA6

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Writing in Pairs

Explain that partners will share with each other what they wrote today. Alert the students to be ready to share something their partners wrote about during the whole-class discussion.

Have partners share; then signal for their attention and ask questions such as:

- Q What did your partner write about today?
- Q What sensory details did your partner include in his or her writing? Tell us about one.

Have the students reflect on their partner work by asking:

- Q What problems, if any, did you and your partner have working together today? What can you do to avoid those problems next time?

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Learn More About Eloise Greenfield

To learn more about Eloise Greenfield and her work, have the students watch a video of her speaking about her writing or read an interview with her. To find a video or print interview with the author, search online with her name and the keyword “video” or “interview.” After the students watch the video or read the interview, have them discuss what they learned about the author’s life and her thoughts about writing.

Teacher Note

Questions like this help the students develop good working relationships with their partners. When students feel connected to others, they learn to relax and take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically. For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

Day 3

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “The Mirror” (see page 159)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear and discuss personal narratives
- Explore writing about single experiences
- Explore the idea of learning in personal narratives
- Draft personal narratives

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read “The Mirror” Aloud

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students have been writing drafts of personal narratives and that next week they will select one to develop, revise, and publish for the class.

Explain that today you will read aloud a short personal narrative called “The Mirror,” written by a 15 year old named Jijo. Invite the students to think as they listen about the single experience Jijo is writing about.

Read the essay aloud slowly and clearly (see “The Mirror” on page 159). Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

coincidence: something that happens by chance

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

echo: sound that bounces off of something and comes back

2 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What experience does Jijo describe?

Q Why do you think he might have chosen to write about this experience with his father?

Point out that in this essay, Jijo writes about a single experience that teaches him something. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What experiences have you had with an adult that taught you something?
[pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

"I went fishing with my grandpa, and he taught me how to catch a fish.

I learned how to bait the hook."

"I learned the names of lots of different flowers from my mom."

"My basketball coach taught me how to dribble the ball."

Explain that the students will continue to draft personal narratives today. Encourage them to keep thinking about experiences from which they learned something and to include sensory details in their narratives to help a reader see, hear, smell, taste, and feel what is happening.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Personal Narratives

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (C WA7) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.
- Include sensory details in your writing.

WA7

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each show and read some of her writing aloud to you. Help the student extend her thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Day 4

Exploring and Drafting Personal Narrative

Materials

- “Little Things” (see page 160)
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

Teacher Note

The concept of learning in personal narratives can be challenging for students. In this unit, the students begin to explore the idea very informally. They are not expected to incorporate this into their own personal narrative writing at this point.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about a time you learned something? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topic did you write about? Tell us about it.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft personal narratives
- Explore the idea of learning in personal narratives
- Quick-write about respect for older family members
- Express interest in one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Personal Narratives” Chart

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard “The Mirror” by a 15-year-old author named Jijo yesterday. Ask:

- Q We talked about how Jijo learned something from his father during the experience he describes. What did he learn?

Explain that good personal narratives usually include some information about what the writer learns or how he or she changes as a result of what happens. In “The Mirror,” Jijo learns that life is like a mirror or an echo—it gives you back whatever you give it.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add the writer learns something to it. Explain that you will read another narrative by a young person today. Invite the students to listen for what the writer learns.

2 Read “Little Things” Aloud

Explain that today’s personal narrative was written by a 15 year old named Sara. Read the essay aloud slowly and clearly (see “Little Things” on page 160).

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing the following vocabulary defined:

manure: waste from farm animals, used to help plants grow

3 Discuss the Reading

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What experience does Sara write about in this personal narrative?

If necessary, point out that this is a story Sara’s grandmother told her. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Sara’s grandmother tells her a story about her childhood. What is a story someone in your family has told you? [pause] Turn to your partner.

4 Quick-write: Respect for Older Family Members

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q Sara tells us that her grandmother taught her many amazing things, including respect. What are some ways you show respect for older family members? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Ask the students to open their notebooks to the next blank page and spend a few minutes writing about ways they show respect for older family members. After about 5 minutes, call for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that the students will continue to work on personal narratives today. Encourage them to think about stories they have been told and things they have learned from older family members.

WRITING TIME

5 Draft Personal Narratives

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA8) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on the piece you started during the quick-write.
- Write about things you have heard or learned from family members.
- Continue a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.

WA8

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students write with engagement about their own lives?
- Do they include sensory details in their writing?
- Will all the students have personal narrative drafts that they can start to develop for publication next week?

If necessary, work with individual students to ensure that all students will have drafts that they can develop for publication, beginning on Day 1 of next week.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2); see page 33 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Share One Sentence and Reflect

Ask the students to review the writing they did today and each underline one sentence to share with the class. Give the students a moment to select their sentences; then go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud, without comment.

After all the students have read their sentences, facilitate a brief discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

TEKS 1.A.ii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 6 (all)

Teacher Note

The intention in this activity is to hear one sentence from every student in the class. This lets the students hear what their classmates are writing and builds their accountability. After they underline their sentences, have them put their pencils away. Have them read their sentences promptly, one after another, without stopping to comment. In the discussion afterward, they are not expected to remember every sentence they heard.

To see an example of this technique, view “Sharing One Sentence and Reflecting” (AV42).

Exploring Personal Narrative and Pair Conferring

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore transitional words and phrases
- Draft personal narratives
- Practice procedures for pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks, notebooks, and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that they heard “Little Things” by a 15-year-old author named Sara yesterday. Ask:

Q We talked about how Sara learned something from her grandmother during the experience she describes. What did she learn?

If necessary, review that in “Little Things,” Sara learns to appreciate the beauty of the little things in life and to respect the beauty of nature. Review that a good personal narrative usually includes some information about what the writer learns or how she changes as a result of what happens.

2 Analyze Transitional Words in “Little Things”

Display “Little Things” (WA9) and point out that the author, Sara, uses the phrases one time (in the second paragraph) and one day (in the third paragraph). Underline the phrases on the displayed story. Explain that these phrases help readers connect the events in Sara’s story by telling us when in the story something happened.

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 6, where the story is reproduced. Have partners work together to underline other words or phrases that tell when in the story something happened.

After a few minutes, have volunteers share their ideas with the class. As they identify words and phrases that help them connect the story’s events, underline them on the displayed essay.

Explain that these are called transitional words and phrases and that authors use them to help readers connect ideas or events in a story. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add transitional words and phrases help the reader connect ideas or events to it. On a sheet of chart paper titled “Transitional Words and Phrases,” write the heading Connect events in a story and list the words and phrases you and the students have identified in “Little Things.”

Materials

- “Little Things” chart (WA9)
- Student Writing Handbook page 6
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 4
- Chart paper and a marker
- “Writing Time” chart (WA10)

TEKS 11.B.iv

TEKS 11.B.vi
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (all, beginning on
to page 156)

Teacher Note

Other transitional words and phrases in “Little Things” are when, a few days later, yet, from that day on, last Christmas, and then.

Teacher Note

Other transitional words and phrases include those indicating addition (also, again, besides), direction (here, there, over there, in the distance), emphasis (especially, particularly), and illustration (for example, for instance, in other words).

For more transitional words and phrases, you might search online using the keywords “transitional words and phrases.”

TEKS 11.B.iv

TEKS 11.B.v

TEKS 11.B.vi

Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 156 and continuing on to page 157 to include the Teacher Conference Note on page 157)

Teacher Note

Save the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart to use throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today’s Writing Time slightly to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 5.

Explain that other transitional words and phrases help readers connect ideas by comparing and contrasting them. Underline the word but in the second paragraph of the story. Explain that but contrasts the two different responses Sara and Gramcracker have to seeing the butterfly: Sara doesn’t pay attention to the butterfly, but Gramcracker does.

On the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart, write the heading Connect ideas in a story and add the word but. Explain that other words and phrases that help readers connect ideas in a story include still, instead, on one hand, and on the other hand, and add these to the chart. Ask:

Q What other transitional words and phrases might you use in a personal narrative to help readers connect events or ideas?

Add the students’ ideas to the chart.

3 Analyze Writing for Use of Transitional Words

Have the students reread the writing they did yesterday and look up when they are finished. Say the following prompt, and then give the students a few quiet minutes to review their drafts and mark passages.

- Find a place where you use, or might use, a transitional word or phrase. Draw a small star in the margin next to that place.

Have partners turn and share their ideas with each other.

After a few moments, signal for the students’ attention and have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. Add any transitional words and phrases they mention to the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart.

Explain that the students will continue to work on personal narratives today. Encourage them to use transitional words and phrases to help readers connect events and ideas, and to use sensory details to help bring their writing to life. They may each continue a personal narrative they started earlier or begin a new one. Next week they will select one of their drafts to work on and publish for the class library.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Personal Narratives

Have the students sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about things you have heard or learned from family members.
- Continue a personal narrative you started earlier.
- Start a new personal narrative.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students, having each show and read some of his writing aloud to you. Help the student extend his thinking about personal narrative by asking questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose to write about this [event/memory/thing]?
- Q What else do you remember about it that you can add to the narrative?
- Q What words are you using to describe what you [saw/heard/smelled/tasted/felt]?
- Q What transitional words and phrases are you using to help readers connect ideas and events?
- Q What other experiences from your own life might you want to write about?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 38 of the Assessment Resource Book. Beginning next week, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

5 Confer in Pairs About Personal Narrative Drafts

Explain that today each student will each read one of her personal narrative drafts to her partner and confer about it. Briefly review the procedure you established for pair conferring (see Unit 1, Week 3, Day 2, Step 5 on page 56) and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well. Explain that today partners will tell each other one thing they like about the other’s draft. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What will you do during the conference to show that you are interested in your partner’s draft?

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

Facilitation Tip

Notice the open-ended questions that you are asking during this discussion. To study the effect of open-ended questions on students' thinking, experiment by asking a closed question first (Did your partner do or say something to show interest in your draft? Do you think it's important that we all get to feel that our partners are interested in our writing?) and noting the response. Then restate the question as an open-ended question and note the response. Remember to use 5-10 seconds of wait-time after the question before you invite the students to respond.

Students might say:

"I'll show I'm interested by asking my partner questions about his draft."

"I'll listen to my partner's whole story without interrupting her."

"I will tell him things I liked in his story."

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking questions such as:

- Q What did your partner do or say to show interest in your draft? How did that feel?
- Q Why is it important that we all get to feel that our partners are interested in our writing?

Essay

The Mirror

by Jijo Vilayanickal

excerpted from Teen Ink: What Matters

Life always returns whatever you give.

— Jijo Vilayanickal

Once my father and I were walking in a field. Suddenly, I tripped. Feeling a sharp pain, I screamed, “Ahh!” I was surprised to hear a voice from the mountain, “Ahh!” Filled with curiosity, I screamed, “Who are you?” But the only answer I received was “Who are you?” This made me angry, so I screamed, “You are a coward!” And the voice answered, “You are a coward!”

I looked at my father and asked, “Dad, what is going on?”

“Son,” my dad replied, “pay attention.”

Then he shouted, “I admire you.”

The voice answered, “I admire you.”

My father shouted, “You are beautiful.”

The voice answered, “You are beautiful.”

Then my father shouted, “You are wonderful.” And the voice again answered the same. I was surprised, but still did not understand.

Then my father explained, “People call this an echo.” But truly it is life. Life always gives you back whatever you give out. Life is a mirror of your actions. If you want more love, give more love. If you want more kindness, give more kindness. If you want understanding and respect, give it to others. If you want people to be good to you, be good to them. This rule of nature applies to every aspect of our life.

Now I understand that life always returns whatever you give. Your life is not a coincidence, but a mirror of your actions.

Essay

Little Things

by Sara Roberts

excerpted from Teen Ink: What Matters

Always and in everything let there be reverence.

— Confucius

My grandmother, whom I call Gramcracker, has taught me so many amazing things. My favorite was how, when she was a little girl, the smallest things meant so much to her. I envy that about her. In our generation, not many people think that way. Everything is “I have” or “I want.” No one really appreciates the little things in life.

I often sit with Gramcracker and talk about everyday things. One time outside, I was talking with her, and a beautiful, brilliantly colored monarch butterfly flew past us. I really didn’t think about it, but Gramcracker certainly did. She said, “That monarch reminds me of when I was little.” So, of course, like every curious child, I asked her to tell me the story.

Gramcracker told me that when she was little and lived on a farm, there was a manure pile that for some reason attracted dozens of monarch butterflies. My grandma always wanted pretty, colorful curtains for her room, and so she had decided that she would pin dried butterflies on her curtains to make them beautiful. One day, she took a net and a jar and scooped a bunch into the jar, sealing it tight. My gramcracker hid them so her parents wouldn’t find out. A few days later her parents called her downstairs, saying, “Look what we found in our closet!” Gramcracker couldn’t believe it. They had found her butterflies, but the once-beautiful butterflies were not beautiful anymore. Their wings were torn from trying to escape from the jar. They wouldn’t make pretty curtains anymore. She felt horrible for killing them. She had wanted beautiful curtains so much that she had killed those butterflies just to get them. Yet she still felt sad because she wouldn’t have her pretty curtains. From that day on, she learned to enjoy nature, not capture it.

I never forgot that story. Last Christmas I wanted to find something special for Gramcracker, so I made a wooden frame for a small window. Then I put cloth over the windows and tied them back like curtains. For the final touch, I put fake butterflies on the curtains, just as she had wanted all those years ago.

Little Things

She couldn't believe that I had gone through so much trouble just to give her the curtains she always wanted. When I gave my gramcracker her present, she loved it so much that she started to cry.

I will never forget her story about the butterflies. I also will never forget how she showed me how to respect nature's beauty. I love my gramcracker so much for teaching me respect. I hope one day I can teach my grandchildren as many things as my gramcracker has taught me.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students review their drafts, and each selects one to develop, revise, proofread, and publish.
- Students add sensory details to their writing.
- Students add transitional words and phrases to their writing.
- Students explore strong opening sentences.
- Students explore endings that draw a story's events to a close.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA11–WA19

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA3–CA5)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)

Reproducible

- (Optional) “The Mirror” (BLM3)

Professional Development Media

- “Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time” (AV18)
- “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 34 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, review the pieces you have written so far this year and select a page of personal narrative to use to model how to develop and revise a draft. Prepare your sample writing to display (see “Charts” on page xli for more information). Alternatively, you can use the “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12).
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 35 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 36 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2) on page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have some students type and print their drafts or recruit parent volunteers to help the students do so.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“I am always surprised. I go through life perpetually astonished at everything that happens around me.”

— Eugene Ionesco

Select one of the personal narrative drafts you wrote in Week 1 and think about what you learned or how you changed as a result of the event you wrote about. Perhaps you expected something different to happen than what actually did. Perhaps you learned or realized something. Write a second draft of your narrative, including information about what you were like before the event, what you were like after it, and how the experience changed you.

Day 1

Selecting and Completing Drafts

Materials

- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Week 2
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Review their drafts, and each selects one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first draft of the selected writing pieces
- Use Writing Time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Personal Narrative

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that over the past two weeks the students have been writing drafts of personal narratives. Ask:

Q What have you learned about personal narrative compared to other kinds of writing?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and review the items on it.

Explain that this week the students will each select one of their drafts and begin to develop it for publication. Each student will revise her draft to make it clearer and more interesting, proofread it for correctness, and publish it by contributing it to a class book.

2 Prepare to Review Drafts

Explain that today the students will reread all the personal narrative drafts they have written so far and each select one to develop for the class book. Explain that the drafts they select do not have to be complete and should be ones they can imagine making changes to. Ask:

Q As you’re looking through your drafts, what might you want to look for to help you decide which one to develop?

Students might say:

“I want to look for a draft that I’m really interested in or have some strong feelings about.”

“I will look for drafts that describe situations where I learned something.”

“I want my story to be different from everyone else’s, so I’m going to look for a draft that is unique.”

3 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students return to their seats, reread their drafts, and each select one to develop and publish. Students who select their drafts before time is up can start thinking about what they can change, add to, or improve in the drafts.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room and support students by asking them questions such as:

- Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?
- Q What can you imagine adding or changing in this piece to make it more interesting?

If you notice the students selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, pieces they feel are already “perfect,” very long or very short pieces, pieces that are not double-spaced), gently guide them toward a more workable choice.

WRITING TIME

4 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Have the students work silently for 20–30 minutes to finish their drafts. Encourage them to use sensory details and transitional words and phrases in their writing. Join them in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?

If you notice that many students need more time to finish their drafts, make time for them to finish before going on to the Day 2 lesson. Students who have finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3); see page 34 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Facilitation Tip

After asking open-ended questions, remember to use wait-time to give everyone a chance to think before talking. If you often hear from the same few students during class discussions, extend the wait-time to encourage broader participation in the discussion. To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view “Asking Open-ended Questions and Using Wait-time” (AV18).

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does it help to build our community when you do that?

Explain that the students will begin revising their drafts tomorrow.

Day 2

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- Pad of (1½" × 2") small self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising for Sensory Details” chart (WA11)
- Your sample writing OR “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA13)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience reading their drafts critically before they begin to revise.

Teacher Note

Have pads of self-stick notes available for students to use during the revision phase of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so that it marks the text without covering it up.

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where they might add sensory details
- Begin revising their drafts
- Use Writing Time responsibly

TEKS 11.C.vi
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 1 and Step 2 (all, beginning on page 166 and continuing on to page 168)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students get out their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Ask them to open their notebooks to the personal narrative draft they each selected yesterday. Explain that the students will carefully reread their drafts and that you will help them think about ways they can add to, revise, and improve them. Have them quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Sensory Details” chart (📄 WA11) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with self-stick notes.

Revising for Sensory Details

- Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, what something looks like. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write looks on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, what something sounds like. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write sounds on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, what something feels like. Put a self-stick note in the margin and write feels on it.
- Find a place where you describe, or could describe, how something smells or tastes. Put a self-stick note in the margin and write smells or tastes on it.

WA11

When most students have finished, call for their attention and ask a few volunteers to read what they marked.

2 Model Developing a Marked Section of the Draft

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and add details to help their readers imagine what is happening. Ask the students to watch as you model adding details to a draft.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (📄 WA12) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing looks, sounds, feels, smells, or tastes in the margin next to places where you describe or could describe things using sensory details. Wonder aloud about sensory details you could add. Model using an arrow (caret) to insert new text.

You might say:

“I’ll add words to describe what the house looks like: small, shingled. I want to show that the first raindrops sounded gentle and light. Before the words ‘the first raindrops,’ I’ll add: the gentle patter of. After the sentence ‘It took four long hours for the hurricane to pass,’ I’ll add: My mom groped around in the dark fridge and found some fruit. I huddled between my parents, nervously munching on an apple, barely noticing its juicy sweetness. That adds the senses of touch and taste to my piece.”

Teacher Note

Teacher modeling is a regular feature of the Being a Writer program. You can use chart paper or interactive whiteboard charts (Whiteboard Activities) for your modeling. For more information, view the “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73).

Sample Personal Narrative

One of the scariest memories of my childhood is of a hurricane that hit the region where my family lived. I was about ten years old, and I lived with my parents in a <sup>small, shingled</sup> house <sup>looks</sup> on a hill. The word hurricane meant nothing to me, even though I had heard on the news that a storm was coming.

“It’s rained before,” I said to my parents. “I don’t understand what all the excitement is about.”

“You haven’t seen rain until you’ve been through a hurricane,” my father said. “Just wait.”

Teacher Note

Save the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” to use on Day 3.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to add details to their own drafts today. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What sensory details might you add to your piece to help the reader imagine what’s happening? [pause] Turn to your partner.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise First Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA13) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add sensory details to places you marked to help the reader imagine what’s happening.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish adding details.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the classroom and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to add sensory details to their drafts?
- Do they seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking him questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What words could you add to help the reader imagine what's happening?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4); see page 35 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing and Taking Responsibility

Have the students put their pencils and self-stick notes away and gather with their notebooks to share their writing. Discuss questions such as those that follow and invite students to read from their drafts as they share.

- Q What sensory details did you add to your draft? Read us that part.
- Q What do you imagine when you hear [Roberta's] passage?

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What did you do to take responsibility for your own work during Writing Time today?
- Q How does that help to build our community?

Explain that the students will continue to work on their drafts tomorrow.

Materials

- “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart from Week 2
- “Revising for Transitional Words and Phrases” chart (WA14)
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12) from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where they might add transitional words and phrases
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Ask one another questions about their writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Purpose of Revision

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and self-stick notes and sit at desks with partners together. Ask them to open their notebooks to the personal narratives they are developing. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces as interesting and readable as possible before they publish them for their classmates. Explain that today you will ask the students to think about another way they might improve their drafts.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart and read the lists aloud. Remind the students that last week they thought about how the author of “Little Things” uses transitional words and phrases to help readers connect events and ideas in her story. Explain that you will help the students think about where they might add transitional words and phrases to their own pieces.

2 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Display the “Revising for Transitional Words and Phrases” chart (WA14) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with self-stick notes.

Revising for Transitional Words and Phrases

- Find a place where you use, or could use, a transitional word or phrase to help readers connect events. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write connect events on it.
- Find a place where you use, or could use, a transitional word or phrase to help readers connect ideas. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write connect ideas on it.

3 Model Developing a Marked Section of the Draft

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and add transitional words and phrases to their drafts. Ask the students to watch as you model adding details to a draft.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by identifying places where you could add transitional words or phrases to connect events and ideas, and writing connect events and connect ideas in the margin next to those places. Wonder aloud about transitional words and phrases you could add. Model using an arrow (caret) to insert new text.

You might say:

“Night was falling by the time it started to rain, so at the beginning of that sentence I’ll add: As night fell. I could add a detail at the beginning of the sentence about the loud crash to let the reader know that it was an unexpected noise, so I’ll insert: Suddenly. Hardly any time went by between when my mother said ‘Hang on!’ and when she lit the candle, so I’m going to add to the sentence that starts ‘A match flared . . .’ I’ll write: A moment later. I think these revisions will help my readers connect events and ideas in my story.”

plywood over our living room windows, while my mother collected matches and checked the radios. Then we sat in our darkened living room and waited.

“I just don’t get what all the fuss is about,” I said.

connect events As night fell, the gentle patter of ^ We heard the first raindrops falling outside. We turned sound on the living room lamps. It began to rain harder and harder, and before long the rain was so loud against the shingles that we had to shout to hear each other. The wind began to blow, shaking the walls and sending things rolling down the street.

connect events Suddenly,
 ^ There was a loud CRASH, and the lights went out. I shrieked!

Teacher Note

Save the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” to use in Week 4, Day 1. Save the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart to use in the Fiction genre unit.

Add any transitional words and phrases you use in your draft to the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart.

Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to add transitional words and phrases to their own drafts today. Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What transitional words and phrases might you add to your writing to help readers connect events and ideas? [pause] Turn to your partner.

WRITING TIME

4 Revise First Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA15) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add transitional words and phrases to help readers connect events and ideas.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish adding transitional words and phrases.
- Add to your story until it is finished.

WA15

As the students work, circulate around the room. Support students who are having difficulty adding to their drafts by having them join you at a back table and quietly discussing questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What were you thinking or feeling at this point in this situation? What sentence could you add to help your reader understand that?
- Q What transitional words and phrases could you add here to help your reader connect events and ideas?

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Revisions and Participation

Have a few volunteers share by reading an original and a revised passage aloud to the class. Encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to have the volunteers reread aloud, if necessary.

- Q What did you imagine as you listened to [Robin’s] revision?
- Q How is [Robin’s] revision different from his original passage?
- Q What questions can we ask [Robin] about his revision?

Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q How did you do today giving your full attention to the people who were sharing their writing?
- Q If you weren't giving your full attention today, what will help you give your full attention the next time we have a class discussion?

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore strong opening sentences
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Analyze Strong Opening Sentences

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and Student Writing Handbooks and sit at desks with partners together. Explain that they will continue to work on their personal narrative drafts today. Before they start working, they will take some time to think about an important feature of all narratives: strong opening sentences.

Explain that the opening sentences of a piece of writing need to grab the readers' attention, making them want to keep reading. Explain that you will read the opening sentences from a personal narrative they heard earlier in the unit. Ask them to think about how the author gets the reader interested with this opening.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 8, where the opening sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display the "Opening Sentences from Three Personal Narratives" chart (WA16). Together read the first passage, from "Hot Rolls," and ask:

- Q What does the author do to get us interested in reading this piece?
- Q What words or phrases help us imagine what's happening?

Materials

- Student Writing Handbook page 8
- "Opening Sentences from Three Personal Narratives" chart (WA16)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA17)
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA5)

Students might say:

"The words beefsteak or pork chops make me imagine how they smell."

"I agree with [Stephanie]. I also smelled the coffee and the rolls."

"In addition to what [Manny] said, I got curious about why the author was writing about the special breakfast."

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Ask the students to work in pairs to read the remaining opening sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at making the reader want to keep reading the story.

After several minutes, signal for the students' attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the openings, and underline words and phrases they mention on the chart. As they report, ask:

Q How does that [word/phrase/sentence] help you get interested in reading the story?

2 Review Opening Sentences in Drafts

Ask the students to reread the first few sentences of their own personal narratives. Ask and have the students think to themselves about:

Q How might you revise your opening sentences to grab readers' attention and make them want to keep reading?

Without discussing as a class, explain that the students will revise their opening sentences and then work on completing the writing and revision of their personal narratives today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise and Complete Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA17) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your opening sentences so they grab your reader's attention.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is as complete and as interesting as it can be.

WA17

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the classroom and observe, assisting students as needed.

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- "You always have to learn things the hard way, don't you, Lessie?" (from "Learning the Hard Way")
- "I glanced up and saw it," "Snake," "porch rocking chair," "that is a snake" (from "A Snake Named Moon")

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students able to revise their opening sentences so they grab the reader's attention?
- Do they seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking her questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you wrote this opening sentence?
- Q How could you revise this sentence to grab your reader's attention and make him or her want to keep reading?

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA5); see page 36 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Opening Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the opening sentences of their personal narratives. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q What words did you hear in [Emilio's] opening sentence(s) that make you want to keep reading?
- Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own opening sentences?

Materials

- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart from Day 1
- Student Writing Handbook page 9
- “Closing Sentences from Three Personal Narratives” chart (WA18)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA19)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheets (CN2)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore endings that draw a story’s events to a close
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Analyze Closing Sentences

Have the students get out their notebooks, pencils, and Student Writing Handbooks and sit at desks with partners together. Review that yesterday the students thought about how to make their opening sentences strong. Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and add strong openings grab readers’ attention and make them want to keep reading. Tell the students that they will continue to work on their personal narrative drafts today. Before they start working, they will take some time to think about an important feature of all narratives: endings that draw a story’s events to a close.

Explain that the closing sentences of a piece of writing need to wrap up the piece. Tell the students that you will read the closing sentences from a personal narrative they heard earlier in the unit. Ask them to think about how the author draws the story’s events to a close.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 9, where the closing sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display the “Closing Sentences from Three Personal Narratives” chart (WA18). Together read the first passage, from “Hot Rolls,” and ask:

- Q What does the author do to wrap up this piece?
- Q What words or phrases tell you that the story has reached an end?

Students might say:

“The author says she kept on eating till her father made her stop.”

“I agree with [Louisa]. When the father says, ‘if you eat any more, you won’t be able to get out of your chair,’ that makes the story end in a funny way.”

“In addition to what [Marvin] said, the author says, ‘And that would be the end of that.’ That makes it clear that the story is over.”

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Ask the students to work in pairs to read the remaining closing sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at wrapping up the pieces.

After several minutes, signal for the students' attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the closings, and underline words and sentences they mention on the chart. As they report, ask:

Q How does that [word/sentence] help wrap up the story?

2 Review Closing Sentences in Drafts

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart and add endings that draw a story's events to a close. Ask the students to reread the last few sentences of their own personal narratives. Ask and have the students think to themselves about:

Q How might you revise your closing sentences to wrap up your piece?

Without discussing as a class, explain that the students will revise their closing sentences and then work on completing the writing and revision of their personal narratives today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise and Complete Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (📄 WA19) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your closing sentences to wrap up your piece in a satisfying way.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is as complete and as interesting as it can be.

WA19

During Writing Time, begin conferring with individual students about the pieces they are developing for publication.

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- "Now I understand" (from "The Mirror")
- "I will never forget," "I also will never forget," and "I hope one day" (from "Little Things")

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Today and over the next week, confer with individual students about the pieces they are developing for publication. Ask each student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Closing Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the closing sentences of their personal narratives. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

Q What words did you hear in [Ehren's] closing sentence(s) that wrapped up the piece for you?

Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own closing sentences?

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write Opinions About “The Mirror”

Remind the students that earlier they heard a story called “The Mirror” by a 15 year old named Jijo. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the story “The Mirror”?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Then explain that you will reread the story. Distribute copies of “The Mirror” and ask the students to follow along as you read. Reread the story; then ask:

Q What do you like about this story?

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and reread the items on it. Ask:

Q Which of these things does Jijo do in “The Mirror”? What in the story makes you say that?

Students might say:

“I like the fact that Jijo doesn’t explain in the beginning that the voice from the mountain is just his own voice echoing back. It made me want to keep reading to find out what’s going on.”

“He’s telling a true story about a single memory from his life.”

“In addition to what [Casey] said, he has an opening that grabs the reader’s attention, and he wraps it up with a strong ending.”

“I notice he doesn’t use a lot of sensory details, besides saying he felt a sharp pain.”

Explain that one way of judging whether “The Mirror” is well written is to consider whether it includes the things that good personal narratives usually include. Explain that people may differ about how well written they think the piece is, and that is fine. The important thing is that they explain their thinking by using facts and details from the story and from the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing an opinion about “The Mirror.”

You might say:

“I think that overall, Jijo’s story is a good example of personal narrative. I’ll start by writing: Jijo Vilayanickal’s story ‘The Mirror’ is a strong example of personal narrative. Notice that I stated my opinion and put the name and author in the opening sentences. Now I need to explain my thinking using facts and details. I’ll write: Jijo tells a true story about a memory. He has a strong opening that pulls me in as a reader by making me wonder whose voice is shouting back to him. He includes an ending that wraps up his piece by summarizing the lesson that he learned. Jijo only includes one sensory detail: the ‘sharp pain’ he felt when he tripped. This weakens the piece a bit. Now I need a closing sentence. I’ll write: Overall, I think this is a strong personal narrative, and I think it would be even stronger with a few more sensory details.”

Materials

- “The Mirror” from Week 2, Day 3 (see page 159)
- Copy of “The Mirror” (BLM3) for each student
- “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print “The Mirror” (BLM3). Make a copy for each student; set aside one copy for yourself.

Explain that the students will write their own opinions about Jijo's piece. They should start with an opening sentence that states their opinion and includes the name and author of the story, give a reason for their opinion and a fact or detail to support their reason, and provide a closing sentence that wraps up their writing. Have the students return to their seats and write about their opinions. If time permits, invite the students to share their opinions with the class.

Week 4

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students assess their own writing.
- Students proofread for spelling, grammar, and punctuation.
- Students write their final versions and publish them in a class book.
- Students present their personal narratives to the class from the Author's Chair.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students work in a responsible way.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students act in fair and caring ways.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA12, WA20–WA26

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)
- “Individual Writing Assessment” record sheet (IA1)
- “Student Self-assessment” record sheet (SA1)

Reproducible

- Personal Narrative genre unit family letter (BLM1)

Professional Development Media

- “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8)
- “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, create a chart titled “Self-assessment Questions” with the following questions written on it:

Does my piece describe an interesting personal experience?

Is my meaning clear in every sentence?

Are there sensory details in it?

Are there transitional words or phrases in it?

Does it include a strong opening?

Does it include a closing that wraps the piece up?

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6) on page 37 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Make enough copies to send one letter home with each student’s published piece.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 9, “Creating Documents,” in Appendix A to help the students type and print the final versions of their stories. Alternatively, you might recruit parent volunteers to help them do so.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“For him no simple feeling any longer exists. All that he sees, his joys, his pleasures, his suffering, his despair, all instantaneously become objects of observation.”

— Guy de Maupassant

Look at the personal narrative draft you wrote during Week 3, in which you described an event and how it changed you. Close your eyes and try to remember what you thought and felt before, during, and after the event. Look for places in your draft where you can insert information about your thoughts or feelings before, during, and after the event.

Day 1

Self-assessing and Pair Conferring

Materials

- “Self-assessment Questions” chart, prepared ahead
- Your revised sample writing OR the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12) from Week 3
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Unit 2, Week 1
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA20)

In this lesson, the students:

- Assess their own writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Use pair conference time responsibly

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Self-assess

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Explain that partners will meet to confer about their drafts today. Before conferring, each student will ask herself some questions about her own draft and decide what she wants to ask her partner when they meet.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Self-assessment Questions” chart. Explain that you would like the students to ask themselves these questions as they reread their drafts. Read the questions aloud and then display your revised writing from Week 3 or the revised “Sample Personal Narrative” chart (WA12). Model rereading your draft, asking yourself the questions, and thinking aloud about the answers.

2 Self-assess and Think About What to Ask Partners

Have the students reread their own drafts and ask themselves the charted self-assessment questions. After most students have had time to finish, signal for their attention and ask:

Q What questions do you want to ask your partner today about your draft?

As the students report questions, record them on the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart. Remind the students that they started this chart earlier in the year, and review the questions on it. Ask:

Q What other questions on this chart do you want to ask your partner today?

Students might say:

“I want to ask if my partner can imagine what’s happening.”

“I want to ask my partner if he can tell what I learned from what I wrote.”

“I want to find out whether anything is confusing to her.”

Explain that partners will read their drafts aloud to each other, including revisions, and then ask each other questions about their own drafts.

3 Confer in Pairs

Give the students ample time to confer in pairs.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Circulate among pairs and observe without intervening. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are the students asking each other questions about their own drafts?
- Are partners giving each other specific feedback?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe to discuss with the students in Step 4.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6); see page 37 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When most pairs have had time to discuss their drafts, signal for the class’s attention.

4 Reflect on Feedback

Gather the class and briefly discuss:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Remind the students that authors pay close attention to feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

Explain that during Writing Time today each student will revise his draft based on his self-assessment and the feedback he received from his partner. Encourage students to finalize their drafts today so they can begin proofreading and publishing them tomorrow.

TEKS 1.A.iii
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 and Step 4 (all)

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so. For more information, view “Managing Pair Conferences” (AV8).

WRITING TIME

5 Revise and Complete Drafts

Have the students return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA20) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your draft based on self-assessment and partner feedback.
- Finish revising your draft.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA20

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about the pieces they are publishing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by briefly discussing:

Q Who used feedback from your partner in your revision today? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will start proofreading their final versions tomorrow.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Publish Student Writing Online

This week the students will publish their personal narratives for the class library. Some students might also be interested in publishing their writing online. There are a number of websites where students can publish their writing online; search for them using the keywords “publishing student writing online.” Publishing online allows family members and friends to easily access and enjoy students’ writing.

Technology Tip

For more about online publishing sites and other Internet resources for students and teachers, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

Proofreading

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Check for correct use of to/too/two and it’s/its
- Proofread for sentence fragments
- Begin writing their final versions

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Proofread First Drafts

Have the students stay at their desks today. Explain that tomorrow the students will begin copying their first drafts into final versions for the class book. Today they will take time to proofread their writing to make sure it is free from errors.

Remind the students that they learned to proofread their drafts using the proofreading notes in their Student Writing Handbooks (see Unit 2, Week 2, Day 3 on page 103). They will use this resource to proofread their personal narratives.

2 Discuss Proofreading for Commonly Misused Words

Write the words to, too, and two where everyone can see them. Ask:

Q What do you know about these words?

Materials

- “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA21)
- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments” chart (WA22)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA23)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

ELPS 4.C.iv
Steps 2–4
(all, beginning on page 187 and continuing to page 190)

Teacher Note

If you have students who have not yet finished revising their first drafts, plan time for them to finish before they move on to proofreading. Ask all of the students to pay attention as you teach them about proofreading so they will be able to do this step when they are ready.

If necessary, explain that to, too, and two are pronounced the same but have different spellings and meanings. Explain that sometimes, writers are not sure which of these words to use in a sentence. Tell the students that to use the words correctly, they need to think about what each word means. Explain that two refers to a number, too most often means “also” or “more than wanted or needed” (as in “too hot”), and to is likely to be the right spelling in most other cases.

Ask the students to open their Student Writing Handbooks to the Proofreading Notes section as you display the “Proofreading Notes” chart (WA21). Write the notes in the diagram below on the chart and ask the students to copy them into their proofreading notes.

Rule	Example	Notes
two	two fingers	a number too	I want one, too. It's too hot.	means “also”; means “hotter than wanted or needed” to	to the store to stop	use when you don't mean “two” or “too”

WA21

Ask the students to see whether they used these words anywhere in their personal narratives and to circle them if they did. Explain that they will have an opportunity during Writing Time to make sure they used the words correctly.

Follow the same procedure to help the students distinguish it's (short for “it is”) from its (“belonging to it”).

Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 3 (all, beginning on page 188 and continuing on
to page 189)

3 Discuss Proofreading for Sentence Fragments

Explain that the students will also proofread their drafts today to see if they have any sentence fragments, or incomplete sentences. Point out that incomplete sentences should be changed to form complete sentences.

Display the “Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments” chart (WA22). Ask the students to watch and listen as you read the first passage aloud. Ask:

Q What did you notice about the way the passage sounded when I read it?

Students might say:

“It doesn't sound right.”

“In addition to what [Lucy] said, some of the sentences sound funny—like something is missing.”

Q What sentence fragments, or incomplete sentences, do you see in the passage?

If necessary, point out that right now the passage does not sound right when read aloud because it contains several sentence fragments. Model rereading the passage and thinking aloud about how to transform the fragments into complete sentences or combine them with other complete sentences.

You might say:

“‘As night fell, we heard the first raindrops’ is a complete sentence. It has a subject and a predicate. But ‘Falling outside’ is a sentence fragment. The fragment describes the raindrops, so I’ll add it to the complete sentence that came just before. Now the revised sentence says, As night fell, we heard the first raindrops falling outside. That sounds good and is a complete sentence. The next four sentences are complete—they each have a subject and a predicate—so I’ll leave them alone. ‘Shaking the walls’ and ‘And sending things rolling down the street’ are both fragments. I’ll try combining them with the previous sentence, since they add more description about the wind: The wind began to blow, shaking the walls and sending things rolling down the street. Now they are part of a complete sentence.”

Follow this same procedure with the second passage on the “Personal Narrative with Sentence Fragments” chart.

WRITING TIME

4 Proofread and Write Final Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA23) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Proofread your draft for correct use of to/too/two and it’s/its.
- Check for sentence fragments.
- If you finish proofreading, work on another piece of writing.

WA23

During Writing Time, confer with individual students.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice identifying and correcting commonly misused words, see Lesson 12 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

You might explain that a complete sentence contains a subject (the part that tells who or what the sentence is about) and a predicate (the part that tells what the subject does or did). The subject usually includes a noun or pronoun, and the predicate always includes a verb. Explain that many sentence fragments can be identified because they do not have both a subject and a predicate. For more practice using subjects and predicates and recognizing and correcting fragments, see Lesson 1 and Lesson 4 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

TEKS 11.C.iii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 4 (all, beginning on page 189
and continuing on to page 190)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words to/too/two and it's/its?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Proofreading

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What corrections did you make when you proofread your draft?
- Q Who found errors by using your proofreading notes? Tell us about the errors.

In this lesson, the students:

- Proofread for spelling and punctuation
- Listen for run-on sentences as they read their drafts aloud
- Begin writing their final versions

GETTING READY TO WRITE*1 Prepare to Proofread First Drafts

Have the students stay at their desks today. Explain that the students will begin copying their first drafts into final versions for the class book. Before this step, they will take time to proofread their writing for a few more things to make sure that it is free from errors.

Remind the students that they learned to proofread their drafts for spelling and punctuation using the word banks and proofreading notes in their Student Writing Handbooks. Explain that they will use these resources today to finish proofreading their personal narratives.

2 Discuss Proofreading for Spelling

Ask the students to begin rereading their drafts (even if they are not finished with them) and ask them to circle any words that they are not sure how to spell. Stop the students after a couple of minutes and ask:

Q What words have you circled so far?

Have a few volunteers report the words they circled. Have the students check their word banks to see if the words they circled are listed. If not, encourage them to check the spelling by another method during Writing Time today and to make sure to add the correctly spelled word to their word banks. The students can check the spelling of a word by asking you or another student, finding the word in a published book, or looking it up in a print or online dictionary.

3 Discuss Proofreading for Run-on Sentences

Remind the students that their proofreading notes are a checklist of things to pay attention to when they proofread their drafts. Ask:

Q What is listed in your proofreading notes that you will check for in your draft today?

Point out that, in addition to checking for capital letters at the beginnings of sentences and punctuation at the ends, the students should also look for any run-on sentences. Explain that a run-on sentence

Materials

- Student Writing Handbooks
- “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart (WA24)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA25)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Teacher Note

If you have students who have not yet finished revising their first drafts, plan time for them to finish before they move on to proofreading. Ask all of the students to pay attention as you teach them about proofreading so they will be able to do this step when they are ready.

is usually made of two or more complete sentences that have been “run together” without a joining word (a conjunction) such as or, and, so, or but. Point out that run-on sentences often look like really long sentences.

Display the “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart (WA24). Ask the students to watch and listen as you read the first passage aloud, pausing only at the comma and the period at the end. Ask:

Q What did you notice about the way the passage sounded when I read it?

Students might say:

“It doesn’t sound right.”

“In addition to what [Sandy] said, some of the sentences sound funny—like they go on too long.”

“I noticed a sentence that sounded like it might be two sentences squished together. It was confusing.”

Q What run-on sentences do you notice in the passage?

If necessary, point out that right now the passage does not sound right when it is read aloud because it contains several run-on sentences. Model rereading and revising the passage while thinking aloud about how to split the run-ons into two or more complete sentences, capitalizing the first word in each new sentence and adding a period at the end.

You might say:

“The first sentence, ‘My parents went shopping and came home with bags of batteries, candles, and food,’ sounds right. It’s a complete thought and a complete sentence all by itself, so I’ll leave it alone. I think the second sentence might be a run-on. I can hear it when I read ‘my mother collected matches and checked the radios then we sat. . .’ That sounds like the end of one sentence and the beginning of another sentence squished together. I’ll put a period between radios and then, remembering to capitalize the T in Then.”

Follow this same procedure with the second passage on the “Personal Narrative with Run-on Sentences” chart.

Explain that during Writing Time you would like the students to read their drafts aloud to listen for run-on sentences. Encourage the students to split any run-on sentences into two or more complete sentences. Remind them to capitalize the first word of each complete sentence and add a period at the end.

Skill Practice Note

The students will have more opportunities to practice proofreading for spelling, and to practice recognizing run-on sentences, in the other genre units. For more practice producing complete sentences and correcting run-on sentences, see Lesson 1 and Lesson 5 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

WRITING TIME

4 Proofread and Write Final Drafts

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA25) and have the students work silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Proofread your draft for spelling and punctuation.
- Check for run-on sentences.
- If you finish proofreading, begin copying your final version on loose, lined paper.

WA25

During Writing Time, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words to/too/two and it’s/its?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

Technology Tip

If computers are available, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 9, “Creating Documents,” in Appendix A to help the students type and print the final versions of their stories. Alternatively, you might recruit parent volunteers to help them do so.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Proofreading

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What corrections did you make when you proofread your draft?
- Q What words did you find in your word bank? How did you check on words that were not in the word bank?
- Q Who found errors using your proofreading notes? Tell us about them.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Record Personal Narratives

If you have access to recording equipment, consider having the students create audio or video recordings of their personal narratives. Make the recorded narratives available in the classroom, school library, or online for others to enjoy.

Day 4

Publishing

Materials

- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Construction and/or drawing paper for class book cover and other features
- Chair to use for the Author's Chair
- (Optional) Read-aloud books from Weeks 1 and 2
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

In this lesson, the students:

- Discuss features for their class book
- Write their final versions
- Share their writing from the Author's Chair
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Plan Features of the Class Book

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that the students will have today and tomorrow to finish the final versions of their personal narratives. Students who are finished will begin sharing their narratives from the Author's Chair today. Remind the students that the pages of all their stories will be bound together as a class book.

As a class, brainstorm and decide on a title for the class book, and decide whether any other features—such as a dedication page, back cover blurb, or illustrations—will be included. If helpful, review what these features look like by showing examples in read-aloud books from earlier in the unit. Assign volunteers to work on the cover and any other features when they finish their final versions.

WRITING TIME

2 Finish Final Versions

Ask the students to return to their seats and work on their final versions for 20–30 minutes. Provide the materials needed for creating a cover, illustrations, and any other features the students have agreed upon for the class book. As they work, confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read her draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student’s writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student’s piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words to/too/two and it’s/its?

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to her and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Review Sharing Writing from the Author’s Chair

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the Author’s Chair. Explain that each student will read his personal narrative to the class from the Author’s Chair. Remind the students of the procedure you would like them to follow when they are ready to present their personal narratives from the Author’s Chair. If necessary, review the procedures you established for Author’s Chair sharing in Unit 2, Week 2, Day 5 (see “Do Ahead” on page 95).

Facilitation Tip

Reflect on your experience over the past four weeks with asking open-ended questions and using wait-time. Do these techniques feel comfortable and natural for you? Do you find yourself using them throughout the school day? What effect has repeated use of them had on your students' thinking and participation in discussions? We encourage you to continue to use and reflect on these techniques throughout the year.

4 Review Speaking Clearly and Expressing Interest in One Another's Writing

Before asking anyone to share from the Author's Chair today, have a discussion about how the students will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Why is it important to speak in a loud, clear voice when you're sharing your narrative with the class?
- Q If you're in the audience and you can't hear the author, how can you politely let him or her know?
- Q How will you let the author know that you're interested in his or her writing? Why is it important to express interest in other people's writing?

Encourage the students to be attentive audience members. Tell them that you will check in with them later to see how they did.

5 Conduct Author's Chair Sharing

Ask a student who has completed her personal narrative to read it aloud from the Author's Chair. At the end of the reading, facilitate a discussion using questions like those that follow, giving the author a chance to respond to the class's comments and questions.

- Q What was interesting to you about [Andie's] personal narrative? Turn to your partner.
- Q What does [Andie] learn as a result of this experience?
- Q What sensory details did you hear as you listened to her narrative? What did they make you imagine?
- Q (Have the student reread her opening sentences.) How does [Andie] grab the reader's attention with her opening sentences?
- Q What questions can we ask [Andie] about her narrative?

Collect the students' completed narratives to be sent home to show their families and then bound into the class book.

Follow this procedure to have a few more students share from the Author's Chair. Explain that they will continue to share tomorrow and that everyone will have an opportunity to share a personal narrative from the Author's Chair.

6 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author's Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did we do as an audience today to help Author's Chair sharing to go well? What might we want to work on during the next Author's Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a narrative today, how did the audience members make you feel? What did they do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Publishing

Day 5

In this lesson, the students:

- Reflect on personal narrative
- Write their final versions
- Share their writing from the Author's Chair
- Give their full attention to the person who is speaking
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Reflect on Personal Narrative

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that over the past four weeks they learned about personal narrative and took their own personal narratives through the writing process, from first drafts to a published book. Ask the following question, referring the students if necessary to the "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart:

- Q What have you learned about writing a good personal narrative?

Students might say:

"I learned that personal narratives tell about something interesting that happened to the author."

"I learned that a good personal narrative has sensory details in it."

"I learned that a good personal narrative has transitional words and phrases in it."

"I learned that a good personal narrative tells what the author learned."

Materials

- "Writing Time" chart (WA26)
- Supply of loose, lined paper for final versions
- Copy of this unit's family letter (BLM1) for each student
- (Optional) "Notes About Personal Narratives" chart
- (Optional) Computers for typing and printing final versions

Teacher Note

If most students have completed their pieces, you might shorten Writing Time to leave more time for Author's Chair sharing.

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss questions such as the following:

- Q What is one way your final personal narrative has turned out better than your first draft? [pause] Turn to your partner.
- Q What is one thing you like about writing personal narrative? [pause] Turn to your partner.
- Q What did you find challenging about writing personal narrative? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Remind the students that writers become better over time the more they practice. Encourage students who feel particularly drawn to personal narrative to continue to write personal narratives during their free time.

Explain that the students will work on finishing the final versions of their personal narratives today. Those who have finished may write whatever they wish during Writing Time. After Writing Time, they will continue to share their narratives from the Author's Chair.

WRITING TIME

2 Finish Final Versions

Have the students return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA26) and have them write silently for 20–30 minutes. As they work, confer with individual students.

Writing Time

- Finish your final version.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA26

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read his draft aloud. As you listen, ask yourself:

- Does this student's writing communicate clearly? If not, what is unclear?
- Does the student's piece describe an interesting personal experience?
- Does the student use sensory details?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the piece have a strong opening and a closing that wraps it up?
- Do the revisions make sense and improve the piece?
- Does the student recognize and correct the commonly misused words to/too/two and it's/its?

(continues)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE (continued)

Help the student revise unclear writing by rereading those passages back to him and explaining what is confusing you. Ask questions such as:

Q What do you want your reader to be thinking at this part? How can you write that?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2); see page 39 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Gather for Author’s Chair Sharing

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing the Author’s Chair. Briefly discuss how they will act, both as presenting authors and as members of the audience. Ask:

Q What will you do to be a respectful member of the audience today?

Encourage the students to be attentive and considerate audience members, and tell them that you will check in with them to see how they did.

4 Conduct Author’s Chair Sharing

Have some of the students read their personal narratives aloud from the Author’s Chair. Facilitate brief discussions about each of the readings, using questions like those that follow and giving the author a chance to respond to the class’s comments and questions.

Q What was interesting to you about [Bela’s] personal narrative?

Q What did you [see/hear/smell/taste/feel] as you listened to his narrative, and what words helped you imagine? Turn to your partner.

Q (Have the student reread his opening sentences.) How does [Bela] grab the reader’s attention with his opening sentences?

Q What questions can we ask [Bela] about his narrative?

Collect the students’ personal narratives to be sent home for the students to share with their families and then bound into the class book.

If all the students have not had a chance to share, assure them that they will all share their personal narratives from the Author’s Chair in the next few days.

5 Reflect on Audience Behavior During Author’s Chair Sharing

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did we do as an audience today to help Author’s Chair sharing go well? What might we want to work on during the next Author’s Chair sharing?
- Q If you shared a personal narrative today, how did the audience make you feel? What did they do that made you feel [relaxed/nervous/proud]?

Explain that after the students have shared their personal narratives from the Author’s Chair, they may take the narratives home to share with their families. Then the students will bring the narratives back to class, and you will compile them into a class book. This book will be available for the students to read during independent reading time.

Teacher Note

For information on wrapping up this unit and conducting unit assessments, see “End-of-unit Considerations” on this page.

Skill Practice Note

For practice with using commas in the dates, addresses, greetings, and closings of letters, see Lesson 28 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

EXTENSION

Write Letters Home About Personal Narratives

Provide letter-writing practice for the students by having them write letters home about what they learned about personal narrative writing. Stimulate their thinking by reviewing the “Notes About Personal Narratives” chart and discussing questions such as:

- Q What’s special about personal narrative writing?
- Q What steps did you go through to develop and publish your personal narrative?
- Q What is one thing you’re proud of about your published personal narrative?

If necessary, review the elements of a letter (date, salutation, body, closing, and signature) by modeling or writing a shared sample letter with the class. Have the students write and proofread their letters; then attach each student’s letter to a copy of her own published personal narrative and send it home.

End-of-unit Considerations

Wrap Up the Unit

- This is the last week of the Personal Narrative unit. You will need to reassign partners before you begin the next unit.
- Send home with each student the student’s published piece and a copy of this unit’s family letter (BLM1). Encourage the students to share their published pieces with their families. Remind the students to bring the pieces back to class after their families have read them so they can be placed in the class library.
- Save the students’ published writing (or copies of it) to use for reflection and discussion in Unit 9.

Assessments

- Before continuing with the next unit, take this opportunity to assess individual students' writing from this unit. See "Completing the Individual Writing Assessment" (IA1) on page 42 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- (Optional) Prior to sending the students' published writing home to share with their families, you might have each student analyze his writing using the "Student Self-assessment" record sheet (SA1) on page 41 of the Assessment Resource Book. For more information about administering this assessment, see the extension "Introduce 'Student Self-assessment'" on page 114.

Genre

Fiction

During this six-week unit, the students explore fiction writing and they draft, revise, and publish their own stories. By hearing different kinds of fiction and exploring how authors get ideas and put stories together, the students learn how to integrate elements of character, setting, and plot into their own writing. They explore features of good fiction including descriptive details, transitional words and phrases, and endings that bring a story's events to a close. They learn important skills and conventions pertinent to fiction writing, such as punctuating dialogue, punctuating for effect, and using first- and third-person points of view. They cultivate a relaxed and creative attitude toward their writing and continue to be contributing members of the classroom writing community.

Week 1

OVERVIEW

Tar Beach

by Faith Ringgold

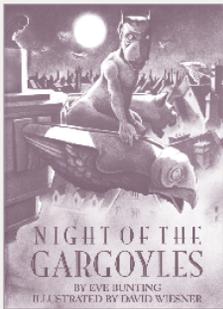

Cassie takes flights of imagination from the roof of her family's apartment building.

Miss Rumphius

by Barbara Cooney

Miss Rumphius figures out what she can do to make the world a more beautiful place.

Night of the Gargoyles

by Eve Bunting, illustrated by David Wiesner

Gargoyles on the museum building creep from their perches as the city sleeps.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA1–WA4

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA1–CA2)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1)

Reproducible

- (Optional) “Excerpt from Tar Beach” (BLM2)

Professional Development Media

- “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9)
- “Using “Turn to Your Partner”” (AV11)
- “Using “Think, Pair, Share”” (AV13)

- “Conferring About Fiction” (AV43)
- “Exploring Fiction” (AV44)
- “Creating a Class Blog” tutorial (AV76)

TEACHER AS WRITER

“My writing is full of lives I might have led. A writer imagines what could have happened, not what really happened.”

— Joyce Carol Oates

The work of the fiction writer is to invent new worlds. This week, imagine a life you might have led, and write your “memories” of this fictitious life. Perhaps you were born into a different culture, grew up in a different family, or chose a different profession. How do you imagine that these life experiences have shaped you? As you write, include your feelings and perspectives, and invent details to make that life seem real.

Writing Focus

- Students hear and discuss fiction.
- Students informally explore elements of fiction.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students draft fiction pieces.

Social Development Focus

- Teacher and students build the writing community.
- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Consider reading this unit’s read-aloud selections with your English Language Learners before you read them to the whole class. Stop during the reading to discuss vocabulary and to check for understanding. Or, do a picture walk and have partners who speak the same primary language talk to each other in that language about what they see in the illustrations.
- ✓ Prior to Day 1, decide how you will randomly assign partners to work together during this unit. For suggestions about assigning partners, see “Random Pairing” on page xxix and “Considerations for Pairing ELLs” on page lii. For more information, view “Cooperative Structures Overview” (AV9).
- ✓ Night of the Gargoyles is written in a poetic style that can be challenging, both to read and to understand. Prior to Day 2, we suggest that you practice reading it aloud once, slowly and clearly, before you read it to the class.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1) on page 54 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2) on page 55 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1) on page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Exploring Fiction

Materials

- Tar Beach
- Tea with Milk from Unit 1
- The Bicycle Man from Unit 1
- Wizzil from Unit 1
- Sylvester and the Magic Pebble from Unit 1
- Chart paper and a marker

Teacher Note

For more information about fiction writing, view “Exploring Fiction” (AV44).

Teacher Note

The partners you assign today will stay together for the unit. If necessary, take a few minutes at the beginning of today’s lesson to let them get to know each other better by talking informally in a relaxed atmosphere.

Teacher Note

If you are teaching other programs from the Center for the Collaborative Classroom, the students can work within partnerships already established, or you may assign new partners for the writing lessons.

In this lesson, the students:

- Work with new partners
- Hear and discuss fiction
- Informally explore the elements of fiction
- Write freely about things that interest them

IMMERSION IN AND DRAFTING OF FICTION

In a fiction story, something happens to someone somewhere in time. In this unit, the students build this understanding in stages over a six-week period.

The first half of this unit immerses the students in stories, stimulating their imaginations and developing their dispositions for creativity and experimentation. The students hear, enjoy, and make observations about different examples of fiction. Having heard some examples, they begin drafting fiction and continue to learn about the genre. Skills and conventions are taught later in the unit so that the students can focus first on the big ideas: inventing interesting characters, describing believable settings, and building imaginative plots that make sense.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Pair Students and Discuss Working Together

Randomly assign partners and make sure they know each other’s names (see “Do Ahead” on page 209). Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Explain that over the next six weeks, partners will work together to explore writing fiction. They will hear and discuss fiction stories and learn how to write engaging stories.

Have partners take a few minutes to talk about some of the things they have written so far this year. Signal for their attention and ask:

Q What did you learn about the writing your partner has done this year?

2 Introduce Fiction

Show the covers of Tea with Milk, The Bicycle Man, Wizzil, and Sylvester and the Magic Pebble. Remind the students that they heard these fiction stories at the beginning of the year. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What do you think you know about fiction?

Students might say:

"Fiction is made up. It's make-believe."

"Fiction has characters, and things happen to them."

"Sometimes things happen in fiction that can't happen in real life, like animals talking."

"Some fiction stories are based on the author's life."

Record the students' ideas on a sheet of chart paper titled "Notes About Fiction." Post the chart and tell the students that you will continue to add ideas to the chart as they learn more about fiction in the coming weeks.

Point out that fiction writers try to tell stories that capture the interest and imagination of their readers. Explain that by the end of the unit, the students will have learned and practiced different techniques for writing a good fiction story and will have published their own stories for the class library.

3 Read Tar Beach Aloud

Show the cover of Tar Beach and read the title and author's name aloud, pointing out that the author was also the illustrator. Invite the students to think as they listen about what it might be like to write such a story themselves.

Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

floodlights: very powerful lights (p. 7)

hoisting cables: lifting up the metal lines that hold up the bridge (p. 11)

marvel: be amazed (p. 13)

steel girders: horizontal pieces of strong metal used to build bridges (p. 15; refer to the illustration) union: group that helps workers get what they need from their bosses (p. 16)

half-breed: (insulting term) mixed-race (p. 17)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

tracking: watching (p. 7)

skyscraper buildings: very tall buildings (p. 8)

my most prized possession: my favorite thing (p. 9)

I have claimed it: I have said it is mine (p. 12)

Teacher Note

Save the "Notes About Fiction" chart to use in Day 2 and throughout the unit.

Teacher Note

Your students may be familiar with some of the read-alouds in this program. Encourage them to listen to the read-alouds as writers, noticing what the author is trying to do and thinking about what they could try in their own writing.

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for defining vocabulary during the read-aloud, see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 1, Step 3 (page 8). For more information, view "Introducing Vocabulary During a Read-aloud" (AV30).

Teacher Note

To review the procedure for “Turn to Your Partner,” see Unit 1, Week 1, Day 2 (page 12). To see an example, view “Using ‘Turn to Your Partner’” (AV11).

Teacher Note

The discussion prompts are:

- “I agree with _____ because . . .”
- “I disagree with _____ because . . .”
- “In addition to what _____ said, I think . . .”

Teacher Note

Remember to pause for 10 seconds for the students to think before you say “Turn to your partner.” To review the procedure for “Think, Pair, Share,” see Unit 1, Week 2, Day 1 (page 32). To see an example, view “Using ‘Think, Pair, Share’” (AV13).

Teacher Note

Note that on Days 1 and 2 of this week, the students may write fiction or anything else they choose. On Day 3, after exposure to a couple more examples of fiction, all the students will be asked to begin writing in this genre.

Stop after:

- p. 17 “Then it won’t matter that he’s not in their old union, or whether he’s colored or a half-breed Indian, like they say.”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far in the story? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question; then signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the last line and continue reading to the end of the story.

4 Discuss the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Remind the students to use the discussion prompts to help them listen and build on one another’s thinking. Be ready to reread from the text to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What events in this story could happen in real life? What events could happen only in the imagination?

Students might say:

“The girl is up on the roof with her family, and she thinks about flying. That could happen in real life.”

“In addition to what [José] said, she can only fly over buildings in her imagination. And flying over them won’t make them hers in real life.”

“I agree with [Melanie]. But other things in the story could happen in real life, like the dad working on the union building or people not letting him in the union.”

Use “Think, Pair, Share” to discuss:

Q What things could you write about that could happen only in the imagination? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

“You could write about animals talking.”

“You could write about having superhuman powers, like being able to fly.”

“A story that takes place on another planet could only happen in the imagination.”

Point out that some fiction could happen in real life and some could happen only in the imagination. Invite the students to think about both kinds of events as they write freely today.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils, sit at desks with partners together, and write silently for 20–30 minutes. During this time, they may write about anything they choose. Remind them that they should write double-spaced in their notebooks and that there should be no talking, whispering, or walking around.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect

Ask partners to talk briefly about what they wrote today. After a moment, signal for their attention and ask questions such as:

- Q What did your partner write about today?
- Q What did you and your partner do to work well together when you were talking and sharing your writing?

ELL Note

English Language Learners may benefit from drawing their ideas before they write. Encourage them to draw what they want to write about and then talk quietly with you or their partners about their drawings. If necessary, write down key words and phrases they want to use so they can copy them into their writing.

Exploring Fiction

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing
- Hear and discuss fiction
- Informally explore the elements of fiction
- Write freely about things that interest them

THE IMPORTANCE OF ATTITUDE IN WRITING

To get enough practice writing during the elementary school years, it is extremely important that students learn to start writing fairly quickly after they sit down, and to write freely, abundantly, and without fear. This requires a relaxed attitude, free from inhibitions, especially during the early drafting stages. In this lesson, the students hear a very imaginative fantasy story. The intent is to inspire their imaginations and help them know that writing can be lighthearted and about anything.

Materials

- Night of the Gargoyles
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 1
- “Inanimate Objects That Come to Life” chart (WA1)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA1)

Regularly remind the students that they are writing primarily for themselves. Encourage them to be willing to write something that is less than perfect. The important thing is to repeatedly practice getting their ideas on paper.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Add to “Notes About Fiction” Chart

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students began exploring fiction, or invented stories. Remind the students that some fiction could happen in real life and some fiction could happen only in the imagination. Add this to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Explain that today they will hear another example of fiction and do more writing.

2 Discuss Writing Attitude

Point out that learning to write is like learning any new sport, musical instrument, or skill; you must practice over and over to become good at it. Ask:

Q What can be hard about starting to write or continuing to write for the whole Writing Time?

Students might say:

“It’s hard to start writing when I don’t know what to write.”

“I stop writing if I don’t know how to spell something.”

Explain that you expect the students’ writing to have spelling errors and to be imperfect and incomplete. This is natural for young writers. Assure them that practicing by writing many, many imperfect pieces is more important than writing just a few perfect pieces.

Encourage the students to try to bring a fun, relaxed attitude to their writing today.

3 Read Night of the Gargoyles Aloud

Show the cover of Night of the Gargoyles and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Show the opening page and read it aloud, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

waterspout: hole that directs rainwater off of a roof onto the street below

grotesque: ugly or monsterlike

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Have you ever before seen a gargoyle on a building? What did it look like?

Explain that in this story, the gargoyles come to life. Invite the students to think as they listen about whether they might like to try writing such a story themselves.

Read Night of the Gargoyles aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

squat: sit (p. 3)

gape: stare with an open mouth (p. 9)

pockmarked: scarred or dented (p. 10)

torrents: huge rushing streams of water (p. 14)

perch: sit (p. 17)

lap: drink (p. 18)

show their scorn: show that they are laughing at him (p. 23)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

creep: walk in a quiet, secret way (p. 6)

peer: look (p. 6)

gargoyle-hunch around the rim: sit around the edge of the fountain (p. 12)

gaping: wide open (p. 14)

snort his disbelief: make a sound with his nose showing he didn't believe him (p. 20)

Stop after:

p. 9 "... as bloodless as their own."

Ask:

Q What kind of building might these gargoyles be peering into? Turn to your partner.

Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last line and continue reading to the next stopping point:

p. 25 "The watchman hunches down and hurries on."

Ask:

Q How do the gargoyles feel about humans, and why do they feel that way? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question briefly; then signal for their attention. Without stopping to discuss as a class, reread the last line and continue reading to the end of the story.

ELL Note

If necessary, simplify this question by asking:

Q The gargoyles are looking into a building. What kind of building are they looking into?

4 Discuss the Story and Generate Ideas

Explain that something that is realistic is something that could happen in real life. Briefly discuss:

- Q What events in this story are realistic?
- Q What events could happen only in the imagination?
- Q What other stories have you read or heard where inanimate (lifeless) objects come to life?

Students might say:

"Gargoyles come to life only in the imagination."

"In addition to what [Tracey] said, they talk to each other about their day! That can't happen in real life."

"But there is a watchman in the story. That part is realistic. It could really happen."

Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q If you were going to write about an inanimate object that comes to life, what might you write about?

Display the "Inanimate Objects That Come to Life" chart (WA1) and record the students' ideas on the chart as they generate them.

Inanimate Objects That Come to Life

- All the food in the grocery store starts moving around at night.
- The toys in somebody's room come to life.
- One day the chairs in our classroom get up and walk away.

WA1

Explain that during Writing Time today, the students may write about objects coming to life or anything else they choose. Encourage them to relax and write as freely and imaginatively as possible.

WRITING TIME

5 Write Independently

Ask the students to return to their seats and write silently for 20–30 minutes. They may write about the objects that come to life or anything else they choose. Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do they seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude?

If necessary, remind the students to double-space their writing. If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class's attention and have partners talk to each other about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class; then have the students resume silent writing.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA1); see page 54 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing Attitude

Talk briefly as a class about the students' attitudes as they wrote today. Ask questions such as:

- Q Were you able to relax and write freely today without getting stuck? If so, what happened? If not, what made you feel stuck? What did you do to try to get unstuck?

Explain that the students will continue to focus on developing a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Use a Class Blog for Reflection

Create a class blog and invite the students to reflect on their writing attitude as they draft and revise their stories in the coming weeks. Post reflection questions such as those in Step 6 above. After discussing the questions as a class, have interested students post their comments. Review the comments periodically and, with the respondents' permission, discuss comments with the class.

Technology Tip

For information about setting up and maintaining a class blog, view the "Creating a Class Blog" tutorial (AV76).

Day 3

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Miss Rumphius
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA2)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA2)

Teacher Note

The pages of Miss Rumphius are unnumbered. For easy reference, pencil in page numbers beginning with the number 1 on the right-hand title page that includes the author’s name. (Page 4 starts “The Lupine Lady lives in a small house . . .” and page 6 begins “Now he worked in the shop . . .”) This system is used throughout the program for all read-alouds with unnumbered pages.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Informally explore the elements of fiction
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read the First Half of Miss Rumphius Aloud

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students are hearing examples of fiction and thinking about ideas for fiction stories. Review that yesterday they heard a story in which inanimate objects come to life. Add inanimate objects come to life to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Explain that today they will hear another story and begin drafting a fiction story.

Show the cover of Miss Rumphius and read the title and author’s name aloud, pointing out that the author was also the illustrator. Explain that the students will hear the first half of the book today and the second half tomorrow. Explain that you will stop during the reading to have partners talk about their thinking.

Read pages 4–18 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

lupine: kind of flower (p. 4; refer to the illustration on the book cover) wharves: places where ships can tie up to load or unload (p. 4) figureheads: carved wooden figures (p. 6) conservatory: indoor space for growing flowers and plants (p. 12)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

masts: tall, straight poles that hold the sails of a ship (p. 4; refer to the illustration on p. 5)

cockatoos: parrots with colorful feathers on top of their heads (p. 15)

cross the heavens: go across the sky (p. 18)

set in glory: set beautifully (p. 18)

Stop after:

p. 12 “‘But not quite.’”

Ask:

Q What has happened so far? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question briefly; then signal for their attention and continue reading. Stop after:

p. 18 “‘But there is still one more thing I have to do,’ she said.”

Ask:

Q What has happened up to this point in the story? Turn to your partner.

Explain that you will read the second half of the story tomorrow.

2 Discuss the Story

Facilitate a brief class discussion using the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What’s interesting or unusual about Miss Rumphius?

Students might say:

“She had a grandfather who was an artist and let her paint part of his pictures.”

“In addition to what [Jon] said, she went traveling to faraway places all by herself. I don’t think women did that much when she was young.”

“In addition to what [Jon and Sidra] said, Miss Rumphius stuck to her list of important things to do in her life. Not everyone does that.”

“Even her name makes her sound interesting. I’ve never heard the name ‘Miss Rumphius’ before.”

Explain that today you would like all the students to try writing a fiction story. They may make up a story about an interesting person they know outside of school, or they may write any other made-up story. Remind them to double-space their writing and to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get more ideas.

WRITING TIME

3 Begin Drafting Fiction Pieces

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA2) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Teacher Note

The students are just beginning to generate ideas for fiction. They are not expected to know or incorporate specific features of the genre into their writing at this point. They will build their understanding as they explore the genre over the coming weeks.

Teacher Note

The students will write all first drafts, double-spaced, in their notebooks. In Week 3, they will select one of the drafts to develop and publish. Double-spacing now allows space for revision later. The students will write their final versions in Week 6 on loose, lined paper (or on computers, if available).

Writing Time

- Make up a story about an interesting person outside of school.
- Continue a fiction story you started earlier.
- Start a new fiction story.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Are the students staying in their seats and writing silently?
- Are they double-spacing their writing?
- Do they seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude?

If necessary, remind the students to double-space their writing. If you notice many students having difficulty starting to write, call for the class's attention and have partners talk to each other about what they might write. Have a few volunteers share their ideas with the class; then have the students resume silent writing.

Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA2); see page 55 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q What did you write about today?
- Q (Point to the "Notes About Fiction" chart.) Which notes did you think about as you started writing today?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to read and draft fiction for the next couple of weeks. They will eventually select one of their fiction drafts to develop and publish as a book for the class library.

EXTENSION

Conduct Interviews with Interesting People

Some students may be interested in learning more about the interesting people about whom they are writing. Have your students compose a list of questions to ask and then arrange to interview the people they have selected. Once the interviews are completed, have the students write stories based on the information they collected in the interviews. These stories may be fiction or nonfiction.

Drafting Fiction

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Quick-write ideas for interesting people to write about
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

Materials

- Miss Rumphius from Day 3
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- “Writing Time” chart (WA3)

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Read the Second Half of Miss Rumphius Aloud

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that yesterday the students heard the first half of Miss Rumphius. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What happened in the first half of the story?

Explain that you will read the second half of the book today. Read pages 18–31 aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

bushels: huge bunches (p. 24)

sowing lupines: planting lupine seeds (p. 24)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

satisfaction: happiness, contentment (p. 21)

delight: joy (p. 22)

seed house: business that sells seeds (p. 24)

2 Briefly Discuss the Story and Quick-write: Interesting People

Facilitate a brief class discussion using the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What else did you learn about Miss Rumphius that makes her interesting or unusual?

Students might say:

"It seems like she does whatever she wants and doesn't care what people think."

"She goes all over the place planting lupines. Most people don't do that."

"In addition to what [Phil and Lara] said, she can get really happy just seeing some flowers grow."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q What interesting people do you know outside of school whom you could make up a story about? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Scan the class as partners talk, providing sufficient time for them to discuss the question. Then signal for their attention and have a few volunteers share with the class.

Without discussing the question, have the students open their notebooks to the next blank page of the writing ideas section, label it "Interesting People I Know," and write a list of interesting people they know outside of school about whom they could write a story. Stop them after 3–4 minutes and have partners share and discuss their lists with each other. Then have them resume listing for a few more minutes.

Explain that during Writing Time the students may make up a story about an interesting person they know outside of school or they may write any other made-up story. Remind them to double-space their writing and to look at the "Notes About Fiction" chart to help them get more ideas.

WRITING TIME

3 Begin Drafting Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA3) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Make up a story about an interesting person outside of school.
- Continue a fiction story you started earlier.
- Start any new fiction story.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as:

- Q Were you able to make up a story about an interesting person you know? Tell us about it.
- Q What other fictional ideas did you write about today?
- Q (Point to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.) Which notes did you think about as you started writing today?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Remind the students that they will continue to focus on developing a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice and that they will continue to read and draft fiction for the next couple of weeks.

EXTENSION

Discuss the Past Progressive Tense in Miss Rumphius

Show pages 20–21 of Miss Rumphius and review that after Miss Rumphius moves to her new house, her back starts to bother her. Reread the first two sentences on page 21.

Skill Practice Note

For more practice with forming and using the progressive verb tenses, see Lesson 16 in the Skill Practice Teaching Guide.

Day 5

Drafting Fiction and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- Miss Rumphius from Day 4
- Student Writing Handbook page 10
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA4)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheets (CN1)

Write the sentence Her back was bothering her again, and she had to stay in bed most of the time where everyone can see it, and underline the words was bothering. Explain that the words are the past progressive tense of the verb bother. Explain that writers use the past progressive tense to show that action was continuing over a period of time. If Barbara Cooney had written “Her back bothered her,” it might suggest that Miss Rumphius’s back bothered her just one time. Barbara Cooney wrote “was bothering” to show that Miss Rumphius’s back continued to bother her for a while.

Explain that writers also use the past progressive tense to show that one thing was happening when something else happened. Write the following sentence on the board: Marcy was reading when she heard a loud crash. Underline the words was reading and explain that this is the past progressive tense of the verb read. Explain that in this sentence, was reading is used to show that Marcy was in the process of reading when something else happened: she heard a loud crash.

Write the following sentence on the board: Fred _____ when the alarm clock went off. Explain that a verb in the past progressive tense is needed to complete the sentence. Ask:

Q What was Fred doing when the alarm clock went off?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking with the class. If necessary, follow up by asking questions such as:

Q How do we know that [“was sleeping”] is in the past progressive tense?

In this lesson, the students:

- Review a story they heard earlier
- Explore speech as a way to reveal character
- Draft fiction
- Practice procedures for pair conferences
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review Miss Rumphius

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard the second part of Miss Rumphius yesterday. Review the story by asking the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What happens in the second part of the story?

Tell the students that you will reread a passage from the story. Ask them to think about what they learn about Miss Rumphius’s personality in this passage. Read pages 21–22 aloud; then ask:

Q What do we find out about Miss Rumphius’s personality from this passage?

Students might say:

“Miss Rumphius loves lupines. She wants to plant more.”

“I agree with [Mae]. You can tell because she says, ‘I have always loved lupines the best.’”

“In addition to what [Lawrence] said, she had to stay in bed because her back was hurting her.”

Teacher Note

If necessary, remind the students to use the discussion prompts to connect their ideas to those of others.

2 Explore Speech as a Way to Reveal Character

Explain that one way readers learn about the personalities of story characters is by thinking about what the characters say—both to themselves and to other characters. Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 10, where the passage you just reread is reproduced. Have partners reread the passage together and talk about anything else they learn about Miss Rumphius’s personality from her speech.

After providing sufficient time for partners to reread and discuss the excerpt, signal for their attention. Discuss:

Q What else do you think about Miss Rumphius’s personality from what she says?

Students might say:

“Miss Rumphius probably likes to be out in nature. She says, ‘I wish I could plant more seeds,’ but for a while she isn’t able to.”

“In addition to what [Liza] said, I think she is smart. She figures out that the wind and the birds must have brought the seeds from her garden.”

“I agree with [Terrell], and I also think Miss Rumphius is creative because this gives her an idea.”

Explain that good fiction writers like Barbara Cooney, the author of Miss Rumphius, often use speech and dialogue (speech between characters) to reveal the personalities of their characters. Invite the students to try giving their characters things to say as they write their fiction stories today. Remind them to double-space their writing and to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get more ideas.

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 4.

Teacher Note

To see an example of a teacher conferring with individual students, view "Conferring About Fiction" (AV43).

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA4) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- If possible, include characters' speech and dialogue.

WA4

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then begin conferring with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next three weeks, confer with individual students to get an idea of their thinking as they write fiction drafts. Ask each student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Hold off on any feedback about grammar or spelling. Instead, focus on clarifying the student's ideas about the story she is writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 1" record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Explain that partners will each read one of their fiction drafts to the other and confer about both partners' drafts today. Briefly review the procedure you established for pair conferring (see Unit 1, Week 3, Day 2, Step 5 on page 56). Remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well. Explain that today partners will tell each other one thing they like about the other's draft. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What would you like your partner to do to show that he or she is interested in your writing and your creative ideas?

Students might say:

"I would like my partner to listen as I read my story."

"I would like my partner to ask me questions about the story."

"I would like my partner to tell me the part she likes."

"I would like my partner to say something nice about my story, like 'I really want to read your story.'"

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before you signal for their attention.

5 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking:

Q What did your partner do to show interest in your writing and creative ideas?

Q What did you like about your partner's writing?

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction drafts during the coming two weeks. Remind the students that they will eventually select one of their fiction drafts to develop and publish as a book for the class library.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write an Opinion Paragraph About the Character of Cassie in Tar Beach

Show the cover of Tar Beach and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

Q What do you remember about the story Tar Beach?

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Distribute the copies of "Excerpt from Tar Beach" and explain that the first part of Tar Beach is reproduced there. Point out that in Tar Beach, the narrator (the person telling the story) is Cassie. Remind the students that readers can figure out a lot about a story character's personality by paying attention to what the character says. Explain that as you read the first part of Tar Beach aloud, you want the students to follow along and think about what

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt "I would like my partner to . . ." to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their answers to this question.

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through the sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

Materials

- Tar Beach from Day 1
- Copy of "Excerpt from Tar Beach" (BLM2) for each student

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, you will need to visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print "Excerpt from Tar Beach" (BLM2). Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a copy for yourself.

they are learning about Cassie’s personality from what she says. Then read aloud pages 5–13 of the book. After reading, ask:

Q What have you learned about Cassie’s personality from what she has said so far? What in the story makes you think that?

Students might say:

“She has a wild imagination. She talks as if the stars really lifted her up above the George Washington Bridge.”

“She wants to be rich and powerful and free. She says sleeping on Tar Beach made her feel like she owned all she could see.”

“She cares about her baby brother. I think that because she tells him to lie still, she wants him to be safe.”

Explain that the students will write a paragraph of opinion about what kind of person Cassie is, based on things she says in the passage they just read. Tell the students that readers often have different opinions about a story, and that is fine. What is important is that they support their thinking with facts and details from the story. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing a paragraph about Cassie’s personality based on things she says. As you write, invite the students to suggest additional details to help you create a vivid picture of Cassie.

You might say:

“I think the things Cassie says show that she is an ordinary girl with an extraordinary imagination. I’ll start by writing this: The character Cassie in Tar Beach by Faith Ringgold lives an ordinary life, but she transforms it through her imagination into an extraordinary one. Notice that I stated my opinion and put the title of the story and author’s name in the opening sentence. Now I need to explain my thinking using facts and details. I’ll write: Some of the things Cassie tells us make her seem like an ordinary girl. We learn that she is a third grader who lives with her parents and baby brother, and that her parents like to play cards with their neighbors. She explains that her father worked on a bridge, hoisting cables. Now I’ll write about things she says that reveal her big imagination. I’ll write: But Cassie has an unusual imagination. She talks as if she can fly among the stars. She calls her rooftop ‘Tar Beach,’ as if it’s a special destination instead of just a cramped rooftop. And she pretends that the George Washington Bridge is a giant diamond necklace that belongs just to her. Now I need a closing sentence. I’ll write: The things Cassie says show that she uses her colorful imagination to transform her humdrum life into a special, magical one.”

Explain that the students should each start their paragraphs with an opening sentence that states their opinions and includes the title and author of the story, give facts or details from the story to support their opinions, and provide a closing sentence that wraps up their writing. Have the students return to their seats and write in their notebooks. If time permits, invite the students to share their opinion paragraphs with the class.

Week 2

OVERVIEW

Owl Moon

by Jane Yolen, illustrated by John Schoenherr
A father and child go owling late one winter night.

Roxaboxen

by Alice McLerran, illustrated by Barbara Cooney
Children create a special place in the desert using found objects and their imaginations.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“There is only one trait that marks the writer. He is always watching.”

— Morley Callaghan

This week, develop your powers of observation by sitting in a public place with your notebook. As you observe your setting, consider:

- What colors, textures, and shapes do you see?
- What information are you gathering through your other senses (hearing, smell, taste, touch)?
- What are people doing in this place?
- How does the setting seem to affect people’s behavior?

Describe what you observe in your notebook.

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft fiction.
- Students explore character, setting, and plot.
- Students explore how setting is developed in stories.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students cultivate creativity in their writing.

Social Development Focus

- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3) on page 56 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Owl Moon
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA5)

Teacher Note

The pages of Owl Moon are unnumbered. For easy reference, pencil in page numbers beginning with the number 1 on the right-hand title page that includes the author’s name. (Page 5 starts “It was late one winter night,” and page 6 begins “I could hear it . . .”) This system is used throughout the program for all read-alouds with unnumbered pages.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Become familiar with character, plot, and setting
- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review the Elements of Fiction

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Review that the students heard fiction stories last week and began drafting their own stories. This week they will continue to draft fiction pieces. Remind them that they will eventually select one of their drafts to develop and publish for the class library.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and review the items on it. Explain that in fiction stories, something happens to someone somewhere in time. The terms plot, character, and setting are used to describe the different features of stories.

Add something happens (plot) to someone (character) somewhere in time (setting) to the chart. Encourage the students to try to notice things about the plot, characters, and setting as they listen to a story today.

2 Read Owl Moon Aloud

Show the cover of Owl Moon and read the title and names of the author and illustrator aloud. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

clearing: space that has no trees (p. 18)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

woods: large area that has many trees growing close together (p. 6)

shrugged: raised up the shoulders to mean “I don’t know” (p. 12)

stained: made marks on (p. 16)

an echo came threading its way through the trees: a sound like the sound Pa had made came through the trees (p. 21)

3 Discuss the Setting in the Story

Facilitate a class discussion using the questions that follow, and be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard. Ask:

Q Who is this story about? What happens? When and where does it happen?

Students might say:

"The story is about a child and her father. They go looking for owls."

"In addition to what [Maxine] said, they find an owl at the end of the story."

"The story takes place at night in the forest."

"In addition to what [Dan] said, it takes place in the wintertime. There's snow, and it's cold."

Q What did you imagine seeing as you listened to the story? What did you imagine hearing? Feeling?

Students might say:

"I pictured the owl staring straight at the kid and the dad with big round eyes and then flying away."

"I could hear Pa making the owl call and then the owl hooting back."

"I imagined the freezing cold air on the part of their faces that wasn't protected by scarves."

"In addition to what [Alisha] said, I imagined feeling excited and a little scared when the owl finally appeared."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q If you were going to write about an outdoor place, what place might you choose? What might it be like? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Have volunteers share their thinking.

Students might say:

"I'd write about being on the African savannah and seeing a lion stalking some zebras."

"I'd write about walking through the jungle. There would be colorful birds screeching and monkeys swinging from vines."

"I'd write about a park like the one near here. I picture families having barbecues and dogs running around."

"I'd write about the beach. There might be people playing in the water and building sand castles, and the sound of waves crashing."

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction today. They may write about an outdoor place or anything else they wish.

Facilitation Tip

During this unit, we invite you to focus on pacing class discussions so they are lively and focused without dragging, losing the attention of your participants, or wandering off the topic. Class discussions should be long enough to allow time for thinking and short enough to sustain the students' attention. Good pacing requires careful observation of the class (not just the students who are responding) and the timely use of various pacing techniques. To speed up a discussion:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question, even if others have their hands up.
- Use "Turn to Your Partner" if many students want to speak; then call on just one or two students to share with the whole class.

To deepen or refocus a discussion:

- Restate the question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

To see this Facilitation Tip in action, view "Pacing Class Discussions" (AV20).

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA5) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Write about an outdoor place.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.

WA5

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask each student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Hold off on any feedback about grammar or spelling. Instead, focus on clarifying the student’s ideas about the story he is writing. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss the following question. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class as they respond.

Q What ideas came out of your imagination in your writing today?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to hear, discuss, and draft fiction tomorrow.

---

Describe a Photo

Collect photos of different places from magazines, travel brochures, etc. Distribute the photos to the students, and ask them to imagine and write about the things they might see, hear, feel, smell, and taste in their places. Invite them to make up stories set in these places.

Drafting Fiction

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Generate ideas for settings
- Visualize and quick-write about a setting
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

THE IMPORTANCE OF CREATIVITY IN WRITING

It is important for students to understand that writing fiction requires them to reach into their imaginations and tell things in their own way. Children come to school with vivid imaginations, full of possibilities. Nurture these possibilities by consistently showing interest in their ideas, asking them questions, and encouraging them to develop their ideas further.

Materials

- Owl Moon from Day 1
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 1
- “Writing Time” chart (WA6)

The lessons in this program help to build a safe classroom environment in which students can take the risks necessary to develop their creativity. Further nurture their creativity by regularly sharing your own creative writing and ideas with them.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Owl Moon and Visualize the Setting

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind the students that they heard Owl Moon yesterday and that in it, the author, Jane Yolen, describes a favorite outdoor place. Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add can be about an outdoor place.

Review that Jane Yolen describes the setting of Owl Moon using sensory details, or details that help us imagine what is happening using our senses. Review the story by asking the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What happens in the story?

Point out that the setting (where and when the story takes place) of Owl Moon is in the woods on a winter night. Tell the students that you will reread a passage from the story and that you would like them to close their eyes and imagine as they listen. Reread page 5 of the book aloud. Ask:

Q What do you imagine from this passage? What does this place look like? Sound like? Feel like?

Repeat this procedure with page 16, starting with "We went into the woods" and ending with "in the middle of the night." Then repeat it again with page 18.

Point out that Jane Yolen includes many details to help us imagine this place. Explain that today the students will continue to write fiction stories. Encourage them to include sensory details to help the reader imagine their settings. Also remind them to look at the "Notes About Fiction" chart to help them get ideas.

2 Guided Visualization and Quick-write: A Favorite Place

Remind the students that Jane Yolen writes about the woods at night in Owl Moon in a way that helps the reader imagine being there. Ask the students to think of a place they like to be. Have them open their

Teacher Note

To see an example of this technique, view "Guided Visualization and Quick-write" (AV45).

notebooks to the next blank page and each write down the name of the place they are thinking of. Ask them to close their eyes and think as you ask the questions that follow one at a time, pausing between the questions to give the students time to think.

- Q Imagine looking around your favorite place. What do you see? What is in front of you, behind you, above and below you? Notice the colors, shapes, and sizes of what you see.
- Q What do you hear in your favorite place? Are the sounds quiet or loud?
- Q Is this place outside or inside? How does your body feel in this place? Is it cold? Warm? Hot?
- Q What does it smell like in this place? Do the smells remind you of anything?

Have the students open their eyes and write what they imagined as they listened to your questions. After several minutes, signal for their attention and ask a few volunteers to share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that today the students may continue writing stories about the places they imagined, or they may write any other fiction story. Assure them that at this point it is perfectly fine to leave drafts incomplete and start new ones.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA6) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on the story you began during the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include sensory details to help readers imagine the setting.

WA6

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

Explain that one of the most important things fiction writers do is tap into their creativity—their ability to use their imaginations to create something new or to re-create something familiar in their own way.

Ask the students to review the writing they did today and each choose one sentence to share with the class. Encourage them to choose sentences they like or that they believe show their creativity. Ask them to underline their sentences. After a moment, go around the room, having each student read his sentence aloud, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that everyone is creative and can become more creative by writing and doing other creative things, such as drawing, playing musical instruments, and solving interesting problems in their own way. Explain that the students will continue to develop their creativity throughout the year.

Teacher Note

The intent of this activity is to hear one sentence from every student in the class. This lets the students hear what their classmates are writing and builds their accountability. After they underline their sentences, have them put their pencils away. Have them read their sentences in a loud voice, one after another, without stopping to comment. In the discussion afterward, they are not expected to remember every sentence they heard.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE*1 Briefly Review Owl Moon

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that they heard Owl Moon and thought about ways to describe settings using sights, sounds, smells, and feelings. Explain that you will read another story aloud today, and encourage the students to imagine using their senses to visualize the setting.

2 Read Roxaboxen Aloud

Show the cover of Roxaboxen and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Explain that Roxaboxen is an imaginary town invented by the children in the story. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described on the next page. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

greasewood, thorny ocotillo: types of plants that live in the desert (p. 4)

ford: cross (p. 5)

mayor: elected leader of the town (p. 12)

desert glass: bits of glass polished smooth by the sand (p. 14)

amber: orange or brownish yellow stone or color (p. 14)

amethyst: purplish stone or color (p. 14)

raids: battles (p. 23)

 ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

broke the speed limit: drove too fast (p. 18)

bridle: device that fits around a horse's head and is used to control the horse (p. 21)

gallop: run (like a horse) (p. 21)

fort: strong building where soldiers live (p. 22)

bandits: thieves (p. 22)

Materials

- Roxaboxen
- Owl Moon from Day 1
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA7)

Stop after:

p. 14 "... a house of jewels."

Ask:

Q What are you imagining about Roxaboxen? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question; then signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the last line and continue reading to the end of the story.

3 Discuss the Setting in the Story

Briefly discuss the questions that follow, and be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What did you imagine seeing in Roxaboxen as you listened? What did you imagine feeling? Smelling or tasting?

Students might say:

"The kids made up houses out of stone and desert glass."

"I imagined the children riding around in pretend cars and on horses made out of sticks."

"In addition to what [Aiden] said, they had a jail and pretend shops, like a bakery."

"I agree with [Emily]. I imagined what the pretend bread tasted like."

Use "Think, Pair, Share" to discuss:

Q If you were going to write about an imaginary place, what might it be like? [pause] Turn to your partner.

Students might say:

"People would live in tree houses."

"They would ride around in flying cars."

"The school would be made of waffles."

"People would pay for things with flowers instead of money."

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add can be about an imaginary place to it.

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction today. They may write about an imaginary place or any other story they wish. Encourage them to think of ways to describe the setting as they write.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA7) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt "I imagined [seeing/feeling/smelling/tasting]..." to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions.

Teacher Note

The students will explore developing settings in more depth during Weeks 4 and 5 of this unit.

Writing Time

- Write about an imaginary place using sensory details.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as the ones that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about an imaginary place? Tell us about it.
- Q What other topics did you write about? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Materials

- Roxaboxen
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- Student Writing Handbook page 11
- “Writing Time” chart (WA8)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA3)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Draft fiction
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Visualize the Setting in Roxaboxen

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that they heard Roxaboxen yesterday and thought about how to describe settings using sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and feelings. Add includes sensory details (descriptions of what you see, hear, smell, taste, and feel) to the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Ask the students to close their eyes and imagine the setting as you reread a passage from the story. Reread page 10 aloud, skipping the sentences “Charles made his of the biggest stones. After all, he was the oldest.” Then ask:

Q What did you imagine? Turn to your partner.

Without sharing as a class, repeat this procedure with page 14, and then with page 27, skipping the sentences “But it didn’t matter; Roxaboxen was always waiting. Roxaboxen was always there,” and stopping after “. . . jeweled windows.”

2 Analyze an Excerpt from Roxaboxen

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 11, where the passages you just read are reproduced. Ask partners to read through the passages together and underline words or phrases that helped them imagine this place.

After several minutes, signal for the students’ attention. Briefly discuss as a class:

Q What words or phrases did you underline? How does that help you imagine Roxaboxen?

ELL Note

You might provide the prompts “I underlined . . .” and “I imagine . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions.

Students might say:

"I underlined 'bits of amber, amethyst, and sea-green.' It helps me imagine houses that were sparkly with all the colored glass."

"My partner and I underlined 'the old wooden boxes.' We could imagine having a whole pretend house with those boxes."

"We underlined 'everybody sucked the honey from its flowers.' We imagined the sweet taste."

Explain that fully describing the setting in a story makes the story seem real and helps readers imagine where it takes place. Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to describe the settings of their stories as they write today.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA8) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Continue to include sensory details to help a reader imagine the setting.

WA8

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude, inspired by their own thoughts?
- If they seem overly cautious or inhibited, do they eventually start writing freely?

Support any student who is still struggling to start after about 10 minutes by asking her questions such as:

- Q Who is an interesting person you know who you can make up a story about?

(continues)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE (continued)

- Q What makes this person happy? Unhappy?
- Q Let's say this person feels unhappy because of what you just described. What unusual thing could happen to help him or her feel better?
- Q Where do you imagine this story takes place? What is this place like? How does it [look/sound/smell/feel]?

As the student responds to the questions, have the student write her responses in her notebook and continue to write what happens. Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA3); see page 56 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as the ones that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q Who wrote about an imaginary place? Tell us about it.
- Q Who wrote about an interesting thing that happened to a character? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Encourage the students to take a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice as they continue to draft fiction.

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the "Using Web-based Teaching Resources" tutorial (AV75).

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Listen to Audiobook Versions of Stories

Some of the fiction stories from this unit, including Tar Beach, Miss Rumphius, Owl Moon, and Roxaboxen, may be available online as audiobooks. To find an audiobook version of a story, search online with the book title and the keyword "audiobook." You might play the audiobook for the class and discuss with the students what they found interesting, enjoyable, or surprising about the reader's rendition of the story. Alternatively, you might invite interested students to listen to the audiobook and share their reactions to it with the class.

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Draft fiction
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Review How Settings Are Developed in Stories

Have the students remain at their seats. Remind the students that this week they heard two stories that have interesting settings, Roxaboxen and Owl Moon. Review that fully describing the setting in a story helps the reader imagine it and understand where the story takes place. Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to describe the settings of their stories as they write today, and to refer to the “Notes About Fiction” chart for writing ideas.

WRITING TIME

2 Draft Fiction Pieces

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA9) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Continue to include sensory details to help a reader imagine the setting.

WA9

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA9)
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from previous units

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 3.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Have students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that the students will read one of their fiction drafts to their partner and confer about it today. If necessary, briefly review the procedure for pair conferring and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart you started in Unit 2, Week 1, Day 3 (see page 80) and review the questions on it. Ask:

- Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Students might say:

“I want to ask my partner if he can picture the setting.”

“I want to ask my partner what she’s learning about the main character.”

“I want to find out which part my partner likes the best and why.”

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions in their pair conferences today.

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class, without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking questions such as:

- Q What questions did you ask your partner about your story? What did your partner say?
- Q What did you do to show interest in your partner's writing?
- Q Why is it important that we ask other people questions about our own writing?

5 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

As you did earlier in the week, ask each student to review the writing he did today and choose a sentence he likes or that shows her creativity. Give the students a moment to select and underline their sentences; then go around the room and have each student read his sentence aloud to the class, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a class discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else's writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Explain that the students will continue to explore and draft fiction next week.

WRITING ABOUT READING

Write About the Setting in Night of the Gargoyles

Show the cover of Night of the Gargoyles and remind the students that they heard this story earlier. Ask:

- Q *What do you remember about the story Night of the Gargoyles?*

Have a few volunteers share their thinking. Remind the students that good writers include sensory details in their writing that help readers imagine the setting. Distribute the copies of "Excerpt from Night of the Gargoyles" and explain that the first part of the story is reproduced there. Explain that, as you read the first part of Night of the Gargoyles aloud, you want the students to follow along and look for sensory details that help them

Teacher Note

Consider having pairs spread out so partners can better hear each other. If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles if they have not yet done so.

Materials

- Night of the Gargoyles from Week 1
- Copy of "Excerpt from Night of the Gargoyles" (BLM3) for each student

Teacher Note

Prior to doing this activity, you will need to visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to access and print "Excerpt from Night of the Gargoyles" (BLM3). Make enough copies for each student to have one; set aside a copy for yourself.

picture the setting in their minds. Then read aloud pages 3–12 of the book. After reading, ask:

- Q What did you picture in your mind as you read this part of the story?
- Q What sensory details in the story helped you imagine the setting? Why?

Students might say:

"I pictured big buildings in a town or a city with gargoyles at the tops of them. 'The gargoyles squat high on corners' helped me picture that."

"In addition to what [Sylvia] said, one of the buildings is probably a museum because it has mummies and a suit of armor."

"The very first part is about the daytime, but then the story says 'till night comes.' So most of the story is happening at night. It must be pretty dark because the story says 'shadowy corners.'"

"I pictured a city park with a big fountain that has a rim around it that you can sit on. The details that helped me picture that are 'a fountain splashes dark' and 'They gargoyle-hunch around the rim.'"

Explain that the students will write a paragraph about the setting they pictured in their minds as they read this passage. Tell the students that they need to support their thinking with facts and details from the story. Ask the students to watch as you think aloud and model writing a paragraph about the setting of Night of the Gargoyles based on the passage you read.

You might say:

"When I read the passage, I get a picture of a town or city at night, so I'm going to write about that. I'll start by writing this: In Night of the Gargoyles, Eve Bunting paints a picture of a town or city at night, after everyone has gone home—everyone except the gargoyles, that is. Notice that I put the title of the book and author's name in the opening sentence. Now I need to support my thinking with facts and details. I'll write: When the story begins, I picture the gargoyles stuck on the tops of tall buildings in the bright daylight. The language 'The gargoyles squat high on corners staring into space' paints that picture for me. But as the story says, 'night comes'—and that's when the gargoyles come to life. The words 'lick the stars' and 'feel the air move cool' help me picture a clear, calm night with a cool breeze, while the details 'fountain splashes dark' and 'gargoyle-hunch around the rim' create an image in my mind of an urban park with a big fountain in the middle of it, where the gargoyles gather. Now I need a closing sentence. I'll write: In this passage, Eve Bunting paints a picture of a deserted town center on a cool, clear night—the perfect playground for a bunch of gargoyles enjoying a few hours of freedom before the sun rises."

Explain that the students should start their paragraphs with an opening sentence that tells how they picture the setting and includes the title and author of the book. Explain that they should include facts or details from the story to support their opening sentences, and add a closing sentence that wraps up their writing. Have the students write in their notebooks. If time permits, invite the students to share their paragraphs with the class.

Week 3

OVERVIEW

The Day of Ahmed's Secret

by Florence Parry Heide and Judith Heide Gilliland, illustrated by Ted Lewin

As young Ahmed works delivering fuel, he anticipates revealing a secret to his family.

Morning on the Lake

by Jan Bourdeau Waboose, illustrated by Karen Reczuch

An Ojibway boy accompanies his grandfather to special places in the wilderness.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Don’t say the old lady screamed—bring her on and let her scream.”

— Mark Twain

Twain, like most fiction writers, found ways to “show, not tell” a story. What might happen in a passage in which the old lady is “brought on and screams”? How might that compare to a passage in which we’re simply told she screams? This week, experiment with writing a fiction passage in which a reader can see, hear, smell, taste, or feel what is happening.

Writing Focus

- Students hear, discuss, and draft fiction.
- Students explore how setting is developed in stories.
- Students generate and quick-write ideas for fiction.
- Students cultivate creativity in their writing.

Social Development Focus

- Students cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.
- Students help one another improve their writing.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 4, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4) on page 57 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Day 1

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- The Day of Ahmed's Secret
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA10)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Gather and Briefly Review

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you.

Review that over the past two weeks the students heard fiction stories and drafted their own stories. This week they will continue to draft fiction pieces. Remind them that they will eventually select one of their drafts to develop and publish for the class library.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Notes About Fiction” chart and review the items on it. Ask:

Q What else are you learning about fiction that we could include on this chart?

Add the students’ ideas to the chart and encourage the students to keep these things in mind as they listen to and write stories this week.

2 Read The Day of Ahmed's Secret Aloud

Show the cover of The Day of Ahmed's Secret aloud and read the title and the names of the authors and illustrator aloud. Encourage the students to listen for the ways the authors describe the setting of this story. Read the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

tangled: mixed (p. 7)

mingle: mix (p. 8)

butagaz boy: boy who delivers gas for use in gas stoves (p. 10)

fuel: gas or oil (p. 12)

caravans: long lines that travel together (p. 20; refer to the illustration) rosewater man: man who sells water flavored with rose petals (p. 25) lanterns: lamps that are lit with a match (p. 29)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

woven into the harness of my donkey are my own good-luck ones: the straps that help my donkey carry things are made of my lucky colors (p. 10)

sundown: evening (p. 10)

ashamed: embarrassed (p. 17)

desert: dry, hot, sandy land (p. 19)

3 Discuss the Setting in the Story

Facilitate a class discussion using the following questions and be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

- Q Who is this story about? What happens? When and where does it happen?
- Q What did you imagine about the places in this story as you listened?
- Q Which sensory details in the story helped you imagine the setting? Tell us about it.

Encourage the students to use sensory details to help their readers imagine the settings of their stories as they write today. Also remind them to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get ideas.

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA10) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Include sensory details to help a reader imagine the setting.

WA10

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Facilitation Tip

Continue to focus on  pacing class discussions  so they are neither too short nor too long. Scan the whole class (not just the students who are responding) and use techniques such as the following:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question, even if others have their hands up.
- Use “Turn to Your Partner” if many students want to speak. Then call on just two or three students to share with the whole class.
- Restate the question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

Teacher Note

The Writing Time routine established early in the year helps students settle quickly into focused writing. To learn more, view “Predictable Structure of the Writing Lessons” (AV3).

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing Process and Attitude

Briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud to the class as they respond.

- Q What writing ideas came out of your imagination today?
- Q Who used sensory details to describe a setting? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to hear, discuss, and draft fiction tomorrow.

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Generate ideas for settings
- Visualize and quick-write a setting
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing
- Ask one another questions about their writing

Materials

- The Day of Ahmed's Secret from Day 1
- "Notes About Fiction" chart from Day 1
- "Writing Time" chart (WA11)

GETTING READY TO WRITE*1 Briefly Review The Day of Ahmed's Secret and Visualize the Setting

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that they heard The Day of Ahmed's Secret yesterday and thought about how the authors describe the setting using sights, sounds, and feelings. Review the story by asking the question that follows. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What happens in the story?

Point out that the setting for The Day of Ahmed's Secret is a city in the desert. Tell the students that you will reread a passage from the story and that you would like them to close their eyes and imagine as they listen. Read the first paragraph on page 7 aloud. Ask:

Q What do you imagine when you hear this passage? What does this place look like? Sound like? Feel like?

Repeat the procedure with page 15, skipping the first paragraph and stopping after the sentence "There are many old buildings, many old walls like the one I lean against, in this city." Then repeat the procedure with page 18, skipping the words "Now as I lean against the old building."

Point out that the authors of The Day of Ahmed's Secret include many sensory details to help us imagine what this place is like. Explain that today the students will continue to write fiction stories. Encourage them to include sensory details to help the reader imagine their settings. Also remind them to look at the "Notes About Fiction" chart to help them get ideas.

2 Guided Visualization and Quick-write: Another Favorite Place

Explain that the students will do another quick-write, describing a place where they like to be. Encourage them to select an indoor place to write about today if they chose an outdoor one last week, and vice versa. Have them open to the next blank page in their notebooks and write down the name of the place they are thinking of.

Ask the students to close their eyes and think as you ask the questions that follow one at a time, pausing between the questions to give the students time to think.

- Q Imagine looking around your favorite place. What do you see? What is in front of you, behind you, above and below? Notice the colors, shapes, and sizes of what you see.
- Q What do you hear in your favorite place? Are the sounds quiet or loud?
- Q Is this place outside or inside? How does your body feel in this place? Is it cold? Warm? Hot?
- Q What does it smell like in this place? Do the smells remind you of anything?

Have the students open their eyes and write down what they imagined as they listened to your questions. After several minutes, call for their attention and ask a few volunteers to share what they wrote with the class.

Explain that today the students may continue writing a story about the places they imagined, or they may write any other fiction story. Encourage them to use sensory details to help their readers imagine the settings of their stories.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA11) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Continue the story you began during the quick-write.
- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include sensory details to help readers imagine the setting.

WA11

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students. Ask the student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share One Sentence and Reflect on Creativity

As you did last week, ask the students to review the writing they did today and each choose one sentence to share with the class. Encourage them to choose sentences that they believe show their creativity. Ask them to underline their sentences. After a moment, ask each student to read his sentence aloud to the class, without comment.

After the students have shared their sentences, facilitate a discussion by asking questions such as:

- Q What sentence did you hear that got you interested in someone else’s writing?
- Q What questions do you want to ask a classmate about his or her writing?

Remind the students that everyone is creative and can become more creative by writing and doing other creative things, such as drawing, playing musical instruments, and solving interesting problems in their own way. Review that the students will continue to develop their creativity throughout the year.

Day 3

Drafting Fiction

Materials

- Morning on the Lake
- The Day of Ahmed's Secret from Day 2
- "Notes About Fiction" chart from Day 2
- "Writing Time" chart (WA12)

In this lesson, the students:

- Hear, discuss, and draft fiction
- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review The Day of Ahmed's Secret

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that they heard The Day of Ahmed's Secret and thought about how to describe settings using sights, sounds, smells, and feelings. Explain that you will read another story aloud today, and encourage them to listen for sensory details that help them imagine the setting.

2 Introduce and Read the First Two Chapters of Morning on the Lake

Show the cover of Morning on the Lake and read the title and the names of the author and illustrator aloud. Explain that the setting of the story is somewhere in the northern United States or Canada, where a Native American tribe called the Ojibway live. The person telling the story is a young Ojibway boy. Tell the students that the story is divided into three chapters titled "Morning," "Noon," and "Night," and that today you will read aloud the first two chapters.

Read the first two chapters of the story aloud slowly and clearly, showing the illustrations and stopping as described. Clarify vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

his large silhouette: the shape of his large body (p. 2)

loons: type of bird (p. 6; refer to the illustration on p. 7)

yodel: loud cry (p. 8)

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

mist: water in the form of very small drops in the air (p. 2)

moccasins: flat shoes made of soft leather (p. 2)

canoe: long, narrow boat (p. 4; refer to the illustration on p. 5) ancestors: people who lived before us (p. 8)

talons: claws (p. 18)

messenger: someone who brings a message (p. 20)

Stop after:

p. 6 "I wonder if I should be."

Ask:

Q What has happened so far in the story? Turn to your partner.

Have partners discuss the question; then signal for their attention. Without sharing as a class, reread the last line and continue reading. Follow this procedure at the next three stopping points:

p. 10 "Just like Grandfather."

p. 16 "Flying free, high above our world."

p. 20 "And so, I too am proud, just like Grandfather."

Make the book available for the students to finish reading on their own, if they wish.

3 Discuss the Setting in the Story

Ask and briefly discuss the questions that follow. Be ready to reread from the story to help the students recall what they heard.

Q What did you imagine about the places in this story as you listened?

Q Which sensory details in the story helped you imagine the setting? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will continue to write fiction today. Encourage them to use sensory details to describe their settings as they write. Also remind them to look at the "Notes About Fiction" chart to help them get ideas.

Teacher Note

You might read aloud the third chapter, "Night," and discuss the setting at another time. See the extension "Discuss the Setting in the Third Chapter of Morning on the Lake" on page 263.

ELL Note

You might provide the prompt "I imagined [seeing/hearing/feeling] ..." to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions. To learn more, view "Adapting Lessons for English Language Learners" (AV32).

WRITING TIME

4 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA12) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

WA12

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include sensory details to help readers imagine the setting.

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of his writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as those that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

Q What ideas came out of your imagination in your writing today?

Q Who used sensory details to describe a setting? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Encourage the students to take a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice as they continue to draft fiction pieces.

Drafting Fiction

Day 4

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Draft fiction
- Cultivate a relaxed attitude toward writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Visualize the Setting in Morning on the Lake

Have the students bring their Student Writing Handbooks and pencils and gather with partners sitting together, facing you.

Remind the students that they heard the first two chapters of Morning on the Lake yesterday and thought about how to describe settings using sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and feelings. Refer to includes sensory details (descriptions of what you see, hear, smell, taste, and feel) on the “Notes About Fiction” chart.

Ask the students to close their eyes and imagine as you read two passages from the story. Read aloud the third and fourth paragraphs on page 4 without discussion; then read aloud the first paragraph on page 10.

Materials

- Morning on the Lake from Day 3
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- Student Writing Handbook page 12
- “Writing Time” chart (WA13)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA4)

ELL Note

You might provide the prompts “I underlined . . .” and “I imagined . . .” to your English Language Learners to help them verbalize their responses to these questions.

2 Analyze an Excerpt from Morning on the Lake

Ask the students to open to Student Writing Handbook page 12, where the passages you just reread are reproduced. Ask partners to read through the passages together and underline words or phrases that helped them imagine this place.

After several minutes, signal for the students’ attention. Ask and briefly discuss as a class:

Q What words or phrases did you underline? How does that help you imagine this place?

Remind the students that when an author fully describes the setting in a story using sensory details, it helps the reader imagine it and understand where the story takes place. Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to describe the settings of their stories as they write today.

WRITING TIME

3 Draft Fiction Pieces

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart ( WA13) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Try to include sensory details to help readers imagine the setting.

WA13

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem to be writing with a relaxed and free attitude, inspired by their own thoughts?
- If they seem overly cautious or inhibited, do they eventually start writing freely?

Support any student who is still struggling to start after about 10 minutes by asking him questions such as:

Q Who is an interesting person you know who you can make up a story about?

(continues)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE (continued)

- Q What makes this person happy? Unhappy?
- Q Let's say this person feels unhappy because of what you just described. What unusual thing could happen to help him or her feel better?
- Q Where do you imagine this story takes place? What is this place like? How does it [look/sound/smell/feel]?

As the student responds to the questions, have him write the responses in his notebook and continue to write what happens. Record your observations on the "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA4); see page 57 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Briefly Share Writing and Reflect on Attitude

Ask and briefly discuss questions such as the ones that follow. Invite the students to read passages of their writing aloud as they share.

- Q What ideas came out of your imagination in your writing today?
- Q Who used sensory details to describe a setting? Tell us about it.

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

- Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Encourage the students to take a relaxed attitude toward their writing practice as they continue to draft fiction pieces.

---

EXTENSION

Discuss the Setting in the Third Chapter of Morning on the Lake

Read aloud the third chapter of Morning on the Lake. Then reread the descriptions of setting in the second and third paragraphs on page 22 and the second paragraph on page 24. Have the students visualize the setting as you read. Invite them to share sensory details from the passages that helped them imagine the setting. Remind the students that describing a setting using details helps it come alive for the reader.

Day 5

Drafting Fiction and Pair Conferencing

Materials

- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA14)
- “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart from Week 2

Teacher Note

You may want to shorten today's Writing Time to leave more time for the pair conferences in Step 3.

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore how setting is developed in stories
- Draft fiction
- Express interest in and appreciation for one another's writing
- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Writing About Setting

Have partners get their notebooks and pencils and sit together at desks. Remind the students that they have been listening to stories that have interesting settings. Review that when an author fully describes the setting in a story using details, it helps the reader imagine it and understand where the story takes place. Encourage the students to continue to think of ways to describe the settings of their stories as they write today. Also remind them to look at the “Notes About Fiction” chart to help them get ideas.

WRITING TIME

2 Draft Fiction Pieces

Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA14) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Work on a story you started earlier.
- Start a new story.
- Continue to include sensory details to help a reader imagine the setting.

WA14

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students as they write fiction drafts. Ask the student to show you a piece of her writing and read some of it aloud to you. Ask questions such as:

- Q What is this story about?
- Q Who [is/are] the character(s)? What is interesting about [him/her/them]?
- Q What do you imagine might happen to [him/her/them]?
- Q What speech or dialogue might you include in the story?
- Q When and where do you imagine this story takes place?
- Q What part are you going to work on next?

Document your observations for each student on a “Conference Notes: Focus 1” record sheet (CN1); see page 67 of the Assessment Resource Book. Beginning next week, the focus of the individual student conferences will change. If you have not met with all of your students to discuss the questions above, you may wish to do so before changing the conference focus.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

3 Confer in Pairs About Fiction Drafts

Explain that partners will now each read one of their fiction drafts to the other and confer about both partners’ drafts. If necessary, briefly review the procedure for pair conferring and remind the students that conferring means not only reading their writing to each other but talking about it as well.

Direct the students’ attention to the “Questions for My Partner About My Draft” chart and review the questions on it. Ask:

- Q What other questions might you want to ask your partner about your draft?

Students might say:

“I want to ask my partner if she can imagine what’s happening.”

“I want to ask my partner if he can picture the setting.”

“I want to find out whether anything is confusing to my partner.”

Add any new questions to the chart and encourage the students to use the questions in their pair conferences today.

Have partners share their writing. Scan the class, without intervening, providing sufficient time for both partners to share their writing before signaling for their attention.

Teacher Note

If necessary, signal about halfway through sharing time so partners can switch roles, if they have not yet done so.

4 Reflect on Pair Conferences and Writing Attitude

Help partners reflect on their work together by asking:

Q What questions did you ask your partner about your story? What did your partner say?

Q What did you do to show interest in your partner's writing?

Help the students reflect on their attitudes toward writing by asking:

Q How did you feel as you wrote today? If you got stuck, what happened? What do you want to try tomorrow to help you in your writing?

Explain that the students will continue to explore and draft fiction next week.

Week 4

OVERVIEW

TEACHER AS WRITER

“Before I write down one word, I have to have the character in mind through and through. I must penetrate into the last wrinkle of his soul . . . down to the last button, how he stands and walks, how he conducts himself, what his voice sounds like. Then I do not let him go until his fate is fulfilled.”

— Henrik Ibsen

Review the characters you have created in your drafts and select one who intrigues you. Write a detailed description of that character. Consider:

- What was this character like as a youngster?
- How does he or she dress?
- What physical movements does he or she do unconsciously?
- What is he or she unusually good or bad at?

Writing Focus

- Students review their fiction drafts, and each selects one to develop, revise, proofread, and publish.
- Students learn about a professional author’s writing process.
- Students analyze their drafts and think of ways to develop characters and plot.
- Students explore transitional words and phrases.
- Students explore endings that bring a story’s events to a close.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students express interest in and appreciation for one another’s writing.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 1, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5) on page 58 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6) on page 59 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, prepare a sheet of chart paper titled “Transitional Words and Phrases.” Add the headings Connect events in a story and Connect ideas in a story. Under the first heading, list the following: one time, one day, when, a few days later, yet, from that day on, and then. Under the second heading, list the following: but, also, again, besides, especially, particularly, for example, for instance, and in other words. If you already prepared such a chart for use in the Personal Narrative unit, simply locate that chart.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a class set of the “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2) on page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

(continues)

DO AHEAD (continued)

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, create a chart titled “Questions About My Partner’s Draft” with the following questions written on it:

Am I getting to know the character’s personality? How?

Does something interesting or important happen to the character?

Can I follow what is happening in the story? Am I confused at any point?

Are there transitional words and phrases that help me connect events and ideas?

Does the ending bring the story’s events to a close?

- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA7) on page 60 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) Prior to Day 2, review the fiction pieces you have written and select a single page to use to model adding details to a draft. Prepare your sample writing to display. Alternatively, you can use the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17). To learn more, view “Planning a Lesson” (AV33).

In this lesson, the students:

- Learn about a professional author’s writing process
- Review their fiction drafts and each selects one to develop and publish
- Reread their writing critically
- Complete the first drafts of their selected fiction pieces

DEVELOPING AND PUBLISHING FICTION STORIES

In Weeks 4–6 of this unit, each student selects one fiction draft written in the prior three weeks to develop for publication for the class library. Each student takes this piece through guided analysis (in which you help look for specific ways to improve their stories) and revision, writing a second draft before publication. They learn important writing skills and conventions as they proofread their drafts.

While students usually select pieces that are appropriate for class publication, you may occasionally have students who want to publish pieces containing content you feel is questionable (such as excessive violence or inappropriate language). Work with these students individually to help them understand that they may write about whatever they wish in their notebooks but that they should select pieces for publication that everyone will want to read and that will be appropriate for the class library.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Introduce the Writing Focus for the Coming Three Weeks

Gather the class with partners sitting together, facing you. Remind them that over the past three weeks they have been drafting fiction pieces. Explain that today they will review their drafts, and each student will select one piece to develop into a published story for the classroom library.

Remind the students that so far this year they have learned about several professional authors and how they devote a lot of time to rethinking, revising, and improving their writing. Explain that today the students will learn about another professional author’s writing process before they begin their work.

Materials

- “About Jane Yolen” (see page 289)
- Owl Moon from Week 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA15)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5)

2 Learn About Jane Yolen

Show the cover of Owl Moon and remind the students that they heard this book by Jane Yolen earlier in the unit. Ask and briefly discuss:

Q Based on her story, what kind of person do you think Jane Yolen might be? Why?

Explain that you will read some information about Jane Yolen aloud. Read about “About Jane Yolen” (page 289) aloud, clarifying vocabulary as you read.

Suggested Vocabulary

I've become aware: I've learned to notice something I've adopted: something I now do on my own adapt: get used to

ELL Vocabulary

English Language Learners may benefit from hearing additional vocabulary defined, including:

bat them away: (idiom) make them go away

Facilitation Tip

Continue to focus on  pacing class discussions by scanning the class and using techniques such as the following:

- Call on just a few students to respond to each question.
- Use “Turn to Your Partner” if many students want to speak. Then call on just two or three students to share with the whole class.
- Restate the question if the discussion strays from the original topic.
- Ask pairs to discuss whether they agree or disagree with what a classmate has just said.
- Use wait-time before calling on anyone to respond.

Ask and briefly discuss:

Q What did you find out about Jane Yolen?

Q Jane Yolen says that her husband took her “to look at nature, and he taught [her] to see.” How might knowing “how to see” help her in her writing?

Students might say:

“I found out that her husband is the father in Owl Moon.”

“I think she means that her husband taught her to look closer at all the things in nature.”

“I agree with [Melia]. Like, maybe she noticed what the woods were like in the winter when she wrote Owl Moon.”

Point out that Jane Yolen says she “constantly reshape[s] and revision[s]” her work and that this is the fun part of writing. Explain that, like her, the students will “reshape and revision” stories they have written to make into books for the class library.

3 Prepare to Review Fiction Drafts

Explain that during Writing Time the students will reread all their fiction drafts and each student will select one to revise and publish as a book. The drafts they select can be pieces they have started but not finished. Encourage them to choose pieces that they can imagine making changes to and that they think their classmates will enjoy.

Ask:

Q As you're looking through your drafts, what might you want to look for to help you decide on one to develop?

Students might say:

"I want to look for a draft that I really like or have some strong feelings about."

"I will look for drafts that have characters I like."

"I want my story to be different from everyone else's, so I'm going to look for a draft that is unique."

4 Reread Drafts and Select One to Develop

Have the students return to their seats, reread all their fiction drafts, and each select one to develop and publish. Students who select drafts before the time is up can start thinking about what they can add, change, or improve.

As the students review their drafts, circulate around the room and support them by asking questions such as:

Q Why did you choose this piece to revise?

Q What can you imagine adding or changing in this piece to make it more interesting?

If you notice any students selecting pieces with limited potential for revision (for example, pieces they feel are already "perfect," very long or very short pieces, or pieces that are not double-spaced), gently guide them toward more workable pieces.

WRITING TIME

5 Complete First Drafts of Selected Pieces

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA15) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Finish writing your draft.
- Use speech to reveal things about your main character's personality
- Use sensory details to make your setting come to life.

WA15

Join the students in writing for 5–10 minutes, and then circulate around the room and observe, assisting students as needed.

Teacher Note

If a student wants to publish a piece that is already very long, encourage him to identify one section of it to develop and publish for the class library. He may continue to work on other parts of the story on his own at another time.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students as they work on their drafts. Ask yourself:

- Have the students selected drafts that lend themselves to revision?
- Will the students have finished drafts that they can start revising tomorrow?

If you notice that many students need more time to complete their drafts, make time for them to do so before going on to the Day 2 lesson. Any student who has finished may work on another piece of writing.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA5); see page 58 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by asking:

- Q What draft did you choose to revise?
- Q Why did you choose that piece to revise?

Explain that the students will begin revising their drafts tomorrow.

TECHNOLOGY EXTENSION

Watch or Read an Interview with Jane Yolen

Jane Yolen, the author of Owl Moon, has written more than 300 books for children, teenagers, and adults. To learn more about the author and her work, have the students watch a video of her speaking about her writing or read an interview with her. To find a video or print interview with the author, search online with her name and the keyword “video” or “interview.” After the students watch the video or read the interview, have them discuss what they learned about the author’s life and her thoughts about writing.

Technology Tip

For more information about using web-based resources, view the “Using Web-based Teaching Resources” tutorial (AV75).

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts where characters are revealed through actions, thoughts, or speech
- Begin revising their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Facilitate Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students stay at their seats today. Ask them to open their notebooks to the fiction draft they each selected yesterday. Explain that today you will help them think about how they might revise and improve their drafts in preparation for publishing them. Ask the students to reread their drafts quietly and look up when they are finished.

Distribute a pad of self-stick notes to each student. Explain that you will ask the students to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising to Develop Characters” chart (WA16) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising to Develop Characters

- How does your main character act? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, your main character’s actions. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write actions on it.
- What does your main character say or think? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, your character’s speech or thoughts. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write speech or thoughts on it.

WA16

2 Model Revising to Develop Characters

Without sharing as a class, explain that during Writing Time today the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and revise those places. Explain that they will each incorporate their revisions into a second draft next week.

Materials

- Pad of small (1½" × 2") self-stick notes for each student
- “Revising to Develop Characters” chart (WA16)
- Your sample writing OR the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17)
- “Writing Time” chart (WA18)
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6)

Teacher Note

The purpose of the guided rereading is to give the students experience reading their drafts critically before they begin to revise.

Teacher Note

Plan to have pads of self-stick notes available for the students to use during the revision phase of each genre unit. If necessary, model attaching a self-stick note to the outer margin of a notebook page so it marks the text without covering it up.

Teacher Note

You might review that speech between characters is called dialogue.

TEKS 12.A.ii
Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 2 (all, beginning on
to page 276)

Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (📄 WA17) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing actions in the margin next to a place where you could describe your main character’s actions, and thoughts or speech next to a place where you could add your character’s thoughts or speech. Ask the students to watch as you model adding information about a character. Think aloud about a place you want to revise. Model using a caret (arrow) to insert new text and crossing out text to delete.

You might say:

“I want to add some information about why Lucy likes to skate fast. I will delete ‘to go fast on her skates more than anything’ and add: the wind in her face when she skated really fast. I also want to describe what she is thinking, so at the end of the first paragraph I’ll add: ‘I wish I could find a way to go faster,’ thought Lucy.”

Sample Fiction Draft

Lucy loved to roller skate. Everyone in the neighborhood knew that she loved ~~to go fast on her skates~~ the wind in her face when she skated really fast. actions
~~more than anything.~~ Every day she skated up and down her block as fast as she could. “I wish I could find a way to go faster,” thought Lucy. thoughts
 It was never fast enough.
 Every day the milkman would steer his horse-drawn cart down Lucy’s block to deliver bottles of milk. He would always call out, “Have you skated fast enough yet?”
 She would respond, “Not yet!” and watch as he trotted on.

Display the “Writing Time” chart (📄 WA18) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add actions, thoughts, and speech to your draft to tell about your character.
- Remove the self-stick notes when you finish revising.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA18

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then walk around the class and observe, assisting students as needed.

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Observe the students and ask yourself:

- Do the students seem engaged in thinking of ways to develop their drafts?
- Are they focusing on developing their characters?
- Do they have ideas for actions, speech, and thoughts they could write to reveal character?

Support any student who is having difficulty by asking her questions such as:

- Q What were you thinking about when you marked this place on your draft?
- Q What kind of personality does your character have?
- Q What could your character do or say at this point to show his or her personality?

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA6); see page 59 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over. Explain that they will continue to work on their drafts tomorrow.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work by asking questions such as:

- Q What ideas did you have for describing your character today?
- Q What ideas did you have that you feel were creative or original today? Tell us about them.

Remind the students how important it is to use their imaginations, both while writing drafts and during revision. Encourage them to strive to make their stories as creative and interesting as they can.

Day 3

Analyzing and Revising Drafts

Materials

- “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart, prepared ahead
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Week 3
- “Revising for Plot” chart (WA19)
- Your revised sample writing OR revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17) from Day 2
- “Writing Time” chart (WA20)
- Class set of “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheets (CN2)

Teacher Note

If you have already taught the Personal Narrative genre unit, direct the students' attention to the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart you made for use during that unit and review it with your students.

TEKS 11.C.viii

Student/Teacher Narrative

Step 2 (all, beginning on page 278 and continuing on to page 279) and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 279 and continuing on to page 280)

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Explore transitional words and phrases
- Mark places in their drafts where they can add to the plot
- Revise their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Briefly Review Purpose of Revision

Have the students stay at their desks today. Ask them to open their notebooks to the stories they are developing. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their stories as interesting and readable as possible before they publish them for their classmates.

Explain that today you will ask them to think about ways they might strengthen the plots (what happens) in their drafts.

2 Explore Transitional Words and Phrases

Explain that one way the students might make their plots clearer and easier to follow is by adding transitional words and phrases. Explain that these are words and phrases that help readers connect events and ideas in a story. Direct the students' attention to the “Transitional Words and Phrases” chart. Read aloud the words and phrases listed under the heading Connect events in a story. Ask:

Q What other transitional words and phrases might you use in a story to help readers connect events?

Add the students' ideas to the chart. Then explain that other transitional words and phrases help readers connect ideas in a story by comparing and contrasting them. Read aloud the words and phrases under the heading Connect ideas in a story by comparing and contrasting them. Ask:

Q What other transitional words and phrases might you use in a story to help readers connect ideas?

Add the students' ideas to the chart.

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add transitional words and phrases help the reader connect ideas or events to the chart.

3 Continue Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Have them get out their self-stick notes, and explain that you will ask them to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the "Revising for Plot" chart (📄 WA19) and read the prompts aloud one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising for Plot

- Find a place where you use, or could use, a transitional word or phrase to help readers connect events. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write connect events on it.
- Find a place where you use, or could use, a transitional word or phrase to help readers connect ideas. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write connect ideas on it.
- Find the place in your draft where the most interesting or important thing happens, or could happen, to your character. Mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write most important on it.
- Will your readers be able to follow what happens from the beginning to the end of your story? If you think a place might be confusing, mark the margin next to that place with a self-stick note and write confusing on it.

WA19

4 Model Revising to Develop the Plot

Without sharing as a class explain that, as they did yesterday, the students will look at the places they marked with self-stick notes and make revisions to their stories. Remind them that they will incorporate these revisions into a second draft next week.

Display your own writing or the "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (📄 WA17) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing connect events or connect ideas in the margin next to a place where you could add a transitional word or phrase, most important in the margin next to the most interesting or important thing that happens to your main character, and confusing next to a place that might confuse your reader.

Teacher Note

For more transitional words and phrases, you might search online using the keywords "transitional words and phrases."

Teacher Note

Developing the plot of a story is a focus of fiction study at grade 5 of the program and thus is treated with a lighter touch in grade 4. (See "Development Across the Grades" on page 206.)

TEKS 12.A.i

Student/Teacher Narrative
Step 4 (all, beginning on page 279
and continuing on to page 280)

Ask the students to watch as you model revising to make your plot (what happens in your story) as interesting as possible. Model adding and, if necessary, deleting text.

You might say:

"I think I could connect the part where Lucy yelled 'Stop!' and the part about the milkman not hearing her. So at the beginning of the sentence I'll add a transitional word: But. I think it would be funny to add a sentence that tells how innocent Lucy looks before she grabs the cart. I'll add: Lucy waved at him innocently. My reader might be confused about what exactly Lucy grabbed hold of. I'll add: of the rear of the cart."

One day Lucy heard the milkman's cart and got an idea.

He stopped in front of her house, climbed down, and carried two bottles of milk to her door. <sup>Lucy waved at him innocently.</sup> When he climbed back up and snapped the reins, Lucy grabbed hold <sup>of the rear of the cart</sup> and took off!

"Wheeeee!" she screamed, skating faster than she had ever skated before. The cart went faster and faster, bumping over cobblestones and splashing through old mud puddles.

<sup>connect events</sup> "Oof! Ugh!" yelled Lucy, and then, "Stop!" <sup>But</sup> The milkman couldn't hear. She clung to the cart with Using this same procedure, model one or two more examples of adding transitional words or phrases and adding to the plot. Explain that the students will follow the same procedure to revise their own drafts today.

WRITING TIME

5 Continue Revising Drafts

Display the "Writing Time" chart (WA20) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Add transitional words and phrases to help readers connect events and ideas.
- Add information about what happens to make your plot more interesting.
- Remove the self-stick notes as you finish revising.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

TEKS 12.A.i
Student/Teacher Activity
Step 5 (all, beginning with 280 and continuing on to page 281)

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then begin conferring with individual students about the pieces they are developing for publication.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Over the next two weeks, confer again with individual students, this time talking with them about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read some of his writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student's story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting or important happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting or important thing happens to your character?
- Q What transitional words and phrases [did/could] you use to help connect events or ideas?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work during Writing Time today by asking:

- Q How did you add to or revise the events in your story to make the plot more interesting?
- Q What ideas did you have that you feel were creative or original today? Tell us about them.

Explain that the students will continue revising their stories tomorrow.

Materials

- Student Writing Handbook page 13
- “Closing Sentences from Three Stories” chart (WA21)
- “Notes About Fiction” chart from Day 3
- “Writing Time” chart (WA22)

In this lesson, the students:

- Explore endings that bring a story’s events to a close
- Reread their writing critically
- Revise their drafts
- Express interest in one another’s writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Analyze Closing Sentences

Have the students gather their notebooks, Student Writing Handbooks, and pencils, and sit at desks with partners together. Review that they began to analyze and revise their drafts yesterday. Remind them that the purpose of revision is to make their pieces as interesting and readable as possible before they publish them for their classmates. Explain that today you will ask them to think about an important feature of all narratives: endings that bring a story’s events to a close.

Point out that the closing sentences of a piece of writing need to wrap up the piece. Explain that you will read the closing sentences from some stories they heard earlier. Ask them to think as they listen about how the authors bring each story’s events to a close.

Have the students open their Student Writing Handbooks to page 13, where the closing sentences are reproduced. At the same time, display the “Closing Sentences from Three Stories” chart (WA21). Together, read the first passage, from Owl Moon, and ask:

Q What does the author do to wrap up this story?

Q What words or phrases show you that the story has reached an end?

Students might say:

“It stops telling about the event and talks about what owling is like. It says ‘When you go owling you don’t need words or warm or anything but hope.’ The author is leaving you with a big idea to think about.”

“I agree with [Jesse]. The author is saying that this story isn’t just about owling. It’s about hope.”

“In addition to what [Stacia and Jesse] said, when you hope, you feel excited about the future. So even though the story is over, she makes you look forward.”

“The words sound grand and poetic: ‘The kind of hope that flies on silent wings under a shining Owl Moon.’ That helps you know it’s the end because it’s not ordinary story language.”

As volunteers respond, underline the words and phrases they mention on the chart.

Have the students work in pairs to read the remaining closing sentences and underline words and sentences that they feel are especially effective at wrapping up the pieces.

After several minutes, signal for the students' attention. Ask volunteers to report what they talked about for each of the closings, and underline words and phrases they mention on the chart. As they report, ask:

Q How does that [word/sentence] help wrap up the story?

2 Review Closing Sentences in Drafts

Direct the students' attention to the "Notes About Fiction" chart and add an ending brings the story's events to a close. Have the students reread the last few sentences of their own fiction drafts. Ask and have the students think to themselves about:

Q How might you revise your closing sentences to wrap up your story?

Without discussing as a class, explain that the students will revise their closing sentences today.

WRITING TIME

3 Revise Closing Sentences

Display the "Writing Time" chart (🗨️ WA22) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your closing sentences to end your story in a satisfying way.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

WA22

Join the students in writing for a few minutes; then confer with individual students.

Teacher Note

Words or phrases the students might report include:

- "'Look,' I say. 'Look, I can write my name,'" "I think of my name now lasting longer than the sound of it," and "maybe even lasting . . . a thousand years" (from The Day of Ahmed's Secret)
- "More than fifty years later, Frances went back," "Roxaboxen was still there," and "the desert glass still glowed—amethyst, amber, and sea-green" (from Roxaboxen)

TEKS 11.B.viii

TEKS 11.B.ix

Student/Teacher Activity
Step 3 and Step 4 (all, beginning on page 283 and continuing on to page 284)

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read some of her writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student's story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting or important happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story's events to a close?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting or important thing happens to your character?
- Q What transitional words and phrases [did/could] you use to help connect events or ideas?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

4 Share Closing Sentences as a Class

Have a few volunteers share the closing sentences from their fiction stories. As students share, encourage discussion by asking the class questions such as those that follow. Be ready to ask the volunteers to reread what they shared, if necessary.

- Q What words did you hear in [Dana's] closing sentence(s) that wrapped up the piece for you?
- Q What ideas, if any, does this give you for your own closing sentences?

Explain that partners will confer about their stories tomorrow.

In this lesson, the students:

- Ask for and receive feedback about their writing
- Give feedback in a helpful way
- Ask one another questions about their writing
- Anticipate and solve problems that arise in their work together
- Share their partners' thinking with the class

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare for Pair Conferences

Have the students bring their notebooks and pencils, and gather with partners sitting together, facing you. Explain that today partners will meet to confer about their drafts. Remind the students that in the writing community, the goal of giving feedback is to help each person create the best possible piece of writing. Ask and briefly discuss:

- Q What have you learned about giving feedback respectfully?
- Q What problems can arise when you are conferring with a partner? How will you avoid those problems today?

2 Prepare to Give Feedback About Character and Plot

Tell the students that during pair conference time today, partners will read and tell each other about their stories, including their revisions, and receive feedback about character and plot.

Explain that, as the students listen to their partners' stories, you would like them to ask themselves five questions. Direct the students' attention to the "Questions About My Partner's Draft" chart and read the questions aloud. Then project your revised writing from Day 3 or the revised "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (WA17) and read it aloud, along with any revisions. Use "Think, Pair, Share" to have the students discuss your draft using the charted questions.

After a few moments, signal for the students' attention and have a few volunteers give you feedback about your draft using the five questions.

3 Confer in Pairs

Encourage partners to listen carefully to each other and be ready to report to the class what each other said.

Give the students ample time to confer in pairs.

Materials

- "Questions About My Partner's Draft" chart, prepared ahead
- Your revised sample writing OR revised "Sample Fiction Draft" chart (WA17) from Day 3
- "Class Assessment Record" sheet (CA7)
- "Writing Time" chart (WA23)

CLASS ASSESSMENT NOTE

Circulate among conferring pairs and observe without intervening. Ask yourself:

- Are pairs staying on task, reading and discussing their writing?
- Are they giving each other specific feedback about the questions related to character development and plot?
- Are they giving feedback in a helpful way?

Note any difficulties you observe to discuss with the students during the reflection discussion.

Record your observations on the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA7); see page 60 of the Assessment Resource Book.

When most pairs have had time to discuss their drafts, call for the class’s attention.

4 Reflect on Feedback

Gather the class and briefly discuss:

- Q What was helpful about the way your partner talked to you today?
- Q What problems, if any, did you have during pair conferences? What will you do to avoid those problems next time?

Share any problems you noticed and discuss what the students will do to avoid those problems next time. Ask:

- Q What is one thing your partner told you about your piece?

Remind the students that authors pay close attention to feedback about what is unclear or confusing in their writing. Although authors might not follow every suggestion they receive, the feedback helps them improve their work until it is the best piece of writing possible.

Explain that during Writing Time today the students will revise their drafts based on their partners’ feedback.

WRITING TIME

5 Revise Drafts Based on Conference Feedback

Ask the students to return to their seats. Display the “Writing Time” chart (WA23) and have the students work silently on the charted tasks for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your draft based on partner feedback.
- Finish writing and revising your story.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about their writing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part he is working on now and to read some of his writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student's story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting or important happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story's events to a close?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting or important thing happens to your character?
- Q What transitional words and phrases [did/could] you use to help connect events or ideas?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

6 Reflect on Writing

Help the students reflect on their work today by briefly discussing:

Q What feedback from your partner did you incorporate into your revision today? Tell us about it.

Explain that the students will start writing a second draft of their story in the coming week.

About Jane Yolen

excerpted from janeyolen.com and pbs.org

What kind of a family do you have?

I have three children (Adam, Jason, Heidi); though they're all grown up now, they still gave me ideas. And now that I have five granddaughters and a grandson, I am sure they will give me ideas as well!

What do you do in your spare time?

I love to read and walk, I love traveling to foreign countries, I love to watch movies. I love to listen to music on tape and hear live music as well.

Where do you get your ideas?

I am always asked where I get my ideas from. That is a very difficult question to answer, since I get my ideas from everywhere: from things I hear and things I see, from books and songs and newspapers and paintings and conversations—and even from dreams. The storyteller in me asks: what if? And when I try to answer that, a story begins.

Do you ever have an idea and then lose it?

Every time I get an idea, I write it down and file it in my Idea File. There is no organization to it; all the ideas are jumbled together.

Can you tell me a little bit about the process you go through in writing?

I start with an idea, of course. I have so many ideas that the problem is that I have to bat them away to focus on one at a time. I work every day in my office with my fingers on the keyboard—probably about 360 days a year. I am focused because I love writing to find out what will happen. People—and often kids—make the mistake of thinking that once it's on the page, it's done, but that's only the beginning. I constantly reshape and revision my work. I dream it again, imagine it again—that's the exciting part of writing.

Many of your books celebrate nature in one way or another. How did you become interested in nature?

I grew up in Manhattan, across from Central Park. Birds to me were pigeons and not-pigeons. Then I married a West Virginian who grew up in the woods. He was a hunter and fisher, and now he is a birdwatcher. He is actually the character Pa in Owl Moon. When we first moved to Western Massachusetts, he took me out to look at nature, and he taught me to see. I've become aware of nature through my husband, but it's definitely something I've adopted. When we moved to the country, my friends were worried that I could not adapt to country life, but I've never looked back.

Week 5

OVERVIEW

Writing Focus

- Students analyze their drafts and think of ways to develop the setting.
- Students develop second drafts of their stories, integrating revisions.
- Students explore interesting adjectives.
- Students explore first- and third-person points of view.
- Students confer with one another and the teacher.

Social Development Focus

- Students listen respectfully to the thinking of others and share their own.
- Students help one another improve their writing.
- Students make decisions and solve problems respectfully.

Online Resources

Visit the CCC Learning Hub (ccclearninghub.org) to find your online resources for this week.

Whiteboard Activities

- WA17, WA24–WA27

Assessment Forms

- “Class Assessment Record” sheets (CA8–CA10)
- “Conference Notes: Focus 2” record sheet (CN2)

Professional Development Media

- “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1)
- “Pacing Class Discussions” (AV20)
- “Using CCC’s Whiteboard Activities” tutorial (AV73)

DO AHEAD

- ✓ Prior to Day 2, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8) on page 61 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 3, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA9) on page 62 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, create a chart titled “Self-assessment Questions” with the following questions written on it:
  - In the story, does something interesting happen to someone somewhere in time?*
  - Does the main character act, think, and speak in a way that shows what he or she is like?*
  - Are there transitional words and phrases that help connect events and ideas?*
  - Does every sentence of the story make sense?*
  - Does the ending bring the story’s events to a close?*
- ✓ Prior to Day 5, make a copy of the “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA10) on page 63 of the Assessment Resource Book.
- ✓ (Optional) If computers are available, you might have some students type and print out their drafts. You can also recruit parent volunteers to help the students do so. In addition, you might teach Technology Mini-lesson 10, “Creating Presentations,” in Appendix A to help the students learn how to incorporate visuals into their stories.

TEACHER AS WRITER

“The plot is the line on which I hang the wash, and the wash is what I care about.”

— Robert B. Parker

Reread the description of the character you wrote in Week 4. Explore plot this week by having something interesting, important, or challenging happen to your character. Describe what happens to the character before and after the event. Consider:

- What makes the experience interesting, important, or challenging to your character?
- What is this character like before the situation? After?
- What does the character learn by going through this experience?

Materials

- “Revising for Setting” chart (WA24)
- Your revised sample writing OR revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17) from Week 4
- “Writing Time” chart (WA25)

In this lesson, the students:

- Reread their writing critically
- Mark places in their drafts to develop setting and descriptive language
- Revise their drafts
- Reflect on creativity in their own writing

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Discuss Setting in Fiction

Have the students stay at their desks today. Ask them to get out their notebooks and pencils. Explain that today they will finish revising their fiction stories by thinking more about the setting of the story. Tomorrow they will begin writing the second drafts of their stories, incorporating all their revisions.

If necessary, remind the students that the setting of a story is the place and time in which the story occurs. Ask the students to think quietly for a moment about where and when their stories occur.

2 Continue Guided Rereading of Drafts

Have the students quietly reread their drafts and look up when they are finished. Have them get out their self-stick notes and explain that you will ask them to look for and think about several specific things in their drafts.

Display the “Revising for Setting” chart (WA24) and read the prompts aloud, one at a time, giving the students several quiet minutes after each prompt to review their drafts and mark passages with the self-stick notes.

Revising for Setting

- Where and when does your story take place? Find a place in your draft where you describe, or could describe, the setting. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write setting on it.
- What might someone see or hear in your setting? Find places where you could add words to describe how it looks or sounds. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write look or sound on it.
- What might someone smell or feel in your setting? Find places where you could add words to describe how it smells or feels. Put a self-stick note in the margin next to that place and write smell or feel on it.

WA24

3 Model Revising to Develop the Setting

Without sharing as a class, explain that, as they did last week, the students will look at the places in their drafts that they marked with self-stick notes and make revisions to their stories. They will revise directly on their first drafts, writing on self-stick notes if they run out of room on the paper. Remind them that they will incorporate these revisions into their second drafts.

Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (🗨️ WA17) and read it aloud. If you are using your own writing, begin by writing setting in the margin next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the setting; look or sound next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the look or sound of something; and smell or feel next to a place where you describe, or could describe, the smell or feel of something. Ask the students to watch as you model revising to more clearly describe the setting. Model adding text using a caret and, if necessary, deleting text.

You might say:

“I want to add a description about what Lucy’s neighborhood looks like. After “It was never fast enough,” I’ll add: Her block was flat, and there were no hills nearby to help her go faster. I also want to add some details to help readers feel what Lucy feels. So, I’ll add this phrase: Yanking off her warm scarf. Now my sentence is: Yanking off her warm scarf, she would respond, ‘Not yet!’”

Sample Fiction Draft

Lucy loved to roller skate. Everyone in the neighborhood knew that she loved ~~to go fast on her skates~~ <sup>the wind in her face when she skated really fast.</sup> actions

~~more than anything.~~ Every day she skated up and down her block as fast as she could. <sup>“I wish I could find a way to go faster,” thought Lucy.</sup> thoughts

It was never fast enough. <sup>Her block was flat, and there were no hills nearby to help her go faster.</sup> setting, looks

Every day the milkman would steer his horse-drawn cart down Lucy’s block to deliver bottles of milk. He would always call out, “Have you skated fast enough yet?”

<sup>Yanking off her warm scarf,</sup> feels

She would respond, “Not yet!” and watch as he trotted on.

WRITING TIME

4 Revise to Develop the Setting

Display the “Writing Time” chart (🗨️ WA25) and have the students write silently for 20–30 minutes.

Writing Time

- Revise your draft to make the setting come to life using sensory details.
- Make any other revisions or additions so your piece is complete and as interesting as it can be.
- If you finish, work on another piece of writing.

During Writing Time, confer with individual students about their writing.

TEACHER CONFERENCE NOTE

Continue to confer with individual students about the piece each is developing for publication. Ask the student to tell you about the part she is working on now and to read some of her writing aloud to you. As you listen, consider:

- Does this student's story have a character with distinct traits that are shown through action, speech, or thought?
- Does something interesting or important happen to the character?
- Does the story make sense? Is it easy to follow what is happening, when, and to whom?
- Does the student use transitional words and phrases?
- Does the ending draw the story's events to a close?
- Does the student use sensory details to convey the setting?

Support the student in integrating the elements of fiction by asking questions such as:

- Q What kind of personality does your main character have?
- Q What actions, thoughts, or speech [have you added/could you add] to show who the character is?
- Q What interesting or important thing happens to your character?
- Q What transitional words and phrases [did/could] you use to help connect events or ideas?
- Q What [did/could] you write to bring the story to a close?
- Q When and where does the story take place? What descriptive words can you use to tell the reader how the place looks, feels, sounds, or smells?

Document your observations for each student on a "Conference Notes: Focus 2" record sheet (CN2); see page 68 of the Assessment Resource Book. As questions are added to this note, take time to check in with those students with whom you have already conferred to ask them those questions.

Signal to let the students know when Writing Time is over.

SHARING AND REFLECTING

5 Reflect on Writing and Creativity

Help the students reflect on their work by asking:

- Q What ideas did you have for describing your setting today?
- Q What ideas did you have that you feel are creative or original? Tell us about them.

Remind the students that it is important to use their imaginations, both when writing drafts and during revision. Help the students reflect on their participation in this discussion by asking:

- Q What did you do during sharing time today to show you were interested in what your classmates said?

Remind the students that they will begin to work on their second drafts tomorrow.

ELL Note

Questions like this help to create a sense of community that benefits everyone. English Language Learners in particular rely on having a supportive environment in which they can take the risks necessary to grow academically, socially, and ethically. For more information, view “Building a Community of Writers” (AV1).

Writing Second Drafts

Day 2

In this lesson, the students:

- Generate ideas for improvements to make while writing second drafts
- Begin writing second drafts

WRITING SECOND DRAFTS

Over the next several days, the students write second drafts of their stories. In the process, they add interesting adjectives to make their writing descriptive, explore first- and third-person points of view, learn how to punctuate speech and punctuate for effect, and practice correcting run-on sentences.

It is important that the students understand that a second draft is an improved, more interesting, and more complete version of the first draft. If you observe students who are copying their first drafts without making further revisions, work with these students individually to help them identify ways to revise and improve their writing.

GETTING READY TO WRITE

1 Prepare to Write Second Drafts

Have the students get their notebooks and pencils and sit at desks with partners together. Tell the students that during Writing Time they will make revisions to the places they marked with self-stick notes and then

Materials

- Your revised sample writing OR revised “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17) from Day 1
- Two pieces of chart paper (one with lines) and a marker
- Loose, lined paper for second drafts
- “Class Assessment Record” sheet (CA8)

begin writing their second drafts on loose, lined paper. Explain that they will write on every other line because this will give them space to make corrections as they get ready to write a final version later on.

Point out that a second draft should be an improved, more interesting, and more complete version of the story they began in their first draft. If the students find themselves copying their first draft onto the lined paper without any revisions, they are probably not writing true second drafts and should ask for help.

2 Model Beginning to Write a Second Draft

Ask the students to watch as you model beginning to write a second draft. Display your own writing or the “Sample Fiction Draft” chart (WA17). Read the first sentence aloud and model writing that sentence, with revisions, on every other line of the lined chart paper. Repeat this process until you have modeled incorporating several revisions into your second draft.
